16 A. I disagree.

17 Q. Tell me why?

18 A. If they do not become investors or you cannot reset or 19 refi, the deals will be called and therefore Acis' CMAs don't 20 have any value.

21 Q. No, no, no. What I'm saying is, everything is the same, 22 right? The transaction that's going forward on the 13th is 23 the same. Everything. Right?

24 A. Wrong.

25 Q. No, no. This is -- a hypothetical, what I'm saying.

1 A. Oh, I'm sorry. Okay, I misunderstood.

2 Q. All right. Everything is going forward as is, right?

3 It's going to close on the 13th. There's going to be a 4 transfer of the collateral-management agreement. There's 5 going to be a reset. All these things are going to happen,
6 right, just like you planned. The one variable that's changed
7 is that instead of Acis receiving nothing for the transfer of 8 the collateral-management agreement, is that Acis receives
9 something for the transfer of the collateral-management
10 agreement to a Highland affiliate.

11 A. Correct. But they weren't going to receive anything from 12 a refi or a reset or a call anyway.

13 Q. I understand that.

14 A. Okay.

15 Q. But there's nothing that the investors are saying that 16 stops Highland Cayman or Highland or anybody else giving Acis 17 value for the CMAs.

18 A. As a directive from the investors; is that what you're 19 asking me?

20 Q. Right.

21 A. No, they have not given that directive. Their only 22 directive was call and get rid of Acis or get rid of Acis or 23 we're not doing the deal through a reset.

24 Q. All right, so you said that when Acis was set up that -- 25 in 2011, that that was directly analogous to what this new

1 transaction that you're doing or that Highland and its 2 affiliates are doing with regard to the reset and the 3 transfers of the collateral-management agreement. Do you 4 remember that?

5 A. Yeah, the idea of Acis and -- yes.

6 Q. Right.

7 A. Correct.

8 Q. Now, when --

9 A. A new brand.

10 Q. Right. Now, when Acis was set up, Highland had existing 11 CLOs that it managed, right?

12 A. Correct.

13 Q. None of those existing collateral-management agreements 14 from Highland were transferred as a part of the formation of 15 Acis to Acis, right?

16 A. I don't recall, but I think Mr. Terry earlier said one 17 CLO was taken over and managed by Acis. I just don't remember 18 how it was effectuated, and I didn't remember that till he 19 said it.

20 Q. But you don't know if that CLO was originally managed by 21 Highland or if it was managed by some other third party?

22 A. I believe he said it was managed by Highland. But 23 again --

24 Q. I --

25 A. -- Mr. Terry would know more than me. I just can't

1 bankers didn't want to be involved with the name.

2 THE COURT: All right, late '16 or early 2017. All
3 right. Well, how then, were you all able to do the refi on 4 CLO 2?

5 THE WITNESS: Well, because I think CLO 2 was before 6 things got to the point where people would say no, because 7 there was successive articles as things developed in the 8 litigation.

9 THE COURT: Okay. When was CLO 2, the refi closed?

10 THE WITNESS: I believe it was closed on April, but 11 they usually take several months to effectuate. So that 12 was -- call it -- and these are just generalizations. But 13 let's say you start on January 2017, you'll close March or 14 April of '17. And that process is already ongoing, just like 15 in these resets, things were ongoing.

16 THE COURT: Well, the name got toxic late 2016 or 17 early 2017.

18 THE WITNESS: Correct. So you had a bank willing to 19 do it, and then it got to the point to where they didn't want 20 to be involved in ongoing litigation. The snowball just got 21 larger.

22 THE COURT: Well, but April 2017, there was a refi
23 with Acis as the portfolio manager on CLO 2.

24 THE WITNESS: Correct.

25 THE COURT: I'm trying to understand why was

1 everything fine and rosy in April 2002 (sic) to have Acis in 2 there, even though its name had gotten toxic in late 2016 or 3 early 2017, and now just no go, no one will touch it?

4 THE WITNESS: I don't think it was rosy. I think it
5 was tolerable. And then as things got worse and there was 6 more mud that was slung, it became intolerable.

7 And you also have the addition of the third-party
8 investor coming in who gets to start calling the shots.

9 THE COURT: Okay. When was the decision made to do
10 this refi on CLO 3?

11 THE WITNESS: That began back in the May/June time
12 frame on that particular CLO, because that's when I got 13 involved on the due diligence calls with the third-party
14 investor. And it wasn't just about 3; it was about resetting 15 them all.

16 THE COURT: All. All the others.

17 THE WITNESS: And then the actual structure, Your 18 Honor, is what dictates why they were taken out of order, just 19 the way they economically worked.

20 THE COURT: Okay. Um-hum. Um-hum.

21 So May/June of 2017, discussion of doing a refi on 22 all of the five remaining?

23 THE WITNESS: Yes, with the new equity investor.
24 Then they were able to dictate this is what we want the world
25 to look like that we'll be sticking our 150 million dollars.

1 THE COURT: Okay. When did the offering circular go
2 out for the one you want to close February 13th?

3 THE WITNESS: I don't know the exact date, but it was 4 sometime last fall-ish. It may have been after that. I just 5 don't recall. Because they would be drafted; they would be 6 changed; you had Goldman doing some; then it got changed. If 7 anyone knows the date -- I simply don't know the date.

8 THE COURT: Okay. This is a really big deal.

9 THE WITNESS: No, I know.

10 THE COURT: And you don't know the date?

11 THE WITNESS: That's -- I know. I just don't have 12 this memorized. Does anybody know when the offer circular 13 went out on 3?

14 THE COURT: You don't know?

15 THE WITNESS: I can't remember now.

16 THE COURT: It wasn't -- you don't know if it was 17 before or after October 20th, 2017?

18 THE WITNESS: Oh, I think it was after. The circular 19 goes out when everything else is finished in terms of this is 20 what we're going to do; this is what the terms are going to 21 look like; this is what the structure's going to look like.

22 THE COURT: Well, it had to be after this Exhibit 22,
23 when Goldman is saying --

24 THE WITNESS: Oh, yes, it was after --

25 THE COURT: -- we're not going to do it.

VERIFIED ORIGINAL COMPLAINT AND APPLICATION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

TO THE HONORABLE STACEY G. C. JERNIGAN, UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE:

Robin Phelan (the "Trustee"), the Chapter 11 trustee of Acis Capital Management, L.P. ("Acis LP") and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC ("Acis GP" together with Acis LP, the "Debtors" or "Acis") in the above styled and jointly administered bankruptcy cases (the "Bankruptcy Cases"), files this Verified Original Complaint and Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction (this "Complaint") against Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland"), Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF" or "ALF"),<sup>1</sup> CLO Holdco, Ltd. ("Holdco"), Neutra, Ltd. ("Neutra," and together with HCLOF, and Holdco, the "Highland Affiliates"), Acis CLO 2014-3 Ltd. ("CLO-3"), Acis CLO 2014-4 Ltd. ("CLO-4"), Acis CLO 2014-5 Ltd. ("CLO-5"), Acis CLO 2015-6 Ltd. ("CLO-6," and together with CLO-3, CLO-4, and CLO-5, the "Issuers"), Acis CLO 2014-3 LLC ("CLO-3 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-4 LLC ("CLO-4 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-5 LLC ("CLO-5 LLC"), and Acis CLO 2015-6 LLC ("CLO-6 LLC," and together with CLO-3 LLC, CLO-4 LLC, CLO-5 LLC, the "Co-Issuers"), and respectfully states as follows:

I. INTRODUCTION<sup>2</sup>

1. On May 31, 2018, as an extraordinary measure, this Court issued a temporary restraining order ("TRO"), sua sponte, pursuant to section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code—which the Court stated it did not take lightly—preventing all Restrained Parties from taking any action

<sup>1</sup> On October 30, 2017, Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. changed its name to Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. The defined term "ALF" used herein denotes Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. prior to October 30, 2017 and the defined term "HCLOF" used herein denotes Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. on and after October 30, 2017.

<sup>2</sup> Capitalized terms not defined in the Introduction have the meaning ascribed to such terms later in the Complaint.

in furtherance of an Optional Redemption for fourteen (14) days. This TRO ended on June 15 at 12:01 a.m.

2. It appears that Highland violated the TRO by selling approximately $23 million of loans pursuant to the First Optional Redemption Notices after May 31, 2018.<sup>3</sup>

3. On June 13, 2018, the day before the hearing on the Trustee's Motion to Extend the TRO, HCLOF advised the Trustee that it would withdraw the First Optional Redemption Notices. Consequently, the Trustee advised the Court that there was no need to go forward with the Motion to Extend the TRO on the following day.

4. On June 14, 2018, HCLOF's counsel told the Court that HCLOF had withdrawn the First Optional Redemption Notices but reserved the right to reissue the notices at some future date, stating:

That process has, in fact, concluded. That was done obviously for multiple reasons. My client doesn't believe that this is the appropriate time to be effectuating such a redemption for its own economic reasons, setting aside the complications it's obviously caused for others in this room. But needless to say, that, too, is an effort to try to bring, as I believe the Court has requested, and others have, some sanity to this process.<sup>4</sup>

Because the First Optional Redemption Notices had been withdrawn, the Trustee did not proceed with the Motion to Extend the TRO.

5. At that hearing, the Trustee informed the Court and the parties that after hearing the testimony of Mr. Scott on June 12, 2018, he was developing additional options in an attempt to accommodate HCLOF.

<sup>3</sup> Considering Highland's current and prior actions in attempting to effectuate (and possibly completing) unauthorized trades without approval of the Trustee, the Trustee believes there is sufficient urgency to the Court hearing the application for a TRO on an emergency basis. The Trustee does not waive and reserves all rights in connection with any unauthorized trades or transfers that have occurred or may occur.

6. On June 15, 2018, the very day after the hearing on the Motion to Extend the TRO was to have taken place, and after the TRO had expired, HCLOF—without requesting relief from the stay under section 362(d) of the Bankruptcy Code or requesting authority to take such action under section 363(b) of the Bankruptcy Code—again advised the Trustee that it had directed the Issuers to effectuate the Optional Redemption on July 30, 2018.

7. On June 20, 2018, Highland presented to the Trustee hundreds of millions of dollars of "proposed trades" pursuant to this second Optional Redemption, and further advised the Trustee:

In order to effectuate the Transaction and obtain best execution, Highland requests your consent by no later than 2pm tomorrow, Thursday June 21, 2018 (the "Deadline"). The Acis Accounts may incur losses as a result of your failure to respond by the Deadline.

Highland believes it has an independent fiduciary obligation to the CLOs. If you instruct Highland not to proceed to undertake the Optional Redemption, Highland reserves it rights to seek appropriate protection and redress at law or in equity.<sup>5</sup>

8. Once again, Highland and the Highland Affiliates, through this purported Optional Redemption, without Court approval, have attempted to exert control over Acis's property, the PMAs, in violation of the automatic stay and outside the ordinary course of Acis's business. In addition, Acis, pursuant to the PMAs, controls trading of the loans in the CLOs. Consequently, the notices of optional redemption sent by HCOLF are an attempt to obtain a property right (the right to control trading of the loans in the CLOs) from Acis as well as an attempt to exercise control over contractual property rights of Acis, all in violation of section 362(a)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code.

9. This action by Highland and the Highland Affiliates represents yet another attempt in their greater scheme to systematically dismantle and strip away Acis's assets, with the larger goal of leaving effectively nothing for its creditors. In fact, HCLOF is attempting to use rights transferred prepetition, for no value, from Acis to now strip Acis of its remaining rights.

10. By this Complaint, the Trustee seeks: (i) a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction to preserve the status quo and protect the estates by enjoining the Defendants from taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, or any action to effectuate yet another optional redemption at some future time under section 9.2 of the Indentures, unless the Defendants seek Court approval, and the Court lifts the automatic stay to allow such actions, or the Court confirms a plan pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1129; (ii) relief pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 362(k) for Defendants' willful violation of the automatic stay for actions taken in furtherance of the Optional Redemption; (iii) a declaratory judgment that the Optional Redemption Notices are defective and ineffective pursuant to the PMAs and the Indentures; (iv) a declaratory judgment that the Optional Redemption Notices are ineffective pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 363(b) because such actions are outside the ordinary course of Acis's business and were taken without Court approval; and (v) a declaratory judgment that the Trustee has not violated his fiduciary duties by declining to carry out the Optional Redemption.

IV. BACKGROUND

A. The Bankruptcy Cases

1. Involuntary Petitions

27. On January 30, 2018 (the "Petition Date"), Joshua N. Terry ("Mr. Terry"), as petitioning creditor, filed involuntary petitions against both Acis LP and Acis GP, thereby initiating the Bankruptcy Cases. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 1 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 1.

28. On January 31, 2018, Mr. Terry filed the Emergency Motion of Petitioning Creditor to Abrogate or Modify 11 U.S.C § 303(f), Prohibit Transfer of Assets, and Impose, Inter Alia, 11 U.S.C § 363 [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 3 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 3] (the "303(f) Motion"). After a two-day hearing on February 6 and 7, 2018 (the "303(f) Hearing"), the Court found that it was proper to impose section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code<sup>6</sup> before the hearing on the Involuntary Petitions and granted the 303(f) Motion.

29. On April 13, 2018, after six days of testimony and argument, this Court entered its Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 118 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 113] (the "Opinion") and Order for Relief in an Involuntary Case [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 119 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 114] (the "Order for Relief").

2. Chapter 7 Cases Converted to Chapter 11

30. Following entry of the Order for Relief, Diane Reed (the "Chapter 7 Trustee") was appointed the interim Chapter 7 trustee for these Bankruptcy Cases.

31. On May 4, 2018, the Chapter 7 Trustee filed the Trustee's Expedited Motion to Convert Cases to Chapter 11 [Docket No. 171] (the "Conversion Motion").

32. On May 4, 2018, Mr. Terry filed his Emergency Motion for an Order Appointing a Trustee for the Chapter 11 Estates of Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC Pursuant to Bankruptcy Code Section 1104(a) [Docket No. 173] (the "Trustee Motion").

33. On May 8, 2018, Highland filed its Comments by Highland Capital Management L.P. on (A) Chapter 7 Trustee's Expedited Motion to Convert Cases to Chapter 11; and (B) Creditor Joshua Terry's Motion for an Order Appointing a Trustee for the Chapter 11 Estates for the Debtors [Docket No. 190] (the "Comment"). The Comment states that the requisite equity and subordinated noteholders of the CLOs have issued Optional Redemption Notices . . . . These Optional Redemption Notices mandate that the CLOs be liquidated by June 14, 2018, in accordance with the terms of the Indentures as set forth therein. There is a potential that any change in the trustees could create market risks in effectuating the liquidation of the CLOs.

Comment ¶ 11.<sup>7</sup> A true and correct copy of the Comment (including the optional redemption notices as exhibits thereto) is attached hereto as Exhibit "A."

34. On May 11, 2018, the Court entered its Order Granting Trustee's Expedited Motion to Convert Cases to Chapter 11 [Docket No. 205] (the "Conversion Order").

35. Following entry of the Conversion Order, Robin Phelan was appointed Chapter 11 Trustee of the Debtors in the Bankruptcy Cases.

B. Highland and the Highland Affiliates' Role in these Cases

1. Highland

36. Although Highland did not appear in the Bankruptcy Cases until after the entry of the Order for Relief, Highland employees directed Acis's actions at all times before the Order for Relief. See Opinion ¶ 30.

Mr. Dondero [the Chief Executive of Highland] testified that he has decision making authority for the Alleged Debtors but usually delegates that authority to Highland's in-house lawyers, Scott Ellington (General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and Partner of Highland) and Isaac Leventon (Assistant General Counsel of Highland) . . . . Mr. Leventon is designated to be the representative for the Alleged Debtors (and testified as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness during pre-trial discovery)—he explained that this representative-authority derives from the Shared Services Agreement. Mr. Leventon testified that he takes his instructions generally through his direct supervisor, Mr. Ellington.

Id. Additionally, the two indirect owners of Highland, James Dondero and Mark Okada, testified at the Involuntary Trial.<sup>8</sup>

2. The Highland Affiliates

37. As the Court is aware, Highland and its network of affiliates have numerous other connections to this case. HCLOF, Holdco, and Neutra attempted to intervene in the trial on the Involuntary Petitions.

38. HCLOF is the holder of subordinated notes issued by the CLOs (i.e., the bottom tranche of notes on which the CLO special purpose entity is obligated), and has voting rights and is itself a capital provider, but it takes the most risk and receives the very last cash flow from the CLOs. It, in certain ways, controls the CLO vehicle—for example, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain 'no-call' period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A's). Note that, until recently, a separate entity known as Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ('ALF'), which was incorporated under the laws of the island nation of Guernsey, was the CLO equity holder. To be clear, ALF was essentially the equity owner in the CLO special purpose entities—not the equity owner of Acis LP. Acis LP was a party to a separate portfolio management agreement with ALF (hereinafter, the 'ALF Portfolio Management Agreement'— not to be confused with the CLO Collateral Management Agreements that Acis LP separately has with the special purpose CLOs). No fees were paid from ALF to Acis LP pursuant to the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement (rather, fees are only paid to Acis LP on the CLO Collateral Management Agreements).

Opinion at pp. 12-13 (footnotes omitted).

C. Additional Factual Background

1. The CLOs, the PMAs, and the Indentures

39. Acis LP is the portfolio manager for funds of certain CLO's: (i) Acis CLO 2013-1 Ltd. ("CLO-1"), (ii) CLO-3, (iii) CLO-4, (iv) CLO-5, and (v) CLO-6. See Opinion ¶ 24. CLO-1, CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5 and CLO-6 are collectively referred to herein as the "Acis CLOs."

40. As relevant herein, Acis LP manages the Acis CLOs through five PMAs.<sup>9</sup> Acis LP generates revenue primarily through the management of the Acis CLOs via the PMAs. See Opinion ¶ 13. True and correct copies of the PMAs are attached hereto as Exhibit "B." Each of the Acis CLOs is governed by the Indentures.<sup>10</sup> True and correct copies of the Indentures are attached hereto as Exhibit "C."

2. Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreement

41. Acis contracts out its operations to Highland pursuant to the Third Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement by and between Acis LP and Highland, dated March 17, 2017 (the "Sub-Advisory Agreement"), and the Fourth Amended and Restated Shared Services Agreement by and between Acis LP and Highland, dated March 17, 2017 (the "Shared Services Agreement"). These agreements are terminable by Acis on 30-days' notice, without cause. As the Court explained in its Opinion:

Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC have never had any employees. Rather, all employees that work for any of the Highland family of companies (including Mr. Terry) have, almost without exception, been employees of Highland itself. Highland has approximately 150 employees in the United States. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC, through both the mechanism of: (a) a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called), which provides "back office" personnel—such as human resources, accounting, legal and information technology to the Highland family of

<sup>9</sup> The PMAs include: (i) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-1, dated March 18, 2013 (the "CLO-1 PMA"); (ii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-3, dated February 25, 2014 (the "CLO-3 PMA"); (iii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-4, dated June 5, 2014 (the "CLO-4 PMA"); (iv) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-5, dated November 18, 2014 (the "CLO-5 PMA"); and (v) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-6, dated April 16, 2015 (the "CLO-6 PMA"). The CLO-1 PMA, CLO-3 PMA, CLO-4 PMA, CLO-5 PMA, and CLO-6 PMA are collectively referred to herein as the "PMAs."

<sup>10</sup> The Indentures include: (i) that certain Indenture, dated as of March 18, 2013, issued by CLO-1, as issuer, Acis CLO 2013-1 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-1 Indenture"); (ii) that certain Indenture, dated as of February 25, 2014, issued by CLO-3, as issuer, CLO-3 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-3 Indenture"); (iii) that certain Indenture, dated as of June 5, 2014, issued by CLO-4, as issuer, CLO-4 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-4 Indenture"); (iv) that certain Indenture, dated as of November 18, 2014, issued by CLO-5, as issuer, CLO-5 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-5 Indenture"); and (v) that certain Indenture, dated as of April 16, 2015, issued by CLO-6, as issuer, CLO-6 LLC, as co-issuer and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-6 Indenture"). The CLO-1 Indenture, CLO-3 Indenture, CLO-4 Indenture, CLO-5 Indenture, and CLO-6 Indenture are collectively referred to herein as the "Indentures."

companies; and (b) a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called), which provides "front office" personnel to entities—such as the managers of investments like Mr. Terry. The evidence indicated that this is typical in the CLO industry to have such agreements.

Opinion at p. 14 (footnotes omitted).

3. The ALF PMA Transfer

42. Prior to October 27, 2017, Acis LP—not ALF—had authority to direct and effectuate an optional redemption under the PMAs. Acis LP had this authority pursuant to another Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and ALF, dated December 22, 2016 (the "ALF PMA"). The ALF PMA provided broad authority to Acis LP as the portfolio manager of ALF. Section 5 of the ALF PMA set out Acis LP's authority, which included authority for and in the name of ALF to:

(i) invest, directly or indirectly . . . in all types of securities and other financial instruments of United States and non-U.S. entities . . . including without limitation . . . notes representing tranches of debt ('CLO Notes') issued by a special purpose vehicle which issues notes backed by a pool of collateral consisting primarily of loans (which may be represented by a debt or equity security) (a 'CLO') . . . (each of such items, 'Financial Instruments'), (ii) provide credit and market research and analysis in connection with the investments and ongoing management of [ALF] and direct the formulation of investment policies and strategies for [ALF] . . . ; (iii) cause [ALF] to engage in . . . agency, agency cross, related party principal transactions with affiliates of [Acis LP] . . . ; and (iv) vote Financial Instruments, participate in arrangements with creditors, the institution and settlement or compromise of suits and administrative proceedings and other like or similar matters.

ALF PMA § 5(a)-(q) (emphasis added). A true and correct of the ALF PMA is attached hereto as

Exhibit "D."

43. While ALF did not have authority to terminate the ALF PMA, Acis LP could terminate the ALF PMA without cause upon at least ninety (90) days' notice. See ALF PMA § 13(a)-(c). Still, the ALF PMA provided for the removal of Acis LP as portfolio manager "for cause." See ALF PMA § 14(a)-(e).

44. On October 27, 2017, just seven days after Mr. Terry's arbitration award, Acis LP effectively terminated its own portfolio management rights under the ALF PMA and transferred its authority and those valuable portfolio management rights—for no value—to Highland HCF Advisors, Ltd. ("Highland HCF").

45. This transfer of Acis LP's portfolio management rights to Highland HCF was accomplished by way of a new Portfolio Management Agreement entered into by ALF and Highland HCF on October 27, 2017 (the "October 2017 PMA"), which cancelled and terminated the ALF PMA and empowered Highland HCF with the same broad authority to direct the management of ALF as was previously held by Acis LP under the ALF PMA (the "ALF PMA Transfer"). See October 2017 PMA §§ 1 & 5(a)-(q). A true and correct of the October 2017 PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit "E."

46. As the Court explained:

On October 27, 2017 (seven days after the Arbitration Award), ALF—having purchased back the ownership interest that Acis LP had in it, just three days earlier—decided that it would no longer use Acis LP as its portfolio manager and entered into a new portfolio management agreement to supersede and replace the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, ALF entered into a new Portfolio Management Agreement with a Cayman Island entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., replacing Acis LP in its role with ALF. This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017.

Opinion at p. 19 (footnotes omitted).

47. Under the prior ALF PMA, Acis LP's consent to the termination of the ALF PMA was required in order to effectuate the ALF PMA Transfer. So, (without expressing its business judgment to this transfer) Acis LP simply signed the October 2017 PMA, consenting and agreeing to its removal and replacement, and transferring all authority and management rights as portfolio manager of ALF to Highland HCF under the October 2017 PMA.

48. Without this ALF PMA Transfer, which transferred Acis LP's rights under the ALF PMA to Highland HCF, HCLOF could not have attempted to direct and effectuate an optional redemption, and deplete Acis's assets, as it is now attempting to do.

4. The First Optional Redemption Notices

49. On April 30, 2018, HCLOF sent five notices purportedly requesting optional redemption pursuant to the Section 9.2 of each of the Indentures (the "First Optional Redemption Notices").<sup>11</sup> True and correct copies of the First Optional Redemption Notices are attached hereto as Exhibit "F."

50. The First Optional Redemption Notices directed Acis LP to effectuate an Optional Redemption (as defined under each Indenture). Under Section 9.2 of each Indenture, upon the receipt of a notice of redemption, Acis, in its discretion, is to direct the sale of the Collateral Obligations (as defined by each Indenture) and other Assets. See CLO-1 Indenture, § 9.2; CLO-3 Indenture, § 9.2(b); CLO-4 Indenture, § 9.2; CLO-5 Indenture, § 9.2; & CLO-6 Indenture, § 9.2. In the Indentures, "Assets" is defined to include the PMAs. See CLO-1 Indenture, p. 8; CLO-3 Indenture, p. 10; CLO-4 Indenture, p. 10; CLO-5 Indenture, p. 10; & CLO-6 Indenture p. 10. Consequently, the Optional Redemption directs Acis LP to liquidate assets of the CLOs over which Acis has certain property rights and, effectively, the PMAs.

51. The Trustee analyzed the First Optional Redemption Notices and determined there were various defects which rendered them ineffective. Therefore, on May 22, 2018, the Trustee sent his responses to the five First Optional Redemption Notices (the "Redemption Responses"). True and correct copies of the Redemption Responses are attached hereto as Exhibit "G."

D. Highland Litigation and TRO

52. On May 30, 2018, Highland and HCLOF filed Adversary No. 18-03078, styled Highland Capital Management, L.P. and Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. v. Robin Phelan, Chapter 11 Trustee, in this Court (the "Highland Adversary"). The Highland Adversary alleges, among other things, that the Trustee, by failing to effectuate the Optional Redemption pursuant to the First Optional Redemption Notices, breached the PMAs.

53. On May 31, 2018, upon the request of the Trustee, the Court held a status conference in the Bankruptcy Cases, and the Trustee explained that, almost immediately after his appointment, he began exploring plan options regarding a potential transaction that would transfer rights under the PMAs, the Sub-Advisory Agreement, the Shared Services Agreement, and the subordinated notes, with respect to CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6, with the goal of maximizing value for all parties. The Trustee informed the Court that he was in the process of negotiating a transaction with a party that would potentially provide enough value to pay all parties, including all of Acis's creditors in full.

54. On May 31, 2018, at the conclusion of the status conference, the Court, sua sponte, issued a TRO, which prevented all parties from taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption for fourteen (14) days.

55. On June 6, 2018 the Court entered its Temporary Restraining Order, whereby the Restrained Parties (as defined in the TRO) were enjoined until 12:01 a.m. on June 15, 2018, from:

- a) proceeding with, effectuating, or otherwise taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs; and
- b) sending, mailing, or otherwise distributing any notice to the holders of the Acis CLOs in connection with the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.

56. On June 8, 2018, the Trustee filed the Emergency Motion to Approve Break-Up Fee, Expense Reimbursement, and Replacement Sub-Advisory and Shared Services Provider, Oaktree Capital Management, L.P. (the "Motion to Approve Break-Up Fee"). See Docket No. 263.

57. As described in the Motion to Approve Break-Up Fee, the Trustee has executed a Commitment Letter (the "Commitment Letter") with Oaktree Capital Management, L.P. ("Oaktree") whereby Oaktree would: (i) obtain the subordinated equity rights in CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6 after payment in full to HCLOF of a premium above the value of those rights; (ii) obtain Acis LP's rights, title and interests in the respective PMAs for enough to pay the creditors of Acis in full; and (iii) replace Highland as provider of the services currently provided by Highland under the Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Shared Services Agreement, at a fraction of the cost currently being charged by Highland (the "Oaktree Transaction"). A true and correct copy of the Commitment Letter is attached hereto as Exhibit "H."

58. The Oaktree Transaction, if consummated, would provide a return to all holders of the subordinated notes in excess of what they would receive in an optional redemption and pay all Acis's allowed creditors in full.<sup>12</sup> The Trustee intends to effectuate the Oaktree Transaction via a Chapter 11 plan.

59. On June 11, 2018, the Trustee filed his Motion to Extend the Temporary Restraining Order (the "Motion to Extend the TRO"), in which the Trustee sought to extend the TRO for an additional 14 days. See Docket No. 275.

60. Also on June 11, 2018, HCLOF filed its Memorandum of Law in Opposition to the Continuance of the Temporary Restraining Order (the "Brief in Opposition to Extending the TRO"). See Docket. No. 271. This pleading did not mention that Highland apparently violated the TRO by initiating approximately $23 million of sales of CLO assets pursuant to the Optional Redemption after the Court issued its TRO on May 31.

E. The Second Optional Redemption Notices

61. On June 13, 2018, the day before the hearing on the Motion to Extend the TRO, HCLOF advised the Trustee that HCLOF would withdraw the First Optional Redemption Notices. HCLOF's correspondence with the Trustee indicating its intent to withdraw the First Optional Redemption Notices is attached hereto as Exhibit "I" and incorporated herein for all purposes. Thereafter, the Trustee advised the Court that HCLOF was withdrawing the First Optional Redemption Notices, and the Trustee therefore did not intend to go forward with the Motion to Extend the TRO on June 14.

62. On June 14, 2018, counsel for HCLOF advised the Court that HCLOF had withdrawn the First Optional Redemption Notices. Counsel for HCLOF further advised the Court that the First Optional Redemption Notices were withdrawn to bring "some sanity to this process":

That was done obviously for multiple reasons. My client doesn't believe that this is the appropriate time to be effectuating such a redemption for its own economic reasons, setting aside the complications it's obviously caused for others in this room. But needless to say, that, too, is an effort to try to bring, as I believe the Court has requested, and others have, some sanity to this process.<sup>13</sup>

63. On June 15, 2018, at 12:01 a.m., the TRO expired.

64. Later on June 15, 2018, despite the fact that HCLOF had just withdrawn the First Optional Redemption Notices, had advised the Court of the same, and the Trustee and the Court acted in reliance on same, HCLOF gave notice to the Trustee that it was again requesting an Optional Redemption pursuant to the Section 9.2 of each of the Indentures (the "Second Optional Redemption Notices," and together with the First Optional Redemption Notices, the "Optional

Redemption Notices"). The Second Optional Redemption Notices are attached hereto as Exhibit "J" and are incorporated herein for all purposes.

65. By the Second Optional Redemption Notices, HCLOF directed the Issuers:

to effect an Optional Redemption of all Secured Notes and the Subordinated Notes in full on July 30, 2018 for the express purpose of placement of a portion of the portfolio of assets held by the Co-Issuers into a warehouse arrangement or a total return swap or other derivative arrangement with Highland Capital Management, L.P. acting as the Sub-Advisor pursuant to a Sub-Advisory Agreement.

66. On June 20, 2018, Highland presented to the Trustee hundreds of millions of dollars of "proposed trades" pursuant to this second Optional Redemption. In its correspondence to the Trustee regarding such proposed trades, Highland further stated:

In order to effectuate the Transaction and obtain best execution, Highland requests your consent by no later than 2pm tomorrow, Thursday June 21, 2018 (the "Deadline"). The Acis Accounts may incur losses as a result of your failure to respond by the Deadline.

Highland believes it has an independent fiduciary obligation to the CLOs. If you instruct Highland not to proceed to undertake the Optional Redemption, Highland reserves it rights to seek appropriate protection and redress at law or in equity.<sup>14</sup>

V. CAUSES OF ACTION

Count 1: Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction

67. Plaintiff incorporates the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

68. Absent affirmative relief from the automatic stay, any action to effectuate the Optional Redemption by way of the Optional Redemption Notices violates the automatic stay because it represents an "act to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate."<sup>15</sup> Further, any action taken by the Defendants to effectuate the Optional Redemption is outside the ordinary course of Acis's business, and therefore requires Court approval.<sup>16</sup> Acis's rights under the PMAs are valuable, and if Acis were to lose such rights, immediate and irreparable harm would result to Acis's creditors and third parties with financial interests in Acis's bankruptcy estates because confirmation of a plan of reorganization funded by Oaktree pursuant to the Oaktree Transaction would be impossible. In addition to the Oaktree Transaction, the Trustee has received proposals from other qualified parties to fund alternative plans of reorganization which may include a reset of the CLOs and continuance of Acis as the portfolio manager of the CLOs. In addition, HCLOF is using rights fraudulently transferred from Acis to effectuate the Optional Redemptions. Therefore, pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 7001(7) and Civil Rule 65, incorporated by Bankruptcy Rule 7065, the Trustee seeks a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction, to prohibit the Defendants from taking any further actions to effectuate the Optional Redemption, or any action to effectuate yet another optional redemption at some future time under section 9.2 of the Indentures, unless the Defendants seek Court approval, and the Court lifts the automatic stay to allow such actions, or the Court confirms a plan pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1129.

69. The standards for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction are the same.<sup>17</sup> To obtain either, the movant must show (a) it has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits; (b) it will suffer irreparable injury without the injunction; (c) the threatened injury to the movant outweighs the damage the proposed injunction may cause to the parties opposing it; and (d) that the requested injunction would not be against the public interest.<sup>18</sup> The Court must necessarily make its decision by relying on an early and abbreviated proceeding and set of facts.<sup>19</sup> Quick and abbreviated determinations are necessary to recognize the goal of injunctive relief, which is to maintain the status quo to permit the Court the time necessary to make a decision on the merits after full development of the facts.<sup>20</sup>

70. Moreover, not all of the four (4) factors must be given equal weight. According to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals: “a sliding scale must be applied in considering the probability of plaintiffs’ winning on the merits and plaintiffs’ irreparable injury in the absence of interlocutory relief....”<sup>21</sup> and “...none of the four prerequisites has a fixed quantitative value. Rather, a sliding scale is utilized, which takes into account the intensity of each in a given calculus.”<sup>22</sup> This means that as long as the Court finds that there is some likelihood of ultimate success (i.e., not zero likelihood of success), the Court can give greater weight to the severity and irreparability of the harm and the relative hardships to the movant and opponent of the injunctive relief.<sup>23</sup>

71. The Trustee can show that the elements warranting a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction exist here: (1) the Trustee has a "substantial likelihood of success on the merits" of a claim regarding (i) violation of the automatic stay if injunction is not granted, (ii) failing to comply with the requirements of an optional redemption, (iii) utilizing assets transferred for no value to attempt to effectuate an optional redemption, (iv) failing to obtain court authority under Section 363 to effectuate an optional redemption, and (v) confirmation of an effective plan of reorganization; (2) creditors and interested third-parties face a substantial threat of imminent and irreparable injury to their interests in the Debtors' bankruptcy estates if an injunction is not issued since confirmation of a plan of reorganization funded by Oaktree or other competent party will be eliminated; (3) the threatened injury to interested parties "if the injunction is denied outweighs any harm that will result if the injunction is granted"; and (4) "public interest" favors letting the Trustee exercise its fiduciary duties and effectuate his process over costly litigation.<sup>24</sup>

A. Substantial Likelihood of Success on the Merits

72. The Optional Redemption Notices demand the liquidation of property currently under the control of Acis LP, as portfolio manager, as well as the PMAs, which are defined as Assets under the Indentures and are property of the Acis LP estate. Indeed, the main, if not sole, purpose of the redemptions appears to be to remove Acis LP as portfolio manager and terminate its primary asset, the PMAs. Accordingly, by extinguishing the PMAs, the purported Optional Redemption is prohibited because it represents an "act to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate" in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3).

73. Further, any action taken by the Defendants to effectuate the Optional Redemption, and thereby extinguish rights under the PMAs, is outside the ordinary course of Acis's business, and therefore would require Court approval pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 363(b).

1. The Automatic Stay

74. Section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code operates as a stay, applicable to all entities of: "any act to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate."<sup>25</sup> Property of the estate is defined by section 541 of the Bankruptcy Code as including: "all legal or equitable interests of the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case."<sup>26</sup>

75. The protection afforded to a debtor by the automatic stay is one of the most important benefits that a debtor and its creditors receive when filing for bankruptcy. "The automatic stay has broad scope."<sup>27</sup> "This breadth suggests Congressional intent that, in the face of uncertainty or ambiguity, courts should presume protection of arguable property."<sup>28</sup> The stay is automatic and "springs into being immediately upon the filing of a bankruptcy petition."<sup>29</sup> Actions in violation of the automatic stay are voidable.<sup>30</sup>

2. The Automatic Stay is Applicable to the PMAs and CLOs

76. In the TRO, the Court enjoined "the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs" because such actions appeared to this Court to have the potential to liquidate or harm valuable property of the Debtors, namely the PMAs. Moreover, this Court found the "Trustee has a substantial case on the merits on a serious legal question" that such actions would constitute a violation of the automatic stay pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3). Thus, to obtain a second TRO and a preliminary injunction, the Trustee must demonstrate a substantial likelihood of success on the merits regarding whether the actions by HCLOF and others to liquidate the assets of the Acis CLOs, and thereby eviscerate the value of Acis LP's interest in the PMAs, violate the automatic stay.

77. The Debtors' rights under the PMAs, which are executory contracts, are property of the estate.<sup>31</sup> The Debtors' rights under the PMAs are therefore protected by the automatic stay.<sup>32</sup> If the Optional Redemption or other liquidation of the assets in the Acis CLOs is permitted to go forward, it would render the PMAs valueless. Consequently, the Optional Redemption and any other attempt by HCLOF liquidate the assets of the Acis CLOs would violate section 362(a)(3) because such actions involve exercising control over property of the estate (the PMAs).

78. In Three Strokes Limited Partnership, this Court held that a foreclosure sale was an attempt to exercise control over property of the estate under 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3) where the debtor held the second lien, but not the first lien on the property subject to foreclosure.<sup>33</sup> The Court held that, even though the underlying asset (i.e., the real property subject to foreclosure) was not the debtor's property:

[T]he second line interest of the Debtor in that property is a property interest worth of recognition and protection. Thus, Section 362 applies to automatically stay the foreclosure proceedings. The foreclosure proceedings could have the effect of extinguishing the Debtor's second lien interest. The foreclosure proceedings would constitute an exercise of control over property of the estate, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code Section 362(a)(3). The court recognizes that the automatic stay is generally a tool to stop creditor collection efforts, and Consec is not a creditor of this Debtor. However, section 362 is worded to prevent "of all entities" (not merely creditors) from engaging in certain accts including "an act ... to exercise control over property of the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3). Clearly, Section 362(a)(3) is intended to prevent dismemberment of the estate and to allow a breathing spell for a debtor-in-possession."<sup>34</sup>

The Three Strokes case is analogous to this one. Here, Acis has a property interest in the PMAs – an interest “worthy of recognition and protection” – that will be extinguished if the CLOs are

liquidated. Consequently, any attempt to extinguish Acis LP's property interest in the PMAs would be an exercise of control over property of the estate, and is therefore stayed by Section 362(a)(3).

79. The Three Strokes opinion is consistent with a long line of cases holding that where a non-debtor's actions would directly or indirectly interfere with and/or substantially diminish a debtor (or trustee's) intangible property rights, such actions violate section 362(a)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code. See, e.g., In re 48th Street Steakhouse, 835 F.2d 427, 430-31 (2d Cir. 1987) (finding landlord's termination as to the primary tenant would destroy the debtor's subtenancy violated the automatic stay and was therefore void because, where a non-debtor's interest is intertwined with that of a bankrupt debtor and an action would "inevitably have an adverse impact on property of the estate," such action is barred by the automatic stay); In re Prudential Lines, 928 F.2d 565, 573-574 (2d Cir. 1991) (affirming order of the bankruptcy court permanently enjoining parent from taking a "worthless stock" deduction on its tax return where it would effectively eliminate the value of the debtor's net operating loss and have an adverse impact on its reorganization); cf., Allentown Ambassadors, Inc. v. Northeast Am. Baseball, LLC (In re Allentown Ambassadors, Inc.), 361 B.R. 422, 438 and n. 34 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2007) (analyzing the phrase "to exercise control over property of the estate" and collecting cases explaining what that means in the context of section 362(a)(3)). Thus, because the liquidation of the CLOs represents an "act to obtain possession of property of the estate," – namely, Acis LP's intangible property rights in the PMAs – such actions constitute a violation of section 362(a)(3).

80. Moreover, apart from the fact that the Optional Redemption directs Acis LP to cancel the PMAs, the Optional Redemption also seeks to force the winding down of the CLOs. By Acis LP's own admission on the Acis LP SOFA, Acis LP has at least a possessory interest in the CLO assets, such that a transfer of CLO assets constitutes a transfer of property from the estate under section 362(a)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code. Property from the estate includes property that does not belong to debtor, but over which the debtor has possession or control. The legislative history of section 362(a)(3) makes this clear:

Paragraph (3) stays any act to obtain possession of property of the estate (that is, property of the debtor as of the date of the filing of the petition) or property from the estate (property over which the estate has control or possession). The purpose of this provision is to prevent dismemberment of the estate. Liquidation must proceed in an orderly fashion. Any distribution of property must be by the trustee after he has had an opportunity to familiarize himself with the various rights and interests involved and with the property available for distribution.<sup>35</sup>

Similarly, Collier extensively discusses the concept that property over which a debtor has possession or control is appropriately covered by the automatic stay:

Section 362(a)(3) stays all actions, whether judicial or private, that seek to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate. The trustee or debtor in possession takes control of all property of the estate in order to maintain any going concern value and to ensure an equitable distribution of the property among creditors. This requires that no entity seek to interfere with these tasks by taking possession or exercising control over property of the estate. It also requires that no entity grab non-estate property from the estate without the court supervision that comes from a stay relief proceeding . . . . The property protected may be property of the estate or property in the possession of the estate.<sup>36</sup>

81. Finally, cases interpreting section 362(a)(3) uniformly hold that property in the possession of a debtor (even if not property of the estate) is covered by the protections and procedures of Section 362(a)(3). For example, Judge Isgur has called section 362(a)(3) an "anti-grab-law statute" and noted that "[t]he intent and purpose of (a)(3) is to prohibit physical taking of property . . . ." In Adana Mortgage, the Georgia bankruptcy court thoroughly explained the purpose of section 362(a)(3) related to property from the estate in finding a willful violation of the automatic stay:

Title or ownership of property is not controlling to a Section 362(a)(3) violation. Possession or control by the debtor is sufficient to enact the protection of the automatic stay. The prohibition against any act to remove property from the estate was apparently "included to forestall a lienor or other adverse claimant from asserting as a justification for an exercise of selfhelp that the property taken from the debtor did not belong to the estate." The accounts clearly were under the control of Debtor at the time of filing. Thus, regardless of whether they are property of the estate, the accounts constituted property from the estate at the time of filing and were under the protection of Section 362(a)(3). The actions taken by GNMA to attempt to divest the Debtor of control and to obtain possession of these accounts were, therefore, in violation of the automatic stay.<sup>37</sup>

82. Likewise, many cases have found that a debtor's mere possessory interest in property is sufficient to make it property of the estate under section 541 of the Bankruptcy Code and subject to the stay.<sup>38</sup>

3. Section 555 of the Bankruptcy Code Does Not Apply to HCLOF

83. Section 365(e)(1) prohibits the operation of an ipso facto clause in an executory contract or unexpired lease due the filing of a bankruptcy case.<sup>39</sup> Section 555 provides a "safe harbor" from the automatic stay when a stockbroker, financial institution, financial participant, or securities clearing agency exercises its contractual right under an ipso facto clause to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract for one of the conditions specified in section 365(e)(1)—that is, the insolvency or financial condition of the debtor, the commencement of a case under title 11, or the appointment of or taking possession by a trustee

in a case under title 11.<sup>40</sup> Section 555 does not provide an unqualified right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract in violation of the automatic stay merely because the contract contains a broad termination provision.<sup>41</sup>

84. Here, although HCLOF has asserted that it is protected by the safe harbor of section 555 of the Bankruptcy Code, HCLOF is not exercising a "contractual right . . . [under a] securities contract . . . because of a condition of the kind specified in section 365(e)(1) of [the Bankruptcy Code]." <sup>42</sup>

85. Specifically, HCLOF has not demonstrated that it is exercising its contractual right under a securities contract to liquidate, accelerate, or terminate due to an ipso facto clause in such contract.

86. Further, HCLOF must show that it has:

agreements or transactions described in described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of section 561(a) with the debtor or any other entity (other than an affiliate) of a total gross dollar value of not less than $1,000,000,000 in notional or actual principal amount outstanding (aggregated across counterparties) at such time or on any day during the 15-month period preceding the date of the filing of the petition, or has gross market-to-market positions of not less than $100,000,000 (aggregated across counterparties) in one or more such agreements or transactions with the debtor or any other entity (other than an affiliate) at such time or on any day during the 15-month period preceding the date of the filing of the petition.<sup>43</sup>

87. HCLOF has not demonstrated that it is exercising purported contractual rights under securities contracts with the Debtors or non-affiliates. HCLOF has also not demonstrated that it is a "financial participant," as required under section 555. Accordingly, HCLOF has not shown that the safe harbor of section 555 of the Bankruptcy Code applies to its actions to effectuate the Optional Redemption.

4. The Optional Redemption is Outside the Ordinary Course of the Debtors' Business

88. Under section 363(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, the "trustee, after notice and a hearing, may use, sell, or lease, other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate."

89. To determine whether a transaction is within the ordinary course of business, courts look to "whether the transaction is abnormal or unusual, in which case it is probably not in the ordinary course of business, or whether it is a reasonably common type of transaction."<sup>44</sup> The Optional Redemption contemplated by HCLOF is not a common event in the course of the Debtors' business. Indeed, the Optional Redemption is an extraordinary event, which would effectively cause the liquidation of the CLOs and the PMAs. This is not in the ordinary course of business.

90. Further, any party that "deals with a bankruptcy trustee in a transaction that is not in the ordinary course of business is charged with the knowledge that the law may require court approval."<sup>45</sup>

91. Actions taken by Defendants in furtherance of the purported Optional Redemption were outside the ordinary course of the Debtors' business and were taken without the Trustee's consent or authorization from the Court. Thus, such actions are ineffective pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 363(b).

92. For the reasons set forth above, sections 362(a)(3) and 363(b) of the Bankruptcy Code foreclose any action by the Defendants in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, call, or liquidation of the Acis CLOs. Thus, the Trustee has a substantial likelihood of succeeding on the merits.

B. Substantial Threat of Irreparable Injury

93. Injunctive relief is necessary to prevent imminent and irreparable injury in the form of substantial losses to creditors and parties-in-interest, as well as to third parties' financial interests, related to the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs. The losses that would result in the event an injunction is not issued cannot be presently measured by any certain pecuniary standard, are not reasonably quantifiable, and cannot be adequately compensated with monetary damages; thus, creditors and interested third parties otherwise would have no adequate remedy at law. The Optional Redemption would eliminate the confirmation of a plan of reorganization based on the Oaktree Transaction, or a similar plan.

C. Balancing of Harms

94. The balancing of the harms weighs in favor of issuing a preliminary injunction because any alleged harm to Highland, or any of the Highland Affiliates, is substantially outweighed by the damage that would be caused to all parties-in-interest if the Court does not enjoin the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs, and return more to all affected parties than would be received by the Optional Redemption.<sup>46</sup> Highland and the Highland Entities will receive the same monetary benefit from the Oaktree Transaction, creditors will be paid in full, and economic stakeholders would reap a benefit. HCLOF's claimed harm is exaggerated.

<sup>46</sup> Any alleged harm to Defendants is illusory and specious because, among other things, the Defendants have options available that immediately mitigate any purported damage. Namely, Defendants could (1) authorize a "refinance" or "reset" transaction or (2) sell their equity to a third party in an amount that exceeds what they would receive in an Optional Redemption.

D. Public Interest

95. Public policy supports restraining the actions described herein to allow the Trustee to exercise his fiduciary duties to maximize the value of the estate for the benefit of creditors by allowing the Trustee to direct and control the refinancing, sale, or other monetization of Debtors' property and other assets. Further, there is a public interest in allowing for a Chapter 11 process, rather than costly prolonged litigation.

96. Therefore, the Trustee asks that the Court, after a hearing on this application, grant a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction enjoining the Defendants and Defendants' officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys from engaging in the following actions:

- a) proceeding with, effectuating, or otherwise taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs, including any further optional redemption under section 9.2 of the Indentures; and
- b) sending, mailing, or otherwise distributing any notice to the holders of the Acis CLOs in connection with the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.

97. The Trustee requests that such injunctive relief remain effective unless the Defendants seek Court approval, and the Court lifts the automatic stay to allow such actions, or the Court confirms a plan pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1129.

Count 2: Willful Violation of the Automatic Stay

98. A willful violation of the automatic stay does not require a specific intent.

Rather, the statute provides for damages upon a finding that the defendant knew of the automatic stay and the defendant's actions which violated the stay were intentional. Whether the party believes in good faith that it had a right to the property is not relevant to whether the act was 'willful' or whether compensation must be awarded.<sup>47</sup>

99. "It is not up to a party exercising a self-help remedy to determine, to the preclusion of this court, what is or is not property of the estate."<sup>48</sup>

100. Section 362(k)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that "an individual injured by any willful violation of a stay provided by this section shall recover actual damages, including costs and attorneys' fees, and, in appropriate circumstances, may recover punitive damages." The Fifth Circuit has indicated that remedies under 362(k)(1) are available to trustees.<sup>49</sup>

101. Further, pursuant to section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, "[t]he Court may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title."<sup>50</sup> The purpose of section 105(a) is "to assure the bankruptcy courts power to take whatever action is appropriate or necessary in aid of the exercise of their jurisdiction."<sup>51</sup> This is consistent with the broad equitable authority of the bankruptcy courts.<sup>52</sup>

102. Pursuant to section 362(k)(1), Plaintiff seeks recovery of damages commensurate with its injury, due to Defendants' violation of the automatic stay. Further, given Defendants' blatant and willful violation of the automatic stay (as well as the TRO), the Plaintiff seeks attorneys' fees and sanctions against Defendants, as the Court finds appropriate, pursuant to section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 3: Declaratory Judgment that the Optional Redemption Notices Were Defective and Ineffective Under the PMAs and Indentures

103. Plaintiff incorporates the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

104. The Optional Redemption Notices were not sent by properly authorized parties, pursuant to the certain PMA, dated November 15, 2017 (the "11-15-17 PMA"), between HCLOF and Highland HCF. A true and correct copy of the 11-15-17 PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit "K."

105. Under Section 5(a)(xvii) of this 11-15-17 PMA, Highland HCF has the authority for and in the name of HCLOF to "vote Financial Instruments . . . ." The Subordinated Notes referenced in the Optional Redemption Notices are clearly Financial Instruments covered by Section 5(a)(xvii). Further, Section 4 of the 11-15-17 PMA requires that State Street Custodial Services (Ireland) Limited ("State Street"), as custodian, "shall at all times be responsible for the . . . exercise of rights and tenders on the Financial Instruments after consultation with and as then directed by [HCLOF]." Yet, the Optional Redemption Notices were signed only by directors of HCLOF, not Highland HCF or State Street.

106. Section 9.4(a) of the Indenture states that, with any redemption under Section 9.2, the Holders of the Subordinated Notes (currently, HCLOF) must provide written direction/notice of such redemption no later than 45 days prior to the Redemption Date, and Section 9.4(b) requires that all notices of redemption delivered pursuant to Section 9.4(a) state:

- (i) the applicable Redemption Date;
- (ii) the Redemption Prices of the Notes to be redeemed;
- (iii) that all of the Secured Notes are to be redeemed in full and that interest on such Secured Notes shall cease to accrue on the Redemption Date specified in the notice;
- (iv) the place or places where Notes are to be surrendered for payment of the Redemption Prices, which shall be the office or agency of the Co-Issuers to be maintained as provided in Section 7.2; and
- (v) if all Secured Notes are being redeemed, whether the Subordinated Notes are to be redeemed in full on such Redemption Date and, if so, the place or places where the Subordinated Notes (other than any Uncertificated Subordinated Notes) are to be surrendered for payment of the Redemption Prices, which shall be the office or agency of the Co-Issuers to be maintained as provided in Section 7.2 in order to receive payment therefor.

107. The Optional Redemption Notices fail to provide any such information other than the Redemption Date. Thus, the Optional Redemption Notices are defective on their face. Additionally, it has not been demonstrated that the Optional Redemption Notices were actually received by the required parties, which is required at least with respect to U.S. Bank.

108. Also, as originally referenced the Trustee's May 22, 2018 Redemption Responses, and as adduced above, completion of the Optional Redemption as requested by the Optional Redemption Notices would, or could reasonably be expected to: (i) violate applicable law; and/or (ii) knowingly and willfully adversely affect the interests of the Holders in the Assets in any material respect that is not expressly permitted under the PMAs or the Indentures. Under such circumstances, Section 8 of the PMAs requires coordination with the Trustee in order to make indemnification arrangements and providing a legal opinion from outside counsel, which must meet the Trustee's approval. Defendants have not complied with Section 8 of the PMAs.

109. Finally, the Second Optional Redemption Notices make reference to placing "a portion of the portfolio of assets held by the Co-Issuers into a warehouse arrangement or a total return swap or other derivative arrangement with Highland Capital Management, L.P." The Indentures and PMAs do not provide for such an arrangement.

110. Thus, for the numerous deficiencies set forth above, the Optional Redemption Notices are defective and ineffective.

Count 4: Declaratory Judgment that the Optional Redemption Notices Were Outside the Ordinary Course of Business and Therefore Ineffective under 11 U.S.C. § 363(b)

111. Plaintiff incorporates the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

112. Under section 363(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, the "trustee, after notice and a hearing, may use, sell, or lease, other than in the ordinary course of business, property of the estate."

113. The Trustee did not consent to Defendants' actions taken in connection with the Optional Redemption Notices.

114. Actions taken by Defendants in furtherance of the purported Optional Redemption were outside the ordinary course of the Debtors' business and were taken without the Trustee's consent or authorization from the Court. Thus, such actions are ineffective pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 363(b).

Count 5: Declaratory Judgment that the Trustee Has Not Violated His Fiduciary Duties by Declining to Carry Out the Optional Redemption

115. Plaintiff incorporates the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

116. The Trustee is mindful of his fiduciary obligations under the PMAs and Indentures. At the same time, the Trustee believes any action taken to effectuate the Optional Redemption are in violation of the automatic stay, outside the ordinary course of Acis's business, and an attempt to destroy the primary vehicle by which Acis generates revenue.

117. The Trustee was appointed on Monday, May 14, 2018. In the brief period of time since the Trustee's appointment, Highland, pursuant to the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement, has advised the Trustee on the day-to-day business operations of Acis. Highland, as a fiduciary for Acis LP, pursuant to the Sub-Advisory Agreement, has stated that if the Trustee does not begin the process of liquidating the Acis CLOs and comply with the Optional Redemption, the Trustee will breach certain fiduciary duties owed to the Acis CLOs. As described believe, the Trustee believes the Optional Redemption will violate sections 362 and 363 of the Bankruptcy Code and leave Acis without its most valuable assets, the PMAs. Highland has further suggested to the Trustee that if he does not agree to effectuate the Optional Redemption, he was be individually liable for violating his fiduciary duty to the Acis CLO's equity.<sup>53</sup> At the May 31, 2018 status conference in these Cases, the Trustee advised the Court of Highland's demands related to the Optional Redemption. The Trustee believes that he has proposed a plan of reorganization that maximizes recovery for all parties, including HCLOF.

118. As such, the Trustee seeks a declaratory judgment that he has not violated his fiduciary obligations by declining to carry out the Optional Redemption, as ordered by HCLOF.

VI. PRAYER

119. For the foregoing reasons, the Trustee respectfully requests that the Court enter judgment in favor of the Trustee, and specifically and expressly provide the following relief to the Plaintiff for the benefit of the Debtors' bankruptcy estates:

- (i) Temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7065, to preserve the status quo and protect the estates by enjoining the Defendants from taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, or any action to effectuate yet another optional redemption at some future time under section 9.2 of the Indentures, unless the Defendants seek Court approval, and the Court lifts the automatic stay to allow such actions, or the Court confirms a plan pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1129;
- (ii) Plaintiff's recovery of damages pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 362(k), for Defendants' violation of the automatic stay;
- (iii) Declaratory judgment that the Optional Redemption Notices are defective and ineffective pursuant to the PMAs and Indentures;
- (iv) Declaratory judgment that the Optional Redemption Notices are ineffective pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 363(b);
- (v) Declaratory judgment that the Trustee has not violated his fiduciary duties by declining to carry out the Optional Redemption;

<sup>53</sup> HCLOF is the only signatory on the Optional Redemptions related to CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6. The signatories for the Optional Redemption related to CLO-1 are New ALF, Nexpoint Strategic Opportunities Fund (f/k/a NexPoint Credit Strategic Fund) (a Highland affiliate), and Drexel Limited.

- (vi) Plaintiff's recovery from Defendants of pre- and post-judgment interest, at the greatest rate permitted by law, on all amounts awarded to Plaintiff;
- (vii) Plaintiff's recovery from Defendants of all attorney's fees and costs incurred in connection with the prosecution of this Adversary Proceeding;
- (viii) All such other and further relief as to which Plaintiff has shown or hereafter shows himself to be justly entitled in law or in equity.

TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

On its own motion pursuant to 11 U.S.C § 105 and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65, incorporated by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7065, for the reasons stated on the record at the May 31, 2018 Status Conference<sup>1</sup> in the above-referenced cases, after considering the argument of counsel, the testimony of Robin Phelan, the Chapter 11 Trustee (the "Trustee") for Acis Capital Management, L.P., ("Acis LP") and ("Acis GP, with Acis LP, "Debtors"), and the pleadings, and other information on file, the Court finds that there is evidence that harm is imminent to the Debtors, the Debtors' estates, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' creditors, and to interested third parties (collectively the "Parties"), and if the Court does not issue a temporary restraining order enjoining the actions described herein, the Parties will be irreparably injured. As the basis for this order, the Court states the following:

1. The Parties will suffer immediate and irreparable harm in the form of substantial losses to the Parties and third parties' financial interests if the Trustee, Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland"), Highland CLO Funding, LTD ("HCLOF"), CLO Holdco, Ltd. ("Holdco"), Neutra, Ltd. ("Neutra") (HCLOF, Holdco and Neutra are collectively referred to herein as the "Highland-Related Parties"), U.S. Bank National Association ("US Bank"), Acis CLO 2013-1 LTD. ("CLO-1"), Acis CLO 2014-3 LTD. ("CLO-3"), Acis CLO 2014-4 LTD. ("CLO-4"), Acis CLO 2014-5 LTD. ("CLO-5"), Acis CLO 2015-6 LTD. ("CLO-6") (CLO-1, CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6 are collectively referred to herein as the "Acis CLOs"), Acis CLO 2013-1 LLC ("CLO-1 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-3 LLC ("CLO-3 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-4 LLC ("CLO-4 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-5 LLC ("CLO-5 LLC"), Acis CLO 2015-6 LLC ("CLO-6 LLC") (CLO-1 LLC, CLO-3 LLC, CLO-4 LLC, CLO-5 LLC, and CLO-6 LLC are collectively referred to herein as the "Acis CLO Co-Issuer") and other parties (the Trustee, Highland, the Highland-Related Parties, US Bank, the Acis CLOs, and the Acis Co-Issuers are referred to herein as the "Restrained Parties") are not immediately restrained and enjoined from effectuating the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs. "Optional Redemption" is defined by and effectuated pursuant to Sections 9.2 of each of the following: (i) that certain Indenture, dated as of March 18, 2013, issued by CLO-1, as issuer, CLO-1 LLC, as co-Issuer and US Bank as Trustee (the "CLO-1 Indenture"); (ii) that certain Indenture, dated as of February 25, 2014, issued by CLO-3, as issuer, CLO-3 LLC, as co-Issuer and US Bank, as Trustee (the "CLO-3 Indenture"); (iii) that certain Indenture, dated as of June 5, 2014, issued by CLO-4, as issuer, CLO-4 LLC, as co-Issuer and US Bank, as Trustee (the "CLO-4 Indenture"); (iv) that certain Indenture, dated as of November 18, 2014, issued by CLO-5, as issuer, CLO-5 LLC, as co-Issuer and US Bank, as Trustee (the "CLO-5 Indenture"); and (v) that certain Indenture, dated as of April 16, 2015, issued by CLO-6, as issuer, CLO-6 LLC, as co-Issuer and US Bank, as Trustee (the "CLO-6 Indenture"). CLO-1 Indenture, CLO-3 Indenture, CLO-4 Indenture, CLO-5 Indenture, and CLO-6 Indenture are collectively referred to herein as the "Indentures"). The Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs threatens to liquidate or harm valuable property of the Debtors, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' estates, and other assets in this matter, to the detriment of the Parties.

2. Injunctive relief is necessary to prevent imminent and irreparable injury to the Parties in the form of substantial losses to the Parties and third parties' financial interests related to the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs and the threatened liquidation of valuable property of the Debtors, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' estates, and other assets in this matter. The losses that would result in the event a temporary restraining order is not issued cannot be presently measured by any certain pecuniary standard, are not reasonably quantifiable, and cannot be adequately compensated with monetary damages; thus, the Parties and interested third parties otherwise have no adequate remedy at law.
3. The Trustee has a substantial case on the merits on a serious legal question—to wit: that the threatened actions described herein, if not enjoined, will violate the automatic stay in this matter, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3).
4. The balancing of the harms weighs in favor of issuing the temporary injunction because any harm to Highland, or any of the Highland-Related Parties, is substantially outweighed by the damage that would be caused to Parties if the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs is not enjoined.
5. Public policy supports restraining the actions described herein and allowing the Trustee to exercise his fiduciary duties to maximize the value of the estate for the benefit of the Parties by allowing the Trustee to direct and control the refinancing, sale, or other monetization of Debtors' property, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' estates, and other assets in this matter.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that all Restrained Parties<sup>2</sup> and their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, and any other person or entity acting on the Restrained Parties' behalf are enjoined for a period of fourteen (14) days from:

1. proceeding with, effectuating, or otherwise taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs; and
2. sending, mailing, or otherwise distributing any notice to the holders of the Acis CLOs in connection with the effectuation of the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION ORDER

Upon the Verified Original Complaint and Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Adversary No. 18-03212, Docket No. 1] (the "Complaint")<sup>1</sup> filed by Robin Phelan, the Chapter 11 Trustee (the "Trustee") for Acis Capital Management, L.P. ("Acis LP") and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC ("Acis GP", with Acis LP, "Debtors"); and the Court having jurisdiction over this matter pursuant 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334; and venue being proper in this district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409; and the Complaint constituting a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(A) and (O); and the substantive law being 11 U.S.C. §§ 105, 362, and 363; and it appearing that there was good and sufficient notice of the Trustee's Application for Preliminary Injunction ("Application"); and upon the record of the July 6, 2018 hearing on the Application (the "Hearing"); and upon the Trustee's verification of the Complaint; and pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65, incorporated by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7065, the Court finds that there is compelling evidence that irreparable harm is imminent to the Debtors, the Debtors' estates, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' creditors, and to interested third parties (collectively the "Parties"), and if the Court does not issue a preliminary injunction enjoining the actions described herein, the Parties will be irreparably injured. All objections to the Trustee's Application are hereby overruled. As the basis for this order, the Court states the following:

1. The Chapter 11 Debtor, Acis LP—which is affiliated with the large investment advisor firm Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland")—is a company that, for several years, has been engaged in the business of managing investments for special purpose entities that hold collateralized loan obligations ("CLOs"). Acis LP is currently the portfolio manager for, inter alia, funds of the following CLOs: (i) Acis CLO 2013-1 Ltd. ("CLO-1"), (ii) Acis CLO 2014-3 Ltd. ("CLO-3"), (iii) Acis CLO 2014-4 Ltd. ("CLO-4"), (iv) Acis CLO 2014-5 Ltd. ("CLO-5"), and (v) Acis CLO 2015-6 Ltd. ("CLO-6" and together with CLO-1, CLO-3, CLO-4, and CLO-5, the "Issuers" or the "Acis CLOs"). As relevant herein, Acis LP manages the Acis CLOs through five portfolio management agreements ("PMAs").<sup>2</sup> Acis LP generates revenue primarily through the management of the Acis CLOs via the PMAs. True and correct copies of the PMAs were submitted into evidence at the Hearing (Trustee's Exhibits B-F). The Acis CLOs are subject to: (i) that certain Indenture, dated as of March 18, 2013, by and among CLO-1, as Issuer, Acis CLO 2013-1 LLC, as Co-Issuer and U.S. Bank National Association ("US Bank"); (ii) that certain Indenture, dated as of February 25, 2014, by and among CLO-3, as Issuer, Acis CLO 2014-3 LLC, as Co-Issuer and U.S. Bank, as Indenture Trustee (the "CLO-3 Indenture"); (iii) that certain Indenture, dated as of June 5, 2014, by and among CLO-4, as Issuer, Acis CLO 2014-4 LLC, as Co-Issuer and US Bank, as Indenture Trustee (the "CLO-4 Indenture"); (iv) that certain Indenture, dated as of November 18, 2014, by and among CLO-5, as Issuer, Acis CLO 2014-5 LLC, as Co-Issuer and US Bank, as Indenture Trustee (the "CLO-5 Indenture"); and (v) that certain Indenture, dated as of April 16, 2015, by and among CLO-6, as Issuer, Acis CLO 2015-6 LLC, as Co-Issuer and US Bank, as Indenture Trustee (the "CLO-6 Indenture"). The CLO-1 Indenture, CLO-3 Indenture, CLO-4 Indenture, CLO-5 Indenture, and CLO-6 Indenture are collectively referred to herein as the "Indentures." True and correct copies of the Indentures were submitted into evidence (Trustee's Exhibits G-K).

<sup>2</sup> The PMAs include: (i) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-1, dated March 18, 2013 (the "CLO-1 PMA"); (ii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-3, dated February 25, 2014 (the "CLO-3 PMA"); (iii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-4, dated June 5, 2014 (the "CLO-4 PMA"); (iv) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-5, dated November 18, 2014 (the "CLO-5 PMA"); and (v) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-6, dated April 16, 2015 (the "CLO-6 PMA"). The CLO-1 PMA, CLO-3 PMA, CLO-4 PMA, CLO-5 PMA, and CLO-6 PMA are collectively referred to herein as the "PMAs."

2. Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. f/k/a/ Acis Loan Funding Ltd. ("HCLOF" or "ALF") has had, in recent months, a significant role with regard to Acis LP, and the PMAs, and the whole "CLO ecosystem"—as the parties in this bankruptcy case have been known to call the structure of the Acis LP CLO business. ALF apparently was originally created, in large part, to comply with certain risk-retention requirements of federal law relating to CLOs. ALF has been the holder of the equity in the Acis CLOs (which "equity" is actually in the form of subordinated notes, and is the bottom tranch of the capital structure of the Acis CLOs—i.e., the last investor to get paid upon a liquidation of the Acis CLOs). Notably, persons connected with Highland began implementing transactions that changed the Acis LP "CLO ecosystem" and impaired Acis LP's contractual rights, almost immediately after October 20, 2017—the date that an individual named Joshua Terry obtained a multi-million arbitration award against Acis LP. For example, prior to October 24, 2017, Acis LP had a small ownership interest in ALF. Acis LP (being controlled at that time by the same persons that control Highland) decided to sell its interest in ALF back to ALF on or around October 24, 2017

3. Prior to October 27, 2017, Acis LP—not ALF—had authority to direct and effectuate an optional redemption under the PMAs. Acis LP had this authority pursuant to another Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and ALF, dated December 22, 2016 (the "ALF PMA"). A true and correct copy of the ALF PMA was submitted into evidence (Trustee's Exhibit L). The ALF PMA provided broad authority to Acis LP as the portfolio manager of ALF. Section 5 of the ALF PMA set out Acis LP's authority, which included authority for and in the name of ALF to:

- (i) invest, directly or indirectly . . . in all types of securities and other financial instruments of United States and non-U.S. entities . . . including without limitation . . . notes representing tranches of debt ('CLO Notes') issued by a special purpose vehicle which issues notes backed by a pool of collateral consisting primarily of loans (which may be represented by a debt or equity security) (a 'CLO') . . . (each of such items, 'Financial Instruments'), (ii) provide credit and market research and analysis in connection with the investments and ongoing management of [ALF] and direct the formulation of investment policies and strategies for [ALF] . . . ; (iii) cause [ALF] to engage in . . . agency, agency cross, related party principal transactions with affiliates of [Acis LP] . . . ; and (iv) vote Financial Instruments, participate in arrangements with creditors, the institution and settlement or compromise of suits and administrative proceedings and other like or similar matters.

See ALF PMA § 5(a)-(q).

4. While ALF did not have authority to terminate the ALF PMA, Acis LP could terminate the ALF PMA without cause upon at least ninety (90) days' notice. See ALF PMA § 13(a)-(c). Still, the ALF PMA provided for the removal of Acis LP as portfolio manager "for cause." See ALF PMA § 14(a)-(e).

5. Significantly, on October 27, 2017, just seven days after Joshua Terry's arbitration award, Acis LP effectively terminated its own portfolio management rights under the ALF PMA and transferred its authority and those valuable portfolio management rights—for no apparent value—to Highland HCF Advisors, Ltd. ("Highland HCF").

6. This transfer of Acis LP's portfolio management rights to Highland HCF was accomplished by way of a new Portfolio Management Agreement entered into by ALF and Highland HCF on October 27, 2017 (the "October 2017 PMA"), which cancelled and terminated the ALF PMA and empowered Highland HCF with the same broad authority to direct the management of ALF as was previously held by Acis LP under the ALF PMA (the "ALF PMA Transfer"). See October 2017 PMA §§ 1 & 5(a)-(q).

7. Under the prior ALF PMA, Acis LP's consent to the termination of the ALF PMA was required in order to effectuate the ALF PMA Transfer. Nevertheless, just days after the Joshua Terry multimillion dollar arbitration award was issued, the persons controlling Acis LP (and Highland), without expressing the basis for reasonable business judgment for this transfer, simply directed Acis LP to sign the October 2017 PMA, consenting and agreeing to Acis LP's removal and replacement, and transferring all authority and management rights as portfolio manager of ALF to Highland HCF under the October 2017 PMA. It appears to the Court that, without this ALF PMA Transfer, which transferred Acis LP's rights under the ALF PMA to Highland HCF, ALF—which changed its name in late October 2017 to Highland CLO Funding Ltd.—could not have attempted to direct and effectuate an optional redemption, which it is now attempting to do.

8. On April 30, 2018, HCLOF sent five notices purportedly requesting optional redemption pursuant to the Section 9.2 of each of the Indentures (the "First Optional Redemption Notices")—which essentially ordered a liquidation of the Acis CLOs, which among other things, would have rendered valueless the Acis PMA and Acis LP's value. Those notices were later withdrawn, after resistance from the Trustee and Court intervention.

9. Later, on June 15, 2018, after HCLOF withdrew the First Optional Redemption Notices, HCLOF gave notice to the Trustee that it was again requesting an Optional Redemption pursuant to the Section 9.2 of each of the Indentures (the "Second Optional Redemption Notices"). Apparently, HCLOF has now withdrawn the Second Optional Redemption Notices. However, the Trustee seeks a preliminary injunction preventing further attempts by HCLOF at effectuating Optional Redemptions while the Trustee attempts to confirm a plan or otherwise resolve the Acis LP bankruptcy case in a way beneficial to creditors and interest holders. "Optional Redemption" is defined by and effectuated pursuant to Sections 9.2 of each of the Indentures. For the avoidance of doubt, Optional Redemption as used herein refers to an Optional Redemption previously or currently issued by HCLOF or any of the Defendants (as hereinafter defined) or any other attempt to liquidate the Acis CLOs now or in the future by any means.

10. The Trustee has sustained his heavy burden of entitlement to a preliminary injunction in this Adversary Proceeding. First, absent affirmative relief from the automatic stay, any action to effectuate an Optional Redemption by way of any Optional Redemption notices violates the automatic stay of the Acis LP bankruptcy case because it represents an "act to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate." Further, any action taken by the Defendants to effectuate an Optional Redemption is outside the ordinary course of Acis LP's business, and therefore requires bankruptcy court approval. Acis LP's rights under the PMAs are valuable, and if Acis LP were to lose such rights, immediate and irreparable harm would result to Acis LP's creditors and third parties with financial interests in the Acis LP's bankruptcy estates because confirmation of a plan of reorganization funded by Oaktree Capital Management, L.P. ("Oaktree") pursuant to the Oaktree Transaction (as defined and explained by the Emergency Motion to Approve Break-Up Fee, Expense Reimbursement, and Replacement Sub-Advisory and Shared Services Provider, Oaktree Capital Management, L.P. [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 263] (the "Break-Up Fee Motion")—or, perhaps, any other viable transaction—would be impossible. In addition to the Oaktree Transaction, the Trustee credibly testified that he has received expressions of interests from other qualified parties to fund alternative plans of reorganization for Acis LP, which may include a reset of the CLOs and continuance of Acis LP as the portfolio manager of the CLOs. Finally, HCLOF is using rights that appear to have been fraudulently transferred from Acis LP (i.e., rights under the ALF PMA) to attempt to effectuate the Optional Redemptions.

11. To obtain a preliminary injunction, the movant must show that (a) it has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits; (b) it will suffer irreparable injury without the injunction; (c) the threatened injury to the movant outweighs the damage the proposed injunction may cause to the parties opposing it; and (d) the requested injunction would not be against the public interest. Clark v. Pritchard, 812 F.2d 991, 993 (5th Cir. 1987); Planned Parenthood Gulf Coast, Inc. v. Kliebert, 141 F.Supp. 3d 604, 635 (M.D. La. 2015); Miranda v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. 3:13-CV-2217-L, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 90632 (N.D. Tex. June 27, 2013). The Court must necessarily make its decision by relying on an early and abbreviated proceeding and set of facts. Texas v. Seatrain Int'l, S.A., 518 F.2d 175, 179 (5th Cir. 1975). Quick and abbreviated determinations are necessary to recognize the goal of injunctive relief, which is to maintain the status quo to permit the court the time necessary to make a decision on the merits after full development of the facts. Kliebert, 141 F. Supp. 3d at 635. Moreover, not all of the four (4) factors must be given equal weight. According to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals: "a sliding scale must be applied in considering the probability of plaintiffs' winning on the merits and plaintiffs' irreparable injury in the absence of interlocutory relief...." (Siff v. State Democratic Executive Committee, 500 F.2d 1307, 1309 (5th Cir. 1974)) and "...none of the four prerequisites has a fixed quantitative value. Rather, a sliding scale is utilized, which takes into account the intensity of each in a given calculus." Texas v. Seatrain Int'l, S.A., 518 F.2d 175, 179-180 (5th Cir. 1975). This means that as long as the court finds that there is some likelihood of ultimate success (i.e., not zero likelihood of success), the court can give greater weight to the severity and irreparability of the harm and the relative hardships to the movant and opponent of the injunctive relief. Id.

12. The Trustee has shown that the elements warranting a preliminary injunction exist here: (1) the Trustee has a "substantial likelihood of success on the merits" of a claim regarding (i) violation of the automatic stay if injunction is not granted, (ii) utilizing rights transferred for no or insufficient value to attempt to effectuate an optional redemption, (iii) failing to obtain court authority under Section 363 to effectuate an optional redemption, and (iv) confirmation of an effective plan of reorganization; (2) creditors and interested third-parties face a substantial threat of imminent and irreparable injury to their interests in the Debtors' bankruptcy estates if an injunction is not issued since confirmation of a plan of reorganization funded by Oaktree or other competent party will be eliminated; (3) the threatened injury to interested parties "if the injunction is denied outweighs any harm that will result if the injunction is granted"; and (4) "public interest" favors letting the Trustee exercise his fiduciary duties and effectuate his process over costly litigation. See Byrum v. Landreth, 566 F.3d 442, 445 (5th Cir. 2009) (stating the elements of a preliminary injunction).

13. As earlier noted, the Optional Redemption Notices essentially demand the liquidation of property currently under the control of Acis LP, as portfolio manager, and, in effect, the PMAs themselves, which are defined as Assets under the Indentures and are property of the Acis LP estate. Indeed, the main, if not sole, purpose of the redemptions appears to be to remove Acis LP as portfolio manager and terminate its primary asset, the PMAs. Accordingly, by extinguishing the PMAs, a purported Optional Redemption in this context should be deemed prohibited because it would represent an "act to obtain possession of property of the estate or of property from the estate or to exercise control over property of the estate" in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 362(a)(3). The Debtors' rights under the PMAs, which are executory contracts, are property of the estate. The Debtors' rights under the PMAs are therefore protected by the automatic stay. In re Mirant Corp., 303 B.R. 319, 328 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2003) ("a debtor has rights under the contract which are property of the estate and so are protected by the automatic stay from actions of other parties"). If the Optional Redemption or other liquidation of the assets in the Acis CLOs is permitted to go forward, it would render the PMAs valueless. Consequently, the Optional Redemption and any other attempt by HCLOF to liquidate the assets of the Acis CLOs would violate Section 362(a)(3) because such actions involve exercising control over property of the estate (the PMAs). Thus, because the liquidation of the CLOs represents an "act to obtain possession of property of the estate,"—namely, Acis LP's intangible property rights in the PMAs—such actions constitute a violation of Section 362(a)(3).

14. Injunctive relief is necessary here to prevent imminent and irreparable injury in the form of substantial losses to creditors and parties-in-interest, as well as to third parties' financial interests, related to the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs. The losses that would result in the event an injunction is not issued cannot be presently measured by any certain pecuniary standard, are not reasonably quantifiable, and cannot be adequately compensated with monetary damages; thus, creditors and interested third parties otherwise would have no adequate remedy at law. The Optional Redemption would eliminate any chance of confirmation of a plan of reorganization based on the Oaktree Transaction, or a similar plan. HCLOF has not shown that the safe harbor of Section 555 of the Bankruptcy Code applies to its actions to effectuate the Optional Redemption.

15. The balancing of the harms weighs in favor of issuing a preliminary injunction because any alleged harm to HCLOF, Highland, or any of the Highland Affiliates,<sup>3</sup> is substantially outweighed by the damage that would be caused to all parties-in-interest if the

Court does not enjoin the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs, and return more to all affected parties than would be received by the Optional Redemption. Any alleged harm to Defendants is illusory and specious because, among other things, the Defendants have options available that immediately mitigate any purported damage. Namely, Defendants could (1) authorize a "refinance" or "reset" transaction or (2) sell their equity to a third party in an amount that exceeds what they would receive in an Optional Redemption. There seems to the Court to be a highly meaningful chance that HCLOF, Highland and the Highland Affiliates will receive the same or more monetary benefit from the Oaktree Transaction than they would from an Optional Redemption, and creditors will likely be paid in full. HCLOF's claimed harm is exaggerated.

16. Public policy supports restraining the actions described herein to allow the Trustee to exercise his fiduciary duties to maximize the value of the estate for the benefit of creditors by allowing the Trustee to direct and control the refinancing, sale, or other monetization of Debtors' property and other assets. Further, there is a public interest in allowing for a Chapter 11 process, rather than costly prolonged litigation.

17. Accordingly, the Court issues this preliminary injunction preventing the Defendants from taking any action in furtherance of any Optional Redemption. Any notices of optional redemption sent by HCOLF would be an attempt to obtain a property right (the right to control trading of the loans in the CLOs) from Acis LP as well as an attempt to exercise control over contractual property rights of Acis LP, all in violation of Section 362(a)(3) of the Bankruptcy Code.

18. The Parties will suffer immediate and irreparable harm in the form of substantial losses to the Parties and third parties' financial interests if the Trustee, Highland, CLO-1, CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, CLO-6, Acis CLO 2013-1 LLC ("CLO-1 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-3 LLC ("CLO-3 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-4 LLC ("CLO-4 LLC"), Acis CLO 2014-5 LLC ("CLO-5 LLC"), and Acis CLO 2015-6 LLC ("CLO-6 LLC," and together with CLO-1 LLC, CLO-3 LLC, CLO-4 LLC, CLO-5 LLC, the "Co-Issuers"), and other parties (the Trustee, Highland, HCLOF, the Issuers, and the Co-Issuers are referred to herein as the "Defendants") are not immediately restrained and enjoined from effectuating the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs. The Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs threatens to liquidate or harm valuable property of the Debtors, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' estates, and other assets in this matter, to the detriment of the Parties.

19. Injunctive relief is necessary to prevent imminent and irreparable injury to the Parties in the form of substantial losses to the Parties and third parties' financial interests related to the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs and the threatened liquidation of valuable property of the Debtors, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' estates, and other assets in this matter. The losses that would result in the event a preliminary injunction order is not issued cannot be presently measured by any certain pecuniary standard, are not reasonably quantifiable, and cannot be adequately compensated with monetary damages; thus, the Parties and interested third parties otherwise have no adequate remedy at law.

20. The Trustee has a "substantial likelihood of success on the merits" of a claim regarding: (i) violation of the automatic stay if this temporary restraining order is not issued, (ii) failing to obtain court authority under Section 363 to effectuate an optional redemption, and (iii) confirmation of an effective plan of reorganization.

21. The balancing of the harms weighs in favor of issuing the temporary injunction because any harm to Highland, or any of the Highland Affiliates, is substantially outweighed by the damage that would be caused to Parties if the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs is not enjoined.

22. Public policy supports restraining the actions described herein and allowing the Trustee to exercise his fiduciary duties to maximize the value of the estate for the benefit of the Parties by allowing the Trustee to direct and control the refinancing, sale, or other monetization of Debtors' property, the Debtors' rights, the Debtors' estates, and other assets in this matter.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that for the reasons stated herein and pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65, made applicable herein by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure Rule 7065 and pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure Rule 7001(7) the Court finds the Trustee is entitled to a preliminary injunction, that all Defendants and their officers, agents, servants, employees, attorneys, and any other person or entity acting on the Defendants' behalf are enjoined from:

- a. proceeding with, effectuating, or otherwise taking any action in furtherance of any Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs previously or currently issued by the Defendants and any other attempt to liquidate the Acis CLOs now or in the future by any means;
- b. trading any Acis CLO collateral, whether in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs or otherwise, without the express and explicit written authorization of the Trustee; and
- c. sending, mailing, or otherwise distributing any notice to the holders of the Acis CLOs in connection with the effectuation of any Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7065, the Trustee is not required to provide security or bond in connection with this Order.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED for the avoidance of doubt, that U.S. Bank, as Indenture Trustee, may perform its ministerial functions in respect of sale trades executed at the initiation of the Issuers or Highland Affiliates prior to July 9, 2018.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this Order expires upon confirmation of any plan of reorganization or conversion of the Bankruptcy Cases unless further extended by the Court or by the agreement of the parties, or until such time as the Defendants seek Court approval to dissolve this Order or until such time as the Defendants seek and are granted relief from the automatic stay pursuant Section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”) holds bargained-for contractual rights under non-debtor contracts with respect to non-debtor CLOs that hold over $2 billion in assets. For months now, the Chapter 11 Trustee (the “Trustee”) has enjoyed the benefits of a preliminary injunction that has barred HCLOF from exercising these rights. That injunction was granted, in part, upon the Trustee’s belief that he could effect a plan of reorganization that would pay creditors and HCLOF in full. HCLOF objected to the Trustee’s proposed plan because it did not pay HCLOF “in full” and forced a sale of its property, or altered its non-debtor contract rights, against its will. The Court denied approval of all three plans.

The Trustee now wants to try again — this time with “Plan D.” Plan D suffers from the same defects that rendered Plans B and C unconfirmable because it presumes that the Trustee can alter rights that HCLOF has under the CLO indentures — contracts to which debtor Acis LP is not a party. The CLOs are not in bankruptcy, the CLO indentures are non-debtor contracts, and HCLOF is not even a creditor in this case. Plan D will fail just as the other plans have failed.

The Trustee had his chance. If there were ever justification for the injunction, that justification no longer exists. There is no “quick fix” to this bankruptcy case. If the Trustee believes he has claims against HCLOF and others, he should not ask the Court to prejudge those claims, or prejudge whether HCLOF or others should be “collapsed” into parties against whom Mr. Terry has a pre-petition arbitration award. Instead, the Trustee should pursue those claims to judgment. If he prevails, he has a remedy. That stands in stark contrast to HCLOF, which has been held in stasis for months with no remedy against the Debtors or the Trustee. The Court recently concluded that HCLOF is not a creditor; it follows that HCLOF has no claim against the Trustee for the harm he is causing. A party with an adequate legal remedy (the Trustee) is not entitled to an injunction.

Accordingly, HCLOF respectfully requests that the preliminary injunction be dissolved, and that it be granted relief from the automatic stay, to the extent applicable, to exercise its contractual rights as it sees fit, with the discretion it bargained for, and to which it is entitled.

RELEVANT FACTS

A. Background

1. The debtors in this case are Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (collectively, the “Debtors”). Acis LP is the portfolio manager of five financial investment vehicles known as collateralized loan obligations (“CLOs”).<sup>1</sup>

2. Each CLO holds a portfolio of diversified syndicated leveraged commercial loans through the private placement of rated secured notes (“Secured Notes”) and unsecured subordinated securities (“Equity Notes” together with the Secured Notes, the “Notes”), providing investors with differentiated risk and reward profiles. Hr’g Tr. (Feb. 7, 2018), at 73:1–74:20.

3. Each Note is subject to an indenture (the “Indenture”) that establishes the rights of the noteholders and the indenture investment criteria.<sup>2</sup> Neither of the Debtors are a party to any of the Indentures.

4. Through a Portfolio Management Agreement (“PMA”) for each CLO, Acis LP agreed to manage the assets securing the Notes according to the criteria specified in the respective Indentures.<sup>3</sup> In return for its services, Acis LP earns management fees, which are specified percentages of the principal amount of the total assets under management. See, e.g., 2013-1 Indenture at 31–32, 64, 66. Acis LP has no employees or other infrastructure necessary to manage the CLOs, and has historically employed Highland-related entities as sub-advisors and sub-servicers to perform the necessary front, middle, and back office services.

<sup>2</sup> E.g., Indenture for Acis CLO 2013-1 (Exhibit 1 at Plan Confirmation) (“2013-1 Indenture”). The indentures for the other CLOs were Exhibits 2 through 5 at Plan Confirmation. References to specific provisions of the Indentures are illustrated by reference to the 2013-1 Indenture. The provisions are substantially similar, if not identical, across the various indentures.

5. At the time of their respective investments in the CLOs, it was represented to the investors, including the Equity Noteholders, that Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”) would perform all of the portfolio management duties, and the CLOs and the Equity Noteholders, including HCLOF, relied on that representation and the reputation of Highland in the industry to manage their investments. Hr’g Tr. (June 12, 2018), at 36:25–38:25; see also HCLOF Offering Memorandum dated Nov. 15, 2017 (Ex. 90 at Plan Confirmation).

6. Pursuant to the Indentures, the CLOs can redeem the Secured Notes under certain conditions, including at the written direction of 66 2/3% of the aggregate outstanding amount of the Equity Notes. E.g., 2013-1 Indentures § 9.2. Through this right of redemption, the Equity Noteholders can restructure the CLOs when they no longer meet their investment objectives.

7. Acis LP is not a party to the Indenture but must comply with certain aspects of the Indenture in its capacity as the Portfolio Manager of the CLOs. See, e.g., 2013-1 PMA § 3(a). As relevant here, the Indentures require Acis LP, “[u]pon receipt or delivery of a notice of a redemption of the Secured Notes,” to “direct the sale of all or part of the Collateral Obligations and other Assets” to effect a redemption. E.g., 2013-1 Indenture § 9.2. Acis LP has no discretion to refuse this directive.

<sup>3</sup> E.g., Portfolio Management Agreement between Acis CLO 2013-1, Ltd. and Acis Capital Management, LP (Exhibit 6 at Plan Confirmation) (“2013-1 PMA”). The PMAs for the other CLOs were Exhibits 7 through 10 at Plan Confirmation. References to specific PMAs are illustrated by reference to the 2013-1 PMA. The provisions are substantially similar, if not identical, across the various PMAs.

B. HCLOF's Efforts To Reset The CLOs

8. Because changes in interest rates affect the return on the CLOs' investments, HCLOF has the contractual right under the Indentures to "reset" the CLO, which is a process of refinancing currently existing collateral loan obligations. Once refinanced, the reset CLO will pay lower interest rates to the Secured Noteholders and thus maintain or improve the yield to the Equity Noteholders. See Hr'g Tr. (Feb. 6, 2018), at 73:22–75:1.

9. By January 2018, HCLOF had secured sufficient capital to effectuate the reset for Acis CLO 2014-3. Hr'g Tr. (Feb. 7, 2018), at 81:1–83:7. But the transaction did not close because the involuntary bankruptcy petitions were filed. Id. at 83:8–84:7, 85:20–89:2.<sup>4</sup> As a result, HCLOF remains stuck in subpar investments, and it is losing approximately $59,000 per CLO per week — a total of approximately $295,000 per week — compared to what it could earn by redeploying this capital to a better investment. Hr'g Tr. (June 12, 2018), at 40:20–23, 73:1–8.<sup>5</sup>

C. The Bankruptcy Proceedings

10. Following the bankruptcy petitions and the appointment of a Chapter 7 bankruptcy trustee, HCLOF decided to cut its losses, as a now bankrupt portfolio manager was untenable and the future of its investment was uncertain. HCLOF determined that a redemption, effectuated by Highland as the sub-manager for Acis LP, was its sole remedy under the circumstances. Accordingly, on April 30, 2018, HCLOF instructed the Indenture Trustee and Acis LP to initiate an optional redemption (the "Initial Notices"). See Hr'g Tr. (Feb. 6, 2018), at 157:9–160:11.

<sup>4</sup> Mr. Terry has admitted that preventing the reset was a reason why he filed the involuntary. Hr'g Tr. (Mar. 27, 2018), [Doc. 107], at 27:22–28:1 (Q: "And you knew that there was an extreme likelihood that the transaction was not going to go forward as a result of the bankruptcy filing." Joshua Terry: "Yes, that was our goal on filing the involuntary petitions . . .").

11. After the Initial Notices were issued, on May 11, 2018, the Bankruptcy Court converted the Chapter 7 cases and granted a motion to appoint a Chapter 11 trustee. See Order [Doc. 205]. The Trustee was appointed by this Court on May 17, 2018. See Order [Doc. 221].

12. The Trustee refused to authorize the processes to allow Highland, as sub-manager, to take the actions necessary to effect the Initial Notices. See Trustee Letters (May 22, 2018) (Exhibit 40 at Plan Confirmation); Trustee Email (May 27, 2018) (Exhibit 44 at Plan Confirmation). At a status conference on May 31, 2018, the Court sua sponte entered a temporary restraining order (“TRO”) which effectively stayed the optional redemption process. [Doc. 256]. Hr’g Tr. (May 31, 2018), at 66:11–69:2.

13. On June 13, 2018, HCLOF withdrew the Initial Notices. See Revocation and Withdrawal Notices (Exhibit 97 at Plan Confirmation). On June 15, 2018 at 12:01 a.m., the TRO expired by its own terms.

14. Later on June 15, 2018, HCLOF issued new Notices of Redemption (the “Second Notices”) with a redemption date of July 30, 2018, in the manner required by the Indentures. See June 15, 2018 Redemption Notices (Exhibit 20 at Plan Confirmation). The Second Notices were withdrawn on July 6, 2018. See Revocation and Withdrawal Notices (Exhibit 98 at Plan Confirmation).

15. On June 21, 2018, the Trustee filed the Verified Original Complaint and Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Adv. No. 18-03212, Doc. 1] seeking, among other things, a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction prohibiting HCLOF from taking any actions to effectuate an optional redemption. The Court entered an ex parte temporary restraining order on June 21, 2018 and held a preliminary injunction hearing on July 6, 2018.

16. On July 10, 2018, the Court entered a preliminary injunction (the “Preliminary Injunction”) enjoining HCLOF from “proceeding with, effectuating, or otherwise taking any action in furtherance of any Optional Redemption.” Preliminary Injunction Order [Adv. No. 18-03212, Doc. 21] (“PI Order”), at 13.

D. The Proposed Plans And Confirmation Hearing

17. On July 5, 2018, the Trustee filed his joint plan for the Debtors [Doc. 383], proposing three (3) alternatives — Plans A, B and C. Plan A proposed to transfer non-estate property (i.e., HCLOF’s Equity Notes) and the PMAs (the “Oaktree Transaction”) to Oaktree Capital Management, L.P. (“Oaktree”). Alternatively, the Trustee proposed Plans B and C, both of which were premised on preventing HCLOF from exercising certain rights under the Indentures, thereby ensuring future revenue streams from which the estates would pay creditors.

18. On August 30, 2018, the Court denied confirmation of all three plans. See generally Court’s Ruling on Confirmation [Doc. 549] (“Confirmation Decision”) and subsequent Order entered at Doc. 569.

19. On September 28, 2018, the Trustee filed a Second Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC [Doc. 612] (“Plan D”). Plan D is very similar to Plans B and C in that it seeks to modify the Indentures to restrict HCLOF’s contractual rights. Plan D relies on a plan injunction, issued pursuant to sections 105(a), 1123(a)(5), and 1123(b)(6), and other plan provisions to achieve the same result. See Plan D §§ 14.03 (plan injunction), § 6.08 (restricting HCLOF’s right to withdraw redemptions).

ARGUMENT

20. With the benefit of the Preliminary Injunction granted by this Court, the Trustee took his chances with Plans A, B, and C. The Court denied confirmation of all three plans, concluding that HCLOF's rights could not be so modified because it was neither (1) a creditor of the estates nor (2) a contract counter party to the Debtors. For these same reasons, the Trustee cannot confirm any plan that alters HCLOF's rights without its consent.

21. Nonetheless, the Trustee has determined to continue on his war path, seeking to confirm his new Plan D. That new plan relies on a continued injunction barring HCLOF from exercising its rights. But, Plan D is no less confirmable than Plans A, B, or C without HCLOF's consent. The same jurisdictional infirmities apply: (1) HCLOF is neither a creditor nor a contract-counterparty to the Debtors, and (2) this Court does not have the jurisdiction to impair HCLOF's rights under the Indentures through such an injunction. The Trustee's proposal of another unconfirmable plan only highlights that there is no likelihood of a successful reorganization justifying a continued injunction.<sup>6</sup>

22. Nor is the Preliminary Injunction necessary pending the Trustee's current prosecution of his fraudulent transfer claims. If the Trustee succeeds on those claims, he has a legal remedy. There is no irreparable harm and thus no need for an injunction. Even if the Trustee were successful in avoiding the alleged "transfer" of the ALF PMA,<sup>7</sup> that contract on its face would not grant the Trustee unfettered rights with respect to the Equity Notes. No witness in this case has so testified, and the contract language is perfectly clear. At all times, HCLOF's portfolio manager, whether it be Highland, Acis LP or anyone else, is subject to the direction and control of HCLOF with respect to its investments. The Court should not effectively pre-judge those claims through the Preliminary Injunction. Nor would lifting the injunction necessarily pre-judge the outcome of that proceeding. See Vogel v. Am. Society of Appraisers, 744 F.2d 598, 604 (7th Cir. 1984) (emphasizing that denial of preliminary injunction did not serve to “prejudge the trial”).

<sup>6</sup> See Highland's Motion for an Order Dismissing the Debtors' Chapter 11 Cases Or, in the Alternative, Converting the Cases to Chapter 7 for Cause [Doc. 604] ("Motion to Dismiss").

23. The continuation of the Preliminary Injunction only exacerbates the great prejudice and irreparable harm to HCLOF. As stated throughout these cases, HCLOF continues to suffer irreparable damages (per a June analysis, $295,000 on a weekly basis). Moreover, HCLOF should not be compelled into a forced marriage with an investment adviser that has been openly hostile to HCLOF and its interests.

24. If the balance of harms and the public interest ever tipped in favor of the Trustee, that is no longer the case. The Court gave the Trustee an opportunity to deliver what he promised would be a quick-fix and win for everyone, but he has failed at great expense. Plan D stands on no better footing. The public interest now demands that HCLOF’s rights under non-debtor contracts, with non-debtor CLOs, be respected and that the Preliminary Injunction be dissolved. Those same reasons also constitute “cause” for this Court to lift the automatic stay (to the extent it applies) so that HCLOF can exercise its contractual rights.

I. THE PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DISSOLVED

25. “The district courts apply the same standards in reviewing a preliminary injunction under a motion to dissolve as they do in deciding whether to grant one in the first instance.” Texas v. United States, No. 7:15-cv-00056-O, 2015 WL 13424776, at *1 (N.D. Tex. June 26, 2015) (quoting Vaughn v. St. Helena Parish Police Jury, 261 F. Supp. 2d 553, 556 (M.D. La. 2002)). These elements are: (1) a substantial likelihood of success on the merits; (2) a substantial threat of irreparable harm if the injunction is not granted; (3) that the threatened injury to the plaintiff outweighs the injury to the defendant; and (4) that granting the injunction does not disserve the public interest. See, e.g., Janvey v. Alguire, 647 F.3d 585, 595 (5th Cir. 2011) (citation omitted).

A. The Trustee Cannot Show Irreparable Harm; HCLOF Continues to Be Irreparably Harmed by the Preliminary Injunction.

26. In rendering its confirmation decision, this Court made it crystal clear: HCLOF is not a creditor and does not have a claim against the Trustee or the estates. See Confirmation Ruling at *3-4. HCLOF therefore has no remedy against these estates — for the Trustee’s failure to effect an optional redemption and for the millions of dollars in damages that it has accrued and will continue to accrue. That is a textbook example of “irreparable harm.” See Deerfield Med. Ctr. v. City of Deerfield Beach, 661 F.2d 328, 338 (5th Cir. 1981) (“An injury is ‘irreparable’ only if it cannot be undone through monetary remedies.”).

27. On the other hand, the Trustee continues to benefit from the Preliminary Injunction even though he continues to have every remedy available at law against Highland or HCLOF — whether arising from any purported fraudulent transfers or otherwise. Indeed, the Trustee is now affirmatively pursuing those claims. The Trustee cannot suffer irreparable harm if he has an adequate remedy at law. See, e.g., Sec. Inv’r Prot. Corp. v. Bernard L. Madoff Inv. Sec. LLC, 491 B.R. 27, 39 (S.D.N.Y. 2013), aff’d sub nom. Picard v. Fairfield Greenwich Ltd., 762 F.3d 199 (2d Cir. 2014) (“Since the Trustee would be able to recover any property deemed to be property of the estate in the fraudulent transfer action, the Trustee has failed to demonstrate . . . that the Madoff Securities estate would suffer irreparable harm under the traditional test for an injunction . . .”).

28. There has never been a suggestion that the Trustee is without a legal remedy. Instead, the Trustee stated previously only that he wanted to avoid lengthy litigation. As the Fifth Circuit has concluded, the inconvenience of having to litigate is not irreparable harm:

Mere injuries, however substantial, in terms of money, time and energy necessarily expended in the absence of [an injunction], are not enough. The possibility that adequate compensatory or other corrective relief will be available at a later date, in the ordinary course of litigation, weighs heavily against a claim of irreparable harm.

Morgan v. Fletcher, 518 F.2d 236, 240 (5th Cir. 1975) (quoting Va. Petroleum Jobbers Ass'n v. Fed. Power Comm'n, 259 F.2d 921, 925 (D.C. Cir. 1958)); see also Dennis Melancon, Inc. v. City of New Orleans, 703 F.3d 262, 279 (5th Cir. 2012) (same); Jones v. Dallas County, No. 3:11-CV-2153-D, 2013 WL 4045291, *3 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 9, 2013) (same); Controls Int'l, Inc. v. Kinetrol, Ltd., No. 3:97-CV-2504-D, 1998 WL 158678, * 2 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 25, 1998) (same).

29. That is the case even if the costs of litigation would be substantial or even unrecoverable. See Renegotiation Bd. v. Bannerkraft Clothing Co., 415 U.S. 1, 24 (1974) (“Mere litigation expense, even substantial and unrecoverable cost, does not constitute irreparable injury.”) (citing Myers v. Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., 303 U.S. 41, 51-52, 58 (1938)).

30. Moreover, it is neither necessary nor appropriate to leave the injunction in place pending a resolution of the fraudulent transfer claims. The Court can dissolve the Preliminary Injunction and allow HCLOF to reset or redeem the CLOs pursuant to its existing contractual rights, thereby avoiding the ongoing harm caused by the injunction. Again, the Trustee will be able to present his claims and present every theory of damages available to him. If the Trustee can successfully prove his theories (he has stated he has claims against Highland of more than $20 million), he can collect damages and pay creditors in full. The existence of an injunction does nothing to preserve or enhance those claims. There is no need for any injunction to preserve the prosecution of these claims.<sup>8</sup>

31. The Fifth Circuit has long recognized that an injunction should not be imposed merely to protect legal remedies. See F.D.I.C. v. Faulkner, 991 F.2d 262, 265 (5th Cir. 1993) (“Because the availability of a legal remedy often indicates that an applicant’s injury is not irreparable, courts generally do not issue injunctions to protect legal remedies.”). In fact, the Fifth Circuit has likened such an injunction to an impermissible “prejudgment attachment.” Fed. Sav. & Loan Ins. Corp. v. Dixon, 835 F.2d 554, 560 (5th Cir. 1987).

32. In granting the Preliminary Injunction, the Court also found that irreparable harm would ensue because “[t]he Optional Redemption would eliminate any chance of confirmation of a plan of reorganization based on the Oaktree Transaction, or a similar plan.” PI Order ¶ 14. As explained below, the Trustee had his chances at reorganization, and failed. A transaction such as that contemplated by the Oaktree Transaction is no longer possible. The Court has concluded that the Trustee cannot transfer HCLOF’s notes without its consent.

33. The Court also noted that “[t]he Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs threatens to liquidate or harm valuable property of the Debtors, the Debtors’ rights, the Debtors’ estates, and other assets in this matter, to the detriment of the Parties.” Id. ¶ 18. Here, it has been demonstrated conclusively that the PMAs have no significant value unless the HCLOF’s notes are sold or the Indentures are amended (both of which the Court has rejected). Hr’g Tr. (Aug. 28, 2018) (AM), at 124:10–128:9. The injunction is thus not necessary to preserve the value of the PMAs. Finally, and as noted above, if there is any alleged value attributable to the prosecution of the fraudulent transfer claims, such damages are easily subject to quantification (the Trustee has already proffered opinion testimony on this issue)<sup>9</sup> and therefore can be adequately compensated by monetary damages from financially capable defendants if the Trustee is able to prove his claims.

<sup>8</sup> Indeed, Plan D makes no provision for how the fraudulent transfer or other litigations will be pursued (if at all).

B. The Trustee Cannot Show Reasonable Likelihood of Success on the Merits.

34. In granting the Preliminary Injunction, the Court found that “[t]he Trustee has a ‘substantial likelihood of success on the merits’ of a claim regarding: (i) violation of the automatic stay if this temporary restraining order is not issued, (ii) failing to obtain court authority under Section 363 to effectuate an optional redemption, and (iii) confirmation of an effective plan of reorganization.” PI Order ¶ 20. While the issues have evolved in the past several months, the bottom-line questions with respect the “success on the merits” prong to the injunction analysis distill down to the following: (1) do these Debtors have a legitimate chance at reorganization? and (2) are the fraudulent transfer claims are likely to succeed? As explained below, the answer to both questions is no.

i. Plan D Is Dead On Arrival; There is No Reasonable Likelihood of a Successful Reorganization Without HCLOF Consent.

35. Plan D is nothing but a reworked version of Plans B and C. The reorganized Acis LP (owned by Josh Terry) will assume the PMAs, and Brigade Capital Management, LP (“Brigade”) will provide operational support. As in Plans B and C, HCLOF’s rights under the Indentures will be modified by way of a Court-ordered injunction designed to prohibit HCLOF from exercising under the Indentures, thereby holding HCLOF and the cash flow from the PMAs captive. See Plan D § 14.03 (“Plan Injunction”).<sup>10</sup>

without jurisdiction to modify the Indentures to affect HCLOF's rights thereunder. Again, the Debtors are not a party to the Indentures. The Court cannot modify the Indentures either through section 1123(a)(5) (like under Plans B or C) or through an injunction (like under Plan D). In addition to depriving HCLOF of its right to seek a redemption, Plan D also modifies other of HCLOF's rights under the Indentures. See, e.g., Plan D § 6.08 (foreclosing HCLOF's right to withdraw an optional redemption "in the reasonable business judgment of the Reorganized Debtor."). This Court already held that section 1123(a)(5)(F) does not authorize such modifications. Confirmation Decision at *1. That notwithstanding, the Trustee has invoked section 1123(a)(5) as a basis for the proposed injunction. The Trustee cannot seek to do through section 105(a), what the Court has already said he cannot do under section 1123(a)(5)(F).<sup>11</sup>

37. The Trustee's reliance on section 105(a) is improper. Section 105(a) must be exercised within the boundaries of the Bankruptcy Code and is not intended to create new, substantive rights. As the Fifth Circuit has stated:

While the bankruptcy courts have fashioned relief under Section 105(a) in a variety of situations, the powers granted by that statute may be exercised only in a manner consistent with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. That statute does not authorize the bankruptcy courts to create substantive rights that are otherwise unavailable under applicable law, or constitute a roving commission to do equity.

U.S. v. Sutton, 786 F.2d 1305, 1308 (5th Cir. 1986); see also Norwest Bank Worthington v. Ahlers, 485 U.S. 197, 206, (1988) (a bankruptcy court's powers "must and can only be exercised within the confines of the Bankruptcy Code.").

38. In keeping with this limitation, courts have refused to use section 105(a) to expand the scope of specific statutes and rules. See, e.g., In re Smith, 21 F.3d 660, 666 (5th Cir.

<sup>11</sup> 11 U.S.C. 1123(b)(6) provides that "Subject to subsection (a) of this section, a plan may ... include any other appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of this title."

1994) (“Bankruptcy courts cannot use their equitable powers created by Section 105(a) to expand the requirements of Rules 3003(c)(3) and 9006(b)(1).”); U.S. Bank Nat’l Ass’n v. Verizon Commcn’s Inc., No. 3:10-CV-1842-G, 2012 WL 3100778, *7 (N.D. Tex. July 31, 2012) (Fish, J.) (refusing to expand scope of section 550 under “equitable jurisdiction and Section 105... [b]ecause allowing this action would be inconsistent with a more specific provision of the Code.”).

39. These principles also accord with the bankruptcy axiom that the debtor in possession or trustee steps into the shoes of a debtor and has no greater rights than that of the debtor. See Majestic Star Casino, LLC v. Barden Dev., Inc. (In re Majestic Star Casino, LLC), 716 F.3d 736, 748 (3d Cir. 2013) (“It is a given that the trustee or debtor-in-possession can assert no greater rights than the debtor himself had on the date the bankruptcy case was commenced.” (internal alterations omitted)); In re Gibraltar Res., Inc., 197 B.R. 246, 253 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1996) (“the general rule is that a trustee has no greater rights than the debtor”).

40. The PMAs, which are proposed to be assumed by the reorganized debtors, do not provide Acis LP with any guarantee to management fees or any right to prevent HCLOF from exercising the options available to it under the Indentures. Such rights cannot now be created out of whole cloth either through modification of the PMAs or the Indentures (which the Debtors are not even party to), and doing so would be inconsistent with section 1123(a)(5) and other black-letter bankruptcy principles. See In re Advent Corp., 24 B.R. 612, 614 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 1982) (“A bankruptcy court may not extend a contract beyond its original terms. The Bankruptcy Code neither enlarges the rights of a debtor under a contract, nor prevents the termination of a contract by its own terms.”); see also In re Nat’l Gypsum Co., 208 F.3d 498, 506 (5th Cir. 2000) (executory contracts must be assumed cum onere); In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 521

B.R. 134, 179–80 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2014) (Jernigan, J.) (“A debtor may not merely accept the benefits of a contract and reject the burdens to the detriment of the other party.”).

41. Second, this Court has already established that HCLOF is not a creditor of the estates. HCLOF does not hold a claim that would allow the Debtors to modify HCLOF’s rights through a plan. In fact, because HCLOF does not hold a claim, it cannot even vote on Plan D.

42. Plan D proposes to modify the rights of HCLOF, a third party, for absolutely no consideration, again raising issues relating to the taking of third-party rights that the Irving Tanning case explicitly identified and denounced. See In re Irving Tanning Co., 496 B.R. 644, 664-65 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. 2013). To be sure, not only does Plan D propose to modify HCLOF’s contract rights under the Indentures, it also seeks to seize and hold captive HCLOF’s investments in the CLOs, i.e., its property, without its consent.

43. The words of the First Circuit B.A.P. bear repeating:

[F]or both statutory and constitutional reasons, the preemptive effect of § 1123(a) cannot extend to laws defining and protecting the property rights of third parties. . . . Indeed, what the Debtors urge us to find—a grant of power to appropriate the property of third parties—is so bold and remarkable a grant that one cannot imagine Congress having inserted it without a clear and specific indication of such intent. . . . Constitutional concerns also inform this interpretation. Any interpretation of the preemptive scope of § 1123(a)(5) that permitted plan proponents to appropriate or overwrite the property rights of third parties under applicable nonbankruptcy law would run headlong into constraints and quite possibly outright impediments in the takings clause of the Fifth Amendment. . . . Even if the takings clause were deemed to permit a private plan proponent to appropriate the property of another for plan purposes, “just compensation” would be a necessary condition of that appropriation. . . .

Id. at 664-65 (emphasis added). While the B.A.P. was speaking specifically to section 1123(a), the same rationale logically extends to section 105(a) and section 1123(b)(6), which the Trustee is attempting to use to preempt and overwrite fundamental protections. Holding HCLOF hostage, and giving it the false option of a reset — a right that HCLOF already possesses — is no less of an offensive intrusion upon HCLOF’s property rights than what was proposed in Plan A.

44. Third, the Trustee will still have to satisfy the numerous confirmation requirements of the Bankruptcy Code for any new plan, including the flawed Plan D. Highland and HCLOF will reiterate each of their prior confirmation objections with respect to the lack of good faith, the failure of the best interests test, the failure to satisfy the cram-down standard, and Josh Terry's insider status, among others.<sup>12</sup>

45. Fourth, and more practically, it is highly unlikely that Acis will ever be able to deliver a reset for HCLOF, rendering that critical aspect of Plan D entirely illusory. HCLOF has presented credible testimony that industry participants would not want to engage with a reorganized portfolio manager in a reset transaction, let alone the four or five sequential resets that would be required in this case. Hr'g (July 6, 2018) at 200:8–14.<sup>13</sup>

46. And even if resets could be effectuated, they would necessarily be on terms highly unfavorable to HCLOF. As a third party to these proceedings, HCLOF cannot be compelled against its will into transactions that it does not wish to enter into by giving it a choice between a bad choice and a worse one. HCLOF never bargained for investment into CLOs managed by Brigade, Josh Terry, or anyone other than Highland when it invested in the Equity Notes. Moreover, the involvement of a formerly-bankrupt portfolio manager, let alone one that is helmed by Joshua Terry, and a mandatory two-year lock up will undoubtedly result in sub-market terms that will be unfavorable to HCLOF. The market is very well aware of this bankruptcy case and the pricing of any Acis-led reset will reflect that market perception.

<sup>12</sup> See generally Joint Objection of Highland Capital Management, L.P. and Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. to Final Approval of Disclosure Statement and to Confirmation of the Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC [Doc. 497]. In the event Plan D is set for a confirmation hearing, HCLOF and Highland will further articulate their objections in written pleadings.

47. Outside of bankruptcy, Acis, a portfolio manager and fiduciary, would never have been able to effect such transactions without the consent of its investors.<sup>14</sup> It cannot try to do that now in bankruptcy.

ii. The Trustee’s Fraudulent Transfer Claims Will Not Succeed, and Even If They Do, Will Not Provide the Result Desired By the Trustee.

48. In denying confirmation, the Court found “a basis for keeping the preliminary injunction in place pending determination of the Acis Trustee’s fraudulent transfer lawsuits.” Confirmation Opinion at *6. However, the injunction is not necessary at all to allow for a determination of those claims or to preserve a right to monetary damages. Moreover, even if the Trustee were to prevail on those claims, they would not provide the Trustee with the rights he is touting.

49. The crux of the Trustee’s claims is that HCLOF’s rights under the Indentures once belonged to Acis LP pursuant to the ALF PMA. See PI Order ¶ 10.<sup>15</sup> At Plan Confirmation, the Trustee presented his evidence in support of avoidance, which consisted entirely of Mr. Terry’s self-serving legal conclusions disguised as “testimony” that the ALF PMA allowed Acis to make all decisions on behalf of HCLOF. Hr’g Tr. (Aug. 28, 2018) (AM), at 69:7–76:11. In support of this interpretation, the Trustee points to Section 5 of the ALF PMA, which provided Acis LP authority to take specified actions “[s]ubject at all times to . . . the Investment Policy” of the Fund. ALF PMA § 5.

50. First, as repeated at the confirmation hearing, the ALF PMA explicitly limits the authority delegated under Section 5 as follows:

<sup>14</sup> HCLOF’s position, of course, is that Acis LP could not effect such a transaction even if it was still portfolio manager for HCLOF under the ALF PMA, as explained below.

<sup>15</sup> The “ALF PMA” is the Portfolio Management Agreement between Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. and Acis Capital Management, L.P. (Exhibit 11 at Plan Confirmation).

Policies of the Company. The activities engaged in by the Portfolio Manager shall be subject to the policies and control of the Company, including (without limitation) the Investment Policy. . . .

In furtherance of the foregoing, the Company hereby appoints the Portfolio Manager as the Company’s attorney-in-fact, with full power of authority to act in the Company’s name and on its behalf with respect to the matters set forth in Section 5 above.

Id. § 6 (emphasis added); see also Hr’g Tr. (Aug. 28, 2018) (AM), at 157:3–158:21 (testimony of Dan Castro, Jr. explaining that “th[e] control provisions, it’s explicit there, and that is the market understanding”). At all times, HCLOF’s portfolio manager, whether Acis LP or anyone else, has been subject to the direction and control of HCLOF with respect to its investments.

51. Second, Acis LP’s exercise of its delegated authority was subject at all times to the fiduciary duties it owes as an investment adviser. See Hr’g Tr. (Aug. 28, 2018) (AM), at 157:3–158:21 (testimony of Dan Castro, Jr. that “if the portfolio manager disagrees with [the investor], the fiduciary duty of the portfolio manager is, well, I may not agree with it, I may - - maybe I think this is a better trade or a different way to go, but if that’s what he wants me to do, I’m supposed to do it.”). It would defy common sense for any investment adviser to be given authority to take actions that would be contrary to the directives of its investor. Yet it is clear that the Trustee’s intention, if given his alleged “control” over HCLOF’s rights, is to attempt to force decisions on behalf of HCLOF that preserve at all costs the right of Acis to earn an income stream. Such a course of action would be illegal, and it cannot be, and would not be, condoned.<sup>16</sup>

C. The Balance of Equities Weighs in Favor of Lifting the Preliminary Injunction.

52. The balance of equities favors lifting of the Preliminary Injunction. The Trustee has had the benefit of an injunction for months while he pressed forward with three patently unconfirmable plans. During that time, HCLOF has continued to incur losses of approximately $295,000 per week (an annualized loss of over $15 million). Hr’g Tr. (June 12, 2018) at 40:20–

23, 73:1–8. Again, to the extent HCLOF were somehow able to later prevail on any claims for these losses, it will hold a judgment against Acis LP, a Chapter 11 debtor with no meaningful assets. See Dresser-Rand Co. v. Virtual Automation, Inc., 361 F.3d 831, 848 (5th Cir. 2004) (“there is no adequate remedy at law if the defendant is incapable of responding in damages”) see also Aspen Tech., Inc. v. M3 Tech., Inc., 569 F. App’x 259, 273 (5th Cir. 2014) (affirming finding of irreparable harm where there was a substantial probability that movant would be unable to collect a judgment against bankruptcy debtor) (citation omitted). Meanwhile, the Trustee continues to possess legal remedies against HCLOF and Highland.

53. The Trustee has repeatedly appealed to this Court’s equity sounding the call that HCLOF is acting “economically irrationally” and that he is trying to save HCLOF from committing “economic suicide.” The Trustee (a bankruptcy attorney with no background in CLO investing or portfolio management) is in no position to instruct HCLOF on how to run its business. There is nothing economically irrational or suicidal in HCLOF’s efforts to divorce itself of Acis LP or avoid a forced sale of its property. HCLOF has every right to take the actions that it is legally entitled to take, regardless of the motivations, and the Trustee’s judgment should not be supplanted for HCLOF’s judgment with respect to its own property.

54. In fact, and ironically, it is the Trustee who has been acting in an economically irrational manner, choosing to never once approach HCLOF regarding a consensual plan, while reiterating the disingenuous notion that he is giving HCLOF “everything it wants.” In that process, he has pursued manifestly unconfirmable plans while racking up millions in administrative expenses, driving the estates into administrative insolvency, all while continuously placing the estates’ interests in earning management fees above all other interests. No investor anywhere would voluntarily tolerate this behavior from an investment advisor. The equities here demand that the Trustee’s runway be cut off. The Trustee obtained an injunction on a promise to deliver and he has failed. He cannot be allowed to further harm the estates and HCLOF in this manner.

55. Moreover, the estates and creditors will not be harmed if these cases are converted and the fraudulent transfer litigation pursued alongside a Chapter 7 proceeding. In fact, creditor recoveries may very well be enhanced through avoiding the costs associated with another plan solicitation and confirmation process and the heavier carrying costs of Chapter 11 – especially where, as here, the Trustee has employed two sets of counsel and has wasted millions of dollars in payments to Oaktree and other unnecessary expenses.

D. The Public Interest Is Served By Lifting the Preliminary Injunction.

56. In granting the Preliminary Injunction, the Court found that “[p]ublic policy supports [the injunction] to allow the Trustee to exercise his fiduciary duties to maximize the value of the estate for the benefit of creditors by allowing the Trustee to direct and control the refinancing, sale, or other monetization of Debtors’ property and other assets. Further there is a public interest in allowing for a Chapter 11 process, rather than costly prolonged litigation.” PI Order ¶ 16.

57. Again, the Trustee has wasted his opportunity to maximize value and the Chapter 11 process was given its due course. The Trustee now has nothing to show for his attempt other than a mountain of administrative expenses and another doomed plan. The Trustee’s shortcut has in fact turned out to be the long way, and likely more expensive than litigation alone would have been. If the Trustee from the beginning had shut down the business, initiated litigation, and treated this as the “cash and claims case” that it is, millions of dollars and untold judicial resources would have been saved. The public interest would not be served by the Trustee’s attempt to effectively “cram-down” a Plan D on a non-voting, non-creditor HCLOF, which HCLOF will contest just as vigorously as it did Plans A, B, and C.

58. And again, the Trustee owes fiduciary duties to the CLOs, and, by extension, to the CLOs’ investors. The Trustee cannot in good conscience be said to be fulfilling those fiduciary duties when he is continuously in pursuit of plans that seek to undermine the interests of the CLOs and their investors — the very parties that he is duty-bound, by contract and state and federal law, to serve. See, e.g., 2013-1 PMA § 17(b)(i); see also Transamerica Mortg. Advisors v. Lewis, 444 U.S. 11, 17 (1979) (“Congress intended to impose enforceable fiduciary obligations” in passing the Investment Advisers Act of 1940); 15 U.S.C. § 80b-6; Bullmore v. Ernst & Young Cayman Islands, 846 N.Y.S.2d 145, 148 (N.Y. App. Div. 2007) (“Professionals such as investment advisors, who owe fiduciary duties to their clients. . . .”) (citations omitted).

59. Furthermore, the public interest would not be served by unfairly holding HCLOF hostage to an investment, tying up its property and its funds, solely so that a bankrupt portfolio manager can generate fees from that relationship. Nor would the public interest be served by binding HCLOF into a continuing relationship with a reorganized debtor helmed by Joshua Terry, whom HCLOF is actively litigating against. A continued injunction would be manifestly unjust with respect to HCLOF and its expectations as an investor.

60. Moreover, it bears noting that the Debtors here are no more than shell entities with nothing other than a conditional, unguaranteed payment stream. There are no jobs to be saved or an enterprise to be preserved through a reorganization. Thus, traditional policy concerns weighing in favor of Chapter 11 rehabilitation are just not present here.<sup>17</sup> Here, there are only a sparse number of creditors—and only one who timely voted in favor of the Trustee’s original plans—who have every avenue of recovery left open to them through the prosecution of causes of action in a Chapter 7 proceeding. Again, these cases have been “cash and claims” cases since the very beginning. The injunction should be lifted and this unproductive and lengthy detour through Chapter 11 should be put to an end.

<sup>17</sup> Courts have refused to confirm plans of reorganization involving shell companies on the basis that they were not filed in good faith where the goal was not rehabilitation (e.g., tax avoidance purposes). See, e.g., In re Maxim Indus., Inc. 22 B.R. 611 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1982).

II. The Automatic Stay Does Not Apply; To the Extent it Applies, the Stay Should Be Lifted to Permit HCLOF’s Exercise of Its Rights.

61. In its Confirmation Decision, the Court noted that it would keep the Preliminary Injunction “in place for now” because the “effect of an optional redemption is to exercise control over the Acis PMAs and revenue stream (property of the estate).” Confirmation Decision at *5 (citing Hometown 2006-11925 Valley View, L.L.C. v. Prime Income Asset Mgmt., L.L.C., 847 F.3d 302 (5th Cir. 2017)). HCLOF respectfully disagrees with this portion of the Court’s Confirmation Decision and reiterates its belief that the automatic stay does not apply to HCLOF’s exercise of its rights under the Indenture.<sup>18</sup>

62. This case is very different from the Hometown case cited by the Court in its Confirmation Decision. Unlike the debtor there, Acis LP has no property interest in any future, unearned management fees. That is because the PMAs provide no guarantee, after an initial two year non-redemption period (which has long passed), that the CLO structure or the collateral therein will continue to exist. This is not a case involving a debtor with a vested property interest in a fixed or guaranteed payment stream, such as a right to a structured settlement payment or a coupon under a bond. Cf. Hometown, 847 F.3d at 302 (fee stream earned during

As alleged by Highland in its Motion to Dismiss, the Chapter 11 process has been essentially used as a collection device for Josh Terry and the Court should not condone the further abuse of the process and confirm a plan that will essentially act as nothing more than a collection device for Josh Terry.

required termination notice period were “sufficiently vested” and therefore constituted “assets” for purposes of Texas fraudulent transfer statute). There is likewise no mechanism in the PMAs that permits Acis LP to compel that the CLO assets remain in place so that it can continue to earn fees. Acis LP has already received multiples of what it is entitled to under the PMAs and it is not entitled to another dollar.

63. To the extent the Court believes the stay applies, HCLOF asks that that the Court grant HCLOF stay relief for “cause” under section 362(d)(1).

64. Because “cause” is not defined in the Bankruptcy Code, bankruptcy courts have the flexibility to define cause in a particular case. Little Creek Dev. Co. v. Commonwealth Mtg. Corp. (In re Little Creek Dev. Co.), 779 F.2d 1068, 1072 (5th Cir. 1986). Whether cause exists to grant relief from the stay is determined on a case-by-case basis, based on the totality of the circumstances. In re Trident Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 52 F.3d 127, 131 (6th Cir. 1995).

65. “Cause” exists for all of the reasons stated above. The estates’ only asset of any value (other than causes of action) are the PMAs, which have little or no value. The Debtors have little chance at a successful reorganization with or without the PMAs, without HCLOF consent. On the other hand, the stay continues to irreparably harm HCLOF and greatly prejudice its rights. The balance of equities and the public interest also weigh in favor of lifting the stay.

66. The Court should also consider lifting the stay under the factors articulated in section 362(d)(2). While section 362(d)(2) applies to lifting the stay with respect to a secured creditors’ collateral, the principles that undergird that analysis apply here. Section 362(d)(2) provides that the court shall grant relief from the stay “with respect to a stay of an act against property ... (A) the debtor does not have any equity in such property; and (B) such property is not necessary to an effective reorganization.” 11 U.S.C. § 362(d)(2).<sup>19</sup>

67. This Court has considered a request for stay relief under section 362(d)(2) in similar circumstances. In that case, the Court considered whether the stay should be lifted to allow a secured creditor to proceed against its collateral, which was central to any reorganization in that case. In deciding to lift the stay, the Court stated as follows:

It is undisputed that the Debtors will be unable to reorganize without the properties. However, the properties must be essential for an effective reorganization that is in prospect. This means there must be a reasonable possibility of a successful reorganization within a reasonable time. However honest in its efforts the debtor may be, and however sincere its motives, the Court is not bound to clog its docket with visionary or impracticable schemes for resuscitation. In essence, courts usually require the debtor to do more than manifest unsubstantiated hopes for a successful reorganization.

In re Northwest Timberline Enters., 348 B.R. 412, 430 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2006) (Jernigan, J.) (emphasis in original) (internal citations and alterations omitted).

68. Although the debtor in that case had languished in Chapter 11 for two years, the rationale in lifting the stay apply equally here. The Trustee has not demonstrated that he can, in fact, propose a reorganization “that is in prospect.” See id. (citing United Sav. Ass’n v. Timbers of Inwood Forest Assocs., 484 U.S. 365, 376 (1988)).

69. HCLOF should not and cannot be held hostage to an investment because the portfolio manager wants to earn or monetize future management fees—fees that are in no way assured or guaranteed under the PMAs—and the Court should not allow this to continue. The stay should be lifted.

<sup>19</sup> It bears noting that the PMAs are pledged by the CLOs to the Indenture Trustee pursuant to the Indentures in order to permit the Indenture Trustee to enforce the obligations of Acis LP under the PMAs. E.g., 2013-1 Indenture § 15.1.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, HCLOF respectfully requests that the Court (a) enter an order dissolving the Preliminary Injunction, (b) to the extent applicable, enter an order granting HCLOF relief from the automatic stay to exercise its rights under the Indentures, and (c) grant to HCLOF such other and further relief as the Court may deem proper.

INTRODUCTION

140. After the commencement of litigation with Mr. Terry and in earnest after Mr. Terry received the Final Award (as hereinafter defined) Highland, Highland CLOM, Highland HCF and HCLOF sought to fraudulently transfer the assets of Acis LP pursuant to a scheme comprised of a series of fraudulent transfers in an effort to denude Acis LP of value (Highland, Highland CLOM, Highland HCF and HCLOF collectively referred to herein as the "Highland Enterprise"). This fraudulent transfer scheme was accomplished through, inter alia, the Note Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, and ALF PMA Transfer (as hereinafter defined), which fraudulently transferred economic rights away from Acis LP to the Highland Enterprise. The Trustee seeks to recover the fraudulent transfers, as further described herein.

XI. BACKGROUND FACTS

A. State Court Litigation And Final Award

141. Highland commenced litigation against Mr. Terry on or about September 8, 2016 in the 162nd Judicial District Court of Texas (the "162nd Action"). Mr. Terry subsequently moved to compel arbitration, which request was granted. Accordingly, the 162nd Action was stayed pending resolution of the arbitration on the merits.

142. On October 20, 2017, a JAMS arbitration panel made up of former or retired judges (the "Arbitration") entered a Final Award (the "Final Award") in favor of Mr. Terry in the amount of $7,949,749.15<sup>2</sup> against the Debtors.

143. On December 18, 2017, the Final Award was reduced to a final judgment by the 44th Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas, and the Final Judgment was entered in Cause No. DC-17-15244 (the "Judgment").

B. The Bankruptcy Cases

144. On January 30, 2018 (the "Petition Date"), Mr. Terry as petitioning creditor, filed involuntary petitions (the "Involuntary Petitions") against both Acis LP and Acis GP, thereby initiating the Bankruptcy Cases. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 1 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Pursuant to the Judgment, interest accrues on the Judgment from October 20, 2017 until such time as the Judgment is paid in full, at an interest rate of 5% per annum. The total amount due to Mr. Terry, pursuant to the Judgment, as of the date of filing the involuntary bankruptcy, January 30, 2018, was at least $8,060,827.84.

145. On April 13, 2018, after six days of testimony and argument, this Court entered its Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 118 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 113] (the "Opinion") and Order for Relief in an Involuntary Case [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 119 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 114] (the "Order for Relief").

146. After the Order for Relief was entered these cases were converted to Chapter 7 cases. Robin Phelan was appointed Chapter 11 Trustee of the Debtors' the bankruptcy estates.

C. Highland and the Highland Enterprise's Role in these Cases

147. Although Highland did not appear in these cases until after the entry of the Order for Relief, Highland employees directed Acis's actions at all times before the Order for Relief.

See Opinion ¶ 30.

Mr. Dondero [the Chief Executive of Highland] testified that he has decision making authority for the Alleged Debtors but usually delegates that authority to Highland's in-house lawyers, Scott Ellington (General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and Partner of Highland) and Isaac Leventon (Assistant General Counsel of Highland) . . . . Mr. Leventon is designated to be the representative for the Alleged Debtors (and testified as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness during pre-trial discovery)—he explained that this representative-authority derives from the Shared Services Agreement. Mr. Leventon testified that he takes his instructions generally through his direct supervisor, Mr. Ellington.

149. Highland and its network of affiliates have numerous other connections to this case. HCLOF and other Highland affiliates attempted to intervene in the trial on the Involuntary Petitions.

HCLOF is the

holder of subordinated notes issued by the CLOs (i.e., the bottom tranche of notes on which the CLO special purpose entity is obligated), and has voting rights and is itself a capital provider, but it takes the most risk and receives the very last cash flow from the CLOs. It, in certain ways, controls the CLO vehicle—for example, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain 'no-call' period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A's). Note that, until recently, a separate entity known as Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ('ALF'), which was incorporated under the laws of the island nation of Guernsey, was the CLO equity holder. To be clear, ALF was essentially the equity owner in the CLO special purpose entities—not the equity owner of Acis LP. Acis LP was a party to a separate portfolio management agreement with ALF (hereinafter, the 'ALF Portfolio Management Agreement'— not to be confused with the CLO Collateral Management Agreements that Acis LP separately has with the special purpose CLOs). No fees were paid from ALF to Acis LP pursuant to the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement (rather, fees are only paid to Acis LP on the CLO Collateral Management Agreements).

Opinion at pp. 12-13 (footnotes omitted).

D. The CLOs, the PMAs, and the Indentures

150. Acis LP is the portfolio manager for funds of certain Collateralized Loan Obligations ("CLOs"): (i) Acis CLO 2013-1, Ltd. ("CLO-1"), (ii) Acis CLO 2014-3, Ltd ("CLO-3"), (iii) Acis CLO 2014-4, Ltd. ("CLO-4"), (iv) Acis CLO 2014-5, Ltd. ("CLO-5"), and (v) Acis CLO 2015-6 Ltd. ("CLO-6"). See Opinion ¶ 24. CLO-1, CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5 and CLO-6 are collectively referred to herein as the "Acis CLOs."

151. As relevant herein, Acis LP manages the Acis CLOs through five PMAs.<sup>4</sup> Acis LP generates revenue primarily through the management of the Acis CLOs via the PMAs. See Opinion ¶ 13. True and correct copies of the PMAs are attached hereto as Exhibit "A." Each of the Acis CLOs is governed by the Indentures.<sup>5</sup> True and correct copies of the Indentures are attached hereto as Exhibit "B."

XII. FRAUDLENT TRANSFERS

A. The ALF PMA Transfer

152. Prior to October 27, 2017, Acis LP—not ALF—had authority to direct and effectuate an optional redemption under the PMAs. Acis LP had this authority pursuant to that certain Portfolio Services Agreement by and between Acis LP and ALF, dated August 10, 2015 (the "First ALF PMA") and that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and ALF, dated December 22, 2016 (the "Second ALF PMA"). A true and correct copy of the First ALF PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit "C." A true and correct copy of the Second ALF PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit "D."

<sup>4</sup> The PMAs include: (i) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-1, dated March 18, 2013 (the "CLO-1 PMA"); (ii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-3, dated February 25, 2014 (the "CLO-3 PMA"); (iii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-4, dated June 5, 2014 (the "CLO-4 PMA"); (iv) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-5, dated November 18, 2014 (the "CLO-5 PMA"); and (v) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-6, dated April 16, 2015 (the "CLO-6 PMA"). The CLO-1 PMA, CLO-3 PMA, CLO-4 PMA, CLO-5 PMA, and CLO-6 PMA are collectively referred to herein as the "PMAs."

<sup>5</sup> The Indentures include: (i) that certain Indenture, dated as of March 18, 2013, issued by CLO-1, as issuer, Acis CLO 2013-1 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-1 Indenture"); (ii) that certain Indenture, dated as of February 25, 2014, issued by CLO-3, as issuer, CLO-3 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-3 Indenture"); (iii) that certain Indenture, dated as of June 5, 2014, issued by CLO-4, as issuer, CLO-4 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-4 Indenture"); (iv) that certain Indenture, dated as of November 18, 2014, issued by CLO-5, as issuer, CLO-5 LLC, as co-issuer, and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-5 Indenture"); and (v) that certain Indenture, dated as of April 16, 2015, issued by CLO-6, as issuer, CLO-6 LLC, as co-issuer and U.S. Bank, as trustee (the "CLO-6 Indenture"). The CLO-1 Indenture, CLO-3 Indenture, CLO-4 Indenture, CLO-5 Indenture, and CLO-6 Indenture are collectively referred to herein as the "Indentures."

DEFENDANT’S ANSWER, AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES, COUNTERCLAIMS, AND THIRD PARTY CLAIMS

153. The Second ALF PMA provided broad authority to Acis LP as the portfolio manager of ALF. Section 5 of the Second ALF PMA set out Acis LP's authority, which included authority for and in the name of ALF to:

(i) invest, directly or indirectly . . . in all types of securities and other financial instruments of United States and non-U.S. entities . . . including without limitation . . . notes representing tranches of debt ('CLO Notes') issued by a special purpose vehicle which issues notes backed by a pool of collateral consisting primarily of loans (which may be represented by a debt or equity security) (a 'CLO') . . . (each of such items, 'Financial Instruments'), (ii) provide credit and market research and analysis in connection with the investments and ongoing management of [ALF] and direct the formulation of investment policies and strategies for [ALF] . . . ; (iii) cause [ALF] to engage in . . . agency, agency cross, related party principal transactions with affiliates of [Acis LP] . . . ; and (iv) vote Financial Instruments, participate in arrangements with creditors, the institution and settlement or compromise of suits and administrative proceedings and other like or similar matters.

Second ALF PMA § 5(a)-(q) (emphasis added).

154. While ALF did not have authority to terminate the Second ALF PMA, Acis LP could terminate the Second ALF PMA without cause upon at least ninety (90) days' notice. See Second ALF PMA § 13(a)-(c). Still, the Second ALF PMA provided for the removal of Acis LP as portfolio manager "for cause." See ALF PMA § 14(a)-(e).

155. On October 27, 2017, just seven days after Mr. Terry's arbitration award, Acis LP ostensibly terminated its own portfolio management rights under the Second ALF PMA and transferred its authority and those valuable portfolio management rights—for no value—to Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. ("Highland HCF"), an affiliate of Highland.

156. This transfer of Acis LP's portfolio management rights to Highland HCF was accomplished by way of a new Portfolio Management Agreement entered into by ALF and Highland HCF on October 27, 2017 (the "October 2017 PMA"), which empowered Highland

DEFENDANT'S ANSWER, AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES, COUNTERCLAIMS, AND THIRD PARTY CLAIMS

HCF with the same broad authority to direct the management of ALF as was previously held by Acis LP under the ALF PMA (the "ALF PMA Transfer"). See October 2017 PMA §§ 1 & 5(a)-(q). A true and correct of the October 2017 PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit "E."

As the Court explained:

On October 27, 2017 (seven days after the Arbitration Award), ALF—having purchased back the ownership interest that Acis LP had in it, just three days earlier—decided that it would no longer use Acis LP as its portfolio manager and entered into a new portfolio management agreement to supersede and replace the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, ALF entered into a new Portfolio Management Agreement with a Cayman Island entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., replacing Acis LP in its role with ALF. This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017.

Opinion at p. 19 (footnotes omitted).

157. Under the prior ALF PMA, Acis LP's consent to the termination of the ALF PMA was required in order to effectuate the ALF PMA Transfer. So, (without expressing its business judgment to this transfer) Acis LP simply signed the October 2017 PMA, consenting and agreeing to its removal and replacement, and transferring all authority and management rights as portfolio manager of ALF to Highland HCF under the October 2017 PMA.

158. Without this ALF PMA Transfer, which transferred Acis LP's valuable rights under the ALF PMA to Highland HCF, HCLOF could not have attempted to direct and effectuate an optional redemption, and deplete Acis's assets, as it is now attempting to do.

B. ALF Share Transfer

159. On October 24, 2017, a mere four days after the Final Award was entered, an employee of Highland and representative of Acis LF, Frank Waterhouse and Grant Scott, for CLO Holdco. Ltd., entered into that certain special resolution whereby HCLOF, then known as

ALF acquired back Acis's interest in ALF (the "ALF Share Transfer"). A true and correct copy of the special resolution is attached hereto as Exhibit "F."

160. By the ALF Share Transfer, HCLOF paid Acis LP $999,1180.13 for its shares of ALF. HCLOF is an insider of Acis LP. By November 1, 2017, Acis LP had given up its shares of HCLOF and its control of HCLOF.

C. Note Transfer

161. On November 3, 2017, Acis LP, Highland, and Highland CLO Management Ltd., a Cayman entity ("Highland CLOM"), an affiliate of Highland, entered into the Agreement for Assignment and Transfer of Promissory Note (the "Assignment and Transfer Agreement"). A true and correct copy of the Assignment and Transfer Agreement is attached here to as Exhibit "G." The Assignment and Transfer Agreement, among other things, transferred the $9.5 million promissory note by Highland in favor of Acis LP (the "Note") from Acis LP to Highland CLOM (the "Note Transfer"). Acis LP received no or insufficient consideration for the Note Transfer.

The Assignment and Transfer Agreement memorializing this transaction is signed by Mr. Dondero for Acis LP and Mr. Dondero for Highland and some undecipherable name for Highland CLO Management Ltd.

The document recites that (i) Highland is no longer willing to continue providing support services to Acis LP, (ii) Acis LP, therefore, can no longer fulfill its duties as a collateral manager, and (iii) Highland CLO Management Ltd. agrees to step into the collateral manager role if Acis LP will assign to it the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. One more thing: since Acis LP was expected to potentially incur future legal and accounting/administrative fees, and might not have the ability to pay them when due, Highland CLO Management Ltd. agreed to reimburse Acis LP (or pays its vendors directly) up to $2 million of future legal expenses and up to $1 million of future accounting/administrative expenses

Opinion at p. 20.

162. Additionally, the Assignment and Transfer Agreement also purports to initiate the transfer of the PMA between Acis and the CLOs to Highland CLOM. Again, Acis LP is to receive no consideration for transferring its most significant assets, the PMAs. Upon information and belief, Acis LP did not in fact transfer the PMAs pursuant to the Assignment and Transfer Agreement.

("Acis LP") and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC ("Acis GP" together with Acis LP, the "Reorganized Debtors" or "Acis")<sup>1</sup> the reorganized debtors in the above-styled and jointly administered bankruptcy cases (the "Bankruptcy Cases"), and Plaintiffs in the in the above-styled adversary proceeding (the "Adversary Proceeding"), file this Second Amended Complaint (Including Claim Objections and Objections to Administrative Expense Claim) (this "Second Amended Complaint"), objections to the proofs of claims filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland Capital"), and objections to the administrative expense claim filed by Highland Capital, and respectfully state as follows:<sup>2</sup>

ANSWER AND AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES

1. Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41(a), incorporated by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7041, all claims asserted in the Original Complaint and Request for Preliminary Injunction of Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. and Highland Capital Management Against Chapter 11 Trustee of Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC [Docket No. 1] (the "Original Complaint") by Highland Capital and Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. ("Highland Funding") have been dismissed without prejudice. See Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 79. Accordingly, such dismissal of Highland Capital's and Highland Funding's claims obviates the Trustee's, now Acis's, answer and affirmative defenses thereto; however, Acis reserves all rights with respect to answering or asserting affirmative defenses to any future-filed claims by any parties in this Adversary Proceeding.

2. Additionally, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41(a)(2), such dismissal of Highland Capital's and Highland Funding's claims is without prejudice to any counterclaims asserted by the Trustee, now Acis, in the Defendant's Answer, Affirmative Defenses, Counterclaims, and Third Party Claims [Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 23] (the "Original Answer"), as may be amended, and such counterclaims remain pending for independent adjudication.

CLAIMS AND COUNTERCLAIMS

3. Acis hereby asserts the following claims for affirmative recovery against Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. ("Highland Advisor"), Highland CLO Management Ltd. ("Highland Management"), and Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. ("Highland Holdings"). Additionally, Acis asserts the following claims and counterclaims against Highland Capital and such claims and counterclaims shall also constitute recoupment or offset to any claim Highland Capital has against Acis.

This Adversary Proceeding includes an objection to Highland Capital's proofs of claim pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3007(b), and the claims and counterclaims asserted herein shall constitute recoupment and/or offset to such proofs of claim, to the extent such claims are otherwise allowed. ### III. JURISDICTIONAL BACKGROUND<sup>3</sup>

A. Highland Advisor Jurisdictional Background

13. Upon information and belief, on October 26, 2017, Jean Paul Sevilla ("Sevilla"), a Highland employee and associate general counsel, requested Maples and Calder create Highland Advisor. On information and belief, on October 27, 2017, Mr. Sevilla requested that Highland Advisor be established such that Highland is the 100% owner of the "high" share class of Highland Advisor.

14. Highland Advisor's principal place of business is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201, Highland Capital's office and headquarters. See Exhibit T at 88. Highland Advisor is ultimately, directly or indirectly, owned or controlled by James Dondero

("Dondero") and Mark Okada ("Okada"), who ultimately, directly or indirectly, own or control Highland Capital. See id. at 89 and Opinion at 8.

15. Upon information and belief, the principals of Highland Capital, Dondero and Okada, serve as the president and executive vice president, respectively, of Highland Advisor. See Opinion at 8 and Exhibit T at 89. Other Highland Capital employees serve as officers of Highland Advisor including Scott Ellington, Lee "Trey" Parker, Thomas Surgent, and Frank Waterhouse. See Exhibit T at 89.

16. Dondero signed the November 15, 2017 Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Highland Advisor and Highland Funding (the "November 2017 PMA") on behalf of Highland Advisor. A true and correct copy of the November 2017 PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit P.

17. Attached hereto as Exhibit Q is the December 13, 2018 (A.M.) hearing transcript from In re Acis Capital Management, L.P., et al. At the December 13, 2018 hearing, Hunter Covitz, a Highland Capital employee, testified: "As I understand HCF Advisor is a relying advisor of Highland." See Exhibit Q at 78, ll. 15-16. Hunter Covitz further testified, "[b]ut HCF Advisor is Highland. . . . That's the distinction between Highland HCF Advisor could be well capitalized, the substance of Highland Capital, its office space, employees, balance sheet, back office, legal, what [have] you, would all be incorporated with HCF Advisor, where Acis with no employees is not looked at that way." Id. at 61, ll. 5 & 11-15. Finally, Hunter Covitz testified, "there's really no differentiation between HCF Advisor and Highland." Id. at 62, ll. 21-23.

18. Attached hereto as Exhibit R are meeting minutes of Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. and Highland Funding, which contain a Highland Funding Bates label and were produced in connection with the Bankruptcy Cases or related adversary case. These meeting minutes reflect that various Highland Capital employees, including Sevilla, Hunter Covtiz, Tim Cournoyer, David Wilmore, Issace Leventon, and Thomas Surgent appeared at Highland Funding's board meeting on behalf of Highland Advisor. The parties that conduct the day-to-day operations of Highland Advisor are Highland Capital employees that office in Dallas, Texas.

19. Attached hereto as Exhibit S is Highland Capital's 2017 Form ADV, which states that Highland Advisor is another business name of Highland Capital.

20. Attached hereto as Exhibit T is Highland Capital's 2019 Form ADV, which states that Highland Advisor's principal place of business is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201—Highland Capital's office and headquarters. Highland Capital's 2019 Form ADV also states that Highland Capital is a shareholder of Highland Advisor and that Highland Advisor is another business name of Highland Capital.

21. The Confirmation Opinion states that "Dondero, in addition to being the chief executive of Highland and the Debtor-Acis, also became the president of the newly formed Highland [Advisor]." Confirmation Opinion at 8. Additionally, the Confirmation Opinion states that "Highland [Advisor] (i.e., the Cayman Island entity that was recently formed to essentially replace the Debtor-Acis under the Equity/ALF PMA)." Confirmation Opinion at 19. Additionally, the Confirmation Opinion states that Highland Advisor is an affiliate of Highland Capital. Confirmation Opinion at 21.

B. Highland Management Jurisdictional Background

22. Upon information and belief, on or about October 27, 2017 (7 days after the Arbitration Award), Highland Management was created at the direction of Sevilla, a Highland lawyer and employee, using the same structure as Highland Advisor. Upon information and belief, Highland Management's mailing address is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201, Highland's Dallas office and headquarters.

23. Upon information and belief, Highland Management is ultimately, directly or indirectly, owned or controlled by Dondero and Okada, who ultimately, directly or indirectly, own or control Highland Capital.

24. Additionally, in connection with the hearing on the involuntary petitions, Dondero testified at great length regarding the Note Transfer to Highland Management on behalf of Highland Management.<sup>4</sup> Dondero testified upon direct examination by Acis's (at the time, a putative debtor) counsel about the Note Transfer, stating:

Q: Now, if there came a time with litigation costs and other expenses where Acis was unable to pay its expenses when they became due, what was your intent in signing this as to whether or not HCLOM [Highland Management] would honor this and make the payment?

A: We would -- we would honor it and -- and pay as appropriate.

See Exhibit U (March 23, 2018 Hr'g Tr., In re Acis Capital Management, L.P., et al. 146:7-12) (emphasis added). When Dondero says "we," Acis contends that he is speaking on behalf of Highland Capital and Highland Management. Additionally, Dondero testified that the Note Transfer was an "economic wash" for him as "it doesn't matter which pocket it goes into." Id. at 152:20-24.

25. The Opinion states that, "Highland Management was registered in the Cayman Islands on October 27, 2017, roughly a week before the Note Transfer... it appears Highland Management was an entity that was created specifically to hold the Note and eventually take possession of the CLO PMAs in an international forum that would be difficult for Mr. Terry to reach." Opinion at 20-21, n. 37 (emphasis added).

26. Upon information and belief, Dondero is the managing or general agent of Highland Management.

27. The Confirmation Opinion states that Highland Management is "an entity registered in the Cayman Islands on October 27, 2017—seven days after Mr. Terry's Arbitration Award)." Confirmation Opinion at 19. The Confirmation Opinion further states that "it appears Highland Management was an entity that was created specifically to hold the Note and eventually take possession of the CLO PMAs in an international forum that would be difficult for Mr. Terry to reach." Opinion at 20-21, n.37. Finally, the Confirmation Opinion states that "Highland Management (the Highland-created entity that entered into a portfolio management agreement with a new Acis-CLO that was established in 2017)." Confirmation Opinion at 24.

C. Highland Holdings Jurisdictional Background

28. The Confirmation Opinion states that Highland Holdings is "(yet another entity incorporated in the Cayman Island on October 27, 2017)." Confirmation Opinion at 19.

29. Attached hereto as Exhibit T is Highland Capital's 2019 Form ADV, which states that Highland Holding's principal place of business is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201, Highland Capital's office and headquarters. Exhibit T at 103. Highland Capital's 2019 Form ADV also states that Highland Holdings is another business name of Highland Capital. Highland Capital's 2019 Form ADV further states Highland Capital, Dondero, and other Highland affiliates are "control persons" of Highland Holdings.

IV. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

30. On January 30, 2018 (the "Petition Date"), Joshua N. Terry ("Terry"), as petitioning creditor, filed involuntary petitions under section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code against both Acis LP and Acis GP, thereby initiating the Bankruptcy Cases. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 1 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 1.

31. On April 13, 2018, this Court entered its Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 118 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 113] (the "Opinion") and Order for Relief in an Involuntary Case in each of the Bankruptcy Cases [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 119 & Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 114] (the "Orders for Relief"). The Opinion is hereby incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

32. On May 14, 2018, Robin Phelan (the "Trustee") was appointed chapter 11 trustee of the Debtors' bankruptcy estates in the Bankruptcy Cases. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 213.

33. On May 30, 2018, Highland Capital and Highland Funding filed their Original Complaint, initiating this Adversary Proceeding, in which Highland Capital and Highland Funding asserted various claims for breach of contract, declaratory relief, and injunctive relief against the Trustee. See Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 1.

34. On June 21, 2018, the Trustee filed his Verified Original Complaint and Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Adv. No. 18-03212, Docket No. 1] ("Complaint and Application for TRO"), initiating Adversary No. 18-03212, in which the Trustee sought, inter alia, injunctive relief to prevent Highland Capital, Highland Funding, and their affiliates from taking any action to effectuate an optional redemption (which would result in liquidation of the Acis CLOs (defined below)), as well as relief pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 362(k) for willful violations of the automatic stay for actions taken by Highland Capital and its affiliates, including Highland Funding, in attempting to effectuate an optional redemption.<sup>5</sup> Highland Capital and Highland Funding subsequently filed their answers to the Trustee's Complaint and Application for TRO. See Adv. No. 18-03212, Docket Nos. 32 & 33.

35. On July 2, 2018, the Trustee filed his Original Answer in this Adversary Proceeding, in which the Trustee asserted certain counterclaims and third-party claims against Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland Advisor, and Highland Management (collectively and along with Highland Holdings, the "Highlands") in connection with the Highlands' scheme, described more fully below, to fraudulently transfer Acis LP's assets to the Highlands and otherwise appropriate the business of Acis LP. See Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 23.

36. On July 23, 2018, Highland Capital filed Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Motion to Dismiss Counterclaims or, Alternatively, for a More Definite Statement [Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 42] ("Highland's Motion to Dismiss"), in which Highland Capital sought, inter alia, to dismiss the Trustee's counterclaims pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6).

37. Also on July 23, 2018, Highland Funding filed Highland CLO Funding Ltd.'s Motion to Dismiss [Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 43] ("Highland Funding's Motion to Dismiss") and Highland CLO Funding Ltd.'s Brief in Support of its Motion to Dismiss [Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 44], in which Highland Funding sought, inter alia, to dismiss the Trustee's counterclaims pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 12(b)(2) and 12(b)(6).

38. On August 1, 2018, Highland Capital filed Proof of Claim No. 27 in the claims register for Case No. 18-30264 (the "Highland Acis LP Claim"), in the amount of $4,672,140.38, with the basis of the claim listed as "Sub-Advisory Services and Shared Services."

<sup>5</sup> Certain portions of the Complaint and Application for TRO were subsequently dismissed, ultimately leaving only: Count 1 for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction (which injunctive relief expired with confirmation of the Plan (defined below)); and Count 2 for Willful Violation of the Automatic Stay against Highland Capital and Highland Funding. See Adv. No. 18-03212, Docket Nos. 49 & 56.

39. Also on August 1, 2018, Highland Capital filed Proof of Claim No. 13 in the claims register for Case No. 18-30265 (the "Highland Acis GP Claim," together with the Highland Acis LP Claim, the "Highland Capital Claims"), in the amount of $4,672,140.38, with the basis of the claim listed as "Sub-Advisory Services and Shared Services." The Highland Acis GP Claim is identical to the Highland Acis LP Claim.

40. On August 10, 2018, Highland Capital and Highland Funding filed Highland Capital Management, L.P. and Highland CLO Funding Ltd.'s Motion for Leave to Amend Adversary Complaint and Brief in Support [Docket No. 51] (the "Motion to Amend"), in which Highland Capital and Highland Funding sought to amend their Original Complaint to remove all claims against the Trustee, except for one claim by Highland Funding for a declaratory judgment that the Trustee cannot "sell or transfer Highland Funding's property without Highland Funding's consent."

41. On October 9, 2018, the Court heard Highland Capital's Motion to Dismiss, Highland Funding's Motion to Dismiss, and the Motion to Amend. Considering that the Trustee expressed his intent to amend his Original Answer, the parties agreed that all arguments made by Highland Capital and Highland Funding to dismiss the Trustee's counterclaims pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) were moot. With respect to Highland Funding's argument to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(2), the Court ruled that Highland Funding has minimum contacts with the United States, and that the Court, has personal jurisdiction over Highland Funding in this Adversary Proceeding, and exercising personal jurisdiction over Highland Funding would not violate any traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Further, the Court ruled that, even if sufficient minimum contacts did not exist, Highland Funding has waived personal jurisdiction in this Adversary Proceeding.

42. With respect to the Motion to Amend, due to the change in circumstances in the Bankruptcy Cases, Highland Capital and Highland Funding agreed to voluntarily dismiss all claims asserted in the Original Complaint, without prejudice.

43. On November 13, 2018, the Trustee filed his Defendant's Amended Answer, Counterclaims (Including Claim Objections) and Third-Party Claims [Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 84] (the "Amended Counterclaims") in this Adversary Proceeding, in which the Trustee asserted numerous counterclaims and third-party claims against Highland Capital and various of its affiliates in connection with, inter alia, their scheme to fraudulently transfer Acis LP's assets to the Highlands and otherwise appropriate the business of Acis LP. Additionally, with the Amended Counterclaims, the Trustee included his objections to the Highland Claims pursuant to section 502(b)(1), (b)(4), and (d) of the Bankruptcy Code (the "Objections to Claim"), and further asserted that, to the extent allowed, the Highland Claims should be equitably subordinated pursuant to section 510(c) of the Bankruptcy Code.

44. On December 11, 2018, Highland Capital filed Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Application for Administrative Expense Claim Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b) [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 772] (the "Application") for approval of an administrative expense claim pursuant to section 503(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code, in the amount of $3,554,224.29 (the "Administrative Claim"), for purportedly providing postpetition services to the Debtors in connection with the Sub Agreements (defined below) and the Universal/BVK Agreement (defined below), which Highland Capital contends were actual, necessary costs and expenses of preserving the estate.

45. On January 10, 2019, the Trustee timely filed his Objection to Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Application for Administrative Expense Claim Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b) [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 772].

46. On January 31, 2019, this Court entered its Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, and Order Granting Final Approval of Disclosure Statement and Confirming the Third Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC, as Modified (the "Confirmation Order") [Case No. 18-30264, Docket Nos. 829 & 830], which approves the Third Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (the "Plan") and is supplemented by the Court's Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee's Third Amended Joint Plan (the "Confirmation Opinion") [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 827]. The Confirmation Opinion is hereby incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein.

47. On February 15, 2019 (the "Effective Date"), the Trustee filed the Notice of February 15, 2019 Effective Date for the Third Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management, LP and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 863]. On the Effective Date, Acis (as the Reorganized Debtors) became substituted for the Trustee in the above-referenced consolidated adversary cases pursuant to the Plan, which provides:

Upon the Effective Date, the Reorganized Debtor (a) shall automatically be substituted in place of the Chapter 11 Trustee as the party representing the Estate in respect of any pending lawsuit, motion or other pleading pending before the Bankruptcy Court or any other tribunal, and (b) is authorized to file a notice on the docket of each adversary proceeding or the Chapter 11 Cases regarding such substitution. The Reorganized Debtor shall have exclusive standing and authority to prosecute, settle or compromise Estate Claims for the benefit of the Estate in the manner set forth in this Plan.

Plan § 7.03.

48. On March 11, 2019, the Court entered its Order Consolidating Adversary Case Nos. 18-03078 & 18-03212 [Adv. No. 18-03078, Docket No. 127; Adv. No. 18-03212, Docket No. 63], under which the Court ordered that Adversary Nos. 18-03078 and 18-03212 are consolidated under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 42(a), incorporated by Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 7042. The Court further directed the Clerk to caption the case as Robin Phelan, Chapter 11 Trustee v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., et al., resulting in the designation of the Trustee, now Acis, as the Plaintiff(s) and Highland Capital and its affiliates as Defendants in this Adversary Proceeding.

49. On May 1, 2019, the Court entered its Order Addressing DE #825 and Directing that: (A) Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Administrative Expense Request [DE #722] Be Converted from a Contested Matter to Adversary Proceeding; and (B) Counts 27-31 Be Transferred in Adversary Proceeding No. 18-03078 into a New Adversary Proceeding [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 919], whereby the Court converted Highland Capital's Application into a new adversary proceeding, and thereby initiating Adversary No. 19-03103.

50. On June 10, 2019, the Court held a status conference and directed: (i) that Adversary No. 19-03103 should be consolidated under this Adversary No. 18-03078; and (ii) that Acis will file an amended complaint, consolidating all claims, counterclaims, third-party claims against Highland Capital and its affiliates, as well as any objections to the Highland Capital Claims and Administrative Claim, by June 20, 2019.

51. Dondero, Okada, and Terry formed Acis LP in 2011 as a registered investment advisor to raise money from third-party investors to invest in certain collateralized loan obligation funds (the "CLOs").<sup>6</sup> The CLOs are governed by certain indentures (the "Indentures").<sup>7</sup> Acis LP is the portfolio manager for the CLOs and generates revenue primarily through the management of the CLOs via certain portfolio management agreements ("PMAs").<sup>8</sup> See Opinion ¶¶ 22-28. While Dondero made and approved the higher-level financial strategies and decisions of Acis, Terry was responsible for the day-to-day management of Acis.

52. Acis LP's business as portfolio manager for the CLOs has been incredibly successful. Between 2011 and 2017, Acis LP distributed profits of $11,037,445.00 to Dondero, $4,598,935.00 to Terry, and $2,759,361.00 to Okada, its partners. Further, on August 31, 2017, right before Highland Capital began its campaign to denude Acis LP and take over its business, Acis LP also boasted millions of dollars in investment assets and total shareholder equity of roughly $3.4 million. Without question, Acis LP's business as portfolio manager for the CLOs and others has been very valuable and lucrative.

53. As is common with the numerous Highland Capital affiliates, Acis LP contracted out certain of its administrative functions and portfolio management responsibilities to Highland Capital pursuant to that certain Sub-Advisory Agreement, originally dated January 1, 2011 (as amended, the "Sub-Advisory Agreement") and that certain Shared Services Agreement, originally dated January 1, 2011 (as amended, the "Shared Services Agreement," and together with the "Sub Agreements"). The Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement have each been amended multiple times.

54. As the Court explained in its Opinion:

Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC have never had any employees. Rather, all employees that work for any of the Highland family of companies (including Mr. Terry) have, almost without exception, been employees of Highland itself. Highland has approximately 150 employees in the United States. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC, through both the mechanism of: (a) a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called), which provides "back office" personnel—such as human resources, accounting, legal and information technology to the Highland family of companies; and (b) a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called), which provides "front office" personnel to entities—such as the managers of investments like Mr. Terry. The evidence indicated that this is typical in the CLO industry to have such agreements.

Opinion at 14 (footnotes omitted).

55. Prior to entry of the Orders for Relief, Dondero directed, either himself or through Highland Capital employees, all actions taken by Acis. See Opinion ¶ 30.

Mr. Dondero [the Chief Executive of Highland] testified that he has decision making authority for the Alleged Debtors but usually delegates that authority to Highland's in-house lawyers, Scott Ellington (General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and Partner of Highland) and Isaac Leventon (Assistant General Counsel of Highland) . . . Mr. Leventon is designated to be the representative for the Alleged Debtors (and testified as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness during pre-trial discovery)—he explained that this representative-authority derives from the Shared Services Agreement. Mr. Leventon testified that he takes his instructions generally through his direct supervisor, Mr. Ellington.

2017 (described below), Acis LP had complete control of Highland Funding and its valuable subordinated note rights to further enhance its successful portfolio management business.

B. Section 3.10(a) of the Limited Partnership Agreement

57. In order to form Acis LP, Acis GP, the general partner, and limited partners The Dugaboy Investment Trust<sup>10</sup> (the "Trust"), Okada, and Terry entered into that certain Amended and Restated Agreement of Limited Partnership of Acis Capital Management, L.P. (the "LPA"), dated to be effective as of January 21, 2011.<sup>11</sup> The LPA is attached hereto as Exhibit A. The LPA is governed by Delaware Law. LPA § 6.11. At all relevant times herein, the officers of Acis GP are Dondero, as President, and Frank Waterhouse ("Waterhouse")<sup>12</sup>, as Treasurer. Further, at least between October 14, 2015, and December 19, 2017, Dondero was the sole member of Acis GP. See Case No. 18-30265, Docket No. 152.

58. Pursuant to the Sub Agreements, Highland Capital received compensation for providing services to Acis LP, but amounts of compensation were subject to certain terms of the LPA. Section 3.10 of the LPA directs compensation and reimbursement of the General Partner and contains subpart (a), which limits compensation and reimbursement of expenses payable to the General Partner and any Affiliate of the General Partner without proper consent:

Compensation. The General Partner and any Affiliate of the General Partner shall receive no compensation from the Partnership for services rendered pursuant to this Agreement or any other agreements unless approved by a Majority Interest; provided, however, that the aggregate annual expenses of the Partnership, inclusive of such compensation, may not exceed 20% of Revenues without the consent of all of the members of the Founding Partner Group.

LPA § 3.10(a) (emphasis added).

59. An Affiliate under the LPA is defined as:

[A]ny [entity] that directly or indirectly controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with the [entity] in question. As used in this definition, the term "control" means the possession, directly or indirectly, of the power to direct or cause the direction of the management and policies of [an entity], whether through ownership of voting Securities, by contract, or otherwise.

Id. § 2.01.

60. Highland Capital was at all times relevant to this Second Amended Complaint, an Affiliate of Acis GP and Acis LP. Further, Highland Capital was at all times relevant to this Second Amended Complaint, an insider of Acis GP and Acis LP.

C. State Court Litigation and Arbitration

61. In June 2016, Highland Capital advised Terry that he had been terminated.

62. In September 2016, Highland Capital sued Terry in the 162nd Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (the "State Court") under a variety of legal theories and causes of action, including breach of fiduciary duty/self-dealing, disparagement, and breach of contract. Terry asserted his own claims against Highland Capital, as well as claims against the Debtors, Dondero, and others, and demanded arbitration. Opinion ¶ 8.

63. On September 28, 2016, the State Court stayed the litigation and ordered the parties to arbitrate. Id. The parties then participated in a ten-day arbitration proceeding before JAMS, styled as Terry v. Highland, JAMS Arbitration No. 1310022713.

D. The Arbitration Award

64. On October 20, 2017, Terry obtained an arbitration award (the "Arbitration Award") jointly and severally against the Debtors in the amount of $7,949,749.15, plus post-award interest at the legal rate. The Arbitration Award was based on theories of breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duties. The Arbitration Award is attached hereto as Exhibit B.

65. Under the Arbitration Award, the arbitration panel found that Terry's termination by Dondero/Highland Capital was without cause and that, among other things, Acis breached the LPA and breached fiduciary duties owed to Terry as Acis's limited partner. Importantly, the arbitration panel found that Highland Capital had been paid more than 20% of Revenues (as such term is understood under the LPA), without Terry's consent, in violation of Section 3.10(a) of the LPA:

It is undisputed that ACIS habitually paid more than 20% of Revenues to Highland for providing ACIS with overhead and administration. Respondents' evidence and arguments that Terry waived or consented to ACIS's payment of excess expenses is not persuasive. At most, Terry accepted his ACIS distributions without regard to the expenses paid to Highland. This is not consent contemplated by the ACIS LPA.

The evidence establishes that Terry did not consent to ACIS payments of expenses in excess of 20% of Revenue and Terry has not waived his right to claim damages directly resulting from ACIS's and ACIS GP's breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duty. Clearly, ACIS and ACIS GP ignored Terry's contractual rights and ACIS GP as a general partner has a fiduciary duty not to benefit itself or another at the expense of its limited partner, as they ignore and breach the terms of the partnership agreement and diminish Terry's distributions.

Arbitration Award at pp. 15-16.

66. Additionally, in the analysis of Terry's damages, the arbitration panel stated:

The evidence establishes that ACIS and ACIS GP paid excess expenses to Highland during the years of 2013, 2014, 2015 and January through May 2016. These expenses paid exceeded the 20% of Revenues cap stated in Section 3.10(a) of the ACIS LPA. The payment of these excess expenses reduced Terry's ACIS partnership distributions during this period. Had excess expenses not been paid and only the contractually capped expenses had been paid, Terry would have received additional ACIS profits distributions of $1,755,481.00 for his 25% partnership interest in ACIS.

Arbitration Award at 20.

67. Finally, in its findings and conclusions, the arbitration panel stated: "ACIS [LP] and ACIS GP paid Highland Capital expenses in excess of the contractual limit imposed by Section 3.10(a) of the ACIS LPA." Arbitration Award at 22, ¶ 7.

68. On December 18, 2017, the 44th Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas, entered a final judgment confirming the Arbitration Award. Opinion ¶ 10. The judgment was abstracted in the Official Public Records of Dallas County, Texas, as Instrument No. 201800008611, and writs of garnishment were issued and served pursuant to the judgment.

69. Pursuant to the Arbitration Award, Highland Capital wrongly received at least $7,021,924.00 (collectively, the "Expense Overpayments") in excess of the clear cap under Section 3.10(a) of the LPA.<sup>13</sup> On information and belief, Highland Capital wrongfully received other overpayments of expenses for many years in excess of the express limitations contained in the LPA. The Expense Overpayments for which the Plaintiffs seek relief herein include all overpayments by Acis LP to Highland Capital in violation of the expense cap pursuant to the LPA whether or not addressed in the Arbitration Award. The Plaintiffs seek a declaratory judgment that such Expense Overpayments to Highland Capital and any agreements supporting such overpayments were ultra vires and, thus, void or voidable. The Plaintiffs also seek to recover from Highland Capital all such Expense Overpayments, which rightfully belong to Acis LP, as set forth below.

E. Modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement

70. The Sub-Advisory Agreement has been amended from time to time. The first iteration the Sub-Advisory Agreement by and between Acis LP and Highland Capital dated January 1, 2011 (the "Original Sub-Advisory Agreement") provided that Acis LP was to pay Highland Capital certain amounts for assisting Acis LP with the advisory services required by the PMAs. Under the Original Sub-Advisory Agreement, Acis LP paid Highland Capital 5 bps of the management fees received by Acis LP pursuant to the various PMAs for the sub-advisory services provided to Acis LP by Highland Capital.

<sup>13</sup> If $1,755,481.00 represents 25% of the amount overpaid to Highland Capital, then the total amount paid to Highland Capital in excess of the 20% cap would be at least $7,021,924.00.

71. On July 29, 2016, the Sub-Advisory Agreement was modified to increase the sub-advisory fee from 5 basis points to 20 basis points (the "Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement"). The effective date of the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement was also back-dated to January 1, 2016. The fourfold increase in the sub-advisory fees via the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement siphons off the funds of Acis LP and effectively gifts the additional amounts to Highland Capital. Highland Capital was already contractually obligated to provide the sub-advisory services for the lower 5 basis points fee and no legitimate justification for this fourfold increase was ever presented. Notably, Terry was unjustifiably terminated from Acis in June 2016, roughly one month before Acis and Highland Capital amended the Sub-Advisory Agreement to increase the fee paid fourfold. Further, Dondero consented to the increased sub-advisory fee on behalf of both Acis LP and Highland Capital. Dondero signed the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement as president of Highland Capital's general partner, Strand Advisors, Inc., and as president of Acis GP, the general partner of Acis LP.<sup>14</sup>

72. The Shared Services Agreement has also been amended from time to time. The first iteration of the shared services agreement, the Shared Services Agreement by and between Acis LP and Highland Capital, dated January 1, 2011 (the "Original Shared Services Agreement"), provided that Acis LP was to pay Highland Capital certain amounts for providing Acis LP with the back-office services such as book keeping, compliance, human resources and marketing. Under the Original Shared Services Agreement, Acis LP reimbursed Highland Capital for amounts directly attributable to Acis LP for these services. The Shared Services

<sup>14</sup> Dondero also signed the Third Amended and Restated Sub-Advisory Agreement, entered into on March 17, 2017, on behalf of both parties (Acis LP and Highland Capital) to the agreement; this amendment retained the 20 bps fee put in place by the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement.

Agreement was later amended to provide compensation to Highland Capital of 15 to 20 basis points, depending on the nature of the fund for which services were provided. Thus, shortly after Terry was terminated by Acis in June 2016, Acis was paying Highland Capital a total of 35 to 40 basis points for the sub-advisory and shared services it provided.

73. Due to the retroactive nature of the amendments to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement, Highland, at all times relevant to this proceeding, held an antecedent debt related to Acis.

74. Finally, as the Court has already found and as described in more detail below, Highland Capital, Dondero, and various of their affiliates and insiders (including Highland Funding, Highland Advisor and Highland Holdings) entered into numerous other transactions through the Fall of 2017 in an attempt to take control of Acis's assets and effectively take over Acis's business. The combination of all of these actions evidence a clear pattern of behavior by Highland Capital, Dondero, and various of their affiliates and insiders (including Highland Funding, Highland Advisor, Highland Management, and Highland Holdings)<sup>15</sup> to hinder, delay or defraud Terry as a creditor and appropriate the going-concern business of Acis LP for the Highlands. Opinion, Section 1.C. (pp. 16-23).

F. Highland Capital's Mismanagement of the CLOs and the Trustee's Engagement of Brigade Capital Management, L.P.

75. During the pendency of these Bankruptcy Cases, while acting as sub-advisor, Highland Capital grossly mismanaged the CLOs. Following the Trustee's appointment in these Bankruptcy Cases, in disregard of its duties under the Sub-Advisory Agreement, Highland

<sup>15</sup> The Debtors were also under Highland Capital and Dondero's control at this time and were active participants in all of Highland Capital and Dondero's schemes to denude the Debtors and make them "judgment proof" as the Debtors' own counsel, Jamie Welton, later boasted. In fact, Highland Funding has admitted that the Debtors were "no more than shell entities" in pleadings recently filed with the Court. Highland Funding's Motion to Dissolve Preliminary Injunction and Lift the Automatic Stay at page 21, Docket # 639 in Case No. 18-30264.

Capital failed to purchase a single loan for the CLOs. Yet, at the same time, in an apparent tactical move to accumulate cash in the CLOs (prior to an attempted liquidation), Highland Capital ordered that the Trustee sell numerous loans. Indeed, during this time, Highland Capital's own analysis showed that 19.7% to 32.4% of available loans were eligible for consideration for purchase in the CLOs. Although the Trustee expressed his concerns to Highland Capital about the accumulation of cash in the CLOs and Highland Capital's failure to recommend purchases of eligible collateral in the CLOs, Highland Capital failed to make any change or correction in its sub-advisor role, in abrogation of its duties.

76. In July 2018, considering Highland Capital's mismanagement of the CLOs and the exorbitant amounts attempted to be charged to Acis for its services under the Sub Agreements, the Trustee solicited potential third parties to provide shared services and sub-advisory services to the Debtors. After contacting over 40 parties, the Trustee received bids from nine parties to perform the services provided by Highland Capital under the Sub Agreements. Through this process, the Trustee was able to locate Brigade Capital Management, LP ("Brigade") and Cortland Capital Markets Services LLC ("Cortland") to provide such services to the Debtors at a rate far less than that charged by Highland Capital. As set forth more fully in the Emergency Motion to Approve Replacement Sub-Advisory and Shared Services Providers, Brigade Capital Management, LP and Cortland Capital Markets Services LLC [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 448] (the "Brigade Motion"), Brigade agreed to sub-advise the CLOs for 15 basis points. As further described by the Brigade Motion, Cortland agreed to provide middle and back office CLO outsourcing (previously provided by Highland Capital under the Shared Services Agreement) for $30,000 per month, $250-$350 per trade, and a one-time fee of $75,000. Cortland's fee equates to roughly 3 basis points per month.<sup>16</sup>

77. On August 1, 2018, the Court granted the Brigade Motion, and Brigade and Cortland began performing the services previously provided by Highland Capital under the Sub Agreements. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 464. Notably, on the record at the hearing on July 6, 2018, Highland offered to provide the same services it was providing Acis for 17.5 basis points less than it previously charged, a tacit acknowledgement that Highland had grossly overcharged Acis. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 369 at 243-44.

78. From approximately August 2, 2018 through December 11, 2018, Brigade directed the purchase of approximately $300 million in conforming loans for the CLOs. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 790 at 100-01 & 134.

G. The Highlands' Fraudulent Scheme to Take Over Acis's Business and Dismantle Acis's Assets.

79. After Terry received the Arbitration Award on October 20, 2017, the Highlands immediately began work to systematically transfer the assets of Acis LP to other Highlands. This was done to denude Acis LP of value and make the Debtors "judgment proof." This was also done to ensure that Acis LP's very valuable business as portfolio manager was taken over by other Highlands and remained under Highland Capital and Dondero's control.

80. Prior to the filing of the Bankruptcy Cases, the Highlands' scheme was accomplished through, inter alia, the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, and the transfer of the 2017-7 Equity and the 2017-7 Agreements (as each is defined below), which all occurred in the three months between October 23 and December 19, 2017. Each of these transfers followed the same pattern: Highland Capital caused Acis LP to fraudulently convey valuable economic rights away from Acis LP to offshore (often newly created) Highland Capital affiliates that were not subject to Terry's Arbitration Award and judgment, thus, safely remaining under the control of Highland Capital and Dondero. Further, the only alleged consideration for these transfers, to the extent there was any, was the satisfaction of purported debts owed to other Highlands or their representatives.

<sup>16</sup> Thus, the Trustee was paying roughly 18 basis points, instead of the 35 to 40 basis points charged by Highland Capital starting shortly after Terry was terminated by Acis in June 2016, for the work previously performed by Highland Capital under the Sub Agreements. The definitive agreement between the Reorganized Debtors and Brigade removes Cortland and the Reorganized Debtors pay roughly 15 basis points to Brigade for essentially the same services previously provided by Highland Capital.

81. Reference to Acis LP's balance sheets right before and right after the Highlands began their campaign of fraud against Terry and Acis demonstrate just how effective their scheme was. On August 31, 2017—roughly 45 days before the Arbitration Award—Acis LP boasted $15,441,551 in total assets (including nearly $4 million in valuable portfolio management investments and the $9.5 million note) as well as $3,372,851 in total equity value.<sup>17</sup> After the Arbitration Award and the judgment enforcing it, Acis presented the affidavit of David Klos, Highland Capital's Controller, to the State Court in furtherance of Highland Capital's efforts to get a pathetically small bond for Terry's judgment. The Klos affidavit and attached balance sheet demonstrate that as of February 1, 2018 (the day after the Involuntary Petitions were filed) Acis LP had only $2,855,050 in total assets, no investment assets or notes, and a paltry $35,709 in total equity value.<sup>18</sup> Thus, the amount of value destruction and asset concealment caused by the Highlands' brazen fraud in just the few months immediately after the Arbitration Award is staggering.

82. Even the filing of the Bankruptcy Cases did not deter the Highlands from attempting to complete their goal of denuding Acis. During the Bankruptcy Cases, in disregard of the automatic stay, on multiple occasions, the Highlands directed the Trustee to effectuate optional redemptions, which would result in the liquidation of the CLOs and render Acis incapable of reorganizing and paying its creditors.

1. The ALF PMA Transfer and the ALF Share Transfer

83. Prior to October 27, 2017, Acis LP—not ALF (or Highland Funding as it is currently named)—had authority to direct and effectuate an optional redemption and otherwise pervasively control ALF's assets. Acis LP had this authority pursuant to that certain Portfolio Services Agreement by and between Acis LP and ALF, dated August 10, 2015 (the "First ALF PMA") and that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and ALF, dated December 22, 2016 (the "Second ALF PMA"). A true and correct copy of the First ALF PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit E. A true and correct copy of the Second ALF PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit F.

84. The Second ALF PMA granted Acis LP, as the portfolio manager of ALF, extensive rights and discretion to control and manage ALF's assets, including its interests in the Acis CLOs. Section 5 of the Second ALF PMA set out Acis LP's authority, which included authority for and in the name of ALF to:

- (a) invest, directly or indirectly . . . in all types of securities and other financial instruments of United States and non-U.S. entities . . . including without limitation . . . notes representing tranches of debt ('CLO Notes') issued by a special purpose vehicle which issues notes backed by a pool of collateral consisting primarily of loans (which may be represented by a debt or equity security) (a 'CLO') . . . (each of such items, 'Financial Instruments'), (c) provide credit and market research and analysis in connection with the investments and ongoing management of [ALF] and direct the formulation of investment policies and strategies for [ALF] . . . ; (g) possess, transfer, mortgage, pledge or otherwise deal in, and exercise all rights, powers, privileges and other incidents of ownership or possession with respect to Financial Instruments and other property and funds held or owned by [ALF] ...; (n) cause [ALF] to engage in . . . agency, agency cross, related party principal transactions with affiliates of [Acis LP] . . . ; and (q) vote Financial Instruments, participate in arrangements with creditors, the institution and settlement or compromise of suits and administrative proceedings and other like or similar matters.

Second ALF PMA § 5(a)-(q) (emphasis added).<sup>19</sup>

85. While ALF did not have authority to terminate the Second ALF PMA, Acis LP could terminate the Second ALF PMA without cause upon at least ninety (90) days' notice. See Second ALF PMA § 13(a)-(c). The Second ALF PMA provided that Acis LP could be removed as portfolio manager only "for cause." See ALF PMA § 14(a)-(e).

86. On October 27, 2017, just seven days after Terry's Arbitration Award, Acis LP ostensibly terminated its own portfolio management rights under the Second ALF PMA and transferred its authority and its valuable portfolio management rights—for no value—to Highland Advisor, an affiliate of Highland Capital.<sup>20</sup>

87. This transfer of Acis LP's portfolio management rights to Highland Advisor was accomplished by way of a new Portfolio Management Agreement entered into by ALF and Highland Advisor on October 27, 2017 (the "October 2017 PMA"), which empowered Highland Advisor with the same broad authority to direct the management of ALF as was previously held by Acis LP under the ALF PMA (the "ALF PMA Transfer"). See October 2017 PMA §§ 1 & 5(a)-(q). A true and correct copy of the October 2017 PMA is attached hereto as Exhibit G.

88. As the Court explained:

On October 27, 2017 (seven days after the Arbitration Award), ALF—having purchased back the ownership interest that Acis LP had in it, just three days earlier—decided that it would no longer use Acis LP as its portfolio manager and

<sup>19</sup> The Highlands contend that the reference to "control" in Section 6 of the Second ALF PMA negates the broad language of Section 5 of the Second ALF PMA. The Plaintiffs disagree.

entered into a new portfolio management agreement to supersede and replace the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, ALF entered into a new Portfolio Management Agreement with a Cayman Island entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., replacing Acis LP in its role with ALF. This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017.

Opinion at 19 (footnotes omitted).

89. Under the prior ALF PMA, Acis LP's consent to the termination of the ALF PMA was required in order to effectuate the ALF PMA Transfer. So, Dondero, on behalf of Acis LP, simply signed the October 2017 PMA, consenting and agreeing to its removal and replacement, and transferring all authority and management rights as portfolio manager of ALF to Highland Advisor under the October 2017 PMA. Acis received no consideration for this transfer.

90. Without this ALF PMA Transfer, which transferred Acis LP's valuable rights under the ALF PMA to Highland Advisor, Highland Funding could not have attempted to liquidate the CLOs, by directing optional redemptions, and further deplete Acis's assets.<sup>21</sup>

91. On October 24, 2017, a mere four days after the Arbitration Award was entered, Waterhouse, on behalf of Acis LP, and Grant Scott, for CLO Holdco Ltd., entered into that certain special resolution whereby Highland Funding, then known as ALF, acquired back Acis's equity interest in ALF (the "ALF Share Transfer"). A true and correct copy of the special resolution is attached hereto as Exhibit H. Pursuant the ALF Share Transfer, ALF paid Acis LP $991,180.13 for all of its shares of ALF.

92. Thus, by virtue of the ALF PMA Transfer and the ALF Share Transfer, by October 31, 2017, Acis LP had given up all of its shares of ALF and all of its control of ALF.

<sup>21</sup> After the ALF PMA Transfer, Highland Funding and Highland Advisor have issued at least three different optional redemption notices, in an attempt to terminate the PMAs and cut off the Debtors' primary source of cash. All three notices have been withdrawn and/or enjoined by this Court.

93. On November 15, 2017 – only days after the ALF Share Transfer and ALF PMA Transfer were completed – Highland Funding,<sup>22</sup> Highland Advisor and CLO Holdco, Ltd. (another Highland Capital affiliate) entered into a subscription agreement whereby Highland Funding completed a private placement of its equity (including, upon information and belief, the equity acquired in the ALF Share Transfer) to third-party investors. The Plaintiffs believe both the ALF PMA Transfer and the ALF Share Transfer were concocted by Highland Capital and Highland Funding to complete this private placement, which was of great value to Highland Funding (then known as Acis Loan Funding, Ltd.) and Highland Capital, but after the transfers, of no value to Acis.<sup>23</sup> Without the ALF PMA Transfer and the ALF Share Transfer, control of Highland Funding's assets, and the Highland Funding stock held by Acis, would be vested in an entity (Acis LP) that was subject to a looming judgment based on Terry's recently acquired Arbitration Award. That would compromise the Highlands' control of Highland Funding.

2. The Note Transfer

94. On November 3, 2017, Acis LP, Highland Capital, and Highland Management (a newly created, offshore Highland Capital affiliate) entered into that certain Agreement for Assignment and Transfer of Promissory Note (the "Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement"). A true and correct copy of the Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit I. The Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement, among other things, transferred the

<sup>23</sup> Highland Funding's (then Acis Loan Funding Ltd.) board of director minutes from October 6, 2017, disclose that the private placement investment would bring $150 million in new investment in Highland Funding and that they were "confident that they could develop further interest and ... bring the total capital to up to around $325 million." The Arbitration Award was issued against Acis LP exactly two weeks later, throwing a huge monkey wrench in Highland Funding's plans to raise hundreds of millions of dollars for Highland Capital and its cronies. Testimony in the bankruptcy case as well as the subscription agreement demonstrate that numerous Highland Capital executives, as well as Highland Capital itself, received Highland Funding stock in connection with this private placement. Thus, they were highly motivated to close this transaction and also deprive the Acis LP of any value in this transaction.

$9.5 million promissory note executed by Highland Capital and payable to Acis LP (the "Note") from Acis LP to Highland Management (the "Note Transfer"). As noted in the Opinion:

The Assignment and Transfer Agreement memorializing this transaction is signed by Mr. Dondero for Acis LP and Mr. Dondero for Highland and some undecipherable name for Highland CLO Management Ltd.

The document recites that (i) Highland is no longer willing to continue providing support services to Acis LP, (ii) Acis LP, therefore, can no longer fulfill its duties as a collateral manager, and (iii) Highland CLO Management Ltd. agrees to step into the collateral manager role if Acis LP will assign to it the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. One more thing: since Acis LP was expected to potentially incur future legal and accounting/administrative fees, and might not have the ability to pay them when due, Highland CLO Management Ltd. agreed to reimburse Acis LP (or pays its vendors directly) up to $2 million of future legal expenses and up to $1 million of future accounting/administrative expenses.

Opinion at 20.

95. Acis LP received no or insufficient consideration for the Note Transfer.

96. The Note Transfer was also of great benefit to Highland Capital because it transferred Highland Capital's liability under the Note away from Acis LP (and its legal woes with Terry) and allowed Highland Capital's liability under the Note, and any payments made thereunder, to stay well within the control of the Highlands. Just as importantly to Highland Capital and Dondero, and in furtherance to their ongoing feud with Terry, the Note Transfer took away the Note as an asset from which Terry could collect his judgment and allowed Highland Capital to argue (as repeatedly argued in the Bankruptcy Cases) that Terry got his judgment against the "wrong" entities and that Highland Capital has no liability related to Terry's claim.

97. Additionally, the Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement also purports to initiate the transfer of the PMAs between Acis and the CLOs to Highland Management.<sup>24</sup> Again,

<sup>24</sup> Highland Management was registered in the Cayman Islands on October 27, 2017, roughly a week before the Note Transfer (and on the exact day of the ALF PMA Transfer). Thus, Highland Management had no portfolio or collateral management experience whatsoever when it entered the Assignment and Transfer Agreement. To the contrary, it appears Highland Management was an entity that was created specifically to hold the Note and eventually take possession of the PMAs in an international forum that would be difficult for Terry to reach, similar Acis LP was to receive no consideration for transferring its most significant assets, the PMAs. As the Court is aware, Acis LP did not in fact transfer the PMAs pursuant to the Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement, but it was clearly the plan as outlined in that agreement and further evidence of Highland Capital's intent to steal Acis LP's valuable going-concern business.

3. The Acis CLO 2017-7 Transfers

98. On December 19, 2017, Acis LP and Highland Holdings (another newly created, offshore Highland Capital affiliate)<sup>25</sup> entered into that certain Agreement for Assignment and Transfer (the "2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement"). A true and correct copy of the 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit J. The 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement focused on Acis CLO Management, LLC ("Acis CLO Management"), which is an entity that had been formed to enter into a portfolio management agreement with Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. ("CLO 2017-7"). CLO 2017-7 is the last CLO the Highlands formed. Acis CLO Management was indirectly owned by Acis LP, and Acis LP and Acis CLO Management had entered into a Master Sub-Advisory Agreement and a Staff and Services Agreement (the "2017-7 Agreements") that allowed Acis LP to manage the CLO 2017-7 portfolio and collect management fees for CLO 2017-7.

99. The 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement, among other things, transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP's interest in the 2017-7 Agreements. The 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement also transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP's to the transferees for the ALF PMA Transfer (Highland Advisor, a Cayman Island entity) the ALF Share Transfer (Highland Funding, a Guernsey entity) and the 2017-1 Assignment and Transfer Agreement (Highland Holdings, a Cayman Island entity). Thus, not only did Highland Capital and Dondero scheme to transfer Acis LP's assets away from it, but they also slyly chose entities in offshore jurisdictions that would be hard for a judgment creditor to reach.

equity interests in various entities that constituted Acis LP's indirect equity interests in Acis CLO Management (the "2017-7 Equity"). Thus, similar to the ALF PMA Transfer and the ALF Share Transfer that occurred roughly two months before, Acis LP was divested of both its ownership in Acis CLO Management and its control of Acis CLO Management (and related management fee stream) in one fell swoop on December 19, 2017, which is the day after Terry received his judgment based on the Arbitration Award. Also, importantly, the 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement rendered Acis non-compliant with relevant U.S. and European risk retention requirements.

100. Significantly, also on December 19, 2017, Highland Capital entered into an agreement with Highland Holdings that allowed Highland Capital to sub-advise and manage CLO 2017-7 and get paid the management fees that otherwise would have flowed to Acis LP. So, like the numerous transfers before it, Highland Capital effectuated the transfer of the 2017-7 Agreements and 2017-7 Equity to cut out Acis LP, while Highland Capital stayed in complete control of CLO 2017-7 and its stream of management fees.

101. As the Court noted in the Opinion:

On December 19, 2017—just one day after the Arbitration Award was confirmed with the entry of the Final Judgment—the vehicle that can most easily be described as the Acis LP "risk retention structure" (necessitated by federal Dodd Frank law) was transferred away from Acis LP and into the ownership of Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. (yet another Cayman Island entity, incorporated on October 27, 2017).

In addition to transferring Acis LP's interest in the Acis LP risk retention structure on December 19, 2017, Acis LP also transferred its contractual right to receive management fees for Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. (which had just closed April 10, 2017), which Mr. Terry credibly testified had a combined value of $5 million, to Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd., another Cayman entity, purportedly in exchange for forgiveness of a $2.8 million receivable that was owed to Highland under the most recent iteration of the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7. In conjunction with this transfer, Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. then entered into new Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements with Highland.

102. The purported consideration for the 2017-7 Equity transferred in the 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement was the forgiveness of a $2,804,870 payable allegedly owed by Acis LP to Highland Capital and transferred to Highland Funding sometime before the agreement was entered. According to Acis LP's financial statements, this payable to Highland Capital entirely comprises amounts due under the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement. Thus, the "consideration" provided in exchange for the 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement would suffer from the same defects as outlined throughout this Second Amended Complaint related to the Sub Agreements; i.e., Acis only "owed" Highland Capital these amounts because Highland Capital grossly overcharged Acis. Finally, like the Note Transfer, the 2017-7 Equity transfer allowed Highland Capital to effectively collect all of the $2.8 million owed by Acis LP (assuming it is even a valid debt) through the use of an offshore intermediary.

103. Further, the 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement itself discloses that no consideration was provided for the transfer of the 2017-7 Agreements. Rather, the justification for the transfer of the 2017-7 Agreements is Highland Capital's self-serving refusal to continue to do business with Acis LP after the Arbitration Award and related judgment.

4. *Thwarted Attempts to Transfer the Universal/BVK Agreement and Force an Optional Redemption

104. Highland Capital and the other Highlands did not stop with the transfers in the Fall of 2017. Immediately after the Involuntary Petitions were filed on January 30, 2018, Highland Capital conspired with Acis LP's own bankruptcy counsel in an effort to appropriate Acis LP's valuable sub-advisor rights under the Agreement for the Outsourcing of Asset Management (the "Universal/BVK Agreement") between Acis LP and Universal–Investment-

Luxembourg S.A. ("Universal"), which provided sub-advisory services for a German fund called BayVK R2 Lux S.A., SICAV-FIS ("BVK").<sup>26</sup> Like the many transfers before it, Highland Capital's plan (as clearly outlined in an email from Isaac Leventon to Mike Warner) was "to transfer the BVK investment management agreement from Acis LP to another Highland-affiliated manager."<sup>27</sup> Immediately after Highland Capital sought (and presumably received) advice from Acis's own counsel, Highland Capital reached out to Universal and BVK to solicit their participation in Highland Capital's scheme. In fact, BVK acknowledged in its very first email with Highland Capital after Acis LP's bankruptcy filing that Highland Capital's plan was to replace Acis LP.

105. Over the several weeks leading up to this Court's ruling on the Orders for Relief, Highland Capital and Universal/BVK did, in fact, frequently discuss replacing Acis LP, conducted extensive due diligence in order to replace Acis LP and even negotiated and prepared a new asset management agreement between Highland Capital and Universal that was to take effect once Acis LP and its bankruptcy were out of the way. But even after the Orders for Relief were entered and the Debtors were under the control of a trustee, the communications did not stop. Among other things, Highland Capital volunteered to pay Universal and BVK's legal costs incurred in terminating Acis LP and making Highland Capital the new sub-advisor for Universal and BVK, Highland Capital repeatedly criticized the Trustee for his management of Acis, and Highland Capital repeatedly expressed its desire to negotiate with Universal and to "onboard" Highland Capital as Universal's new sub-advisor. And even after Highland Capital was fired by the Trustee as Acis LP's sub-advisor and replaced with Brigade and Cortland, the communications did not stop. Highland Capital's scheme to transfer the Universal/BVK Agreement to Highland Capital or its affiliate was apparently only prevented by this Court imposing 11 U.S.C. § 363, effectively taking away Acis LP's right to operate outside the ordinary course of business without Court authority under 11 U.S.C. § 303(f) and then later not immediately lifting the automatic stay as to the Universal/BVK Agreement.

106. Finally, Highland Advisor and its sub-manager Highland Capital, used its newly acquired management rights (by way of the ALF PMA Transfer) to attempt to destroy the Debtor, as further described below.

107. On April 30, 2018, without requesting relief from the automatic stay, Highland Funding sent five notices purportedly requesting optional redemption pursuant to Section 9.2 of each of the Indentures (the "First Optional Redemption Notices").<sup>28</sup> True and correct copies of the First Optional Redemption Notices are attached hereto as Exhibit L.

108. The First Optional Redemption Notices directed Acis LP to effectuate an Optional Redemption (as defined under each Indenture). Under Section 9.2 of each Indenture, upon the receipt of a notice of redemption, Acis, in its discretion, is to direct the sale of the Collateral Obligations (as defined by each Indenture) and other Assets. See CLO-1 Indenture, § 9.2; CLO-3 Indenture, § 9.2(b); CLO-4 Indenture, § 9.2; CLO-5 Indenture, § 9.2; & CLO-6 Indenture, § 9.2. In the Indentures, "Assets" is defined to include the PMAs. See CLO-1 Indenture, p. 8; CLO-3 Indenture, p. 10; CLO-4 Indenture, p. 10; CLO-5 Indenture, p. 10; & CLO-6 Indenture p. 10. Consequently, an Optional Redemption directs Acis LP to liquidate assets of the CLOs over which Acis has certain property rights, including, effectively, the PMAs.

109. The Trustee analyzed the First Optional Redemption Notices and determined there were various defects which rendered them ineffective. Therefore, on May 22, 2018, the Trustee sent his responses to the five First Optional Redemption Notices (the "Redemption Responses"). True and correct copies of the Redemption Responses are attached hereto as Exhibit M.

6. *The Temporary Restraining Order Against the Highlands

110. On May 30, 2018, Highland Capital and Highland Funding initiated this Adversary Proceeding and alleged, among other things, that the Trustee breached the PMAs by failing to effectuate an Optional Redemption pursuant to the First Optional Redemption Notices.

111. The next day, on May 31, 2018, upon the request of the Trustee, the Court held a status conference in the Bankruptcy Cases, and the Trustee explained that, almost immediately after his appointment, he began exploring plan options regarding a potential transaction that would transfer rights under the PMAs, the Sub-Advisory Agreement, the Shared Services Agreement, and the subordinated notes, with respect to CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6, with the goal of maximizing value for all parties. The Trustee informed the Court that he was in the process of negotiating a transaction with a party that would potentially provide enough value to pay all parties, including potentially all of Acis's creditors in full.

112. On May 31, 2018, at the conclusion of the status conference, the Court, sua sponte, issued a temporary restraining order, which prevented all parties from taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption for fourteen (14) days.

113. On June 6, 2018 the Court entered its Temporary Restraining Order (the "TRO"), whereby the Restrained Parties (as defined in the TRO) were enjoined until 12:01 a.m. on June 15, 2018, from:

- a) proceeding with, effectuating, or otherwise taking any action in furtherance of the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs; and
- b) sending, mailing, or otherwise distributing any notice to the holders of the Acis CLOs in connection with the Optional Redemption, call, or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.

114. On June 11, 2018, the Trustee filed his Motion to Extend the Temporary Restraining Order (the "Motion to Extend the TRO"), in which the Trustee sought to extend the TRO for an additional 14 days. See Docket No. 275.

115. Also on June 11, 2018, Highland Funding filed its Memorandum of Law in Opposition to the Continuance of the Temporary Restraining Order (the "Brief in Opposition to Extending the TRO"). See Case No. 18-3264, Docket. No. 271. This pleading did not mention that Highland Capital apparently violated the TRO by initiating approximately $23 million of sales of CLO assets pursuant to the Optional Redemption after the Court issued its sua sponte TRO on May 31.

7. *The Second Optional Redemption Notices

116. On June 13, 2018, the day before the hearing on the Motion to Extend the TRO, Highland Funding advised the Trustee that Highland Funding would withdraw the First Optional Redemption Notices. Highland Funding's correspondence with the Trustee indicating its intent to withdraw the First Optional Redemption Notices is attached hereto as Exhibit N and incorporated herein for all purposes. Thereafter, the Trustee advised the Court that Highland Funding was withdrawing the First Optional Redemption Notices, and the Trustee therefore did not intend to go forward with the Motion to Extend the TRO on June 14.

117. On June 14, 2018, counsel for Highland Funding advised the Court that Highland Funding had withdrawn the First Optional Redemption Notices. Counsel for Highland Funding further advised the Court that the First Optional Redemption Notices were withdrawn to bring "some sanity to this process":

That was done obviously for multiple reasons. My client doesn't believe that this is the appropriate time to be effectuating such a redemption for its own economic reasons, setting aside the complications it's obviously caused for others in this room. But needless to say, that, too, is an effort to try to bring, as I believe the Court has requested, and others have, some sanity to this process.<sup>29</sup>

118. On June 15, 2018, at 12:01 a.m., the TRO expired.

119. Later on June 15, 2018, despite the fact that Highland Funding had just withdrawn the First Optional Redemption Notices, had advised the Court of the same, and the Trustee and the Court acted in reliance on same, (again, without requesting relief from the automatic stay) Highland Funding gave notice to the Trustee that it was again requesting an Optional Redemption pursuant to the Section 9.2 of each of the Indentures (the "Second Optional Redemption Notices," and together with the First Optional Redemption Notices, the "Optional Redemption Notices"). The Second Optional Redemption Notices are attached hereto as Exhibit Q and are incorporated herein for all purposes.

120. By the Second Optional Redemption Notices, Highland Funding directed the Issuers:

to effect an Optional Redemption of all Secured Notes and the Subordinated Notes in full on July 30, 2018 for the express purpose of placement of a portion of the portfolio of assets held by the Co-Issuers into a warehouse arrangement or a total return swap or other derivative arrangement with Highland Capital Management, L.P. acting as the Sub-Advisor pursuant to a Sub-Advisory Agreement.

121. On June 20, 2018, Highland Capital presented to the Trustee hundreds of millions of dollars of "proposed trades" pursuant to this second Optional Redemption. In its correspondence to the Trustee regarding such proposed trades, Highland Capital further stated:

In order to effectuate the Transaction and obtain best execution, Highland requests your consent by no later than 2pm tomorrow, Thursday June 21, 2018 (the "Deadline"). The Acis Accounts may incur losses as a result of your failure to respond by the Deadline.

Highland believes it has an independent fiduciary obligation to the CLOs. If you instruct Highland not to proceed to undertake the Optional Redemption, Highland reserves its rights to seek appropriate protection and redress at law or in equity.<sup>30</sup>

H. Preferential Transfers Made within One Year of the Petition Date

122. Acis's Statement of Financial Affairs [ Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 165] (the "SOFA")<sup>31</sup> and its general ledger disclose more than two dozen payments totaling $16,113,790.14 made to Highland Capital within one year of the Petition Date based on four categories (the "Prepetition Payments"):

- (i) Contractual Payments: $5,011,836.72
- (ii) Services: $7,672,145.25<sup>32</sup>
- (iii) Unsecured Loan Repayments Including Interest: $3,311,497.65
- (iv) Expense Reimbursement: $118,311.32

123. The Prepetition Payments were made for the benefit of Highland Capital for or on account of an antecedent debt owed by the Debtors before the Prepetition Payments were made. Acis was insolvent at all times when the Prepetition Payments were made. Based on Terry's pending—or already decided—claims, as well as Highland Capital's absolute operational and financial control of Acis, Highland Capital was aware that Acis was insolvent or reasonably should have been aware Acis was insolvent at all times when the Prepetition Payments were made. The Prepetition Payments were made within one year of the Petition Date. At the time the

<sup>32</sup> The Statement of Financial Affairs, filed in the bankruptcy cases by Acis while under Highland Capital control, fails to list an additional $1,868,203.44 in transfers to Highland Capital for "Services" that were made shortly before the Petition Date.

Prepetition Payments were made Highland Capital was an insider of the Debtors. The Prepetition Payments enabled Highland Capital to receive more than Highland Capital would have received if the cases were a case under chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code and if the Prepetition Payments had not been made. Highland Capital received the Prepetition Payments. See Williams v. Mckesson Corp. (In re Quality Infusion Care, Inc.), Nos. 10-36675, 13-3056, 2013 Bankr. LEXIS 5044 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Nov. 25, 2013) (citing Palmer Clay Prods. Co. v. Brown, 297 U.S. 227, 229 (1936) and stating the 547(b)(5) is to be analyzed as of the Petition Date).

124. Further, to the extent that the Acis LP payables that served as the consideration for the Note Transfer and the 2017-7 Equity transfer were valid, these transfers would also constitute preferential payments to Highland Capital, Highland Management and Highland Holdings. The SOFA discloses that Highland Management is an "affiliate" of the Debtors and the Note Transfer is included on the list of "payments, distributions, withdrawals credited, or given to insiders" within one year before filing the Bankruptcy Cases. See SOFA p. 12.

VI. CAUSES OF ACTION<sup>33</sup>

Count 1: Declaratory Judgment that Expense Overpayments to Highland Capital Were Ultra Vires in Violation of the LPA [Against Highland Capital]

125. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

126. Under Delaware law, ultra vires corporate acts are either void or voidable. See Klaassen v. Allegro Dev. Corp., C.A. No. 8626-VCL, 2013 Del. Ch. LEXIS 247, at *48-50 (Oct. 11, 2013); see also Stephen A. Solomon v. Armstrong, 747 A.2d 1098, 1114 n.45 (1999) (explaining the difference between void and voidable acts). Delaware courts apply the doctrine of ultra vires to partnerships by analogy. See, e.g., In re Mesa Ltd. P'ship Preferred Unitholders Litig., Civil Action No. 12,243, 1991 Del. Ch. LEXIS 214, at *20 (Dec. 10, 1991).

127. Highland Capital invoiced Acis for, and received payments for, at least $7,021,924.00 in excess of 20% of Revenues, in violation of the LPA. Highland Capital, an Affiliate of Acis GP, accepted such funds in violation of Section 3.10(a) of the LPA.

128. Such Expense Overpayments, and any agreements supporting such Expense Overpayments, were economically irrational, not in the interest of Acis LP, and are therefore void; however, if not void, such actions are voidable because they were done without the consent or ratification of all members of the Founding Partner Group. The payments to Highland Capital of the Expense Overpayments in the amount of at least $7,021,924.00 and any agreements supporting such overpayments were unauthorized or ultra vires acts of the partnership in violation of the LPA, and are therefore void or voidable.

Count 2: Turnover of Property of the Estate under 11 U.S.C. § 542(a) for Unauthorized Overpayments
[Against Highland Capital]

129. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

130. Under section 542(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, "an entity, other than a custodian, in possession, custody, or control, during the case, of property that the trustee may use, sell, or lease under section 363 . . . shall deliver to the trustee, and account for, such property or the value of such property, unless such property is of inconsequential value or benefit to the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 542(a).

131. Under section 541(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, property of the estate includes "all legal or equitable interests of the debtor in property as of the commencement of the case." 11 U.S.C. § 541(a). Further, the "estate is comprised of [such] property, wherever located and by whomever held." Id.

132. Highland Capital wrongfully received Expense Overpayments of at least $7,021,924.00 in excess of 20% of Revenues in violation of the LPA.

133. The property, or value of such property, from the overpayment of funds wrongfully transferred to Highland Capital totaling at least $7,021,924.00, in Highland Capital's possession, custody, or control is property of the estate, and the value of such property is not of inconsequential value or benefit to the estate.

134. Pursuant to section 542(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, Highland Capital must deliver to the Trustee the property or value of such property, totaling at least $7,021,924.00, wrongfully transferred to Highland Capital.

135. Therefore, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek turnover of the funds, totaling at least $7,021,924.00, transferred to Highland Capital, to the extent allowed pursuant to section 542 of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 3: Money Had and Received for Overcharges and Unauthorized Overpayments
[Against Highland Capital]

136. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

137. "An action for money had and received arises when the defendant obtains money which in equity and good conscience belongs to the plaintiff. This action . . . looks only to the justice of the case and inquires whether the defendant has received money which rightfully belongs to another." Amoco Prod. Co. v. Smith, 946 S.W.2d 162, 164 (Tex. App.—El Paso 1997, no pet.) (internal citations omitted).

138. Highland Capital invoiced Acis for, and received Expense Overpayments for, at least $7,021,924.00 in excess of 20% of Revenues in violation of the LPA. Highland Capital, an Affiliate of Acis GP, accepted such funds in violation of Section 3.10(a) of the LPA. Highland Capital was therefore unjustly enriched in the amount of the Expense Overpayments of at least $7,021,924.00.

139. Highland Capital invoiced Acis and accepted such Expense Overpayments from Acis despite Highland Capital's knowledge of the LPA. This money rightfully belongs to Acis, and the overpayment creates a debt in favor of Acis. Therefore, the Plaintiffs are entitled to damages on behalf of Acis in the amount of at least $7,021,924.00. In addition, Highland Capital charged Acis more than a market rate under the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Third Amended Sub-Services Agreement and is liable to Acis in the amount of these overcharges.

Count 4: Conversion for Unauthorized Overpayments
[Against Highland Capital]

140. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

141. "Conversion is defined as the wrongful exercise of dominion and control over another's property in denial of or inconsistent with his rights." Green Int'l v. Solis, 951 S.W.2d 384, 391 (Tex. 1997).

142. Highland Capital wrongfully exercised dominion and control over at least $7,021,924.00 in excess of 20% of Revenues in violation of the LPA. Highland Capital, through the common control of Dondero, was aware that it was prohibited from receiving payment in excess of 20% of Revenues without the consent of all members of the Founding Partner Group. Highland Capital also had actual notice of the Arbitration Award through Dondero (who was represented at the arbitration proceeding) that Highland Capital was wrongfully in possession of such money. Despite Highland Capital's actual knowledge that the money does not rightfully belong to Highland Capital, Highland Capital continues to improperly retain the overpaid funds. Therefore, the Plaintiffs are entitled to damages in the amount of at least $7,021,924.00. In addition, Highland Capital charged Acis more than a market rate under the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Third Amended Shared Services Agreement and is liable to Acis in the amount of these overcharges.

Count 5: Actual Fraudulent Transfer under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A) related to the Sub-Advisory Agreement [Against Highland Capital]

143. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

144. Section 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee may avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property, or any obligation incurred by the debtor, if the debtor made such transfer or incurred such obligation with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any entity to which the debtor was or became, on or after the date that such transfer was made or such obligation was incurred, indebted.

145. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement made in the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement and Third Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement, any obligations incurred by Acis in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement, and any payments made (including increase in payments made) by Acis to Highland Capital in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement because such modifications and payments were made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

- (i) The modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement were made shortly after Terry's termination and just prior to litigation with Terry;
- (ii) The modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement—entered into by Dondero on behalf of Acis and Highland Capital—and payments

thereunder were made with the actual intent to divert assets to and for the benefit of Highland Capital, in fraud upon Acis's creditors, namely Terry.

- (iii) Acis was or became insolvent as a result of the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder;
- (iv) The modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder occurred both before and after substantial debts were incurred by Acis;
- (v) The consideration received by Acis for the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder were not reasonably equivalent in value; and
- (vi) the transfer/obligation incurred was to an insider.

146. Therefore, such modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreements and payments to Highland Capital pursuant to such modifications should be avoided to the extent avoidable under section 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 6: Actual Fraudulent Transfer under Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 24.005(a)(1) related to the Sub-Advisory Agreement [Against Highland Capital]

147. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

148. Section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers or obligations that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.005(a)(1) provides that a current or future creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation with an actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud any creditor of the debtor. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Trustee may seek to avoid transfers made by Acis, or obligations incurred by Acis, pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(1).

149. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement made in the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement and Third Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement, any obligations incurred by Acis in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement, and any payments made (including increase in payments made) by Acis to Highland Capital in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement because such modifications and payments were made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

- (i) The modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement were made shortly after Terry's termination and just prior to litigation with Terry;
- (ii) The modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement—entered into by Dondero on behalf of Acis and Highland Capital—and payments thereunder were made with the actual intent to divert assets to and for the benefit of Highland Capital, in fraud upon Acis's creditors, namely Terry.
- (iii) Acis was or became insolvent as a result of the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder;
- (iv) The modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder occurred both before and after substantial debts were incurred by Acis;
- (v) The consideration received by Acis for the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder were not reasonably equivalent in value; and
- (vi) The transfer/obligation incurred was to an insider.

150. Therefore, Acis's creditors have the right to avoid the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments thereunder under section 24.005(a)(1) of the Texas Business and Commerce Code, and the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, can seek to enforce that right under section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 7: Constructive Fraudulent Transfer under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(B) related to the Sub-Advisory Agreement [Against Highland Capital]

151. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

152. Section 548(a)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee may avoid any transfer of any interest of the debtor in property, or any obligation incurred by the debtor, if the debtor (i) received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) (A) was insolvent on the date the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, or became insolvent as the result of the transfer or obligation; (B) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction for which any remaining property was unreasonably small capital; or (C) intended to incur, or believed the debtor would incur, debts that would be beyond the debtors' ability to pay such debts.

153. As described above, among other things, Acis LP:

- (i) received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments made thereunder;
- (ii) was or became insolvent as the result of the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments made thereunder; and
- (iii) intended to incur, or believed Acis would incur, debts that would be beyond Acis's ability to pay such debts.

154. Therefore, the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement made in the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Third Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement, any obligations incurred by Acis in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and any payments made (including increase in payments made) by Acis to Highland Capital in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement are avoidable by the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, under section 548(a)(1)(B).

Count 8: Constructive Fraudulent Transfer under Tex. Bus. & Com. Code §§ 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a) related to the Sub-Advisory Agreement
[Against Highland Capital]

155. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

156. Section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers or obligations that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.005(a)(2) provides that a current or future creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation (i) without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) (A) was engaged or about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction, or (B) intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed, that the debtor would incur debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due. Similarly, Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.006(a) provides that a current creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation (i) without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) the debtor was insolvent or rendered insolvent by the transfer or obligation sought to be avoided. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may seek to avoid transfers made by Acis, or obligations incurred by Acis, pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a).

157. As described above, Acis LP did not receive reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments made thereunder to Highland Capital, and creditors at the time of such modifications and payments could have avoided such modifications and payments under section 24.005(a)(2) of the Texas Business and Commerce Code.

158. At the time of the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments made thereunder to Highland Capital, Acis intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that Acis would incur, debts beyond its ability to pay as they became due, and/or was engaged, or was about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets of Acis were unreasonably small in relation to such business or transaction.

159. Moreover, as described above, Acis was insolvent or became insolvent by the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and payments made thereunder.

160. Therefore, the modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement made in the Second Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Third Amended Sub-Advisory Agreement, any obligations incurred by Acis in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and any payments made (including increase in payments made) by Acis to Highland Capital in connection with these modifications to the Sub-Advisory Agreement are avoidable under Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a).

Count 9: Actual Fraudulent Transfer under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A)
for the ALF PMA Transfer
[Against Highland Capital, Highland Funding, and Highland Advisor]

161. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

162. Section 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee may avoid any transfer of an interest of the debtor in property, or any obligation incurred by the debtor, if the debtor made such transfer or incurred such obligation with actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud any entity to which the debtor was or became, on or after the date that such transfer was made or such obligation was incurred, indebted.

163. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the ALF PMA Transfer because such transfer was made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

- (i) The ALF PMA Transfer was made just seven days after Terry's Arbitration Award against Acis;
- (ii) The ALF PMA Transfer was made with the actual intent to divert Acis LP's contractual rights under the ALF PMA to and for the benefit of Highland Advisor, in fraud upon Acis LP's creditors, namely Terry.
- (iii) Acis LP was insolvent at the time of the ALF PMA Transfer or became insolvent as a result of the ALF PMA Transfer;
- (iv) The ALF PMA Transfer occurred both before and after substantial debts were incurred by Acis LP;
- (v) Acis LP received less than a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the ALF PMA Transfer;
- (vi) The transfer was made to an insider (Highland Advisor) and for the benefit of insiders (Highland Funding and Highland Capital); and
- (vii) Highland Capital (as sub-advisor to Highland Advisor) retained effective possession and control of the property transferred after the transfer.

164. Therefore, the ALF PMA Transfer should be avoided to the extent avoidable under section 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 10: Actual Fraudulent Transfer under Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 24.005(a)(1)
for the ALF PMA Transfer

165. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

166. Section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers or obligations that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.005(a)(1) provides that a current or future creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation with an actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud any creditor of the debtor. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Trustee may seek to avoid transfers made by Acis, or obligations incurred by Acis, pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(1).

167. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the ALF PMA Transfer because such transfer was made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

- (i) The ALF PMA Transfer was made just seven days after Terry's Arbitration Award against Acis;
- (ii) The ALF PMA Transfer was made with the actual intent to divert Acis LP's contractual rights under the ALF PMA to and for the benefit of Highland Advisor, in fraud upon Acis LP's creditors, namely Terry.
- (iii) Acis LP was insolvent at the time of the ALF PMA Transfer or became insolvent as a result of the ALF PMA Transfer;
- (iv) The ALF PMA Transfer occurred both before and after substantial debts were incurred by Acis LP; and
- (v) Acis LP received less than a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the ALF PMA Transfer;

- (vi) The transfer was made to an insider (Highland Advisor) and for the benefit of insiders (Highland Funding and Highland Capital); and
- (vii) Highland Capital (as sub-advisor to Highland Advisor) retained effective possession and control of the property transferred after the transfer.

168. Therefore, Acis's creditors have the right to avoid the ALF PMA Transfer under section 24.005(a)(1) of the Texas Business and Commerce Code, and the Plaintiffs can seek to enforce that right under section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 11: Constructive Fraudulent Transfers under 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(B)
for the ALF PMA Transfer

169. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

170. Section 548(a)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee may avoid any transfer of any interest of the debtor in property, or any obligation incurred by the debtor, if the debtor (i) received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) (A) was insolvent on the date the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, or became insolvent as the result of the transfer or obligation: (B) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction for which any remaining property was unreasonably small capital; or (C) intended to incur, or believed the debtor would incur, debts that would be beyond the debtors' ability to pay such debts.

171. As described above, among other things, Acis LP:

- (i) received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the ALF PMA Transfer;
- (ii) was insolvent on the date the ALF PMA Transfer was made or became insolvent as the result of the ALF PMA Transfer;

- (iii) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction for which any remaining property was unreasonably small capital; and
- (iii) intended to incur, or believed Acis would incur, debts that would be beyond Acis's ability to pay such debts.

173. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

174. Section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers or obligations that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.005(a)(2) provides that a current or future creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation (i) without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) (A) was engaged or about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction, or (B) intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed, that the debtor would incur debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due. Similarly, Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.006(a) provides that a current creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation (i) without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) the debtor was insolvent or rendered insolvent by the transfer or obligation sought to be avoided. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the

175. As described above, Acis LP did not receive reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the ALF PMA Transfer, and creditors at the time of the ALF PMA Transfer could have avoided such transfer under section 24.005(a)(2) of the Texas Business and Commerce Code.

176. 177. Moreover, as described above, Acis was insolvent or was rendered insolvent by the ALF PMA Transfer.

178. The ALF PMA Transfer is therefore avoidable under Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a).

181. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the ALF Share Transfer because such transfer was made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

217. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity because such transfers were made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

- (i) The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity were made shortly after Terry's Arbitration Award against Acis and immediately after Terry's judgment against Acis;
- (ii) The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity were made with the actual intent to divert the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7

Equity from Acis LP to Highland Holdings, in fraud upon Acis LP's creditors, namely Terry;

- (iii) Acis LP was insolvent at the time of the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity or became insolvent as a result of the transfers;
- (iv) The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity occurred shortly after substantial debts were incurred by Acis LP; and
- (v) Acis LP received less than a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity;
- (vi) The transfers were made to an insider (Highland Holdings) and for the benefit of an insider (Highland Capital); and
- (vii) Highland Capital retained effective possession and control of the property transferred after the transfer.

218. Therefore, the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity should be avoided under section 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 22: Actual Fraudulent Transfer under Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 24.005(a)(1) for the 2017-7 Equity and 2017-7 Agreement Transfers [Against Highland Capital and Highland Holdings]

219. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

220. Section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers or obligations that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.005(a)(1) provides that a current or future creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation with an actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud any creditor of the debtor. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy

Code, the Trustee may seek to avoid transfers made by Acis, or obligations incurred by Acis, pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(1).

221. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek to avoid the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity because such transfers were made with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud Terry, a creditor of Acis, demonstrated by, among other things, that:

- (i) The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity were made shortly after Terry's Arbitration Award against Acis and immediately after Terry's judgment against Acis;
- (ii) The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity were made with the actual intent to divert the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity from Acis LP to Highland Holdings, in fraud upon Acis LP's creditors, namely Terry;
- (iii) Acis LP was insolvent at the time of the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity or became insolvent as a result of the transfers;
- (iv) The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity occurred shortly after substantial debts were incurred by Acis LP; and
- (v) Acis LP received less than a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity;
- (vi) The transfers were made to an insider (Highland Management) and for the benefit of an insider (Highland Capital); and
- (vii) Highland Capital retained effective possession and control of the property transferred after the transfers.

222. Therefore, Acis's creditors have the right to avoid the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity under section 24.005(a)(1) of the Texas Business and Commerce Code, and the Plaintiffs can seek to enforce that right under section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code.

for the 2017-7 Equity and 2017-7 Agreement Transfers [Against Highland Capital and Highland Holdings]

223. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

224. Section 548(a)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee may avoid any transfer of any interest of the debtor in property, or any obligation incurred by the debtor, if the debtor (i) received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) (A) was insolvent on the date the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, or became insolvent as the result of the transfer or obligation: (B) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction for which any remaining property was unreasonably small capital; or (C) intended to incur, or believed the debtor would incur, debts that would be beyond the debtors' ability to pay such debts.

225. As described above, among other things, Acis LP:

- (i) received less than reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity;
- (ii) was insolvent on the date the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity were made or became insolvent as the result of the transfers;
- (iii) was engaged in business or a transaction, or was about to engage in business or a transaction for which any remaining property was unreasonably small capital; and

- (iii) intended to incur, or believed Acis would incur, debts that would be beyond Acis's ability to pay such debts.

226. Therefore, the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity are avoidable by the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, under section 548(a)(1)(B) of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 24: Constructive Fraudulent Transfer under Tex. Bus. & Com. Code §§ 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a) for the 2017-7 Equity and 2017-7 Agreement Transfers [Against Highland Capital and Highland Holdings]

227. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

228. Section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers or obligations that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.005(a)(2) provides that a current or future creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation (i) without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) (A) was engaged or about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction, or (B) intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed, that the debtor would incur debts beyond the debtor's ability to pay as they became due. Similarly, Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.006(a) provides that a current creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation (i) without receiving reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation; and (ii) the debtor was insolvent or rendered insolvent by the transfer or obligation sought to be avoided. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may seek to avoid transfers made by Acis, or obligations incurred by Acis, pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a).

229. As described above, Acis LP did not receive reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity, and creditors at the time of the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity could have avoided such transfer under section 24.005(a)(2) of the Texas Business and Commerce Code.

230. At the time of the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity, Acis intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that Acis would incur, debts beyond its ability to pay as they became due, and/or was engaged, or was about to engage in a business or transaction for which the remaining assets of Acis were unreasonably small in relation to such business or transaction.

231. Moreover, as described above, Acis was insolvent or rendered insolvent by the transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity.

232. The transfers of the 2017-7 Agreements and the 2017-7 Equity are therefore avoidable under Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.005(a)(2) and 24.006(a).

Count 25: Preferential Transfers to Highland Capital, Highland Holdings and Highland Management under 11 U.S.C. § 547(b) and Texas Business and Commerce Code § 24.006(b) [Against Highland Capital, Highland Holdings, and Highland Management]

233. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

234. Section 547(b) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that a trustee may avoid any transfer of any interest of the debtor in property (i) to or for the benefit of a creditor; (ii) for or on account of an antecedent debt; (iii) made while the debtor was insolvent; (iv) made within one year to an insider; and (v) that enables such creditor to receive more than such creditor would receive in a hypothetical chapter 7 liquidation.

235. Likewise, section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code provides the Trustee with the ability to avoid transfers that would be avoidable by certain prepetition creditors of Acis. Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.006(b) provides that a current creditor may avoid a transfer if the debtor made the transfer to an insider for an antecedent debt, the debtor was insolvent, and the insider had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent. Pursuant to section 544 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may seek to avoid transfers made by Acis pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.006(b).

236. Within one year of the Petition Date, Highland Capital received the Prepetition Payments in the amount $16,113,790.14 from Acis on account of purported debt claims owed by Acis. To the extent that the Prepetition Payments satisfied legitimate debt claims not avoided by any of the causes of action asserted herein, these transfers are avoidable under section 547(b) of the Bankruptcy Code and Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.006(b).

237. Similarly, the 2017-7 Equity transfer and the Note Transfer are purportedly in satisfaction of payables owed by Acis LP to Highland Capital (later conveyed to Highland Holdings and Highland Management). To the extent that these transfers satisfied legitimate debt claims not avoided by any of the causes of action asserted herein, these transfers are avoidable under section 547(b) of the Bankruptcy Code and Texas Business and Commerce Code sections 24.006(b).

Count 26: Liability for Avoided Transfers under 11 U.S.C. § 550 [Against All Defendants]

238. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

239. Section 550 of the Bankruptcy Code provides that, if a transfer is avoided under section 544, 547 or 548, the trustee may recover the property transferred or the value of the property transferred from (i) the initial transferee of such transfer or (ii) the entity for whose benefit such transfer was made.

240. Highland Capital is an initial transferee of all transfers sought to be avoided in Counts 5 – 8 and 25 above. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may recover all avoided transfers from Highland Capital pursuant to section 550, specifically including any transfers made in connection with any obligations avoided through Counts 5 – 8 above.

241. Highland Advisor is an initial transferee of all transfers sought to be avoided in Counts 9 – 12 above, and Highland Capital are entities for whose benefit such transfers were made. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may recover all avoided transfers from Highland Advisor, Highland Funding, and Highland Capital pursuant to section 550.

242. Highland Funding is an initial transferee of all transfers sought to be avoided in Counts 13 – 16 above, and Highland Capital is an entity for whose benefit such transfers were made. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may recover all avoided transfers from Highland Funding and Highland Capital pursuant to section 550.

243. Highland Management is an initial transferee of all transfers sought to be avoided in Counts 17 – 20 and 25 above, and Highland Capital is an entity for whose benefit such transfers were made. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may recover all avoided transfers from Highland Management and Highland Capital pursuant to section 550.

244. Highland Holdings is an initial transferee of all transfers sought to be avoided in Counts 21 – 25 above, and Highland Capital is an entity for whose benefit such transfers were made. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, may recover all avoided transfers from Highland Holdings and Highland Capital pursuant to section 550.

Count 27: Civil Conspiracy to Commit Fraud, Including Fraudulent Transfers [Against Highland Capital, Highland Advisor, Highland Management, and Highland Holdings]

245. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

246. Highland Capital, Highland Advisor, Highland Management, Highland Holdings, Dondero, and Waterhouse (collectively, the "Highland Enterprise")<sup>34</sup> sought to engage in a series of fraudulent transfers and other fraudulent schemes, including the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, the 2017-7 Equity transfer, the 2017-7 Agreements transfer and the thwarted Universal/BVK Agreement transfer in order to denude Acis's assets and take over Acis LP's valuable business.

247. The Highland Enterprise, which is comprised of two or more business entities and individuals, had a meeting of the minds on the object or course of action related to the foregoing fraudulent transfers and schemes, including the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer the 2017-7 Equity transfer, the 2017-7 Agreements transfer and the thwarted Universal/BVK Agreement transfer.

248. The fraudulent transfers and schemes, including the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, the 2017-7 Equity transfer, the 2017-7 Agreements transfer and the thwarted Universal/BVK Agreement transfer, constitute one or more unlawful, overt acts.

249. The Debtors and the Debtors' estates suffered damages as a proximate result of the fraudulent transfers and schemes, including the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, the 2017-7 Equity transfer, the 2017-7 Agreements transfer and the thwarted Universal/BVK Agreement transfer.

250. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek actual and exemplary damages for the Highland Enterprise's conspiracy.

<sup>34</sup> This is without limitation to other entities or individuals that may ultimately be shown to be part of Highland Enterprise.

Count 28: Tortious Interference with the Universal/BVK Agreement
[Against Highland Capital]

251. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

252. Under Texas law, a claim for tortious interference with contract requires: "(1) an existing contract subject to interference, (2) a willful and intentional act of interference with the contract, (3) that proximately caused the plaintiff's injury, and (4) caused actual damages or loss." Official Brands, Inc. v. Roc Nation Sports, LLC, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 167320 *7 (N.D. Tex.) (J. Boyle) (quoting Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Fin. Review Servs., Inc., 29 S.W.3d 74, 77 (Tex. 2000)). The fact that a contract is an at-will agreement is no defense to a tortious interference claim. Id.

253. The Universal/BVK Agreement is an existing contract to which Acis LP is a party. The Universal/BVK Agreement is an existing contract that is subject to interference.

254. From nearly day one of these Bankruptcy Cases, Highland Capital has sought to terminate Acis LP as the manager under the Universal/BVK Agreement, and replace Acis LP with Highland Capital or one of its affiliates. Highland Capital's actions involve communications over many months with Universal and BVK, including numerous communications after Highland Capital was terminated as sub-advisor on August 1, 2018 and no longer had any legitimate reason to communicate with Universal or BVK. Highland Capital even prepared and sent to Universal and BVK a new outsourcing agreement, which would be entered once Acis LP and its bankruptcy were out of the way.

255. Acis LP and its estate have suffered and will suffer actual damages as a proximate result of the interference of Highland Capital.

256. The Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, seek actual and exemplary damages for Highland Capital's tortious interference with the Universal/BVK Agreement.

Count 29: Breach of Contract by Highland Capital under the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement
[Against Highland Capital]

257. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

258. Under Texas law, to prevail on a breach of contract claim, a party must show: "(1) the existence of a valid contract; (2) the plaintiff performed or tendered performance as the contract required; (3) the defendant breached the contract by failing to perform or tender performance as the contract required; and (4) the plaintiff sustained damages as a result of the breach." USAA Tex. Lloyds Co. v. Menchaca, 545 S.W.3d 479, 501 n.21 (Tex. 2018).

259. The Sub-Advisory Agreement is a valid contract between Acis LP and Highland Capital, under which Highland Capital was obligated to, inter alia:<sup>35</sup>

- (i) make recommendations to Acis LP for the purchase, retention, or sale of specific loans or assets in the CLOs;
- (ii) place orders with respect to the purchase or sale of specific loans or assets for the CLOs, upon instruction from Acis LP;
- (iii) identify, evaluate, recommend to Acis LP, and, if applicable, negotiate the structure or terms of investment opportunities for the CLOs;
- (iv) assist Acis LP in performing its due diligence on prospective investments for the CLOs; and

<sup>35</sup> Although the Plaintiffs plead herein that certain provisions of the Sub-Advisory Agreement, which are in violation of the LPA, are unauthorized and ultra vires, section 15 of the Sub-Advisory Agreement provides that any such invalid provision does not affect or render "invalid or unenforceable by virtue of the fact that for any reason any other or others of them may be invalid or unenforceable in whole or in part."

(v) provide information to Acis LP regarding any investments in the CLOs, and, if requested by Acis LP, provide information to assist in monitoring and servicing investments by the CLOs.

See Sub-Advisory Agreement § 1(b). Further, "[n]otwithstanding the foregoing, all investment decisions will ultimately be the responsibility of, and will be made by and at the sole discretion of, [Acis LP]." Id.

260. Section 4(a) of the Sub-Advisory Agreement specifically provides:

[T]he Sub-Advisor will perform its obligations [under the Sub-Advisory Agreement] in good faith with reasonable care using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Sub-Advisor uses with respect to comparable assets that it manages for others and, without limiting the foregoing, in a manner which the Sub-Advisor reasonably believes to be consistent with the practices and procedures followed by institutional managers of national standing relating to assets of the nature and character of the Portfolios[.]

261. Since at least the time the Trustee was appointed in these Bankruptcy Cases, while acting as sub-advisor, Highland Capital failed to purchase a single loan for the CLOs, and only provided for the sale of loans, in an attempt to complete a stealth liquidation of the CLOs for the Highlands' benefit, and to the detriment of Acis LP. Such practice is inconsistent with the practices and procedures followed by institutional managers of national standing, such as Brigade, relating to assets of the nature and character of the CLOs. Highland Capital's activities are, however, completely consistent with the Highlands' ultimate goal to take away Acis LP's valuable assets and take over Acis LP's valuable business as portfolio manager of the CLOs.

262. Highland Capital grossly mismanaged the CLOs, in abrogation of its duties and disregard of the standard of care under the Sub-Advisory Agreement. Accordingly, Highland Capital has breached its obligations under the Sub-Advisory Agreement, and such breach caused economic damages to Acis LP. Acis LP is therefore entitled to recover, to the fullest extent under applicable law, the amount of such damages from Highland Capital.

263. Further, to the extent any of the above-mentioned acts constitute services Highland Capital asserts it provided pursuant to the Shared Services Agreement, such services failed to meet the "Standard of Care" set forth in the Shared Services Agreement and were committed in bad faith or were the result of gross negligence, fraud, and/or willful misconduct. Highland Capital's breach of the Shared Services Agreement caused economic damages to Acis LP. Acis LP is therefore entitled to recover, to the fullest extent under applicable law, the amount of such damages from Highland Capital.

Count 30: Breach of Fiduciary Duties by Highland Capital
[Against Highland Capital]

264. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.

265. Pursuant to the Sub-Advisory Agreement, a principal-agent relationship existed between Acis LP and Highland Capital. As its investment adviser, Highland Capital owed Acis LP fiduciary duties. See Sec. & Exch. Comm'n v. Capital Gains Research Bureau, Inc., 375 U.S. 180, 191, (1963); Commission Interpretation Regarding Standard of Conduct for Investment Advisers, Release No. IA-5248. 17, C.F.R. Part 276 (June 5, 2019). Further, based on Highland Capital's role as sub-advisor and investment adviser to Acis LP, a special relationship of trust and confidence existed between Acis LP and Highland Capital. See W. Reserve Life Assur. Co. of Ohio v. Graben, 233 S.W.3d 360, 373-74 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2007, no pet.). Accordingly, in its capacity of sub-advisor to Acis LP, Highland Capital owed fiduciary duties to Acis LP.

266. Highland Capital, while acting as sub-advisor for Acis LP, purposefully engaged in conduct that was detrimental to Acis LP in order to enrich itself. As outlined in detail above, Highland Capital increased the amount due to Highland Capital under the Sub-Advisory Agreement, including charging amounts far in excess of appropriate market rates and amounts in excess of the compensation limits of the LPA. Highland Capital was also the ringleader, and ultimate beneficiary, for the series of fraudulent schemes executed in the Fall of 2017 that terminated or transferred away Acis LP's valuable rights in the ALF PMA, the ALF Shares, the Note, the 2017-7 Equity and the 2017-7 Agreements. This was done with the very specific intent to make Acis "judgment proof," as Acis's own counsel later boasted, and in order to ensure that Terry would never receive payment on his judgment, as Dondero has threatened. These transfers, while very damaging to Acis LP, also furthered Highland Capital's plan to take over Acis LP's very lucrative portfolio management business and keep it under the control of Highland Capital and Dondero. Finally, Highland Capital sought to transfer the Universal/BVK Agreement away from Acis LP and to itself or an affiliate, including while Highland Capital was serving as sub-advisor (and as a fiduciary) for such agreement.

267. By its actions, Highland Capital specifically intended to cause harm to Acis LP by denuding it of its assets and enriching Highland Capital. In doing so, Highland Capital breached its fiduciary duties to Acis LP.

268. As a consequence, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, are entitled to an award of punitive damages against Highland Capital in an amount to be determined by the Court.

Count 31: Punitive Damages [Against All Defendants]

269. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

270. The Highlands, led by Highland Capital and Dondero, engaged in fraud against Acis and its creditors, acted with malice toward Acis and its creditors, and were, at best, grossly negligent in their dealings with Acis.

271. Further, Plaintiffs are entitled to punitive damages in connection with Highland Capital's: (i) breach of fiduciary duties to Acis due to its fraudulent conduct, (ii) tortious interference, and (iii) violations of TUFTA. See Bombardier Aerospace Corp. v. SPEP Aircraft Holdings, LLC, 572 S.W. 3d 213, 232 (Tex. 2019) (fiduciary duties); Texas Beef Cattle Co. v. Green, 921 S.W.2d 203, 210 (Tex. 1996) (tortious interference); Mullins v. Testamerica, Inc., CIV.A. 3:02-CV-0106-, 2006 WL 2167401, at *10 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 2, 2006) (TUFTA).

272. Thus, the Plaintiffs, now vested with all claims of the Trustee, are entitled to punitive damages, and the Plaintiffs plead for such damages in connection with each Count pleaded herein that will support a claim for punitive damages.

Count 32: Disregarding the Corporate Form/Alter Ego/Collapsing Doctrine/Unjust Enrichment
[Against All Defendants]

273. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

274. Under Texas law, ignoring the separateness of business entities and holding affiliated entities liable for all debts of the fraudulent enterprise is appropriate "when the corporate form has been used as part of a basically unfair device to achieve and inequitable result. Examples are when the corporate structure has been abused to perpetrate a fraud, evade an existing obligation . . . or justify a wrong." SSP Partners v. Gladstrong Inv. (USA) Corp., 275 S.W.3d 444, 451 (Tex. 2008); see also Flores v. Bodden, 488 Fed. App'x 770, 775-76 (5th Cir. 2012) (listing "six situations in which a court may disregard the corporate form"); Bridas S.A.P.I.C. v. Gov't of Turkmenistan, 447 F.3d 411, 416 (5th Cir. 2006) (finding alter ego present).<sup>36</sup>

<sup>36</sup> To the extent Delaware law applies to any of the alter ego claims, Delaware also recognizes alter ego on similar grounds. "Delaware does, however, recognize the traditional alter ego doctrine as grounds to pierce the corporate veil in cases involving the members of a corporate group. To state an alter ego claim under Delaware law, the [plaintiff] must plead (1) that [the] defendants 'operated as a single economic entity' and (2) that an 'overall element

275. Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland Adviser, Highland Management, and Highland Holdings (the "Alter Egos") are all controlled by the CEO and ultimate majority owner of Highland Capital, Dondero. Each of the Alter Egos should be held liable for any damages awarded under any Count in this Second Amended Complaint, as each is the alter ego of the others. Further, each of the Alter Egos should be held liable for any debts of the Debtors, as they are also the alter ego of the Debtors.

276. In this case, the Alter Egos unquestionably used the corporate form as a means of perpetuating the fraudulent scheme set forth above. For example, creating shell corporations in the Cayman Islands days after the Arbitration Award in order to avoid payment of Acis's creditors is precisely the type fraud or injustice that warrants disregarding the corporate form. Such actions satisfy, at a minimum, the first three situations in which a court may disregard the corporate form.

277. Further, "multistep transactions can be collapsed when the steps of the transaction are `part of one integrated transaction.'" In re Yazoo Pipeline Co., L.P., 448 B.R. 163, 187 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2011) (J. Isgur) (internal citations omitted). The Supreme Court likewise has held that a bankruptcy court, as a court of equity, may look through form to substance when determining the true nature of a transaction as it relates to the rights of parties against a bankrupt's estate. Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 304-05 (1939).

278. The ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, and the transfer of the 2017-7 Equity and the 2017-7 Agreements should be collapsed and recognized for what they are: Highland Capital using offshore entities to take over Acis LP's assets and business while Highland Capital maintains absolute control over such assets and business, and even using

alleged debt owed to Highland Capital as the purported consideration for these transactions in order to mask Highland Capital's otherwise clear liability for avoidable transfers.

279. Finally, unjust enrichment is an equitable theory of recovery holding that one who receives benefits unjustly should make restitution for those benefits. Bransom v. Standard Hardware, Inc., 874 S.W.2d 919, 927 (Tex. App.--Fort Worth 1994). A party is unjustly enriched when it obtains a "benefit from another by fraud, duress, or the taking of an undue advantage." Heldenfels Bros., Inc. v. City of Corpus Christi, 832 S.W.2d 39, 41 (Tex. 1992).

280. Each of the Highlands, and in particular Highland Capital and Highland Funding, benefitted from the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, and the transfer of the 2017-7 Equity and the 2017-7 Agreements even if they were not the direct transferee. Each of the Highlands should be held liable for benefits unjustly received and make restitution to the Debtors and their estates for those benefits.

Count 33: Willful Violation of the Automatic Stay [Against Highland Capital and Highland Funding]

281. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

282. A willful violation of the automatic stay does not require a specific intent.

Rather, the statute provides for damages upon a finding that the defendant knew of the automatic stay and the defendant's actions which violated the stay were intentional. Whether the party believes in good faith that it had a right to the property is not relevant to whether the act was 'willful' or whether compensation must be awarded.

Campbell v. Countrywide Home Loan, Inc., 545 F.3d 348, 355 (5th Cir. 2008) (quoting In re Chestnut, 422 F.3d.298, 302 (5th Cir. 2005).

283. "It is not up to a party exercising a self-help remedy to determine, to the preclusion of this court, what is or is not property of the estate." Chesnut v. Brown (In re Chesnut), 300 B.R. 880, 887 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2003).

284. Section 362(k)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that "an individual injured by any willful violation of a stay provided by this section shall recover actual damages, including costs and attorneys' fees, and, in appropriate circumstances, may recover punitive damages." The Fifth Circuit has indicated that remedies under 362(k)(1) are available to trustees. St Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Labuzan, 579 F.3d 533, 539-540 (5th Cir. 2009). The term "individual" is not defined by the Bankruptcy Code, but it is used throughout the Code to refer to debtors and non-debtors. See Homer Nat'l Bank v. Namie, 96 B.R. 652, 654 (W.D. La. 1989) (citing, inter alia, 11 U.S.C. §§ 522(b) (individual as debtor), 321(a)(1) (individual as trustee)).

285. Further, pursuant to section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, "[t]he Court may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title." 11 U.S.C. § 105(a). The purpose of section 105(a) is "to assure the bankruptcy courts power to take whatever action is appropriate or necessary in aid of the exercise of their jurisdiction." 2 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 105.01 (collecting cases). This is consistent with the broad equitable authority of the bankruptcy courts. See United States v. Energy Resources Co., Inc., 495 U.S. 545, 549 (1990).

286. Highland Capital knew the automatic stay was in effect when it intentionally acted, without Court approval, to force the Trustee to effectuate the optional redemptions, including when it demanded on June 20, 2018, that the Trustee take actions to effectuate the optional redemption by June 21, 2018.

287. Highland Funding knew the automatic stay was in effect when it intentionally acted, without Court approval, to force the Trustee to effectuate the optional redemptions, including each occasion described herein when it sent the Trustee the Optional Redemption Notices.

288. Pursuant to section 362(k)(1), the Plaintiffs seek recovery of damages commensurate with its injury, due to Highland Capital's and Highland Funding's violations of the automatic stay. Further, given Highland Capital's and Highland Funding's blatant and willful violation of the automatic stay (as well as the TRO), the Plaintiffs seek attorneys' fees, punitive damages, and sanctions, as the Court finds appropriate, pursuant to section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code.

Count 34: Attorneys' Fees and Costs,
Including all Allowed Professionals' Fees and Expenses in the Bankruptcy Cases [Against All Defendants]

289. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

290. Pursuant to Texas Business and Commerce Code section 24.013, Civil Practice and Remedies Code section 38.001, TUFTA, and any other applicable law, the Plaintiffs may recovery attorneys' fees and costs incurred in bringing this Adversary Proceeding.

291. Plaintiffs further seek recovery from Highland Capital of all allowed professionals' fees and expenses in the Bankruptcy Cases, which were losses to Acis resulting from Highland Capital's breach of fiduciary duties to Acis. See Meyers v. Moody, 693 F.2d 1196, 1214 (5th Cir. 1982).

VII. REQUEST FOR DISGORGEMENT

292. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

293. "Under the equitable remedy of disgorgement or fee forfeiture, a person who renders service to another in a relationship of trust may be denied compensation for his service if he breaches that trust." McCullough v. Scarbrough, Medlin & Assocs., 435 S.W.3d 871, 904-05 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2014) (citing Burrow v. Arce, 997 S.W.2d 229, 237 (Tex. 1999)). "The remedy essentially returns to the principal the value of what it paid for because it did not receive the trust or loyalty." McCullough, 435 S.W.3d at 905 (citing Burrow, 997 S.W.2d at 237-38).

"The amount of disgorgement is within the trial court's discretion; the court may 'deny him all compensation or allow him a reduced compensation or allow him full compensation.'" McCullough, 435 S.W.3d at 905 (citing Burrow, 997 S.W.2d at 237 (quoting RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS § 243 (1959))).

294. "Equitable disgorgement is distinct from an award of actual damages in that the disgorgement award 'serves a separate function of protecting fiduciary relationships.'" McCullough, 435 S.W.3d at 905 (quoting Saden v. Smith, 415 S.W.3d 450, 469 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st] Dist. 2013, pet. denied)); see also Burrow, 997 S.W.2d at 238 ("[T]he central purpose of the equitable remedy of [disgorgement] is to protect relationships of trust by discouraging agent's disloyalty.").

295. The basis for the disgorgement award against Highland Capital stems from its liability in connection with its breach of fiduciary duty, as pleaded herein, and should be "phrased in terms of the salary, profits or other income [Highland Capital] received during the time [it] committed the tortious conduct." McCullough, 435 S.W.3d at 905 (internal quotation marks omitted).

296. Accordingly, Plaintiffs request disgorgement of all funds received by Highland Capital, who breached its fiduciary duties to Acis.

VIII. REQUEST FOR IMPOSITION OF CONSTRUCTIVE TRUST

297. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

298. "A constructive trust is not a cause of action under Texas law." In re Moore, 608 F.3d 253, 263 (5th Cir. 2010). Rather, "[a] constructive trust is an equitable remedy used to prevent unjust enrichment." Baxter v. PNC Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 541 Fed. App'x 395, 398 (5th Cir. 2013) (citing Everett v. TK-Taito, LLC, 178 S.W.3d 844, 859 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2005, no pet.)); see also Messier v. Messier, 458 S.W.3d 155, 164 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2015, no pet.) ("A constructive trust is imposed when one party holds property that legally belongs to the other."). "In order to establish a constructive trust, the proponent must prove: (1) breach of a special trust, fiduciary relationship, or actual fraud; (2) unjust enrichment of the wrongdoer; and, (3) tracing to an identifiable res." Baxter, 541 Fed. App'x at 398; accord Clapper v. Am. Realty Inv'rs, Inc., 3:14-CV-2970-D, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 71543, at *26 (N.D. Tex. June 3, 2015).

299. As described herein, Highland Capital breached its fiduciary duties to Acis, and the Highlands acted in concert to perpetrate the series of fraudulent transfers in order to strip Acis of its assets for the benefit of Highlands.

300. The Highlands were unjustly enriched because they benefitted from the "fraud [and] the taking of an undue advantage" against Acis. See Heldenfels Bros., 832 S.W.2d at 41. Each of the Highlands, and in particular Highland Capital and Highland Funding, benefitted from the property transferred, which is traceable and identified herein, as a result of the ALF PMA Transfer, the ALF Share Transfer, the Note Transfer, and the transfer of the 2017-7 Equity and the 2017-7 Agreements even if they were not the direct transferee.

301. Further, Highland Capital, who breached its fiduciary duties to Acis, was unjustly enriched in connection with the Expense Overpayments as well as by the payments received as a result of the modifications to the Sub Agreements, and such benefits may be traced and identified by the payments from Acis LP to Highland Capital under the modified Sub Agreements.

302. Accordingly, the Plaintiffs requests that a constructive trust is established for those benefits unjustly received by the Highlands.

IX. OBJECTIONS TO HIGHLAND CAPITAL PROOFS OF CLAIM

303. The Plaintiffs incorporate the preceding paragraphs as if set forth fully herein.

304. The Highland Capital Claims are allegedly based on claims arising from the Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Shared Services Agreement. The Highland Capital Claims<sup>37</sup> are summarized as follows:

Alleged Pre-Petition Claim<sup>38</sup>	Alleged Claim Amount
Sub-Advisory Agreement	$1,605,362.41
Shared Services Agreement	$1,017,213.62
Total alleged Pre-Petition Claim	$2,622,576.03
Alleged 502(f) Claim<sup>39</sup>	Alleged 502(f) Claim Amount
Sub-Advisory Agreement	$1,170,147.06
Shared Services Agreement	$ 879,417.29
Total alleged 502(f) Claim	$2,049,564.35
Total Claim Amount	$4,672,140.38

<sup>37</sup> Highland Capital filed identical claims against both Acis LP and Acis GP. Acis GP is not a party to the Sub-Advisory Agreement or the Shared Services Agreement. Presumably, Highland Capital is relying on Delaware partnership law to argue that Acis GP is also liable under the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement. See 6 Del. C. § 17-403(b) ("Except as provided in this chapter, a general partner of a limited partnership has the liabilities of a partner in a partnership that is governed by the Delaware Uniform Partnership Law in effect on July 11, 1999 (6 Del. C. § 1501 et seq.) to persons other than the partnership and the other partners. Except as provided in this chapter or in the partnership agreement, a general partner of a limited partnership has the liabilities of a partner in a partnership that is governed by the Delaware Uniform Partnership Law in effect on July 11, 1999 (6 Del. C. § 1501 et seq.) to the partnership and to the other partners."); see also 6 Del. C. § 15-306(a) ("(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, all partners are liable jointly and severally for all obligations of the partnership unless otherwise agreed by the claimant or provided by law"). If this is the case, Acis does not dispute this basic tenet of partnership law; however, Acis disputes the Highland Capital Claims for the reasons set forth herein. Accordingly, all arguments set forth herein are applicable to both Highland Capital Claims.

The Highland Capital Claims also include contingent indemnity claims arising under the Sub Agreements.

305. The Highland Capital Claims should be disallowed under (i) section 502(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code; (ii) section 502(b)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code; (iii) and section 502(d) of the Bankruptcy Code. The Highland Capital Claims are unenforceable against the Debtors under the LPA and applicable law. The Highland Capital Claims are for services of an insider of the Debtors and exceed the reasonable value of the services. As set forth above, Plaintiffs have asserted avoidance actions against Highland Capital such that the Highland Capital Claims should be disallowed. Finally, to the extent allowed at all, the Highland Capital Claims should be equitably subordinated under section 510(c) of the Bankruptcy Code.

306. Pursuant to section 502(b) and (d) of the Bankruptcy Code and Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3007, the Plaintiffs seek entry of an order disallowing and expunging the Highland Capital Claims from the Debtors' claims registers.

A. The Highland Capital Claims Should be Disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(1).

307. "Section 502(b)(1) provides that a claim is allowed except to the extent it is unenforceable under applicable law." In re White, No. 06-50247-RLJ-13, 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 167, at *17-18 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 28, 2008). "[T]he the validity of a creditor's claims against the debtor at the time the bankruptcy petition is filed 'is to be determined by reference to state law.'" Carrieri v. Jobs.com, Inc., 393 F.3d 508, 529 (5th Cir. 2004) (quoting Kellogg v. United States (In re W. Tex. Mktg. Co.), 54 F.3d 1194, 1196 (5th Cir. 1995)).

308. As set forth more fully above, the Highland Capital Claims are based entirely on amounts alleged to be due pursuant to the Sub Agreements. As outlined in the causes of action above, there are significant amounts due to Acis LP by Highland Capital under or in connection with the Sub Agreements, which constitute a right of recoupment and/or offset to the entirety of the Highland Capital Claims. Further, any portion of the Highland Capital Claims that are based on ultra vires acts, as alleged in Count 1 above, are void or voidable. Accordingly, the Highland Capital Claims are not enforceable under applicable law, and the Highland Capital Claims should therefore be disallowed.

B. The Highland Capital Claims Should be Disallowed under 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(4).

309. The Highland Capital Claims are claims for services by an insider, Highland Capital, and the Highland Capital Claims exceed the reasonable value of the services provided by Highland Capital. Section 502(b)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code provides, in relevant part, that a claim for services of an insider or attorney of a debtor shall not be allowed to the extent that "such claim exceeds the reasonable value of such services."

310. The purpose of section 502(b)(4) is: "(1) to prevent insiders of a debtor from extracting inflated compensation from the debtor at the expense of the debtor's creditors; and (2) to prevent over-generosity of a debtor prior to a bankruptcy filing." Faulkner v. Canada (In re Heritage Org., L.L.C.), Case No. 04-35574-BJH-11, Adv. No. 04-3338, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 4662, at *22-23 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 5, 2006); see also In re Allegheny Int'l, 158 B.R. 332, 339 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1992) ("The purpose underlying 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(4) is to prevent officers and directors (insiders) of a debtor from extracting inflated amounts for their services at the expense of the creditors.").

1. Highland Capital is an Insider of the Debtors.

311. Under section 101(31) of the Bankruptcy Code, an insider includes certain enumerated parties, such as an officer of the debtor, affiliate, etc. Further, the list of enumerated "insiders" is not exclusive or exhaustive. See In re Missionary Baptist Foundation of Am., Inc., 712 F.2d 206, 210 (5th Cir. 1983). Recently, the United States Supreme Court stated: "Courts have additionally recognized as insiders some persons not on that [101(31)] list—commonly known as 'nonstatutory insiders.' The conferral of that status often turns on whether the person's transactions with the debtor (or another of its insiders) were at arm's length." U.S. Bank N.A. v. Vill. at Lakeridge, LLC, 138 S. Ct. 960, 963 (2018).

312. The Fifth Circuit has noted that "cases which have considered whether insider status exists generally have focused on two factors in making that determination: (1) the closeness of the relationship between the parties and (2) whether the transaction . . . [was] conducted at arm's length." In re Holloway, 955 F.2d 1008, 1011 (5th Cir. 1992).

313. Highland Capital is a statutory insider, a non-statutory insider, an admitted insider, and an adjudicated insider. The statutory definition of "insider" includes an "affiliate" of the debtor. 11 U.S.C § 101(31)(E). Prior to the entry of the Orders for Relief, Highland Capital met the statutory definition of "affiliate" because Highland Capital "operate[d] the business or substantially all of the property of the [D]ebtor under a[n] . . . operating agreement." See 11 U.S.C § 101(2)(D). Under the Sub Agreements, Acis LP effectively ceded control over its operations to Highland Capital.<sup>40</sup>

314. Highland Capital is a non-statutory insider because Dondero controlled both Acis and Highland Capital prior to the date the Court entered the Orders for Relief. The closeness of the Highland Capital-Acis relationship is demonstrated by the fact that both companies are under Dondero's common control, Acis had no employees and Acis was operated exclusively by Highland Capital employees. Transactions were not conducted at arm's length. Indeed, Dondero signed both the Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Shared Services Agreement for Highland Capital and Acis.

<sup>40</sup> For purposes of section 502(b)(4), courts examine whether a party is an "insider" on the date the operative document was executed. Here, it is indisputable that Highland Capital was an insider when the Sub-Advisory Agreement and the Shared Services Agreement were executed, and Highland Capital was an insider on the Petition Date. See Faulkner, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 4662, at *17 ("The determination of insider status is made as of the time the claimant provided services to the debtor."); In re Allegheny Int'l, 158 B.R. 332, 339 (Bankr. W.D. Pa. 1992) ("[T]he relevant time for determining one's status as an insider, under 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(4), is the time services were rendered and when the compensation contracts for such services were formed[.]").

315. Highland Capital is an admitted insider and an adjudicated insider. During the trial on the involuntary petitions, the Debtors, controlled by Highland Capital, admitted that Highland Capital is an insider of the Debtors.<sup>41</sup> Acis LP's SOFA lists payments to Highland Capital in the section titled "Payments or transfers of property made within 1 year before the filing of this case that benefited any insider." The SOFA is signed by Isaac Leventon, an employee of Highland Capital (who, on information and belief, had no official title or position with the Debtors). Additionally, this Court has found that Highland Capital is an insider of the Debtors, stating: "the court believes it necessary to remove certain insider creditor claims, which are required not to be counted pursuant to section 303(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code. This would clearly include Highland Capital (the Alleged Debtors do not dispute this)." Opinion ¶ 38 (footnotes omitted) (emphasis added).

2. The Highland Capital Claims Exceed the Reasonable Value of the Services Provided.

316. "In analyzing the reasonableness of a claim for services under § 502(b)(4), a court should consider the totality of the circumstances involved at the time that the services were rendered." Faulkner, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 4662, at *23 (citing In re Gutierrez, 309 B.R. 488, 493 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2004)). "Reasonable value" under Section 502(b)(4) is "synonymous with 'market value.'" In re Delta Air Lines, Inc., No. 05-17923 (cgm), 2010 Bankr. LEXIS 233, at *22 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. Feb. 3, 2010). "The burden of proof on reasonableness under § 502(b)(4) ultimately lies with the insider." Id. at 24. Thus, Highland Capital has the burden to establish the reasonableness of its claims. Further, when the validity of an insider's contract with a corporation is at issue, the burden is on the insider "not only to prove the good faith of the transaction but also to show its inherent fairness from the viewpoint of the corporation and those interested therein." In re Marquam Inv. Corp., 942 F.2d 1462, 1465 (9th Cir. 1991) (quoting Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 306 (1939)).

317. Together, the Sub Agreements (as amended) charge Acis LP fees far exceeding the market value of the services provided under such agreements. First, the Trustee's professionals engaged in a marketing process in connection with the Brigade Motion. After conducting a diligent search of the market, the Trustee located a replacement for Highland Capital that provided the services Highland Capital previously provided the Debtor for roughly half the cost Highland Capital charged Acis LP. The Sub Agreements also significantly contributed to rendering Acis insolvent. In fact, the General Counsel of Highland Capital, Scott Ellington, admitted that as of February 7, 2018—one week after the Petition Date—Acis was insolvent or close to insolvent.<sup>42</sup>

318. Highland Capital cannot show that the exorbitant fees charged under the Sub Agreements are reasonable or that entry into such agreements was in good faith and demonstrates inherent fairness. Therefore, pursuant to section 502(b)(4), the Highland Capital Claims should be disallowed in their entirety.

C. Highland Capital Received Voidable Transfers and Holds Property of the Estate, and the Trustee is Entitled to Setoff under Section 502(d) of the Bankruptcy Code.

319. As set out more fully in the causes of action above, the Plaintiffs seek: (i) avoidance of actual and constructively fraudulent transfers and obligations pursuant to sections

<sup>42</sup> 2-7-18 Transcript at 219: 22-25 (THE COURT: Do you think Acis is in the zone of insolvency? THE WITNESS: I don't know the answer to that, but I would -- I would assume that it was -- that it's close.)

544 and 548 of the Bankruptcy Code, (ii) avoidance of preferential transfers pursuant to section 547 of the Bankruptcy Code; (iii) turnover of property the estate pursuant to section 542 of the Bankruptcy Code; and (iv) liability for the foregoing under section 550 of the Bankruptcy Code.

320. "Under section 502(d), 'the court shall disallow any claim of any entity . . . that is a transferee of a transfer avoidable under section . . . 544 [or 548] of this title, unless such . . . transferee has paid the amount, or turned over any such property.'" In re Consol. Capital Equities Corp., 143 B.R. 80, 84 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1992) (quoting 11 U.S.C. § 502(d)) (emphasis in original).<sup>43</sup> Application of section 502(d) is not restricted to cases where a fraudulent transfer has already been avoided, but rather applies to pending fraudulent transfer claims as well. In other words, the statute does not require that the transfer actually be avoided, only that it be "avoidable." Id. As a result, once a fraudulent transfer claim has been asserted, the mandatory language of section 502(d) requires bankruptcy courts to consider the fraudulent transfer issue as a component of the claims allowance process. U.S. Bank N.A. v. Verizon Communs., Inc., 761 F.3d 409, 419 (5th Cir. 2014) (finding mandatory language of section 502(d) precluded the court from resolving claims where the trustee alleged the claimant was the transferee of a fraudulent transfer). Moreover, the Court may disallow the Highland Capital Claims before adjudicating the causes of action set forth herein. See In re Heritage Org., L.L.C., 375 B.R. 230, 288-289 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2007) (finding a court order avoiding a transfer is not a prerequisite to disallowance of a claim).

321. Thus, pursuant to section 502(d) of the Bankruptcy Code, the Court should disallow the Highland Capital Claims.

<sup>43</sup> "Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) of this section, the court shall disallow any claim of any entity from which property is recoverable under section 542, 543, 550, or 553 of this title [11 USCS § 542, 543, 550, or 553] or that is a transferee of a transfer avoidable under section 522(f), 522(h), 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724(a) of this title, unless such entity or transferee has paid the amount, or turned over any such property, for which such entity or transferee is liable under section 522(i), 542, 543, 550, or 553 of this title." 11 U.S.C. § 502(d)

D. The Highland Capital Claims Should be Equitably Subordinated.

322. Section 510(c) of the Bankruptcy Code expressly authorizes subordination of the allowed claim of one creditor to the allowed claims of other creditors "under principles of equitable subordination."

323. In In re Mobile Steel Co., 563 F.2d 692 (5th Cir. 1977), the Fifth Circuit articulated what has become the most commonly accepted standard for equitable subordination of a claim. Under the Mobile Steel standard, a claim can be subordinated if the claimant engaged in some type of inequitable conduct that resulted in injury to creditors (or conferred an unfair advantage on the claimant) and if equitable subordination of the claim is consistent with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Code.

324. During the time it completely dominated control of Acis, Highland Capital clearly engaged in abundant inequitable conduct related to Acis, as well as conferring numerous unfair advantages to itself, which resulted in injury to Acis's creditors. As outlined in detail above, Highland Capital increased the amount due to Highland Capital under the Sub-Advisory Agreement, including charging amounts far in excess of appropriate market rates. This has resulted in a grossly inflated claim for Highland Capital as well as significant overpayments to Highland Capital for whatever services and value it did provide to Acis under these agreements.

325. Highland Capital was also the ringleader, and ultimate beneficiary, for the series of fraudulent schemes executed in the fall of 2017 that terminated or transferred away Acis LP's valuable rights in the ALF PMA, the ALF Shares, the Note, the 2017-7 Equity and the 2017-7 Agreements. This was done with the very specific intent to make Acis "judgment proof," as Acis's own counsel later boasted,<sup>44</sup> and in order to ensure that Terry and other creditors would never receive payment on his judgment, as Dondero has threatened.<sup>45</sup> These transfers, while very damaging to Acis LP and its creditors, also furthered Highland Capital's plan to take over Acis LP's very lucrative portfolio management business and keep it under the control of Highland Capital and Dondero. Finally, even during the Bankruptcy Cases, Highland Capital has attempted to transfer and take over Acis LP's very lucrative Universal/BVK Agreement.

326. To the extent the Highland Capital Claims are allowed in any amount, they are subject to equitable subordination and should be subordinated below all other allowed unsecured claims in the bankruptcy case.

X. OBJECTIONS TO HIGHLAND CAPITAL'S ADMINISTRATIVE CLAIM

A. Highland Capital's Administrative Claim is Subject to Disallowance for the Same Reasons the Highland Capital Claims Should be Disallowed.

1. Prevailing on the Causes of Action Set Forth Herein Mandates the Disallowance of Highland Capital's Administrative Claim.

327. In its Application, without specifically citing the causes of actions or making any reference whatsoever to the objections to the Highland Capital Claims contained herein (as they were previously asserted in the Amended Counterclaims), Highland Capital asserts that the Trustee "apparently has furthered a theory that Highland overcharged the Debtors," but must "provide evidence, not simply allegations, to rebut the prima facie case that Highland is entitled to an administrative claim." Application ¶ 33. Highland Capital then rashly contends that the Trustee "has provided no such evidence" and that "the Contracts speak for themselves and are the best evidence of the validity of the claim asserted by Highland." Id. A simple review of the causes of action herein (as well as evidence presented in connection with the involuntary hearings, confirmation hearings, and other hearings during these Bankruptcy Cases) belies its position and demonstrates otherwise.

Acis Capital Mgmt., L.P.*, Cause No. DC-17-15244, 44th District Court of Dallas County, Texas ("On October 31, 2017, counsel for Acis, Jamie Welton, called me on the telephone. In that call, Mr. Welton stated that Acis is 'judgment proof.'").

<sup>45</sup> See June 28, 2017 Dondero Dep. Tr. 262:2-8 (Ex. 101 from the involuntary trial) ("Nobody's going to let a dime go out of the firm that we don't have to pay ever to – to Josh, period. I mean, it's . . . I think it's personal[.]").

328. As is discussed below, Highland Capital must demonstrate that the services provided conferred a direct and substantial benefit on the Debtors' estates. And before Highland Capital can ask the Court to assess whether its services provided the required direct and substantial benefit, it must first demonstrate that it had the right to even charge the Debtors the amount set forth in the agreements. The causes of action asserted against Highland Capital herein, which dispute the amounts charged by Highland Capital, directly implicate the validity of, and support the disallowance of, the Administrative Claim (just as they refute Highland Capital's purported prepetition claims). The Plaintiffs therefore expressly incorporate Counts 1, 5 – 8, and 27 – 30 herein and specifically raises such Counts as objections to the Administrative Claim asserted by Highland Capital in its Application.

329. If the Plaintiffs prevail on the causes of action against Highland Capital as set forth herein, the basis for allowance of the Administrative Claim would also be invalidated. Moreover, as discussed below, based on such causes of action, the Plaintiffs are entitled to recover millions of dollars in damages, all of which may be offset against the Administrative Claim.

2. Highland Capital's Administrative Claim is Also Subject to Disallowance under Section 502(d).

330. Because Highland Capital is alleged to have received fraudulent transfers, its Administrative Claim is also subject to disallowance under section 502(d) until the property or its value has been returned to the Debtors.

331. Although Highland Capital's Application involves an administrative claim, nothing in section 502(d) limits its application to prepetition claims. MicroAge, Inc. v. Viewsonic Corp. (In re MicroAge, Inc.), 291 B.R. 503, 508 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2002). Section 502(d) by its terms applies to "any claim" and the definition of a "claim" in section 101(5) is sufficiently broad to include requests for payment of expenses of administration. Id. Because the objective of section 502(d) is to encourage transferees to return avoidable transfers to the estate, a number of courts have held that section 502(d) applies to administrative claims. See, e.g., id. at 508-12; In re Georgia Steel, 38 B.R. 829, 839-40 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1984) (applying section 502(d) and stating, "[t]he fact that [the] claim is for an administrative expense has no bearing").

332. The Plaintiffs acknowledge that courts are split on the issue of whether section 502(d) applies to administrative expenses. Compare MicroAge, Inc., 291 B.R. at 508-512 (considering split of authority and finding that "the better analysis is that § 502(d) may be raised in response to the allowance of an administrative claim"), and Georgia Steel, 38 B.R. at 839-40 (finding the fact that the claim "is for an administrative expense has no bearing" for purposes of section 502(d)), with In re Plastech Engineered Prods., 394 B.R. 147, 164 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. 2008) (concluding that "§ 502(d) does not apply to the allowance and payment of administrative expenses under § 503(b)"). Although not binding on this Court, the Plaintiffs also note that one bankruptcy court in this district has found that section 502(d) does not apply to administrative claims. Rand Energy Co. v. Del Mar Drilling Co. (In re Rand Energy Co.), 256 B.R. 712, 719 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2000) (Felsenthal, J.).

333. As described above, Highland Capital is the recipient of certain preferential payments and/or fraudulent transfers. Thus, while acknowledging the split of authority on the issue, the Plaintiffs assert that the plain language of section 502(d), as well as the policy underlying section 502(d), requires that Highland Capital's Administrative Claim be disallowed in its entirety.

3. The Indemnity Provisions Relied on by Highland Capital Are Invalid and, in Any Event, Do Not Apply to Highland Capital's Intentional Torts.

334. In the Application, Highland Capital also asserts defenses against the causes of action brought herein pursuant to its purported indemnity rights against the Debtors under section 6.03 of the Shared Services Agreement and section 4(c) of the Sub-Advisory Agreement. Application ¶ 34. Any contention by Highland Capital that it is immune from liability arising from the causes of action brought against it herein due to the indemnity provisions of the Sub Agreements lacks merit. First, the indemnity provisions cited by Highland Capital were included only in the last iteration of the Sub Agreements, in March 2017. Thus, even if valid and applicable (which they are not), such provisions do not cover actions of Highland Capital prior to March 2017. Second, to the extent that the indemnity provisions in the Sub Agreements were included in an attempt to shield Highland Capital from liability in connection with its fraudulent scheme to denude Acis (and were added for no consideration), such provisions were themselves fraudulently incurred and should be avoided pursuant to section 548 of the Bankruptcy Code and sections 24.005 and 24.006 of TUFTA.<sup>46</sup> Further, the protection Highland Capital seeks is outside the scope of the indemnity provisions, which indemnify Highland Capital in connection with its actions taken as sub-advisor under the Sub Agreements—not in connection with torts and other wrongful conduct intentionally committed against Acis as part of Highland Capital's calculated scheme to denude the estate. Finally, it is against public policy for indemnity provisions in contract to shield a party from intentional tortious conduct. See, e.g., Hamblin v.

<sup>46</sup> Notably, all versions prior to the last iteration of the Sub-Advisory Agreement (before March 2017) contained no indemnity provision; also, it is telling that the indemnity provisions were added to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and significantly amended in the Shared Services Agreement only after arbitration had been ordered in state court.

Lamont, 433 S.W.3d 51, 55 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2013, pet. denied); In re Oil Spill by the Oil Rig, 841 F. Supp. 2d 988, 1001-02 (E.D. La. 2012). Accordingly, such provisions are inapplicable as a defense to the causes of action asserted herein against Highland Capital.

B. Highland Capital Cannot Satisfy Its Burden of Proving Its Services Directly and Substantially Benefitted the Debtors' Estates.

1. Administrative Priority Status is Narrowly Construed and Only Awarded Upon a Showing of a Direct and Substantial Benefit to the Estate.

335. Under section 503(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code, an administrative expense claim shall be allowed for "the actual, necessary costs and expenses of preserving the estate." 11 U.S.C. § 503(b)(1)(A). The ultimate burden of proof is on Highland Capital to establish it is entitled to an administrative priority claim pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 503(b). See In re Transamerican Natural Gas Corp., 978 F.2d 1409, 1416 (5th Cir. 1992). Further, because section 503 administrative claims are priority claims, which are entitled to special treatment, section 503 must be narrowly construed. See In re Templeton, 154 B.R. 930, 934 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2009); see also In re Federated Dep't Stores, Inc., 270 F.3d 994, 1000 (6th Cir. 2001) ("Claims for administrative expenses under § 503(b) are strictly construed because priority claims reduce the funds available for creditors and other claimants.").

336. At a minimum, Highland Capital must establish that "(1) the claim arises from a transaction with the [debtor]; and (2) the goods or services supplied enhanced the ability of the [debtor's] business to function." See Total Minatome Corp. v. Jack/Wade Drilling, Inc. (In re Jack/Wade Drilling, Inc.), 258 F.3d 385, 387 (5th Cir. 2001) (citing Transamerican, 978 F.2d at 1416); see also ASARCO, Inc. v. Elliott Mgmt. (In re ASARCO, LLC), 650 F.3d 593, 601 (5th Cir. 2011) ("Claim under this section 'generally stem from voluntary transactions with third parties who lend goods or services necessary to the successful reorganization of the debtor's estate.'") (quoting Jack/Wade Drilling, 258 F.3d at 387).

337. Moreover, the benefit is measured from the point of view of the bankruptcy estate, not that of the applicant. In re Premium Well Drilling, Inc., 2012 Bankr. LEXIS 1554, at *9 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. Apr. 10, 2012). "The focus on allowance of administrative claims which enjoy priority over other creditors is to prevent unjust enrichment of the estate. It is not to compensate the creditor . . . for his or her loss." In re Am. Plumbing & Mech., Inc., 323 B.R. 442, 462 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2005) (emphasis in original).

2. Highland Capital Cannot Demonstrate It Conferred a Direct and Substantial Benefit on the Debtors' Estates.

338. As set forth herein, as it had done prior to these Bankruptcy Cases, following entry of the Orders for Relief, Highland Capital continued perpetrating its scheme to steal, and otherwise attempted to damage, Acis's business—in order to minimize value for creditors and ensure that Acis could not successfully reorganize—and to line its own pockets. Aside from Highland Capital's actions in sending notices of optional redemption to liquidate the CLOs (without Court approval and in violation of the automatic stay), following entry of the Orders for Relief, Highland Capital also actively mismanaged the Acis CLOs to undermine the business of the Debtors, as evidenced by, inter alia, the vast disparity between the trades made in CLOs 3, 4 5, and 6, as opposed to CLO 7, in 2018, as testified to by Terry at the second confirmation hearing. See Dec. 12, 2018 Hr'g Tr. (AM) at pp. 19-35.

339. Additionally, while mismanaging CLOs 3, 4 5, and 6, Highland Capital sought to carry out its plan "to transfer the BVK investment management agreement from Acis LP to another Highland-affiliated manager."<sup>47</sup> As explained herein, Highland Capital's attempt to steal BVK's business from Acis began from nearly day one of these Bankruptcy Cases and continued

even after Highland Capital was terminated as sub-advisor on August 1, 2018—when Highland Capital no longer had any legitimate reason to communicate with Universal or BVK.

340. Highland Capital's actions during the pendency of these Bankruptcy Cases demonstrate that Highland Capital did not service the Acis CLOs in a way that "enhanced the ability of the [debtor's] business to function." Transamerican, 978 F.2d at 1416. Indeed, Highland Capital acted to destroy the Debtors' business—therefore, Highland Capital's request for allowance of its Administrative Claim must be denied.

341. In its Application, Highland Capital essentially asserts that it provided services to the Debtors on a postpetition basis pursuant to various prepetition agreements and, therefore, the expenses are entitled to administrative priority. In order to qualify as an administrative expense, however, Highland Capital must show that its claim arose postpetition "as a result of actions by the trustee that benefitted the estate." Id. Further, although the terms of the Debtors' prepetition contracts may be probative of the reasonable value of postpetition services, they are not dispositive. In re Am. Plumbing & Mech., Inc., 323 B.R. at 462. Indeed, "all that the estate is required to pay is the reasonable value of those services which were rendered." Id. (emphasis in original) (citing NLRB v. Bildisco & Bildisco, 465 U.S. 513, 531, 104 S. Ct. 1188, 79 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1984)). Consequently, the provisions of the prepetition contracts do not automatically and dispositively translate into an allowed administrative claim. Highland Capital must still demonstrate a quantifiable benefit to the estate.

342. Highland Capital's assertion that its costs were incurred postpetition fails to satisfy its burden of proving entitlement to administrative priority. Specifically, aside from merely referencing the Sub-Agreements and the Universal/BVK Agreement, and contending that monies owed to it under such agreements are an administrative expense, Highland Capital fails to show that (i) such costs were necessary for the preservation of the Debtors' estate, and (ii) the Debtors received any benefit, let alone a direct and substantial benefit, as a result of such services and expenses.

3. The Amount Charged by Highland Capital Was Inflated and Unnecessary.

343. Further, even if Highland Capital could show that, rather than undermining Acis's business, it provided postpetition services that enhanced the ability of Acis to function, to the extent the rates Highland Capital charged Acis were inflated or above market, the amounts charged to Acis under the Sub Agreements did not benefit the estates or its creditors, and such inflated amounts were therefore not necessary. See NL Indus., Inc. v. GHR Energy Corp., 940 F.2d 957, 966 (5th Cir. 1991) ("Courts have construed the words 'actual' and 'necessary' narrowly: the debt must benefit the estate and its creditors."). Indeed, at the July 6, 2018 hearing, regarding approval of the break-up fee and replacement of Highland Capital as sub-servicer with Oaktree, J.P. Sevilla, assistant general counsel for Highland Capital, testified that Highland Capital would reduce its rates charged to Acis LP for sub-servicing from 35 basis points to 17.5 basis points, in order to match competing offers:

Q Okay. Would Highland be willing to reduce its fee during the pendency of the bankruptcy, maybe without its rights to assert the validity of the contract, but would Highland otherwise be willing to assert -- to reduce its fees during the pendency of the bankruptcy?

A I think at the very least Highland would match Saratoga or whatever the 17.5 bps offer is. Again, reserving all rights, but in order to stay in the deal and to establish Highland's commitment to this deal, we would do it for 17-1/2 basis points, no question.

July 6, 2018 Hr'g Tr. at pp. 243-44. Moreover, the effective rate for such services charged by Brigade and Cortland also approached 17.5 basis points.<sup>48</sup> Accordingly, notwithstanding the objections otherwise raised herein, and assuming the services provided to Acis LP enhanced, rather than undermined, the ability of Acis's business to function, such amounts should be reduced to reflect a rate of at most 17.5 basis points.

<sup>48</sup> Pursuant to the Third Amended Joint Plan, Brigade agreed to provide sub-advisory and shared services to the Acis CLOs for 15 basis points (and decreasing after one year). See Docket No. 661 at pp. 28, 136; see also Dec. 11, 2018 (PM) Hr'g Tr. at 89 & Dec. 12, 2018 (AM) Hr'g Tr. at 62.

4. The Plaintiffs Dispute Highland Capital's Calculation of its Administrative Claim.

344. The Plaintiffs further object to Highland Capital's calculation of the amount of the Administrative Claim. Subject to the objections raised herein, in the Amended Disclosure Statement Pursuant to Section 1125 of the United States Bankruptcy Code with Respect to the Second Amended Joint Plan for Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC [Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 621] (the "Disclosure Statement"), the Trustee estimated that under the terms of the Sub Agreements, Highland Capital's alleged Administrative Claim would be approximately $2,612,574.00, rather than $3,007,678.41. Highland Capital fails to explain or substantiate this discrepancy. The Administrative Claim also includes $543,545.88 for expenses. Highland Capital fails to show that these alleged expenses were incurred or payable under the Sub Agreements. See In re Packard Props., Ltd., 118 B.R. 61, 63 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1990) ("Since this claim is a request for payment of administrative expenses, the [creditor] carries the burden of proof throughout the entire proceeding."). Therefore, in addition to the objections herein, the Plaintiffs also object to Highland Capital's calculation of its purported Administrative Claim.

C. Highland Capital Is Not Entitled to Payment of Any Allowed Administrative Claim Because Acis's Right of Offset and Recoupment May Reduce or Eliminate Its Administrative Claim.

345. Even if the Court were to determine that Highland Capital is entitled to an allowed Administrative Claim, it should not be entitled to payment because Acis has rights of offset and recoupment that may be applied under section 558 of the Bankruptcy Code to reduce or eliminate any allowed Administrative Claim.<sup>49</sup> As set forth above, Highland Capital charged Acis excessive and unreasonable fees for its services, and Acis has asserted a number of causes of action against Highland Capital for such overcharges, including for recovery of overcharges resulting from ultra vires actions, turnover of unauthorized payments, money had and received, conversion, fraudulent transfer, civil conspiracy, breach of contract, and breach of fiduciary duty. As a result of these overcharges, the Debtors' estates suffered many millions of dollars in damages which should be offset against any valid administrative claim awarded to Highland Capital. Indeed, the causes of action against Highland Capital may offset, or eliminate altogether, any right of recovery Highland Capital may have against the Debtors' estates on account of any Administrative Claim.

D. To the Extent Allowed, Highland Capital's Administrative Claim Should Also Be Equitably Subordinated.

346. In addition to applying equitable subordination to prepetition claims, courts have equitably subordinated administrative claims when the claimant acted in ways to harm the estate. See, e.g., Principal Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Langhorne (In re 848 Brickell Ltd.), 243 B.R.142, 149 (S.D. Fla. 1998) (holding that while "pursuit of one's legal rights may not be grounds for equitable subordination, the lower court's findings that [the claimant's] protracted and abusive litigation tactics harmed the estate by causing it to incur about $400,000 in fees" justified equitable subordination of its administrative claim).

347. For the same reasons described above with respect to Highland Capital's prepetition claims, Highland Capital's Administrative Claim should also be equitably subordinated to the extent allowed. Further, during these Bankruptcy Cases, the Debtors' estates and the Reorganized Debtors have incurred substantial administrative fees in responding to the protracted and abusive litigation tactics of Highland Capital, including arguing for (and against) injunctive relief to prevent the liquidation of the CLOs and litigating the numerous appeals initiated by Highland Capital against the Trustee. Such litigation tactics by Highland Capital were attempts to thwart the reorganization of the Debtors, damage the estate, and harm its creditors. Accordingly, the Court should equitably subordinate Highland Capital's Administrative Claim. See Principal Mut. Life Ins. Co., 243 B.R. at 149.

<sup>49</sup> The Plan provided for the payment of allowed administrative claims on (i) the later of the effective date or the tenth business day after the administrative expense is allowed, or (ii) as otherwise agreed in writing between the Reorganized Debtor, or as otherwise ordered by the Bankruptcy Court. See Case No. 18-30264, Docket No. 660 at 11, § 3.01(b).

348. Thus, to the extent the Highland Capital's Administrative Claim is allowed in any amount, it should be subordinated below all other allowed claims in these Bankruptcy Cases.

VI. PRAYER

Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court:

(i) enter judgment declaring that Expense Overpayments made to Highland Capital in excess of 20% of Revenue and any agreements supporting such overpayments were ultra vires and, thus, void or voidable;

(ii) enter judgment against Highland Capital for the recovery of any ultra vires payments made to Highland Capital;

(iii) enter judgment against Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland Advisor, Highland Holdings, and Highland Management for the avoidance and recovery of transfers fraudulently made and obligations fraudulently incurred and for civil conspiracy in connection with such fraudulent transfers and schemes;

(iv) enter judgment against Highland Capital, Highland Holdings, and Highland Management for avoidance and recovery of preferential transfers received;

(v) enter judgment against Highland Capital for tortious interference with contract;

(vi) enter judgment against Highland Capital for breach of contract;

(xi) enter judgment against Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland Advisor, Highland Management, and Highland Holdings for all attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection with the prosecution of this Adversary Proceeding and for all allowed professionals' fees and expenses incurred by the estates in the Bankruptcy Cases;

(xii) establish a constructive trust for all benefits unjustly received by that Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland Advisor, Highland Management and Highland Holdings;

(xiii) declare that Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Highland Advisor, Highland Management and Highland Holdings are alter egos of each other, or that the corporate for should otherwise be disregarded, and each is fully liable for any judgment entered for the Plaintiffs in this Adversary Proceeding;

(xiv) disallow, expunge and/or subordinate the Highland Capital Claims;

(xv) deny, disallow, and/or subordinate Highland Capital's Administrative Claim; and

(xvi) grant any other such relief that the Plaintiffs may show themselves to be justly entitled in law or in equity.

1 interest in the fund?
2 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation.
3 A. It's because they're the portfolio manager,
4 and they have their duties to the fund.
5 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) But you previously
6 testified that their portfolio management role is solely 7 with respect to managing the portfolio, right? Isn't 8 that correct?
9 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation.
10 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Well, let me ask you.
11 Isn't what Highland does is serve only as a portfolio
12 manager? Do they play any other role in the operation
13 or management of HCLOF?
14 A. Well, HCLOF, as you know, is a Guernsey 15 entity, and we have lots of service providers apart from 16 the portfolio manager.
17 Q. And which one of those sit in on your board
18 meetings?
19 A. Well, we have State Street there, obviously, 20 because they're the administrator. We have the 21 custodian.
22 Q. They sit in on every board meeting?
23 A. Of course.
24 Q. Okay.
25 A. The custodian dials in, generally, from

Page 47

1 Ireland to give their report.
2 Q. And they sit through the entire meeting?
3 A. Not always. Sometimes they do. Actually,
4 no, they tend to come just for their report. And, of 5 course, when we're dealing with auditors, they will come
6 and report to us as well. So --
7 Q. Does PWC sit through the meetings?
8 A. No, not all of them, but they'll be there for 9 the meeting where we're discussing the accounts.
10 Q. So both of -- PWC and State Street only sit 11 through a portion of the meetings, but Highland always 12 sits through the entire meeting --
13 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation.
14 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) -- is that correct?
15 A. Not always.
16 Q. So now you're saying they don't sit through 17 the entire meeting?
18 A. No. What I said was that they don't if they 19 have other things to do or if they have commitments or 20 they have to go on other calls or they're traveling,
21 that sort of thing.
22 Q. But other than they're not being able to 23 attend for some reason, they otherwise will sit through 24 the entire board meetings; is that correct?
25 A. Pretty much, yes.

1 Q. And who is it from Highland that sits in 2 those meetings?
3 A. It's generally Hunter Covitz. Tim Cournoyer
4 will sometimes join. They're the main contacts we have.
5 Q. Okay. You mentioned there's only two members
6 of the board, correct?
7 A. Yes.
8 Q. And do you vote on all issues?
9 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form.
10 A. We don't have a formal voting procedure
11 because it's just the two of us and we're sitting around 12 a table. It's in the nature of our relationship that we 13 discuss things. We don't have a formal vote. We come 14 to agreement by discussion.
15 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) On everything?
16 A. Well, that's generally the way that we 17 operate. You know, our role is not to be 18 confrontational with each other. Our role is to look 19 after the fund in the best way that we can. So we don't 20 row or argue; we discuss issues and come to a consensual 21 decision.
22 Q. Is there anything you've ever disagreed with 23 Mr. Scott on any issue?
24 A. I can't think of an out-and-out disagreement.
25 Q. Did you ever have a disagreement with

Page 49

1 Highland or its advice?
2 A. Again, I don't think that I can recall a 3 particular disagreement. That's not to say that we 4 don't have robust discussions and challenge because, of 5 course, we do, and that's the purpose of the quarterly
6 board meetings and all the various reports. We do
7 interrogate them.
8 Q. But you've never had a disagreement with him?
9 A. I can't recall that we've disagreed.
10 Q. And you've always accepted their advice?
11 A. Yes. On the basis that they are the experts,
12 and it's their role to do what they do.
13 Q. Now, what type of decisions do you make for 14 the -- as a member of the board that are not based on 15 the portfolio manager's advice?
16 A. You mean outside of portfolio management all 17 together? So just day-to-day running?
18 Q. I'm asking you.
19 A. -- of the fund?
20 Q. I don't know what things you might decide on 21 that doesn't involve the portfolio manager.
22 A. Well, obviously, we have the relationship
23 with the administrator. We had what -- for instance,
24 when we were set up, we were going to be a listed fund
25 on the stock exchange, so we had a registrar company

HEATHER BESTWICK

14 (Pages 50 to 53)

Page 50 1 called Computer Share. We didn't get listed, we didn't 2 go down that route, so there was no point in paying 3 another service provider money for doing something we 4 didn't need so we decided that the best thing would be 5 to terminate Computer Share. 6 So we discussed that with Highland. I think, 7 you know, we -- the decisions that we make, obviously, 8 we will make as a board, but we do it in discussion with 9 Highland, the portfolio manager. 10 Q. Is it pretty much fair to say that most 11 decisions that you do make as board member are in or 12 through discussions with Highland as portfolio manager? 13 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 14 A. I think there's some pretty basic sort of 15 admin-type things that we get on with without 16 necessarily discussing with Highland, but that's just 17 the nature of the fund. 18 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) But anything substantive 19 Highland is involved and you discuss it with them; is 20 that what I understand? 21 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 22 A. I think we would always want to involve 23 Highland and the portfolio manager in discussions about 24 anything substantive. 25 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) When was HCLOF formed?		Page 52 1 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Ms. Bestwick, we're back 2 on the record. 3 A. Okay. 4 Q. You mentioned -- you mentioned earlier that 5 Highland, as the promoter, selected you and Mr. Scott. 6 Do you remember that? 7 A. Yes. 8 Q. Who makes the decision to fire you or 9 Mr. Scott? 10 A. Well, that will be the shareholders who have 11 that authority. 12 Q. Okay. And those are the shareholders you 13 mentioned before, Harbour Vest and the DAF, as well as 14 the 2 percent interest held by -- 15 A. Yes. 16 Q. -- the Highland entities? 17 A. Yes. 18 Q. So essentially Highland controls that 19 decision on firing because they control the majority of 20 the investments; is that correct? 21 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 22 A. Well, no. If it is put to a resolution of 23 the shareholders, my understanding is that it would have 24 to be a 75 percent decision. 25 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And what's that based
Page 51 1 A. 2015. I can't tell you the exact date. 2 Q. And under what circumstances? 3 A. With a view to being part of the structure 4 that we've described. 5 Q. And this is your -- this is your first 6 involvement with Highland, correct? 7 A. Yes. 8 Q. Is it Bill's first involvement with Highland? 9 Do you know? 10 A. I believe so, but you'd have to ask him for 11 sure. 12 Q. And do you or Bill have any other connections 13 with Highland or any of the Highland affiliates? 14 A. No. 15 MR. WIELEBINSKI: You know what, can we 16 take a short break? We've gone now for almost an 17 hour -- or a little over an hour. 18 MR. MALONEY: How long do you want to 19 take? 20 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Five minutes. 21 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Off the record at 22 9:18. This is Disk 1, Volume 1. 23 (Break taken.) 24 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: On the record at 25 9:35. This is Disk 2, Volume 1.		Page 53 1 on, that understanding? 2 A. Because it's a special resolution rather than 3 an ordinary resolution. 4 Q. And that's contained where, that that 5 requirement -- 6 A. In the Articles of Association. 7 Q. Remember you had mentioned that HCLOF had 8 initially hired the Gardere Foley law firm -- 9 A. Yes. 10 Q. -- and they that were involved representing 11 you for some period of time in this bankruptcy? 12 A. Yes. 13 Q. Who made the decision to hire Gardere Foley? 14 A. I think that was Highland. 15 Q. It was a recommendation made by Highland, and 16 you, as the board member, and Mr. Scott decided to 17 accept that recommendation? 18 A. Yes. Because when we were initially told 19 about the proceedings, then clearly we weren't aware 20 that the fund was involved. 21 Q. You weren't even aware when the bankruptcies 22 were filed that you had some involvement in that? When 23 the bankruptcy was filed, it was Highland that had to 24 tell you that, hey, you guys need to get involved. 25 You're involved in this?

Page 54 1 A. Highland did tell the fund that that was the 2 case, yes. 3 Q. And then they told you to hire Gardere? 4 A. Well, no. I think that the firm was already 5 instructed to represent Highland. 6 Q. And then they told you that you needed to 7 retain Gardere as well for your interests in the -- as 8 it related to the bankruptcy? 9 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form. 10 A. We had common interests in that we needed to 11 have the fund out of the mess, so to that extent, yes. 12 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And who, then, told you 13 that you needed to get King &amp; Spalding? 14 MS. O'NEIL: Objection. Caution the 15 witness not to divulge attorney-client privileged 16 communications. 17 A. I think as any discussion of the board, it 18 would have involved a discussion between Bill and 19 myself. 20 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) With any Highland 21 involvement? 22 A. I think there probably was a discussion had 23 at some point with Highland, but that's not to say that 24 we didn't have a discussion just between the two of us. 25 Q. And do you recall specifically when you and		Page 56 1 objection to the extent it calls for speculation. 2 A. I -- 3 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Excuse me. Harbour Vest 4 is disclosed in information that's publicly available in 5 Guernsey, is it not, as an investor in the fund? 6 A. Well, it's on the shareholder registry, but 7 that's not a public document. 8 Q. But it is disclosed in that information, 9 correct? 10 A. Yes. It has to be, as a matter of Guernsey 11 law. 12 Q. And it's been disclosed through this 13 proceeding as well, correct? 14 A. Yes. 15 Q. So can you speculate as to a reason why they 16 wouldn't want their name mentioned and why you actually 17 didn't mention it when your counsel asked you questions? 18 MR. MALONEY: Objection, calls for 19 speculation. 20 A. I can give you my view on it. 21 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Do you mind? 22 A. I think that they have been what you would 23 call a passive investor throughout. They haven't wanted 24 particular involvement, so it could be argued, I 25 suppose, that they want to continue in that sort of role
Page 55 1 Bill made the decision to essentially remove -- or end 2 the relationship with Gardere Foley? 3 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. You 4 can answer. 5 A. I don't have that information in my head, I'm 6 afraid. 7 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Do you remember when 8 your counsel mentioned something about Harbour Vest 9 being -- asking that its name not be raised and that it 10 be referred to in a more ambiguous way? 11 A. Yes. 12 Q. Do you know why? Why is Harbour Vest 13 concerned about its name being mentioned? 14 A. I don't know the reason from Harbour Vest, 15 but -- 16 Q. Did they talk to you about it at all? 17 A. No. 18 Q. Did they talk to Bill about it, to your 19 knowledge? 20 A. Not to my knowledge. 21 Q. Can you think of a reason why they wouldn't 22 want to have their name mentioned considering that it's 23 public information in a number of -- from a number of 24 sources, including in Guernsey? 25 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form, and		Page 57 1 as a passive investor. 2 Q. As a board member for HCLOF, who do you serve 3 for the benefit of? 4 A. We serve for the benefit of the company, and 5 that is generally taken to mean the best economic 6 interests of the shareholders as a whole. 7 Q. Is it fair to say that your role is to 8 attempt to maximize the recovery for your shareholders? 9 A. Well, our role is to make sure that the 10 company is run properly; and, obviously, if you're 11 running an investment fund, then the idea is to maximize 12 returns for investors. 13 Q. What exactly does HCLOF own? 14 A. It owns investments, equity strips, and CLOs. 15 Q. And does it have -- do you know how many CLOs 16 are involved in this matter that we're talking about? 17 A. Yes. Five. Five or six. 18 Q. And does HCLOF own equity strips in all five 19 CLOs? 20 A. Yes. 21 Q. Are you certain of that? 22 A. I think there's one that is being liquidated, 23 so to the extent that that has happened. 24 Q. I'm not trying to trick you on that. But 25 your understanding is that HCLOF owns equity strips in

Page 58 1 all five CLOs? 2 A. Yes. Yes. 3 Q. What involvement, if any, does HCLOF have 4 with ACIS Capital Management? 5 A. Now? 6 Q. Yes. 7 A. Well, it's the -- it was the portfolio 8 manager, but now it isn't. And ACIS is working with 9 Brigade on the underlying CLOs. 10 Q. Including your equity strips? 11 A. Yes. 12 Q. Are you familiar with the series of transfers 13 and transactions in the fall of 2017 that involved ACIS 14 and HCLOF? 15 A. Yes. 16 Q. And were you involved in those transactions 17 and transfers? 18 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form; vague. 19 You can answer if you know the transactions specifically 20 that he's talking about. 21 A. Well, as a director, we were involved in the 22 incoming new investor, and I think I mentioned earlier 23 that involved, as a condition precedent to the closing 24 of that deal, that ACIS be replaced as portfolio 25 manager.		Page 60 1 A. The fact that it was going to help in the 2 marketing of the business going forward and that it was 3 a condition precedent to the new investor coming in. 4 Q. Now, if I told you in discussions with 5 Harbour Vest they disclaimed any condition precedent to 6 their investment and said they didn't care one way or 7 the other, would that surprise you? 8 A. That would certainly be news to me, because 9 we were advised that that was the case. 10 Q. By Highland? 11 A. By Highland. 12 Q. And subsequent to your first being advised by 13 Highland about this condition precedent, have you ever 14 spoken to Harbour Vest about its investment and the 15 condition precedent? 16 A. No, we've never discussed or spoken to 17 Harbour Vest about that. 18 Q. When were you first made aware of the Terry 19 litigation in the United States involving Mr. Terry and 20 the Highland entities? 21 A. It was the middle of April this year. 22 Q. You never knew about it before that time 23 period? 24 A. No. 25 Q. Do you know if Mr. Scott did?
Page 59 1 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And your testimony is 2 that Harbour Vest made that a condition precedent? 3 A. That's what the board revised, yes. 4 Q. And they were advised that by whom? 5 A. By the portfolio manager, by Highland. 6 Q. And what did you do as a board member to 7 verify that? 8 (At this time Mr. Shaw enters the room.) 9 A. We listened to the rationale and were happy 10 to accept the advice on the basis that the portfolio 11 manager was acting in the best interest of the investors 12 as they were supposed to do. So we were happy to accept 13 that to be the case. 14 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Did you do any 15 independent verification of that information conveyed to 16 you by Highland regarding Harbour Vest? 17 A. No. And it wouldn't be something that would 18 be in the normal course of business that you would seek 19 independent verification of what your portfolio manager 20 was advising. 21 Q. Do you know why the Portfolio Management 22 Agreement of HCLOF was transferred from ACIS to a 23 Highland affiliate or a Highland-related entity? 24 A. For the reason that I've just explained. 25 Q. That was the only reason, as far as you know?		Page 61 1 A. I don't believe he did, but you'd have to ask 2 him. 3 Q. And who made you aware of the Terry 4 litigation? 5 A. Highland. 6 Q. And what did they tell you? 7 A. That there had been a proceeding in a Dallas 8 court the previous week to the call which meant that we 9 couldn't do the resets which had been anticipated and 10 that it was causing damage to the fund. 11 Q. And who told you that? 12 A. I believe it was Isaac Leventon. I think he 13 was on the call. It was a conference call, but I think 14 it was probably Mr. Leventon who explained it. 15 Q. And this was in April of this year? 16 A. Yes. 17 Q. It was the first time you heard anything 18 about the Terry litigation? 19 A. Yes. 20 Q. And was it a special board meeting when he 21 told you this? 22 A. No. It was a conference call, an update 23 call. We'd been asked to join a call for an update. 24 Q. I'm sorry, I didn't hear you. You'd been 25 asked to join a call?

Page 62 1 A. A conference call by way of update. 2 Q. Would that not be a special board meeting? 3 A. Well, no, not if it involved others. There 4 are certain formalities around board meetings, and it 5 was an update call. 6 Q. Okay. Who all was on that call? Do you 7 recall? 8 A. Obviously, a few people from Highland. I 9 think probably Hunter might have been on the call, Tim 10 Cournoyer was probably on the call, and then Bill and 11 myself. 12 Q. And what you've testified to was that they 13 told you two things. One, there was a proceeding in a 14 Dallas court involving Mr. Terry and that they -- 15 A. Involving ACIS. 16 Q. Involving ACIS? 17 A. Yes. Yes. 18 Q. Did they say it also involved Mr. Terry? 19 A. I don't think so. I think it was specific to 20 ACIS. 21 Q. And it wouldn't allow you to do the resets 22 anticipated? 23 A. Yes. 24 Q. Are those the ones with Mizuho? 25 A. Yes. We've been talking about resets		Page 64 1 A. I think we were told that things were influx, 2 and so we asked to be kept updated. 3 Q. But you didn't ask for any of the pleadings 4 and you didn't receive any of the pleadings at that 5 time? 6 A. No. Because we weren't aware that it 7 particularly involved the fund in a way that it has 8 transpired. 9 Q. It really wasn't that important. You just 10 know there was a proceeding going on, correct? 11 A. Well, no. 12 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form. You can 13 answer. 14 A. The fact that our investments were not able 15 to be reset as anticipated obviously was an impact on 16 the fund. 17 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) For some reason I 18 thought that those Mizuho resets were to occur in 19 January or February. Wasn't that the case? 20 A. We had been talking about resets throughout 21 2017, so I'm -- 22 Q. Understood. 23 A. -- not quite sure. 24 Q. Now I'm talking about January or February of 25 2018. Weren't they to have occurred by that point?
Page 63 1 throughout 2017 as part of the general board meetings, 2 updates, etcetera, and I think there was a contract with 3 Mizuho being talked about. 4 Q. And did they tell you anything else about the 5 litigation? 6 MS. O'NEIL: Object to the extent it may 7 call for attorney-client communications. 8 MR. MALONEY: I would join in that. 9 A. I think it was an update. There were 10 proceedings in a court in Dallas. 11 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) There were no attorneys 12 involved other -- well, strike. Strike. 13 Was Mr. Maloney involved on the call? 14 A. No. 15 Q. Was Ms. O'Neil or anybody from her firm 16 involved in the call? 17 A. No. 18 Q. So it was just those two pieces of 19 information that were shared with you at that point? 20 A. (Nods head affirmatively.) 21 Q. Did you ask for any -- you have to 22 acknowledge yes. 23 A. Sorry. Yes. 24 Q. Did you ask for any additional information at 25 that time?		Page 65 1 A. I'd need to refresh my memory with board 2 minutes, etcetera, but I think the timing was probably 3 year end, beginning of 2018. 4 Q. Why was it important for Highland to share 5 this information with you in April? 6 MS. O'NEIL: Objection to the extent it 7 calls for disclosure of privileged attorney-client 8 communication. 9 MR. MALONEY: I also to the extent -- 10 I'd also object to the extent it calls for speculation. 11 To the extent the witness knows why Highland said, you 12 can answer. 13 A. We have update calls with Highland. This was 14 an update call about -- 15 COURT REPORTER: About what? 16 THE WITNESS: An event. 17 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Did they ever tell you 18 how they proposed to address this situation? 19 MS. O'NEIL: Objection to the extent it 20 calls for disclosure of attorney-client privileged 21 communications. 22 MR. MALONEY: I join in that, and the 23 instruction to avoid disclosing communications and 24 advice you received from counsel. 25 A. I think it would be difficult for me to

Page 66 1 respond because, of course, we do, then, take advice 2 from counsel about precisely what you're talking about, 3 the options. 4 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Did you ask the 5 question, What are we going to do to clean up this 6 situation? 7 A. I think we asked the question, How are we 8 involved and what is the impact in all of this? 9 Q. And other than the reset, how did they answer 10 that question? 11 A. Well, it was -- it was around the reset and 12 the fact that that was costing the fund money. 13 Q. How did you understand the -- you couldn't do 14 the resets at this point. That was going to be a 15 problem for the fund, correct? 16 A. Yes. 17 Q. How did you understand at that point you were 18 going to move forward in connection with this -- the 19 current situation? What were you, as a board member, 20 going to do for the company as a result? 21 A. Well, given that this was something we needed 22 more information about, we had asked Highland to keep us 23 advised and informed. So we were waiting for more 24 information as to what the options were. 25 Q. At that point, when you were advised of this,		Page 68 1 the problems that were encountered that was causing the 2 funds not to be able to do resets? 3 A. I can't remember the exact timing, but the 4 question was asked, Are our shareholders advised? And 5 the question [sic] was yes. So that confirmed the way 6 that the portfolio manager is in charge of investor 7 relations. 8 Q. Why was Harbour Vest brought into the fund? 9 A. I can't speak to any of the discussions prior 10 to them coming in, because that was very much led by 11 Highland. If you look at -- the original intention with 12 the fund was that we were going to be a listed entity 13 listed on the London Stock Exchange and that was how we 14 were going to increase the investor base. 15 The market changed on NAV, went down quite 16 substantially, and there came a point when it was clear 17 that achieving a listing wasn't going to happen. So you 18 then have to decide how you're going to increase your 19 investor base. So having an investor like Harbour Vest 20 come on board is a sensible way to grow your investor 21 base. A very well-known house. 22 Q. The losses were actually pretty severe for 23 the fund, weren't they? 24 A. Uh-huh. Yes. 25 Q. And overall this fund has not performed very
Page 67 1 did you immediately call Harbour Vest and advise them of 2 the situation? 3 A. No. 4 Q. Why not? 5 A. It wasn't even considered as an appropriate 6 thing to do. 7 Q. Well, wouldn't it have been material to them 8 to know that there was a problem in the United States 9 that was causing an inability to proceed with resets 10 that would impact them? 11 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation 12 witnesses knowledge. 13 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Let me ask it this way: 14 Would the inability to do the resets impact the Harbour 15 Vest investment in your fund? 16 A. I think to go back to the question that you 17 asked, Highland is the portfolio manager. They have 18 investor relations as part of their role. That's how we 19 understand it. That's part of what they do as portfolio 20 manager. So to the extent that there's any 21 communication with shareholders, then we would expect 22 and assume that that is something that Highland does 23 rather than the directors. 24 Q. Did you ask Highland to make sure they did 25 that, that they reached out and advised Harbour Vest of		Page 69 1 well, has it? 2 A. It's certainly improved after the losses and 3 was doing far better. And if you were an external 4 investor, you wouldn't come in unless you had a belief 5 that the fund was going to carry on performing well. 6 Q. You know, my broker answers my questions much 7 like you did: That my performance is a lot better after 8 I've suffered a large loss. The losses were in the 25 9 percent range, weren't they, within the first six weeks 10 of the funding? 11 A. Yes, they were. 12 Q. So thank goodness there was a better 13 performance after that. 14 A. Yes. 15 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form. 16 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And -- but overall, 17 since the formation of the fund, has the performance 18 been above average, average, mediocre? How would you 19 describe it? 20 A. I would describe it as challenging in that 21 period when the NAV was going down fairly substantially. 22 And, obviously, you want to know from the portfolio 23 manager that they're doing all they can to improve the 24 performance of the fund, and that was the role of the 25 portfolio manager and the reports that we had from them

That's one of the firms you use? 16 A. Yes. 17 Q. And what was the nature of the lawsuit? Can 18 you describe that to me, your understanding? 19 A. Yes. Well, our understanding -- my 20 understanding is that the losses that have been -- 21 COURT REPORTER: Wait. Hang on. Losses 22 what? 23 A. The losses that have been caused to the fund 24 as a result of the ACIS bankruptcy have been very 25 severe, as I'm sure you know. And as directors of the		Page 72 1 Q. Highland told you that. And did you do any 2 independent verification or calculations on your own to 3 see what the losses were? 4 A. No, I don't think that we would have been 5 equipped to do that. And, again, we're perfectly 6 comfortable to rely on the advice and information 7 provided by the portfolio manager. 8 Q. What do you believe the losses are today on a 9 weekly and daily basis? Is it still about the same 10 amount? 11 A. I don't know the actual amount. I think it's 12 probably not as much as that, but I don't know. 13 Q. And $300,000 a week. Five, six, seven 14 million dollars by this point of the year; is that a 15 good estimate. Is my math -- 16 A. Uh-huh. Yes. 17 Q. Okay. 18 A. Yes. 19 Q. Pretty -- pretty significant loss you're 20 claiming. 21 A. Yes. 22 Q. And it's because you can't do anything with 23 your investments; is that your testimony? 24 A. Well -- 25 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form and
Page 71 1 fund, we have a duty if we think that there is any 2 opportunity to recover those losses, then obviously we 3 have to investigate our options. 4 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Now, you're not talking 5 about the losses caused in the beginning of the fund, 6 correct? The loss as much as 25 percent of the net 7 asset value in the first six weeks -- 8 A. No. 9 Q. -- those aren't the losses you're referring 10 to? 11 A. No. 12 Q. What losses are you referring to? 13 A. The losses as a result of being -- the fund 14 being dragged into all of this litigation, and the fact 15 that our investments are effectively tied up and we 16 can't do what we want with them. 17 Q. And Mr. Scott previously testified that the 18 losses were accruing at $59,000 a day, $300,000 a week. 19 Are you familiar with that testimony? 20 A. Yes. Yes. 21 Q. Do you agree with that testimony? 22 A. That's certainly the information we were 23 given, yes. 24 Q. By whom? 25 A. By Highland.		Page 73 1 foundation. Go ahead. You can answer. 2 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Well, help me again. 3 What's the basis of that loss? 4 A. We cannot do what we would like to do and as 5 we're entitled to do under the indentures which govern 6 the CLOs. We're engaged in the litigation, and 7 obviously, therefore, have lots of costs around counsel, 8 etcetera. So it's all of the costs around the 9 litigation on top of not being able to do the things we 10 would like to with those investments. 11 Q. And what is it you'd like to do with those 12 investments? 13 A. Well, we were aiming for resets, which was 14 stalled, and, of course -- again, I'm not an expert in 15 CLOs, but I'm advised that being unable to do a reset 16 means that our investments aren't performing -- 17 Q. Have you looked -- 18 A. -- as they should. 19 Q. I'm sorry, I didn't mean to interrupt. Have 20 you looked at other options to mitigate your losses? 21 A. We've certainly attended mediation with a 22 view to hopefully settling, but that wasn't successful. 23 Q. And anything else you've looked at besides 24 mediation? 25 A. I can't think.

Page 94 1 Mr. Terry. So there is an expectation that that would 2 be due and payable. 3 Q. Is there an expectation that it will be paid? 4 MR. WIELEBINSKI) You don't have any 7 independent knowledge to know whether a judgment that 8 might be rendered in your favor is collectible, do you? 9 A. I think that might be a legal technicality, 10 and I don't know the answer to it. 11 Q. Have -- you had told me earlier that you had 12 seen the trustee's current plan. 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. And did you discuss it with Mr. Scott? 15 A. Yes. 16 Q. And you're not a creditor in the case, are 17 you? 18 A. No. 19 Q. HCLOF is not a creditor? 20 A. (Shakes head negatively.) 21 Q. Does the plan affect you at all? 22 A. Does the plan affect the fund? 23 Q. Yes. 24 A. Yes. 25 Q. How does it affect the fund?		Page 96 1 optional redemption, which is part of the package of 2 rights that he would have as a holder of the equity 3 strips and the CLOs pursuant to the indentures. 4 (Exhibit 4 marked.) 5 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Well, let me give you 6 what is Exhibit No. -- is it 4? 7 A. Yes. 8 Q. And what is that? 9 A. This is titled the Third Amended Joint Plan 10 for ACIS. 11 Q. And this is the plan you've been discussing? 12 A. Yes. 13 Q. Now you said that you're allowed to do a 14 reset but not a redemption. 15 A. Uh-huh. 16 Q. What's the difference and why does that 17 matter to you? 18 A. The rights that you have as the holder of the 19 equity strips is that you can call for an option or 20 redemption which can take the form of a reset, but it 21 could also take the form of a liquidation into a 22 warehouse or a liquidation at the market, so it's the 23 optionality. 24 Q. And your preferred option is what? 25 A. Our preferred option has always been a reset,
Page 95 1 A. It affects the fund because we'll be locked 2 into arrangements with ACIS and Brigade for a period of 3 up to two years, and that is not something that would be 4 of our choosing. We would have a plan injunction, which 5 would mean that we couldn't exercise our rights under 6 the CLO indentures, which we're entitled to do as a 7 noteholder. 8 Q. What are you entitled to do? I'm sorry, I 9 didn't understand that. 10 A. We have the right to call for a redemption 11 under the indentures. And, of course, if Mr. Terry is 12 made 100 percent owner of the reorganized debtor, then 13 clearly will be in a relationship with ACIS on that 14 basis. 15 Q. So you told me that there's a two-year time 16 period during which you have to be involved with ACIS. 17 A. Uh-huh. 18 Q. And you told me that there's an inability to 19 call a redemption. 20 A. (Nods head affirmatively.) 21 Q. Are there any other ways the plan impacts 22 you? 23 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation; 24 calls for a legal conclusion. 25 A. We are allowed to call for reset but not an		Page 97 1 which is the original intention that we've been 2 prevented from doing. 3 Q. Mr. Scott said that it was a reset. He said 4 it numerous times that was his first option. 5 A. Uh-huh. 6 Q. Indeed, it was, I believe, a basis for his 7 objection -- HCLOF's objection to the prior plan. Do 8 you recall that? 9 A. Yes. 10 Q. This plan allows you to do a reset. Why is 11 that a problem? 12 A. Because the reset that it allows us to do is 13 with ACIS and Brigade, and we were set up to do 14 transactions involving Highland products, 15 Highland-managed CLOs, not managed by Brigade but by 16 Highland. 17 Q. And that's the only problem you have with 18 that reset provision? 19 A. We don't feel that -- 20 Q. Let's -- I think just a yes or no. Is 21 that -- 22 A. Sorry, say the question again. 23 Q. Is that the only problem you have with that 24 reset provision? 25 A. I have a problem with who would be doing the

Page 99 1 October reports. And even the senior noteholders, I 2 think -- 3 COURT REPORTER: The what? 4 A. -- senior noteholders in one instance weren't 5 paid. So it seems to us that the CLOs are being managed 6 to generate fees for the manager, but they're not being 7 managed for the benefit of the investors, which is what 8 they should be. 9 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Let me just explore that 10 a little bit. Brigade is charging a fee significantly 11 lower than Highland is charging; isn't that correct? 12 A. Yes. 13 Q. How much lower? Do you know? 14 A. I think it's 15 basis points. 15 Q. And Highland was actually removed as a 16 service provider to ACIS because of mismanagement. 17 That's what was alleged by the trustee. 18 A. That's what was alleged, yes, but -- 19 Q. The judge found that, did the judge not? 20 A. The judge did, but our investors didn't 21 express any disquiet with the way that Highland was 22 managing the fund. They came into the fund on the basis 23 of the fee structure that was in place, so they were 24 perfectly accepting of it. As far as I knew, there was 25 no concern raised by investors about the level of fees.		Page 101 1 revelation of any attorney-client communications. 2 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I'm not asking you for 3 any attorney-client revelations. But you're going to 4 file a public document this afternoon, so I'd like to 5 know the bases are for the objection that I would expect 6 to see in the public filing. 7 A. I think it's probably arguments that have 8 been used before in relation to the objection to the 9 previous plans: That it prevents the fund doing what 10 it's legally entitled to do under the indentures for the 11 CLOs; it puts us into a relationship with people that we 12 don't want to have a relationship with for the reasons 13 that I've briefly explained. I think that's the basis 14 of it. 15 Q. You've never worked with Brigade before, have 16 you? 17 A. No. 18 Q. And you have worked with Mr. Terry before, 19 though, correct? 20 A. Mr. Terry was part of the fund when it was 21 launched, yes. 22 Q. You worked with him quite well, didn't you? 23 A. We had no disagreements. 24 Q. And you never challenged any of his advice or 25 any recommendations; isn't that correct?

Page 102 1 A. I think we probably challenged them, but we 2 didn't not agree with the conclusion that he reached. 3 Q. You do that with everybody, though, right? 4 A. Yes. 5 Q. You have robust discussions, but eventually 6 you come to an agreement with Mr. Scott and accept what 7 the portfolio manager recommends? 8 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 9 form; foundation. You can answer. Go ahead. 10 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And you did that with 11 Mr. Terry when he served in that role, correct? 12 A. Yes. 13 Q. And, again, he served in a very significant 14 role, covered -- based on your lawsuit, there were a 15 number of things he was doing that were very fundamental 16 to the performance of your fund. 17 A. Yes. 18 Q. But you have a problem with him now coming in 19 and doing that, correct? 20 A. I have a problem with him coming in, because 21 throughout these proceedings it seems that he's been 22 very hostile to the fund. And I think having a manager 23 who is hostile to a fund is not a good idea. 24 Q. And tell me how he's been hostile to the fund 25 during these proceedings.		Page 104 1 lawsuit is about? 2 A. Yes. 3 MR. MALONEY: Same objection. 10 A. That's certainly the thrust of it. 11 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) What confidential 12 information did he disclose? 13 A. I think it's any information that he would 14 have had by virtue of his role with the portfolio 15 manager prior to his termination. 16 Q. Any information that he had? 17 A. Confidential information. 18 Q. What confidential information did he have? 19 Do you have any specifics? 20 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object on 21 foundation. The lawsuit is a matter of record, it 22 speaks for itself, but the witness can answer to the 23 extent she can recall. 24 Q. (BY MR. Everything that has happened that has 8 involved the fund since we were aware of it in April has 9 been connected to what Mr. Terry did in terms of putting 10 ACIS into involuntary proceedings, so is that not 11 evidence that it's a pretty hostile environment that we 12 find ourselves in? 13 Q. (BY MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 20 A. I don't think there's anything I can add. 21 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) By the way, in your 22 lawsuit the basis for the damages is a disclosure of 23 confidential information, is it not? 24 A. Uh-huh. Yes. 25 Q. I don't -- I cannot tell you off the top of 3 my head what that is, but it's information that would 4 have been around the CLOs that I think we talked about 5 in -- we listed the CLOs, for instance, didn't we? So 6 all of the information in 22, the structuring of the 7 sub-notes, etcetera, that's information that would have 8 been come by as a result of working for the portfolio 9 manager. 10 Q. Who did Mr. Terry share that information 11 with? 12 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 13 You can answer if you can. 14 A. Well, my understanding is with the trustee. 15 Q. (BY MR. He shared that information that ACIS 20 acquired, or had, serving in that capacity; is that 21 correct? 22 A. He personally had. And what independent investigation did you do 6 in connection with this Offering Memorandum? 7 A. You mean taking any sort of external advice 8 on it? 9 Q. Or investigating anything that was in the 10 Offering Memorandum to verify its accuracy or that it 11 was disclosed? 12 A. Well, as I said earlier, we do rely on the 13 portfolio manager to provide information about the 14 portfolio. And so a lot of this clearly relates to 15 that, and we're happy to rely on -- 16 Q. But did you do any independent investigation 17 as part of the securities offering? 18 A. Not outside of reviewing it and making 19 whatever comments were made on it. 20 Q. And Mr. Scott, did he do any independent 21 investigation? 22 A. Not to my knowledge. 23 Q. So everything was what was provided by 24 Highland or a Highland affiliate -- 25 A. And with lawyers, obviously, because, you		Page 128 1 sensible, and we have in this case, because it's a 2 Guernsey entity -- Guernsey counsel preparing documents 3 including, for instance, the share buyback agreement 4 sets of resolutions which memorialize what the decisions 5 are, then we're content. 6 Q. Did you tell me -- is there any disclosure in 7 here about the dispute with Mr. Terry and Highland over 8 his employment that ultimately led to the final award? 9 A. No. 10 Q. Do you think it should have been disclosed in 11 there? 12 A. I'm struggling to understand why it would be 13 in an offering document. To the extent that the 14 investor, the new investor, needed to know or raised 15 questions, then that would be dealt with between 16 themselves. 17 Q. How would the new investor know to ask those 18 questions when you, at that time, didn't even know about 19 what was going on with that litigation? 20 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 21 A. I don't know. I can't speak to discussions 22 between Harbour Vest and Highland which I wasn't a 23 party. 24 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) But your answer was that 25 Harbour Vest might ask some questions and, therefore,

And Highland, 10 who you have a lot of relationships with through your 11 fund, obviously created a pretext to try to terminate 12 somebody that you were working very closely with through 13 ACIS; isn't that correct? 14 MR. I don't remember, other than reading it as 23 part of the award document, but... 24 Q. Didn't have any reaction to it that it was 25 something you needed to investigate further or find out
Page 131 1 A. Yes. I believe I have read this. 2 Q. And do you know when you first saw this? 3 A. And, again, you did review this 14 previously once it was given to you? 15 A. I have received a copy and read it, yes. 16 Q. And can you look at page 21, please? 17 A. Yes. 18 Q. Paragraph 5. Can you just read that to 19 yourself? Do you see that it says Highland's 20 termination of Terry's employment was not, in fact, for 21 cause? 22 A. I see that. 23 Q. And that it was, in fact, pretextual and for 24 the purpose of denying Terry benefits of employment? 25 A. I see that.		Page 133 1 about -- find more out about? 2 MR. MALONEY: Object to form. 3 A. MALONEY: Objection -- 11 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Is that what you're 12 telling me? 13 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 14 You can answer. 15 A. My view continues to be that if an employment 16 relationship has gone wrong, then it's not necessarily 17 appropriate that I, as a director of the fund, should 18 know the level of detail. And my relationship is with 19 the portfolio manager who gives us sufficient 20 information in my view, and I'm happy to rely on that 21 information. 22 Q. (BY MR. Yes. 8 Q. Do you know if that caused an insolvency of 9 the portfolio manager at that time? 10 MR. WIELEBINSKI) Did it cause you to be 15 concerned about that? 16 A. That I didn't know? 17 Q. Well, did it -- no. Did -- did the idea that 18 there was now a monetary judgment against ACIS cause any 19 concern that that may create some issue or some problem 20 that you needed to get more information on or do 21 additional due diligence on? 22 A. No. As I said, any information that we were 23 receiving by way of updates was adequate and sufficient, 24 and I didn't feel the need to have any further 25 information.

Page 138 1 A. No. We didn't ask the question because we 2 were content that the information we were given was 3 adequate until we had the call in April. 4 Q. Did you know that HCLOF actually hired 5 counsel that was involved in the involuntary proceeding 6 and it was hired by counsel on your behalf? Did they 7 tell you that at the time? 8 A. I'm now aware of that, but I'm -- 9 Q. When did you first learn that? 10 A. I can't give you a date. 11 Q. After April? 12 A. But it was after April. 13 Q. Okay. Didn't cause you to question your 14 relationship with Highland? Is that norm -- well, let 15 me ask the question that's there. Didn't cause you to 16 question your relationship with Highland? 17 A. I think that we have a relationship with 18 Highland such that we are content to rely on their 19 advice and their judgment as to what is in the best 20 interest of the investors because they are the portfolio 21 manager. 22 Q. But isn't that your role to make sure that 23 your reliance on this third party is really designed to 24 maximize value for the investors? 25 A. We have overall oversight.		Page 140 1 course, we rely on our service providers to act properly 2 and in accordance with the contractual obligations they 3 have with the fund. 4 Q. The final award, I think you said, caused a 5 problem with doing the Mizuho reset, correct? 6 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form and 7 foundation. 8 A. We were advised in mid-April about the case 9 in Dallas, as a result of which was the inability to 10 proceed with the resets. 11 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Didn't the final award 12 also lead to the filing of the involuntary bankruptcy? 13 MR. MALONEY: Objection, legal 14 conclusion; foundation of the witness's knowledge. You 15 can answer if you can. 16 A. I assume that to be the case. 17 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And didn't that 18 bankruptcy prevent you from doing redemptions of the 19 portfolio at least twice where you tried to do a 20 redemption, a liquidation, and weren't able to? 21 A. We are Guernsey directors of the Guernsey 22 entity. What's happening in a U.S. bankruptcy court is 23 not something that we would have a lot of knowledge 24 around and so even more reason that we would be reliant 25 on our manager to keep us informed and tell us updates
Page 139 1 Q. Well, you -- you have overall responsibility, 2 do you not? 3 A. Yes. 4 Q. And do you feel like you honored your 5 responsibility by just deferring to Highland -- 6 MR. MALONEY: Objection. 7 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) -- on virtually 8 everything? 9 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form and 10 foundation. 11 A. I don't believe we have deferred to Highland 12 on virtually everything. 13 Q. Well, what have you not relied on them for? 14 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 15 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Other than the 16 administrative tasks that you mentioned, what has 17 Highland done that you have ever called into question or 18 said no to? 19 A. The relationship with Highland is such that 20 we challenge any proposals or reports made, and that's 21 as it should be, and that's what the market recognizes 22 happens in structures such as this. We don't have 23 carriage of the day-to-day executive functions. That's 24 why Highland is the portfolio manager. That's why State 25 Street is the administrator and custodian. So, of		Page 141 1 as and when they did. 2 Q. Ten months have gone by since the filing of 3 the involuntary. Are you satisfied today with 4 everything that Highland has done in its various 5 capacities for the fund? 6 A. Yes, I am. 7 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 8 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And you have no reason 9 to question any advice or recommendations they've given 10 you? 11 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 12 A. I'm content with the advice and information 13 we've been given. 14 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And just so I 15 understand, you're content with the idea that they 16 didn't share with you the filing of the bankruptcy until 17 several months later and hired counsel in the meantime 18 for you that you weren't aware of? And you're saying, 19 as an independent director, you're content with that? 20 A. I think we have to rely on our portfolio 21 manager to understand the American bankruptcy system far 22 better than two Guernsey directors could possibly do, so 23 I think we have to rely on the advice that we receive. 24 We have a common interest to ensure the success of the 25 fund, so there was no suggestion that Highland was doing

Page 142 1 anything remotely other than what they should be doing. 2 Q. Well, that common interest that you 3 mentioned, do you see any variance in that interest 4 where Highland's interest may be different than yours as 5 an independent director of the fund? 6 A. Well, it could happen if -- if Highland came 7 to us with a decision which contravened the investment 8 policy or the Portfolio Management Agreement, of course 9 we wouldn't agree to it, but that has never happened. 10 Q. Could it ever diverge when it relates to the 11 legal positions taken and the results obtained? 12 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 13 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form, legal 14 conclusion and speculation. 15 A. I didn't understand the question, actually. 16 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Are you -- could 17 Highland have different objectives and motives in 18 connection with these bankruptcy proceedings that are 19 different from the funds of maximizing recovery for the 20 investors? 21 MS. I can't speak to that.		Page 144 1 to ask you specifically what information -- what 2 specific confidential information Mr. Terry has utilized 3 and shared with third parties? 4 MR. You can answer the question. 11 A. The carriage of the litigation is in the 12 hands of our lawyers. 13 Q. I understand. But you authorized the filing 14 of the lawsuit. You consulted with Mr. Scott regarding 15 that lawsuit, correct? 16 A. Uh-huh. 17 Q. You obviously knew what the basis was of the 18 litigation, you told me about it, and I'm sure you read 19 the pleadings beforehand. MALONEY: I'm going to continue to 24 object to foundation. The witness is not the legal or 25 factual architect of the complaint, but she can answer
Page 143 1 Q. (BY MR. MALONEY: Is anybody getting any -- 10 I'm sorry, is anybody getting any emails? 11 MS. O'NEIL: We need to ask her. 12 MR. MALONEY: Hello? Are we still on 13 the teleconference? Can you hear me? 14 MR. SEVILLA: I'm still here. 15 MR. MALONEY: Okay. 16 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Are you hearing -- are 17 you hearing some beeping that's intermittent? It just 18 occurred -- 19 MR. ALVES: I'm here. 20 MR. SEVILLA: No. 21 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Okay. 22 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I want to go back and 23 ask a question about your lawsuit before I forget. I want		Page 145 1 to the extent she knows. 2 MS. O'NEIL: It also calls for a legal 3 conclusion. 4 A. As I said, I think this is something that 5 we're advised on by our lawyers, so... 6 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And you never questioned 7 them to say, Well, what information is that that you're 8 saying he took that wasn't already public or previously 9 disclosed? No independent investigation of anything? 10 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to -- I'm going 11 to object to the extent you're asking for communications 12 and conversations with counsel. 13 And I instruct the witness not to answer 14 to the extent he's asking you for conversations you had 15 with your counsel. 16 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I'm not asking for any 17 of those conversations. Just asking whether you did 18 anything independent to verify what you said was the 19 main basis for your complaint against Mr. Terry? 20 A. I think that that would have been the subject 21 of discussions with counsel. 22 Q. Well, let me ask you this: Who told counsel 23 about the confidential information that they had to look 24 at to put together the architecture for the lawsuit? 25 MS. Well, would there have been anybody else that 16 could have given them that information? 17 A. I think that to the extent that there is 18 information that has been discussed with counsel, then 19 I'm not sure I can respond to that. 20 Q. Going back to the trustee's plan. If it's 21 confirmed and a reset is done, that's not going to be a 22 bad result for your investors, correct? 23 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 24 form, foundation, and speculation. 25 A. I'm not sure we can do a reset. I'm not sure		Page 148 1 comfortable then to do a reset? 2 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation and 3 calls for a potential legal conclusion. 4 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) You can answer if you 5 know. 6 A. The Court doesn't -- if a Court were to do 7 that, then the Court couldn't then tell me and tell Bill 8 what our duties and authority were because that's a 9 matter of Guernsey law. 10 Q. You told me you're going to object to the 11 plan. I assume -- well, you're not a creditor so you 12 don't get a vote. Would you agree that if the plan was 13 confirmed and a reset was authorized that that would be 14 a better result for your investors than the present 15 circumstances? 16 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 17 form and foundation. 18 A. As I said earlier, I don't believe that we, 19 as a board, have the authority to do that and -- nor do 20 I believe for reasons that I've explained earlier that 21 it's in the best interest of our investors to have the 22 relationship with Brigade that that would entail. 23 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) But if the plan was 24 confirmed, you're going to have that relationship with 25 Brigade and ACIS. You -- you'll agree with me on that,
Page 147 1 we have the authority as directors of this fund. 2 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Why is that? Why 3 wouldn't you have the authority to do a reset? 4 A. Because in the offering documents we state 5 quite clearly what the intention of the policy and 6 strategy is, and it doesn't involve doing any 7 transactions with Brigade. 8 Q. Right. But you also said there's no 9 requirement that you can't do what the plan proposes, 10 right? It doesn't have to be Highland managed. It's 11 not required that it be Highland managed; isn't that 12 correct? 13 A. There's no text in the offering document to 14 say that it is required. But as a director of this 15 fund, I do not believe that we would have the authority 16 to do a transaction with Brigade. 17 Q. Right. On your own, you couldn't do it 18 voluntarily. You would need the Court to order you to 19 do it; is that what you're saying? 20 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to the 21 form and foundation. I don't think the Court is 22 ordering the fund to do anything. That misstates the 23 plan. 24 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) If the Court approves 25 the plan and says a reset is allowed, are you more		Page 149 1 correct? In other words, it will be ordered because 2 that's what the plan says. 3 A. Yes, that's a term of the plan. 4 Q. And Highland's out. It's not a subservicer 5 or submanager at this point, correct? 6 A. Correct. 7 Q. And at that point, at least you have the 8 option to do a reset if you felt you could approve that 9 or you're authorized to do that, correct? 10 MR. MALONEY: I object to form. 11 A. Under the plan, the fund would be allowed to 12 proceed with a reset. 13 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And who would need to 14 give you authorization to do that, to proceed with a 15 reset that was proposed? Would it be the investors? 16 A. It would be -- to do -- to take this out -- 17 well, the board have the authority, taking the advice of 18 the investment manager, to do an action like a reset. 19 But in this sort of circumstance where we are, if the 20 plan is confirmed, forced into that relationship and we 21 don't believe it's in the best interest of our 22 investors, then perhaps we would need to seek approval 23 or consent or an idea from the investors as to the views 24 of that. 25 Q. So you might solicit their views and see if

Page 150 1 it's okay to proceed with a reset under the 2 circumstances with a confirmed plan? 3 A. It's a possibility. 4 Q. And they might say yes? 5 A. That's a possibility. 6 Q. And their alternative is they just keep 7 rocking along and losing $300,000 a week, correct? 8 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object. It 9 lacks foundation. It ignores legal remedies that I 10 believe counsel is aware of, such as an appeal, so I 11 object to the foundation. 12 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Is it better than losing 13 $300,000 a week? 14 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 15 A. I think as counsel has indicated that, you 16 know, we would be evaluating our position at the time. 17 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Well, you're a lawyer. 18 You know that parties can appeal. Appeals can go on for 19 years. 20 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 21 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Isn't that correct? 22 A. I'll just make the point that I'm not a 23 practicing lawyer -- 24 Q. Okay. 25 A. -- and haven't been for some years. And I		Page 152 1 was the subject of attorney-client communications. 2 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I'm not asking you for 3 those communications. I'm asking you simply, has 4 Highland offered any solution to this problem short of 5 objecting to the plan? 6 MR. MALONEY: Same objections. 7 MS. O'NEIL: I'm also going to object to 8 the extent it calls for a disclosure of common interest 9 privileged communications. 10 communications. 11 A. I think I have to listen to the objections 12 and -- 13 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) As an independent 14 director, what steps have you taken to solve the 15 problems caused by this bankruptcy? 16 A. I think this goes to the point that I made 17 probably a few hours ago when I was talking about the 18 differing roles of entities within structures such as 19 this, and I think that we would be heavily reliant on 20 our service providers, and that means Highland in this 21 case. 22 Q. Well, it's actually a Cayman -- a newly 23 formed Cayman entity that's your service provider, 24 correct? 25 A. Yes. Q. And what have they offered to try to solve
Page 151 1 was never a litigation lawyer, so I know nothing about 2 the appeal process -- 3 Q. Fair enough. If I told you -- 4 A. -- and particularly not American appeal 5 processes. 6 Q. If I told you in the American appeal process 7 it could go on for years, it would mean that rather than 8 doing a reset you would continue to lose what you allege 9 was $300,000 a week for your investors as well as the 10 attorneys' fees that you'd be incurring in the meantime, 11 correct? 12 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to the 13 preface, foundation, speculation, form. 14 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Do you have a fiduciary 15 duty to Highland or any Highland entities or affiliates? 16 A. Our duties are to the investors and the 17 company. 18 Q. And your duties, as you told me, was to 19 maximize the return for investors, correct? 20 A. That's the idea, yes. 21 Q. To your knowledge, has Highland offered any 22 solution to this bankruptcy problem that we all face? 23 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 24 foundation, to form, and also to the extent that any 25 information you have that would be responsive to that		Page 153 1 this problem? 2 A. Well, again, I think this goes back to the 3 whole -- 4 MR. MALONEY: I'm going -- I'm going to 5 renew the same objections that I made before. I'm 6 sorry. You can answer to the extent you can with those 7 guidance. 8 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Have you personally had 9 any discussions with that service provider -- 10 A. We -- 11 Q. -- about solving the problems of this 12 bankruptcy? 13 A. We, the board, have had lots of conversations 14 with Highland, with counsel for Highland, and with our 15 own counsel about the circumstances. 16 Q. So who at Highland is -- is -- who have you 17 spoken with at HCF Advisors? 18 A. We have spoken with Hunter, who appears at 19 our board meetings on behalf of the portfolio manager. 20 Q. What does he do for that portfolio manager? 21 How -- what relationship does he have to the portfolio 22 manager? I understand he works for Highland Capital, 23 but does he do anything for Highland HCF Advisors? 24 A. He is provided to the portfolio manager to 25 the fund.

Page 154 1 Q. How do you know that? 2 A. Because he was effectively a replacement for 3 Mr. Terry. When we were advised of Mr. Terry's 4 departure, we were told that Hunter would be working 5 with the fund going forward. 6 Q. Well, working with the fund. Does he -- is 7 he an officer or a director of that fund? Do you know? 8 A. I can't remember what he -- 9 Q. So you're not even certain whether -- 10 MR. MALONEY: What fund are we talking 11 about? I'm sorry. 12 MR. WIELEBINSKI: I'm sorry. HCF 13 Advisors. 14 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Does he have any 15 position with HCF Advisors, to your knowledge? 16 A. I don't know. 17 Q. Who else do you speak with? 18 A. The whole Highland team. 19 Q. But who else from HCF Advisors? 20 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to the 21 foundation. I think it's -- I think it's an unfair 22 premise. But you can answer if you can, Ms. Bestwick. 23 A. I don't think that we've made the distinction 24 that we're speaking to someone wearing one particular 25 hat or another particular hat in that way.		Page 156 1 know about that or familiar with it? 2 A. No. 3 Q. Did you know that Highland could file its own 4 plan in the bankruptcy case? 5 A. (Shakes head negatively.) 6 Q. You didn't know that? 7 A. I don't think I did know that. 8 Q. And did you know that HCLOF may be able to 9 file its own plan in the bankruptcy case? 10 A. I wasn't aware that that was a -- 11 Q. So -- 12 A. -- procedural thing. 13 Q. -- if that was a procedural thing that could 14 try to solve the problem, do you think that would be 15 something you'd want to explore? 16 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 17 speculation and foundation. It calls for a legal 18 conclusion and perhaps -- and perhaps calls for 19 discussions with counsel. 20 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) As far as you know, 21 though, Highland hasn't proposed a plan -- 22 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 23 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) -- in the bankruptcy? 24 A. I think -- 25 MR. MALONEY: Same objection.
Page 155 1 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) It's just one of the 2 many Highland affiliates and entity? 3 A. No, no. We're talking about have any 4 solutions been proposed. And I think in the 5 circumstances, the conversations that we have are with 6 lots of people on a conference call. We don't go around 7 the table identifying who is who and who -- which hat 8 they're wearing at any particular time. 9 Q. You don't think that's appropriate to know 10 who is talking and what hat they're wearing? 11 A. I know who's talking, but I don't think it's 12 necessarily appropriate to have the hat disclosed. 13 Q. Do you -- do you think that Highland Capital, 14 for example, might have differing interests than HCF 15 Advisors? 16 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 17 foundation and to form. 18 MS. O'NEIL: I also object to the extent 19 it calls for speculation. 20 A. I don't know. 21 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Are you familiar with 22 the concept of exclusivity in a U.S. bankruptcy? 23 A. No. 24 Q. It's a concept of who has a right to file a 25 plan of reorganization or plan of liquidation. Do you		Page 157 1 A. -- it's probably, you know -- the sorts of 2 discussions that we have are such that, you know, there 3 are things that are talked about that must be part of 4 the privileged conversations. 5 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) But -- but if they filed 6 a plan, it would be a public filing. So do you know if 7 Highland has filed a plan? 8 MR. MALONEY: You're speaking of 9 Highland Capital? Who are you asking about? 10 MR. WIELEBINSKI: I don't think it 11 matters. 12 MS. O'NEIL: I object, clarity of the 13 record. Designate -- and you're indicating both, but -- 14 MR. WIELEBINSKI: I'll stand on my 15 question. 16 MS. O'NEIL: -- for the clarity of the 17 record -- can you repeat the question? 18 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Do you know if Highland 19 has filed a plan? 20 A. I'm not aware that they have. 21 Q. And you know HCLOF has not filed a plan? 22 A. Correct. 23 Q. WIELEBINSKI) Judge has suggested at 6 some point that an amount of money be put up, and with 7 that money set aside that the parties could go about 8 their business and get out of the bankruptcy, something 9 along those lines she's inquired of that. 10 A. Yes, I'm aware of that. 11 Q. She's -- okay. And she's done it, like I 12 said, three or four times. You're aware of that? 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. Neither Highland -- Highland has never 15 accepted that offer or tried to fashion a remedy to 16 solve these problems along those lines, has it? 17 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 18 MS. O'NEIL: Objection to the extent it 19 calls for disclosure of common interest privileged 20 communications. 21 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Has Highland done that? 22 A. I think that this is something that has been 23 part of the discussions that we've been having on an 24 ongoing basis that I probably have to say are privileged 25 and can't go into the question.		Page 160 1 A. No. But by the same token, we haven't had 2 any approaches ourselves. 3 Q. By the trustee, you're saying? 4 A. Yes. 5 Q. What could the trustee do that would allow 6 you to be able to resolve -- would allow all the parties 7 to be able to resolve their issues? Anything you can 8 think of? 9 A. I don't know. I don't know. 10 Q. You're familiar with the litigation the 11 trustee has commenced against Highland and HCLOF, 12 correct? 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. And you've read it, you sort of understand 15 what the nature of the claims are? 16 A. I think so. 17 Q. A lot of them result -- a lot of them arise 18 because of those transactions that you described, a 19 series of transactions, in October of 2017, correct? 20 A. Yes. 21 Q. Do you feel like Highland has gotten you into 22 a pickle -- that's maybe a Texas term -- but has gotten 23 you into a difficult situation because of those 24 transfers? 25 MR. MALONEY: Objection --
Page 159 1 MR. MALONEY: Let me -- Joe, are you 2 saying is she aware of whether Highland has filed 3 something or said something publicly? 4 MR. WIELEBINSKI: I think she's answered 5 the question, I think. 6 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) You know that there was 7 a mediation -- 8 A. Yes. 9 Q. -- that occurred? You participated, correct? 10 A. Yes. 11 Q. That didn't go anywhere, did it? 12 A. No. 13 Q. Have you ever reached out to the trustee to 14 try to solve the problems that HCLOF is facing to try to 15 come up with some solution that would work? 16 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. Do you 17 mean her personally? 18 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Yes. 19 A. I haven't, no. 20 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Has Mr. Scott? 21 A. Not to my knowledge. 22 Q. Have you had any sit-downs with the trustee 23 over this latest plan to try to negotiate any of the 24 terms or provisions that might make it more workable 25 for you?		Page 161 1 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) You're now being sued 2 for them. 3 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 4 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 5 A. I -- we are where we are. 6 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Still comfortable with 7 Highland, though, and everything that it's -- 8 A. Yes. 9 Q. -- doing and has done? 10 A. Yes. 11 (Exhibit 7 marked.) 12 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I'm going to hand you 13 what's been marked as Exhibit No. 7. Have you seen this 14 before? 15 A. Yes. 16 Q. What is it? 17 A. It's the letter from Mr. Leventon. 18 Q. And who's it addressed to? 19 A. To the Chapter 7 trustee. 20 Q. And what's the substance of the letter? 21 MR. MALONEY: Objection, document speaks 22 for itself. 23 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) What do you understand 24 it to be saying? 25 MR. MALONEY: Same objection.

Page 162 1 A. I think it says what it says. 2 Q. (BY MR. I think it's interpreted as something which 7 it wasn't intended to be. I think -- 8 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Well, let me ask you 9 this: It talks about effectuating the optional 10 redemptions, correct? Do you see that on page 3? 11 A. Yeah. 12 Q. And it says that there are three mechanisms 13 for effectuating the optional redemptions, right? And 14 the three are: Reset transactions. That's Option 1. 15 A. Uh-huh. 16 Q. And then there is Option 2, sell the 17 collateral into a warehouse; and the third one is sell 18 all collateral into the market. How do you understand 19 that third one -- is that a liquidation? 20 MR. I think it describes what Option 3 is. 25 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Which is a liquidation,		Page 164 1 A. I think it's clear on the face of it. 2 Q. To liquidate? Option 3. 3 A. The sentence you're referring to is, 4 "Highland will prepare to effectuate Option 3 -- 5 Q. -- to sell the collateral into -- 6 A. -- as the default instruction -- 7 COURT REPORTER: Hang on. 8 MR. WIELEBINSKI: I'm sorry. 9 COURT REPORTER: -- I didn't get the 10 whole answer. 11 A. -- as the default instruction under the 12 optional redemption." 13 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Okay. What do you 14 understand that to mean? 15 A. My understanding at the time was that the 16 Chapter 7 trustee had a limited period, I think, of 60 17 days in which she could operate ACIS, and there wasn't 18 much in the way of progress during those 60 days. So as 19 a party that was being harmed by that, I think that the 20 intent of this letter was to promote some action from 21 the Chapter 7 trustee and -- 22 Q. And you were prepared to accept that if the 23 trustee would have gone forward with it, correct? 24 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 25 MS. O'NEIL: Objection, calls for

"The Chapter 7 trustee's final option in 3 compliance with the redemption notices is to liquidate 4 the collateral into the market." 5 Q. And you understand that to be a liquidation? 6 A. Yes. 7 Q. You're liquidating the portfolio's position, 8 correct? 9 A. Uh-huh. Yes. 10 Q. And then it says in that same -- under 11 Option 3, "The investors in the CLOs would then be able 12 to take this cash and reinvest it in CLOs, or other 13 investments, with a better return profile." And then at 14 the end isn't what's being requested of the trustee is 15 to authorize the liquidation of the collateral under 16 Option 3? 17 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 18 The document says what it says. It's been the subject 19 of extensive testimony. I object to the foundation of 20 this witness. 21 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) What do you understand, 22 Ms. Bestwick? What do you understand was being 23 recommended to the trustee to do? You had no objection to it; is that correct? 7 A. I didn't have an objection to it, no. 8 Q. And so you were prepared if the trustee would 9 not do Option 1 or 2 to accept Option 3, a 10 liquidation -- 11 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object -- 12 Q. (BY MR. I think that consistently there has been the 18 intent to go -- to do what we were poised to do 19 originally, which is to do the reset transactions, and 20 that was always going to be the option, the preferred 21 option. 22 Q. But only under certain circumstances. I 23 mean, your statement that you just made has to be 24 qualified, correct? 25 A. We're talking about the time that this was --

The specific circumstances being in keeping 8 with the disclosure that -- in our offering documents 9 and in accordance with our investment policy. 10 Q. But just because I feel I have to: Not 11 because you're required to per those documents, correct? 12 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 13 MR. MALONEY: Object to form and 14 foundation. 15 A. Well, as I mentioned earlier, if I may say, I 16 am not convinced that we have the authority to do it in 17 any way other than as presaged by the offering document 18 in the investment policy. 19 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Okay. And if I 20 understand that -- I may have asked this before. If I 21 did, I apologize. But if the plan is confirmed, a reset 22 is offered and you're not certain you can do it, you're 23 prepared to maintain the status quo and not effectuate a 24 reset? 25 MR. MALONEY: Object to form and calls		Page 168 1 so well organized. 2 A. That is the lawyer in me. 3 Q. That Exhibit No. 1 was a Portfolio Management 4 Agreement of December 22nd, correct? 5 A. Yes. 6 Q. Now, there were two other Portfolio 7 Management Agreements at or about that time, correct? 8 A. Portfolio Management Agreements in 2016? 9 Q. Oh, actually, no. Thank you. There were two 10 Portfolio Management Agreements in 2017, October and 11 November, correct? 12 A. Yes. 13 Q. Why were there two done in such close 14 proximity? Can you -- can you explain that to me? 15 A. My recall is that it was part of the step 16 plan that I referred to earlier. The replacement of the 17 portfolio manager had to take place as a condition 18 precedent to the incoming new -- 19 Q. That was to get rid of ACIS -- 20 COURT REPORTER: Wait. Wait. Precedent 21 to the incoming new? 22 THE WITNESS: Investor. 23 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) So the first one was to 24 get rid of ACIS, correct, as the portfolio manager? 25 A. And then the subsequent one was for the
Page 167 1 for speculation and ignores prior testimony of other 2 options. 3 A. I think we have to take a view at the 4 appropriate time with the information we have to hand. 5 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Sure. You know, besides 6 this default Option 3 -- that never went forward, 7 correct? 8 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 9 A. Correct. 10 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) And there was another 11 attempt. It was a notice of redemption issued. You're 12 aware of that, correct? 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. That never went forward either. It was 15 actually voluntarily withdrawn by you. 16 A. The June, yes. 17 Q. Yes. And you've issued no subsequent notice 18 of redemption since then, correct? 19 A. Correct. 20 Q. Do you have Exhibit I there? 21 MR. MALONEY: Exhibit I? 22 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Yes. 23 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) May I look at that? 24 A. Yeah. 25 Q. Thank you. And I appreciate you keeping that		Page 169 1 transaction -- part of the transaction documentation 2 with the new investor. 3 Q. To bring in HCF Advisors? 4 A. Yes. 5 Q. I'm going to just mark these just so we can 6 get them in. 7 (Exhibits 8 and 9 marked.) 8 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I'll hand you what's 9 been marked as Exhibit No. 8. 10 MR. WIELEBINSKI: And there's 9. 11 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Have you seen these 12 before? 13 A. I just have the one. 14 Q. Sorry. There's Exhibit No. 9. 15 A. Yes. 16 Q. Have you seen these both before? 17 A. Yes. 18 Q. And these are the -- 19 MR. SHAW: Joe, do you have one more of 20 those by chance? 21 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Could you share one of 22 those? 23 MS. O'NEIL: These are different. 24 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Oh, they're not the 25 two that I handed you?

1 MS. O'NEIL: You said 8 and 9, right?
2 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Yes.
3 MS. O'NEIL: These are two different
4 documents.
5 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Right. Do you mind
6 showing those to Mr. Shaw?
7 MR. SHAW: It's -- I mean, it's okay.
8 I'm fine.
9 MR. PHELAN: What are they, Joe?
10 MR. MALONEY: Yeah. Exhibit 8 is 11 November 15, 2017 and Exhibit 9 is 27 October 2017.
12 MR. SHAW: Portfolio Management
13 Agreement. All right.
14 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Sorry, Ms. Bestwick, so
15 you have seen these before?
16 A. Yes.
17 Q. And obviously the October 27th occurred first 18 and then the November 15th occurred second?
19 A. Yes.
20 Q. And I think you described that under the 21 October 27th PMA that's where ACIS was removed,
22 terminated?
23 A. Yes.
24 Q. Okay. And then the second one, November
25 15th, is when Highland HCF Advisors took over?

Page 171

1 A. Highland HCF Advisors were the incoming
2 portfolio manager on the prior one as well, the 27th of 3 October. But the difference was I think the governing 4 law clause was changed in the later one.
5 Q. Why -- why is that? Do you know? Why was 6 that change made?
7 A. I believe that it was a conforming exercise
8 because it's governed by the law of Texas.
9 Q. Okay.
10 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Let's see if we can
11 take a short break for 5 or 10 minutes, if that's okay.
12 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Off the record at 13 1:01. This is Disk 3, Volume 1.
14 (Break taken.)
15 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: On the record at 16 1:19, Disk 4, Volume 1.
17 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Ms. Bestwick, we're back
18 on the record. I just wanted to ask some follow-up 19 questions. So the first is, one option you have and 20 have had to try to solve the problems we're all
21 encountering is just to sell your debt, correct, sell it
22 in the open market, sell the investors' debt, the notes?
23 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 24 foundation to whether that's actually an option.
25 A. I think that would have been my question. It

1 might be a possibility, it might be an option, but I
2 don't know if that's possible as a matter of fact.
3 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Why not? Why would it
4 not be an option? Do you know? Why would that not be 5 an option?
6 A. I obviously have to defer to the greater
7 knowledge of Highland and the experts, but I understand
8 that it is unlikely to provide an optimal result for us.
9 Q. Okay. I understand that. Have you done an 10 analysis of the pros and cons of selling the positions
11 in your fund versus the current situation and the 12 potential way things may play out?
13 A. I'm not aware. We have seen an awful lot of 14 documentation and charts and things, so I'm not aware of 15 what the current position is on that, so I couldn't say.
16 Q. Well, I don't know that I need to know
17 specifics, but I need to ask, has that analysis been 18 done?
19 A. I'm not sure. I'm not sure.
20 Q. Do you think it would be a helpful
21 analysis --
22 A. I'd have to check.
23 Q. -- to look at to determine whether there's an 24 option available for the investors short of accepting 25 the plan?

Page 173

1 A. I think it's always useful to have as much
2 information as you possibly can.
3 Q. But you haven't ordered that kind of analysis
4 from the PMA?
5 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation.
6 A. I'm not aware that we have.
7 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Right. Is it the job of 8 the portfolio manager to actually find investors like 9 Harbour Vest and to negotiate the entire agreement with 10 them?
11 A. I think that's the market norm that the 12 portfolio manager has. I referred earlier to the whole
13 investor relation's function. So to my knowledge, you 14 have portfolio managers who have staff who, you know,
15 are on the road most of the year trying to drum up 16 business for the fund and speaking to investors and 17 giving them information which might make them
18 interested, so yes.
19 Q. All right. I want to go back to the lawsuit
20 against Mr. Terry again with the confidential
21 information. What information did you or Mr. Scott make 22 available to the lawyers for them to do the analysis and 23 develop the claims and causes of action against 24 Mr. Terry?
25 A. I think that to answer that would probably be

Page 174 1 disclosing privileged information. 2 THE WITNESS: Can I defer to counsel on 3 that? 4 MR. MALONEY: I'll -- I will counsel you 5 and instruct you to the extent you're answering that 6 question would reveal conversations with counsel, yes. 7 But I can't -- if there's -- if it's not, then you can 8 certainly answer. 9 Q. (BY MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 16 foundation that she is the repository of that 17 confidential information. 18 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Well, who else would 19 have confidential information of your fund that might 20 have made that information available to your lawyers? 21 A. Well, clearly our delegated service 22 providers. 23 Q. Did they sit down with your counsel to go 24 through that information? Do you know? 25 A. I think information has obviously been		Page 176 1 Q. But in connection with this lawsuit, I want 2 to hone in on that group. 3 MR. MALONEY: The Guernsey lawsuit? 4 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Yes. 5 MR. MALONEY: Okay. 6 A. I think that was Collas Crill. 7 COURT REPORTER: Who? 8 THE WITNESS: Collas Crill. 9 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) I'll take that at face 10 value. One of the allegations in that lawsuit had to do 11 with a payment that Mr. Terry is asking for. Do you 12 know anything about that $750,000 payment? 13 A. I'd have to look back and refresh my memory 14 on that. 15 Q. Okay. Is it fair for me to assume that if 16 you were going to ask your investors about the reset, 17 for example, under the plan, that the main investor that 18 you need to discuss things with would be Harbour Vest 19 because the other Highland-related entities you'd 20 probably know what their position would be? 21 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 22 foundation and form. 23 A. Well, no. I think -- 24 THE WITNESS: If I may answer it. 25 MR. MALONEY: You can answer it.
Page 175 1 requested of our service providers. To the extent that 2 they can provide it, they will have done it. 3 Q. You're saying your lawyers would have 4 requested that information in connection with putting 5 the lawsuit together? 6 A. To understand the case, yes. 7 Q. And you know that for -- for a fact? 8 A. I think that is correct. I think that our 9 lawyers would have made inquiry because they would have 10 needed to have known how to. 11 Q. And they would have talked to, then, the HCF 12 Advisors? 13 A. They would have talked to our service 14 providers, so our portfolio manager as well. 15 Q. Okay. As well as HCF Advisors, State Street, 16 and others? 17 A. Yes. 18 Q. I don't want to put words into your mouth, 19 but is that what you -- you think is -- 20 A. That's my understanding of how it would work. 21 Q. And what lawyers was that information being 22 made available to? When you say our lawyers, who would 23 that be? 24 A. Well, we have, I think I said earlier, quite 25 a range of lawyers in Guernsey.		Page 177 1 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) You may. 2 A. Harbour Vest is a 49 percent investor, and 3 the donor-advised fund that sits behind the sale of 4 holdco is the other main investor, and then you've got 5 the 2 percent Highland employees. But that -- 6 Q. But the only independent investor is Harbour 7 Vest; is that a fair statement? 8 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to the 9 foundation and to the extent it calls for legal or other 10 knowledge that this witness may not have. 11 MS. O'NEIL: Object to form. 12 A. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) Harbour Vest has no 13 connection to Highland other than as an investor in this 14 fund. 15 Q. (BY MR. WIELEBINSKI) That's what I wanted to 16 confirm. Thank you. What attorneys from Highland were 17 on the April special call that you had regarding, among 18 other things, the final award? 19 A. On the mid-April call, I think we had Tim 20 Cournoyer and Isaac Leventon from Highland. 21 Q. And when you say from Highland, are they 22 counsel for HCF Advisors? 23 A. No. Sorry. I misunderstood your question. 24 They are the counsel for Highland. We didn't have our 25 counsel on that initial call. Subsequent calls we did.

Page 198 1 Q. Welcome to my world on keeping time. You 2 thought you'd gotten away from the law, but now 3 you're -- 4 A. Indeed. 5 Q. -- having to keep time again. Do you know 6 the hourly rate? 7 A. I think we agreed an hourly rate of 350 8 pounds. 9 Q. And that has been approved? 10 A. Yes. 11 Q. And who approved that? 12 A. Well, that would be Highland. Sorry, that's 13 not Highland. Of course it's not. It's the fund 14 because it's the fund who employs us. Apologies. 15 Q. So did the directors have a vote on whether 16 or not to compensate the directors for the work that 17 they're doing in conjunction with the litigation? 18 A. It's a director decision because the fund is 19 managed by the director. 20 Q. Did you consult with Highland with regard to 21 whether or not they would object to you and Mr. Scott 22 receiving additional compensation in connection with 23 this litigation? 24 A. Yes, we did. 25 Q. And did they have any objection?		Page 200 1 Q. All right. So October 27th, seven days after 2 the arbitration award, you approve this new portfolio 3 manager of the fund that you are the director of. It's 4 called Highland HCF Advisors Limited, right? 5 A. Yes. 6 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 7 Q. (BY MR. SHAW) Do you understand that that 8 entity was formed on the same day that the portfolio 9 management services were transferred to it? 10 A. I don't think I did know that. 11 Q. And that's a Cayman entity, that Highland HCF 12 Advisors Limited, right? 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. What due diligence did you do with regard to 15 Highland HCF Advisors Limited? 16 A. We had the conversations with Highland. So 17 having been given the rationale for the decision to have 18 the existing portfolio management group terminated and a 19 new one with a new advisor, that was the extent of the 20 due diligence. It was a Highland entity. 21 We were comfortable that it was going to be 22 pretty much business as usual, no change in personnel, 23 so we were content that the information presented to us 24 was adequate. 25 Q. So, I mean, was this, the way that you saw
Page 199 1 A. No. There was a full and frank discussion 2 about the time and the additional effort over and above 3 what we're paid for, and we came to an agreement. 4 Q. And do you have minutes memorializing that 5 director's meeting? 6 A. Yes. 7 Q. And those were prepared by State Street? 8 A. I believe they were prepared by Carey Olsen. 9 Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Terry in person before 10 this litigation? 11 A. No. 12 Q. Have you ever spoken to Mr. Terry before this 13 litigation? 14 A. I believe that for the first few board 15 meetings Mr. Terry gave the portfolio manager's report; 16 so we would be sitting in Guernsey around a table at the 17 board meeting, and Mr. Terry would have been one dialing 18 from Highland to give the report of the portfolio 19 manager. 20 Q. So you're in Guernsey and Mr. Terry is 21 somewhere else? 22 A. Yes. 23 Q. You've never seen Mr. Guern -- 24 Mr. Guernsey -- Mr. Terry in Guernsey, right? 25 A. No.		Page 201 1 it, just a paper transaction? 2 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 3 Q. (BY MR. SHAW) I mean, if I'm 4 mischaracterizing it, I want to know how you perceived 5 what was going on here. You know, you have ACIS, which 6 was the portfolio manager, which is obviously a 7 significant role with the fund, right? I mean, you're 8 relying on the portfolio management -- portfolio manager 9 for almost everything, and then all of a sudden you have 10 this new Cayman entity come in. And so I just -- how 11 did you perceive what was going on there with that? 12 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to the 13 form and foundation of the question. 14 THE WITNESS: But I can answer? 15 MR. MALONEY: Yes. If you can. 16 A. It was our understanding that it was -- it 17 was pretty much no difference. The personnel were the 18 same. The entity was different because that was a CP to 19 the transaction involving a new investor, but everything 20 else would remain the same. 21 Q. (BY MR. SHAW) Now let's look at Exhibit 22 No. 4, please. That's the Guernsey lawsuit. And if you 23 will turn to paragraph 37. There are no page numbers, 24 but if you'll look at paragraph 37. 25 A. No. 3, I think.

Page 202 1 Q. Oh, I'm sorry, I wrote it down wrong. No. 3. 2 My apologies. 3 A. I'm sorry, which page? 4 Q. There are no page numbers, but it's 5 paragraph 37. 6 A. Okay. 7 Q. Are you with me? 8 A. Yes. 9 Q. Okay. It says, "By 1 February 2018 the only 10 remaining condition precedent to the reset transaction 11 for CLO 3 was for a Portfolio Management Agreement to be 12 transferred from ACIS." Do you see that? 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. And I want to concentrate on those last three 15 words: transferred from ACIS. Do you see that? 16 A. Yeah. 17 Q. So you understood that the reset transactions 18 were not simply a standalone reset, but it was a reset 19 in conjunction with the transfer of the Portfolio 20 Management Agreements away from ACIS, right? 21 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form. 22 A. I would need to refresh my memory around the 23 time that this was being drafted. I'd need to go back 24 and have a look at -- the reason I'm saying that is 25 because the condition precedent was for the Portfolio		Page 204 1 we're talking about transferring the Portfolio 2 Management Agreements for the CLO transferred from ACIS. 3 Do you see that? 4 A. Yes. Yes. 5 Q. So going back to my question. You understood 6 that the reset transactions that were contemplated were 7 not simply standalone resets, but they were in 8 conjunction with the transfer of the Portfolio 9 Management Agreement for the CLOs to a new entity. 10 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form and 11 foundation. 12 A. I think, if I can refer back -- and, again, I 13 just need to double check on this, but my understanding 14 that -- obviously, it's something that is happening as 15 part of the Chapter 7 bankruptcy proceedings, but I 16 think I referred earlier to the 60-day period during 17 which the Chapter 7 trustee had been appointed and had 18 the limited authority, and we weren't sure that any 19 activity was going to take place. 20 But as I recall, I think one option was that 21 the Portfolio Management Agreements could be transferred 22 from ACIS because that would mean that we could continue 23 with the reset and just continue as we had been as a 24 fund and we wouldn't be involved in this. 25 Q. (BY MR. SHAW) Okay. Here we're talking about
Page 203 1 Management Agreement existing to be terminated and the 2 new one executed. 3 But we're talking about the new transaction 4 in October '17, and you're saying here that by this 5 paragraph we're talking about February 2018. And the 6 only remaining condition precedent to the reset 7 transaction was the Portfolio Management Agreement to be 8 transferred from ACIS. But that should be done in 9 October. 10 Q. Maybe I can help because I think we're 11 talking about two different things. 12 A. Okay. 13 Q. In this context -- on this context in 14 paragraph 37, we're talking about the portfolio 15 management agreements that are for the CLOs themselves. 16 A. Sorry. 17 Q. All right. 18 A. Apologies. 19 Q. As opposed to -- as opposed to in October 20 we're talking about the Portfolio Management Agreements 21 for the fund. 22 A. For the fund. 23 Q. Do you understand that? 24 A. Yes. 25 Q. And so you see here in that paragraph 37		Page 205 1 February of 2018, so that was February 1st of 2018. Do 2 you see that? 3 A. Yeah. 4 Q. So we're not talking about the Chapter 7 5 trustee or anything like that. Do you see that? 6 A. I mean, I will have to go back and just -- 7 Q. Let's move on. 8 A. -- reconsider what was happening at that 9 time. Apologies. 10 Q. All right. And I'm trying to expedite so all 11 the lawyers can get to the investiture. Go to 12 paragraph 41, if you will, please. 13 A. Yes. 14 Q. All right. At the bottom of that paragraph 15 it says, "ACIS's trustee in bankruptcy disclosed that 16 the bankruptcy estate should pay a fee of some $750,000 17 to the defendant in connection with assistance he had 18 been providing in connection with certain reorganization 19 proposals affecting the four CLOs and the company's 20 investments therein." Did I read that correctly? 21 A. Yes. 22 Q. Do you agree with that statement? 23 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation and 24 form. 25 A. I think it is the case that that fee was

1 discussed the Members Agreement and the offering
2 memorandum. Indeed I think all -- all these things
3 that counsel has shown to me are -- are documents that 4 we have reviewed to some extent in the past week or at 5 least touched upon.
6 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Did you review the 7 trustee's plan?
8 A. Not in the last week, no.
9 Q. Did you review the trustee's -- but you have 10 reviewed it before; correct?
11 A. I've -- I've -- I've seen it in, I think, 12 more than one iteration, but I haven't looked at it in 13 the last couple of weeks. I'm not -- I'm not aware 14 that it's changed.
15 Q. And when we're talking about the trustee's
16 plan, we're talking about the latest plan that's up
17 for confirmation next week; correct?
18 A. Yes, that's right. We're -- we're talking 19 about what's colloquially referred to as Plan D.
20 Q. And the trustee's lawsuit recently filed,
21 did you review that?
22 A. Which lawsuit do you refer to there?
23 Q. The one that was recently filed, and it
24 named, among others, your company.
25 A. Okay. Yes. I have looked at it in very

1 broad detail, but it wasn't -- well, it concerns
2 principally Highland Capital. I mean, yes, there
3 is -- we are a defendant, but it -- in respect of the 4 fund, it hasn't really moved on very much since the 5 early version of that, which I think I saw something
6 around about the beginning of July or the end of June 7 or something like that.
8 Q. Did you speak with anybody at Highland about 9 your deposition?
10 A. No.
11 Q. Any Highland affiliates? Just to make sure
12 that when I say "Highland," you're not thinking of one 13 particular --
14 A. No.
15 Q. -- Highland entity.
16 So no -- nobody at all?
17 A. You know, I -- I -- I'm -- I haven't talked 18 to anybody affiliated with Highland or employed by 19 Highland or whatever.
20 Q. And you represented through your counsel
21 that you're not available next week to appear in 22 person --
23 A. That's -- 24 Q. -- is that correct?
25 A. That is correct.

Page 88

1 Q. And why is that?
2 A. I'm -- I already have pre-existing board
3 meetings for three other companies, and they are in 4 Guernsey.
5 Q. All of the companies other than HCLOF that
6 you serve as a director for, none of them are CLOs,
7 are they?
8 A. No. I mean, HCLOF itself is not a CLO in 9 the strict sense of it.
10 Q. Are any of the companies that you serve as a 11 director for companies whose shareholders have 12 invested in CLOs directly as a part of that company?
13 A. If I -- if I might sort of slightly expand 14 the answer to make it a more helpful answer. Some of 15 the funds companies on which I serve, upon the boards
16 of which I serve, do invest both in CLOs and in 17 portfolios of CLO equity strips, if -- if -- if that 18 helps at all. So none of them is a CLO, but some of 19 them do have within their portfolios investments in 20 CLOs or in segregated accounts which invest in CLOs.
21 Does -- does that help?
22 Q. It -- it does help. I appreciate that.
23 But those investments in CLOs by those 24 other companies are not what you are involved in as a 25 director; is that correct?

Page 89

1 MR. MALONEY: Object to form.
2 A. How do you mean "involved in as a director"?
3 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) They --
4 A. As I say, I'm a director of these funds and 5 they invest in these things, but --
6 Q. The actual funds that you are the director
7 of invest in CLOs?
8 A. Yes. Some of them do.
9 Q. Okay. Which ones?
10 A. The particular one I'm referring to here is 11 Absolute Alpha PCC, Ltd., which invests through FRM
12 Diversified II Fund, Ltd., which then all invest in a 13 wide range of funds and segregated accounts, which, 14 amongst other things, includes CLOs and other forms of 15 structured finance.
16 Q. And what's the name of the company that 17 Absolute Alpha PCC invests in?
18 A. Oh, FRM Diversified II Fund SPC, Ltd., which 19 is a part of -- which is another fund on which -- of 20 which I used to be a director, but which is registered
21 in the Cayman Islands. And I've recently come off
22 that board in the last couple of years.
23 Q. You've never owned a CLO, have you?
24 A. Personally? No.
25 Q. Have you ever managed one?

WILLIAM SCOTT

24 (Pages 90 to 93)

Page 90 1 A. No. 2 Q. Have you ever sat on the board of a company 3 that managed a CLO? 4 A. No. 5 Q. And would you say your experience with CLOs 6 and CLO investments is broad or limited? 7 A. I have an adequate working knowledge. I 8 would not hold myself out to be an expert in the way 9 that, for example, Mr. Covitz at Highland is. But I 10 understand the basics of it. 11 Q. Okay. I want to understand now your 12 connections with Highland and the Highland entities. 13 Do you, Mr. Scott, have any connections 14 with Highland or its affiliates or entity other than 15 through HCLOF? 16 A. No. 17 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 18 A. Well, the answer's "No" anyway. 19 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Do you have any 20 investments with Highland? 21 A. No. 22 Q. Do companies or entities you own have 23 investments with Highland? 24 A. Companies' investments that I own do not 25 have any investments with Highland.		Page 92 1 firm; is that correct? 2 A. It was for a period, that's right. 3 Q. Who made that selection? 4 A. Highland proposed it. 5 Q. And... 6 A. And we then had a discussion with 7 Ms. O'Neil. 8 Q. That discussion with Ms. O'Neil regarding -- 9 I'm not trying to get into attorney-client privilege, 10 but I'm not sure how that -- where you're going with 11 that answer. 12 A. Well, you asked me who selected them. And I 13 said, you know, they were proposed by Highland, and 14 then we had a discussion with Ms. O'Neil as a partner 15 in that firm whereby Ms. Bestwick and I considered 16 whether -- I can't remember whether they were then 17 called Foley Gardere or whether they were Foley &amp; 18 Lardner. It was an appropriate firm to represent us 19 in the context of -- that we then find ourselves, and 20 at the time her firm was also representing Highland 21 Capital with its common interest. 22 Q. Did Highland already hire Gardere and just 23 tell you that they should serve as your counsel? Or 24 did they give you the option to go to somebody else? 25 A. Well, we always have the -- the -- the --

25 (Pages 94 to 97)

Page 94 1 A. I'm not familiar with that firm. I've heard 2 the name, but I'm not familiar with them. 3 Q. If I told you that HCLOF hired them in 4 connection with the involuntary, would that surprise 5 you? 6 A. Well, we've already had a discussion 7 regarding that. Highland thought that it would be, as 8 it were, appropriate in the circumstances of the time 9 in context of those proceedings. I have no particular 10 sort of anything further to say about that really. 11 Q. Well, it's true they hired them without you 12 approving them; isn't that correct? 13 A. We didn't preapprove that, that's correct. 14 Q. And it was without your knowledge that they 15 hired them; correct? 16 A. At the time, that's correct. 17 Q. And -- and they were actually appearing in 18 proceedings on your behalf without your knowledge or 19 approval; isn't that correct? 20 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. You 21 can answer. 22 A. Yes. I think it logically follows from 23 that. We had not been involved in those discussions. 24 As you quite rightly said, you know, Highland engaged 25 them on our behalf and -- and instructed them.		Page 96 1 providers for the fund, what other service providers 2 do you use? 3 A. The principal service provider is State 4 Street (Guernsey) Limited, who are our designated 5 administrator. There are other entities in the State 6 Street group, State Street Ireland who act as our 7 custodian and also, I think, provide certain 8 bookkeeping services as subcontractors, if you will, 9 to State Street (Guernsey) Limited. 10 We've in the past had a registrar. But 11 as an ambition to become a listed entity has gone 12 away, the need for that appointment diminished. So we 13 terminated the external registrar, and that's now 14 carried out by State Street, also. And in the usual 15 way, you know, we have external counsel, and we also 16 have, of course, our external auditors as well. 17 Q. Who's your external counsel? 18 A. Well, we have a number of external counsel. 19 The ones who have handled the documentation and so on 20 hitherto have been Mourant Ozannes, who are a well- 21 known -- 22 I'm sorry. Would you like me to spell 23 that? 24 THE REPORTER: Please. 25 THE WITNESS: Okay. M-o-u-r-a-n-t, new
Page 95 1 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Did you ever comment 2 to Highland about the appropriateness or lack thereof 3 with doing such a thing? 4 A. We have had discussions on the matter. 5 Q. And who communicates with your counsel? Is 6 it you or Ms. Bestwick? 7 A. We both communicate with King &amp; Spalding. I 8 mean, we -- as -- as a matter of general rule, trying 9 to ensure that both directors are equally involved in 10 everything as much as possible simultaneously. So 11 there's no, if you like, information gap between the 12 two of us. 13 Q. And Highland and Highland representatives 14 also speak with your counsel on a regular basis about 15 this matter; isn't that correct? 16 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 17 But you can answer to the extent you know. 18 A. Well, I -- I believe that there are 19 interchanges between Foley Gardere and King &amp; 20 Spalding. There may be additional conversations 21 between internal counsel at Highland and those two 22 firms. I mean, it's no secret that I think we have a 23 common interest in some of this. 24 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Besides Highland 25 Capital Management serving as one of your service		Page 97 1 word, O-z-a-n-n-e-s. 2 THE REPORTER: Thank you. 3 THE WITNESS: You're welcome. 4 So, as I say, we have Mourant Ozannes. 5 We have also engaged Carey Olsen. They handled the -- 6 the amendment to the Members Agreement. We thought it 7 more appropriate to use them than Mourant Ozannes 8 because personally they're a much bigger and, in my, 9 well, opinion, more appropriate firm, and also they 10 are correcting a drafting error in a Mourant Ozannes 11 document. So I think better for them to do it than 12 Mourant. I'm just trying to think about whether we 13 have engaged any other law firms locally in Guernsey. 14 I don't think we have, no. 15 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Who are the 16 shareholders of HCLOF? 17 A. Who are the shareholders of HCLOF? Well, I 18 think I answered that earlier. There's CLO Holdings 19 or Holdco, which has 49 percent. There is the -- the 20 group of funds which are managed by the party we've 21 agreed to refer to as the investor. They also have 49 22 percent. 23 Q. That's HarbourVest; correct? 24 A. If you say so, yes. 25 MR. MALONEY: You can confirm that.

26 (Pages 98 to 101)

Page 98 1 A. Okay. Yes, it is. And then there's the 2 balance, the 2 percent in the middle, so to speak, 3 which is held partly by Highland Capital Management 4 itself. I think they're about half of that. And then 5 the other bit is split amongst -- I forget exactly how 6 many. Well, actually it says on the front of the 7 Members -- set out in the front of the Members 8 Agreement. So it's one -- two -- three -- four -- 9 five -- five executives at Highland. 10 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And you said part of 11 the split is the five executives, but also Highland 12 Capital Management itself? 13 A. That's right. 14 Q. Is that through a director-advised fund? 15 A. No. As far as I'm aware, that's directly 16 held by them. 17 Q. All right. Ms. Best -- Bestwick described 18 her position as a nonexecutive independent director. 19 Is that how you describe your position 20 for HCLOF? 21 A. Yes. 22 Q. And what does it mean, "independent 23 director"? 24 A. Well, what it means is that we are not 25 beholden to any party. We act independently of		Page 100 1 A. That's right. 2 Q. You're the chairman? 3 A. That's right. 4 Q. Tell me about your relationship with 5 Ms. Bestwick other than your relationship as a fellow 6 board member on HCLOF. 7 Do you have any other connections with 8 her? 9 A. No, I don't. 10 Q. Any other connections with her companies? 11 A. No, I don't. 12 Q. Are there other companies you work for with 13 Ms. Bestwick? 14 A. No, not at all. 15 Q. Did Highland select her as well? 16 A. I believe so, but I didn't have visibility 17 into that process. But I -- I just assumed that it 18 was pretty similar to how they came to know me. 19 Q. And how often do you lead on HCLOF issues 20 normally? 21 A. Normally. Normally we will have a quarterly 22 board meeting to review the progress of the company, 23 et cetera. And there will probably be perhaps two 24 board meetings which are concerned with the financial 25 statements of the company and the -- the audit
Page 99 1 Highland or any shareholder or anybody on behalf of 2 the company. 3 Q. Well, isn't it true that you are beholden to 4 your shareholders? Highland being the largest one? 5 A. No. I don't regard myself as being beholden 6 to them at all. 7 Q. Okay. How were you selected? 8 A. Oh, that's a -- that's a long time ago. I 9 was approached, I think, by somebody who then worked 10 at Highland Capital. I think his name was Phillip 11 Braner if I remember correctly. And there were a 12 number of e-mails and discussions and telephone calls. 13 Maybe you might even characterize some 14 in the nature of being an interview whereby we gained 15 a mutual understanding of the project as it then was 16 and the nature of the directors that they were looking 17 for and whether we could help them with that sort of 18 a -- you know, somebody else might be more 19 appropriate. 20 Q. Highland selected you? 21 A. Yes. I mean, Highland were initially at 22 that time, you know, orchestrating the cre -- creation 23 of the fund. 24 Q. There's two members of your board of 25 directors; correct?		Page 101 1 planning process with the auditors. And there will 2 occasionally be ad hoc board meetings if something 3 comes up that needs to be disposed of by the board of 4 directors. So it's sort of 4 plus 2 plus ad hoc. 5 Q. Ms. Bestwick told me that Highland sits in 6 on all of your board meetings; is that true? 7 A. Well, Highland is normally there at all of 8 the quarterly board meetings certainly because the key 9 elements of that is for them to present their 10 investment report. And they are not always there 11 particularly where it comes to talking with the 12 auditors, and sometimes our discussions with the 13 auditors are just Ms. Bestwick and me and the auditors 14 not necessarily even including State Street. 15 Q. Otherwise, they're -- they've been at every 16 meeting; correct? 17 A. Well, they've been at every sort of 18 business-as-usual meeting. Since the start of this 19 whole process, you know, we've had a number of 20 meetings which have not involved Highland because they 21 have related to legal matters. 22 Q. Do you vote on every issue that comes up 23 as -- as a board? 24 A. Yes, we do. Well, where -- where -- where 25 we are required really either to pass a resolution

Page 102 1 or -- yes. I suppose we do, yes. Because sometimes 2 resolutions aren't necessarily required, but we review 3 and agree what we've been looking at. 4 Q. And do you keep minutes of every board 5 meeting? 6 A. Yes, we do. 7 Q. And do you know if you've produced all of 8 the board minutes to the trustee through your counsel? 9 A. So far as I'm aware, they've all been 10 produced. They may have been redacted for legal 11 reasons, but I'm not aware that there are any that are 12 being withheld. 13 Q. Now, you said you vote on -- on most 14 matters that req -- on all matters that require a 15 vote. 16 Have you ever disagreed with 17 Ms. Bestwick on any substantive issue? 18 A. No, no. No such issue has presented itself. 19 Q. And have you ever disagreed with Highland's 20 advice? 21 A. No. We haven't disagreed with Highland's 22 advice. I mean, we've had discussions. We've 23 explored what they mean. Sometimes when they say some 24 things, we have perhaps offered constructive 25 challenge. But, no. Highland has never sort of, if		Page 104 1 sense, rubber-stamped them. 2 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) What do you mean that 3 you've tested it? 4 A. Well, I mean, we -- we'll discuss what 5 the -- so, for example, if we're talking about 6 acquiring some CLO holdings, you know, we will ask 7 them, you know, what anticipated rate of return is, 8 you know, how long the investment will last, what cash 9 flows we would expect from it, and whether it sits 10 with our overall investment objectives. So that's 11 what I mean by testing it. 12 And we might also actually sit back and 13 reflect, if I could use that metaphor, as to 14 whether what we're being told is consistent with what 15 we understand about the wider world. And that's, you 16 know, the context of those research notes and things 17 that we were talking about with Mr. Maloney a little 18 while ago. 19 Q. You remember you answered the question that 20 CLO Holdco cannot remove you? 21 A. That's correct. 22 Q. Okay. 23 A. Not on its own. 24 Q. And HarbourVest cannot remove you; correct? 25 A. That's also correct, yes.
Page 103 1 you like, proposed something that we have thought was 2 inappropriate, and therefore we should vote down if 3 that is what you mean. 4 THE REPORTER: Therefore we should? 5 THE WITNESS: Vote down. 6 THE REPORTER: Thank you. 7 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) So there's no point 8 where you ever disregarded their advice; is that 9 correct? 10 A. No. I'm sorry. Yes, that is correct. I 11 think it would be wrong to disregard it. I -- I can 12 envisage circumstances where we might disagree with 13 it, not that that's arisen. But I -- I think it would 14 be quite wrong to simply disregard it if that's what 15 you mean. 16 Q. So whenever they've made a recommendation, 17 you've always accepted it? 18 Even though you might consult with 19 Ms. Bestwick and -- and flesh it out, you've always 20 agreed with what they've recommended or advised you to 21 do? 22 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form. 23 A. Well, ultimately, yes. We've tested the 24 propositions and we've been okay with them. But 25 that's certainly not to imply that we have, in any		Page 105 1 Q. So to the extent that the party that 2 appointed you, Highland, wants to keep you as a board 3 member, they can block HarbourVest from ever removing 4 you. 5 Do I understand that correctly? 6 A. Yes. I suppose that that's the consequence 7 of the Members Agreement as negotiated between the 8 parties. I mean, it's a negative control agreement, 9 not a, if you like, a positive assertive control 10 agreement. 11 Q. So Highland controls you sitting on the 12 board and Ms. Bestwick sitting on the board? 13 A. No, it doesn't. I mean, you say it controls 14 us. So that -- I mean, Highland can't fire us, they 15 can't stop us from resigning, and -- and neither can, 16 if you like, the -- the fund's represented by the 17 investor. So to say that fund controls us is not a 18 completely fair representation of the picture. 19 Q. Okay. 20 A. In a way you can say we're actually -- as a 21 consequence our independence is entrenched. 22 Q. Who makes investment decisions for HCLOF? 23 A. Well, investment decisions are formulated by 24 Highland. That's what we have a Portfolio Management 25 Agreement with them for.

28 (Pages 106 to 109)

Page 106 1 Q. So what is it that you and Ms. Bestwick make 2 decisions on? 3 A. Well, the governance of an investment fund 4 essentially is not that the board reperforms or 5 second-guesses the roles of any of our service 6 providers. What we do is, we police them, if I could 7 use that shorthand. We ensure that -- 8 THE REPORTER: If I could use that 9 short? 10 THE WITNESS: Shorthand. 11 THE REPORTER: Thank you. 12 THE WITNESS: As in shorthand. 13 So with -- I mean, you know, with -- to 14 get it offhand per se, you know, with respect to the 15 administrator, again, we review in great detail a 16 report from the administrator at each quarterly board 17 meeting and -- and how things have been going and 18 whether there have been any mistakes or errors or 19 whatever, and we assess their kperformance in context. 20 And similarly with Highland or, as I say, indeed any 21 other service provider. We -- we review the 22 performance of the auditors as well. 23 Q. And the custodians? 24 A. And the custodian, yeah. I mean, the 25 custodian really comes effectively as a package with		Page 108 1 A. We -- we were comfortable with their 2 performance. It was certainly much better than it is 3 now. 4 Q. And you were comfortable with their 5 performance when they were converting positions to 6 cash; correct? 7 A. Well, now I -- I -- we -- we -- we have to 8 be clear about where we're -- we're talking about. 9 Are you talking within the CLOs? Or are you talking 10 about within the fund? Because the mission of the 11 fund is to own equity positions in CLOs. We don't get 12 into the, if you like, the -- an overly detailed 13 involvement in, if you like, each individual loan 14 position within those CLOs. I mean, that's a -- 15 that's a level of detail that's different. 16 So whether it's appropriate to cash out 17 of one loan or another -- or in some cases I think 18 there are bankruptcy proceedings. So the nature of 19 the position changes. That -- that -- that's not a 20 level of detail, I think, that is necessary for our 21 mission on a fund level. 22 Q. So, if I understand it, you police the 23 service providers, but not on any kind of in-depth 24 level? 25 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. It

Yeah, absolutely. 6 Q. And in that policing function you've yet to 7 have any disagreement or second-guessing of what 8 Highland has ever advised you or recommended to you? 9 A. Well, we -- we have had no disagreements at 10 all about, if -- if you're getting at this, the -- the 11 conduct of the portfolio management. Although, it's, 12 strictly speaking, a discretion of the arrangement, 13 the practice has been hitherto that they always 14 discuss with us beforehand material, indeed any 15 investment transactions that they intend to propose so 16 they know we're onboard with them. I think that's a 17 good practice. 18 Q. And are you pleased with their performance 19 today? 20 A. Well, their performance is fine. Things 21 have obviously gone a bit pear-shaped since, you know, 22 Brigade were inserted, but that's a -- that's a 23 different matter. 24 Q. But not before Brigade got in. You were 25 comfortable with everything that --		Page 109 1 misstates the record. 2 A. No. We police them to a level that's 3 appropriate in the context in which we have engaged 4 them. 5 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Appropriate based on 6 what you and Ms. Bestwick think is appropriate? 7 A. Well, necessarily, of course. I mean, we 8 wouldn't be doing it to a level that we thought was 9 inappropriate. 10 Q. And you were satisfied with them -- 11 You're -- you're aware that their 12 converting positions to cash was the basis for their 13 removal by the trustee as approved by the court; isn't 14 that correct? 15 A. I think that's a mischaracterization. I 16 regarded -- at the time I think the trustee said, "I 17 don't trust them," quote-unquote. I think he said 18 that several times. 19 Q. And do you know why he didn't trust them? 20 What's your recollection there? 21 A. I have even today no understanding of why he 22 could make such an assertion. I mean, to me it just 23 doesn't make any sense. I think it was -- how do you 24 put it -- his strategic stance that he took. 25 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Are we at 13?

Yes, I 18 see it. 19 Q. Do you know if that's true? 20 A. Well, the trustee has said that. Whether 21 it's true or not is actually sort of slightly beside 22 the point. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Yes, sir. 3 A. Well, as I've already explained, we were not 4 aware of that until sometime in 2018, certainly long 5 after October or November 2017. Page 134 1 I think your prior question, Mr. Wielebinski, was, 2 "Who told you about the Terry litigation?" If you can 3 answer that, that factually, I don't have an objection 4 to you answering that if that's your question. 5 A. Okay. We were told that by the internal 6 counsel at Highland during that call. 7 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And that would be who? 8 Mr. Sevilla? 9 A. No. Mr. Sevilla -- we didn't come across 10 him for -- until some later time. There was certainly 11 a Mr. Leventon, and I think -- I'm trying to think of 12 the other guy's name. David -- I'm sorry. Tim 13 Courmoyer, I think. 14 Q. And what did they tell you? 15 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 16 the extent that they've told you anything of -- of -- 17 other than a factual nature. I 25 mean, we've -- we never got into the -- the rights and		Page 136 1 A. I'm not at all sure why it should. As I've 2 said before, this is effectively a two-party dispute 3 between Mr. Terry and his former employers and/or 4 business partners within the Highland group. 5 So from that point of view, it's not 6 really our concern unless something emerges which 7 gives us cause. And nothing has emerged that's been 8 brought to our attention that gives us cause to, in 9 any way, doubt the -- the voracity of the relationship 10 that we have with Highland. 11 Q. Nothing's caused you to doubt that, the 12 voracity of -- 13 A. Nobody has -- I mean, lots of people have 14 made lurid allegations about all sorts of things. But 15 I wasn't there, neither was Ms. Bestwick. And as I've 16 said in other context, I'm not going to take the 17 position one way or another about the rights and the 18 wrongs of the Terry dispute. 19 As far as we are concerned, it's an 20 internal Highland group matter. And it's simply, if 21 you like, a matter of established fact that, as a 22 consequence thereof, Mr. Terry is a judgment creditor 23 of Acis Capital Management. And that -- that really 24 is as far as -- as I go. 25 Q. Well, isn't it true that the Terry
Page 135 1 the wrongs of who did what to whom and when and all -- 2 all the rest of that. That's -- it's -- obviously 3 it's the foundation of the dispute between Mr. Terry 4 and the various Highland parties, but it's an internal 5 matter be -- employment matter between them, and it's 6 not strictly of itself a matter that is our -- our 7 matter. We're -- we're not involved. 8 Q. And when were you told this? 9 A. Well, as I've said, there was a call which 10 was arranged in April this year. 11 Q. And that's the first time you became aware 12 of the involuntary bankruptcy or anything having to do 13 with this Terry litigation; is that correct? 14 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 15 A. Yes, that's correct. 16 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Did they tell you why 17 Mr. Terry left Highland's employment? 18 A. No. 19 Q. When you found out about the involuntary and 20 the litigation with Mr. Terry, did that trouble you? 21 A. Yes, it did. 22 Q. Did it cause you to second-guess your 23 relationship with Highland? 24 A. No. 25 Q. Why not?		Page 137 1 litigation and then the involuntary, which was 2 subsequently turned into Chapter 11 proceedings -- 3 haven't they just caused you to -- a number of 4 problems for you and HCLOF? 5 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation and 6 form. 7 A. Well, they -- they -- they -- they have 8 caused us a number of problems for all sorts of 9 reasons. And, you know, go back to my answer a few 10 minutes ago. When we found out about the proceedings, 11 of course, it caused us concern because, you know, we 12 have no desire to be dragged into law disputes over 13 here, which are predominantly really disputes between 14 other parties. 15 Q. Yes, we have. 18 Q. -- proceedings, have you not? 19 You've been sued in those proceedings, 20 have you not? 21 A. Yes, we have. That doesn't mean to say that 22 the party who's suing us is -- is -- is right. In 23 fact, actually objectively they're quite wrong in some 24 of the assertions they made. 25 Q. Off the 9 record at 2:05. This is Disk 3, Volume 1. 10 (Break.) 11 THE VIDEOGRAPHER: On the record at 12 2:07. This is Disc 3, Volume 1. 13 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Would you read the 14 last question for me, please? 15 (Record read.) 16 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation and 17 form. Go ahead. You can answer. 18 A. Okay. Well, first of all, strictly port -- 19 Highland remains the portfolio manager of the fund. I 20 think what you mean is, it's caused the CLOs in which 21 we hold the equity strips to be deprived of Highland 22 as a submanager or advisor. I think that has been 23 very much to the detriment of the fund's investor in 24 the equity strips of those CLOs. It didn't have to be 25 like that, but that's how it's worked out.		Page 140 1 But, you know, unfortunately it's -- it's -- it's -- 2 it's pointless as we cannot accede to, you know, what 3 we're trying to be pressured into. 4 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And the pressure was 5 coming from who? Mr. Terry? 6 A. Well, I suppose you would say Mr. Terry, who 7 was using the trustee as his instrument to do that, 8 yes. 9 Q. Caused by the litigation and the bankruptcy? 10 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form. 11 A. Well, I'm not sure that litigation and 12 bankruptcy as such is the cause. It's more the tool. 13 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Who commenced that 14 litigation against Mr. Terry? Do you recall? 15 A. I'm sorry. What litigation against 16 Mr. Terry? 17 Q. The litigation in Dallas that led to the 18 arbitration award. 19 A. As I say, I don't have any knowledge of 20 those proceedings. I'm simply aware after the event 21 of the fact of them and of their outcome. 22 Q. So you never asked the question, "Who 23 commenced the litigation that caused all these 24 problems"? 25 A. I -- I, honestly, really don't see the point
Page 139 1 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Litigation has also -- 2 and the bankruptcy have caused you to incur 3 significant legal fees; isn't that correct? 4 A. Oh, absolutely, yes. 5 Q. It's also caused your investors to have to 6 absorb your additional costs that you're now charging 7 to them; isn't that correct? 8 A. That's absolutely right. 9 Q. And it's also caused you not to be able to 10 do a reset that was planned around January-February of 11 2018; is that -- 12 A. That's right. 13 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 14 foundation and form. 15 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) It also caused you not 16 to be able to do a liquidation or any reset or 17 redemption over the last seven months; isn't that 18 correct? 19 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation and 20 form. 21 A. Well, what's certainly true is giving the 22 trustee the opportunity to interfere very 23 detrimentally with our investments. None of it needed 24 to be like that. I entirely -- well, I -- I infer 25 that the reason largely was to pile pressure on us.		Page 141 1 of it. People in the alternative asset management 2 world and others leave their employers all the time. 3 Sometimes it's amicable, sometimes it's acrimonious. 4 It's a fact of life, it happens. 5 So, you know, I'm -- as I've said 6 before, I'm not going to take a position on the rights 7 and wrongs of the case or whether Highland should or 8 should not defend itself and/or -- or -- or go on the 9 offensive. It's -- it's really not a matter that is 10 strictly within the purview of the fund. It is an 11 internal Highland versus Mr. Terry employment dispute. 12 Q. I wasn't asking whether you knew the details 13 of the litigation. I was asking if you knew who 14 commenced the litigation that now has caused all these 15 problems in -- that we just walked through for HCLOF. 16 A. I -- I'm -- 17 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 18 foundation and form. You can answer. 19 A. I don't know whether Mr. Terry sued Highland 20 or Highland sued Mr. Terry. 21 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Would it have mattered 22 to you? 23 A. Not really. 24 Q. So it doesn't matter who called -- who 25 generated the problems that you're now having to deal

Page 142 1 with? 2 MR. MALONEY: Objection to foundation 3 and form. 4 A. Well, if one goes further back -- I mean, 5 lawsuits inevitably result from disputes. And whether 6 it's having to do with money or to do with other 7 matters, there's a dispute between parties. They have 8 a different perception perhaps of a set of 9 circumstances. 10 I am aware that both Mr. Terry and 11 Highland have said things about each other that are 12 not exactly complimentary. But I -- I -- I -- I -- as 13 I've said before, I don't know the circumstances, I 14 wasn't there, I haven't heard the evidence, and I'm 15 not going to express an opinion on it because I'm -- 16 I'm not in a position to. 17 Q. I mean, we were simply aware that the 22 litigation -- well, actually we were aware that the 23 arbitration award had been converted into a judgment 24 and that it spilled over into a Chapter 11 bankruptcy 25 proceeding. That's all I really need to know. So I		Page 144 1 MR. MALONEY: Objection to form and 2 foundation. You can answer if you understand. 3 A. Yes, I do. And I -- I stand by that, and 4 it's qualified only to the extent that we have 5 specifically agreed with our shareholders in the 6 Members Agreements and the amendment thereto to adhere 7 to certain procedures, consents and negative control 8 rights that we thereby run them. But other than that 9 they're completely standard. 10 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) But other than that? 11 A. They're completely standard. 12 Q. MALONEY: Objection to form and 4 foundation. You may answer. 5 A. I -- I don't think it's relevant. What is 6 relevant is the fact that Mr. Terry has his judgment 7 creditor status. And as a consequence the Chapter 11 8 trustee has been appointed, and these proceedings are 9 grinding on as they are. That's what matters. 10 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And are -- are you 11 aware that Mr. Terry was not terminated for cause? 12 A. I am aware that there have been various 13 statements made by both sides, which are arguably 14 incompatible, which is correct. I don't know. 15 Highlands say that he was terminated for cause. He 16 says he wasn't. 17 Q. Do you know how the arbitrators ruled? 18 A. Well, obviously to an extent the arbitrators 19 ruled in his favor, but I haven't read their detailed 20 judgment... 21 Q. Can you read the first sentence?	Page 148 1 pretextually characterized Ter -- Terry's termination                  2 from Highland as a, quotes, for cause, end quotes,                  3 termination to deny Terry the value of his limited                  4 partnership interest, all in contractual breach of the                  5 Acis LPA and in breach of fiduciary duty to Terry as                  6 its limited partner."                  7 Q. Thank you. Will you also read the first                  8 sentence of the next paragraph?                  9 A. "The evidence establishes that Highland's                  10 termination of Terry was, in fact, pretextual without                  11 basis of cause and only because Dondero wanted him                  12 gone."                  13 Q. And can you read the last sentence in that                  14 paragraph?                  15 A. "Dondero was simply angry and realized Terry                  16 was not a, quotes, yes man, end quotes, willing to let                  17 Dondero have his wrongheaded way. So Dondero fired                  18 Terry on the spot and later sought to characterize                  19 Terry's termination of employment as a, quote, for                  20 cause, end quote."                  21 Q. What's your reaction to those -- those                  22 findings?                  23 A. Well, as I said before, factually they                  24 exist. They are what they are. Can you look at the bottom paragraph and                  6 read that to me, just the -- the first two sentences?                  7 I'm sorry.                  8 MR. MALONEY: Which paragraph?                  9 MR. WIELEBINSKI: It's the bottom                  10 paragraph, "The evidence establishes..."                  11 THE WITNESS: Okay. So "The evidence                  12 establishes that Acis and Acis GP did not just simply                  13 rely on Highland's statement of terminating Terry for                  14 cause."                  15 Do you want me to go on to the next                  16 sentence?                  17 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Yes, please.                  18 A. Okay. "Acis and Acis GP became part of                  19 Highland's and Dondero's efforts to cons -- to                  20 construct a pretext of, quotes, for cause, end quotes,                  21 termination so Terry could be deni -- could be denied                  22 the value of his limited partnership interest in                  23 Acis."                  24 Q. Go on.                  25 A. "Acis and Acis GP knowingly and willingly	Page 149 1 award, the consequence of it, as a given fact.                  2 Q. It has no relation at all on Highland as a                  9 portfolio manager and the performance and capabilities                  10 of the portfolio and management team headed by Hunter                  11 Covitz. This relates to the breakdown in the                  12 relationship between Mr. Dondero and Mr. Terry.                  13 And I -- I have, as I say, no comment                  14 really to make on the arbitration award other than to                  15 note that it is what it is and it exists. And I --                  16 I -- I have no reason to sort of cast aspersions on                  17 the process. I mean, I understand Highland may think                  18 that they have grounds to appeal. I have no basis or                  19 standing on which to comment on that one way or                  20 another. It just is what it is.                  21 Q. But this third-party dispute over an                  22 employment arrangement and whatever else --                  23 A. I think I've seen this before.                  7 Q. And when did you see it?                  8 A. Well, it's dated the 13th of November. So                  9 it would be sometime subsequent to that. Probably                  10 very soon thereafter. I would think about a couple of                  11 weeks ago.                  12 Q. All right. And you see that HCLOF is named                  13 as a party, do you not?                  14 A. Yes. We're named there as a third-party                  15 defendant.                  16 Q. Okay.                  17 A. And also as a counter-defendant.                  18 Q. All right. Yes, I see that.                  3 Q. I was aware that on one of the many, many                  7 hearings in this whole process some claims had been                  8 dismissed without prejudice for various technical                  9 reasons.                  10 Q. Highland Funding is listed as one of the                  19 parties?                  20 A. Yes.                  21 Q. All right. Do you know what claims you're                  22 being named as a party for?                  23 A. Well, as I say, I've not read this                  24 particular document. I -- I'm going to speculate and                  25 give you the opportunity to correct me, but I think

It calls for a legal conclusion or to                  2 the extent his answer reflects any information he                  3 received from counsel.                  4 A. Let me say a number of things. The first                  5 one is, I've not read this document in detail. We                  6 have had a lot to deal with. So our focus at the                  7 moment has been on this Plan D confirmation process.                  8 So this, if you like, is in the "In"                  9 tray to be dealt with at a future date. Quite what,                  10 if you like, the -- if you like, the stimulants to                  11 which the trustee is -- is reacting. To the many                  12 different things that there have been in this action,                  13 I -- I couldn't really say at this juncture.                  14 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Okay. Look again at                  15 Paragraph 1, Page 1.                  16 A. Yes.                  17 Q. I'm sorry, Page 2. Do you see the first                  18 sentence where it says "All claims asserted in the                  19 original complaint by Highland Capital and Highland                  20 CLO Funding --," which is referred to as Highland                  21 Funding --," have been dismissed without prejudice"?                  22 A. This is on the -- the second line --                  23 Q. Correct.                  24 A. -- of Paragraph 1 underneath Answer and                  25 Affirmative Defenses?	Page 213 1 these are in relation to the allegations of some form                  2 of fraudulent transfer.                  3 Q. Would that be the transactions that you                  4 described were a unitary transaction around October of                  5 2017?                  6 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to                  7 form, foundation, particularly with respect to the                  8 specific transactions you may be referring to.                  9 A. I -- I think there's an overlap there, but I                  10 don't think everything that we did in October and                  11 November of 2017 is, if you like, the subject of such                  12 claims. I think there are some things which have been                  13 picked out.                  14 My recollection is, I think there are                  15 probably three sets of -- broadly, of things that the                  16 trustee alleges that we've done somehow wrongful acts,                  17 and in his characterization designed to strip Acis of                  18 value or words to that effect. So, I mean, that --                  19 that's my understanding. Now, as I say, I've not read                  20 this document, which is 80 pages long. So if I'm                  21 incorrect in what I've just said, please, do correct                  22 me.                  23 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Okay. If you would                  24 look at -- well, just go to the headings. Look at                  25 Count Number 10.

I 22 haven't had time to read the whole document, but -- 23 Q. What -- what are the shares -- do you 24 know -- that were transferred at or about that time? 25 A. The only shares that I'm aware of being		Page 216 1 the note transfer? 2 MR. MALONEY: Objection to foundation 3 and form. 4 A. No. I think we discovered it in various 5 filings in and around that time. It was -- it was 6 sort of brought up, as it were, I think, by the 7 trustee, to be frank. 8 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And then if you would 9 look at the Count 21, 22, 23, 24, you notice those are 10 all counts to seek to avoid as fraudulent transfers 11 the 2017-7 equity and 2007 -- 2017-7 agreement 12 transfers. 13 Are you familiar with those at all? 14 A. Well, that's what the document appears to 9 say. 10 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And what was the note 11 that was transferred at or about that time? Do you 12 know? 13 A. Well, that's a very good question. We knew 14 nothing about this note. Those are an internal 15 arrangement within various parties loosely within, 16 what you might call, the Highland affiliation or 17 whatever. 18 Q. Okay. 19 A. So we didn't know anything about that until 20 about June this year. The fund was not a party to the 21 note, and it was not involved in any way in any 22 transfer or whatever in relation to the note. So 23 it's -- it's an -- it's an item that we know nothing 24 about and have no involvement in. 25 Q. Well, I'm not necessarily agreeing 12 with what it says. 13 Q. Sure. 14 A. But, as a matter of fact, what the -- the 15 words on the page say is that "Highland Funding is an 16 initial transferee of all transfers sought to be 17 avoided in Counts 13 to 16 above, and Highland Capital 18 is an entity for whose benefit such transfers were 19 made. The trustee may recover all avoided transfers 20 from Highland Funding and Highland Capital pursuant to 21 Section 550." 22 Q. What do you understand that to say, if you 23 know? 24 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to 25 the extent the witness has any understanding. I'm

Page 218 1 also going to object to the extent that these 2 proceedings are being used to get some sort of 3 preanswer. This document has not been answered or 4 responded to, and I'd also object to the extent it 5 calls for a legal conclusion. And I would caution the 6 witness not to speculate. 7 A. Well, the answer is, I don't know. I'm not 8 an expert on U.S. bankruptcy law. I have no idea what 9 Section 550 means. It talks about transfers to be 10 avoided in Counts 13 to 16 above. We've discussed 11 some of those a moment -- a moment ago. And, as I 12 say, they are -- to the extent that they are 13 transactions at all, they are transactions in which 14 HCLOF had no involvement at all or any immoral or 15 illegal intent. 16 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Hey, guys, can you 17 moot your phone, your lines, please, if you're 18 talking? 19 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) So you're saying that 20 HCLOF knew nothing about the share transfers that's 21 Counts 13 to 16? 22 A. Well -- 23 MR. MALONEY: Objection. Objection to 24 form and -- and foundation. And I'm also going to 25 again object to the extent that this deposition is		Page 220 1 THE WITNESS: That's a net asset 2 value -- in a normal way, and we paid Acis Capital 3 Management in cash their proportionate share of the 4 fund on that basis. So there's no value transfer 5 there. 6 With respect to the note, as I say, 7 it's a matter to which we were not a party. We've 8 never had any involvement in it, and we knew nothing 9 about it until it popped up in the proceedings 10 sometime in June or whatever this year. And -- and 11 the bit about the Acis CLO equity 2017-7 or whatever, 12 I simply don't know what you're talking about there. 13 That's a new one on me. 14 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Fair enough. Will you 15 look at Count 28, please, that's on Page 60 of 80? 16 A. 60 of 80. 28, Civil Conspiracy to Breach 17 Fiduciary Duties. 18 Q. And do you see down below in the left-hand 19 corner right at the bottom of the page Highland 20 Funding is named down there? 21 A. Yes. 22 Q. Okay. It's the sentence that reads 23 "Finally, Highland Capital, Highland Funding, Dondero 24 and Waterhouse conspired to make numerous transfers to 25 denude Acis," and then it goes on.
Page 219 1 being used to get a preanswer on a document that has 2 not yet been formally responded to in the court in 3 which -- in the proceeding in which it's filed. 4 A. Well, I -- I don't know whether this is 5 exactly answering your question on point, but in 6 substance it is. We have not participated in any 7 fraudulent transfers. And we can argue about this at 8 a later date, which I think Mr. Maloney is saying is 9 the appropriate time to do it. But there was no value 10 in the ALF PMA in the way that the Chapter 11 trustee 11 suggests. It could not be used in the way that he 12 suggests to generate value for the estate or for Acis 13 Loan Funding to the detriment of its investors. Now, 14 that's my position. I know that you disagree with it, 15 but that's what it is. 16 With respect to the ALF shareholding in 17 HCLOF, they were bought back for full value on the 18 same terms as would be offered to any other investor, 19 and they were paid out in cash on the dollar. And 20 they were -- when we calculated our NAV in a normal 21 way and they were given the -- 22 THE REPORTER: When we calculated what 23 in a normal -- 24 THE WITNESS: Our NAV. 25 THE REPORTER: Thank you.		Page 221 1 A. Yeah. Well, just because somebody makes an 2 allegation doesn't mean to say it's true. I think 3 I've already dealt with the ALF PMA transfer, the 4 share transfer, the note transfer, and the 2017-7 5 transfer, and the rest of it. 6 And this thwarting some Universal/BVK 7 agreement transfer, again, that's a subject that I 8 know nothing about in which the funds -- I had no 9 involvement. And, therefore, I don't see why we -- or 10 how we could possibly conspire with anybody in respect 11 to that. It just doesn't make sense. 12 Q. You -- will you look at Paragraph 29 for me, 13 please? That's on -- I'm sorry. 14 A. You mean Count 29? 15 Q. Count 29 -- 16 A. Right. 17 Q. -- right. It's on Page 62. 18 A. Yes. 19 Q. And you see that's Aiding and Abetting 20 Breach of Fiduciary Duties? 21 A. I see that. 22 MR. MALONEY: One second. 23 Q. And you see in Paragraph -- 24 MR. MALONEY: I'm not on the same 25 place. Are we on Count 29? What --

I see that it says that. 7 Q. All right. And if you -- finally you'd look 8 on Page 77 under the Prayer, do you see in iii it asks 9 for a judgment against Highland Funding? 10 A. Yes, I see that. 11 Q. Okay. And then in iv it asks for a judgment 16 against Highland Funding among others? 17 A. Yes. 18 Q. And you see it says repunitive damages; 19 correct? 20 A. I haven't seen -- yes, okay. Yes. 21 Q. Okay. And also in x Highland Funding is 22 named? 23 A. Yes. 24 Q. MALONEY: Object to the form and 10 foundation and legal conclusion. 11 A. Well, I -- I think personally it was filed 12 at this time strategically to try to color these 13 present proceedings in respect of Plan D. But, I 14 mean, the -- if you like, the -- the -- the -- the 15 sort of apparent foundation of it is to undo these 16 supposed transfers or these transfers that were 17 supposedly somehow of fraudulent intent. 18 Q. So, for example, the note

Yes, I do. 13 Q. Can you look at Page 31 for me, please? 14 A. 31. Okay. Yes, I'm on Page 31. 15 Q. Actually, could you look at Page 30? Start 16 with Line 1. 17 A. "Are you aware that during the involuntary 18 trial...?" That line? 19 Q. Yes, sir. Can you read that? 20 A. Okay. "Are you aware that during the 21 involuntary trial a number of representations were 22 made to the court by counsel for Acis at that time 23 that HarbourVest only invested in HCLOF on the 24 condition that Acis would not have anything to do with 25 Acis CLOs going forward, and that the investor would
Page 255 1 portfolio manager to the fund. And at the time we 2 interpreted that as being a, if you like, a condition 3 precedent set by HarbourVest. 4 But I understand on subsequent 5 clarification that that may not have been the reason 6 why there was a condition to the transaction. It may 7 have been a matter to do with the then applicable risk 8 retention rules and Acis being noncompliant in that 9 regard. So that's a sort of, if you like, a further 10 clarification that's been provided to us more 11 recently. 12 Q. And who provided that to you? 13 A. I think that that has come from, well, from 14 Mr. Maloney actually, but I don't want to -- 15 MR. MALONEY: Just to be clear, I don't 16 want you to reveal anything that you heard from 17 counsel; all right? 18 THE WITNESS: Okay. 19 MR. MALONEY: Okay? Let's -- let's be 20 clear about that. 21 THE WITNESS: Yeah. I don't think 22 Mis -- Mr. Maloney was necessarily providing advice in 23 that regard. I think he was passing something on. 24 Q. Are you aware of that 3 representation?" 4 Q. Okay. And then if you could skip down to 5 Line 15, do you see it says "Okay. Do you agree with 6 that statement"? 7 A. I see that. 8 Q. And then the answer is "No"? 9 A. I see that answer. 10 Q. And then the question "Why not"? 11 A. Yes. 12 Q. Can you read that answer? 13 A. Starting with Line 18, "We made an 14 investment here into a Highland-managed fund. I would 15 say that we very much viewed Acis and Highland as 16 interchangeable from the perspective of the, you know, 17 the actual investment opportunity. It was merely a 18 sort of name or branding issue from our perspective. 19 And so ultimately our investment was with the existing 20 Highland platform and the team and the strategy on a 21 go-forward basis. And so the naming convention around 22 the vehicle we invested into or the underlying CLO 23 vehicles was really of no concern from our 24 perspective." 25 Q. Okay. Are you surprised by that statement?

66 (Pages 258 to 261)

Page 258 1 Those statements? 2 MR. MALONEY: Stop. Let -- let me 3 object. I'm going to object to the premise. I'm 4 going to object to having the witness read this 5 transcript into the record and having asked questions 6 based upon the premise that this -- this is the 7 transcript. I have no reason to believe that it's 8 not. But I object on the basis that it's inserting 9 hearsay into the proceedings, and I object on the 10 basis that the witness has no foundation other than 11 you're showing him a document and he's reading it. 12 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Are you surprised by 13 those statements? 14 A. Yes, I'm surprised by that. 15 Q. And if you look on Page 31, do you see the 16 Line 3 and 4, "And HarbourVest made no demand upon 17 Highland with respect to the name"? 18 A. I see that. 19 Q. And the answer is "No"? 20 A. Yep, I see that. 21 Q. Will you read the next line -- the next 22 questions up to Line 12? 23 A. "Are you aware that Scott Ellington, general 24 counsel for HCM, testified that HarbourVest said with 25 absolute certainty that they had no interest in doing		Page 260 1 What I'm sort of surprised about in a 2 way is the apparent conflict between, you know, what's 3 said here by -- and I think Mr. Pugatch, or -- or 4 however one pronounces the name, is a representative 5 of Highland. And what we were told and what our 6 lawyer was told at the time -- and I'm treading 7 slightly carefully here because I -- I don't want to 8 go into a situation of supposedly waiving privilege. 9 But we were told in writing that the change from Acis 10 was a condition of the transaction, quote-unquote. 11 Q. Imposed by HarbourVest? 12 A. I didn't say that actually. 13 Q. They did not? 14 A. They said it was a condition of the 15 transaction. We might have been left to infer that, 16 but it didn't actually say that. 17 Q. Are you surprised that -- are you surprised 18 that at least the statement seems to be that what 19 Mr. Ellington told the court was inaccurate? 20 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form, 21 foundation. 22 A. Well, I -- I -- I know no more about what 23 Mr. Ellington told the court than what you've just 24 told to me and what is put to the -- to Mr. Pugatch in 25 this deposition.
Page 259 1 business with Acis because the Acis brand was 2 purportedly toxic, and consequently nothing associated 3 with Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO? Are 4 you aware of that statement?" 5 Q. Okay. And then if you skip down to Line 17, 6 18, "Okay. Is that statement true?" That's from 7 Mr. Prostok. And the answer? 8 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object 9 again, same basis as before. You're asking the 10 witness to read another transcript into the record, 11 and I -- I object to that. I object on hearsay. I 12 object on foundation. I object to the form of the 13 question. 14 MR. WIELEBINSKI: Okay. 15 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) And are you surprised 16 by those answers? 17 A. Well, the -- the -- the answer is "Yes" and 18 "No." I'm surprised -- well, firstly, I'm not 19 surprised actually that an investor regards Acis and 20 Highland in some senses as interchangeable. Because, 21 remember, Acis was nothing more really than a paper 22 company. The investment engine was the team at 23 Highland. So, as far as HarbourVest is concerned, I 24 can see the point that they would perceive it's just a 25 bit of Highland. So I -- I can totally get that.		Page 261 1 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Okay. Will you look 2 at Page 58, please? 3 A. Yes. 4 Q. Let me ask you this: Did you make your 5 investor, HarbourVest, aware of the litigation you 6 commenced in Guernsey against Mr. Terry? 7 A. We fund -- I don't think consulted with 8 HarbourVest beforehand or reported it directly to them 9 afterwards. 10 Q. So they're not aware of it today? 11 A. They may or may not be aware of it. I don't 12 know if Highland told them about it. 13 Q. Do you think it was appropriate -- 14 THE REPORTER: I don't know what? 15 THE WITNESS: If Highland told them 16 about it. 17 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Do you think it's 18 important that they know? 19 A. I think it would be interesting for them to 20 know, but it's not a requirement necessarily they be 21 informed. I mean, they will necessarily, I think, be 22 informed in due course. 23 Q. Could you look at Page 64, please? 24 A. Yes. 25 Q. Page 262 1 with Line 13, please. I'll read it to you. "But have 2 you expressed an opinion in this case different than 3 Highland's at any point?" And there's some 4 objections, "With respect to the bankruptcy matters?" 5 And there's an objection. And then Mr. Prostok says 6 "Yes, to Highland." Deponent, "I think the --," and 7 Ms. O'Neil objects, and the deponent then answers in 8 Line 23. 9 Can you read that to me, please? 10 A. "The primary opinion we've expressed to 11 Highland, I would say, is a desire to see this all go 12 away quickly, to be able to get back to the original 13 investment thesis or premises of the investment that 14 we had made, which would have included the ability to 15 refinance or reset the underlying CLOs, given that the 16 current situation, you know, in our view, is untenable 17 vis-a-vis the go-forward equity returns of holding 18 those positions in their current capital structure or 19 form today." 20 Q. You haven't talked to HarbourVest; correct? 21 MR. MALONEY: Objection. I'm going to 22 object to the premise of the question, the reading 23 into the record of the transcript, which may or may 24 not be hearsay, may or may not have a basis to be read 25 into the record, and the foundation of the quest --		Page 264 1 have said in terms of the specific parts that you have 2 drawn to my attention because I've not seen this 3 transcript before today. So I've only got knowledge 4 of the bits that you've drawn my attention to. But 5 there's nothing in it in that sense that's a surprise 6 about HarbourVest's view of life. 7 Q. You're taking that view into consideration, 8 though, when you act as a director. 9 Is that a fair statement? 10 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation and 11 form. 12 A. What we're doing when we're acting as a 13 director is acting in the best interest of the company 14 as we see it on the basis of the information that's 15 available to us. And, you know, we're acting in good 16 faith in that regard. 17 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Sometimes the 18 information hasn't been made available to you, though, 19 has it, by Highland? 20 You've -- you've given me a few 21 examples today. 22 A. Page 263 1 question and the form of the question. 2 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) You've had no 3 communications with HarbourVest directly; correct? 4 A. Well, I've had no direct communication with 5 HarbourVest. The view that's expressed there doesn't 6 surprise me. It's an entirely rational view of an 7 investor to express. 8 Q. Including they want an expedient result; 9 correct? 10 Isn't that what they're saying? 11 MR. MALONEY: Objection -- 12 A. Well -- well -- 13 MR. MALONEY: -- foundation. 14 A. We would all be delighted, the board 15 included, if the trustee would just fold up his tents 16 and go away, and that would be a very quick and 17 expedient resolution. Unfortunately I don't think 18 it's going to happen. But, yes, we would all love 19 this to go away. Of course, we would. 20 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Did Highland 21 communicate this view from HarbourVest to you as a 22 director of HCLOF? 23 A. Yes. We've had -- well, we've had periodic 24 verbal reports about liaison with HarbourVest. And, I 25 mean, there's nothing, as I say, in what HarbourVest		Page 265 1 of business situation that there are going to be 2 pieces of the information matrix that you don't have 3 either because people haven't told you or because 4 they're not discoverable or -- or whatever. So you 5 have to make judgments based on what you have. 6 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) In -- in this 7 circumstance, though, where it certainly, I think it's 8 fair to say, has been time-consuming and frustrating, 9 it's important that you have as much information as 10 possible, isn't it? 11 MR. MALONEY: Objection, form, 12 foundation. 13 A. I agree that as a matter of general 14 principle, that applies equally to this situation, the 15 more information and insight you have, the better. 16 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Have you been 17 satisfied with the information flow that you've 18 received from Highland in -- in this matter? 19 A. Broadly, yes. I mean, there are bound to be 20 areas where I think the information flow has been less 21 good than it should have been. And I certainly would 22 have liked it to have been much better with hindsight, 23 yes. 24 Q. Can you look at Page 85 for me, please? And 25 if you would read Line 4 through 17.

Page 266 1 A. 85, Lines 4 through 17? 2 Q. Yes, sir. 3 MR. MALONEY: Object again to reading 4 into the record. 5 A. "I just want --." I don't believe this -- 6 oh, this is the man from HarbourVest. "I just wanted 7 to also sort of make the point that I think a 8 continuation of the status quo -- i.e., the situation 9 that we're in, without the ability to refind -- 10 refinance or reset in the immediate term -- is 11 probably the most detrimental as we think about the 12 returns -- the return potential for HCLOF and, in 13 turn, us vis-a-vis the equity investment in these 14 CLOs. So, you know, something happening -- whether 15 that's a refinancing or a reset in the near term -- or 16 absent all of that, even a redemption or call of those 17 vehicles is a better option for us, purely 18 economically speaking as an investor in HCLOF, versus 19 just a continuation of the current situation -- 20 management by Brigade, but without the ability to 21 reset or refinance the capital structure of those 22 CLOs." 23 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Management by Brigade. 24 What does that mean? Do you know? MALONEY: I'm going to object to 3 form, foundation. You can answer. 4 A. I mean, as -- as the -- the mess that 5 Brigade is currently making of it, yes, I'm -- I'm -- 6 agree -- agree with that. It's not the optimal 7 solution, but it might be better than what we have at 8 the moment. 9 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) It may be better, a 10 redemption? A liquidation may be better than what we 11 have at the moment? 12 Is that what you were saying? 13 A. It may be. 14 Q. Does it -- does it concern you at all as a 15 director that the 49 percent investor in your company 16 is -- is giving these kinds of statements? 17 A. No. 18 Q. And -- and why is that? 19 A. Well, there's nothing in the statements 20 there that he said with which I fundamentally 21 disagree. 22 Q. Can you look back at Exhibit Number 10 for 23 me? 24 A. Uh-huh. These are the board minutes. 25 Q. Yes, sir. Two things. One, can you look at
Page 267 1 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object again 2 to the premise, to the potential hearsay premise of 3 the entire question, reading into the record of a 4 deposition transcript, object to the form of the 5 question, and foundation. 6 A. Well, you're -- you're sort of taking me 7 selectively to various paragraphs, perhaps out of 8 contextual, I know. But the section that you just got 9 me to read, I don't disagree with that at all. And 10 when it says "management by grade -- Brigade," I don't 11 know if this is what the person who is speaking meant. 12 But what I interpret by that is, he's talking about 13 the de facto management or submanagement -- call it 14 what you will -- of the CLOs by Brigade as is the 15 current situation. 16 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) He actually says in 17 here that even a redemption, essentially a 18 liquidation, would be better than what the alternative 19 is. 20 MR. MALONEY: Objection -- 21 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Do you see that there? 22 "Even a redemption or call of those vehicles is a 23 better option for us." 24 A. Uh-huh. Yes, I've just read that. 25 Q. And you said you didn't disagree with that?		Page 269 1 6.3, Section 6.3? 2 A. Yes. 3 Q. Do you see where it says "It was noted that 4 each director undertook to disclose to the company and 5 his fellow directors any manner or circumstance of 6 which he or she was or became aware or which would 7 make the offering mem -- memorandum or any statement 8 in it misleading," and then it goes on? 9 A. I see that paragraph, yes. 10 Q. But you didn't have all the information to 11 determine whether any statement would be misleading 12 because Highland didn't share all the information with 13 you. 14 Isn't that a fair statement? 15 MR. MALONEY: Objection, foundation. 16 A. Well, what this paragraph is saying is that 17 if any of the directors knows about something, then 18 they should disclose it to the -- the boards. But, 19 you know, you're talking now about things that we 20 didn't know about. 21 Q. (By Mr. Wielebinski) Could that have an 22 impact on your investors, not being able to share 23 information that you subsequently have learned like 24 you have in this case? 25 MR. MALONEY: I'm going to object to

I, Michael J. Pugatch, declare as follows:

1. I am a managing director of HarbourVest Partners, LLC. I submit this Declaration in support of the Motion Pursuant to Rule 3018(A) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Purposes of Voting to Accept or Reject the Plan filed on behalf of HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P., HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P., HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P., HV International VIII Secondary L.P., HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P., and HarbourVest Partners L.P., on behalf of funds and accounts under management (collectively, “HarbourVest”) being filed concurrently with this Declaration. I submit this Declaration based on my personal knowledge.

2. HarbourVest is a passive minority investor in Highland CLO Funds (“HCLOF”), a vehicle managed by Highland Capital Management LP (“Highland”). HarbourVest initially invested $73,522,928 for a roughly 49% interest in HCLOF, on November 15, 2017. On February 9, 2018, HarbourVest contributed an additional $4,998,501 following a capital call. To date, HarbourVest has received three dividends from HCLOF, each totaling $1,570,429.

3. The unaudited net asset value of HCLOF as of August 31, 2020 was $44,587,820. HarbourVest’s share of HCLOF is thus valued at a mere $22,287,228. HarbourVest’s expected proceeds from the original HCLOF investment were projected to exceed $135 million.

4. Highland has charged over $15 million in attorneys’ fees for HCLOF, Highland, Acis, Highland HCF, and others, to HCLOF. We, as shareholders, were made to pay these entities’ legal fees. HarbourVest’s share of these fees stands at more than $7.5 million (as of June 30, 2020).

5. HarbourVest’s own legal fees spent protecting its interests have reached more than $1 million to date, which include legal fees associated with HarbourVest responding to Rule

2004 discovery requests seeking documents and a deposition from HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy, monitoring the Acis bankruptcy for false statements regarding HarbourVest, assessment of legal claims and damages to HarbourVest attributable to Highland's conduct, as well as protecting HarbourVest's rights in the Highland bankruptcy, including through filing proofs of claim regarding HarbourVest's claims. These fees continue to accrue.

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

INTRODUCTION

1. In its Solicitation Motion, the Debtor proposes to disallow for voting purposes all claims to which it has objected for any reason. The Debtor objected to the HarbourVest Claims (as defined below) on a perfunctory and unfounded basis, by tucking them in among the 92 claims in the Debtor’s First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 906] (the “Claim Objection” or “Objection”), which was an omnibus objection simply claiming, with no substance or explanation, that there was “no liability” for HarbourVest’s Claims. More than a month ago, HarbourVest filed the HarbourVest Response to Debtor’s First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 1057] (the “Response”), which amply detailed the legal and factual predicates for its claims. To date, that Response remains entirely un rebutted.

2. If the Solicitation Motion is granted, HarbourVest—one of Highland’s most significant creditors—would be disenfranchised in this Chapter 11 Case on the basis of a meritless, one-sentence “no liability” objection that is wholly insufficient to rebut HarbourVest’s prima facie case for its Claims. To avoid this unjust result, HarbourVest has filed this Motion pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3018, and seeks that the HarbourVest Claims be temporarily allowed for purposes of voting in full recognition of HarbourVest’s over $100 million in damages, $300 million post-trebling.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

3. The United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court” or “Bankruptcy Court”) has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1334.

4. This matter is a core proceeding within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b).

5. Venue is proper before this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

6. The statutory and legal predicates for the relief requested herein are sections 502 and 1126 of the Bankruptcy Code (“Bankruptcy Code”) and Bankruptcy Rules 3001 and 3018(a).

BACKGROUND

A. Case Background

7. On October 16, 2019 (“Petition Date”), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code.

8. Since filing the petition, the Debtor has been operating as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code.

9. On September 21, 2020, the Debtor filed the First Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. [Docket No. 1079] (the “Plan”) and related Disclosure Statement for the First Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. [Docket No. 1080] (the “Disclosure Statement”).

10. On September 28, 2020, the Debtor submitted the Debtor’s Motion for Entry of an Order (A) Approving the Adequacy of the Disclosure Statement; (B) Scheduling a Hearing to Confirm the First Amended Plan of Reorganization; (C) Establishing Deadline for Filing Objections to Confirmation of Plan; (D) Approving Form of Ballots, Voting Deadline and Solicitation Procedures; and (E) Approving Form and Manner of Notice [Docket No. 1108] (“Solicitation Motion”). The Solicitation Motion requests that the confirmation hearing for the Plan be held on December 3, 2020 at 9:30 a.m. (prevailing Central Time), or such other date as may be scheduled by the Court, and requests a Voting Deadline (as defined in the Solicitation Motion) of November 20, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time).

B. HarbourVest Claims

11. HarbourVest’s claims against Highland arise out of its November 15, 2017, investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”) to acquire a 49% interest as a minority, passive investor (the “Investment”). Highland’s pattern of fraudulent behavior preceding and following the Investment, including its scheme to drain Acis Capital Management L.P. of assets and its many lies and omissions regarding this scheme to (and, in this Court, about) HarbourVest, and the subsequent fallout, caused serious injury to HarbourVest. This caused HarbourVest damages in excess of $100 million, as detailed below. As a consequence of those damages, on April 8, 2020, HarbourVest timely filed its proofs of claim, which are listed in the Debtor’s claims register as claims number 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154 (the “Proofs of Claim”), describing its claims (the “HarbourVest Claims”). In addition, in its still-unrebutted response to Highland’s Claim Objection filed on September 11, 2020, HarbourVest described the HarbourVest Claims, and the supporting facts and law, in significant detail.<sup>2</sup>

12. As described in the Response, HarbourVest has strong claims against Highland under a number of legal theories, including but not limited to claims for fraud, fraudulent concealment, fraudulent inducement, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duties, misuse of fund assets, U.S. state and federal securities law claims, violations of the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (“RICO”), and unfair prejudice under the Guernsey Companies Law.

13. These claims entitle HarbourVest to recovery of the significant damages it has experienced following Highland’s fraudulent inducement of HarbourVest into the HCLOF investment, which include:

- Investment-related losses as of August 31, 2020 of more than $100 million, taking into account the original expected proceeds<sup>3</sup> from HarbourVest’s $78,521,429 of contributions to HCLOF<sup>4</sup> plus 5% interest per year<sup>5</sup>;

<sup>2</sup> The Response, which is incorporated into this Motion by reference to avoid repetition, provides an extensive description of the HarbourVest Claims, as well as a thorough demonstration of the fatal defects of the Claim Objection as applied to them, which are only summarized herein.

<sup>3</sup> 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud and Deceit § 105; Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768 (Tex. 2009). As discussed further in the Response, separate from the remedies available to HarbourVest for its claims under U.S. federal and state law, the court’s remedial powers for a Guernsey unfair prejudice claim, see Response at 23–25, are broad. Section 350 of the Guernsey Companies Law provides: “[i]f the Court is satisfied that an application under section 349 is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of.” Such relief may include ordering a buyout of the applicant’s interests as a member of the Company at a price adjusted to reflect what the value of such interests would have been had the prejudicial conduct not taken place. Id.; see also Re Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. (1985) 3 All ER 523. Relief is commonly granted against those who have caused the unfairly prejudicial conduct, including non-members of the company, where it is just to do so. Re Little Olympian Each-Ways Ltd. (1994) 2 BCLC 420.

- HarbourVest’s share of years of staggering legal fees inappropriately charged to HCLOF: more than $7.5 million to date<sup>6</sup>;
- Exemplary or punitive damages for Highland’s fraudulent behavior<sup>7</sup>;
- HarbourVest’s own legal fees incurred as a result of the Acis Trustee’s investigation of HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy and HarbourVest’s protection of its own rights: more than $1 million to date.<sup>8</sup>

C. Highland Objection and Subsequent Discussions

14. After HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim, Highland filed its Claim Objection.

While styled as a procedural and technical objection to claims which are facially deficient (such as late-filed claims and duplicate claims), it also included conclusory assertions of “no liability” regarding a number of claims, including the HarbourVest Claims. The Claim Objection—which makes no attempt to rebut any of the factual or legal bases of the well-founded HarbourVest Claims—fails for all the reasons set forth at length in the Response.

For reference, the unaudited net asset value of HCLOF as of August 31, 2020 was $44,587,820. HarbourVest’s share of HCLOF is thus valued at a mere $22,287,228.

15. The Debtor advised HarbourVest that its objection to the Highland Claims was scheduled to be heard on October 6, 2020. However, after the Response was filed, recognizing that the HarbourVest Claims could not be easily disposed of, the Debtor sought to adjourn the hearing on its objection to the HarbourVest Claims. In an effort to be accommodating, and in light of the competing demands on the Court’s time and docket, HarbourVest agreed to temporarily adjourn the hearing.<sup>9</sup> Counsel to the respective parties continue to discuss an appropriate discovery and trial schedule.

RELIEF REQUESTED

16. By this Motion, HarbourVest seeks entry of an order temporarily allowing the Claims for voting purposes, pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a), in an amount that recognizes HarbourVest’s over $100 million in damages, $300 million post-trebling.

BASIS FOR RELIEF

A. Legal Authority

17. Holders of allowed claims or interests are permitted to vote to accept or reject a chapter 11 plan. 11 U.S.C. § 1126. A claim represented by a timely and properly filed proof of claim “is deemed allowed, unless a party in interest . . . objects.” 11 U.S.C. § 502(a). Once a party in interest objects to a filed claim, the holder of that claim may not (absent other relief) be entitled to vote on a chapter 11 plan while the objection is pending. See 11 U.S.C. § 1126. The proposed Solicitation Procedures, which provide that holders of claims that are subject to a pending objection are not entitled to vote on account of the disputed portion of their claims, reflects this statutory structure. See Solicitation Motion ¶ 43(d).

18. However, where a claim is not yet allowed (due to a pending objection or otherwise), bankruptcy courts “may temporarily allow the claim or interest in an amount which the court deems proper for the purpose of accepting or rejecting a plan.” Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3018. The policy behind Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a) is “to prevent possible abuse by plan proponents” who attempt to ensure acceptance of a plan by strategically objecting to the claims of dissenting creditors. In re Armstrong, 292 B.R. 678, 686 (10th Cir. B.A.P. 2003). Unless HarbourVest is permitted to vote the estimated amount of its claim, exactly this sort of abuse will be at play in this Chapter 11 Case.

19. Bankruptcy courts are given significant discretion and flexibility in estimating claims, with the goal that the process “must be accomplished quickly and efficiently.” In re Adelpia Bus. Sols., Inc., 341 B.R. 415, 422 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003); see also In re Ralph Lauren Womenswear, Inc., 197 B.R. 771, 774 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996). Bankruptcy courts also have flexibility to “employ whatever method is best suited to the circumstances of the case” when determining whether and in what amount to allow a claim for voting purposes. In re Ralph Lauren Womenswear, Inc., 197 B.R. at 775; see also In re Frascella Enters., Inc., 360 B.R. 435, 458 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2007). Rule 3018(a) contemplates only a summary estimation proceeding, not a full trial on the merits of the claim. See, e.g., In re Windsor Plumbing Supply Co., 170 B.R. 503, 521 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1994); In re Zolner, 173 B.R. 629, 633 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994).

20. Although the Bankruptcy Code and the Bankruptcy Rules do not dictate a formal procedure for calculating a claim for voting purposes, courts have held that the calculation

“should ensure that the voting power is commensurate with the creditor’s economic interests in the case.” In re Quigley Co., 346 B.R. 647, 654 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006). When determining whether to temporarily allow a claim, courts may look to (1) the debtor’s scheduling of the claim, (2) the details of the claim itself, and (3) the debtor’s objection to determine parties’ expectations regarding the amount and nature of the claim to be voted. In re Stone Hedge Props., 191 B.R. 59, 65 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1995). Calculation of a claim under Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a), however, is not determinative or preclusive of the ultimate validity or amount of the claim or any causes of action before a non-bankruptcy court. See In re Quigley, 346 B.R. at 654.

B. Argument

21. The Debtor is well aware that the HarbourVest Claims cannot be disposed of through any rote objection—or even through briefing. Indeed, this is why the Debtor has sought to adjourn the hearing on the HarbourVest Claims. In three steps, the Debtor seeks to avoid having to litigate the HarbourVest Claims on a timely basis, while simultaneously denying HarbourVest a voice on the Plan and the ultimate treatment of its substantial claims in this Chapter 11 Case:

Step 1: File a one-line, baseless, procedurally improper, and facially insufficient objection to the HarbourVest Claims to render them technically “disputed” (without actually providing any facts or even argument to refute their validity).

Step 2: Refuse to withdraw the frivolous objection when HarbourVest provides a detailed basis for the HarbourVest Claims and emphasizes the impropriety of including the HarbourVest Claims in an unsupported omnibus objection.

Step 3: When publicly challenged in the Response—a pleading demonstrating the strength of the HarbourVest Claims, the extent of the Debtor’s deception and misconduct, and the vacuity of the Debtor’s objection——adjourn the hearing on that objection.

The result, if successful? The Debtor would have handily disenfranchised one of its largest creditors—located in what is likely to be a key class for its Plan—on the eve of confirmation.

22. Bankruptcy Rule 3018 is precisely the mechanism designed to avoid this sort of mischief. The Debtor contends that it cannot resolve the HarbourVest Claims prior to the confirmation hearing. While HarbourVest reserves its rights to seek formal allowance of its claims prior to confirmation, it acknowledges that a Rule 3018 valuation of its claims in full for voting purposes would allow the Debtor and the Court to focus time and resources on the Plan process while avoiding prejudice to HarbourVest.

23. Nonetheless, it is worth underscoring that the time pressure here was manufactured by the Debtor—it did not have to file a baseless objection it was unprepared to defend. It could instead have deferred litigation on the HarbourVest Claims and filed an objection later in the case (but for its desire to wrongfully strip HarbourVest, a major economic stakeholder, of its rightful say in the Plan process without a hearing). Or, the Debtor could have timely engaged with and provided a substantive response to HarbourVest’s detailed support of its claim filed weeks ago. The Debtor has done neither, however, and it would be unfair to permit the Debtor to strip HarbourVest of its voting rights based on an entirely unsupported objection that it is not timely pressing forward. Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a) “was designed to give all creditors, even those holding disputed claims, the opportunity to vote.” In re Century Glove, Inc., 88 B.R. 45, 46 (Bankr. D. Del. 1988) (emphasis added).

24. HarbourVest has presented substantial and credible evidence and arguments in support of the validity and amount of its more than $100 million damages directly caused by Highland's behavior. These damages are appropriately recoverable for the HarbourVest Claims.<sup>10</sup> In addition, HarbourVest's RICO claim entitles it to treble damages, which are properly considered in the claims estimation process. See In re Hydrox Chem. Co., 194 B.R. 617 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1996) (estimating value of claim for Rule 3018 purposes based off of trebled RICO damages). Thus, for purposes of this Rule 3018 motion and without prejudice to its right to adduce additional evidence in the future regarding its damages, HarbourVest respectfully requests that its claims be estimated at $300 million for voting purposes.

25. To date, the Debtor has provided no evidence, no factual assertions, and no analysis of the HarbourVest Claims under the applicable standard, to rebut the prima facie case that HarbourVest has put forward on its claims. To the contrary, Highland has unjustly attempted to disenfranchise HarbourVest on the eve of confirmation of the Plan by filing an objection to the HarbourVest Claims that does not satisfy the Debtor's minimal burden to provide sufficient evidence that an actual dispute exists as to the validity or amount of HarbourVest's Claims. Under the circumstances present here, the Court should exercise its discretion to temporarily allow the HarbourVest Claims in their full face amount for purposes of voting on the Plan. Allowing HarbourVest to vote the full face value of its claims comports with the spirit of the Bankruptcy Code, which encourages creditor voting and participation in the reorganization process. In re Amarex Inc., 61 B.R. 301, 303 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1985) (“[T]o allow [the disputed claims] to vote on the plans, even though some may be eventually disallowed for purposes of distribution, is more in keeping with the spirit of Chapter 11 which encourages creditor vote [sic] and participation in the reorganization process”).

26. In sum, the HarbourVest Claims should be entitled to temporary allowance for purposes of voting on the Plan because: (i) HarbourVest’s filing of proofs of claim constitutes prima facie evidence of the validity of the Claims and HarbourVest’s Response—now filed more than a month ago—provides credible and detailed descriptions of the HarbourVest Claims and remains unrebutted; (ii) the Debtor’s Objection is procedurally and substantively deficient, and (iii) even if the Debtor’s Objection were not flawed, it would have been filed with insufficient time and insufficient specificity to be addressed prior to the deadline for voting on the Plan. Allowing the full amount of the HarbourVest Claims for voting purposes simply restores the status quo that would have obtained if Highland had not engaged in yet another scheme—this time to deprive a major creditor of its voting rights—and had instead only filed objections it was prepared to defend, when it was prepared to do so. This is the precise circumstance for which temporary allowance of claims was created.

RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

27. The liquidation of the HarbourVest Claims is only for voting on the Plan and shall not constitute or be construed as an admission by HarbourVest of any limitation on the ultimate allowed amount of the HarbourVest Claims or the classification of such claims. HarbourVest does not waive, and expressly reserves, all rights, arguments, counterarguments, and defenses, including, without limitation, the right to contest in any court of competent jurisdiction any objection to the basis and/or validity of the ultimate amounts of the HarbourVest Claims.

NOTICE

28. HarbourVest will provide notice of this Motion to: (a) the Debtor; (b) counsel to the Debtor; (c) the United States Trustee; and (d) all parties that have filed a notice of appearance and request for service of papers pursuant to Local Bankruptcy Rule 2002. In light of the nature of the relief requested herein, HarbourVest respectfully submits that such notice is sufficient and that no other or further notice is necessary.

NO PRIOR WRITTEN REQUEST

29. No prior written request for the relief sought herein has been made to this Court or any other court.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, HarbourVest respectfully requests that this Court enter an order granting the relief requested in the Motion and temporarily allowing the HarbourVest Claims for voting on the Plan and granting such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF ORDERS FOR RELIEF ISSUED AFTER TRIAL ON CONTESTED INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS

Joshua N. Terry (the "Petitioning Creditor" or "Mr. Terry") filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions (the "Involuntary Petitions") against each of the two above-referenced related companies (the “Alleged Debtors”) on January 30, 2018.<sup>1</sup> The Involuntary Petitions were contested, and the court held a multi-day trial (the “Trial”) spanning March 21, 22, 23, 27, and March 29, 2018.<sup>2</sup> This constitutes the court’s findings of fact, conclusions of law and ruling, pursuant to Fed. Rs. Bankr. Proc. 7052 and 9014.<sup>3</sup> As explained below, the court has decided that Orders for Relief are legally required and appropriate as to each of the Alleged Debtors.

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Introduction.

1. The Alleged Debtors—Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”), a Delaware limited partnership, and ACIS Capital Management GP, L.L.C. (“Acis GP/LLC”), a Delaware limited liability company—are two entities in the mega-organizational structure of a company that is known as Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”).

2. Highland is a Dallas, Texas-based company that is a Registered Investment Advisor. Highland was founded in 1993 (changing its original name from “Protective Asset Management” to Highland in 1997) by James D. Dondero (“Mr. Dondero”), originally with a

<sup>2</sup> Shortly after the Involuntary Petitions were filed, the court held hearings on February 6-7, 2018, on the Petitioning Creditor’s Emergency Motion to Abrogate or Modify 11 U.S.C. § 303(f), Prohibit Transfer of Assets, and Import, Inter Alia, 11 U.S.C. § 363 [DE # 3] (the “303(f) Motion”) and the Alleged Debtors’ Emergency Motion to Seek Emergency Hearing on the Alleged Debtors’ Motion to Dismiss Involuntary Petitions and Request for Award of Fees, Costs, and Damages [DE # 9] (the “Emergency Motion to Set Hearing on Motion to Dismiss”). The court ultimately granted the 303(f) Motion and denied the Emergency Motion to Set Hearing on Motion to Dismiss. Both the Petitioning Creditor and the Alleged Debtors have proposed that the court should consider the evidence it heard at the hearings held on February 6-7, 2018, in determining whether it should enter orders for relief. The court has, accordingly, considered such evidence in this ruling.

3. Both Mr. Dondero and Mr. Akada provided witness testimony at the Trial on the Involuntary Petitions, and their names are mentioned numerous times herein—since they were generally the subject of significant evidence and argument presented at the Trial. Mr. Dondero is the chief executive officer for Highland and Mr. Akada is the chief investment officer. Mr. Dondero is also the president of each of the two Alleged Debtors.

4. Highland, through its organizational structure of approximately 2,000 separate business entities, manages approximately $14-$15 billion of investor capital in vehicles ranging from: collateral loan obligation funds (“CLOs”); private equity funds; and mutual funds.

5. Highland’s CLO business was front-and-center at the Trial on the Involuntary Petitions. The Alleged Debtor, Acis LP, for approximately the past seven years, has been the vehicle through which Highland’s CLO business has been managed.

6. The Petitioning Creditor, Mr. Terry, became an employee of Highland in the year 2005, starting as a portfolio analyst, promoting to a loan trader, then ultimately becoming the portfolio manager for (and 25% limited partner in) Highland’s CLO business—specifically, Mr. Terry was the human being who was acting for the CLO manager, Acis LP.

7. Mr. Terry was highly successful in his role in the CLO business, managing billions of dollars of assets during his tenure, but Mr. Terry and Mr. Dondero had a bitter parting of ways on June 9, 2016. Specifically, Mr. Terry’s employment was terminated on that date (for reasons that have been highly disputed) and his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was deemed forfeited without any payment of consideration to him.

8. In September 2016, Highland sued Mr. Terry in the 162nd Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (“State Court 1”) for breach of fiduciary duty/self-dealing, disparagement, breach of contract, and various other causes of action and theories. Mr. Terry asserted his own claims against Highland, and also claims against the two Alleged Debtors, Mr. Dondero, and others and demanded arbitration. On September 28, 2016, State Court 1 stayed the litigation and ordered the parties to arbitrate. The parties participated in ten days of arbitration in September 2017 before JAMS. On October 20, 2017, Mr. Terry obtained an Arbitration Award (herein so called),<sup>5</sup> jointly and severally against both of the Alleged Debtors in the amount of $7,949,749.15, plus post-award interest at the legal rate, which was based on theories of breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duties.

9. There are still claims pending between and among the Petitioning Creditor, Highland, and others (not including the Alleged Debtors) in State Court 1.

10. A Final Judgment (herein so called) confirming the Arbitration Award was entered by the 44th Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (“State Court 2”) on December 18, 2017, in the same amount as that contained in the Arbitration Award—$7,949,749.15.<sup>6</sup>

11. Mr. Terry began pursuing post-judgment discovery soon after obtaining his Arbitration Award and even more so after entry of the Final Judgment. Mr. Terry undertook a UCC search on November 8, 2017, to investigate whether there were any liens on the Alleged

Debtors' assets (none appeared).<sup>7</sup> Mr. Terry also pursued a garnishment of an Acis LP bank account (at a time when there was only around $2,000 in the account). Mr. Terry's counsel deposed Highland's General Counsel Scott Ellington (who sat for the deposition as a representative of Acis, LP) on January 26, 2018, and asked numerous questions about: (a) how many creditors the Alleged Debtors had,<sup>8</sup> and (b) whether Acis LP was able to pay its debts as they became due,<sup>9</sup> but did not receive meaningful answers.

12. Mr. Terry requested a temporary restraining order ("TRO") from State Court 2, on January 24, 2018, after discovering certain transactions and transfers involving Acis LP's interests, that he believed were pursued without any legitimate business purpose and with the purpose of denuding Acis LP of its assets and to make it judgment proof. Most particularly, it appeared as though Highland was engaged in a scheme to transfer certain fee-generating CLO management contracts of Acis LP away from it and into a Cayman Island affiliate of Highland.<sup>10</sup> At a January 24, 2018 hearing on the request for a TRO, Acis LP agreed and State Court 2 ordered that, between that hearing and a later hearing on a request for a temporary injunction, no CLO management contracts would be transferred away from Acis LP and that no monies would be diverted from it.<sup>11</sup>

13. Then, on January 29, 2018, the Controller of and CPA for Highland (David Klos) submitted a Declaration to State Court 2 concerning the net worth of the Alleged Debtors, stating that Acis GP/LLC had a net worth of $0 and that Acis LP might have a net worth, at best, of $990,141.<sup>12</sup> Mr. Terry thought this was preposterous—given the management fees that Acis LP was entitled to and the receivables that should be owing to it. Mr. Terry believes that the collateral management agreements on which Acis LP receives management fees have a present value of $30 million (about $6 million for each of the five CLOs which Acis LP has been managing).

14. On January 29, 2018, the Alleged Debtors filed a motion for leave to post a supersedeas bond in the amount of $495,070.50 with State Court 2 (purportedly half of the net worth of the two Alleged Debtors—as stated in the David Klos Declaration), so that they could suspend enforcement of the Final Judgment while they appealed it.<sup>13</sup> Although there is a very stringent standard for appealing an Arbitration Award, the Alleged Debtors apparently believe they have an argument that State Court 2 lacked the subject matter jurisdiction to confirm the Arbitration Award (a motion to vacate the Final Judgment based on this argument has previously been denied by State Court 2).<sup>14</sup>

15. Meanwhile, Mr. Terry was learning of more transactions and transfers involving Acis LP's assets and interests. On January 29, 2018, Mr. Terry filed supplemental pleadings with State Court 2, alleging that further shenanigans (i.e., transfers and transactions that would amount to fraudulent transfers) were underway at Acis LP and seeking a receiver.<sup>15</sup> Also, at some point, in the weeks leading up to this, an Acis LP lawyer represented to Mr. Terry's counsel that the Alleged Debtors were "judgment proof."<sup>16</sup>

16. At approximately 11:57 p.m. on January 30, 2018 (on the evening before a scheduled temporary injunction hearing in State Court 2—at which time State Court 2 presumably might have considered the Alleged Debtors' request to post the $495,070.50 supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the Final Judgment), Mr. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions, as a sole petitioning creditor, against both Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC.

17. For purposes of this Trial (and this Trial only), the Alleged Debtors do not dispute that Mr. Terry has standing to be a petitioning creditor pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)—in other words, they do not dispute that Mr. Terry is a holder of a claim against the Alleged Debtors that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount and that aggregates at least $15,775 in unsecured amount. However, the Alleged Debtors argue that: (a) the Alleged Debtors have 12 or more creditors and, thus, three or more petitioning creditors were required to prosecute the Involuntary Petitions pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)(1); (b) the Petitioning Creditor did not establish, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(h)(1), that the Alleged Debtors are not generally paying their debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount; (c) regardless of whether the Petitioning Creditor has met the statutory tests in sections 303(b)(1) and (h)(1), the Petitioning Creditor has acted in bad faith—which serves as an equitable basis for dismissal of the Involuntary Petitions; and (d) if the court disagrees with the Alleged Debtors and determines that the section 303(b) and (h) statutory tests are met, and also determines that the Petitioning Creditor has not acted in bad faith, the court should nevertheless abstain in this matter, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 305, since this is essentially a two-party dispute and the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by dismissal.

18. The Petitioning Creditor argues that he has met the statutory tests of sections 303(b) and (h) but, even if he has not, there is a “special circumstances” exception to the section 303 statutory requirements, whenever a petitioning creditor establishes fraud, trick, scheme, artifice or the like on the part of an alleged debtor—which “special circumstances,” Mr. Terry alleges, have been established here. Moreover, the Petitioning Creditor argues that the facts here do not warrant section 305 abstention because the interests of creditors and the Alleged Debtors would not be better served by dismissal.

19. As further explained below, the court finds and concludes that the Petitioning Creditor has met his burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the statutory tests of sections 303(b) and (h) are met here. Thus, the court does not need to reach the question of whether there is a “special circumstances” exception to the section 303 statutory requirements, whenever a petitioning creditor establishes fraud, trick, scheme, artifice or the like on the part of an alleged debtor, and—if so—whether the exception is applicable here.<sup>17</sup>

20. Moreover, the Alleged Debtors have not shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the Petitioning Creditor acted in bad faith, such that the Involuntary Petitions should be dismissed.

21. Finally, the Alleged Debtors also have not shown facts here that warrant section 305 abstention because they have not shown that the interests of creditors and the Alleged Debtors would be better served by dismissal.

B. The CLO Business: Understanding the Alleged Debtors' Business Operations, Structure, and What Creditors and Interest Holders They Actually Have.

22. Highland set up its first CLO in the year 1996. Highland was one of the early participants in the CLO industry.

23. The Alleged Debtors were formed in 2011 to be the new “brand” or face of the Highland CLO business, after Highland’s name had suffered some negative publicity in the marketplace.

24. Acis LP has acted as the portfolio manager of Highland’s CLOs since 2011. Acis LP currently has a contractual right to CLO portfolio management fees on five CLOs<sup>18</sup> which were referred to at the Trial as CLO 2013-1; CLO 2014-3; CLO 2014-4; CLO 2014-5; and CLO 2016-6. CLOs typically have an 8-12 year life. Thus, there are still several years of life left on these CLOs (since the oldest one was established in the year 2013).

25. The key “players” in and features with regard to the Highland CLOs, during the time period relevant to the issues adjudicated at the Trial, have been:

- (a) The CLO manager. As mentioned earlier, the CLO manager is the Alleged Debtor, Acis LP. Acis LP, has collateral management agreements (hereinafter, the “CLO Collateral Management Agreements”) with the CLOs (which CLOs were set up as special purpose entities) and, pursuant thereto, receives management fees<sup>19</sup> from the CLOs in exchange for managing the pool of assets within the CLOs and communicating with investors in the CLOs.<sup>20</sup> As mentioned earlier, Mr. Terry was the human being that performed the management function at Acis LP until Highland fired him on June 9, 2016 and also terminated his limited partnership interest in Acis LP. Mr. Terry, and all employees who have ever provided services to the CLO manager, are Highland employees—which were provided to Acis LP through shared and sub-advisory services agreements—as further explained below. Thus, to be clear, Acis LP has always essentially subcontracted its CLO managerial function out to Highland.

<sup>18</sup> There is still another Highland CLO (CLO 2017-7), set up in April 2017, as to which Acis LP’s contractual right to manage was terminated shortly before the Petition Date, as will be further described herein.

- (b) The pool of assets. Within each CLO that the CLO manager manages is a basket of loans that the CLO manager purchases. The basket of loans typically consists of approximately 200 loans-payable (or portions of loans payable), on which large well-known companies typically are the makers/obligors (and which loans, collectively, provide a variable rate of interest).<sup>21</sup> The CLO manager can typically decide to buy and sell different loans to go into the pool of assets, with certain restrictions, during a four or five year reinvestment time period.

<sup>19</sup> These fees typically include “senior fees” (e.g., 15 basis points); additional “subordinate fees” (e.g., 25 basis points) if the CLOs are passing certain tests; and perhaps even an “incentive fee” beyond a certain hurdle rate (e.g., after the equity in the CLO received an internal rate of return of 10%, the CLO manager would get 15% of the excess). Exh. 82, p. 59, lines 14-25.

<sup>20</sup> See, as an example, Exh. 3 (the collateral management agreement between Acis LP and CLO 2014-3). Note that the document is entitled “Portfolio Management Agreement” but, to avoid confusion with other similarly titled documents and to highlight the true nature of the agreement, the court uses the defined term “CLO Collateral Management Agreement,” which terminology the lawyers also sometimes used at the Trial.

- (c) The CLO investors (i.e., CLO note holders). These may be any number of persons or entities, including pension funds, life insurance companies, or others who decide to invest in the CLOs and contribute capital to fund the purchase of a CLO's loan pool, and, in return, receive fixed rate notes payable—the ratings on which can range anywhere from Triple-A to Single-B, depending upon the risk option the investor chooses. There are typically five or six tranches of notes issued by the CLO (with the top AAA-rated tranche being the least risky and the bottom tranche being the most risky) and—to be clear—the CLO itself (again, in each case, the CLO is a special purpose vehicle) is the obligor. As the CLO manager receives income from the pool of loans in the CLO, he distributes that income to the CLO investors, in accordance with their note indentures,<sup>22</sup> starting with the top tranche of notes and then down to the other tranches. The top tranche of notes (AAA-rated) is considered the “controlling” class and a majority of holders in this class can terminate the CLO manager (i.e., Acis LP) for cause on 45 days' notice, although all parties seem to agree this would be a rare event.
- (d) The CLO equity holder. The CLO equity holder actually is a holder of subordinated notes issued by the CLOs (i.e., the bottom tranche of notes on which the CLO special purpose entity is obligated), and has voting rights and is itself a capital provider, but it takes the most risk and receives the very last cash flow from the CLOs. It, in certain ways, controls the CLO vehicle<sup>23</sup>—for example, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain “no-call” period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A’s). Note that, until recently, a separate entity known as Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“ALF”), which was incorporated under the laws of the island nation of Guernsey,<sup>24</sup> was the CLO equity holder. To be clear, ALF was essentially the equity owner in the CLO special purpose entities—not the equity owner of Acis LP. Acis LP was a party to a separate portfolio management agreement with ALF (hereinafter, the “ALF Portfolio Management Agreement”—not to be confused with the CLO Collateral Management Agreements that Acis LP separately has with the special purpose CLOs). No fees were paid from ALF to Acis LP pursuant to the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement (rather, fees are only paid to Acis LP on the CLO Collateral Management Agreements). The complicated structure of the CLO business—all parties seemed to agree—has been developed, among other reasons, to comply with “risk-retention requirements” imposed by the U.S. Congress’s massive Dodd-Frank financial reform legislation<sup>25</sup> enacted in year 2010, in response to the financial crisis and recession that first began in 2008.

<sup>22</sup> The indenture trustee on the CLO notes may actually operate as a payment agent in some cases, for purposes of making the quarterly note payments to holders.

<sup>23</sup> The top tranche of AAA notes also has certain control—such as the ability to terminate the portfolio manager for cause, on notice.

(e) The Equity Owners of ALF. Until recently (i.e., until October 24, 2017—four days after the Arbitration Award), Acis LP itself, as required for a CLO manager, had a 15% indirect ownership in ALF, in order to be regulatory compliant.<sup>26</sup> The parties sometimes refer to ALF (and the web of ownership between it and Acis LP) as the “risk retention structure.”<sup>27</sup> The evidence at the Trial revealed that ALF (which has recently been renamed), now, has three equity owners: (i) a 49% equity owner that is a charitable fund (i.e., a donor advised fund or “DAF”) that was seeded with contributions from Highland, is managed/advised by Highland, and whose independent trustee is a long-time friend of Highland’s chief executive officer, Mr. Dondero; (ii) 2% is owned by Highland employees; and (iii) finally, ALF may be 49% owned by a third-party institutional investor based in Boston that Highland believed it was required to keep anonymous at the Trial. Not only is the court unaware of who this independent third-party is, but the evidence seems to suggest that it may have acquired its interest fairly recently or may have simply committed to invest recently.<sup>28</sup> issued, the CLO manager would need to retain at least 5% or $20 million of the assets in the CLO (which 5% could be either all at the equity level or vertically, up and down the note tranches). There are multiple ways to accomplish this 5% retention (i.e., with either the CLO manager directly investing in at least 5% of the CLO or doing it through a controlled subsidiary). This particular rule was announced in December 2014 and the SEC thereafter issued a no action letter stating that if a CLO was issued prior to December 2014, then any refinancing of such CLO that happens within four years can be done without risk retention in place. Resets of any CLO (i.e., changes in terms and maturity—as opposed to mere changes in interest rates), on the other hand, must have risk retention in place. Four of Acis LP’s current CLOs were issued prior to December 2014. Thus, these four CLOs are still technically able to do a refinancing without a risk retention structure in place. In any event, by early-to-middle 2017, Acis LP was risk retention compliant. Exh. 82, pp. 65-69 & 75. That was recently changed—on October 24, 2017—four days after the Arbitration Award—as later explained herein.

<sup>28</sup> See Exh. 173, which seems to suggest that the only equity owners of ALF just prior to October 24, 2017 were Acis LP and the DAF, until Acis LP’s interest in ALF was sold back to ALF on October 24, 2017. See also Exh. 82, p. 162, lines 2-7.

- (f) The underwriter for the CLO notes. As with any publicly traded notes, there is an underwriter for the CLO notes which solicits investors for the CLO notes (examples given at the Trial: Mizuho Securities USA, LLC; Merrill Lynch; JP Morgan Chase).<sup>29</sup> The CLO notes are traded on the Over-the-Counter Market.
- (g) The independent indenture trustee for the CLO notes. As also with any issuance of publicly traded notes, there is an indenture trustee (example given at the Trial: U.S. Bank).<sup>30</sup>

26. Mr. Terry, the Petitioning Creditor, as earlier mentioned, began working for Highland in 2005 until his employment was terminated on June 9, 2016.

27. Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC have never had any employees. Rather, all employees that work for any of the Highland family of companies (including Mr. Terry) have, almost without exception, been employees of Highland itself. Highland has approximately 150 employees in the United States. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC, through both the mechanism of: (a) a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called),<sup>31</sup> which provides “back office” personnel—such as human resources, accounting, legal and information technology to the Highland family of companies; and (b) a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called),<sup>32</sup> which provides “front office” personnel to entities—such as the managers of investments like Mr. Terry. The evidence indicated that this is typical in the CLO industry to have such agreements. The court notes that all iterations of the Shared Services Agreements and Sub-Advisory Agreements between Acis LP and Highland were signed by Mr. Dondero both as President of Acis LP and as President of the General Partner of Highland.

28. Because Acis LP essentially subcontracts out all of its functions to Highland pursuant to the Shared Services Agreement and the Sub-Advisory Agreement, Acis LP has very few vendors or creditors. Rather Highland incurs expenses and essentially bills them to Acis LP through these two agreements.<sup>33</sup> In other words, Highland is one of Acis LP's largest and most frequent creditor.

29. The evidence reflected that at all times Mr. Dondero has been the President of both of the Alleged Debtors, and there have been, at all times, very few, if any, other officers. It appears that the only other officer of Acis GP/LLC that ever existed was Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer.<sup>34</sup> It also appears that the only other officer of Acis LP that ever existed was Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer, Mr. Terry as Portfolio Manager, and someone named Patrick Boyce as Secretary at one time.<sup>35</sup>

30. Mr. Dondero testified that he has decision making authority for the Alleged Debtors but usually delegates that authority to Highland's in-house lawyers, Scott Ellington (General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and Partner of Highland) and Isaac Leventon (Assistant General Counsel of Highland) and is rarely involved in "nitty gritty negotiations." Sometimes instructions will come to him from the compliance group headed up by Chief Compliance Officer Thomas Surgent. Additionally, he testified that he signs hundreds of documents per week, and much of what he signs is on advice of counsel and he sometimes even delegates to his assistant the authority to sign his name. As set forth above, Mr. Ellington (who did not testify at the Trial)<sup>36</sup> and Mr. Leventon (who did testify at the Trial) are not officers, directors, or employees of the Alleged Debtors. Mr. Leventon is designated to be the representative for the Alleged Debtors (and testified as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness during pre-Trial discovery)—he explained that this representative-authority derives from the Shared Services Agreement. Mr. Leventon testified that he takes his instructions generally through his direct supervisor, Mr. Ellington, although Highland partners can ask him to perform legal services for any of Highland’s 2,000 entities.

C. Transfers and Transactions Involving the Alleged Debtors Since the Litigation with Mr. Terry Commenced—and Especially After the Arbitration Award.

31. Below is a listing of some (but not necessarily all) of the transfers and transactions that the Alleged Debtors, Highland, and related parties undertook after the litigation with Mr. Terry commenced.

- (a) Acis LP’s Sale to Highland of a “Participation Interest” in its CLO Cash Flow Stream. On October 7, 2016 (approximately one month after the litigation arose among Mr. Terry, Highland, and the Alleged Debtors), Acis LP sold to Highland a participation interest in its expected future cash flow from the CLO Collateral Management Agreements—specifically, it sold a portion of the cash flow it expected to earn from November 2016 to August 2019 (not the full life of the CLOs), for $666,655 cash, plus a $12,666,446 note payable from Highland to <sup>36</sup> Mr. Ellington did testify at a hearing in the bankruptcy court on February 6, 2018—which the parties asked this court to take judicial notice of—and also provided deposition testimony that was submitted into evidence. See Exh. 25.

Acis LP (hereinafter, the “Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland”). Mr. Dondero signed the purchase and sale agreement for both purchaser and seller.<sup>37</sup> Mr. Dondero signed the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland, which accrued interest at 3% per annum. It appears that the $666,665 cash down payment was actually paid, and a payment required on the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland of $3,370,694 on May 31, 2017, was actually made. The Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland was payable in three installments, with a $5,286,243 payment required on May 31, 2018, and a $4,677,690 payment required on May 31, 2019. When viewed in complete isolation, this transaction does not necessarily appear problematic. Although there was evidence that Acis LP had been managing the five CLOs for about $10 million per year of fees, some of the recitals in the purchase and sale agreement suggest that there may have been a sound business reason for the transaction and the arbitration panel,<sup>38</sup> viewing this transaction in isolation, did not think it was necessarily problematic or actionable. In any event, Highland is adamant it was a net neutral transaction.

- (b) Transfer of Acis LP’s interest in ALF. Recall that ALF was the entity that held equity (i.e., the subordinated notes) in the CLO special purpose vehicles, and held voting rights and was a capital provider to the overall risk retention structure supporting the CLOs. And Acis LP, in turn, held a 15% indirect interest in ALF. On October 24, 2017 (four days after the Arbitration Award), Acis, LP entered into an agreement with ALF whereby ALF acquired back the shares that Acis LP indirectly held in ALF (966,679 shares) for the sum of $991,180.13.<sup>39</sup> No credible business justification was offered for this transaction, other than mostly uncorroborated (and self-serving) statements from Highland witnesses that Acis LP was “toxic” in the market place (due to the litigation with Mr. Terry) and this was a step in the process of extricating Acis LP from the CLO business.<sup>40</sup> The court finds the testimony about Acis LP’s toxicity in the marketplace to not be credible or at all convincing. For one thing, a new CLO (Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd.) was closed on April 10, 2017 with Acis LP as the portfolio manager. Moreover, Acis LP subcontracts all of its CLO management function to Highland—and there was no evidence to suggest that anyone in the marketplace at this juncture differentiates between Acis LP (whose president is Mr. Dondero) and Highland (whose president is Mr. Dondero). In any event, the October 24, 2017 transaction had the highly consequential effect of making Acis LP “noncompliant” or unable to continue serving as a CLO manager for regulatory purposes for any new CLOs or reset CLOs (or for a refinancing of any of the Highland CLOs that had been created after December 2014)<sup>41</sup> because aspects of the federal Dodd Frank legislation require CLO managers to have “skin in the game” with regard to the CLOs they manage (i.e., they must retain at least 5% of CLOs they manage). Mr. Akada, who testified that he had been involved with the CLO business from the beginning and that the CLO team reported to him (including Mr. Terry before his termination), testified that he had no knowledge of this particular transaction. The document effectuating this transaction was signed by Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer for and on behalf of Acis LP, acting by its general partner, Acis GP/LLC.<sup>42</sup>

- (c) ALF Next Decides to Jettison Acis, LP as its Portfolio Manager and Replace it with a new Highland Cayman Island Entity. On October 27, 2017 (seven days after the Arbitration Award), ALF—having purchased back the ownership interest that Acis LP had in it, just three days earlier—decided that it would no longer use Acis LP as its portfolio manager and entered into a new portfolio management agreement to supersede and replace the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, ALF entered into a new Portfolio Management Agreement with a Cayman Island entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., replacing Acis LP in its role with ALF.<sup>43</sup> This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017.<sup>44</sup>
- (d) The Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland is Transferred from Acis LP to Yet Another Highland Cayman Island Entity. On November 3, 2017 (10 days after the Arbitration Award), Acis LP assigned and transferred its interests in the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland—which at that point had a balance owing of over $9.5 million—to a Highland Cayman Island entity known as Highland CLO

Management Ltd. which apparently was created sometime recently to be the new collateral manager of the CLOs (in other words, the new Acis LP).<sup>45</sup> The Assignment and Transfer Agreement memorializing this transaction is signed by Mr. Dondero for Acis LP and Mr. Dondero for Highland and some undecipherable name for Highland CLO Management Ltd.<sup>46</sup> The document recites that (i) Highland is no longer willing to continue providing support services to Acis LP, (ii) Acis LP, therefore, can no longer fulfill its duties as a collateral manager, and (iii) Highland CLO Management Ltd. agrees to step into the collateral manager role if Acis LP will assign to it the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. One more thing: since Acis LP was expected to potentially incur future legal and accounting/administrative fees, and might not have the ability to pay them when due, Highland CLO Management Ltd. agreed to reimburse Acis LP (or pays its vendors directly) up to $2 million of future legal expenses and up to $1 million of future accounting/administrative expenses.<sup>47</sup>

- (e) Various Additional Transactions that further Transitioned CLO Management and Fees Away from Acis LP to Highland Cayman Island Entity. On December 19, 2017—just one day after the Arbitration Award was confirmed with the entry of the Final Judgment—the vehicle that can most easily be described as the Acis LP “risk retention structure” (necessitated by federal Dodd Frank law) was transferred away from Acis LP and into the ownership of Highland CLO

Holdings, Ltd. (yet another Cayman Island entity, incorporated on October 27, 2017<sup>48</sup>).

- (f) In addition to transferring Acis LP's interest in the Acis LP risk retention structure on December 19, 2017, Acis LP also transferred its contractual right to receive management fees for Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. (which had just closed April 10, 2017), which Mr. Terry credibly testified had a combined value of $5 million, to Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd., another Cayman entity, purportedly in exchange for forgiveness of a $2.8 million receivable that was owed to Highland under the most recent iteration of the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7.<sup>49</sup> In conjunction with this transfer, Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. then entered into new Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements with Highland.<sup>50</sup>
- (g) Change of Equity Owners of the Alleged Debtors. When Acis LP was first formed, it was owned by one general partner (Acis GP/LLC, with a .1% interest) and it had three limited partners: (a) Dugaboy Investment Trust (a Dondero family trust of which either Mr. Dondero or his sister, Nancy Dondero, have been the Trustee at all relevant times) with a 59.9% interest; (b) Mr. Terry with a 25% interest; and (c) Mr. Akada with a 15% interest. When Acis GP/LLC was formed

(i.e., the .1% owner of Acis LP), its sole member was the Dugaboy Investment Trust. After Mr. Terry was terminated by Highland, his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was forfeited and divided among the two remaining limited partners: Mr. Akada (increasing his interest by 10% up to 25%), and Dugaboy Investment Trust (increasing its interest by 15% up to 74.9%). But, more importantly, on the day after entry of Mr. Terry's Final Judgment (i.e., on December 18, 2017), both Mr. Akada and Dugaboy Investment Trust conveyed their entire limited partnership interests in Acis LP—25% and 74.9%, respectively—to a Cayman Island entity called Neutra, Ltd., a Cayman Islands exempted company. Dugaboy Investment Trust also conveyed its 100% membership interest in Acis GP/LLC to Neutra, Ltd. Mr. Akada testified that he did this on advice of counsel. He also did not dispute that he had made millions of dollars of equity dividends from his equity investment in Acis LP in recent years<sup>51</sup>—which he conveyed away for no consideration on December 18, 2017.

- (h) The Intended Reset of Acis CLO 2014-3. With all of the above maneuverings having been accomplished, Highland was posed to do a reset on Acis CLO 2014-3 in February 2018 (until Mr. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions). The investment bank Mizuho Securities USA, LLC was engaged November 15, 2017<sup>52</sup> and a final offering circular was issued in January 2018<sup>53</sup>—contemplating a reset of Acis CLO 20-14-3 with the recently created Highland CLO Management Ltd.

Identified as the new portfolio manager, rather than Acis LP. The act of implementing a reset on the CLO was not in itself suspect. However, the reset would, of course, have the effect of depriving Acis LP from a valuable asset—an agreement that could realistically be expected to provide millions of dollars of future collateral management fees—coincidentally (or not) just after Mr. Terry obtained his large judgment.

D. Findings Regarding Credibility of Witnesses.

32. The court found the testimony of Mr. Terry to be very credible. He was very familiar with the financial condition of the Alleged Debtors, since he presided over the business of the Alleged Debtors from their inception until June 9, 2016, and has also closely followed publicly available information regarding the companies since his termination. Mr. Terry credibly testified that the Alleged Debtors have never had a significant number of creditors, since most of the Alleged Debtors' vendors are engaged by and send their invoices to Highland, and Highland simply obtains reimbursement from the Alleged Debtors (and other entities in the Highland family), as its in-house lawyers determine is appropriate, through the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement. Thus, Highland should at all times be the Alleged Debtors' main creditor. The court finds that Mr. Terry had a good faith belief that the Alleged Debtors had only a handful of creditors (maybe four or so) besides him and Highland. The court also finds that Mr. Terry—at the time he filed the Involuntary Petitions—had a good faith belief that the Alleged Debtors and those controlling them were engaged in an orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value (i.e., transferring assets and rights for less than reasonably equivalent value), which started with intensity after issuance of the Arbitration Award (if not sooner).<sup>54</sup>

33. The court found the testimony of almost all of the witnesses for the Alleged Debtors to be of questionable reliability and, oftentimes, there seemed to be an effort to convey plausible deniability. For example, sometimes business decisions concerning the Alleged Debtors were said to have been made by a “collective,” and other times the in-house Highland lawyers (who, of course, are not themselves officers or employees of Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC) stressed that Mr. Dondero (the president and manager of the two entities) had ultimate decision making authority for them. Meanwhile, Mr. Dondero testified that, while he has decision making authority at Acis LP, he usually delegates to Highland’s in-house lawyers Scott Ellington and Isaac Leventon. He testified that he signs hundreds of documents per week and often must rely on information of others when signing. Additionally, Mr. Dondero (again, the President of each of the Alleged Debtors) testified that he had never even read the Arbitration Award. While Mr. Dondero is the chief executive of a multi-billion dollar international investment company, and naturally has widespread responsibilities and must delegate to and rely upon others including lawyers, this court simply does not believe that he never read the Arbitration Award. The court perceived the animosity between Mr. Dondero and Mr. Terry to be rather enormous and Mr. Dondero even testified (as did others) that the litigation with Mr. Terry was hurting Acis LP and Highland in the CLO marketplace (i.e., no investors or underwriters wanting to be associated with the Acis brand).<sup>55</sup> If that were the case, it strains credulity to suggest Mr. Dondero never even read the Arbitration Award.

34. As mentioned earlier, in December 2017, Acis GP/LLC became 100% owned by a Cayman Island entity known as Neutra, Ltd. (whose beneficial owner is a Dondero family trust) and Acis LP became 99.9% owned by Neutra, Ltd. The directors of Acis GP/LLC and Acis LP are provided to it now by an entity known as “Maples Fiduciary Services”—another Cayman Island entity, but the Highland Assistant General Counsel could not remember the names of those directors provided to Acis GP/LLC and Acis LP, except for perhaps one. Mr. Dondero, when questioned about some of the recent transactions pertaining to Acis LP, testified that there were tax reasons—tax lawyers recommended the recent transactions and transfers. No tax lawyers testified. Mr. Dondero also testified that certain transactions were at the directive of the Thomas Surgent group (the Highland chief compliance officer). Neither Mr. Surgent nor anyone else from the compliance group testified.

35. Meanwhile, Mr. Akada, who, while testifying, seemed like a generally lovely person and seemed as knowledgeable as a human being could possibly be on the topic of CLOs generally, had no idea if he was an officer or director of the Alleged Debtors, nor did he know whom its officers were. He could not testify as to the meaning of certain transactions in which Acis LP had engaged in during recent weeks and said that he signed certain documents on advice of counsel. He also could not even testify as to whether Highland was opposing the Involuntary Petitions.

36. Again, there was a lot of plausible deniability at Trial as to the “whos” and “whys” for the recent maneuverings involving the Alleged Debtors assets and rights in the weeks since the Arbitration Award. The one thing that the court was wholly convinced of was that conflicts of interest among Highland and the Alleged Debtors abound, and no one is looking out for the interests of the Alleged Debtors as a fiduciary should.

37. The Alleged Debtors do not dispute Mr. Terry's claim for the purposes of counting creditors under section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. However, Mr. Terry asserts that the Alleged Debtors have fewer than 12 creditors, and the Alleged Debtors dispute this fact. Specifically, the Alleged Debtors initially filed on January 31, 2018, a Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Dondero listing 18 creditors (the "Original Notice of Creditors").<sup>57</sup> The Alleged Debtors subsequently filed on February 5, 2018, a First Amended Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Leventon listing 19 creditors (the "First Amended Notice of Creditors").<sup>58</sup> Finally, the Alleged Debtors filed on March 6, 2018, a Second Amended Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bank. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Leventon listing 20 creditors (the "Second Amended List of Creditors").<sup>59</sup> The following chart summarizes the name, amount, and nature of the 20 creditors listed by the Alleged Debtors in their Second Amended List of Creditors.

<sup>56</sup> The court notes that neither Mr. Terry nor the Alleged Debtors attempted to differentiate between the creditors of Acis GP/LLC versus the creditors of Acis LP, but rather presented evidence regarding the collective number of creditors for both of the Alleged Debtors. This seems legally appropriate, since Acis LP is the entity that incurred most of the debt, and ACIS GP/LLC would be liable on such debt as the general partner of Acis LP.

38. First, the court believes it necessary to remove certain insider creditor claims, which are required not to be counted pursuant to section 303(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>61</sup> This would clearly include Highland (the Alleged Debtors do not dispute this).

40. Next, the court finds that there are certain creditors included in the “Law Firm Vendor” category (e.g., experts, data hosting, document managers, court reporters) that are really creditors of the individual law firms and/or Highland, and that these law firm vendor creditors should not be considered creditors of the Alleged Debtors. For these, there was no evidence of a direct contractual obligation on the part of either the Alleged Debtors or Highland—although the court certainly understands that, when the law firms would retain vendors, they would bill these to either the Alleged Debtors or Highland as an expense to be reimbursed. Most of these were already eliminated with agreement of the Alleged Debtors but, from the remaining list of creditors, this would include David Langford (a Dallas County court reporter).<sup>66</sup> To be clear, while the individual law firm creditors may ultimately have a right to reimbursement for these vendor expenses from Highland (who may then potentially have a right to reimbursement from the Alleged Debtors via the Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements), the court does not find this vendor to have a claim directly against the Alleged Debtors for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

41. Next, as to the Stanton Law Firm, the court finds that this creditor should also be removed from the pool of creditors that “count,” for section 303(b) purposes, since this claim appears to be the subject of a “bona fide dispute as to liability or amount,”<sup>67</sup> based on the evidence presented at the Trial. First, there was no engagement letter between either of the Alleged Debtors and the Stanton Law Firm produced.<sup>68</sup> Second, the heavily redacted invoice of the Stanton Law Firm dated October 18, 2016 shows only that it was relating to the “Joshua Terry Matter” and that it was billed to Highland.<sup>69</sup> Third, the Responses and Objections to Mr. Terry’s Notice of Intention to Take Depositions by Written Questions sent to the Stanton Law Firm<sup>70</sup> provides the following responses:

Question No. 11: What is the total amount of debt Acis Capital Management L.P. to the Firm. is liable to the Firm.

Answer: Acis Capital Management L.P.’s debt to the Firm is unknown at this time.

Question No. 12: What is the total amount of debt Acis Capital Management GP, LLC is liable for to the firm?

Answer: Acis Capital Management GP, LLC to the Firm is unknown at this time.

Question No. 13: Is any other party also liable for the debt of Acis Capital Management L.P. to the Firm? If so, please state the liable party and portion of Acis Capital Management L.P. debt the other party is liable for to the Firm.

<sup>68</sup> Rather, there is only an engagement letter between Lackey Hershman LLP (acting on behalf of its client, Highland) and Stanton Advisors LLC to act as an expert in the Terry litigation. See Exh. 144. As previously noted, the claim of Stanton Advisors LLC was removed from the creditor list by agreement of the Alleged Debtors.

Answer: Whether any other party is also liable to the firm for the debt of Acis Capital Management, L.P. is unknown at this time.

Question No. 14: Is any other party also liable for the debt of Acis Capital Management GP, LLC to Firm? If so, please state the liable party and portion of Acis Capital Management GP, LLC debt the other party is liable for to the Firm.

Answer: Whether any other party is also liable for the debt of Acis Capital Management GP, LLC is unknown at this time. . . .

Question No. 21: Does the Firm currently represent Acis Capital Management, L.P.? If so, please state the representation.

Answer: Based on Acis's assertion that this question calls for information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the Firm cannot answer this question at this time.

Question No. 22: Does the Firm currently represent Acis Capital Management GP, LLC? If so, please state the representation?

Answer: Based on Acis's assertion that this question calls for information protected by the attorney-client privilege, the Firm cannot answer this question at this time. . . .<sup>71</sup>

The court finds that this evidence demonstrates that the claim of the Stanton Law Firm is the subject of a bona fide dispute as to either liability or amount and should not be counted since there is no real way of even knowing who the Stanton Law Firm was engaged by and, thus, whether the Alleged Debtors are even responsible for these alleged legal fees. The court would also specifically refer to the testimony of Mr. Leventon, the in-house lawyer employed by Highland who was in charge of allocating all of the bills that came into Highland's legal invoicing system, where he described a process in which all legal bills relating to the "Terry Matter" would automatically be assigned to the Alleged Debtors, without any real regard to whether the particular law firm had even been engaged by the Alleged Debtors or if whether the representation was actually relating to one of the other parties in the Terry litigation (e.g., Highland, Mr. Dondero, etc.). Accordingly, the court finds that there is a bona fide dispute as to whether the Alleged Debtors are actually liable for the Stanton Law Firm legal fees and that they should not be counted as a creditor for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>72</sup>

42. Thus, it appears, at most, that there are 11 creditors<sup>73</sup> of the Alleged Debtors as set forth in the chart below:

Creditor No.	Creditor Name	Nature of Claim	Total Indebtedness

<sup>73</sup> The court notes that, in all likelihood, the list of creditors that should be tallied for purposes of section 303(b) may actually be less than 11, because certain of the remaining creditors (i.e., Drexel Limited, Highfield Equities, Inc., Lackey Hershman LLP, and David Simek) received payments during the 90 days preceding the Petition Date—and, thus, arguably should not be counted as creditors pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code (which instructs that transferees of voidable transfers should not be counted). See, e.g., Exh. 124 & Exh. 131. Additionally, certain of the remaining law firm creditors that are owed legal fees are also creditors of Highland and Highland-affiliates, not just the Alleged Debtors. To elaborate, many of these law firm creditors were employed to represent not only the Alleged Debtors, but also Highland and Highland-affiliates, so there may be an actual dispute as to the allocation of these legal fees among Highland and the Alleged Debtors (thus there could be bona fide disputes as to the amounts allocated by Highland's in-house lawyers to the Alleged Debtors). See, e.g., Ex. 123 (McKool Smith, P.C. engagement letter referencing representation of numerous parties) & Exhibit 90 (Reid Collins & Tsai's Answers and Objections to Mr. Terry's Deposition by Written Questions, questions 13 & 14, stating that based upon allocation determinations to be made by Highland, other individuals may be liable for the full amount of the debt including Acis LP, Highland, Mr. Dondero, and Mr. Okada).

43. Finally, on the topic of creditor numerosity, the court further finds that the evidence strongly suggested hurried manufacturing of creditors on the part of the Alleged Debtors and Highland, in order to bolster an argument that having a sole petitioning creditor was legally inadequate in this case.<sup>75</sup> For example, the Klos Declaration and other information, that was provided to State Court 2 and in discovery, only days before the Involuntary Petitions were filed, <sup>74</sup> Mr. Terry has also argued that certain of the law firm creditors (McKool Smith, P.C., Lackey Hershman, LLP, and Reid Collins & Tsai) are “insiders” that must be excluded from the creditor list pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. While there may be some support in case law for such an argument, Mr. Terry would ultimately need to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the law firms exercised such control or influence over the Alleged Debtors as to render their transactions not at arm’s length. See In re CorrLine Intern., LLC, 516 B.R. 106, 157-58 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2014) (citing to Kepler v. Schmalbach (In re Lemanski), 56 B.R. 981, 983 (Bankr.W.D.Wis.1986)). See also In re Holloway, 955 F.2d 1008, 1011 (5th Cir. 1992) (in evaluating whether insider status existed for purposes of evaluating alleged fraudulent conveyance court considered (1) the closeness of the relationship between the transferee and the debtor; and (2) whether the transactions between the transferee and the debtor were conducted at arm’s length). Because there was no evidence suggesting abuse or control by these law firm creditors, nor was there any evidence that would suggest that their dealings with the Alleged Debtors were anything but arm’s length, the court finds that these law firm creditors should not be excluded from the creditor list as “insiders” pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

seemed to show only a small number of creditors of Acis LP—Mr. Terry credibly testified that he thought there were less than 12 creditors based on his review of such information, as well as his understanding of the Alleged Debtors’ business. Yet, only a few days later, the Alleged Debtors filed their Original Notice of Creditors, which showed 18 creditors, which was amended twice to add another creditor and then yet another. This simply does not jive in the court’s mind and supports this court’s belief that the Alleged Debtors were scurrying to determine which Highland creditors might cogently be painted as Acis LP creditors—so as to preclude Mr. Terry from being able to file the Involuntary Petitions as the single, petitioning creditor.

F. Evidence Regarding Whether the Alleged Debtors are Generally Not Paying Debts as They Become Due (Unless Such Debts are the Subject of a Bona Fide Dispute as to Liability or Amount).

44. The evidence submitted reflects that, for the 11 creditors identified above, 9 out of 11 have unpaid invoices that were more than 90 days old. The remaining 2 of the 11 were McKool Smith, P.C. (current counsel for the Alleged Debtors) and the Petitioning Creditor.<sup>76</sup> The court makes findings with regard to each of the 11 creditors below—focusing specifically on whether the Alleged Debtors have been paying these creditors as their debts have become due.

45. First, with regard to Andrews Kurth & Kenyon (“AKK”), the evidence reflected that out of the $211,088.13 allegedly owed by Acis LP to AKK, the great majority of it—$173,448.42—was invoiced on November 16, 2016<sup>77</sup> (more than 14 months before the Petition Date). Other, smaller amounts were invoiced on a monthly basis in each of the months August 2017, September 2017, October 2017, November 2017, and December 2017. Although requested in discovery, no engagement letter for AKK was produced and AKK represented in written discovery that, to its knowledge, none existed.<sup>78</sup> The court notes anecdotally that AKK's invoices (although allegedly related to Acis LP legal matters) were addressed to Highland.<sup>79</sup> In any event, AKK represented that both the Alleged Debtors and Highland are jointly and severally liable for the fees owed to it.<sup>80</sup> AKK also represented that, to its knowledge, the amounts owing to it by Acis LP and Highland are not disputed.<sup>81</sup> AKK also represented that it has not provided legal work on a contingency basis for the Alleged Debtors or Highland.<sup>82</sup> The court makes a logical inference that AKK expected timely payment of its invoices—the largest of which was dated more than 14 months prior to the Petition Date—and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

46. Next, with regard to Drexel Limited, the Petitioning Creditor concedes that its $6,359.96 indebtedness (which is a fee rebate owing to it) is not past-due.

47. Next, with regard to Highfield Equities, Inc., the Petitioning Creditor concedes that its $2,510.04 indebtedness (which is also a fee rebate owing to it) is not past-due.

48. Next, with regard to the Jones Day law firm, the $368.75 indebtedness owed to it is well more than 90 days old. Specifically, there is a six-and-a-half-month old invoice dated July 19, 2017 invoice in the amount of $118.75, and two five-month old invoices dated August 30, 2017 (both in the amount of $150).<sup>83</sup> The court makes a logical inference that Jones Day expected timely payment of its invoices prior to the Petition Date and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

49. Next with regard to the Petitioning Creditor, Mr. Terry, the court notes that his liquidated claim in the amount of $8,060,827.84 first arose with the final Arbitration Award on October 20, 2017 (although such award was not confirmed by State Court 2 until December 18, 2017). The judgment was unstayed as of the January 30, 2018 Petition Date, although the Alleged Debtors state that they still desire to appeal it—as difficult as that is in the situation of an arbitration award. The court makes a logical inference that the Alleged Debtors had, on the Petition Date, no intention of paying this claim any time soon based on their conduct after the Arbitration Award—although the Arbitration Award had only been in existence for three-and-a-half months as of the Petition Date. The cash in the Alleged Debtors’ bank accounts is wholly insufficient to cover the Arbitration Award and, meanwhile, corporate transactions have been ongoing to ensure that no cash streams will be coming into Acis LP in the future in the same way that they have in the past. Thus, this court finds that this large claim, as of the Petition Date, was not being paid timely.

50. Next with regard to KPMG LLP, the $34,000 indebtedness owed to it was for the service of auditing Acis LP’s financial statements, pursuant to an engagement letter with it dated March 1, 2017.<sup>84</sup> KPMG’s engagement letter reflected a $40,000 flat fee was agreed to by Acis LP for the service, of which 40% was due October 2017 (i.e., $16,000), with another 45% was due in January 2018 ($18,000), and the remaining 15% would be due at the time that a final bill was sent. Acis LP has only paid $6,000 of the agreed upon amount—meaning $28,000 was overdue as of the January 30, 2018 Petition Date (with $10,000 of that being four months past due). The court makes a logical inference that KPMG LLP expected payment of its audit fees in accordance with its engagement letter and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

51. Next with regard to Lackey Hershman LLP, the $236,977.54 indebtedness owed to it was for legal services provided to the Alleged Debtors and Highland in connection with the arbitration and litigation with Mr. Terry. No engagement letter was provided, but the invoices for their services are all directed to Highland.<sup>85</sup> The evidence reflected that three invoices had not been paid as of the Petition Date: an October 31, 2017 invoice in the amount of $56,909.53; a November 30, 2017 invoice setting forth new fees in the amount of $84,789.83; and a December 31, 2017 invoice setting forth new fees in the amount of $95,278.18.<sup>86</sup> The court makes a logical inference that Lackey Hershman LLP expected prompt payment on its invoices (if nothing else, the statement on its invoice indicating “Total now due”)<sup>87</sup> and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

52. Next with regard to Reid Collins & Tsai LLP, the $17,383.75 indebtedness owed to it was billed in an invoice dated August 31, 2017, indicating an August 31, 2017 “Due Date” (five months before the Petition Date).<sup>88</sup> Although requested in discovery, no engagement letter for this firm was produced and Reid Collins & Tsai LLP in fact represented in written discovery that none existed.<sup>89</sup> Moreover, written discovery propounded on the law firm indicated that, while Acis LP was liable on this debt, other parties including Acis GP/LLC, Highland, Mr.

Dondero, the Dugaboy Trust, and Mr. Akada might also be liable for the full amount of the debt—subject to Highland’s allocation determinations.<sup>90</sup> Based on this evidence, the court makes a logical inference that Reid Collins & Tsai LLP generally has not been paid timely.

53. Next with regard to CT Corporation and the $517.12 indebtedness that the Alleged Debtors represent is owed, CT Corporation asserts that $4,074.84 is, in fact, owed to it by Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC.<sup>91</sup> CT Corporation also believes Highland has liability for the Alleged Debtors’ indebtedness.<sup>92</sup> CT Corporation also believes the amount owed to it is undisputed.<sup>93</sup> CT Corporation further represents that its invoices are due upon receipt.<sup>94</sup> CT Corporation produced several invoices in discovery, all showing due upon receipt, and one was dated as far back as December 31, 2016 (in the amount of $932).<sup>95</sup> Based on this evidence, the court makes a logical inference that CT Corporation expected prompt payment on its invoices and, thus, has not been paid timely.

54. Next with regard to David Simek, the Petitioning Creditor concedes that his $1,233.19 indebtedness (which is apparently an expense reimbursement relating to some consulting) is not past-due.

55. In summary, the evidence reflects that the creditors of the Alleged Debtors are generally not being paid timely (except for perhaps four that are relatively insignificant and which may also be able to look to Highland for payment).<sup>96</sup>

56. Further on the topic of timeliness, Mr. Leventon (Highland's in-house Assistant General Counsel) testified that 96% of bills submitted get paid more than 90 days after they are submitted, that approximately 70% of bills are later than 120 days after they are submitted, and some are even later than 150 days. Mr. Leventon testified that this was a result of Acis LP receiving cash on a quarterly basis from the CLOs. He further elaborated and testified that, for example, if Acis LP got cash on say February 1st, and it received a legal bill on that same day, that he would probably not approve it and allocate it until say February 8th. By that time, Acis LP would have already used up all its cash, and that particular creditor would need to wait until the next quarterly payment was received in order to be paid. He further testified that he explained this to law firms before their engagements and that, if they wanted the business, they would need to understand the process. There are several things the court finds problematic about this testimony. First, no testimony was offered showing that this was, in fact, the understanding of the law firms or other creditors, and, moreover, none of the engagement letters or invoices submitted into evidence reflect such payment terms. Without this additional evidence, the court believes that the Alleged Debtors' testimony regarding how it paid invoices was mostly self-serving and did not support a finding that the Alleged Debtors were generally paying their debts

<sup>96</sup> Courts have also held that a debtor is generally not paying its debts as they become due when a debtor is found to have been transferring assets so as to avoid paying creditors. See, e.g., In re Moss, 249 B.R. 411, 423 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2000) (bankruptcy court determined that an alleged debtor was not paying its debts as they came due when the alleged debtor "attempted to delay creditors through the transfers of assets she has made," concluding that "[the alleged debtor's] overall conduct of her financial affairs has been poor"). This court has also found that there may have been significant transfers of the Alleged Debtors' assets prior to the filing of the Involuntary Petitions to potentially avoid paying creditors (i.e., Mr. Terry) and this may provide further support for the court's finding that the Alleged Debtors are generally not paying their debts as they become due under section 303(h).

as they became due.<sup>97</sup> Second, to the extent Mr. Leventon's testimony demonstrates that creditors of the Alleged Debtors expected to be paid on a quarterly basis (at the latest), certain of the remaining 11 creditors have debts that are significantly older than four months (i.e., CT Corporation, Jones Day, AKK, and possibly even Reid Collins & Tsai LLP). Third, the Financial Statements of Acis LP submitted into evidence do not support the notion that the cash balances at Acis LP were only sufficient enough to pay vendors once every quarter.<sup>98</sup> For example, the balance sheet for January 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $1,061,663.19; the balance sheet for February 28, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $905,212.36; the balance sheet for March 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $525,626.59; the balance sheet for April 30, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $117,885.96; the balance sheet for May 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $62,733.31; the balance sheet for June 30, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $10,329.15; the balance sheet for July 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $701,904.39; the balance sheet for August 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $332,847.05.<sup>99</sup> In summary, while there may be cash fluctuations with Acis LP, there is not a clear pattern of Acis LP being only able to pay vendors once every quarter.

II. Conclusions of Law

Section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth the various requirements for initiating an involuntary bankruptcy case. First, pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, an involuntary case may be filed against a person by the filing with the bankruptcy court of a petition under Chapter 7—

(1) by three or more entities, each of which is either a holder of a claim against such person that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount ... [that] aggregate at least $15,775 more than the value of any lien on property of the debtor securing such claims held by the holders of such claims;

(2) if there are fewer than 12 such holders, excluding any employee or insider of such person and any transferee of a transfer that is voidable under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724(a) of this title, by one or more of such holders that hold in the aggregate at least $15,775 of such claims . . .<sup>100</sup>

Thus, if there are twelve or more eligible creditors holding qualified claims on the Petition Date, three or more entities must participate in the involuntary filing and must hold unsecured claims aggregating $15,775.00. If there are less than twelve creditors, a single creditor with an unsecured claim of $15,775.00 may file the involuntary petition. To the extent a bankruptcy court finds that the requisite number of petitioning creditors have commenced the involuntary case, the court shall order relief against the debtor under the chapter under which the petition was filed only if “the debtor is generally not paying such debtor’s debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount.”<sup>101</sup>

Here, as noted earlier, the Alleged Debtors have made four arguments as to why an order for relief should not be entered against the Alleged Debtors: (1) the Alleged Debtors have 12 or more creditors, and, thus, with Mr. Terry being the sole petitioning creditor, the Involuntary Petitions were not commenced by the requisite number of creditors; (2) the Alleged Debtors are generally paying their debts as they become due; (3) the Involuntary Petitions were filed in bad faith by Mr. Terry; (4) the interests of creditors and the debtors would be better served by dismissal and the court should abstain pursuant to section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code.

A. *Have the Requisite Number of Creditors Commenced the Involuntary Proceedings?

Pursuant to section 303(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, a sole petitioning creditor holding at least $15,775 in claims can initiate an involuntary bankruptcy case so long as the alleged debtors have fewer than 12 creditors. After the Second Amended List of Creditors was filed, Mr. Terry had the burden, by a preponderance of the evidence, of showing that the Alleged Debtors actually had less than 12 qualified creditors.<sup>102</sup> Here, the court has found that the Alleged Debtors have, at most, 11 qualified creditors.<sup>103</sup> Accordingly, Mr. Terry has met his burden of showing that the Alleged Debtors have less than 12 creditors for section 303(b) purposes, and that he, as the sole petitioning creditor, was permitted to file the Involuntary Petitions. While Mr. Terry has made additional arguments as to why certain of these 11 creditors should not be counted as creditors for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, the court does not believe it necessary to address these arguments at this time.<sup>104</sup>

<sup>103</sup> To be clear, the court believes that even on these 11, there are likely bona fide disputes as to the liability or amount that Acis LP has—as opposed to the liability or amount that Highland or other insiders bear responsibility.

<sup>104</sup> Moreover, as previously stated, since the court has determined there are fewer than 12 creditors, the court need not address whether there is a “special circumstances” exception to the statutory requirements of section 303, in situations where an alleged debtor may have engaged in fraud, schemes, or artifice to thwart a creditor or creditors. See, e.g., In re Norriss Bros. Lumber Co., 133 B.R. 599 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991); In re Moss, 249 B.R. 411 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2000); In re Smith, 415 B.R. 222 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009).

B. Are the Alleged Debtors Generally Paying Their Debts as They Become Due?

Section 303(h) of the Bankruptcy Code requires that a court shall enter order for relief in an involuntary case “if ... (1) the debtor is generally not paying such debtor's debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount . . . .”<sup>105</sup> Again, the burden is on the Petitioning Creditor to prove this element by a preponderance of the evidence.<sup>106</sup> The determination is made as of the filing date of the Involuntary Petitions.<sup>107</sup> In determining whether an alleged debtor is generally paying its debts as they come due, courts typically look to four factors: (i) the number of unpaid claims; (ii) the amount of such claims; (iii) the materiality of the non-payments; and (iv) the nature of the debtor's overall conduct in its financial affairs.<sup>108</sup> No one factor is more meritorious than another; what is most relevant depends on the facts of each case.<sup>109</sup> Courts typically hold that “generally not paying debts” includes regularly missing a significant number of payments or regularly missing payments which are significant in amount in relation to the size of the debtor's operation.<sup>110</sup>

Furthermore, any debt which the alleged debtor is not current on as of the petition date should be considered as a debt not being paid as it became due.<sup>111</sup>

Here, the court concludes that the creditors of the Alleged Debtors—what few there are—are generally not being paid as their debts have become due (except for perhaps four<sup>112</sup> that are relatively insignificant and which may also be able to look to Highland for payment). Mr. Terry has met his burden by a preponderance of the evidence as to section 303(h) of the Bankruptcy Code.

C. With the Section 303 Statutory Requirements Being Met by the Petitioning Creditor, Should the Court, Nonetheless, Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions Because They Were Filed in Bad Faith?

Despite Mr. Terry meeting the necessary statutory requirements for this court to enter orders for relief as to the Alleged Debtors pursuant to section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Alleged Debtors have argued that the Involuntary Petitions must, nonetheless, be dismissed because they were filed in “bad faith” by Mr. Terry. As support for this argument, the Alleged Debtors rely primarily on the Third Circuit’s decision in In re Forever Green Athletic Fields, Inc., 804 F.3d 328 (3d Cir. 2015). While the court certainly acknowledges that authority exists in other circuits that suggests that dismissal of an involuntary bankruptcy case may be appropriate—even when section 303’s statutory requirements have been met—based upon an independent finding of “bad faith,” the court need not ultimately decide the efficacy or applicability of such authority, because the court does not believe that the evidence demonstrated any “bad faith” on the part of Mr. Terry (or his counsel) in filing the Involuntary Petitions. Indeed, the evidence suggested that Mr. Terry and his counsel filed the Involuntary Petitions out of a legitimate concern that Highland was dismantling and denuding Acis LP of all of its assets and value and that a bankruptcy filing was the most effective and efficient way to preserve value for the Acis LP creditors. The court concludes that Mr. Terry was wholly justified in pursuing the Involuntary Petitions.

N.D. Tex. 2009) (while the debtor was paying small recurring debts, he was not paying 99 percent of his debts in the aggregate amount and thus was not generally paying his debts as they became due).

D. Should This Court, Nonetheless, Abstain and Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions Pursuant to Section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code?

Section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that:

- (a) The court, after notice and a hearing, may dismiss a case under this title, or may suspend all proceedings in a case under this title, at any time if—
- (1) the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by such dismissal or suspension; . . .<sup>113</sup>

Courts construing section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code have found that abstention in a properly filed bankruptcy case is an extraordinary remedy.<sup>114</sup> Moreover, granting an abstention motion pursuant to section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code requires more than a simple balancing of harm to the debtor and creditors; rather, the interests of both the debtor and its creditors must be served by granting the request to abstain.<sup>115</sup> The moving party bears the burden to demonstrate that dismissal benefits the debtor and its creditors.<sup>116</sup> Courts must look to the individual facts of each case to determine whether abstention is appropriate.<sup>117</sup>

Case law has set forth a litany of factors to be considered by the court to gauge the overall best interests of the creditors and the debtor for section 305(a)(1) purposes:

- (1) the economy and efficiency of administration;
- (2) whether another forum is available to protect the interests of both parties or there is already a pending proceeding in state court;
- (3) whether federal proceedings are necessary to reach a just and equitable solution;
- (4) whether there is an alternative means of achieving an equitable distribution of assets;
- (5) whether the debtor and the creditors are able to work out a less expensive out-of-court arrangement which better serves all interests in the case;
- (6) whether a non-federal insolvency has proceeded so far in those proceedings that it would be costly and time consuming to start afresh with the federal bankruptcy process; and
- (7) the purpose for which bankruptcy jurisdiction has been sought.<sup>118</sup>

While all factors are considered, not all are given equal weight in every case and the court should not conduct a strict balancing.<sup>119</sup>

The Alleged Debtors cite to the case of In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), in particular, as support for why this court should abstain under section 305(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and dismiss the Involuntary Petitions. However, in Murray, Judge Gerber was analyzing dismissal of an involuntary proceeding pursuant to section 707 of the Bankruptcy Code, more specifically for “cause,” and not based upon abstention under section 305(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. Thus, the court is not convinced Murray is relevant to this court’s section 305 abstention analysis.

The economy and efficiency of administering a case in the bankruptcy court is routinely evaluated in considering abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code. Here, the evidence suggests that the most economical and efficient forum for these parties to resolve their disputes is the bankruptcy court. The court heard ample evidence that the Alleged Debtors are already, essentially, in the process of being liquidated by Highland. This is not a situation where an ably-functioning, going-concern business is being foisted in disruptive fashion into a bankruptcy.<sup>120</sup> Because of the fact that the Alleged Debtors are already in the process of being liquidated, the bankruptcy court (and not a state court) is the most efficient and economical forum to complete this liquidation and distribute whatever assets remain to creditors in accordance with the distribution scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code and with the oversight of a neutral third-party trustee. Thus, with the bankruptcy court being the more economic and efficient forum for administering this case, this factor goes against abstention.

- ii. Factors 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6: Whether Another Forum is Available to Protect the Interests of Both Parties or There is Already a Pending Proceeding in State Court; Whether Federal Proceedings are Necessary to Reach a Just and Equitable Solution; Whether There is an Alternative Means of Achieving an Equitable Distribution of Assets; Whether the Debtor and the Creditors are Able to Work Out a Less Expensive Out-of-Court Arrangement Which Better Serves All Interests in the Case; and Whether a Non-Federal Insolvency Has Proceeded so Far in Those Proceedings That it Would Be Costly and Time Consuming to Start Afresh With the Federal Bankruptcy Process.

<sup>120</sup> See, e.g., In re The Ceiling Fan Distrib., Inc., 37 B.R. 701 (Bankr. M.D. La. 1983) (noting that while the dissection of a living business may not properly be the business of a bankruptcy court, the division of a “carcass” and the reclamation of pre-petition gouging may well be); In re Bos, 561 B.R. 868, 898-99 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 2016) (citing as one of the reasons to abstain under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code the fact that entities and subsidiaries under the alleged debtor’s umbrella were still operating successful businesses and had employed more than 500 people); but see Remex Elecs. Ltd. v. Axl Indus., Inc. (In re Axl Indus., Inc.), 127 B.R. 482, 484-86 (S.D. Fla. 1991) (in affirming the bankruptcy court’s decision to dismiss an involuntary bankruptcy case, the district court also found that “the interests of a defunct business enterprise would be little affected by the pendency of a bankruptcy proceeding,” which the district court believed favored abstention).

The court believes that factors 2-6 should be grouped together for purposes of its abstention analysis, since all of these factors specifically touch on the availability of an alternative forum to achieve an equitable distribution.<sup>121</sup> By way of example, where bringing a case into the bankruptcy court would simply add an additional layer of expense to the resolution of a two-party dispute and another forum already provides a suitable place to resolve the dispute, some courts have found that abstention is the more appropriate choice since keeping the case would transform the bankruptcy process into a collection device.<sup>122</sup> Here, the Alleged Debtors have repeatedly argued that, because there is already pending state court litigation involving Mr. Terry, Highland, and the Alleged Debtors, these cases should be dismissed and the parties should go back to state court to resolve their issues. The court does not agree for several reasons.

First, it is worth noting that this court has already heard multiple days of evidence in this case (including almost five days just for the Trial) and would certainly not be “starting afresh” by any means if things go forward in the bankruptcy court. Additionally, while the Alleged Debtors have argued that a significant amount of attorney’s fees have already been spent litigating this case in state court (which they believe supports abstention), the court surmises that these fees have not been wasted dollars, as the money expended by the parties developed discovery of facts that could assist a bankruptcy trustee in pursuing avoidance actions that may be viable and might lead to value that could pay creditors’ claims.<sup>123</sup>

<sup>123</sup> See, e.g., The Ceiling Fan Distributor, Inc., 37 B.R. at 703 (the court noted that, despite there being significant legal expenses in the state court, such expenses were not wasted since the legal work done to date would be quite helpful to a trustee).

Second, this court heard considerable evidence involving potentially voidable transfers that may have occurred involving the Alleged Debtors and Highland/Highland-affiliates and, while the state court certainly provides a forum for eventually bringing fraudulent transfer claims, the court also heard evidence that none of these claims have actually been brought in the state court.<sup>124</sup> Moreover, to the extent fraudulent transfer claims were to be pursued in state court and were successful, the state court would still need the ability to reach the assets of alleged fraudulent transfer recipients (which, in this situation, include certain Highland-affiliates located in the Cayman Islands). The bankruptcy court has concerns whether a state court process could efficiently accomplish this task.<sup>125</sup> Similarly, it is worth noting that, while a request for a receiver was filed in the state court by Mr. Terry, such request had not yet been heard and decided by the state court. Thus, at the present time, it does not appear that there is an alternative forum to address the pertinent issues in this case, without the necessity of significant, additional steps being taken by the parties in the state court.

Third, this court believes that a federal bankruptcy proceeding is necessary in order to achieve an equitable result in this case. Specifically, the court heard evidence from the Alleged Debtors that, if this court chose to abstain and dismiss the Involuntary Petitions, the Alleged Debtors would ultimately pay all of their creditors in full, except for Mr. Terry. This clearly demonstrates how keeping the case in the bankruptcy court is necessary to allow an equitable distribution to all creditors, including Mr. Terry. Additionally, a federal bankruptcy court has certain tools available to it that are not available to a state court such as the ability to invalidate potential ipso facto clauses in contracts pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, sell assets free and clear of liens, claims and encumbrances pursuant to section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, and impose the automatic stay pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code. These are all useful tools available to the Alleged Debtors in a bankruptcy case that would be lost if this court were to ultimately abstain.

Finally, there was more than enough evidence showing the acrimonious and bitter relationship that exists between Mr. Terry and Mr. Dondero. Thus, the availability of an out-of-court arrangement being obtained in this case is, in this court's mind, slim to none.

In summation, the court finds that all of the factors above support this case staying with the bankruptcy court.

iii. Factor 7: The Purpose for Which Bankruptcy Jurisdiction Has Been Sought.

The Alleged Debtors have repeatedly argued that Mr. Terry filed this case in bad faith and as a litigation tactic to gain some sort of advantage in the state court proceedings. The court has already found above that these cases were not filed in bad faith and that Mr. Terry has met the necessary statutory requirements of section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code. Moreover, it is worth noting that at least one court has stated that the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition is always a "litigation tactic," but whether the filing is inappropriate for abstention purposes is a fact-dependent determination.<sup>126</sup> Here, the facts show that there was no inappropriateness behind Mr. Terry's decision to file the Involuntary Petitions. Specifically, Mr. Terry repeatedly and credibly testified that the purpose for filing the Involuntary Petitions was to ensure that creditors (including him) were treated fairly and received an equal distribution from the Alleged Debtors' assets, not to gain some sort of advantage in the state court. This testimony was absolutely consistent with additional evidence showing that, since the entry of the arbitration award, there has been a calculated effort (largely by Highland) to effectively liquidate the Alleged Debtors. Unlike the bankruptcy court in In re Selectron Mgmt. Corp.,<sup>127</sup> which had no evidence or "smoking gun" showing that steps were being taken by the alleged debtor to evade payment on the petitioning creditor's judgment, thereby necessitating abstention, this court has heard ample evidence showing that the Alleged Debtors, with the aid of Highland, were transferring assets away from the Alleged Debtors, so that Mr. Terry would have nowhere to look at the end of the day.

<sup>126</sup> In re Marciano, 459 B.R. 27, 50 (B.A.P. 9th Cir. 2011) (noting that while the filing of the involuntary bankruptcy was a litigation tactic, the bankruptcy court did not abuse its discretion in denying the alleged debtor's motion to dismiss based upon the bankruptcy court's primary concern that the issue of equality of distribution would not effectively be dealt with in another forum).

In light of the court's analysis of all the seven factors above, the Alleged Debtors have not credibly shown how both the Alleged Debtors and the creditors are better served outside of bankruptcy. If this matter were to remain outside of bankruptcy, there seems to be a legitimate prospect that the Alleged Debtors and Highland will continue dismantling the Alleged Debtors, to the detriment of Acis LP creditors. Abstention would fly in the face of fundamental fairness and the principles underlying the Bankruptcy Code.

Beyond just addressing the factors above, the Alleged Debtors have also argued that, if this court were to not abstain under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code, there would be significant harm to the “equity” of the Alleged Debtors. Specifically, the Alleged Debtors have argued that, if this court were to enter orders for relief, the equity would be forced to “call” and ultimately liquidate CLO 2014-3 (and perhaps all of the CLOs Acis LP manages), resulting in substantial losses to the equity on their investments. First, to be clear, the current equity of the Alleged Debtors is being held by a Highland-affiliate called Neutra, Ltd., which actually only became the equity of the Alleged Debtors on December 19, 2017. But this is not the “equity” being referred to by the Alleged Debtors in its argument. Rather, the so-called “equity,” about which the Alleged Debtors seemed so concerned, is actually certain parties that own the equity of the entity that owns the equity in the CLOs—which includes (a) an unnamed third-party investor out of Boston (49%),<sup>128</sup> (b) a charitable foundation managed by a Highland-affiliate (49%), and (c) Highland employees (2%). However, abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code does not require this court to look at what is in the best interests of these third-parties (who are not current creditors or interest holders of the Alleged Debtors), but rather what is in the best interests of the Alleged Debtors and the creditors. Accordingly, the Alleged Debtors’ effort to argue potential harm to these parties is misplaced for purposes of evaluating abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code, and, if anything, further highlights who the Alleged Debtors are really out to protect—Highland and Highland-affiliates. Moreover, the court would note that, even if there were to be a “call” and liquidation of CLO 2014-3, thereby ending the Alleged Debtors’ right to receive future management fees, there would still be potential assets for a chapter 7 trustee to administer such as chapter 5 causes of action (which include fraudulent transfers) as well as the Alleged Debtors’ contingent claim for approximately <sup>128</sup> Notably, this entity never appeared at the Trial or filed papers stating that it would be harmed by entry of orders for relief in these cases.

$3 million in expense reimbursement owing by Highland CLO Management Ltd., as part of the November 3, 2017 transfer of the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. Thus, even if the so-called doomsday scenario of an equity call on CLO 2014-3 (or other CLOs) were to happen, there is still a potential benefit to creditors if this court chooses not to abstain.

III. CONCLUSION

In conclusion, these involuntary proceedings were appropriately filed under section 303, and orders for relief will be issued forthwith. This court declines to exercise its discretion to abstain, because a chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to halt the post-Arbitration Award transactions and transfers of value out of Acis LP, as discussed above. A chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to resolve the inherent conflicts of interest between the Alleged Debtors and Highland. A chapter 7 trustee will have tools available to preserve value that a state court receiver will not have. The bankruptcy court is single handedly the most efficient place to administer property of the estate for creditors. This is not just a two party dispute between Mr. Terry and the Alleged Debtors, and even if it were, dismissal or abstention is clearly not warranted.

BENCH RULING AND MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF:
(A) FINAL APPROVAL OF DISCLOSURE STATEMENT; AND (B)
CONFIRMATION OF CHAPTER 11 TRUSTEE'S THIRD AMENDED JOINT PLAN

Before this court is a request by the Chapter 11 Trustee (herein so called) for final approval of the adequacy of a disclosure statement and for confirmation of his Third Amended

Joint Plan of Reorganization,<sup>1</sup> as amended, modified or supplemented (the “Plan”), for the two above-referenced debtors: (1) Acis Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor-Acis”), a Delaware limited partnership, and (2) Acis Capital Management GP, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company (the general partner of the Debtor-Acis; collectively, the “Debtors”). The two chapter 11 cases have been administratively consolidated.<sup>2</sup>

The hearing on these matters transpired over multiple days in December 2018, and the court considered the testimony of more than a dozen witnesses, more than 700 exhibits, and hundreds of pages of legal briefing. Based on the foregoing, the court overrules all objections and will confirm the Plan, including all proposed modifications to it. The Chapter 11 Trustee has demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the Plan, as modified, satisfies the applicable provisions of the Bankruptcy Code including but not limited to Sections 1122, 1123, 1127, and 1129 of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>3</sup> The court also approves on a final basis the adequacy of the accompanying disclosure statement to the Plan, determining that it meets the requirements set forth in Section 1125 of the Bankruptcy Code. Plan is determined to have complied with the applicable Bankruptcy Rules and due process. The court provides reasoning for its ruling below. The court directs the Chapter 11 Trustee to submit to the court for signing the proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law and Order that were filed at DE # 814. I. Background.<sup>4</sup>

The above-referenced bankruptcy cases (the “Bankruptcy Cases”) have been pending since January 30, 2018 and have been astonishingly contentious. The Chapter 11 Trustee has been in place since on or about May 14, 2018. The Plan (which is the fourth one proposed by the Chapter 11 Trustee) has been objected to by three related entities: (a) Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”), (b) Highland CLO Funding Ltd. (“HCLOF Guernsey”), and (c) Neutra, Ltd. (“Neutra Cayman”). The Chapter 11 Trustee loosely refers to these three objectors (the “Objectors”) as “the Highlands” because they are not only related to each other (i.e., they are all, directly or indirectly, part of the Highland 2,000-member corporate organizational structure), but they also have been in “lockstep” with one another in objecting to virtually every position taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases.<sup>5</sup> These Objectors’ parties-in-interest status will be explained below.

<sup>4</sup> For a complete set of background facts, the court incorporates herein by reference its Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Petitions, entered April 13, 2018. DE # 118. Exh. 243.

<sup>5</sup> It is also undisputed that, prior to the appointment of the Chapter 11 Trustee, the Debtors and Highland were affiliated and had a close relationship. Exhs. 17, 18, 22-27, 251, 619 & 649.

In simplest terms, the Debtor-Acis, which was formed in the year 2011, is primarily a CLO portfolio manager.<sup>6</sup> It manages hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of CLOs (which is an acronym for "collateralized loan obligations"). Specifically, it provides fund management services to various special purpose entities that hold CLOs. The Debtor-Acis was providing management services for five such special purpose entities (the "Acis CLOs") as of the time that it and its general partner were put into the involuntary Bankruptcy Cases. The parties have informally referred to the special purpose entities themselves as the "CLO Issuers" or "CLO Co-Issuers" but, to be clear, these special purpose entities (hereinafter, the "CLO SPEs") are structured as follows: (a) on the asset side of their balance sheets, the entities own pieces of senior debt owed by large corporations and, therefore, earn revenue from the variable interest payments made by those corporations on such senior debt; and (b) on the liability side of their balance sheets, the entities have obligations in the form of notes (i.e., tranches of fixed interest rate notes) on which the CLO SPEs themselves are obligated—the holders of which notes are mostly institutions and pension funds (these tranches of notes are usually rated anywhere from Triple A to Single B, depending upon things such as their interest rate and perceived risk). The CLO SPEs make a profit, based on the spread or "delta" between: (a) the variable rates of interest paid on the assets that the CLO SPEs own (i.e., the basket of senior notes); and (b) the fixed rates of interest that the CLO SPEs must pay on their own tranches of debt. At the bottom of the CLO SPEs' capital structure is their equity (sometimes referred to as "subordinated notes," but these "notes" are genuinely equity). As portfolio manager, the Debtor-Acis manages the CLO SPEs' pools of assets (by buying and selling senior loans to hold in the CLO SPEs' portfolios) and communicates with investors in the CLO SPEs. The CLO SPEs' tranches of notes are traded on the Over-the-Counter market.

To be perfectly clear, none of the CLO SPEs themselves are in bankruptcy. This has never been threatened or a concern. Only the Debtor-Acis which manages the CLO business is in bankruptcy. For the most part, the CLO SPEs have continued somewhat "business as usual" during the Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Cases (i.e., they have continued to receive interest payments on their baskets of loans; the usual interest payments on their tranches of debt have been paid;<sup>7</sup> and baskets of loans have been bought and sold from time to time). The CLO SPEs have retained their own separate counsel during the Chapter 11 cases, have appeared from time-to-time on matters, and are not currently objecting to the Plan. There is also an indenture trustee (U.S. Bank National Association) for the CLO SPEs' debt, that has seemingly faithfully carried on its role during the Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Cases without many objections to the bankruptcy process—only making occasional statements aimed at ensuring that the indentures for the CLOs are not interfered with or disrespected. The indenture trustee has retained and appeared through its own separate counsel during the Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Cases and is not currently objecting to the Plan.

Historically, the Debtor-Acis has had four main sets of contracts that were at the heart of its business and allowed it to function. The Chapter 11 Trustee has from time-to-time credibly testified that these agreements essentially created an “eco-system” that allowed the Acis CLOs to be effectively and efficiently managed by the Debtor-Acis.

<sup>7</sup> The evidence reflected that there have been a couple of occasions recently when there were insufficient funds to make distributions to the equity. E.g., Transcript 12/11/18 (PM) [DE # 790], at p. 15 (line 2) through p. 16 (line 18). But it appears to this court that these missed distributions were due to actions of Highland—as later explained herein—in improperly, surreptitiously attempting to liquidate the Acis CLOs, from the time period after the Chapter 11 Trustee was appointed, until the bankruptcy court issued an injunction to temporarily halt Highland's actions. E.g., Transcript 12/11/18 (AM) [DE # 789], p. 67 (line 14) through p. 68 (line 6).

1. The PMAs with the CLO SPEs.<sup>8</sup>

First, the Debtor-Acis has various portfolio management agreements (the “PMAs”) with the CLO SPEs, pursuant to which the Debtor-Acis earns management fees. The PMAs have been the primary “assets” (loosely speaking) of the Debtor-Acis (to be more precise, the PMAs are executory contracts pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code). They are what generate revenue for the Debtor-Acis.

2. The Sub-Advisory Agreement with Highland.<sup>9</sup>

Second, the Debtor-Acis had a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called) with an insider, Highland (i.e., one of the Objectors). Highland’s “insider” status will be further explained below. Pursuant to this agreement, the Debtor-Acis essentially sub-contracted for the use of Highland front-office personnel/advisors to perform management services for the Debtor-Acis (i.e., so that the Debtor-Acis could fulfill its obligations to the CLO SPEs under the PMAs). The Debtor-Acis paid handsome fees to Highland pursuant to this agreement. This, too, was an executory contract pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code. As explained below, this agreement was rejected (with bankruptcy court approval)<sup>10</sup> by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, when the Chapter 11 Trustee credibly represented that he had not only found resources to provide these services at a much lower cost to the estate, but he also had begun to believe that Highland was engaging in stealth efforts to liquidate the Acis CLOs, to the detriment of the Debtor-Acis's creditors.<sup>11</sup>

3. The Shared Services Agreement with Highland.<sup>12</sup>

Third, the Debtor-Acis also had a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called) with Highland, pursuant to which the Debtor-Acis essentially sub-contracted for the use of Highland's back-office services (again, so that the Debtor-Acis could fulfill its obligations to the CLO SPEs under the PMAs). To be clear, the Debtor-Acis had no employees of its own—only a couple of officers and members. The Debtor-Acis paid handsome fees to Highland for the personnel and back-office services that Highland provided to the Debtor-Acis. This, too, was an executory contract pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code. As explained below, this agreement was also rejected by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases (with bankruptcy court approval) for the same reasons that the Sub-Advisory Agreement with Highland was rejected.

4. The Equity PMA.<sup>13</sup>

Fourth, until a few weeks before the Bankruptcy Cases were filed, the Debtor-Acis also had yet another portfolio management agreement (distinct from its PMAs with the CLO SPEs) whereby the Debtor-Acis provided services not just to the CLO SPEs themselves, but separately to the equity holder in the CLO SPEs. This portfolio management agreement with the equity holder in the CLO SPEs is sometimes referred to by the parties as the "ALF PMA," but it would probably be easier to refer to it as the "Equity PMA" (for ease of reference, the court will refer to it as the “Equity/ALF PMA”).<sup>14</sup> The Debtor-Acis did not earn a specific fee pursuant to the Equity/ALF PMA, but the Chapter 11 Trustee and certain of his witnesses credibly testified that the Debtor-Acis considered the agreement valuable and very important, because it essentially gave the Debtor-Acis the ability to control the whole Acis CLO eco-system—in other words, gave the Debtor-Acis the ability to make substantial decisions on behalf of the CLO SPEs’ equity—distinct from making decisions for the CLO SPEs themselves pursuant to the PMAs. The more credible evidence before the court suggests that the Equity/ALF PMA delegated to the portfolio manager (i.e., the Debtor-Acis) the right to control the terms of any liquidation of collateral in an optional redemption under the terms of the CLO indentures.<sup>15</sup> In any event, shortly before the Bankruptcy Cases were filed, agents of Highland and/or others controlling the Debtor-Acis (including but not limited to Mr. James Dondero—the chief executive officer of both the Debtor-Acis and of Highland): (a) caused the Debtor-Acis to terminate this Equity/ALF PMA (notably, the counter-party to this agreement, the equity owner, would have only been able to terminate it “for cause”<sup>16</sup>); and (b) then caused the equity owner to enter into a new Equity PMA with a newly formed offshore entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. (“Highland HCF”).<sup>17</sup> Mr. Dondero, in addition to being the chief executive of Highland and the Debtor-Acis, also became the president of the newly formed Highland HCF.<sup>18</sup> The Equity/ALF PMA

would have been an executory contract of the Debtor-Acis, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, if it had not been terminated shortly before the Bankruptcy Cases. The court has heard credible testimony that leads it to conclude that the Equity/ALF PMA would have been assumed by the Debtor-Acis, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, if not terminated by agents of Highland on the eve of bankruptcy. The court has heard credible testimony that it is important for a portfolio manager to have not only the PMAs with the CLO SPEs themselves, but also with the equity owners of the CLO SPEs.

II. A Few More Basics About CLOs.

In the world of CLOs (like other public debt instruments) there are occasionally redemptions, refinancings, and resets. A redemption is essentially when the equity in the CLO, before maturity, calls for the liquidation of the collateral in the CLO and the repayment of the tranches of notes, so that the CLO comes to an end. A refinancing is when a lower interest rate can be accomplished in the market place on the tranches of debt of the CLO, but the maturity date and other terms remain in place (similar to a refinancing on a home mortgage). This can happen typically after a two-year non-call period. A reset is when the maturity date, the reinvestment period, or other changes in the terms of a CLO (beyond simply interest rate) are accomplished.<sup>19</sup>

It should be noted that the top tranche of notes in the CLO SPEs (AAA-rated) is considered the “controlling” class, and a majority of holders in this class can terminate the CLO manager (i.e., the Debtor-Acis LP) for cause on 45 days’ notice, but these folks have apparently been content to ignore the Bankruptcy Cases and the fighting between the Debtor-Acis and

Highland (as further described below)—no doubt because they are earning their fixed income stream without a hitch. And the bottom tranche of “notes” in the CLO SPEs (the equity) has voting rights and is a capital provider and, in certain ways, controls the CLO SPEs, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain “no-call” period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A’s. But, by virtue of the Equity/ALF PMA, the Debtor-Acis was really acting for the equity. It seems substantially likely to the court that this is why Highland and its agents caused the Debtor-Acis to terminate the Equity/ALF PMA (which, as mentioned above, was an agreement that the equity could have only terminated “for cause”—and it appears there would have been no “cause”).

III. The Non-Insider Creditors.

The Debtor-Acis does not have many creditors. The non-insider creditors are, for the most part, Joshua Terry (“Mr. Terry”) and a few vendors (most of which are law firms).

Mr. Terry commenced the Bankruptcy Cases with the filing of involuntary bankruptcy petitions. Mr. Terry was the human being who formerly, quite successfully served as the portfolio manager for the Debtor-Acis for many years. Mr. Terry was terminated under contentious circumstances on June 9, 2016, after getting into disagreements with Mr. Dondero. Mr. Terry was technically an employee of Highland itself (like all employees are, in the Highland family of companies—no matter which subsidiary or affiliate they work for). After his employment termination, Highland sued Mr. Terry in September 2016. Mr. Terry asserted claims back against Highland and both of the above-referenced Debtors. The litigation was referred to arbitration, and, after a ten-day arbitration trial in September 2017 before “JAMS,” Mr. Terry obtained an Arbitration Award (herein so called), on October 20, 2017, jointly and severally, against both of the Debtors in the amount of $7,949,749.15, plus post-award interest at the legal rate. A Final Judgment (the “Terry Judgment”) confirming the Arbitration Award was entered on December 18, 2017, in the same amount as that contained in the Arbitration Award—$7,949,749.15.

Mr. Terry commenced the Bankruptcy Cases when he became concerned that the Debtor-Acis was being rendered insolvent and unable to pay creditors including himself, due to actions undertaken by Highland and its agents immediately after entry of the Arbitration Award (e.g., transfers of assets, contracts, and business away from the Debtor-Acis).

The Debtor-Acis also is obligated on large administrative expense claims, since: (a) a Chapter 11 Trustee was appointed very early—due to what the bankruptcy court perceived to be massive conflicts of interest with regard to the Debtors’ management; and (b) the Objectors have opposed virtually every action taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, resulting in many long hearings.

IV. The Objectors (all of which are “Insiders”).

There are no non-insider creditors objecting to the Plan. Mr. Terry supports the Plan. The CLO SPEs and Indenture Trustee do not oppose the Plan. None of the vendors oppose the Plan. The U.S. Trustee is not opposing the Plan. As a technical matter, two impaired classes of creditors voted to accept the Plan.<sup>20</sup> So who are the Objectors to the Plan (which Plan will be further described below) and what is their party-in-interest status here?

As earlier mentioned, the Objectors are: (a) Highland, (b) HCLOF Guernsey, and (c) Neutra Cayman. As noted earlier, the Chapter 11 Trustee frequently refers to them collectively as “The Highlands”—but the Objectors do not like this conflation. At one time Highland and

HCLOF Guernsey had the same lawyers. They do not anymore. However, they frequently file joint pleadings and take the same positions. Highland and Neutra Cayman do still have the same lawyers.

1. Highland.

Highland is a Dallas, Texas-based company that is a Registered Investment Advisor. Highland was founded in 1993 by Mr. Dondero, originally with a 75% ownership interest, and Mark K. Akada (“Mr. Akada”), originally with a 25% ownership interest. As mentioned earlier, Mr. Dondero is the chief executive of Highland. Highland, through its organizational structure of approximately 2,000 separate business entities, manages approximately $14-$15 billion of investor capital in vehicles including CLOs, private equity funds, and mutual funds. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as it did with the Debtor-Acis, through the mechanism of shared services agreements and sub-advisory agreements (as mentioned above). Notably, Highland’s chief executive, Mr. Dondero, served as the President of the Debtor-Acis at all relevant times prepetition.<sup>21</sup> Highland claims to be a large creditor of the Debtor-Acis for services provided to the Debtor-Acis under the Shared Services Agreement and the Sub-Advisory Agreement. The Chapter 11 Trustee disputes these claims and has asserted numerous claims back against Highland in an adversary proceeding (the “Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding”).

In any event, Highland is a disputed insider creditor. It is an “insider,” as contemplated by Bankruptcy Code section 101(31)(C), because it, beyond any shadow of a doubt, controlled the Debtor-Acis until these Bankruptcy Cases developed to the point of having a Chapter 11

Trustee take charge of the Debtor-Acis. Highland does not seem to dispute that it is an insider.<sup>22</sup> But, for the avoidance of doubt, Highland should be considered an insider of the Debtor-Acis for at least the following reasons: (a) the same human being (Mr. Dondero) was president of the Debtor-Acis and was the chief executive of Highland; (b) Highland's General Counsel, Scott Ellington, testified that Mr. Dondero controlled them both;<sup>23</sup> and (c) Highland provided the Debtor-Acis with employees and management services pursuant to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement.<sup>24</sup>

Additionally, the court believes that the Chapter 11 Trustee made a convincing argument in connection with Plan confirmation (and his justification for the separate classification of Highland's claim in the Plan from other general unsecured creditors) that Highland should also be regarded as a "competitor" of the Debtor-Acis at this juncture, since they are both in the fund management business and Highland's control over the Debtor-Acis has now been divested. Highland's competitor status, in addition to its insider status, warrants additional scrutiny of its <sup>22</sup> Under section 101(31) of the Bankruptcy Code, an insider includes certain enumerated parties, such as an officer of the debtor, affiliate, etc. Further, the list of enumerated "insiders" is not exclusive or exhaustive. See Wilson v. Huffman (In re Missionary Baptist Foundation of Am., Inc.), 712 F.2d 206, 210 (5th Cir. 1983). Recently, the United States Supreme Court stated: "Courts have additionally recognized as insiders some persons not on that [101(31)] list—commonly known as 'nonstatutory insiders.' The conferral of that status often turns on whether the person's transactions with the debtor (or another of its insiders) were at arm's length." U.S. Bank N.A. v. Vill. at Lakeridge, LLC, 138 S. Ct. 960, 963 (2018). The Fifth Circuit has noted that "cases which have considered whether insider status exists generally have focused on two factors in making that determination: (1) the closeness of the relationship between the parties and (2) whether the transaction . . . [was] conducted at arm's length." Browning Interests v. Allison (In re Holloway), 955 F.2d 1008, 1011 (5th Cir. 1992).

motivations in objecting to the Plan. More importantly, it provides a sound legal and business justification for separately classifying its claim in the Plan.

2. HCLOF Guernsey.

The second Objector, HCLOF Guernsey, is an entity formed in the island nation of Guernsey. It has two allegedly independent Directors from Guernsey who have provided testimony in connection with confirmation of the Plan. It was enormously clear to the court (as will be elaborated upon below) that the two Directors of HCLOF Guernsey are—stated in the kindest way possible—mere “figureheads” for HCLOF Guernsey and they defer to Highland entirely to tell them what to do, what to say, and when. In any event, HCLOF Guernsey is the owner of the equity in the CLO SPEs (as earlier mentioned, this equity is sometimes referred to as the “subordinated notes” in the CLO SPEs). According to HCLOF Guernsey's 2017 Annual Report and Audited Financials, all of its subordinated notes issued by the Acis CLOs are physically held at and are pledged to HCLOF Guernsey's lender, NexBank, which happens to be a Dallas bank that is an affiliate of Highland.<sup>25</sup> HCLOF Guernsey was created in the year 2015 and was formerly known as “ALF.”<sup>26</sup> Its name was changed on October 30, 2017 (ten days after Mr. Terry's Arbitration Award was entered), to allegedly distance itself from the Debtor-Acis. The equity owner HCLOF Guernsey, in turn, has three equity owners: (i) a 49% equity owner that is a charitable fund (i.e., a donor advised fund or “DAF”) that was seeded with contributions from Highland, is managed/advised by Highland, and whose independent trustee is a long-time friend of Highland's chief executive officer, Mr. Dondero; (ii) 2% is owned by Highland employees; and (iii) a 49% equity owner that is a third-party institutional investor based in

Boston, Massachusetts that only recently invested in HCLOF Guernsey (i.e., in November 2017, just after the Terry Arbitration Award was issued), and desires to remain passive and anonymous (hereinafter, the “Passive Investor”).<sup>27</sup> Notably, the Debtor-Acis itself owned a small percentage of HCLOF Guernsey, in addition to providing management services to it, until October 24, 2017 (four days after the Terry Arbitration Award was issued).

The court has allowed HCLOF Guernsey to vigorously participate in the confirmation hearing (and other hearings during the Bankruptcy Cases), although its party-in-interest status has been questionable. So how is HCLOF Guernsey a party-in-interest? The answer is a bit of a stretch—but the court has decided it is impacted by the Plan, so it should have the right to object. Its party-in-interest status has evolved during the Bankruptcy Cases.

First, early on in these Bankruptcy Cases, HCLOF Guernsey (together with Highland) sued the Chapter 11 Trustee in the above-mentioned “Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding”—mostly, if not entirely, seeking injunctive relief. At that point, the Chapter 11 Trustee treated HCLOF Guernsey as a disputed creditor,<sup>28</sup> since it was seeking equitable relief that could arguably be monetized.<sup>29</sup> However, HCLOF Guernsey subsequently withdrew its requests for relief in that Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. But then, the Chapter 11 Trustee subsequently filed claims against HCLOF Guernsey in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding (along with his claims against Highland and a couple of other Highland entities) asserting avoidance actions and other causes of action against HCLOF Guernsey (among other

<sup>27</sup> The testimony was that the Passive Investor committed to a $150 million investment ($75 million immediately and $75 million callable over the next several years).

things, the Chapter 11 Trustee alleged that HCLOF Guernsey schemed with Highland to terminate the Equity/ALF PMA, in a step toward systematically dismantling the Debtor-Acis of its value). Thus, HCLOF Guernsey may ultimately owe money to this estate. But most importantly, HCLOF Guernsey should be deemed a party-in-interest because of a proposed temporary injunction in the Plan that essentially would enjoin (for a finite, defined period) HCLOF Guernsey from exercising certain of its rights with regard to its equity in the CLO SPEs, pending resolution of the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. This temporary injunction in the Plan, directed towards HCLOF Guernsey and affiliates, will be further described below.

3. Neutra Cayman.

Neutra Cayman is a Cayman island exempted company that is the equity owner of the Debtor-Acis itself (in contrast to HCLOF Guernsey, which only owns equity in the CLO SPEs). Neutra Cayman only acquired its equity interest in the Debtor-Acis the day after the Terry Judgment was entered (on December 18, 2017), and for no consideration, from the Dugaboy Investment Trust (a family trust on which Mr. Dondero’s sister is named trustee, that previously owned 74.9% of the Debtor-Acis) and from Mr. Akada (who previously owned 25% of the Debtor-Acis).<sup>30</sup> The court concludes that Neutra Cayman has standing to object to the Plan,

<sup>30</sup> The court is repeatedly referring to the Debtor-Acis but, to be clear, there are two consolidated Debtors: Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (“Acis GP/LLC”). See note 2, supra. When Acis LP was first formed, it was owned by one general partner (Acis GP/LLC, with a .1% interest) and it had three limited partners: (a) the Dugaboy Investment Trust (a Dondero family trust of which either Mr. Dondero or his sister, Nancy Dondero, have been the trustee at all relevant times) with a 59.9% interest; (b) Mr. Terry with a 25% interest; and (c) Mr. Akada with a 15% interest. When Acis GP/LLC was formed (i.e., the .1% owner of Acis LP), its sole member was the Dugaboy Investment Trust. After Mr. Terry was terminated by Highland, his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was forfeited and divided among the two remaining limited partners: Mr. Akada (increasing his interest by 10% up to 25%), and the Dugaboy Investment Trust (increasing its interest by 15% up to 74.9%). But, most importantly, on the day after entry of Mr. Terry’s Final Judgment (i.e., on December 18, 2017), both Mr. Akada and the Dugaboy Investment Trust conveyed their entire limited partnership interests in Acis LP—25% and 74.9%, respectively—to Neutra Cayman. The Dugaboy Investment Trust also conveyed its 100% membership interest in Acis GP/LLC to Neutra Cayman.

since it is an equity owner of the Debtors (albeit only having acquired its equity about a month before the bankruptcy). As with HCLOF Guernsey, the court also concludes that Neutra-Cayman is absolutely, beyond any reasonable doubt, controlled by Highland, as explained further below.

V. The Plan.

The Plan is fairly simple, considering the complexity of the business and the relationships, and the contentiousness of the Bankruptcy Cases. Again, there aren't many creditors.

The Plan proposes<sup>31</sup> that the Debtor-Acis, as a "Reorganized Debtor," will continue with the business operations of the Debtors after the Effective Date<sup>32</sup> of the Plan. Specifically, the Debtor-Acis will assume, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, its CLO PMAs and continue to serve as the portfolio manager to the CLO SPEs (and as to any resets of the CLOs therein). The Reorganized Debtor will continue to earn fees and will pay claims from post-Effective Date income as provided in the Plan. The Reorganized Acis will actively pursue additional fund management contracts. Again, there is no objection by the CLO SPEs to the Plan, and the indenture trustee on the tranches of CLO notes has no objection.

Mr. Terry (again, the former human manager of the Debtor-Acis and also the largest creditor) shall receive 100% of the equity interests in the Reorganized Debtor, in exchange for a negotiated $1 million reduction in his partially secured claim.<sup>33</sup> The remainder of his claim will

<sup>31</sup> This is merely a high-level summary of the Plan. The Plan terms, as modified, shall in all ways govern, not this summary.

<sup>32</sup> The "Effective Date" is defined, essentially, as the first business day which is fourteen (14) days after entry of an order confirming the Plan, if the confirmation order is not stayed.

<sup>33</sup> Mr. Terry has asserted partial secured status as to his claim in the proofs of claim he has filed in these cases. The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that there was no other logical party to take the equity of be treated as an unsecured claim. Each unsecured creditor will receive on the Plan Effective Date an unsecured cash flow note in the full amount of its claim, which notes will mature three years after the Effective Date of the Plan, with equal quarterly payments of principal and interest, at 5% interest per annum. These cash flow notes are expected to yield payment in full (actually 102%) to the unsecured creditors.<sup>34</sup>

As for the sub-advisory and shared services agreements with Highland, as noted earlier, the Chapter 11 Trustee, with bankruptcy court approval, has already (as of August 2018) rejected these during the Bankruptcy Cases, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code. The Chapter 11 Trustee caused the Debtor-Acis to subsequently contract, with bankruptcy court approval, with a different entity, Brigade Capital Management, L.P. (“Brigade”), to provide the sub-advisory and shared services going forward, for a minimum two-year term (unless the Reorganized Debtor and Brigade otherwise agree), at a much cheaper cost than Highland.<sup>35</sup> Thus, Brigade will provide sub-servicing and sub-advisory services to the Reorganized Debtor.

the Reorganized Debtor, at this juncture, and that he had negotiated this reduction to Mr. Terry’s secured claim, and he thought it was justified by the circumstances of this case. While the Objectors have argued that the secured status of Mr. Terry’s claim may be subject to challenge under section 547(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, section 547(b) is discretionary (e.g., a “trustee may avoid any transfer” that might be avoidable as a preference). The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly emphasized that this was negotiated treatment of an asserted secured claim, and he had no “exclusivity” on proposing a plan if someone else had wanted to propose something different. Transcript 12/11/18 (AM) [DE # 789], at p. 70 (line 3) through p. 71 (line 2).

<sup>34</sup> Insider claims—namely Highland—are separately classified from general unsecured claims under the Plan. To the extent such claims are ultimately allowed (after any allowed defenses and offsets), and to the extent such claims are not equitably subordinated by Bankruptcy Court adjudication, these claims will receive the same treatment as other general unsecured claims (cash flow notes). To the extent any of these claims are ultimately allowed but equitably subordinated, they will receive subordinated promissory notes, accruing interest at 5% per annum, that will not be payable until all non-subordinated claims have been paid in full (they will have maturity dates to occur on the earlier of: (i) the date that is two years after the date all Unsecured Cash Flow Notes have been paid in full, or (ii) five years after the Effective Date). The expected recovery under the Plan for the insider claims is from 65% to 100%.

As for the Equity/ALF PMA, it is not an agreement with the Debtor-Acis anymore to either be assumed or rejected, pursuant to section 365. However, in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding, the Chapter 11 Trustee seeks to avoid the termination of the Equity/ALF PMA. Pursuant to the Plan, the Reorganized Debtor will be vested with certain Assets of the Debtors, including Estate Claims and Estate Defenses, to be administered and liquidated by the Reorganized Debtor.

1. The Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding (Adv. Proc. No. 18-03212).

Suffice it to say that the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding is a somewhat significant part of the Plan; it is what justifies the temporary injunction that is a critical part of the Plan. With regard to the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding, the Defendants in it (there are five of them) are: (i) Highland; (ii) HCLOF Guernsey; (iii) Highland HCF (i.e., the Cayman Island entity that was recently formed to essentially replace the Debtor-Acis under the Equity/ALF PMA); (iv) Highland CLO Management, Ltd. (“Highland Management”) (an entity registered in the Cayman Islands on October 27, 2017—seven days after Mr. Terry’s Arbitration Award); and (v) Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. (yet another entity incorporated in the Cayman Island on October 27, 2017). The Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding is essentially a multi-faceted fraudulent transfer action. The statutory predicates for the relief sought are sections 502, 542, 544, 547, 548, and 550 of the Bankruptcy Code and Texas Business & Commerce Code § 24.001 et seq. (“TUFTA”).

Distilled to its essence, the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding argues that Highland, along with its related Co-Defendants, orchestrated a systematic transfer of value away from the Debtor-Acis to other Highland entities (all of those transferee-entities are offshore entities—whereas the Debtor-Acis is a Delaware entity), beginning almost immediately after Mr. Terry was terminated in June 2016, and continuing on during Mr. Terry's litigation/arbitration with the Debtor-Acis, and then rapidly unfolding after the Arbitration Award. This was allegedly done to denude the Debtor-Acis of value and make the Debtors "judgment proof." This was allegedly also done to ensure that the Debtor-Acis's very valuable business as portfolio manager would be taken over by other Highland entities and remain under Highland's and Mr. Dondero's control.<sup>36</sup>

The evidence is rather startling on this point. Among other things, pursuant to amendments made to the Debtor-Acis's Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreements with Highland, starting soon after Mr. Terry was terminated, the fees owed by the Debtor-Acis to Highland under these agreements shot up to an enormously higher level. Then, in April 2017, a new CLO was issued (or actually a former Acis CLO was reset) and a new Highland-affiliated Cayman Island entity was ultimately put in place to manage it instead of the Debtor-Acis (even though the Debtor-Acis managed all other CLOs in the Highland corporate empire). Numerous other transactions were undertaken through the Fall of 2017, removing assets and agreements away from the Debtor-Acis. For example, a multi-million dollar note receivable owed to the Debtor-Acis by Highland was transferred out of the Debtor-Acis,<sup>37</sup> and

<sup>37</sup> On November 3, 2017, the Debtor-Acis, Highland, and Highland Management (a newly created, offshore Highland affiliate) entered into that certain Agreement for Assignment and Transfer of Promissory Note (the "Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement"). Exh. 225. The Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement, among other things, transferred a $9.5 million principal amount promissory note executed by Highland and payable to the Debtor-Acis (the "Note"), Exh. 218, from the Debtor-Acis to Highland Management (the "Note Transfer"). The Assignment and Transfer Agreement memorializing this transaction is signed by Mr. Dondero for the Debtor-Acis. The document recites that (i) Highland is no longer willing to continue providing support services to the Debtor-Acis, (ii) the Debtor-Acis, therefore, can no longer fulfill its duties as a collateral manager, and (iii) Highland Management agrees to step into the collateral manager role if the Debtor-Acis will assign the Note to it. Notably, Highland Management was registered in the Cayman Islands on October 27, 2017, roughly a week before the Note Transfer. Thus, Highland Management had no portfolio or collateral management experience whatsoever when it entered the Assignment and Transfer Agreement. To the contrary, it appears Highland Management was an entity that was created specifically to hold the Note and eventually take possession of the CLO PMAs in an international forum that would be difficult for Mr. Terry to reach. The Debtor-shares in HCLOF Guernsey held by the Debtor-Acis were sold back to HCLOF Guernsey (four days after the Arbitration Award). And then the Equity/ALF PMA was terminated so that the Debtor-Acis would no longer have management-control over HCLOF Guernsey as its portfolio manager—arguably putting Highland in a position to liquidate the Acis CLOs and put the Debtor-Acis out of business. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, just seven days after Mr. Terry's Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis ostensibly terminated its own portfolio management rights under the Equity/ALF PMA<sup>38</sup> and transferred its authority and its valuable portfolio management rights—for no value—to Highland HCF, an affiliate of Highland. It appears that the only alleged consideration for these transfers, to the extent there was any, was the satisfaction of purported debts owed to other Highland entities or their representatives.

Acis appears to have received no or insufficient consideration for the Note Transfer. The primary consideration for the Note Transfer was an alleged payable due from the Debtor-Acis to Highland in the approximate amount of $7.5 million for participation fees, which was transferred to Highland Management shortly before the Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement was entered. The validity of the alleged “participation fees” is unknown. The remainder of the consideration for the Note Transfer is a promise to pay certain expenses of the Debtor-Acis, which has apparently never occurred. In any event, it appears highly likely that the Note Transfer took away the Note as an asset from which Mr. Terry could collect his judgment.

<sup>38</sup> As mentioned earlier, the Equity/ALF PMA provided that the Debtor-Acis could only be removed as portfolio manager by the equity owner (now known as HCLOF Guernsey) “for cause” at § 14(a)-(e). Exh. 11. Meanwhile, the Debtor-Acis could terminate the Equity/ALF PMA without cause upon at least ninety (90) days’ notice, pursuant to § 13(a)-(c). Exh. 11. It would appear that these terms were wholly ignored by the persons orchestrating the Equity/ALF PMA termination. It appears that the Debtor-Acis was simply manipulated to consent and agree to its removal and replacement as portfolio manager of HCLOF Guernsey. This transfer of the Debtor-Acis's portfolio management rights to the offshore entity Highland HCF was accomplished by way of a new portfolio management agreement entered into by the equity owner (now known as HCLOF Guernsey) and Highland HCF on October 27, 2017, which empowered Highland HCF with the same broad authority to direct the management of HCLOF Guernsey as was previously held by the Debtor-Acis LP under the Equity/ALF PMA. See Exh. 19, October 27, 2017 PMA §§ 1 & 5(a)-(q). This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017. Exh. 215. The Debtor-Acis received no consideration for this transfer.

The Highland Defendants argue that the Equity/ALF PMA (its termination being arguably the most significant transfer referenced in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding) did not have value. But the evidence convinces the court that it absolutely did. A witness, Mr. Zachary Alpern, credibly testified that the portfolio manager (under the Equity/ALF PMA) made decisions regarding the underlying financial instruments including seeking an optional redemption and negotiating a reset. Mr. Alpern also credibly testified about the importance, in the CLO industry, of the portfolio manager having control of a CLO's equity to ensure an "evergreen fee stream."<sup>39</sup> Additionally, Mr. Terry also credibly testified that the portfolio manager (not the CLO equity interest holder) has the right to control the terms of the liquidation of collateral in an optional redemption under the terms of the indentures.<sup>40</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee also credibly testified that the Equity/ALF PMA allowed the Debtor-Acis to have control of an optional redemption.<sup>41</sup> Finally, a witness, Mr. Klein, credibly testified about the value of the Equity/ALF PMA and the negative impact of its transfer on the Debtor-Acis LP.<sup>42</sup>

To be clear, Highland and HCLOF Guernsey have argued in opposition to the Chapter 11 Trustee's position that it is HCLOF Guernsey—the actual equity holder of the CLO SPEs—that had/has the absolute power and authority to control the CLO SPEs' destinies and it is ludicrous to suggest otherwise. However, not only does the Equity/ALF PMA appear to this court to have delegated the relevant power and authority to the Debtor-Acis, but Highland's own expert on this topic, Mr. Castro, testified that the “actual humans” who would make the decision for HCLOF Guernsey as to whether to request an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs were not the HCLOF Guernsey directors but, rather, Highland executives Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, and Highland employee Mr. Covitz (acting for Highland HCF).<sup>43</sup> Moreover, Mr. Alpern credibly testified that, before the Terry Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis, as the portfolio manager under the Equity/ALF PMA, rather than the HCLOF Guernsey’s directors, issued the notices of optional redemption for HCLOF Guernsey.<sup>44</sup>

The court concludes that the Chapter 11 Trustee has demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits with regard to his claims set forth in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. Therefore, the Temporary Injunction that is part of the Plan is supportable (as further explained below). Of course, the nature and extent of the rights ultimately recovered by the Debtor-Acis will either be determined in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding or, as HCLOF Guernsey’s own Guernsey expert conceded, in a binding arbitration in Dallas, Texas under the terms of the Equity/ALF PMA.<sup>45</sup>

2. The Plan Injunction.

The most controversial aspect of the Plan—the aspect of it that seems to be the primary focus of the Objectors—is a portion of an injunction in the Plan (the “Temporary Injunction”). The Temporary Injunction would temporarily enjoin the following parties from effectuating an optional redemption or liquidating the Acis CLOs and related actions: (i) Highland; (ii) HCLOF

Guernsey; (iii) CLO Holdco, Ltd. (the donor advised fund, seeded with Highland contributions and managed by Highland that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey); (iv) Neutra Cayman; (v) Highland HCF (the Cayman Island entity created shortly before the Bankruptcy Cases to replace the Debtor-Acis under the Equity/ALF PMA); (vi) Highland Management (the Highland-created entity that entered into a portfolio management agreement with a new Acis-CLO that was established in 2017); and (vii) any affiliates of Highland and their respective employees, agents, representatives, transferees, assigns, and successors.<sup>46</sup> This Temporary Injunction is proposed to only last until the earlier of when: (a) the creditors of the Debtors are paid in full; (b) resolution of the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding; (c) a material breach in the Plan; or (d) the bankruptcy court terminates the Temporary Injunction upon request of a party-in-interest. Fully consensual resets of the Acis CLOs are permissible if HCLOF Guernsey, as the equity owner in the CLO SPEs, chooses to agree to resets. The basis for the Temporary Injunction is as follows: The Chapter 11 Trustee has asserted numerous claims in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding against Highland, HCLOF Guernsey, and affiliates, including claims to recover the Debtor-Acis's rights under the Equity/ALF PMA.<sup>47</sup> The Temporary Plan Injunction essentially provides for the continuation, after the Effective Date, of injunctive relief that the bankruptcy court previously granted in its Preliminary Injunction Order (the "Preliminary Injunction") [DE # 21 in Adversary No. 18-03212-sgj] entered on July 10, 2018 in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. The Preliminary Injunction was originally set to expire by its own terms upon confirmation of the Plan but would be extended pursuant to an order confirming the Plan, through the Effective Date of the Plan.

<sup>46</sup> There is another portion of this Plan injunction that is more of a general plan injunction (i.e., very typical) that would prohibit actions against the Debtors, Reorganized Debtor and the Estate Assets, based on acts occurring before the Effective Date, which would be permanent and would not expire upon the occurrence of any event that causes the Temporary Plan Injunction to expire.

As the Fifth Circuit has stated, the four elements to justify a preliminary injunction are (a) substantial likelihood of success on the merits; (b) substantial threat that the plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury; (c) the threatened injury outweighs any harm the injunction might cause the defendant; and (d) the injunction is in the public interest.<sup>48</sup> Each element is present in these cases.

Immediate and Irreparable Harm. The court finds and concludes that the Temporary Injunction is legally permissible, necessary, and appropriate to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to the Reorganized Debtor (i.e., evisceration of the Acis CLOs, by parties with unclean hands, that would have no authority to effectuate a liquidation of the CLOs, absent the prepetition wrongful termination of the Equity/ALF PMA). Mr. Scott, a director of HCLOF Guernsey, testified that, absent the Temporary Plan Injunction, HCLOF Guernsey would call for an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs.<sup>49</sup> The testimony of Ms. Bestwick, the other director of HCLOF Guernsey, also implied that, when the injunction expires, HCLOF Guernsey would redeem the Acis CLOs so that they could once again be managed by Highland.<sup>50</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that if the Acis CLOs are liquidated, there is nothing for the Debtor-Acis to manage.<sup>51</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is very important because it protects the revenues under the Acis PMAs, which is a source of potential recovery to creditors under the Plan.<sup>52</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is a critical component of the Plan and that the Debtor-Acis would have no going concern value without it. In fact, without the Plan Injunction, Mr. Terry will be precluded from reorganizing the business and paying creditors.<sup>53</sup>

The Objectors have argued that the Chapter 11 Trustee cannot suffer irreparable harm because he has an adequate remedy at law. This argument misses the mark. The destruction of the Debtors' ongoing business, which has the potential to repay creditors under the Plan in two years, constitutes irreparable harm. The fact that the estate possesses a number of avoidance claims for damages against Highland and its affiliates, and could potentially obtain damages on such claims, does not render the destruction of the Debtor-Acis's ongoing business any less harmful. Indeed, according to the Fifth Circuit:

[T]he mere fact that economic damages may be available does not always mean that a remedy at law is 'adequate.' For example, some courts have found that a remedy at law is inadequate if legal redress may be obtained only by pursuing a multiplicity of actions.<sup>54</sup>

Likelihood of Success on the Merits. The Chapter 11 Trustee has also demonstrated a likelihood of succeeding on the merits in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding.

The record contains substantial evidence of both intentional and constructive fraudulent transfers with regard to the Equity/ALF PMA and other assets.<sup>55</sup> The numerous prepetition transfers that occurred around the time of and after the Terry Arbitration Award appear more likely than not to have been made to deprive the Debtor-Acis of value and with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Debtors' creditors. Highland's only purported business justifications for the prepetition transfers were that the Passive Investor demanded it and that the Debtor-Acis's brand was toxic in the market place.<sup>56</sup> However, these business justifications were not supported (and, in fact, were contradicted) by the evidence.

Indeed, while representatives of Highland and its affiliates said that the Passive Investor's demands were the reason for the termination (i.e., essentially a "transfer") of the Equity/ALF PMA, the Passive Investor's representative testified that this was untrue and that these alleged demands were never made by the Passive Investor.<sup>57</sup> In fact, the Passive Investor was just that—a passive, minority investor in HCLOF Guernsey with no ability to influence or control any of <sup>56</sup> Highland General Counsel Scott Ellington testified that the Passive Investor said it had no interest in doing business with the Debtor-Acis because the Debtor-Acis brand was purportedly toxic and, consequently, nothing associated with the Debtor-Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO. Exh. 23, Transcript 2/7/18 at pp. 55-58. Mr. Ellington further testified that the Passive Investor demanded that the Equity/ALF PMA be transferred. Exh. 23, Transcript 2/7/18 at pp. 203-204. Mr. Ellington also testified that, because the Passive Investor would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, it had the ability to "start calling the shots" and dictate the terms of any reset transactions. Exh. 23, Transcript 2/7/18 at p. 226. Additionally, Highland executive Mark Okada testified that a reset transaction could not be performed by the Debtor-Acis because the market would not accept the Debtor-Acis as a portfolio manager and the Debtor-Acis was no longer risk-retention compliant. Exh. 25, Transcript 3/23/18 at p. 53. Additionally, Mr. Dondero testified that the "Boston investor" deal was contingent on getting away from the Debtor-Acis and getting a new collateral manager. the actual investment decisions.<sup>58</sup> The only other business justification Highland and HCLOF Guernsey have suggested for the prepetition transfers was that the Debtor-Acis “was a shell” and not capable of being risk retention compliant.<sup>59</sup> However, Highland portfolio manager Hunter Covitz testified that in October 2017, prior to the Terry Arbitration Award, there was a structure in place that would comply with risk retention.<sup>60</sup> Mr. Covitz could not convincingly distinguish why the “shell” status of the Debtor-Acis was distinguishable from the “shell” status of other Highland-related entities that were the recipients of various fraudulent transfers.<sup>61</sup> Mr. Covitz also subsequently admitted that the Passive Investor did not request that the Debtor-Acis end its involvement with HCLOF Guernsey through the Equity/ALF PMA fraudulent transfer or request that ALF change its name to HCLOF [Guernsey].<sup>62</sup> Mr. Covitz’s testimony contradicted the testimony provided by Scott Ellington, General Counsel<sup>63</sup> and Mr. Dondero.<sup>64</sup> And, at bottom, if the Debtor-Acis was a thinly capitalized “shell,” it appears to be only because Highland systematically made it that way after the Terry Arbitration Award.

The evidence established overwhelmingly that there is a substantial likelihood that the transfers were part of an intentional scheme to keep assets away from Mr. Terry as a creditor. Highland put on an expert, Mr. Greenspan, who testified that he did not consider whether the Equity/ALF PMA transfer was an “actual” fraudulent transfer, but only considered whether the transfer was “constructively” fraudulent.<sup>65</sup> While Highland has taken the position that termination of the Equity/ALF PMA was not a transfer, Mr. Greenspan testified that the termination of a contract can constitute a transfer and acknowledged that the definition of a transfer in the Bankruptcy Code does not include a value component.<sup>66</sup>

Balance of Harms. The Chapter 11 Trustee has also shown the balance of harms weighs in his and the estates’ favor in granting the Plan’s Temporary Injunction. The Chapter 11 Trustee is entitled to the Temporary Injunction pending resolution of the claims asserted in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is important to the Plan, because it allows the cash flow from the CLO management to be collected by the Reorganized Debtor, and that is the source of revenue available at this time to pay creditors.<sup>67</sup> Mr. Terry also credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is a critical component of the Plan necessary to preserve the Debtors’ going concern value and allow the Reorganized Debtor to generate new business and repay creditors.<sup>68</sup> Conversely, in this court’s view, there is no real harm to Highland or the Co-Defendants because they can ask for a reset under the Plan.<sup>69</sup> Mr. Scott, a director of HCLOF Guernsey, testified that

HCLOF Guernsey can sell its interest in the subordinated notes in the market.<sup>70</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction would not impair the value of the subordinated notes because a rational investor would not want to liquidate the Acis CLOs, but rather would acquire them to do a reset under the Plan.<sup>71</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that even if the Acis CLOs are not reset, it still does not make sense to redeem the Acis CLOs.<sup>72</sup>

Public Interest. Finally, issuance of the Plan Injunction is consistent with public policy. Public policy favors the equitable collecting of a debtor's assets, maximizing the value of those assets, and distributing the proceeds in an orderly fashion in accordance with the priorities and safeguards set forth in the Bankruptcy Code, rather than in an uncontrolled, piecemeal, and potentially wasteful way. Public policy also supports successful reorganizations.<sup>73</sup> The public interest is furthered by confirming a plan that saves the Debtor-Acis's business operations and allows it to pay its creditors under a successful plan of reorganization. The public interest is also furthered by maintaining the status quo through the Temporary Plan Injunction so that the avoidance action relating to the Equity ALF PMA can be determined on its merits. The public interest is not furthered by allowing potential wrongdoers to complete the last step in what appears likely to have been a scheme to strip the Debtor-Acis of its assets, steal its business, and leave it unable to pay creditors. The public interest is not furthered by leaving the Debtors without sufficient resources to pursue and effectively litigate potentially valuable causes of action.

In sum, the court finds and concludes that the proposed Plan injunction (including the Temporary Injunction) is legally permissible and justified under all the circumstances. It is narrowly tailored to address the specific harm to which it is directed and comports with governing case and statutory authority and applicable rules of bankruptcy and civil procedure. The Plan Injunction is consistent with Fifth Circuit precedent.<sup>74</sup> Such an injunction would not violate section 524(e) of the Bankruptcy Code. That subsection provides that “discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt.”<sup>75</sup> The Plan Injunction would not affect the liability of any entity, or the liability of any property. The injunction would only temporarily prohibit Highland and its Co-Defendants from exercising one form of economic recourse, thereby preserving the status quo while the Chapter 11 Trustee and/or Reorganized Debtor has a fair opportunity to prosecute the <sup>74</sup> The Fifth Circuit, in an unpublished opinion, has recognized the propriety of an injunction to preserve the status quo in cases where equitable relief is sought. *See Animale Group v. 3. Feasibility of the Plan—Specific Findings and Conclusions Regarding Mr. Terry and Brigade.

The Objectors have challenged the feasibility of the Plan.<sup>79</sup> The court finds and concludes that the preponderance of the evidence supported the feasibility of the Plan. Among other things, the Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that Mr. Terry has an excellent track record as a portfolio manager, and that there is no reason why Mr. Terry will not be able to obtain new business—that is, new portfolios to manage which will provide additional revenue streams for the Reorganized Debtor.<sup>80</sup> The evidence was credible and compelling that Mr. Terry will be capable of fulfilling the equity owner position in the Reorganized Debtor (stepping in to essentially run the Reorganized Debtor) and will be able to ensure the feasibility of the Plan. He is well qualified to reorganize the Debtor-Acis. Mr. Terry testified that his role with the Reorganized Debtor will be similar to the role he very successfully performed for the Debtor-Acis.<sup>81</sup> The Debtor-Acis received numerous awards during Mr. Terry's service as the portfolio manager of the Acis CLOs.<sup>82</sup> The arbitration panel that issued the Arbitration Award found that Mr. Terry was terminated for essentially doing the right thing for investors.<sup>83</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that numerous market participants have expressed an interest in working with the Reorganized Debtor if the Plan is confirmed.<sup>84</sup>

Moreover, the court finds and concludes that Brigade (who stepped in as sub-advisor in place of Highland during the Bankruptcy Cases and is a registered investment advisor) is qualified to serve as a sub-advisor to the Reorganized Acis. Mr. Jared Worman, a portfolio manager for Brigade,<sup>85</sup> credibly testified that Brigade, founded in the year 2007, currently has $20 billion of total assets under management, $5 billion of which consists of six U.S. CLOs, two U.S. CDOs, and three European CLOs.<sup>86</sup> Mr. Worman credibly testified that Brigade has issued 17 CLOs and has reset or refinanced several of them.<sup>87</sup> Mr. Worman and Mr. Terry credibly testified that Brigade is willing to serve as sub-advisor to the Reorganized Acis for fifteen basis points.<sup>88</sup> Highland attempted to show with evidence and argument that Brigade had made some failed trades since stepping in as sub-advisor to the Acis CLOs and that this perhaps made them unfit to serve in this role. But Mr. Terry credibly testified that the fact that a few failed trades were made by Brigade does not make them unfit to serve as sub-advisor to Reorganized Acis, and that trades out of compliance with the applicable CLO tests occasionally happen, and Brigade has handled them appropriately.<sup>89</sup> In fact, the evidence suggested that at least ten failed trades occurred while Highland was acting as sub-advisor to the Debtor-Acis.<sup>90</sup>

Highland's suggestions that Brigade is not up to the task to manage the Reorganized Debtor are specious. Likewise, HCLOF Guernsey's insistence that it will not be getting the benefit of its bargain if the Acis CLOs are not managed by Highland personnel going forward appears to be a manufactured position aimed at thwarting Mr. Terry at all costs. Not only is there no credible evidence of Brigade mismanagement but, to the contrary, it appears that Highland (prior to the Debtor-Acis's rejection of the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement), intentionally liquidated assets of the CLO SPEs and built up cash without reasonable justification. Specifically, Mr. Terry credibly testified that there were $85 million in purchases in the Acis CLOs in the hours leading up to the entry of the orders for relief, but virtually no purchases of loans in the CLOs afterwards—only sales.<sup>91</sup> And Mr. Worman further credibly testified that Highland, while acting as sub-advisor, allowed approximately $380 million in cash to build up in the Acis CLOs. Meanwhile, Brigade has subsequently reduced that cash balance by $280 million to approximately $100 million.<sup>92</sup> Mr. Worman also credibly testified that Brigade has purchased approximately $300 million in loans for the Acis CLOs.<sup>93</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee and Mr. Terry both credibly testified that the build-up of cash in the Acis CLOs while Highland was sub-advisor, rather than the loans acquired by Brigade, left the Acis CLOs without sufficient interest income to make a distribution to the equity holders.<sup>94</sup> Certain contradictory testimony of Hunter Covitz was not convincing that: (a) there were very few conforming loans available to be purchased for the Acis CLOs in the approximately four months that elapsed between the entry of the Order for Relief and the time when Highland was terminated as sub-advisor;<sup>95</sup> and (b) it made more sense to accumulate cash to pay down the AAA notes rather than invest in new loans.<sup>96</sup> The court found more convincing the testimony of Mr. Terry: (a) that there was $310 billion of performing loans rated above CCC in the S&P loan index in May of 2018 available for purchase in CLO-6 that would have satisfied the weighted average life test;<sup>97</sup> (b) that Highland purchased loans for CLO-7 that would have satisfied the weighted average life constraints in the Debtor-Acis's CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6;<sup>98</sup> and (c)

that, although there was no change in market conditions, Highland essentially stopped buying collateral for the Acis CLOs<sup>99</sup> after the entry of the Orders for Relief.<sup>100</sup>

4. Resets—Non-impairment of Anyone’s Rights.

The Plan only contemplates consensual resets of the Acis CLOs—in other words, only if HCLOF Guernsey requests resets.<sup>101</sup> Messrs. Worman and Terry both credibly testified that they believed the Reorganized Acis and Brigade could perform a consensual reset of the Acis CLOs.<sup>102</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that other asset managers have been able to issue or reset CLOs after a bankruptcy proceeding.<sup>103</sup> Mr. Terry also credibly testified that he wants to come to a resolution with HCLOF Guernsey and consensually reset the Acis CLOs.<sup>104</sup>

HCLOF Guernsey has taken the position that it and its new Passive Investor (new as of mid-November 2017—just before the Bankruptcy Cases) only want to be involved with CLOs that are managed by Highland or Highland affiliates. Is the Plan impairing their rights—to the extent the Plan (and any subsequent re-sets) brings in Brigade as the sub-advisor to the Reorganized Debtor (whereas Highland was in that sub-advisor role before)? It appears no. The <sup>100</sup> Highland has also argued that the Plan is not feasible because the administrative expense claims are extremely high (to which the Chapter 11 Trustee responds, it is of Highland’s making, since Highland has objected to literally every action proposed by the Chapter 11 Trustee). The court does not believe there is a legitimate feasibility problem here. Not only has the court not ruled yet on final professional fee applications, but the Chapter 11 Trustee represented that certain professionals have agreed to defer their fees (beyond payment in full on the Effective Date) as necessary.

VI. General Credibility Assessments.

In ruling in a contested matter such as confirmation, and weighing the preponderance of the evidence, the credibility of witnesses and contradictions in their testimony naturally can be significant. Here, there were some noteworthy problems and contradictions with some of the testimony provided by the Objectors' witnesses. They are summarized below.

1. Scott Ellington: A Seemingly Manufactured Narrative to Justify Prior Actions.

Scott Ellington testified on February 7, 2018 at the trial on the involuntary petitions, and the court was asked to consider his testimony again in connection with confirmation (he did not attend the confirmation hearing). He is the General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and a Partner at Highland. Mr. Ellington testified that the Debtor-Acis's name is "toxic" in the market place and that, due to the litigation with Mr. Terry and allegations in that litigation, "nothing can be associated with the Acis brand and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO."<sup>112</sup> Mr. Ellington elaborated that it had been determined in late 2016 or 2017 that re-sets or re-financings of the Acis CLOs were a prudent thing to pursue (in fact, there was indeed a trend of refinancings and resets for this vintage of CLOs in the market place) and, in connection with that, the Debtor-Acis's contracts and assets needed to be diverted to different, newly created entities because: (a) the "Acis" name was toxic and underwriters and investors were not going to be interested in re-financings or resets for CLOs managed by the Debtor-Acis;<sup>113</sup> and (b) the new Passive Investor wanted the Debtor-Acis out of the picture.<sup>114</sup> Mr. Ellington further elaborated: “The equity, you know, calls the tune, so to speak, in terms of the CLO . . .”<sup>115</sup> In summary, an overarching theme of Mr. Ellington’s testimony was that the Debtor-Acis was tainted or toxic in the marketplace and the Passive Investor wanted the Debtor-Acis out of the picture—thus, this was the motivation for the prepetition transactions orchestrated by Highland prior to the Bankruptcy Cases. The problems with the Scott Ellington testimony were at least two-fold. First, there is no credible evidence that the Debtor-Acis is/was toxic in the market place. In fact, in April 2017 (well after the litigation with Mr. Terry commenced), the Debtor-Acis issued a new CLO (CLO-7). And in market publications as recently as August 21, 2017, Highland was touting the Acis structure stating “our vehicle will allow us to issue between six and 12 CLOs over the next few years.”<sup>116</sup> Second, the Passive Investor denies demanding that the Debtor-Acis be removed as the CLO manager. Term sheets as recent as August 21, 2017 contemplated the Debtor-Acis as the continuing portfolio manager of CLOs, with apparently no protestations by the Passive Investor.<sup>117</sup>

2. Michael Pugatch: The Passive Investor Made Into a Scapegoat.

The reality is that Highland, indeed, started working on the concept of doing resets of some of the older vintage Acis CLOs in at least early 2017 (and perhaps late 2016). Highland, in fact, completed a reset of one Acis CLO in April 2017 (with the Debtor-Acis still in place as the portfolio manager for that reset in April 2017). As part of that process of implementing resets for the Acis CLOs, Highland worked on bringing in a new investor or investors to have a share of the equity tranche of the Acis CLOs. Highland finally obtained the commitment of the Passive Investor in November 2017, after starting initial discussions with them in the second quarter of 2017.<sup>118</sup> A representative for the Passive Investor referred to itself as “passive” in a deposition.<sup>119</sup> Concepts and documentation for the Passive Investor’s investment in the Acis CLOs were discussed for a while during 2017. As recently as August 2017, the negotiations with the Passive Investor appeared to contemplate the Debtor-Acis still as the portfolio manager for the CLOs.<sup>120</sup> Then the arbitration trial with Mr. Terry began in September 2017 and the Terry Arbitration Award was issued on October 20, 2017. Suddenly, it appears that the dismantling of the Debtor-Acis began with all deliberate speed. The court believes, based on the totality of the evidence, that it was Highland who did not want the Debtor-Acis as CLO manager going forward, so that Highland could keep reaping the benefits of the reset CLOs. Specifically, when deposed on the topic, a representative for the Passive Investor, Mr. Pugatch, denied the accuracy of Mr. Ellington’s testimony, stating that the Passive Investor “viewed Acis and Highland as interchangeable from the perspective of the—you know, the actual investment opportunity.”<sup>121</sup> When asked, “Are you aware that Scott Ellington, general counsel for HCM, testified that [the Passive Investor] said with absolute certainty that they had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was purportedly toxic and, consequently, nothing associated with Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO?” Mr. Pugatch testified that he had read that testimony and that the statement was not true.<sup>122</sup> He further stated that “the ultimate sort of name change did not come from [the Passive Investor].”<sup>123</sup> In fact, when further asked whether the Passive Investor knew why Acis CLO Funding Limited changed its name to Highland CLO Funding Limited (i.e., HCLOF Guernsey), Mr. Pugatch testified, “We were told that it was a change in the brand or the name, as requested by Highland.”<sup>124</sup> And when asked “Did [the Passive Investor] request that the name be changed?” he answered “No.”<sup>125</sup> When asked whether the Passive Investor considered “Acis toxic in the industry?” Mr. Pugatch answered: “No. What I would say is, when the suggested name change did occur, there were commercial reasons given to us as to why that would be beneficial in terms of the ongoing management of those CLOs and the intended investment thesis around the investment that we had made, which seemed to make commercial sense.”<sup>126</sup> When Mr. Pugatch was asked, “Those reasons were given by Highland, correct?” he replied “Correct” and confirmed that they were not demanded by the Passive Investor.<sup>127</sup> Mr. Pugatch was emphatic that the Passive Investor was just that—a passive investor—that did not have the ability to “start calling the shots” and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.<sup>128</sup> When asked if the Passive Investor was concerned about the Terry Arbitration Award, Mr. Pugatch replied: “The award itself, no. I think the only thing we were concerned about or focused on was that vis-à-vis our equity investment in Highland CLO Funding Limited and, in turn, the equity that that vehicle held in the various CLOs was appropriately, you know, ring-fenced or not exposed to any potential damages or economic loss in value as a result of that arbitration award.”<sup>129</sup>

The Passive Investor further testified that Brigade has “a fine reputation in the market” but that it had no interaction with them historically.<sup>130</sup> The Passive Investor also testified that it was concerned about the cash buildups that had happened recently due to actions while Highland had still been the sub-advisor on the Acis CLOs.<sup>131</sup>

3. The Seemingly Rehearsed Testimony of the Two HCLOF Guernsey Witnesses.

The court was presented with video depositions of HCLOF Guernsey’s two non-executive directors (i.e., its only directors): Mr. William Scott<sup>132</sup> and Ms. Heather Bestwick.<sup>133</sup> It was very apparent to the court that HCLOF Guernsey is controlled by Highland in every way. Putting things in the kindest way possible, Mr. Scott and Ms. Bestwick appear to be nominal figureheads who are paid to act like they are in charge, while they are not. They are both basically professional directors-for-hire, for companies that choose to form/organize in the nation of Guernsey.

Ms. Bestwick testified that she is a nonexecutive director for six companies in Guernsey (none of the others are in the CLO business).<sup>134</sup> She testified that she earned £35,000 per year to serve as a director of HCLOF Guernsey.<sup>135</sup> She testified that she was selected by Highland<sup>136</sup> and that Highland also made the decision to hire HCLOF Guernsey's law firm in the Bankruptcy Cases.<sup>137</sup> Ms. Bestwick, when questioned as to why the Equity/ALF PMA it had with the Debtor-Acis was terminated shortly after the Terry Arbitration Award was issued, testified that she was told it was "a condition precedent to the new Passive Investor" coming in and that she was told this by Highland.<sup>138</sup> She also testified that she had never talked to the Passive Investor (who, of course, is a 49% owner of HCLOF Guernsey)<sup>139</sup> or Grant Scott (the trustee of the charitable organization that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey).<sup>140</sup> She reiterated that she only talks to Highland employees. She also was under the impression that terminating the Equity/ALF PMA would improve marketability of the CLOs going forward but that it was the same people and "business as usual for us."<sup>141</sup> She testified that she learned of the Terry Arbitration Award in mid-April 2018 (some six months after the fact)<sup>142</sup> and “[y]ou’d have to ask Highland”<sup>143</sup> why it did not inform her sooner. Her testimony was clear that she defers to Highland on everything, stating that as directors they were “heavily reliant on our service providers, and that means Highland.”<sup>144</sup> With regard to a lawsuit that HCLOF Guernsey filed against Mr. Terry in Guernsey during the Bankruptcy Cases, she testified that it was neither her nor the other director, William Scott’s, idea.

Mr. Scott, the other HCLOF Guernsey director, is a “professional director” for 10-15 Guernsey companies<sup>145</sup>—all of which are “paying assignments.”<sup>146</sup> He became rather incensed when testifying, at the suggestion that he and Ms. Bestwick were not in control of HCLOF Guernsey, stating that board minutes and other documents would show that they took a great level of interest in running the company.<sup>147</sup> He testified that he earned £40,000 per year to serve as a director of HCLOF Guernsey and that, due to the extra work of the Bankruptcy Cases, he also was charging another £350 per hour, after the first 35 hours<sup>148</sup> (the court notes, anecdotally, that it required participation in court hearings by a director of HCLOF Guernsey each time that HCLOF Guernsey took a position in court). Mr. Scott confirmed that he was not aware of the litigation with Mr. Terry nor the Acis Bankruptcy Cases until April 2018.<sup>149</sup> He also testified that Highland had proposed the legal counsel HCLOF Guernsey used in the Bankruptcy Cases and that he had never disagreed with Highland's advice.<sup>150</sup> He confirmed that all investment decisions were made by Highland and that he and Ms. Bestwick's role was to "police" service providers.<sup>151</sup> Like Ms. Bestwick, Mr. Scott testified that they were told that the Passive Investor had made it a condition precedent to their investment in HCLOF Guernsey that "Acis depart."<sup>152</sup> But he had not talked to the Passive Investor.<sup>153</sup> As if all this deference to Highland were not enough, HCLOF Guernsey's lender is NexBank (an affiliate of Highland—which is based in Dallas, not Guernsey) and HCLOF Guernsey has given its actual equity notes to NexBank as security for its loans from NexBank.<sup>154</sup> Also, interestingly, when asked about the adversary proceeding that HCLOF Guernsey filed against the Chapter 11 Trustee a few months ago in the Bankruptcy Cases (i.e., the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding—it was originally commenced by Highland and HCLOF Guernsey as Plaintiffs), Mr. Scott testified that "we haven't sued the trustee, he has sued us" but later acknowledged his mistake when corrected by counsel.

This court is not naïve—it realizes that so-called "fiduciary services firms" are apparently a typical thing in the world of off-shore jurisdictions that are large financial centers.<sup>155</sup> Maybe the system works, for the most part and in many business contexts. But not when trying to convince a bankruptcy court of the bona fides of transactions that look like attempts to denude another party of value and/or to thwart creditors. And not when accusations are made that you are the alter ego of the party (Highland) who orchestrated the company's creation. The evidence was overwhelming that: (a) the HCLOF Guernsey Directors do whatever they are told to do by Highland; (b) they do not talk to anyone else but Highland; (c) they have never challenged Highland; (d) they let Highland pick and consult with their lawyers; and (e) they were not made aware by Highland of the Terry Arbitration Award, the Terry Judgment, the involuntary bankruptcy petitions, or pleadings that lawyers filed in the Bankruptcy Cases on HCLOF Guernsey's behalf.

<sup>155</sup> During the testimony of both Ms. Bestwick and Mr. Scott, the court was reminded of an old TV commercial in which an actor states, "I am not a doctor, but I play one on TV." The court could not help but conclude that these were not real directors but were playing them (when legally necessary).

In summary, the testimony of these two HCLOF Guernsey Directors was of little or no value in convincing the court that the Objector, HCLOF Guernsey, has valid concerns of its own (separate from Highland's) with regard to the bona fides of the Plan.

VII. Conclusion.

This Bench Ruling and Memorandum Opinion is intended to address some of the most pertinent facts and issues raised in connection with confirmation of the Plan. Among other things, the court believed it was necessary to stress, in a separate ruling: (a) the unique status of the Objectors (they are "insiders" as defined in the Bankruptcy Code whose prepetition actions suggest unclean hands—this seems highly relevant to consider, when there are no non-insider creditors or other relevant parties objecting to the Plan); (b) the appropriateness and legality of the proposed Plan Injunction that would temporarily prevent nonconsensual redemptions/liquidations (it is in all ways justified given the allegations in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding and under the traditional four-prong test for preliminary injunctions); and

(c) the feasibility of the Plan (Mr. Terry and Brigade are well qualified to perform their contemplated roles).

The court will separately sign the Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Order Confirming Plan submitted by the Chapter 11 Trustee to address all other relevant issues.

Jim -Let me know what you think of the below. (And again, the first would be on the record; the second would be sent for information purposes to ensure accuracy, not for attribution.)

STATEMENT (ON THE RECORD, ATTRIBUTED TO "A SPOKESPERSON FOR HCMLP" OR SOMETHING ALONG THOSE LINES)

"HCMLP continues to advance the reorganization process toward with the objective of reaching a consensual reorganization with creditors. Given that goal, we are pleased to reach the stage of the process where, after assessing all potential claims, we can identify those that are legitimate and incorporate them accordingly into a final plan.

"While we dispute the allegations made in the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid, our focus is on assessing the claims—along with any others outstanding—in a transparent, orderly manner that helps move HCMLP’s reorganization process forward toward a resolution."

BACKGROUND/CLARIFICATION (NOT FOR ATTRIBUTION)

Given the complex history and background here (which is likely challenging to capture concisely in this format), we want to ensure that the various parties involved are characterized accurately. In particular, it’s important to note the scale and sophistication of HarbourVest in any summary of their position here. (It’s a $70B global investment firm that operates across asset classes and fund/investment structures. And it serves a client base largely comprised of institutional investors, which often means structuring complex, customized investment solutions.) Then it’s important to note the background of HarbourVest’s involvement here, in that it not only invested in HCLOF, but was an active participant throughout the Acis bankruptcy proceedings, and played a material role in various outcomes related to that case.

We believe that neither the facts nor the law support HarbourVest’s “we were too lazy to know” allegations.

Hi Sayed, See below for a statement you can use on the record regarding the filings from Friday that you mentioned. (You can attribute the statement to "a spokesperson for Highland Capital Management, L.P.")

Then I also included some additional information that is not for any kind of attribution. I'm including that to help avoid confusion and prevent any misleading characterization of the parties here, given the complexity of the relationships and involvement in prior legal situations. (I know you've covered those, but they may not be as easy to follow for someone who hasn't been closely involved.)

Please let me know if you have any questions or need any additional information here. And since the filing you referenced is extensive, please let me know if there's anything you plan to include in the story that we may want to address. I tried to make the statement and background broadly applicable, but can revisit if there's anything significant that this doesn't cover.

And thank you again for the flexibility on the timing here.

STATEMENT ON THE FILING

(NOTE: This can be used on the record and attributed to "a spokesperson for Highland Capital Management, L.P. or something similar)

"We dispute the allegations made in the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid and will be found to be without merit. Our focus continues to be on treating all valid claims in a transparent, orderly, and equitable manner, while disputing those that are meritless through the appropriate channels in the court. ADDITIONAL INFORMATION FOR BACKGROUND/CLARIFICATION

(NOTE: This is intended for informational purposes only to ensure accuracy; it is not intended for any kind of attribution)

Given the complex history and background here—which is likely difficult to capture concisely in any news story—we want to make sure the various parties involved are characterized accurately.

Two key points on this:

1. It's important to note the scale and sophistication of HarbourVest in any summary of their position on these matters.
  - o It's a $70B global investment firm that operates across asset classes and fund/investment structures.
  - o Its client base is largely comprised of institutional investors, and in descriptions of its service offerings for this audience, the firm highlights its capabilities and experience structuring complex, customized investment solutions.
2. It's also important to note the background of HarbourVest's active and deep involvement in the investment at the center of its complaints.
  - o HarbourVest was not invested in HCLOF as an uninformed, unsophisticated passive investor; it was an active and informed participant from the inception of its investment through all of the Acis bankruptcy proceedings, and HarbourVest played a material role in various outcomes related to that case and its impact on HCLOF.

It's important that readers are aware of these points, as it is impossible to gain a clear understanding of this matter and accurately evaluate the allegations without them. We believe that neither the facts nor the law supports HarbourVest's allegations, but it would be misleading to include that view in any coverage of the allegations without an objective account of those facts.

A spokesperson for Highland told Creditflux: "We dispute the allegations made in the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid and will be found to be without merit. Our focus continues to be on treating all valid claims in a transparent, orderly, and equitable manner, while disputing those that are meritless through the appropriate channels in the court. That focus will assure that HCMLP's [Highland Capital Management LP] reorganisation progresses toward an efficient and equitable resolution."

A spokesperson for HarbourVest declined to comment on the matter. But in filings the firm says Highland claimed HarbourVest had the ability to control CLO resets, which was one of the reasons the Acis trustee (when that entity went through its own reorganisation) had investigated HarbourVest, on the basis that it was directing the transfer of assets from Acis to Highland.

It further claims in filings that with Highland and its affiliates objecting to and slowing the Acis's chapter 11 proceedings, some of the legal bills were funded by Highland CLO Funding. It estimates the CLO fund has incurred more than $15 million in legal fees, which it should not have been charged.

HarbourVest's investment in Highland CLO funding is believed to be about $150 million, with earlier court filings stating Highland was in talks with a private equity firm about an investment of that size (HarbourVest is a private equity firm, with about $71 billion in assets under management). In November 2017, Creditflux had reported the fund had reached $153 million. HarbourVest states in filings the value of its investment has declined sharply and lays the blame on Highland for conducting the transfers and subsequent actions.

The Acis CLOs that were previously under the Highland umbrella became a separate independent entity as part of Acis's reorganisation, with Terry taking over that business in February 2019. But in an offshoot from Highland's bankruptcy, Acis is at loggerheads with risk retention financier Nearwater Capital over an agreement signed by Highland in 2018.

Thanks for checking in, Sayed. Could you send me the filings when you have a minute? Checking on this now, but that should help expedite the turnaround here given the timing.

Hi Lucy, how are you?

I saw the filing on Friday about HarbourVest's claims against Highland for a CLO investment fund and I am looking to put out a report tomorrow morning London time.

Ahead of that, I wanted to check if Highland would like to comment on the matter?

HarbourVest fights back over CLO fund investment after Highland's objection

By Sayed Kadiri

Thursday, September 17, 2020

HarbourVest Partners, which was the key investor in Highland CLO Funding, a risk retention vehicle, has shot back at Highland Capital Management LP's claim objection as part of its chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Highland filed the omnibus objection against 92 claims. But HarbourVest, in court filings, maintains that "Highland's actions preceding and following the investment caused serious injury to HarbourVest, leading to damages well in excess of $100 million". Highland filed for bankruptcy protection in October and HarbourVest filed its proof of claim in April.

HarbourVest argues it had not insisted on changing the manager on its CLO fund from Acis to Highland, as Highland had claimed. It adds that Highland had sought to take assets away from Acis following an arbitration award in favour of former Highland employee Josh Terry, which had detrimentally impacted HarbourVest's investment.

HarbourVest invested in Highland CLO Funding (previously known as Acis CLO funding) in November 2017, taking a 49% interest in the fund. It claims that Highland had originally pitched the fund as being managed by Acis Capital Management, which at that point was a Highland affiliate. But over the course of negotiations it changed all references from Acis to Highland, which HarbourVest claims in its filing was done under false pretenses.

Specifically, HarbourVest pinpoints Terry's near-$8 million arbitration award, which he won against his former employer Highland in October 2017, as a turning point. It claims that after this, "Highland orchestrated several transfers that siphoned assets away from Acis".

In 2016, Acis had sold Highland a participation interest based on cashflows deriving from its CLO collateral management agreements for $666,655 plus a $12.6 million note payable from Highland to Acis. In filings, HarbourVest says the note was transferred from Acis to an entity known as Highland CLO Management, but with Acis receiving no consideration for the transfer, when the balance on the note was over $9 million.

HarbourVest claims in its filing that during its due diligence phase on the Highland investment, Highland did not disclose its efforts to strip assets from Acis. When the name of the fund was changed to adopt Highland branding, Highland's reason for doing so was the was "reputational harm" to Acis from Terry's arbitration award, says HarbourVest.

But HarbourVest states in its argument that Highland falsely claimed in court the reason behind the change in manager from Acis to Highland was at HarbourVest's insistence.

Attachments: Highland Capital Management Letter to the Wall Street Journal _November ....pdf

Dustin/Mike/Nick,

We write to provide an additional update and more extensive response to the recent Wall Street Journal article and the inaccuracies it contained. The article is the result of a reporter with an agenda, fueled by a lack of oversight and intervention on behalf of the Journal that enabled that agenda to make its way into print to the detriment of Highland and, in turn, our investors.

We hope you can understand that we cannot let this agenda-driven reporting be what defines our firm in the public realm, especially when the reporting challenges the quality of our people, the strength of our culture and the regard we have toward our fundamental responsibility to our clients. For the sake of our employees and our investors, which together are what truly defines Highland, we feel we must correct these inaccuracies and refute the accusations against us. To do so we have contacted Wall Street Journal editor-in-chief Gerard Baker to make him aware of the situation and provide him with the facts that the reporter responsible and his editors received from Highland in advance of the article, yet deemed irrelevant. Attached is the letter we shared last night.

We also will be making public a response that addresses the inaccuracies of the article and the situation we encountered at the Journal. While our response is substantial, we believe a full account of the background here was required given the severity of the claims made in the article. Our brand and reputation as strong investors and fiduciaries for our clients' capital is sacrosanct. Therefore, as unfortunate as it is to have to publicly defend ourselves and create more noise for our firm and our investors, we felt it was acutely necessary to stand up for ourselves and what is right under these circumstances.

As always, please let us know if you have any questions or there is anything additional we can provide.

Thank you,
Hunter

Hello, as you may be aware, the Wall Street Journal published an article (attached) which ran online yesterday and in print this morning on the ongoing compensation dispute between Highland and a former employee, Josh Terry, who was terminated in 2016. Specifically, the article addresses the recently completed arbitration, which resulted in additional compensation awarded to Mr. Terry related to his position in Acis, the structured products affiliate.

Despite our willingness to provide the Wall Street Journal with the relevant facts, the article that was published severely mischaracterizes the situation and provides a misleading account of this and other activities.

Case 3:21-cv-00261-L Document 11-8 Filed 04/13/21 Page 264 of 264 PageID 2442
Outside of the compensation award, there were no findings by the arbitrators against Acis. Further, Mr. Terry lost all of his claims against Highland. The firm did not ask Mr. Terry to breach his fiduciary duty, nor did it breach any duty to its investors, and these facts were confirmed by the arbitrators' findings.

Highland has a number of outstanding claims against Mr. Terry, including contract and fiduciary breaches, the malicious taping of co-workers and counter parties for over a year, and other misconduct that contributed to Mr. Terry's termination from Highland. Since Highland's claims were not subject to the arbitration and were stayed pending the completion of the arbitration, they were not addressed by the arbitrators. Now, Highland will have the opportunity to adjudicate these claims in court, which are likely to be substantially larger than the arbitration award.

This situation, while contentious, highlights the strength of our compliance process and culture of accountability, both areas of the firm in which we take great pride. Mr. Terry was found in violation of our compliance standards and Highland took swift action to address that and other misconduct that was uncovered. Thanks to this response, Mr. Terry's misconduct did not affect investors, and Highland took every step to ensure clients' interests were first and foremost protected.

While the dispute has no impact on our investment activities, as always, we welcome any questions you may have. In the meantime, we are so extremely excited about the opportunity to work together with Harbourvest and we are fully committed to managing our clients' money with the highest standards of ethics and execution.

Thank you,
Hunter

1                   DALLAS, TEXAS - JANUARY 14, 2021 - 9:41 A.M.

2                   THE CLERK: All rise. The United States Bankruptcy
3 Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division, is 4 now in session, the Honorable Stacey Jernigan presiding.

5                   THE COURT: Good morning. Please be seated. All
6 right. We're a little late getting started because we had 7 lots of reading material for the Court today. All right.
8 This is Judge Jernigan, and we have a couple of Highland 9 settings. The HarbourVest matters are the primary thing we 10 have set today, and then we also have a Debtor's motion
11 pursuant to protocols for authority for Highland Multi-Strat 12 to prepay a loan.

13                  All right. Well, let's get a few appearances. First, for 14 the Debtor team, who do we have appearing this morning?

15                  MR. POMERANTZ: Good morning, Your Honor. It's Jeff 16 Pomerantz, John Morris, and Greg Demo here on behalf of the 17 Debtor.

18                  THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

19                  All right. We have objections on HarbourVest. Who do we 20 have appearing for Mr. Dondero this morning?

21                  MR. WILSON: Your Honor, it's John Wilson, and I'm 22 also joined by Michael Lynn, John Bonds, and Bryan Assink.

23                  THE COURT: Okay. I'm sorry. Could -- the court
24 reporter does yeoman's work in this case. Let me just make 25 sure we got all three of those names. Say again, Mr. Wilson.

1 MR. WILSON: John Bonds and Michael Lynn and Bryan
2 Assink.

3 THE COURT: Oh, okay. So, see, I thought I heard
4 somebody Wilson in all of that, which was why I was pressing 5 the issue.

6 All right. Is Mr. Dondero present on the video for 7 today's hearing?

8 MR. WILSON: I believe he is, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Mr. Dondero, could you confirm that you
10 are out there? (No response.) Okay. My court reporter says
11 he sees the name out there. Is he in your office?

12 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, he is appearing remotely
13 from my office. I'm not sure exactly where he's appearing 14 from.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Well, Mr. Dondero, if you're out
16 there and you're speaking up to confirm you're present, we're 17 not hearing you. Maybe your device is on mute. So please 18 unmute yourself.

19 (No response.)

20 THE COURT: All right. I'm going to take some other 21 appearances and you -- you need to try to communicate with 22 your client and let him know I need to confirm he's present.
23 Okay?

24 All right. Meanwhile, let's go to our other Objectors.
25 CLO Holdco. Who do we have appearing today?

1 MR. KANE: John Kane; Kane Russell Coleman & Logan;
2 on behalf of CLO Holdco.

3 THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Mr. Kane.

4 We had an objection from Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get 5 Good Trust. Who do we have appearing?

6 MR. DRAPER: Douglas Draper, Your Honor, for -- for 7 Draper.

8 THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Mr. Draper.

9 All right. I think those were the only written objections 10 we had. Mr. Pomerantz, do you confirm, we don't have any 11 other objectors for the motions set, correct?

12 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, there was those three.

13 THE COURT: I'm sorry. I didn't catch your full 14 sentence.

15 MR. POMERANTZ: That is correct, Your Honor. There
16 were three objections to the motion.

17 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Clemente, you're there for the 18 Creditors' Committee?

19 MR. CLEMENTE: Yes. Good morning, Your Honor. Matt
20 Clemente on behalf of the Official Committee of Unsecured
21 Creditors.

22 THE COURT: All right. Good morning. Thank you.
23 All right. We have a lot of other folks on the video. I'm 24 not going to go ahead and take a roll call of other lawyers.

25 MS. WEISGERBER: Your Honor?

1 THE COURT: Yes?

2 MS. WEISGERBER: Excuse me, Your Honor. It's Erica
3 Weisgerber from Debevoise on behalf of HarbourVest.

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MS. WEISGERBER: And I'm joined by Natasha Labovitz
6 and Dan Stroik --

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MS. WEISGERBER: -- from Debevoise as well.

9 THE COURT: Thank you. I was neglectful in not 10 getting your appearance, because, of course, you're at the 11 front and center of this motion to compromise, and I did see 12 that you filed a reply brief yesterday afternoon. Okay.
13 Thank you.

14 All right. Do we have -- do we have Mr. Dondero on the 15 line? I'm going to check again.

16 (No response.)

17 THE COURT: Mr. Dondero's counsel, I cannot hear you, 18 so please unmute your device.

19 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, it appears to me that Mr.
20 Dondero's device was unmuted as soon as you asked if he was 21 available. I sent him a communication a second ago asking if 22 he's having technical difficulties. I have not received a 23 response, so I --

24 MR. DONDERO: Hello. Can anybody hear me?

25 THE COURT: Oh.

1 MR. WILSON: Okay. I hear him.

2 THE COURT: Mr. Dondero?

3 MR. DONDERO: Hello?

4 THE COURT: Is that you?

5 MR. DONDERO: Yeah, it is. I've been on. I've heard
6 everything since the beginning. It's just we've had technical 7 difficulties. I couldn't use the Highland offices. We've 8 been trying to set up something else.

9 THE COURT: All right.

10 MR. DONDERO: But I'm on now, if -- yes.

11 THE COURT: All right. Very good. Well, I'm glad 12 we've got you.

13 All right. Well, Mr. Pomerantz, how did you want to 14 proceed this morning?

15 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, we could take up the 16 HarbourVest motion first, and I will turn it over to John 17 Morris. He and Greg Demo will be handling that. And then 18 after that we can handle the other motion, which is unopposed.

19 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Morris?

20 MR. KANE: Your Honor, this is -- sorry. This is 21 John Kane for CLO Holdco. Just very briefly, if I may. And 22 this will affect, I think, the Debtor's case in chief, so I'll 23 expedite things a little bit, I believe.

24 CLO Holdco has had an opportunity to review the reply 25 briefing, and after doing so has gone back and scrubbed the

1 HCLOF corporate documents. Based on our analysis of Guernsey
2 law and some of the arguments of counsel in those pleadings
3 and our review of the appropriate documents, I obtained
4 authority from my client, Grant Scott, as Trustee for CLO
5 Holdco, to withdraw the CLO Holdco objection based on the 6 interpretation of the member agreement.

7 THE COURT: All right. Well, thank you for that, Mr.
8 Kane. I think that -- that eliminates one of the major
9 arguments that we had anticipated this morning. So, thank you 10 for that.

11 Any other housekeeping matters that maybe someone had that 12 I didn't ask about?

13 MS. MATSUMURA: Yes, Your Honor. This is Rebecca 14 Matsumura from King & Spalding representing Highland CLO 15 Funding, Ltd. I just wanted to put on the record, we -- our 16 client had requested that some of its organizational documents 17 be filed under seal. But we have given permission for the 18 parties to present the relevant excerpts, to the extent it's 19 still relevant after Mr. Kane's announcement, in court. And 20 we'd just ask that the underlying documents remain sealed, but 21 we're not going to object if they show them on a PowerPoint or 22 anything like that.

23 So, to the extent that you had that on your radar, I just 24 wanted to clear that up for the proceedings.

25 THE COURT: All right. Well, I did sign an order

1 late last night. I don't know if it's popped up on the 2 docket.

3 MS. MATSUMURA: Yes, Your Honor. That's what this 4 referred to. That was what -- these are the documents that 5 were being sealed. And so I just wanted to note, if you --
6 you know, if the Debtor puts up an excerpt of those documents
7 and you're like, wait a minute, didn't I seal those, that we 8 were the party that requested them be under seal and we're 9 fine with them being shown in court, as long as the underlying 10 documents aren't publicly accessible.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Got you. Thank you.

12 All right. Any other housekeeping matters?

13 MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor. This is John Morris
14 from Pachulski Stang for the Debtor. Good morning.

15 THE COURT: Good morning.

16 MR. MORRIS: The only other matter that I wanted to 17 raise, and I can do it now or I can do it later, or Your Honor 18 may tell me that it's not appropriate to do at this time, is 19 to schedule the Debtor's motion to hold Mr. Dondero in 20 contempt for violation of the TRO.

21 THE COURT: All right. Well, let's do that at the 22 conclusion today. And please make sure I do it. I think I
23 was going to address this last Friday, and we went very late 24 and it slipped off my radar screen. But I did see from my 25 courtroom deputy that you all were reaching out to her

1 yesterday to get this set, and then Mr. Dondero's counsel
2 reached out to her and said, We're going to file an objection
3 to a setting next Wednesday, or I think you had asked for a 4 setting next Tuesday or Wednesday.

5 MR. MORRIS: I did.

6 THE COURT: And I don't -- I don't know if that
7 response/objection was ever filed last night. I haven't seen
8 it if it was. So, we'll -- please, make sure I don't forget.
9 We'll take that up at the end of today's matters. All right.
10 Well, --

11 MR. MORRIS: All right. So, --

12 MS. WEISGERBER: Your Honor, one last housekeeping 13 item from -- I'm joined this morning by Michael Pugatch of 14 HarbourVest, who will present some testimony this morning. I
15 just want to confirm he's on the line and confirm no
16 objections to him sitting in for the rest of the hearing.

17 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Pugatch, this is Judge
18 Jernigan. Could you respond? Are you there with us?

19 MR. PUGATCH: Yes. Good morning, Your Honor. Mike
20 Pugatch from HarbourVest here.

21 THE COURT: All right. Very good. I think we had 22 you testify once before in the Acis matter, if I'm not 23 mistaken. Maybe. Maybe not. Maybe I saw a video deposition.
24 I can't remember.

25 All right. So, we're going to let Mr. Pugatch sit in on

1 this. Anyone want to say anything about that? I consider him
2 a party representative, so I don't -- I don't think anyone
3 could invoke the Rule.

4 All right. Very good. Well, let's go forward if there
5 are no more housekeeping matters.

6 MR. MORRIS: Okay.

7 THE COURT: Mr. Morris?

8 MR. MORRIS: Thank you. Thank you very much, Your 9 Honor. John Morris; Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones; for the 10 Debtor.

11 It's a rather straightforward motion today. It's a motion 12 under Rule 9019, pursuant to which the Debtor requests the 13 Court's authority and approval to enter into a settlement
14 agreement with HarbourVest that will resolve a number of 15 claims that HarbourVest has filed against the Debtor.

16 What I -- the way I propose to proceed this morning, Your 17 Honor, is to give what I hope is an informative but relatively 18 brief opening statement. I'll defer to HarbourVest and its 19 counsel as to whether they want to make a presentation in 20 advance of the offer of evidence. Any objecting party, I 21 suppose, should then be given the opportunity to present their 22 case to the Court. Then the Debtor will call Jim Seery, the 23 Debtor's CEO and CRO. We will offer documents into evidence.
24 I would propose then that the objecting parties take the 25 opportunity to ask Mr. Seery any questions they'd like on the 1 matter.

2 After the Debtor rests, I think HarbourVest would like to 3 put Mr. Pugatch on the stand to offer some testimony on their 4 behalf. And I think that that will conclude the case. We can 5 finish up with some closing arguments as to what we believe 6 the evidence showed, but that's the way that I'd like to 7 proceed, if that's okay with the Court.

8 THE COURT: All right. That sounds fine.

9 OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF THE DEBTOR

10 MR. MORRIS: Okay. So, as I said, Your Honor, this 11 is a -- this should be a very straightforward motion under 12 Rule 9019. The standard is well-known to the Court. There 13 are four elements to a 9019 motion. The Debtor clearly has 14 the burden of proof on each one. And we easily meet that 15 burden, Your Honor.

16 The standard, just to be clear, the first part is that we 17 have to establish a probability of success, with due 18 consideration for uncertainty of law and fact. The second one
19 is the complexity, likely duration, expense and inconvenience 20 of the litigation. The third part of the test is the 21 paramount interest of creditors. And the fourth part of the 22 test is whether or not the proposed settlement was reached 23 after arm's-length negotiations.

24 The Debtor believes that it easily meets this standard,
25 and frankly, is a little bit frustrated that it's being forced

1 to incur the expense by Mr. Dondero in going through this
2 process.

3 A plain reading, a fair reading of the economics here
4 relative to the claim shows that this is a very reasonable
5 settlement. I don't need to go beyond that, Your Honor. I
6 don't even need to use the word reasonable. It surely meets 7 the lowest standard.

8 We've prepared a couple of demonstrative exhibits, Your 9 Honor. I'm going to use them with Mr. Seery. But I'd like to 10 just put one up on the screen now, if I may.

11 Ms. Canty, can you please put up Demonstrative Exhibit #3?

12 Demonstrative Exhibit #3 is an outline of the economics of 13 the settlement. It includes the various pieces, the 14 components that the parties have agreed to. And it shows, at 15 least from the Debtor's perspective, just what HarbourVest is 16 being given here.

17 Up on the screen is a demonstrative exhibit. It has 18 citations to the evidence that will be admitted by the Court.
19 The first line shows that HarbourVest will receive a $45
20 million allowed general unsecured nonpriority claim. And that
22 Page 2.

23 That claim is discounted by the expected recovery that 24 general unsecured creditors are supposed to get. As of 25 November, in the liquidation analysis that was part of the

1 disclosure statement -- that's the citation in the footnote --
2 the Debtor believed that unsecured creditors were estimated to 3 recover approximately eighty-seven and a half cents on the 4 dollar. And so we just did the arithmetic there to get to the 5 net economic value of the proposed general unsecured claim.

6 And from that, we reduced $22-1/2 million because that is 7 the net asset value of HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF, which,
8 pursuant to the settlement agreement, it will transfer back to 9 the Debtor, so that the net economic value is approximately 10 $16.8 million.

11 You will hear testimony from Mr. Seery that this number 12 is, in fact, overstated, and it's overstated because, since 13 the time the disclosure statement was filed in November, a 14 number of events have occurred that will -- that have caused 15 the estimated recovery percentage to be reduced from 16 approximately 87-1/2 percent to something lower than that. We 17 don't have the exact number, Your Honor, but Mr. Seery will -- 18 and the evidence will show that there's been more expenses, 19 that there's been some resolution of certain claims. There's 20 been some positive issues, too. But that number is probably 21 in the 70s somewhere.

22 And in any event, I think the point here is, Your Honor, 23 HarbourVest invested $80 million in HCLOF, which was going to 24 participate in the investment in CLOs. They filed a claim for 25 $300 million, through treble damages and other claims. But

1 the net economic impact of this is going to be somewhere
2 probably in between $12 and $14 million. I'll let Mr. Seery
3 give more precision to that. And it represents less than -- a 4 less than five percent recovery on the total claim.

5 And we think it's important for the Court to keep that in 6 mind. What are the economics here? Are we overpaying? Is 7 this an unreasonable settlement? And I think the evidence
8 will show that the Debtor is not, but that this settlement
9 that you see before you was the product of arm's length, and 10 I'm going to go in reverse order of the four-part test under 11 9019.

12 So, the last part is whether or not the settlement, the 13 proposed settlement was the product of arm's-length
14 negotiation. You'll hear lots of evidence that this 15 settlement that's up on the screen right now very much was the 16 product of arm's-length negotiation.

17 The third part of the test, Your Honor, is whether it
18 meets the paramount interest of creditors. You know, 19 regrettably, Mr. Dondero is the only purported creditor who is 20 objecting here. He may have done so through different 21 vehicles, but every objecting party here is a debtor [sic]
22 owned and controlled by Mr. Dondero. No other creditor -- not 23 the Creditors' Committee, UBS, Acis, Mr. Terry, Mr. Daugherty
24 -- nobody is objecting to this settlement except for Mr.
25 Dondero. And we believe that that highlights the Debtor's

1 ability to meet the third prong of the test, and that is these 2 are -- this settlement is in the paramount interest of 3 creditors.

4 Again, going in reverse, the second part of the test is 5 the complexity, duration, and expense of litigation. There
6 will be no disputed evidence that we meet -- the Debtor easily
7 meets this prong of the test. The evidence is going to show
8 that HarbourVest's claim is based on fraud, fraud in the 9 inducement, fraudulent statements and omissions, the kind of 10 case, Your Honor, that I'm sure you're familiar with that is 11 incredibly fact-intensive, that will be incredibly difficult 12 to navigate through. It will be prolonged, it will be 13 expensive, because you're necessarily relying on he said/she 14 said, basically. And so we're going to have to get testimony
15 from every person that spoke in connection with the events
16 leading up to the transaction. So we think the second prong
17 will be easily met, Your Honor.

18 And then the last prong -- the first prong, if you will -- 19 is the likelihood of success on the merits. We think that the 20 settlement, the economic recovery that's up on the screen
21 here, which ultimately will be less than five percent of the 22 claimed amount, in and of itself shows that the settlement is 23 consistent with the Debtor's perception of its likely success
24 on the merits. I'm certain that HarbourVest disagrees, but 25 that's okay, we're here today and that's the Debtor's view,

1 and the Court is here to assess the Debtor's business judgment
2 and whether the Debtor has properly analyzed the issues and 3 gone through the process. And the evidence will show
4 conclusively that it will. That it has.

5 Mr. Seery will testify at some length as to the risks that 6 he saw. I think that you'll hear counsel for Mr. Dondero ask
7 both Mr. Seery and Mr. Pugatch a number of questions designed 8 to elicit testimony about this defense or that defense. And 9 it's a little -- it's a little ironic, Your Honor, because,
10 really, every defense that they're going to try to suggest to 11 the Court was a valid defense is a defense that the Debtor
12 considered. In fact, it's, you know, it's a little spooky, 13 how they've -- how they've been able to identify kind of the 14 arguments that the Debtor had already considered in the 15 prosecution of their objections here.

16 But be that as it may, the evidence will conclusively show
17 that the Debtor acted consistent with its fiduciary duties,
18 acted in the best interests of the Debtor's estate, acted 19 completely appropriately here in getting yet another very 20 solid achievement for the Debtor, leaving very few claims that 21 are disputed at this point, all but one of which I believe are 22 in the hands of Mr. Dondero.

23 So, that's what we think that the evidence will show.

24 I do want to express my appreciation to Mr. Kane for 25 reflecting on the arguments that we made with respect to the

1 ability of the Debtor to engage in the transfer or the 2 acquisition of the asset from HarbourVest. I would -- I would 3 respectfully request that we just enter into a short
4 stipulation on the record reflecting that the Debtor's
5 acquisition of HarbourVest's interests in HCLOF is compliant
6 with all of the applicable agreements between the parties.

7 And with that, Your Honor, I look forward to putting Mr.
8 Seery on the stand and presenting the Debtor's case.

9 THE COURT: All right. Other opening statements?

10 OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF CLO HOLDCO, LTD.

11 MR. KANE: Yes, Your Honor. Sorry. John Kane on 12 behalf of CLO Holdco.

13 In response to Mr. Morris, I'm not going to enter into a 14 stipulation on behalf of my client, but the Debtor is 15 compliant with all aspects of the contract. We withdrew our 16 objection, and we believe that's sufficient.

17 THE COURT: All right. Well, I'm content with that.
18 Other opening statements?

19 OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF HARBOURVEST

20 MS. WEISGERBER: Your Honor, Erica Weisgerber on 21 behalf of HarbourVest.

22 HarbourVest joins in Mr. Morris's comments in support of 23 the settlement, and we believe that the question of whether 24 the settlement between HarbourVest and the Debtor satisfies
25 the Rule 9019 standard is not even a close one.

1           Some Objectors have made arguments about the merits of 2 HarbourVest's claims, which is why we're here. As Your Honor
3 will hear this morning, HarbourVest has meaningful and 4 meritorious claims against Highland, but made the business
5 decision to avoid the time, expense, and inherent risk of 6 litigation in the interest of preserving value, both for 7 itself and for the estate.

8           Today, Michael Pugatch, a managing director of 9 HarbourVest, will testify before the Court. He'll explain
10 that HarbourVest claims against Highland arise out of certain 11 misrepresentations and omissions by Highland to HarbourVest in 12 connection with HarbourVest's purchase of an interest in 13 HCLOF, one of Highland's managed funds. Those 14 misrepresentations and omissions, as Your Honor will hear,
15 relate to Highland's litigation with its former employee, 16 Joshua Terry, and transfers that were conducted in 2017 to 17 strip Acis of value and prevent Mr. Terry from collecting on 18 an $8 million judgment.

19           Mr. Pugatch will further explain that HarbourVest would 20 not have invested in HCLOF had it known the underlying facts
21 about those Acis transfers.

22           Mr. Pugatch will also testify that not only did
23 HarbourVest not know about those transfers, it learned about 24 those transfers when it was accused of orchestrating the 25 transfers itself in the Acis bankruptcy. Your Honor will hear

1 that the Acis trustee sought extensive discovery from 2 HarbourVest after numerous accusations that HarbourVest was 3 behind the transfers.

4 Mr. Pugatch will also testify that Highland charged legal 5 fees for itself and its affiliates to HCLOF, essentially
6 forcing HCLOF to fund the litigation involving the Acis
7 bankruptcy and Mr. Terry.

8 In total, HarbourVest's claims for damages are over a 9 hundred million dollars in investment-related losses, lost
10 profits, legal fees inappropriately charged to HCLOF, its own
11 legal fees. And that's before interest or trebling damages.

12 But HarbourVest stands ready to litigate its claims, but 13 following hard-fought and extensive negotiations with the 14 Debtors, the parties reached the settlement that's now before 15 the Court. Mr. Pugatch's testimony regarding the strong 16 factual bases for HarbourVest's claims against Highland and 17 its recoverable damages will further underscore the risks that 18 the Debtors faced if they chose to litigate these claims, and 19 why this settlement is fair, equitable, and in the best 20 interest of the estate.

21 THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Counsel.

22 Other opening statements?

23 OPENING STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF GET GOOD AND DUGABOY TRUSTS

24 MR. DRAPER: Your Honor, this is Douglas Draper on 25 behalf of one of the Objectors. I'd like to just make a few

1 comments with respect to what I've heard and what the Court is 2 going to hear.

3 The first issue I'd like to address is the comment by 4 counsel for the Debtor that no other party has objected. The 5 9019 motion is one of the issues that this Court has to rule
6 on, whether or not there was an objection or not. So the fact
7 that this may be -- bankruptcy is not a popularity contest and 8 not an issue of who votes for what and doesn't vote. This,
9 along with the 1129(a) tests, are clearly within your 10 province, and you need to listen carefully because you'll have 11 to make your own independent analysis whether my objection is 12 correct or incorrect.

13 Two other points I'd like to make that I think are very 14 salient. Number one is, if you look at the Debtor's 15 disclosure statement, it basically took the position that the 16 HarbourVest claim is of little or no value. And lo and 17 behold, thirty days later, there's a settlement that brings 18 about a significant recovery to HarbourVest. The timing is 19 interesting, and I think the Court needs to pay careful 20 attention to what transpired between the two dates.

21 And then the last point I'd like to make is, as you listen
22 to the evidence, and what I learned abundantly clear from 23 hearing the depositions, is that the claim of HarbourVest, if 24 there is a claim at all, is probably one hundred percent -- 25 should be subordinated in that it appears to arise out of the 1 purchase or sale of a security. And, again, I would ask the 2 Court to listen carefully to this because that's what it

3 appears to be and that's what the evidence is going to show to 4 the Court.

5 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Draper, let me clarify
6 something I'm not sure if I heard you say or not. Were you
7 saying that the Court still needs to drill down on the issue
8 of whether the Debtor can acquire HarbourVest's interest in 9 HCLOF?

10 MR. DRAPER: No.

11 THE COURT: Okay. I was confused whether you were 12 saying I needed to take an independent look at that, now that 13 the objection has been withdrawn of Holdco. You are not 14 pressing that issue?

15 MR. DRAPER: No, I am not. Basically, I think it's 16 the fairness of the settlement. I think the transferability 17 of the interest is separate and apart from the fairness of the 18 settlement itself. I think the fairness -- the 19 transferability was a contractual issue between two parties
20 that the Court does not have to drill down on.

21 THE COURT: All right. I have another question for 22 you. I want to clarify your client's standing. Tell me --
23 I'm looking through a chart I printed out a while back. I 24 guess Dugaboy Investment Trust filed a couple of proofs of 25 claim; is that right?

1 MR. DRAPER: Yes.

2 THE COURT: Okay. What --

3 MR. DRAPER: And objections are pending.

4 THE COURT: Pardon?

5 MR. DRAPER: Objections to those claims are pending
6 before the Court, Your Honor, --

7 THE COURT: Okay.

8 MR. DRAPER: -- and have not been litigated.

9 THE COURT: And what about Get Good Trust?

10 MR. DRAPER: Get Good Trust has a proof of claim also 11 that objections are pending to. Pending.

12 THE COURT: Okay. I don't want to get too
13 sidetracked here, but I know standing was -- was mentioned as 14 a legal argument today. What is the basis for those proofs of 15 claim?

16 MR. DRAPER: The first one is, with respect to the 17 proof of claim for Dugaboy, there is an investment that 18 Dugaboy made that was then funneled, we believe, up to the 19 Debtor. And the -- the loan that exists, we believe is a 20 Debtor loan, as opposed to a loan to the entity that we made 21 the loans to.

22 And, again, it's a matter that the Court is going to hear.
23 The claim may or may not be allowed. It has not been 24 disallowed yet.

25 The second part to the Dugaboy ownership is we own an

1 interest in the Debtor. And so we are, in fact, a party in 2 interest.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. DRAPER: It may be a small interest, but it is an
5 interest.

6 THE COURT: It has a limited partnership interest in 7 the Debtor?

8 MR. DRAPER: Yes.

9 THE COURT: Is that correct?

10 MR. DRAPER: Yes.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I'll move forward. Thank 12 you.

13 Does that cover -- any other opening statements? I think 14 that covered everyone who was -- who filed some sort of 15 pleading today. No.

16 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, John Wilson on behalf of --

17 THE COURT: I'm sorry. I'm sorry.

18 MR. WILSON: -- Mr. Dondero.

19 THE COURT: I missed Mr. Dondero's counsel. I knew 20 we had visited at some point this morning. I just got 21 confused there. Go ahead, Mr. Wilson.

22 MR. WILSON: No problem, Your Honor. I was just 23 going to say that we will reserve our comments until after the 24 conclusion of the testimony.

25 THE COURT: All right. Very well.

1 Mr. Morris, you may call your first witness.

2 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor. Before I do,
3 just two very, very quick points.

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MR. MORRIS: To be clear, Dugaboy's interest in the 6 Debtor is 0.1866 percent. Less than two-tenths of one 7 percent.

8 Secondly, the argument that Mr. Draper just made with 9 respect to subordination is one that appears in nobody's
10 papers. And, in fact, not only doesn't it appear in anybody's 11 papers, but Mr. Dondero, I believe, specifically took issue 12 with the fact that a portion of the consideration that 13 HarbourVest would receive would be on a subordinated basis,
14 and he would -- and I think he took the position there is no
15 basis to give them a subordinated claim.

16 So, I just wanted to point those items out to the Court,
17 not that I think either one makes a large difference today,
18 but I do want to deal with the facts.

19 THE COURT: Thank you.

20 MR. MORRIS: The Debtor would call -- you're welcome,
21 Your Honor. The Debtor calls Mr. James Seery.

22 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Seery, welcome back to 23 virtual court. If you could say, "Testing, one, two" so I can 24 see you and swear you in.

25 MR. SEERY: Testing, one, two.

Seery - Direct

26

1 THE COURT: All right. I heard you but I'm not yet
2 seeing your video. Is your video turned on?

3 MR. SEERY: Video is on. Yes, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Okay. I see you now. Please raise your 5 right hand.

6 JAMES SEERY, DEBTOR'S WITNESS, SWORN

7 THE COURT: Thank you. Mr. Morris?

8 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 DIRECT EXAMINATION

10 BY MR. MORRIS:

11 Q Good morning, Mr. Seery. Can you hear me?

12 A I can. Thank you, Mr. Morris.

13 Q Okay. Let's just cut to the chase here. Are you familiar 14 with HarbourVest's claims filed against the Debtor?

15 A I am, yes.

16 Q And did you personally review them?

17 A I did, yes.

18 Q Do you recall that over the summer the Debtor objected to 19 HarbourVest's claim?

20 A Yes, we did.

21 Q Why -- can you explain to the judge why Harbour -- why the 22 Debtor objected to HarbourVest's claim last summer?

23 A Sure. The HarbourVest claims, I believe there are about 24 six of them, initially were filed, and they were -- they were 25 relatively vague in terms of what the specifics of the claims

1 were.

2 So, we saw the claims but didn't, frankly, pay a lot of 3 attention to the underlying transaction that was referred to 4 in the proofs of claim and the losses that HarbourVest had 5 claimed to suffer -- to suffer with respect to their purchase
6 of securities related to HCLOF and the damages caused by the 7 Acis case. So we filed a pretty pro forma objection. I 8 believe it was a simply stated objection that we didn't have 9 any record that there was anything in the Debtor's books and 10 records that they had a valid claim for any amount against the 11 Debtor.

12 Q Are you aware that HarbourVest subsequently filed a 13 response to the Debtor's objection to their claims?

14 A Yes. Yes, I am aware.

15 Q And did you familiarize yourself with that particular 16 response?

17 A I did indeed. It was a pretty extensive response, really 18 developing the full panoply of their claims, which included
19 claims for expenses relating to the Acis case, which 20 HarbourVest viewed as being improperly charged to HCLOF by its 21 manager, which is effectively Highland. Those expenses,
22 HarbourVest took the view, were excessive, had nothing to do
23 with the investment, and were simply a pursuit of a personal 24 vendetta against Mr. Terry and his interests by Mr. Dondero, 25 and using HCLOF's money to actually pursue those interests.

1           In addition, and this was the first time we saw that,
2 HarbourVest brought forth its claims that it was entitled to 3 effectively rescind the transaction. And I say rescind the 4 transaction: In security parlance, they claim that they were 5 induced by fraud, I think as most are -- to enter into the 6 transaction.

7           As most are aware, the liability limitations in the OMs
8 and the exculpation in the documents are pretty broad, and 9 HarbourVest's position was that they weren't going to be 10 subject to those limitations because the actual transaction
11 that they entered into was a fraud on them, designed by Mr.
12 Dondero, Mr. Ellington, and the Highland team.

13 Q       All right. Let's talk about your understanding, the 14 Debtor's understanding of the factual background to 15 HarbourVest's claim. What is your understanding of the 16 investment that HarbourVest made?

17 A       Well, HarbourVest made an investment in the Highland CLO 18 business. The Highland CLO business was -- was Acis. And 19 effectively, the business had been separated, but in name
20 only. Acis was just a shell, with a few partners -- 21 obviously, Mr. Terry as well -- but it was all Highland 22 personnel doing all the work.

23           And what they were trying to do with Acis was, in essence,
24 resuscitate a business that had been in a bit of a decline
25 from its pre-crisis heyday.

1 They were looking to take additional outside capital.

2 They would -- they would pay down or take money out of the 3 transaction, Highland would, or ultimately Mr. Dondero, and

4 they would -- they would seek to invest in Acis CLOs,

5 Highland's 1.0 CLOs. And then with respect to the Acis CLOs,

6 and potentially new CLOs, but with the Acis CLOs, they'd seek

7 to reset those and capture what they thought would be an

8 opportunity in the market to -- to really use the assets that

9 were there, not have to gather assets in the warehouse but be

10 able to use those assets to reset them to market prices for 11 the liabilities and then make money on the equity.

12 Q Do you have an understanding --

13 A Then --

14 Q I'm sorry. Go ahead.

15 A Why don't I continue? So, the transaction, they found

16 HarbourVest as a potential investor, and the basis of the 17 transaction was that they would make an investment into Acis.

18 Shortly before the transaction, and while they were doing

19 diligence, Mr. Terry received his arbitration award. I

20 believe that was in October of 2017. The transaction with 21 HarbourVest closed in mid- to late November of 2017. But Mr.

22 Terry was not an integral part. Indeed, he wasn't going to be 23 a key man. He had been long gone from Highland by that time.

24 What the -- I think you asked me originally what the basis

25 of their claim was. The transaction went forward, and the

Seery - Direct

30

1 basis of their claim is that they really were never -- nothing
2 was disclosed to them about the nature of the dispute with Mr.
3 Terry other than in the highest-level terms; the animosity
4 with respect to which that dispute was held by Highland and 5 potentially Mr. Terry; and really, how those costs would be 6 borne and risks be borne by the investment that they were 7 making.

8 That was, in essence, the transaction and the high-level
9 view of their claim.

10 Q Okay. Just a few very specific facts. Do you have an 11 understanding as to how much HarbourVest invested and what 12 they got in exchange for that investment?

13 A Yeah. HarbourVest invested in a couple tranches, and I
14 forget the exact dates, but approximately $75 million
15 originally, and then they added another five. Some 16 distributions were made in the first half of 2018, putting 17 their net investment in the mid-seventies on the investment,
18 which now is worth about 22-1/2 million bucks.

19 Q And what percentage interest in HCLOF did HarbourVest
20 acquire, to the best of your knowledge?

21 A They have 49.98 percent of HCLOF. HCLOF, just to refresh
22 -- the Court is, I think, well aware of this, but to refresh, 23 is a Guernsey entity. Not -- not atypical for structures of 24 this type to use offshore jurisdictions and sell the 25 securities under -- at least to U.S. -- can't sell them to 002058

Seery - Direct

31

1 U.S. investors unless they qualify, and these are sold under 2 Reg S to -- to investors that otherwise qualify. And 3 HarbourVest was investing in that transaction through the 4 Guernsey structure.

5 Q And do you have an understanding as to who owned the 50-6 plus percent of HCLOF that HarbourVest was not going to 7 acquire?

8 A Yeah. There's -- you can tell by the name. HCLOF is 9 Highland CLO Funding. This is a Highland vehicle. So 10 Highland owned and controlled the vehicle. The DAF, which is 11 -- which is Dondero-controlled trusts, have the -- 49 percent.
12 Highland has, I believe, around .63-65 percent directly. And 13 then Highland employees at the time who were involved in the 14 business owned another small percentage.

15 So the majority was going to be controlled by Highland 16 through its control of DAF and its control of the employees
17 that worked for it. HarbourVest would be a minority investor.

18 Q Okay. And I believe you testified that the investment was 19 made in mid-November; is that right?

20 A That's correct. I think it was the 15th, may have been 21 the 17th of November.

22 Q And do you recall when in October the Terry arbitration
23 award was rendered?

24 A It was about a month before. I think it was right around 25 the 20th, the 17th to the 20th. I may be slightly wrong on 002059

1 each of those dates.

2 Q Okay. What is your understanding as to what happened
3 after the issuance of the award that is the basis or at least 4 one of the bases for HarbourVest's claim?

5 A I don't think there's -- I don't think there's any 6 dispute. And there certainly are judicial findings. Dondero
7 and Highland went about stripping Acis of all of its assets.
8 So, remember that Acis is not a separate standalone company,
9 in any event. It's controlled and dominated completely by 10 Highland at the time. But it did have contracts. And those 11 contracts had value.

12 So the first idea was to strip out the management contract
13 and put it into a separate vehicle, which we called HCF 14 Advisor, which Highland still owns. The second piece was to 15 strip out some valuable assets, the risk retention piece, 16 which was a loan that in essence was equity that Highland had 17 put into Acis but structured as a loan, as many of the 18 transactions we'll see down the road are, in order to deal 19 with some -- avoid taxes in any way possible. And that 20 structure, that value moved value out of Acis for the express
21 purpose of trying to run, in essence, the Highland business
22 back in Highland.

23 Remember, as I said, Acis is just a Highland business
24 moved to a separate shell. When Mr. Terry got his arbitration 25 award against Acis and was seeking to enforce it, it was

Seery - Direct

33

1 pretty straightforward, let's take all the assets -- Dondero
2 scheme -- let's take all the assets and move them back into
3 Highland so Terry can't get anything.

4 Q And how does that scheme relate to the HarbourVest claim,
5 to the best of your knowledge?

6 A Well, HarbourVest -- HarbourVest's position is that they 7 invested in Acis and -- and whether Acis was called Acis or 8 called Highland, it doesn't really matter; there were valuable 9 assets in the -- in the entity that they were going to be 10 investing in through the equity in these CLOs and some of the 11 debt securities in those CLOs.

12 And then the stripping out and the fraudulent conveyances
13 out of Acis caused them damages because that's what left the 14 damage to Mr. Terry.

15 The quick math on Acis, by the way, is Acis has probably 16 lost, total damages, 175 million bucks. And that's pretty 17 easy. DAF lost 50. HarbourVest lost 50. Fifteen million of 18 fees charged to HCLOF. Another five million of fees, at 19 least, incurred by Mr. Terry. Ten million that went to Mr.
20 Terry, 15 to Highland fees, another five, plus Mr. Terry's 21 settlement in this case, over eight million bucks.

22 So HarbourVest's position, which, on a factual basis, you 23 know, is problematic for the estate, is, wait a second, we 24 invested in this vehicle with Highland. That was supposed to 25 invest in Highland CLOs. They were called Acis, but they were 002061

1 Highland CLOs. And then you went about causing tremendous 2 damage to that vehicle that we ultimately were investing in,
3 and then charge us for the pleasure.

4 Q You used the phrase earlier "OM," I believe.

5 A Offering memorandum.

6 Q Offering memorandum? Can you just explain to the Court
7 your understanding of what an offering memorandum is?

8 A Typically, under U.S. law, and foreign jurisdictions have 9 similar laws, you have to have a document that explains the 10 securities that you're selling. And it goes into extreme 11 detail about the securities and the risks related to those 12 securities.

13 And the idea is not to have a document that tells you
14 whether it's a good investment or a bad investment, but it's a 15 document that discloses to the potential investor all of the 16 risks with respect to that security or related to the 17 investment over the duration of the security. It doesn't 18 predict the future, but it's supposed to make sure that it
19 gives you a very clean view of the past and a very clean view 20 of what the facts from the past are and how they would 21 implicate the future of the investment.

22 Q And in the course of its diligence, did the Debtor have an 23 opportunity to review the offering memorandum in the context
24 of the claims that were being asserted by HarbourVest?

25 A Oh, absolutely. It was originally effectively -- it's an

Seery - Direct

35

1 HCLOF offering memorandum. But as I said, HCLOF was managed
2 and controlled by Highland, and Highland originally prepared
3 it. And then, of course, in connection with -- with this 4 dispute and these claims, we reviewed it, both myself and my 5 legal team.

6 Q All right.

7 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, the offering memorandum is 8 on the Debtor's exhibit list, and I think this is an 9 appropriate time to move into evidence Debtor's Exhibits A 10 through EE, all of which appear at Docket No. 1732.

11 THE COURT: 1732?

12 MR. MORRIS: It's the Debtor's Second Amended Witness
13 and Exhibit List.

14 THE COURT: All right. Any objection to admission of 15 A through EE?

16 MR. DRAPER: Douglas Draper. No objection, Your 17 Honor.

18 THE COURT: All right. Mr. --

19 MR. MORRIS: May I proceed?

20 THE COURT: Yeah. Mr. Wilson, did you want to 21 confirm no objection?

22 (Echoing.)

23 THE COURT: All right. Hearing no objection, 24 Debtor's A through EE are admitted.

25 (Debtor's Exhibits A through EE are received into 002063

36

1 evidence.)

2 THE COURT: Go ahead, Mr. Morris.

3 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor. The offering
4 memorandum itself is one of the documents that we filed under 5 seal, and we did so at the request of counsel to HCLOF. But 6 HCLOF has consented to our sharing up on the screen certain 7 very limited provisions of the document, without waiving the 8 request that the agreement otherwise be maintained under seal.

9 THE COURT: All right.

10 MR. MORRIS: So may I proceed on that basis, Your 11 Honor?

12 THE COURT: You may. Uh-huh.

13 MR. MORRIS: Okay. Ms. Canty, can you please put up 14 on the screen Demonstrative Exhibit #1? Okay. Can we just -- 15 is there a way to just expand that just a bit, Ms. Canty?
16 Thank you very much. And if we could just scroll it up?
17 Thank you very much. Perfect.

18 Okay. So, Your Honor, this, as the footnote says, is an 19 excerpt from the offering memorandum that can be found at 20 Debtor's Exhibit AA. Double A. And this particular portion 21 of the offering memorandum is at Page 35.

22 THE COURT: Okay.

23 BY MR. MORRIS:

24 Q Mr. Seery, have you seen this portion of the offering 25 memorandum before?

002064

Seery - Direct

37

1 A Yes, I have. But before I continue, I just -- I should
2 have checked. Are you able to hear me clearly? Am I speaking
3 too quickly or am I cutting out? I just want to make sure.
4 I'm using a different set of audio today.

5 THE COURT: All right.

6 MR. MORRIS: That's fine.

7 THE COURT: I hear you very well.

8 MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

9 THE COURT: So I think we're good right now. Thank 10 you.

11 THE WITNESS: Yeah. Thank you, Your Honor. I was 12 just checking.

13 THE COURT: Okay.

14 THE WITNESS: In response to your question, Mr.
15 Morris, yes, I have seen this before.

16 BY MR. MORRIS:

17 Q Okay. And can you -- did you form a view in doing the due 18 diligence as to the adequacy of this disclosure?

19 A Yes, I did.

20 Q Can you share your -- or share with Judge Jernigan the 21 Debtor's view as to the adequacy of this disclosure concerning 22 the litigation between Highland and Acis?

23 A With respect to the litigation between Highland and Acis,
24 or, really, between Acis, Highland, and Highland's principals
25 and Acis's principal, totally inadequate. The disclosure here

002065

Seery - Direct

38

1 is very high-level. And if there were no other litigation
2 going on, it might serve to suffice. It basically says, In 3 our business, because we invest in distressed loans, there's a 4 lot of litigation around distressed investments, and that's 5 what we have. And then it says, We've talked with the 6 investor about other things and we're -- we think that's 7 enough.

8 Q Is there anything in this portion or anywhere in the 9 offering memorandum that you're aware of that disclosed to 10 HarbourVest that in the weeks leading up to the investment
11 Highland was engaged in the fraudulent transfer of assets away
12 from Acis?

13 A No. And I apologize, because I think it's -- I've 14 conflated two provisions. This one only deals with the very 15 high-level nature of the business. It doesn't give any 16 indication that there's any material litigation going on 17 elsewhere with respect to Acis.

18 I believe there's another provision that says, We -- we 19 have talked to -- oh, here -- I'm sorry. It is here.
20 Shareholders have had an opportunity to discuss with Highland 21 to their satisfaction all litigation matters against Highland 22 and its affiliates unrelated to its distressed business.

23 That, in my opinion, is wholly inadequate.

24 Q Okay.

25 MR. MORRIS: And let's put up -- actually, let's just 002066

39

1 move on.

2 BY MR. MORRIS:

3 Q Let's go to the settlement itself.

4 MR. MORRIS: Can we put back up Demonstrative Exhibit
5 #3?

6 BY MR. MORRIS:

7 Q Mr. Seery, can you see that?

8 A Yes, I can.

9 Q Does this generally describe the net economic recovery of 10 the HarbourVest settlement based on estimated recoveries for 11 general unsecured creditors as of November 2020?

12 A As of November 2020, it does. And you alluded to this in 13 your opening, but to be clear, the numbers have shifted.
14 Costs have increased. The -- so the -- effectively, the 15 numerator, in terms of distributable value that we estimate, 16 is lower. And settlements, the denominator, have also 17 increased. So the claims against the estate that have been 18 recognized have increased. And that, that probably takes it 19 down closer, in our view, to about seventy cents distribution,
20 a number closer to nine to ten million, maybe a little bit 21 less.

22 However, there's also some additional value that we -- we 23 believe we will recover directly. There are north of $150
24 million of intercompany notes owed by Dondero entities to 25 Highland. A number of those notes are demand notes, and we've 002067

Seery - Direct

40

1 already made demand. We'll be initiating actions next week.
2 So those are -- those value, we believe, we'll recover
3 directly from Mr. Dondero and from related entities.

4 To the extent those related entities don't have value, we 5 feel very strongly about our ability to pierce the veil and 6 reach in to Mr. Dondero. And then his assets, either his 7 personal assets or the assets that he claims are in trusts.

8 In addition, there are a significant amount of notes that 9 were extended in two -- I believe around 2017, for no
10 consideration. Those notes were demand notes, I believe, and 11 then extended it 30 years. So they have 2047 maturities.
12 Those were probably going to have to be subject to fraudulent 13 conveyance type actions or -- or some sort of sale at a very 14 discounted value because third parties wouldn't want long-15 dated notes with Mr. Dondero as the counterparty for very much 16 money.

17 Those -- they defaulted on some of those parties, so we 18 effectively turned them into demand notes. We've accelerated,
19 and we'll be bringing actions against those entities next week
20 as well.

21 So I think (garbled) have come up, so I apologize. One 22 way of saying I think the sixteen and a half is a bit high 23 right now, based upon what we know, but the value is going to 24 be higher than our estimate a couple of weeks ago because we 25 do believe we'll be able to recover on the notes.

002068

1 One additional caveat, just to be fully transparent here.
2 This summary with the 16.8 doesn't include the subordinated
3 piece of this -- of this claim and our resolution. That -- 4 recovery of that piece will be dependent upon the success of 5 litigations.

6 In order for the subordinated piece to get paid, all
7 general unsecured claims in Class -- Classes 7 and 8 will have 8 to be paid in full. And then -- and then the subordinated 9 class in Class 9, which we believe UBS will have a piece of,
10 and HarbourVest will have a piece of by this settlement, those 11 will be able to recover, and those will be based upon other 12 claims of action against -- primarily against related parties.

13 Q And then that last point, is that what's reflected in 14 Footnote 3 on this page?

15 A That's correct, yes.

16 Q Okay. And just for the record, there's a reduction in 17 value of $22-1/2 million. Do you see that?

18 A Yes.

19 Q And can you just explain to the Court what that is and how 20 that value was arrived at?

21 A Yes. I may be getting slightly ahead of you, Mr. Morris.
22 But to give the Court a reflection of the transaction -- and 23 we can go into the details in a moment -- ultimately, the 24 transaction we structured we think is very fair both 25 economically to the Debtor, but there -- there is some

Seery - Direct

42

1 complexity to it to satisfy some of HarbourVest's concerns
2 that they be able to effectively rescind the transaction, at 3 least from an optical perspective. Value was important, but 4 optics were as well. The twenty-two and a half is the current
5 -- actually, the November value of HCL -- the HarbourVest
6 interests in HCLOF. And that's based upon Highland's
7 evaluation of those interests.

8 So we do believe that that is a fair value as of that 9 date. It has not gone down. It hasn't gone up explosively, 10 either, but it hasn't gone down. We think that's good, real 11 value. That value is in the Acis CLOs, the equity in those 12 CLOs, which is 2 through 6, that we -- we will be working with 13 the HCLOF folks to get Mr. Terry to monetize those assets and 14 those longer-dated CLOs.

15 In addition, I think it's 85 percent of the equity in Acis 16 7 -- Acis 7 is managed by Highland -- that is also beyond its 17 reinvestment period. And in talking to the directors -- and 18 they're new directors, and I'll get to that in a minute, for 19 HCLOF -- they'll seek to push Highland, which is the 20 reorganized Highland, to monetize that asset, with due regard 21 to fair value.

22 In addition, Harbour -- HCLOF owned a significant amount 23 of the preferred or equity pieces, if you will, in the 24 Highland CLO, 1.0 CLOs. As we've talked about, those are not 25 really CLOs. Those are effectively closed-end funds with 002070

43

1 illiquid assets, primarily illiquid assets in them. We've had
2 some dispute in front of the Court about selling the liquid
3 assets in them, which we can go into it another time. Those 4 are being liquidated in the market at fair value.

5 But HCLOF also is a significant holder of those preferred
6 shares, and those directors would -- have indicated to me that 7 they would like to see those interests also monetized.

8 Q All right. Let's shift gears for a moment to talk about 9 the diligence that the Debtor did before entering into this 10 agreement. Can you just describe for the Court generally the 11 diligence that was undertaken at your direction?

12 A Well, when we first received the reply to our objection, 13 we dug into that reply and the specifics in it very 14 aggressively. So we reviewed all of the underlying documents 15 related to the original transaction. We discussed with 16 counsel the legal basis for the HarbourVest claims. We 17 interviewed our own HCMLP employees who were involved in the 18 transaction and tested their recollection, specifically around 19 who dealt with HarbourVest, who had the discussions with 20 HarbourVest, what was disclosed to HarbourVest with respect to 21 the Terry dispute and the Acis litigation.

22 We also had done, as I think the Court is well aware from 23 prior 9019 testimony, extensive work around the transfers and 24 the issues related to Acis. So we were familiar with their 25 impact on HCLOF.

002071

44

1 We also did extensive work valuing the remaining HCLOF
2 interests to get a good feel of not only how much HarbourVest
3 originally invested, but how much they actually lost in this 4 transaction. And as I said, their original investment was 5 around, in total, in two tranches, about $80 million, of which 6 they got about $5 million back, and they've lost $22 million.
7 So it -- I mean, remaining with $22 million. So they've lost,
8 you know, in excess of $50 million.

9 Q Do you recall whether the Debtor reviewed and analyzed all 10 of the documents that were cited in HarbourVest's response to 11 the Debtor's objection to the HarbourVest proofs of claim?

12 A Yeah. I think -- I forget, to be honest, which -- exactly 13 what documents were in there. But we went through their 14 objection with a fine-toothed comb, not only with respect to 15 the issues related to the Acis case, but also their references
16 to Guernsey law, other U.S. law, any of the documents between 17 the parties. And obviously, as I mentioned before, the 18 offering memorandum.

19 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I would just note for the 20 record that Debtor's Exhibits I through X are all of the 21 documents that are cited in HarbourVest's response to the 22 Debtor's objection to the HarbourVest proofs of claim, and 23 those are the documents that Mr. Seery just referred to.

24 THE COURT: All right.

25 MR. MORRIS: Just, they're in evidence now, and I 002072

Seery - Direct

45

1 just wanted the Court to understand why they're in evidence.

2 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

3 MR. MORRIS: You're welcome.

4 BY MR. MORRIS:

5 Q Let's talk about the Debtor and whether or not it had or 6 has any viable defenses. Did the Debtor form any views as to 7 whether or not it had any defenses to the HarbourVest claims?

8 A Yes, we did.

9 Q Can you describe for the Court the defenses that were 10 reviewed and analyzed by the Debtor?

11 A Yeah. I think we -- we had very significant defenses.
12 So, first and foremost, with respect to the original proof of 13 claim, as I mentioned earlier, it alluded to the expenses and 14 the overcharge. And I think with respect to the 15 million of 15 fees that were charged to HCLOF by Highland, we didn't have a 16 lot of defenses to that claim.

17 It's pretty clear, by any fair view of the Acis case, that 18 HCLOF, as the investor in the Acis CLOs and the Highland CLOs,
19 had no real responsibility for fighting with Acis and Josh
20 Terry and shouldn't have been charged those fees. I don't -- 21 I don't think there's a legitimate investor that would 22 actually think that that was an appropriate amount to be 23 charged to a fund.

24 However, the claim was not as broad -- the proof of claim
25 was not as fulsome in terms of discussing and only vaguely

002073

1 referred to other damages. So we did -- we did, as a
2 threshold matter, think about whether we could argue that it
3 was time-barred because they had not met their obligations to 4 fully disclose under the proof of claim.

5 Secondly, we considered the defenses to the overall claim
6 of fraudulent inducement. Our perspective was that if we 7 could stop the claim of fraudulent inducement, the damages
8 would likely be limited to the 15 and maybe some -- some other 9 damages. With respect to the 15, again, the problem that we 10 had when we got past -- past motions for summary judgment is 11 the factual predicate for our defense was going to be that we 12 divulged these things to HarbourVest and that they did not 13 reasonably -- it was -- reasonably rely on some failure to 14 divulge because they're a sophisticated investor.

15 The problem with that defense is that our witnesses, which 16 really would have primarily been Mr. Dondero and Mr.
17 Ellington, and one other employee who runs the CLO business, 18 Mr. Covitz, would not be pretty good. They've been -- two of 19 them have been in front of this Court and they're not viewed 20 favorably and their testimony would be challenged and 21 potentially suspect.

22 So that gave us a real focus on trying to make sure that 23 we could, if we had to litigate, that we would litigate around 24 the fraudulent inducement.

25 As I said, reasonable reliance, what was disclosed, lack

Seery - Direct

47

1 of digging into the public record, because you don't have to 2 go far on Google to find "fraud" within two words of 3 "Highland," and the tremendous, you know, litigious nature of 4 Highland. You know, even at that point, when this investment
5 was made, aside from Mr. Terry's arbitration, which by that 6 point, at least by the time (inaudible) was public, there was,
7 you know, significant public disclosure around the Credit
8 Strat and the litigation, the Crusader litigation, the UBS
9 litigation, the, gosh knows, the Daugherty litigation.

10 So our defense was going to be that you should have 11 figured this out, you're a sophisticated investor, and you
12 should have been able to figure out that there was significant 13 risk that, with respect to Mr. Terry, that Mr. Dondero would 14 not stop litigating and that those costs would put significant 15 risk on the investment.

16 The problem with that, as I mentioned earlier, is that the 17 OM is wholly deficient. If you have a typical risk factor in 18 the offering memorandum, you would have disclosed that there 19 was a litigation with Mr. Terry, a former partner in the 20 business, and that the Debtor had no intention of settling it.
21 There was no intention of settling. That litigation would go 22 on. It could go on for years and it could result in 23 bankruptcy or attachments and other risks to the business, and 24 that the investor should be fully aware that the Offeror does 25 not intend to be involved in any -- or the manager, in any 002075

Seery - Direct

48

1 settlement with Mr. Terry, and the fact it undermined the 2 investment. That wasn't there.

3 But that was our preliminary focus, to try to stop fraud
4 in the inducement. And then we -- we had specific facts
5 related to that. You know, once they knew about the 6 bankruptcy in HarbourVest of -- I'm sorry, of Acis,
7 HarbourVest made a second funding, which was there was a -- it
8 was an initial $75 million draw, and then a second, I believe, 9 about a $5 million draw, which was in -- I believe in 10 February. And they made it without -- without objection, and 11 that was after the commencement of the bankruptcy.

12 In addition, they were -- they were active in the 13 bankruptcy, so the -- some of the things that happened in the 14 bankruptcy, there were many opportunities to settle that case, 15 from our examination, all of which were turned down to -- by 16 Mr. Dondero. But you don't see HarbourVest pounding the table
17 to settle, either, either with respect to the Oaktree
18 transaction or any other transaction.

19 Now, HarbourVest's defense to that is, well, we were 20 taking advice and all of our information from Highland, and we 21 were getting that information directly from senior folks at 22 Highland why -- what the value was and why we shouldn't do 23 those things. We thought that that would mitigate some of the 24 arguments that -- some of the damages that we might have, I'm 25 sorry, if we -- if we lost.

002076

1 But the focus at that point, you know, our legal strategy,
2 was can we stop HarbourVest at the very forefront to say,
3 You've got to come into the factual realm and get out of the 4 fraud in the inducement realm. And then the defenses and the 5 exculpations and the liability limitations in the documents
6 would also come into play.

7 So that -- those are some of the defenses that we focused
8 on and our analytical thinking around them.

9 Q So, if the Debtor had viable defenses, why is it settling?

10 A Well, this is a significant claim. And we -- we looked at 11 it with respect to both the impact on the case, but, really,
12 the merits of the claim.

13 As I said, there's really little dispute that the legal 14 fees should not have been charged to HarbourVest. We think 15 based upon the testimony in Acis, the suspect credibility of 16 those who would have been our witnesses, and the experience in 17 Acis that the Court has had in terms of the completely hell-
18 bent on litigation, it would be hard for anyone to justifiably 19 defend those fees being charged. So, as an initial matter, we 20 had exposure there.

21 In addition, if HarbourVest got by our defense of -- was 22 able, for example, to claim fraud in the inducement, then we 23 were open to significant damages.

24 We really didn't put much value, frankly, on the RICO part 25 of it. We think that that's waved around often to show treble

1 damages. Although in this case certainly somebody could lay
2 out the predicate acts and put forth a RICO-type argument, we 3 just didn't think that that had real merit in this commercial 4 dispute, even with a fraud claim.

5 But even without the trebling of the damages, there's no
6 dispute that HarbourVest lost more than $50 million in this 7 investment. You know, we -- we thought about that risk as 8 well.

9 In addition, because the case would really be fact-based,
10 even if we had a high degree of confidence based upon our 11 discussions with our employees and the factual testimony, it 12 was going to be expensive to litigate this case, and time-13 consuming.

14 And so we looked at the economic value, the potential
15 risks, and the actual value that we were giving up, and found 16 this to be an extremely, extremely reasonable settlement.

17 Importantly, and I think what drove it, you -- one of -- 18 one of the things that drove it is another one of our defenses 19 on why, notwithstanding their -- what they held out as 20 meritorious claims, I don't think HarbourVest really wanted to 21 publicly litigate this claim. And we were aggressive in our 22 discussions with HarbourVest of how we would litigate it,
23 which would be quite publicly.

24 Now, that may or may not be fair, but that does put risk 25 on the counterparty. And so I think that helped drive the

Seery - Direct

51

1 settlement.

2 In addition, the structure of the settlement we think is 3 extremely favorable to the Debtor and to the estate because,
4 rather than taking the full claim and putting it into a senior
5 unsecured position, we have bifurcated it. We did think about 6 whether this was a claim that could be subordinated under 510.
7 There won't be any arguments, I would be surprised if there's 8 arguments today that we didn't actually give to the Highland 9 employees who have given them to Mr. Dondero's respective 10 counsel.

11 We did structure it in a way that we thought gave 12 HarbourVest the opportunity to effectively claim a rescission, 13 even though that's not really what it is, and then be able to 14 claim that their recovery is based on the bankruptcy, which it 15 is, but not really dilute all the other stakeholders in the 16 case.

17 (Pause.)

18 THE COURT: Mr. Morris? Anything else?

19 MR. MORRIS: I can hear you, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. MORRIS: I can hear you.

22 THE COURT: Okay. Now can you --

23 MR. MORRIS: I got cut off from Mr. Seery for a 24 moment.

25 THE COURT: Okay.

002079

1 BY MR. MORRIS:

2 Q Okay. I appreciate that. Are you done giving the 3 Debtor's basis for entering into this settlement, Mr. Seery,
4 if you can hear me?

5 A I think so, but I think as the Court has probably seen, I 6 can go on.

7 Q Yes.

8 A So I will try to be -- I'll try to be more concise. But 9 this was a -- this was a difficult settlement. We felt good 10 about our defenses. Felt that we could -- we could try them.
11 But it would be extremely expensive, time-consuming, and there 12 would be a lot of risk. And settling at a level which we 13 believe is actually below the damages that were clearly caused 14 only by the fees was a -- was a -- is a -- is a very 15 reasonable settlement.

16 Q Okay. Let's just talk about the process by which we got 17 to the settlement. Do you recall generally when the 18 settlement negotiations have -- were commenced?

19 A I believe it was -- was late summer, early -- early fall.

20 Q Okay. Before I move on, I just want to go back to the 21 Acis matter that you were talking about, one last issue. Do 22 you know how, if at all, the injunction that was entered in 23 the Acis bankruptcy impacted or related to the HarbourVest 24 claims?

25 A Yeah. I -- yes, I do. And I believe it -- it did. I

1 think there's an argument, and we analyzed it thoroughly, that
2 the injunction effectively caused a lot of the damages.
3 Because if you look at the values of the equity that 4 HarbourVest had, the -- and HCLOF had in the CLOs, it went 5 down dramatically after the Trustee in the Acis case took over
6 and then subsequently, when the case was reorganized and Mr.
7 Terry took over, you know, with Brigade as the sub-advisor.

8 Now, that would -- you know, we would -- we could 9 certainly attempt to throw, in our defense, the causation at 10 Mr. Terry's feet or at Mr. Phelan's feet. HarbourVest's 11 retort is that none of this would have occurred but for the 12 burn-it-down litigation that Mr. Dondero engaged in with 13 Highland.

14 In addition, in Mr. Terry's defense, you know, he did try 15 multiple times with HCLOF, tried to petition, if you will, the 16 HCLOF entity to -- and directors, former directors, to reset
17 the CLOs to make them more economically viable, based upon the 18 current level of asset returns versus the debt costs in the 19 CLOs. And that was rejected by the HCLOF and the Debtor as 20 the controlling party of HCLOF. So, we thought about those 21 risks.

22 You know, similarly, the economic values in Acis 7 went 23 down pretty significantly from that date as well. So I think 24 there's -- there are some defenses, but that's really Mr.
25 Terry's issue, not our issue. So we thought about those

Seery - Direct

54

1 issues, we analyzed them, and we certainly did all the work
2 around month-to-month reductions in NAVs and how different
3 events in the Acis case might have -- might have caused those 4 and was that some sort of break from the original 5 transgression that HarbourVest claims, which was the 6 fraudulent inducement.

7 Q Do you recall that in November HarbourVest's motion under 8 3018 was scheduled to be heard?

9 A Yes.

10 Q And can you just tell the Court your understanding of what 11 the 3018 motion was about?

12 A Well, the 3018 motion was going to be on voting. And we 13 took the view that it really was not -- it shouldn't have been 14 that big an issue and HarbourVest should have been content
15 with just taking their actual losses of roughly a $50-$60
16 million claim for voting purposes and then we would move on.

17 HarbourVest was very insistent that they have a $300
18 million claim, because they took the position -- and with 19 extensive documentation; not only the pleadings they filed,
20 but also detailed decks that were prepared by their counsel,
21 which they had presented to us on the merits of their claim -- 22 that they were going to litigate for -- the 3018 and for the 23 full $300 million value.

24 And that became the genesis, if you will, of the 25 negotiations to settle.

002082

Seery - Direct

55

1           So, we started talking about the 3018. It was very
2 contentious. My apologies to Ms. Weisgerber and her counsel,
3 her partners, because it was a significant and contentious
4 negotiating call. But the reasons for that I think were that 5 -- their insistence on litigating the 3018 and our view that 6 this was just, you know, another -- another of a series of 7 delays and costs in this case that we really were hoping to 8 avoid.

9           That led to Mr. Pugatch and I stepping away from counsel,
10 no offense to counsel, you know, ours and his, to begin
11 negotiations around the potential for a settlement. First, it 12 started with a 3018, and then, you know, argued that we would,
13 if we got past the 3018, we were going to litigate this,
14 because we effectively had -- thought we could get everyone 15 else done at -- in and around that time. And I think we were 16 also probably a little bit optimistic about UBS at that time 17 and the mediation, which subsequently we have settled. But 18 that was the genesis of those settlements.

19       Q     And how did the structure, how did the Debtor and 20 HarbourVest derive at the structure whereby there is a general
21 unsecured claim, there is a subordinated piece, and there's 22 the takeback of the HCLOF interest?

23       A     Well, as I outlined, we -- we aggressively set forth our 24 various defenses. Their position was that they -- they should 25 never have been in this transaction before. And they --

002083

Seery - Direct

56

1 HarbourVest is, in essence, a fund of funds, and they have 2 investors, and it certainly wouldn't be their, I'm sure, the 3 best-performing asset in their portfolio, to have made this
4 investment and lost $50 million over this period of time. So
5 they felt strongly that they should never have been in this 6 investment, and but for the failure to disclose and the 7 improper disclosures, they would not have been in this 8 investment.

9 So, optically, getting out of it was important to them,
10 and that led to our idea and construction of a subordinated
11 claim and the transfer of the HCLOF interests to the estate.

12 Importantly, the HCLOF interests, as I mentioned, are -- 13 the investments are in the Acis CLOs controlled by Acis and 14 Mr. Terry. The reorganized Acis. As well as the 1.0 CLOs and 15 the Acis 7.

16 So we were keenly focused on, if we were going to get that 17 interest, would we then have the majority control in HCLOF,
18 which we will, and would we be able to drive the recoveries,
19 as opposed to what Highland typically does in these 20 investments is use other people's money, drive down the value,
21 and then try to buy back the interest on the cheap.

22 Q Just in terms of timing, because I think there was a 23 suggestion in one of the openings that there was something
24 untoward about the timing here: At the time the liquidation
25 analysis was prepared on November 24th, had the Debtor reached

002084

Seery - Direct

57

1 any agreement in principle with HarbourVest?

2 A If we had, it would have been reflected, so I don't -- I
3 don't think we were agreed by then. I don't recall the 4 specific dates, but if we had, it would have -- it would have 5 been reflected.

6 Q If I can refresh your recollection that the motion was 7 filed on December 24th, does that help form your understanding 8 or refresh your recollection that there was no agreement in 9 principle on November 24th?

10 A Yeah. Well, I'm quite sure there was no agreement in 11 principle or we would have reflected it minimally by a 12 footnote. There's -- there's no chance. It's a material
13 reduction in the claims pool that we were previously telling
14 people that, at least for purposes of distribution, like UBS
15 and a couple others we said we thought we would get to zero
16 on. So we didn't calculate in that amount. So I'm quite sure 17 we didn't have a deal when we filed the disclosure statement.

18 In terms of the timing, anyone who's done this business
19 for any degree of time knows that the crucible of bankruptcy
20 brings people to the settlement when they see something 21 happening in the case, and not before. I think HarbourVest 22 looked at our -- this is my supposition -- HarbourVest looked 23 at our plan, our ability to get this done, our settlement with 24 Redeemer, our settlement with Mr. Terry and Acis, and saw that 25 this plan was coming together, and if they didn't think about

002085

1 the settlement, they were going to think about not only the 2 risks that we laid forth for them with respect our defenses,
3 but also the opportunity to litigate with the Claimant Trustee
4 over a long period of time, which couldn't have been 5 particularly appetizing.

6 Q Can you describe for the Court the role played by the 7 independent board of Strand, the general partner of the 8 Debtor, in analyzing and participating in the approval
9 process?

10 A Yes. I think, as the Court is aware and I've testified 11 before, Mr. Russell Nelms and Mr. John Dubel are fellow
12 independent directors with me, appointed pursuant to the Court
13 order. They are kept abreast of every detail, and -- along 14 the way, not just in a summary form at the end. We have 15 reviewed and analyzed collectively each of the issues. Mr.
16 Dubel has extensive experience in these types of litigation
17 matters. Obviously, Mr. Nelms, from his -- both his practice 18 and his time on the bench, has a keen insight into how to 19 resolve and what the risks and benefits are from settling
20 litigation. So I consult them every step of the way.

21 Q And as part of this process, did the Debtor reach out to 22 the directors of HCLOF?

23 A Yes, we did. So, we reached out and we've had several 24 conversations on video chats with the directors. The 25 directors of HCLOF are two new gentlemen, Mr. Richard Boleat

1 and Mr. Dicky Burwood. They are extremely professional. They 2 are exceptionally well-informed. They are truly careful, and 3 I would say very experienced professional not only directors,
4 but experienced in -- in these matters, both in respect of 5 structured finance as well as these types of vehicles and 6 litigation.

7 They were appointed by the old directors, Scott and 8 Bestwick, and they have been in control. They have outside 9 counsel, which is King & Spalding in the U.S. They have 10 Guernsey counsel. They have accountants and professional 11 advisors, and are being, in my opinion, exceptionally careful.
12 I've got -- very quickly developed a lot of respect for them, 13 and we consulted with them on this settlement and how it would 14 work.

15 They've been very clear that they represent HCLOF and they 16 work for the benefit of the equity, whomever owns it, and 17 taking a view that they would like to see these assets
18 monetized swiftly, with due regard to value, for the benefit 19 of the equity.

20 Q And is it your understanding that the directors of HCLOF
21 approved of this transaction?

22 A They -- I don't know that their approval was required.
23 It's really -- there are a number of hoops to jump through 24 under the documentation, including opinion of outside counsel
25 that we received from WilmerHale in terms of the effectiveness

1 of the transfer under the documents. We had a negotiation
2 with -- with those directors, and making sure that we did
3 everything correct -- correctly, excuse me -- with respect to 4 the requirements for the transfer under the documents. And 5 they've indicated their support and acknowledgement that we're 6 doing it correctly.

7 I don't know if it's fair to say they approved it. I'd 8 just have to go check the documents. But they certainly 9 support it. And I think they generally support our position
10 with respect to how to move forward with the assets.

11 Q I appreciate that. I guess I meant approval with a small 12 a and not a capital A.

13 You mentioned WilmerHale. Who do they represent in all of 14 this?

15 A WilmerHale is the Debtor's outside corporate counsel, in 16 particular with respect to the fund issues that we don't 17 handle in-house. We have significant support for fund issues 18 from the expertise of Mr. Surgent, who's been the CCO, and he 19 is also a lawyer, with respect to, you know, some of the 20 difficult fund issues that Highland has. But when we use 21 outside counsel, we use WilmerHale for that, and they've been 22 -- they've been exceptional.

23 Q Okay. Just the last two points that were made in Mr.
24 Dondero's objection, I believe. Did the Debtor overpay in 25 this settlement in order to gain the support of HarbourVest in

Seery - Direct

61

1 connection with its -- with the Debtor's attempt to get its 2 plan confirmed?

3 A Not in any way. My -- I believe the settlement is 4 extremely reasonable. As I testified, it's -- it's less than 5 the -- the actual value going out, depending on unless there's 6 successful litigation, and there well could be, is less than 7 on a pro forma basis the fees that were taken and charged to 8 HCLOF. We didn't do this for votes. We will have Class 2, 9 Class 7, Class 8, and Class 9. So I don't think that's a -- 10 there's no vote purchasing, I think you called it. No, not at 11 all.

12 Q Yeah. Well, on that topic, I think the phrase that was 13 used was gerrymandering. Are you aware of the argument that's 14 been made that the subordinated claim was dropped in there in 15 order to gerrymander a positive vote for the impaired class of 16 Class 9, I believe?

17 A In a word, I would say that's preposterous. The -- as I
18 said, we have a number of classes that will vote for the plan.
19 The plan is -- the plan is a monetization plan. And if -- if 20 the creditors determine that they don't want to pursue this 21 plan, we'll go forward with another -- we'll try to get 22 another plan. We tried to have a grand bargain plan. We 23 tried to have a pot plan, as I've testified previously. I'm 24 quite certain that I've done more work on that than anyone 25 else, including Mr. Dondero and anybody who works for him.

002089

62

1 And he hasn't been willing to do that.

2 This is a -- this is a plan that's come together. We
3 think it's going to be in the best interests of the estate.
4 That'll be confirmation next week. Or two weeks, I guess.
5 But I don't see how this is any way related -- this settlement
6 is not any way related to the voting on that -- on that -- on 7 that plan.

8 Q Just to put the finest point on it, is the Debtor relying 9 on Class 9 to be the impaired consenting class?

10 A No. I think -- I think what I've -- as I said, I believe
11 we already have the votes in Class -- I think it's 2 or 3, 7, 12 8, and -- and 9 will vote in favor as well. So that won't be 13 an issue.

14 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I have no further questions
15 of Mr. Seery.

16 THE COURT: All right. Pass the witness. I'll ask
17 HarbourVest counsel first: Do you have any questions of Mr.
18 Seery?

19 MS. WEISGERBER: No, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

21 What about cross-examination? Mr. Dondero's counsel?

22 CROSS-EXAMINATION

23 BY MR. WILSON:

24 Q Mr. Seery, how are you doing today?

25 A I'm well, thank you.

002090

1 Q I'm John Wilson, and I represent Jim Dondero. I have a
2 few questions for you today.

3 Now, the HarbourVest proof of claims were filed on April 4 8th, 2020; is that your recollection?

5 A I believe that's correct. I don't recall the specific 6 date.

7 Q Okay. And do you know when you first became aware of the 8 HarbourVest claims?

9 A I believe it was early in the summer when we filed the 10 omnibus objection. It may have been in late spring, shortly 11 after that. I don't recall the specific date of the filing.

12 Q And before the time of the filing of the omnibus
13 objection, did Highland educate itself regarding the 14 HarbourVest proof of claims?

15 A I'm sorry, could you say that again? I didn't quite 16 understand it.

17 Q Before the omnibus objection was filed, did HarbourVest --
18 I'm sorry, did Highland educate itself on the HarbourVest 19 proof of claims?

20 A Not especially, no.

21 Q Okay. And -- but at some point, Highland did investigate 22 those proofs of claim, correct?

23 A That's correct.

24 Q And when would you -- when do you recall that that 25 investigation began?

1 A I don't recall the date, but the triggering event was
2 HarbourVest's response to our omnibus objection.

3 Q Okay. And that would have been filed September 11th of 4 2020?

5 A I'll take your representation. I don't -- I don't recall 6 the specific date.

7 Q Okay. And so when you began to investigate the 8 HarbourVest claims, what was your initial reaction?

9 A My initial reaction was that the -- the larger claims that 10 they were asserting -- the fraud in the inducement, the RICO
11 -- that those claims were, in my view, attorney-made and that 12 when we dug in and did the work, we saw that HarbourVest 13 clearly lost north of $50 million on the investment. We had 14 just started to uncover the fee issue and saw the risk we had 15 there.

16 But I thought the bulk of those claims were attorney-made.
17 Clever, but attorney-made, as opposed to what I would think 18 are more legitimate. And so we started to develop our 19 defenses around that.

20 Q And was your initial reaction that the HarbourVest claims 21 were largely worthless?

22 A I think with respect to the claim around the fees, I 23 believed there was significant risk. With respect to the 24 other claims, I thought our defenses would make them
25 worthless, yes.

1 Q And did you ever represent to any party that the 2 HarbourVest claim was worth, at most, $5 million?

3 A I think I represented often, including to HarbourVest,
4 that it was worth nothing. I don't recall if I specifically
5 said $5 million. $5 million would have been a nominal amount 6 to -- which is litigation costs. So it may -- it may have 7 been in my models that I put in that as a settlement amount,
8 but I -- I thought that there were valid and good defenses to 9 those larger claims.

10 Q And you recognize that HarbourVest was a large,
11 sophisticated investor, correct?

12 A Yes. I think they manage north of -- right around a 13 hundred billion dollars.

14 Q And you recognize that HarbourVest routinely structured 15 complex customized investments, correct?

16 A I believe that -- I don't know the intricate part of their 17 businesses, but as a fund of funds who does creative 18 investments, I think that they do do quite a bit of that.
19 This, I believe, was their first investment in the CLO space.

20 Q And it was not -- or I should say, you did not believe 21 that HarbourVest was simply a passive investor in HCLOF,
22 correct?

23 A I don't think that that's true, no.

24 Q You don't -- you don't believe that you denied their claim
25 to be a passive investor?

1 A Oh, I think -- I'm sure that in defense of their claims I
2 would argue that they were -- they were more than a passive
3 investor. But it was pretty clear when you look at the 4 structure of what they invested that there was an intent that 5 they be passive on their part. They didn't take a majority
6 interest.

7 In fact, Highland made it clear in the structure of the 8 deal that they couldn't -- it would be hard for them to get a 9 majority interest because Highland entities would control that 10 and Dondero-controlled entities or individuals would control
11 the majority.

12 I think that they -- they had hoped to be a passive 13 investor.

14 Q But was it not your position that HarbourVest was actually 15 an active, involved investor?

16 A I think our defense was going to be that they knew exactly 17 what was going on, that they participated, that they were 18 active, and that, indeed, that they were in and around some of 19 the subsequent issues in the Acis case.

20 Q And you understood that HarbourVest played a material role
21 in the various outcomes in the Acis bankruptcy case, correct?

22 A I don't believe that to be correct, no.

23 Q Have you ever made that representation to anyone before?

24 A Not -- not that I recall.

25 Q Well, do you recall giving statements to a reporter named

1 Syed Khaderi?

2 A I've never spoken to a reporter named Syed Khaderi in my 3 life.

4 Q Well, did you participate in the preparation of statements
5 to be given to Syed Khaderi?

6 A I've never heard of Syed Khaderi, nor have I participated 7 in any preparation of statements. I don't know who that is.

8 MR. WILSON: All right. I'm going to have Bryan
9 Assink put on the screen a document.

10 And Bryan, can you go to Page 7? Bottom of -- the top of 11 Page 7. Well, actually, before you do that, go to the very 12 top of the document.

13 BY MR. WILSON:

14 Q Now, Mr. Seery, are you familiar with Lucy Bannon?

15 A Yes.

16 Q And who is Lucy Bannon?

17 A She is the Highland public relations person.

18 MR. WILSON: Okay. Now go back to Page 7.

19 BY MR. WILSON:

20 Q Now, do you -- do you see on your screen an email of 21 September 14th from Syed Khaderi that says, Hi, Lucy, how are 22 you?

23 A Yes.

24 Q Have you seen this email before?

25 A Not that I recall, no.

Seery - Cross

68

1 Q All right. It continues on that, I saw the filing on
2 Friday about HarbourVest claims against Highland for a CLO
3 investment, and I'm looking to put out a report tomorrow
4 morning London time. Ahead of that, I wanted to check if 5 Highland would like to comment on the matter.

6 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, this is -- the Debtor
7 respectfully objects. A, this document is not in evidence.
8 B, it's rank hearsay.

9 THE COURT: Response, Mr. Wilson?

10 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, I am attempting to 11 authenticate this document, but I'm using it in rebuttal to 12 the testimony that Mr. Seery just offered.

13 THE COURT: All right. I'll allow it. Overrule the 14 objection.

15 MR. WILSON: All right. Thank you, Your Honor.

16 BY MR. WILSON:

17 Q All right. Now, if we -- and oh, that September 14th 18 date, that was three days after the September 11th date that 19 we discussed was the date that HarbourVest filed its response
20 to the omnibus objection, correct?

21 A Yes. If that's the date that they filed it, then I -- if 22 you're representing that, I concede that the 14th is three 23 days after the 11th.

24 Q All right. And if you go back to the first page of this,
25 it looks like, on the following day, Lucy Bannon sends an 002096

1 email to you, and is that your email address,
2 jpseeryjr@gmail.com?

3 A That's correct, yes.

4 Q And do you recall receiving this email from Lucy Bannon?

5 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I renew my objection that
6 this is hearsay. He's not rebutting anything that Mr. Seery
7 testified to. He testified that he'd never heard of the 8 gentleman at the bottom of the document. There's nothing in 9 this document that rebuts Mr. Seery's testimony at all.

10 THE COURT: Response, Mr. Wilson?

11 MR. WILSON: Well, I'm not -- I'm not trying to rebut
12 his statement that he hadn't -- that he hadn't heard of Syed
13 Khaderi. My rebuttal is attempted to -- attempting to show
14 that he has made various statements that he denied.

15 THE COURT: I'll overrule the objection.

16 BY MR. WILSON:

17 Q All right. So, back to this exhibit, Mr. Seery. You
18 recall receiving this email from Lucy Bannon on Tuesday,
19 September 15, 2020?

20 A Not specifically. But to be clear, I recall talking to 21 Lucy Bannon about the HCMLP dispute with HarbourVest.

22 Q Okay. And --

23 MR. WILSON: Bryan, can you go down to the next page?
24 Scroll down to where -- the James Seery email.

25 BY MR. WILSON:

Seery - Cross

70

1 Q Do you see this email on your screen that's dated
2 September 15, 2020 at 10:33 p.m.?

3 A Yes, I do.

4 Q And do you recall sending this email to Lucy?

5 A Not specifically, no.

6 Q Well, do you deny that you sent this email to Lucy?

7 A It appears to be my email.

8 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, we would move to admit this 9 document into evidence as Dondero Exhibit Letter N.

10 THE COURT: Any objections?

11 MR. MORRIS: I would consent to the admission of Mr.
12 Seery's email, but the balance of it ought to be excluded as 13 hearsay.

14 THE COURT: What about that?

15 MR. WILSON: Well, Your Honor, I think that this 16 document -- and I'll get into this in a little more detail in 17 a second -- but I think this document is a combination of the 18 work product of Lucy Bannon and Mr. Seery in preparing a 19 response for the reporter who requested comment from Highland.

20 THE COURT: Okay. I --

21 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, um, --

22 THE COURT: Go ahead.

23 MR. MORRIS: I just -- I do question how they got 24 this document, but that's for another day. That's number one.
25 Number two, in addition to the hearsay argument, I just -- 002098

1 relevance grounds.

2 THE COURT: Okay. I'll allow the portion that is the 3 communication of Seery, that portion of Exhibit N. All right?

4 MR. WILSON: Okay. With due -- thank you, Your 5 Honor. With due respect, I -- to use that portion, I need to 6 refer to the portion below it, because he says, Good to submit 7 with your final edit/revisions. And so we need to know what 8 those final edit/revisions are, which are contained in the 9 email directly below that on the document that was four 10 minutes earlier in time.

11 THE COURT: All right. Fair enough. That'll be 12 allowed.

13 MR. WILSON: All right. Thank you, Your Honor.

14 (James Dondero's Exhibit N is received into evidence as 15 specified.)

16 MR. WILSON: So, Bryan, now can you scroll to the 17 next page? Oh, actually, let's just -- let's just stop at the 18 top -- at the bottom of the page. What's this statement?

19 BY MR. WILSON:

20 Q So, to be clear, Mr. Seery, when -- in response to Mr.
21 Khaderi's request for information and comment, you prepared 22 actually two responses, and one of those was a statement on 23 the record attributed to a spokesperson for HCMLP or something 24 along those lines. And then --

25 MR. WILSON: Can you scroll down to that next page?

1 BY MR. WILSON:

2 Q And this says -- I think part of this got cut off for some 3 reason, but it looks like the official statement is in 4 quotation marks. It says, "We dispute the allegations made in 5 the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid and 6 will be found to be without merit. Our focus continues to be 7 treating all valid claims in a transparent, orderly, and 8 equitable manner, and vigorously disputing meritless in the 9 court. That focus will assure that HCMLP's reorganization
10 process -- progress is towards an efficient and equitable 11 resolution."

12 And then below that there's another section of this email 13 that says, Background/Clarification, Not for Attribution. And 14 do you know the purpose of this second section of the 15 response?

16 A Do I know the purpose of that? Yes.

17 Q And what would that purpose be?

18 A Ms. Bannon was speaking on background to reporters. As I 19 said earlier, I've -- I never heard of the gentleman from 20 London. If he's at the bottom of the email, I didn't pay any 21 mind, never heard of him. Nor have I heard it since. Ms.
22 Bannon didn't ever reference the specific person.

23 But she is the public relations person. So, as I 24 testified earlier, she does communicate with the press. And 25 as I previously testified when Mr. Morris questioned me, one

1 of our tactics and our defenses for HarbourVest was going to 2 be that we were going to be very public and aggressive about
3 the investment and it would have a negative impact or negative
4 perspective for viewers, in our opinion, about HarbourVest's
5 investment.

6 Q All right. Well, look with me in the middle of that 7 paragraph right after the closed parenthetical, where it says,
8 "But it's important to note the background of HarbourVest's
9 active and deep involvement in the investment of which it now 10 complains."

11 And so it was your position that HarbourVest had an active 12 and deep involvement in the investment, correct?

13 A No. I don't think that's correct. Ms. Bannon prepared 14 the statement, it was a litigation defense on background, and 15 that's our -- that was our position for this purpose. It was 16 not my view that they were active and deeply involved. They 17 were certainly involved. There's no doubt about it. But they 18 got all their information, in our estimation and our research, 19 from Highland.

20 Q But in any event, you would agree with me that four 21 minutes after receiving this email, you approved this 22 statement to go out to the reporter, correct?

23 A No, that's not correct. That's -- this portion is on 24 background. That statement doesn't go out. The previous 25 statement was the official statement. This is the background

1 discussion that she would have. So, no, she was not
2 authorized in any way whatsoever to send that out. She was 3 authorized to have conversations with those general facts.

4 MR. WILSON: Okay. Bryan, go to the top, or the 5 bottom of the page immediately preceding that. That's it.
6 Yes, that's it right there.

7 BY MR. WILSON:

8 Q Now, you'll see that this email from Lucy Bannon on 9 September 15, 2020 at 10:29 p.m. starts off, "Jim, let me know
10 what you think of the below. And, again, the first would be 11 on the record and the second will be sent for information 12 purposes to ensure accuracy, not for attribution."

13 So the intent was that this -- that this entire statement
14 be sent to the reporter, correct?

15 A I don't believe that's correct. I think when she goes on 16 background she doesn't send them a written doc. It's got to 17 be clear to the reporter, at least my understanding is that 18 what on background means -- I've been involved with this 19 before -- is that typically that's done orally. I don't know 20 if she's done it in a written statement before. I have never 21 seen that done in a written statement before. You give the 22 official statement and then you walk the reporter through your 23 other views on background. And you're not quoted. And it's 24 usually attributed to a source with knowledge.

25 Q Okay. We'll come back to that in a minute. The next

1 sentence after the one I just read to you --

2 MR. WILSON: Go back to where we were on the
3 background.

4 BY MR. WILSON:

5 Q Now, we just read you the sentence that starts with, "Then
6 it's important." The following sentence says, "HarbourVest
7 was not simply invested in HCLOF as an ignorant,
8 unsophisticated, passive investor, but was an active and 9 informed participant in the inception of its investment
10 through all of the Acis bankruptcy proceedings, and 11 HarbourVest played a material role in various outcomes related 12 to that case and its impact on HCLOF."

13 And is it -- did you not just tell me before we 14 investigated this document that HarbourVest did not play a 15 material role in the various outcomes of the Acis bankruptcy?

16 A I don't know exactly what I said, but I think that's 17 correct, after we'd done the research on it, yeah.

18 Q But you took the position in this email that you approved
19 to go out to a reporter that says that -- that HarbourVest was 20 an active and informed participant in the inception of -- of 21 its investment through all of the Acis bankruptcy proceedings
22 and played a material role in various outcomes related to that 23 case and its impact on HCLOF. Can we agree with that?

24 A Yes.

25 Q And then the final sentence of this paragraph says that,

1 We believe that neither the facts nor the law support
2 HarbourVest's, quote, We-were-too-lazy-to-know allegations.

3 Whose words were those, "We-were-too-lazy-to-know
4 allegations"?

5 A I don't recall. They may be mine. It's aggressive the 6 way I am, so that -- that may well be the case.

7 MR. WILSON: All right. Go -- go down to the next
8 page.

9 BY MR. WILSON:

10 Q And with respect your comment that that second paragraph 11 would not have gone to the reporter, look at this email in the 12 middle of the page from Lucy Bannon to Syed Khaderi, September 13 16, 2020, at 1:51 a.m. And --

14 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, this I will object to as 15 hearsay. There is no witness here to testify to anything on 16 this document.

17 THE COURT: All right. How about that?

18 MR. WILSON: Well, it's -- well, scroll up just a 19 little bit. This email at the top of the page is three 20 minutes after the one in the middle of the page, where Lucy
21 Bannon is forwarding this to James Seery, saying, See below 22 for responses sent to Creditflux. Will follow up with the 23 story when it runs or with any other updates.

24 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, these --

25 MR. WILSON: So I think this --

1 MR. MORRIS: These documents don't appear on the 2 witness list. They're not being offered to impeach anything.
3 They're just -- he's taking discovery as we sit here.

4 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, in response, I'm simply 5 trying to rebut the statements that Mr. Seery made. In fact,
6 he told me just a minute ago that that second paragraph would 7 not have gone out to the reporter. However, this email from 8 Lucy Bannon to Syed Khaderi directly rebuts that statement.

9 THE COURT: But your whole purpose in this line of 10 questioning, with an undisclosed document, is to rebut the 11 earlier testimony he gave before you even put this exhibit in 12 front of him.

13 MR. WILSON: I'm trying to rebut multiple statements 14 that Mr. Seery has made today, and I think it -- you know, if 15 he's going to testify that this information did not go out to 16 a reporter, I think I'm allowed to rebut that to demonstrate 17 that it did.

18 THE COURT: All right. Why didn't you disclose this 19 in advance? It's feeling less and less like an impeachment 20 document the more we go through it.

21 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, I did not -- I did not 22 actually have this document at the time we filed our witness
23 and exhibit list, but I would also say that I didn't have any 24 purpose to use it if I didn't need it for rebuttal.

25 THE COURT: Okay. First off, you're supposed to

1 disclose all exhibits you anticipate using except those for 2 purposes of impeachment. Okay? Not rebuttal, to be 3 technical.

4 So, if you didn't disclose this exhibit, the only way you
5 can use it, subject to other possible objections, is if you're 6 impeaching a statement. And I'm just saying I think we're 7 going beyond trying to impeach the original statement and now
8 we're trying to impeach statements he's made after seeing 9 portions of the document.

10 What did you mean, you didn't have this document in time
11 to disclose it?

12 MR. WILSON: Well, I actually just received this 13 document this morning, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Where did you receive it from?

15 MR. MORRIS: From who?

16 MR. WILSON: I -- I honestly do not know the source
17 of this document, although it was provided to me by my client.

18 MR. MORRIS: Your client being Mr. Dondero?

19 THE COURT: Could you answer that, Mr. Wilson?

20 MR. WILSON: Yes, that's -- yes, that's correct.

21 THE COURT: All right. I will -- that's --

22 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I'd like to --

23 THE COURT: That's a different can of worms. But for 24 now, I sustain the objection. You're done questioning on this 25 document.

1 MR. WILSON: That's fine, Your Honor. I can move on.

2 BY MR. WILSON:

3 Q Now, Mr. Seery, you would agree with me that whether or 4 not HarbourVest played an active role in the Acis bankruptcy,
5 it was kept apprised of the -- of the ongoings in the 6 bankruptcy? (Pause.) I'm sorry. Could you hear that?

7 A Yes. My understanding is that -- that they were.

8 Q And in fact, did Highland have weekly conference calls
9 with HarbourVest during the Acis bankruptcy to discuss what 10 was going on in the bankruptcy?

11 A I don't know if they were weekly. I've been told that 12 they had regular calls updating HarbourVest, yes.

13 Q Okay. And did Highland produce over 40,000 pages of 14 documents to HarbourVest related to the Acis bankruptcy?

15 A I'm not aware of that, no.

16 Q Have those documents been provided to you?

17 A I hope not.

18 Q So, in your role --

19 A I'm sorry. I don't -- I didn't receive 40,000 documents 20 from anybody.

21 Q Well, did you receive any number of documents that were 22 provided by Highland to HarbourVest during the Acis
23 bankruptcy?

24 A I wasn't involved in this during the Acis bankruptcy. I'm 25 sorry.

1 Q Well, I'm referring to, after you became involved in this
2 Highland bankruptcy, whether you were provided with these 3 documents that were sent from Highland to HarbourVest.

4 A I don't -- I don't know what the documents are. I've 5 reviewed tons of documents with respect to the HarbourVest
6 claims, but I don't know of the documents to which you're 7 referring.

8 Q Okay. And after you performed your investigation into the 9 HarbourVest claim, what was your opinion as to the cause in 10 the reduction in value of HarbourVest's investment in HCLOF?

11 A I think the main cause of the reduction in the investment
12 was the imposition of the Trustee and the failure of Highland 13 HCLOF and then subsequently with the injunction to reset the 14 CLOs.

15 You know, these are -- these are some of the worst-16 performing CLOs in the market because they weren't reset. And 17 when the liabilities of the CLOs are set at a level to match 18 assets, and then liability -- the assets run off, and the 19 asset financings or the new deals come in at much lower 20 levels, and the obligations of the CLO are not reset, the 21 arbitrage that is the CLO shrinks. And that's what happened
22 to these CLOs.

23 Q And during the course of the Acis bankruptcy, Acis and 24 Brigade were given management responsibilities over the CLOs
25 and HCLOF, correct?

1 A I believe that the Trustee had the overall, and then
2 subsequently, with the confirmation of the plan, they took it
3 over. So I think that ultimately Mr. Terry had the management
4 authority, full management authority, and some advice through 5 Brigade. But I think technically it wasn't actually during 6 the Chapter 7. The Chapter 7 proceeding, I believe that Mr.
7 Phelan had the actual authority.

8 (Echoing.)

9 Q I'm sorry. And so your testimony is that Mr. Phelan had 10 the actual authority but he delegated that authority to Josh
11 Terry and Brigade?

12 A I think that's fair, yes.

13 Q And do you know when that occurred?

14 A I believe that the control of the CLOs was in July of 15 2018, and then the ultimate confirmation of the case was at 16 the very beginning of '19.

17 Q So, after being instituted as portfolio manager, and 18 during the time when Acis and Brigade were working under the 19 direction of the Trustee, who would have receive the fees for 20 managing those portfolios?

21 A I believe -- I don't know. I believe the -- that the Acis 22 estate would have received those fees.

23 Q And who -- and so is that your testimony, that prior to 24 confirmation the Acis estate would have received the 25 management fees?

1 A I believe that -- I believe they would have if they were 2 the manager, yeah.

3 Q Okay. And who would have received the fees after 4 confirmation?

5 A Acis.

6 Q Okay. And who would have had the discretion to set the 7 amount of those management fees?

8 A They would be agreed to in the -- in the investment
9 management agreement.

10 Q They would be agreed to?

11 A Yes. As far as I've seen, I've -- I haven't seen 12 unilateral ability of a manager to set fees at its -- at its 13 whim.

14 Q So is it your understanding that Acis and Brigade ended up
15 charging substantially more fees than Highland had charged
16 when it was under Highland's management?

17 A I think the fees were -- the fees were -- the fees were 18 set by the agreement.

19 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I just object to the line of 20 questioning on relevance grounds. This is a 9019 hearing,
21 Your Honor. How -- I just don't think this has any relevance 22 at all.

23 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Wilson, what is the 24 relevance?

25 MR. WILSON: The relevance is that Mr. Seery has

1 testified that these Acis CLOs were among the worst-performing
2 in the market, and frankly, we would agree with that, and I'm 3 trying to get his understanding as to why, because I think 4 there's direct relevance in the reason that the value of the 5 HarbourVest investment diminished.

6 MR. MORRIS: I don't think that was his testimony,
7 Your Honor. But at the end of the day, Your Honor has heard
8 the litany of reasons why the Debtor is entering into this 9 agreement. I just, I just think it's irrelevant, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Wilson, I barely think 11 this is relevant. I mean, I'm going to give you some benefit 12 of the doubt on that because of, you know, the testimony that 13 HarbourVest lost $50 million of value and --

14 (Echoing.)

15 THE COURT: -- maybe that shouldn't, you know, lie at 16 the feet of Highland. I think the compromise reflects that 17 they don't -- it doesn't lie entirely at the feet of Highland.
18 But, you know, maybe two or three more questions.

19 MR. WILSON: Yes. Thank you, Your Honor. And I
20 didn't have very much more on this point. But to be a hundred 21 percent honest, I can't remember my question right before the 22 objection.

23 THE WITNESS: I think you were asking me about the 24 fees and somehow alluding or implying that the manager could 25 unilaterally set fees.

1 The fees are set in the investment management contract.

2 The manager doesn't get to wake up on Wednesday and say, you
3 know, I'd like another half a basis point. It doesn't work
4 that way.

5 BY MR. WILSON:

6 Q But you would agree with me that the fees and expenses
7 charged to an investment would impact the performance of that 8 investment in the market?

9 A Absolutely.

10 Q Would you also agree with me that there was one CLO -- and 11 I think you referred to it in your direct testimony -- but CLO
12 7, which continued to be managed by Highland?

13 A That's correct.

14 Q And is it fair to say that CLO 7 exceeded the performance
15 of the CLOs that were managed by Acis and Brigade?

16 A I think that's fair. I don't -- I don't recall the 17 magnitude, but I think it's outperformed those -- those CLOs,
18 yes.

19 Q All right. Well, thank you. I want to turn your 20 attention to the portion of the settlement agreement that 21 deals with voting of the HarbourVest claim. How did 22 HarbourVest's commitment to vote for the plan become a part of 23 the settlement?

24 A Pretty straightforward negotiation. We -- in negotiating 25 the settlement, one of the key factors was the cost and

1 expense of the litigation, in addition to the risk on the --
2 on the fees, and whether we could wrap this up in a global 3 settlement now. So in my experience, it's fairly typical, we 4 would try to do this in every settlement, have the settling
5 party, be that the claimant, agree to support the case and the 6 plan.

7 You know, we did not do that with the Committee members,
8 although we wanted to. (Echoing) I frankly still wish I had.
9 Those little -- little bits that have been difficult 10 (echoing). The Committee members have a different interest in 11 (echoing) than their more global interest for creditors at 12 large, which is more difficult than traditionally in 13 bankruptcy cases, less likely to have a Committee member, a 14 sitting Committee member, actually support the (echoing) of 15 the plan.

16 THE COURT: Mr. Wilson, could you be careful to put 17 your device on mute every time you're not talking? Because 18 we're getting some feedback loop from you when Mr. Seery
19 answers your questions. Okay?

20 (Echoing continues.)

21 THE COURT: Like right now. I'm hearing feedback of 22 my own voice through your speakers.

23 Right, Mike? Isn't that what --

24 A VOICE: I am, too.

25 THE COURT: Yes. Okay. So please be sure you put

1 your device on mute whenever you are not speaking. All right.

2 Go ahead.

3 BY MR. WILSON:

4 Q I mean, I think you just answered this question, but there
5 was -- there was no similar voting provision in the Acis or 6 the Redeemer settlements, correct?

7 A There is not, no. And just as a -- by way of explanation,
8 if it's okay, the reason was my counsel advised against it. I
9 did ask for it.

10 Q Your counsel advised against putting that voting
11 requirement in the Acis and Redeemer settlements?

12 A For the reasons I stated. And in my experience, that's 13 consistent, where sitting members of Committees don't 14 generally sign up to resolve their own claims and support the 15 plan because of their larger fiduciary duties to the creditor
16 body as a whole.

17 Q And during the settlement negotiations of the HarbourVest
18 claim, was this commitment to vote a topic of discussion?

19 A Not -- not particularly, no. It was pretty clear that 20 HarbourVest, if they were going to agree to the settlement and 21 the numbers, could see structure. Obviously, it wanted to 22 understand what the potential distributions would be under the 23 plan, but this was not a hotly-negotiated point.

24 Q And would you consider HarbourVest's commitment to vote
25 for the plan an important part of the settlement?

1 A I think it's an important part of the settlement, that the 2 part of the settlement is the subordinated claim. We could
3 put that into presumably any plan. But our plan does -- does 4 have a Class 9 for that. So I think it's a -- it's a part of 5 the settlement that is important or we wouldn't have included
6 it. It clearly wraps everything up and moves us towards
7 confirmation.

8 Q And would you have made the deal with HarbourVest if they 9 had pushed back on the commitment to vote for the plan?

10 A Yeah, I would have.

11 Q All right. Thank you.

12 MR. WILSON: No further questions.

13 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Draper, anything from 14 you?

15 MR. DRAPER: Yes, Your Honor.

16 CROSS-EXAMINATION

17 BY MR. DRAPER:

18 Q Mr. Seery, I may not understand the settlement, and I 19 apologize, but the way I think the settlement reads, the 20 interest that you're acquiring, you have the right to place in 21 any entity. Is that my -- is that correct?

22 A I don't recall the -- the specifics, but just from a
23 structural standpoint, we wanted to be able to put it into a 24 subsidiary as opposed to putting it directly in HCMLP. If we 25 couldn't do that, we would -- we would put it into HCMLP. So

1 there wasn't a -- I don't recall the actual specifics, but we
2 certainly thought about holding that interest in a -- in a 3 subsidiary, just to have a cleaner hold.

4 Q Why aren't you putting it into the Debtor so the Court and 5 the estate have jurisdiction over that?

6 A I think the Court certainly has jurisdiction over an 7 entity that the estate owns a hundred percent of. I don't
8 think that's -- that's even a close call. So the important --

9 Q Now, --

10 A Can I finish?

11 Q Sure.

12 A You asked me why. To the extent that somebody thinks that 13 problematic, I will consent to the Court having complete 14 jurisdiction over it, since I control it a hundred percent.

15 Q No. The real reason is, if I remember correctly, Mr.
16 Dondero and Judge Lynn filed a motion to have some say or some 17 information as to sales by subsidiaries, and I think you took 18 the position that they weren't entitled to it. And so my 19 concern was that putting this in a subsidiary in a sense gave 20 you unfettered control without any review of the item.

21 A I don't -- I don't think that's the case where we -- 22 there's a directly-held subsidiary where we own a hundred 23 percent of it. I don't think that that's the case.

24 Q Okay. But you're willing to (a) put this into the Debtor,
25 number one; and number two, have the estate and have the Court

1 have complete control over the disposition of it and its
2 actions, correct?

3 A That's not correct, no.

4 Q What -- what is incorrect about my statement?

5 A The debtor-in-possession has control of its assets. The 6 Court doesn't have complete control over its assets. There's 7 --

8 Q Well, --

9 A -- issues -- hold on a second. This is not -- this is not 10 a game and a trap. We put it in a subsidiary for specific 11 reasons. You asked why. I'm giving you the why. It's not to 12 hide it from anybody. We're not going to sell the asset 13 unless somebody comes up with a great price for it. We're 14 going to monetize the assets. We're going to control HCLOF by 15 a majority.

16 Q But, again, the issue is, if it's in the estate, the Court
17 has supervision over it. If it's not in the estate, the Court
18 has no supervision of it.

19 A I don't think that's correct, because the Court has 20 supervision over the estate, which owns a hundred percent of 21 the special-purpose entity that will own the shares.

22 Q Okay. All right. Now, let's talk about the $15 million 23 that you discussed and the legal fees that were incurred. Is 24 that the total amount that was spent, or is -- or is that -- 25 was the total amount $30 million and HarbourVest was only

1 responsible for one half of it or functionally took the brunt
2 of one half of it?

3 A I think the total amount is between $15 and $20 million.
4 I don't have the exact numbers.

5 Q So, in fact, the HarbourVest loss due to its ownership
6 would have been one half of that, not $15 million?

7 A Well, the vehicle lost the money. HarbourVest owned 49.98
8 percent of it, and Highland controlled the rest. So if you
9 allocate it that way, I suppose that would be a -- that's how 10 you would divide it, in -- roughly in half, yes.

11 Q And so HarbourVest's actual dollar loss due to the legal 12 fees is really the 49-point-whatever percent of $15 million,
13 not $15 million?

14 A I don't know if -- I certainly would argue that. I don't 15 think that HarbourVest has that position.

16 Q Okay. Now, in connection -- you were asked a question
17 about the documentation that was provided by Highland to 18 HarbourVest both during the bankruptcy of Acis and before.
19 You have control over the Harbour -- over the Highland server,
20 correct?

21 A I'm sorry. Can -- can we do two things? One is, Mr.
22 Draper, I can't see you, so it would be better if I could see 23 you during the questioning.

24 Q Okay.

25 A And could you repeat the question?

1 Q All right. I'll be happy to. You were asked a question
2 about the documentation that was provided by Highland to 3 HarbourVest during the Acis bankruptcy and meetings that took 4 place between the parties. Correct?

5 A Yes.

6 Q And you stated you were unaware of the material that was 7 sent over?

8 A I think I testified that I didn't receive the 40,000
9 documents that were mentioned.

10 Q Did you do any search or order a search of the Highland 11 server to see what material was sent over by any party to 12 HarbourVest to analyze what -- what information they had 13 available to them and what was provided to them?

14 A Yes, we did a search.

15 Q And did you review the documentation that was sent over?

16 A The -- the documentation that we looked at was very 17 specific to the investment and to the OM. So we didn't look 18 for the -- the supposed 40,000 documents, no.

19 Q Did you look for the material that was provided to them
20 during the Acis bankruptcy and the periodic meetings that you
21 discussed? Or that you testified to earlier?

22 A The answer is no.

23 Q One last question. I think, and just so I understand your 24 testimony, you've broken out the HarbourVest claim into two 25 pieces. One is the legal fee amount that we've just

1 discussed, and I gather the other piece of that is the fraud
2 in the inducement to enter into the CLO purchase?

3 A It's -- it's more -- it's much more than that.

4 Q Okay. Well, let me say it in a different way. The other
5 part of it is the losses as a result of the fraud in the 6 inducement to purchase the interest?

7 A I don't think that's -- that's fair. If I could explain?

8 Q Sure.

9 A Yeah. The legal fee piece is pretty clear. The other
10 piece starts with fraud in the inducement, but it's extensive 11 fraud claims. Fraud in the inducement, as I testified 12 earlier, would get them around the exculpation and liability 13 limitations in the OM. You don't get around all of those with 14 just the fraud. And so that's -- that's the split of that 15 claim. So the fraud in the inducement contains fraud 16 allegations. Even if you didn't have inducement, you'd have 17 other potential fraud claims.

18 Q But let me state it in a different fashion. But for the 19 investment, the fraud that you allege wouldn't have occurred?

20 A I -- HarbourVest alleges it.

21 Q No, I'm just -- in your analysis of the claim, but for the 22 inducement, the rest of the damages wouldn't have flowed?

23 A That's HarbourVest's position, yes. But for the fraud,
24 they wouldn't have made the investment.

25 Q All right.

1 MR. DRAPER: I have nothing further for this witness.

2 THE COURT: All right. Any redirect, Mr. Morris?

3 MR. MORRIS: Just a few very questions, Your Honor.

4 Just a very few questions.

5 REDIRECT EXAMINATION

6 BY MR. MORRIS:

7 Q Mr. Seery, you were asked about that document that Lucy
8 prepared. Do you remember that?

9 A Yes, I do.

10 Q In your experience, don't defendants often deny liability
11 before entering into settlements, or even worse, getting 12 adverse judgments entered against them?

13 A Of course. Yes.

14 Q Okay. And in response to Mr. Draper's questions, isn't 15 the Guernsey claim another claim that the Debtor took into 16 account in assessing the potential risks of this settlement?

17 A There's a number of claims contained in it. As I
18 mentioned earlier, I mentioned the RICO claim. But there is a 19 Guernsey shadow director claim, which is not dissimilar to 20 U.S. claims that somebody effectively controls an enterprise,
21 notwithstanding them not having the official role.

22 Q Okay.

23 MR. MORRIS: I have nothing further, Your Honor.

24 THE COURT: All right. Any recross on that redirect?

25 All right.

1 MR. WILSON: No, Your Honor.

2 MR. DRAPER: No, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Thank you. Mr. Seery, that concludes
4 your testimony. Thank you.

5 THE WITNESS: Thank you, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: We need to take a bathroom break. Before
7 we do, I just want to be clear with what we have left. As I
8 understood it, we were having Mr. Pugatch from HarbourVest.
9 Mr. Morris, will that conclude the Debtor's evidence?
10 (Pause.) Okay. You were on mute, but I think you were saying
11 yes.

12 MR. MORRIS: Sorry. But to be clear, Debevoise is 13 going to be putting their witness on the stand.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. MORRIS: But it's part of the evidence in support
16 of the motion.

17 THE COURT: All right. Do the Objectors have any 18 witnesses today?

19 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, Mr. Dondero intends to 20 examine Mr. Pugatch, but if he's going to be called by his 21 counsel, then we will do that as a cross-examination.

22 THE COURT: All right.

23 MR. DRAPER: This is Douglas Draper. I have no
24 witnesses.

25 THE COURT: Okay. All right. Well, I'm asking --

002122

1 well, I do want to ask: Can we get a time estimate
2 potentially for Mr. Pugatch?

3 MS. WEISGERBER: For my examination, Your Honor,
4 twenty minutes, perhaps.

5 THE COURT: Okay.

6 MS. WEISGERBER: Or less.

7 THE COURT: All right. Well, let me tell you what
8 we're going to do. We're going to take a ten-minute bathroom
9 break. But I have a 1:30 hearing and I have a 2:00 o'clock.
10 Well, I have a 1:30 docket, multiple matters, and a 2:00
11 o'clock docket. So, you know, I'm really intending that we 12 get finished in time to give me and my staff a little bit of a 13 lunch break before launching into the 1:30 docket, so I'm 14 hopeful we can get done around 1:00-ish. If we can't, then 15 we're going to have to reconvene, I'm going to say probably 16 3:00-ish Central time. So let's hope we can get through 17 everything. All right? Ten-minute break.

18 THE CLERK: All rise.

19 (A recess ensued from 11:58 a.m. until 12:08 p.m.)

20 THE CLERK: All rise.

21 THE COURT: All right. Please be seated. We're 22 going back on the record in the Highland matters. Do we have 23 everyone? It looks like we do. Ms. Weisgerber is going to 24 call the next witness; is that correct?

10 DIRECT EXAMINATION

11 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

12 Q Good morning. Can you please state your name for the 13 record?

14 A Sure. It's Michael Pugatch.

15 Q And where do you work, Mr. Pugatch?

16 A HarbourVest Partners.

17 Q And what is your title?

18 A I'm a managing director in our secondary investment
19 group.

20 Q Did HarbourVest file claims in the Highland bankruptcy, 21 Mr. Pugatch?

22 A We did, yes. Several claims, in fact.

23 Q What was the basis for those claims?

24 A Yeah. Among other things, fraudulent inducement based on 25 misrepresentations and omissions on the part of Highland in 002124

1 connection with our original investment, mismanagement at the
2 HCLOF level, including inappropriate fees that were charged
3 to investors, among a number of other items as well.

4 Q Can you explain what you mean by misrepresentations made
5 to HarbourVest by Highland?

6 A Yeah, sure. So, you know, based on a number of 7 statements that were made to us around the litigation
8 involving Mr. Terry, some of the intentions found, the 9 structural changes that came to light with respect to HCLOF
10 and our investment, as well as the fact that the arbitration 11 award specifically against Mr. Terry would have no impact or 12 implication on Highland's sale or business.

13 Q And can you explain what you mean by omissions made by 14 Highland to HarbourVest?

15 A Sure. So I would say, really, the implications behind 16 the structural changes that were made at the time of our 17 investment into HCLOF. Also, the intention, clear intentions
18 that Highland had to never, in fact, pay the arbitration 19 award that came to light during our due diligence period to 20 Mr. -- to Mr. Terry as part of the investment. And 21 ultimately the -- what Highland went about doing in terms of 22 stripping assets of Acis that led to the material value
23 declines and destruction of value that we've experienced 24 since our investment.

25 Q You mentioned a diligence period. Did HarbourVest

1 conduct diligence on the investment?

2 A We did. We conducted very detailed due diligence, as we
3 do for all of our investments. That diligence period lasted
4 several months ahead of our investment decision.

5 Q And did HarbourVest conduct that diligence by itself?

6 A No. So, in addition to internal investment professionals
7 at HarbourVest, we engage with outside advisors, both 8 consultants as well as legal advisors, in connection with 9 that due diligence.

10 Q And did Highland answer all of HarbourVest's questions
11 during that diligence period?

12 A They did. And they were numerous. But yes, they 13 answered all the questions that we had for them.

14 Q Was the Terry dispute part of HarbourVest's diligence?

15 A It was. That came up as one of the outstanding items of 16 litigation as part of our due diligence.

17 Q I'm going to ask my colleague to pull up on the screen an 18 exhibit that was on our exhibit list as Items -- Exhibits 34
19 and 35. It's an August 15, 2017 email from Brad Eden to 20 Dustin Willard. Mr. Pugatch, do you recognize this document?

21 A I do, yes.

22 Q And what is it?

23 A This was an email sent to us during our due diligence 24 period in response to a request for more information on the 25 outstanding litigation that Highland was involved with.

Pugatch - Direct

99

1 MS. WEISGERBER: And if my colleague can just scroll
2 to the attachment to that email.

3 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

4 Q And do you recall the attachment as well, Mr. Pugatch?

5 A Yes, I do.

6 MS. WEISGERBER: And if you can scroll back up to the 7 first email.

8 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

9 Q Who is Dustin Willard?

10 A Yes. Dustin is a colleague of mine at HarbourVest who 11 worked closely with me on this investment.

12 Q And you said that this document was shared with 13 HarbourVest during the diligence period before the HCLOF
14 investment?

15 A It was, correct.

16 Q Is it typical during diligence to receive a description
17 of litigation such as this?

18 A It is. It's a question that we always ask. Certainly a 19 component of our diligence to understand any outstanding 20 litigation on the part of our counterparty or manager that 21 we're investing in.

22 MS. WEISGERBER: Your Honor, I'd move to offer this 23 exhibit into evidence.

24 THE COURT: Any objection?

25 MR. DRAPER: No objection, Your Honor.

3 THE COURT: All right. What is the letter or number
4 for this exhibit?

5 MS. WEISGERBER: It's HarbourVest Exhibit 34.

6 THE COURT: All right. So HarbourVest Exhibit 34 is 7 admitted.

8 (HarbourVest's Exhibit 34 is received into evidence.)

9 THE COURT: And I need to be clear where it appears
10 on the docket. Can someone tell me?

11 MS. WEISGERBER: So, it's identified on our exhibit 12 list, not -- it's not attached to the exhibits. It is on the 13 docket. We were -- when we initially filed the exhibit list, 14 we were working out confidentiality issues. But it was 15 subsequently filed with our reply last night. It's at Docket
16 No. 1735 --

17 THE COURT: All right.

18 MS. WEISGERBER: -- at Pages A -- Pages A345 to A350.

19 THE COURT: All right. Very well. Thank you.

20 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

21 Q Mr. Pugatch, we'll just scroll down to the second page of 22 the attachment. Can you describe generally what the 23 litigation says regarding the Terry dispute?

24 A Yes. Generally speaking, this dispute was described as 25 an employee dispute, employment agreement dispute, with Mr.

002128

Pugatch - Direct

101

1 Terry, who was a former employee of Highland involved in
2 their CLO business, and is described by Highland to us really
3 having to do with a series of false claims, in their opinion,
4 but having to do with a disgruntled former employee.

5 Q And did it strike you as an unusual or significant 6 dispute?

7 A No. I would say we often -- we'll see, you know, former 8 employees with, you know, claims against a former employer in 9 connection with wrongful termination. I wouldn't say it's 10 extremely common, but certainly not entirely out of the 11 ordinary. And based on the explanations that we'd received 12 from Highland, seemed to be more of an ordinary-course type 13 former employee litigation suit.

14 Q Based on what you now know about the Terry dispute, do 15 you believe that this was an adequate disclosure regarding 16 the dispute?

17 A I would say very clearly not, you know, based on the 18 facts that came to light subsequently, the various rulings in 19 connection with the Acis bankruptcy case. What was very 20 clearly not stated are the actual facts and implications of 21 the ongoing litigation with Mr. Terry.

22 MS. WEISGERBER: I'd ask my colleague to put up the 23 next exhibit. Okay. So, this is on a HarbourVest exhibit 24 list, which is Document No. 1723. It's Exhibit 36 on that.
25 Same issue with respect to initially not filed, but it is on

5 THE COURT: A351. Thank you.

6 MS. WEISGERBER: You're welcome.

8 Q Mr. Pugatch, I just put up a November 29, 2017 email from 9 Hunter Covitz to Dustin Willard, Michael Pugatch, and Nick
10 Bellisario. Do you recall this document?

11 A I do, yes.

12 Q And what is this document?

13 A This was an email sent to us by Highland a couple weeks 14 after we closed on our investment on the (inaudible) in 15 response to a Wall Street Journal article that had come out
16 regarding Highland, a number of actions that they had taken,
17 and what Highland was articulating to us, a number of false
18 claims that had been made about Highland's prior actions, and 19 specifically trying to explain some of that and also share
20 with HarbourVest a letter that was being sent to the editor
21 of the Wall Street Journal highlighting, in their view, some 22 of the inaccuracies around the reporting.

23 Q And did you receive this document?

24 A We did, yes.

25 MS. WEISGERBER: I'd move to offer this, so

002130

2 THE COURT: Any objections?

3 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, John Wilson. I would object
4 as to the relevance of this document.

5 THE COURT: All right. What's your response?

6 MS. WEISGERBER: Your Honor, it shows
7 misrepresentations that the witness will testify how it
8 relates back to prior representations prior to HarbourVest's 9 investment, as well as misrepresentations at that time.

10 THE COURT: Okay. I overrule the objection. I'm 11 going to admit it.

12 (HarbourVest's Exhibit 36 is received into evidence.)

13 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

14 Q Mr. Pugatch, can you describe generally -- we spoke about 15 this a little bit -- just what this communication from 16 Highland was conveying to HarbourVest at the time?

17 A Yes. Specifically, again, responding to this Wall Street
18 Journal article that had been published, trying to defend,
19 again, Highland's own views why there were inaccuracies in 20 the reporting. But importantly, from our perspective, trying 21 to reassure us as to the fact that, you know, these 22 accusations would have no bearing and any results from it
23 would have no bearing on their ongoing business or 24 partnership or the investment that we had made in HCLOF.

25 MS. WEISGERBER: And if you can scroll to the second

1 page.

2 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

3 Q We'll just look at the last paragraph of another email
4 from Mr. Covitz. Can you just read that first sentence of 5 the last paragraph?

6 A Sure. (reading) While the dispute has no impact on our 7 investment activities, as always, we welcome any questions
8 you may have.

9 Q Mr. Pugatch, was this email and the discussion regarding 10 the Terry dispute consistent with the representations made to 11 you prior to HarbourVest's investment into HCLOF?

12 A It was, yes. Both the message, the lack of any impact
13 that ultimately the dispute with Mr. Terry, the arbitration 14 award would have around Highland's ongoing CLO business, or 15 HCLOF specifically, was all, you know, very clear in this 16 document, but all consistent with the representations that 17 had been made to us leading up to our investment in the 18 middle of November 2017 as well.

19 Q Thank you.

20 MS. WEISGERBER: And you can take down the exhibit, 21 Emily. Thank you.

22 BY MS. WEISGERBER:

23 Q You mentioned, Mr. Pugatch, an arbitration award to Mr.
24 Terry. How did you learn about that arbitration award?

25 A That was initially disclosed to us by Highland as we were

1 in the late stages of our diligence and closing process on
2 the investment into HCLOF.

3 Q And generally, what did Highland tell you about the 4 arbitration award?

5 A We were aware of its existence. We were aware of the 6 quantum of the award, I think it was around an $8 million
7 arbitration award in the favor of Mr. Terry, and that was 8 following the litigation around the wrongful termination and 9 employee dispute that Highland had described to us
10 previously.

11 Q Did you ask to see a copy of the arbitration award?

12 A No, we did not.

13 Q Why not?

14 A Ultimately, we -- you know, the explanations that 15 Highland had provided to us all seemed very reasonable. We 16 relied on their representations that this was, again, nothing
17 more than a dispute with a former disgruntled employee, in 18 their words, that had no bearing or, you know, would not have 19 any bearing on our investment in HCLOF or their ongoing CLO
20 business, which all very clearly was not the case, as 21 we've -- as we've learned over the last several years.

22 Q Following learning about the arbitration award, did
23 HarbourVest do other diligence?

24 A We did. So, in addition to asking questions related to 25 the arbitration award and any impact that it would have, we

1 also spent some time diligencing a couple of structural
2 changes that were proposed by Highland, and, in fact, ended
3 up delaying the closing of our investment by about two weeks
4 as we vetted some of those structural changes that Highland 5 had proposed. Vetted those both, you know, internally with 6 Highland directly and with external counsel in order to make
7 sure that those structural changes were in fact legally sound
8 in ultimately making our investment.

9 Q And were those changes proposed following the arbitration
10 award?

11 A They were, yes.

12 Q Did Highland tell you the reason for the structural 13 changes?

14 A Yeah. So, so some of this -- and specifically, this 15 involved a change of the portfolio manager at the HCLOF level
16 that was really in connection with a rebranding as Highland 17 was going through a rebuild of its CLO business and wanting 18 to align, from a brand perspective, their business on an 19 ongoing basis with the Highland brand as opposed to the Acis
20 brand. But more specifically, in the case of a late change
21 from a structured standpoint, the -- part of the intention
22 and the investment thesis of HCLOF was to pursue a reset, a 23 refinancing of all the underlying CLOs as they approached the 24 end of their investment period or came out of their 25 investment period.

1 And in connection with that, in light of the arbitration
2 award, Highland's view was that there may be difficulties in 3 the market in resetting certain of those Acis CLOs with the 4 Acis brand associated with them, given, again, the existence
5 of the arbitration award and concerns in the market around
6 the Acis brand reputation.

7 Q And what did they tell you was the market view of Acis,
8 or the Acis brand?

9 A Yeah. Their view or their concern was that the, you 10 know, because of the existence of that arbitration award, the 11 brand would be viewed as toxic.

12 Q Didn't this put you on notice that perhaps there was 13 something wrong with the structural changes?

14 A I mean, we -- I mean, short answer, no. We ultimately 15 asked questions, we diligenced the legal structure, but 16 relied on the representations that were made to us by 17 Highland around the rationale for the structural changes,
18 that these are all changes that were within a Highland-19 managed vehicle or sat below the vehicle that we were 20 investing in, and so ultimately were in Highland's purview, 21 was the representations that we relied on.

22 Q And did HarbourVest alone do that diligence of the 23 structural changes?

24 A So, no. I mean, in connection with the diligence that we 25 did internally and with Highland directly, we engaged with

1 outside counsel who was working with us at the time to vet
2 those structural changes as well.

3 Q Did HarbourVest rely on Highland's representations 4 regarding the arbitration award and the structural changes in 5 making its investment in HCLOF?

6 A We did, absolutely.

7 Q If Highland had disclosed the nature of the structural 8 changes, of removing Acis as the portfolio manager and 9 related transfers, would HarbourVest have proceeded with its 10 investment?

11 A Definitively, no, we would not have.

12 Q Why not?

13 A I think the reality is if we had understood the intent, 14 you know, that Highland was ultimately undertaking here, we 15 would not have wanted to be any part of this, and certainly 16 getting dragged into all of this, the hassle, the value
17 destruction that we've seen on behalf of the investors and 18 the funds that we manage. And I would say, lastly, we just 19 full stop would not have done business with a firm who 20 engages with this type of behavior, had we actually known the 21 truth.

22 Q Mr. Pugatch, are you familiar with the bankruptcy that 23 followed of Acis?

24 A Yes.

25 Q And what was your -- or, did HarbourVest participate in

1 that bankruptcy?

2 A So, initially, no. Subsequently, we ended up getting 3 dragged into that on account of a number of misstatements by 4 Highland about the role that HarbourVest had played as part 5 of our investment into HCLOF and some of that structure and 6 the structural changes that I alluded to.

7 Q How did HarbourVest learn about those misstatements in 8 the bankruptcy about HarbourVest's role?

9 A So, ultimately, those came to light on -- you know, on 10 account of the ongoing proceedings within the Acis bankruptcy
11 process, and specifically brought to light to us by the Acis
12 trustee at the time, who decided to pursue, you know, further 13 diligence or discovery around the claims that Highland had 14 made around HarbourVest's involvement in those changes.

15 Q And what is your understanding of what the allegations
16 were that caused the Acis trustee to investigate HarbourVest?

17 A Sure. So, you know, our understanding was that Highland 18 had made statements, again, false statements that HarbourVest
19 had actually instructed some of those structural changes,
20 that we were the ones that had said that we would not do
21 business with Acis and had ordered some of the underlying 22 transfer of assets or, again, structural changes, that, you 23 know, very clearly I would say were not the case. Also, that 24 HarbourVest was -- was calling the shots as it relates to any 25 of the ongoing management or future resets of the CLOs.

Pugatch - Direct

110

1 Q Did HarbourVest instruct any of those structural changes
2 or transfers to occur?

3 A We did not. Absolutely not.

4 Q Why didn't HarbourVest itself appear in the Acis
5 bankruptcy and file a claim?

6 A Yeah. HarbourVest's role, again, in HCLOF, we were a
7 passive investor in a Highland-managed company. We had no
8 direct interaction with or relationship with Acis. There was 9 really no reason for us to be directly involved until we were 10 subsequently dragged into involvement on account of those 11 misstatements. And then at that point our focus really 12 pivoted to, you know, whether we needed to defend ourselves
13 against those accusations that had been made by Highland and 14 after a request for further information in discovery by the 15 Acis trustee.

16 Q Did HCLOF participate in the Acis bankruptcy?

17 A They did, yes.

18 Q Did HCLOF incur fees for participating in the Acis
19 bankruptcy?

20 A Yes. In fact, very meaningful fees, to the tune of well 21 in excess of $15 million of legal fees, as we understand it, 22 that have been incurred, largely in connection with the 23 ongoing Acis bankruptcy and Highland's continued pursuit of 24 and in connection with the litigation with Mr. Terry, which 25 we firmly believe was entirely inappropriate that HCLOF and 002138

Pugatch - Direct

111

1 ultimately investors in HCLOF bear those expenses, which were 2 not just expenses of HCLOF but of Highland and a number of 3 other Highland affiliates.

4 Q Do those expenses form a basis of separate claims filed
5 by HarbourVest against Highland?

6 A They do, yes. One of the multiple claims that we had 7 filed against Highland.

8 Q And a few more questions, just for the record, Mr.
9 Pugatch. How much did HarbourVest initially invest in HCLOF?

10 A Sure. So, our initial investment in November of 2017 was 11 right about $73-1/2 million, I believe.

12 Q Did HarbourVest invest any additional money in HCLOF?

13 A We did. There was a subsequent capital call investment 14 of about $5 million, bringing our total investment to just 15 under $80 million in aggregate.

16 Q When HarbourVest initially made the investment, did it 17 anticipate making a profit on it?

18 A We did, yes.

19 Q How much did HarbourVest anticipate earning from the 20 investment?

21 A Yeah. So, our -- based on the original $73-1/2 million
22 investment, we had expected a total return of about $137
23 million on that -- on that investment.

24 Q What was that projection based on?

25 A So, that projection was based on materials that we had 002139

Pugatch - Direct

112

1 received from Highland, their internal projection models on 2 the future performance of the underlying CLOs that we were 3 acquiring exposure to through our investment in HCLOF, and 4 was one of the inputs or formed the basis in connection with 5 our diligence that we ultimately ran different sensitivities
6 -- projections around and helped employ -- helped inform our 7 investment thesis.

8 Q Do you know the current value of HarbourVest's investment
9 in HCLOF?

10 A Yes. The current value is right around $22-1/2 million.

11 Q So roughly how much has the investment itself decreased
12 from HarbourVest's initial investment?

13 A So, net of what was about $4-1/2 million of distributions 14 that we received early on in the investment, we've lost, to 15 date, in excess of $50 million on our original investment.

16 Q And just for -- to close out, Mr. Pugatch, knowing all 17 that you know, if HarbourVest had known that -- about the 18 nature of the transfers by Acis or Highland's intent with 19 respect to the arbitration award, would HarbourVest have made 20 this investment?

21 A No. The reality is, had we known the truth, or even had 22 a sense of the truth, the true intentions behind some of 23 those transfers and ultimately what would have happened, we 24 never would have made this investment, full stop.

25 Q Thank you, Mr. Pugatch.

113

1 THE COURT: All right. I didn't hear you, Ms.
2 Weisgerber. Do you pass the witness?

3 MS. WEISGERBER: Yes, I pass the witness.

4 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

5 Mr. Morris, any examination from you?

6 MR. MORRIS: No, thank you, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: All right.

8 (Interruption.)

9 THE COURT: All right. I'm not sure whose voice that 10 was, but please, again, mute your devices when you're not 11 talking.

12 Any cross-examination of Mr. Pugatch? I'll start with 13 you, Mr. Wilson.

14 MR. WILSON: Yes, Your Honor.

15 THE COURT: Okay.

16 CROSS-EXAMINATION

17 BY MR. WILSON:

18 Q How are you -- I guess we're afternoon now. How are you 19 this afternoon, Mr. Pugatch?

20 A I'm doing well. Yourself?

21 Q I'm doing well as well. Do you recall that on Monday of 22 this week I took your deposition?

23 A Yes, I do.

24 Q And so you understand that my name is John Wilson and I
25 represent Jim Dondero, who has filed an objection to the 9019

002141

1 motion filed by the Debtor?

2 I've got a few questions for you today. Has HarbourVest
3 been around for over 35 years?

4 A We have, yes.

5 Q And does HarbourVest have ten offices around the world?

6 A Correct, yes.

7 Q And does HarbourVest employ over 150 investment
8 professionals?

9 A Yes.

10 Q Does HarbourVest have over $74 billion in assets under 11 management?

12 A Correct, yes.

13 Q And is HarbourVest's client base largely comprised of 14 institutional investors?

15 A Also correct.

16 Q And you would agree with me that HarbourVest is a 17 sophisticated investor, right?

18 A I would, yes.

19 Q How long have you worked for HarbourVest?

20 A I've been employed by HarbourVest for 17 years now.

21 Q And how long have you been a managing director?

22 A I've been a managing director for approximately six 23 years.

24 Q And you were, in fact, the managing director for the 25 investment that HarbourVest made in Highland CLO Funding,

1 Ltd., which has been referred to today as HCLOF, correct?

2 A I was, correct.

3 Q And HarbourVest, I think you just testified, invested
4 approximately $73 million as its initial investment in HCLOF?

5 A Yes, correct.

6 Q And before HarbourVest made that investment, it had made
7 many investments of this type, correct?

8 A Yeah. We've made hundreds of investments into 9 partnerships over our history, correct.

10 Q So HarbourVest was well-experienced in evaluating and 11 deciding whether to invest in large investments, correct?

12 A It was, yes.

13 Q Now, in your -- and by your, I mean HarbourVest -- in the 14 response to the Debtor's omnibus objection, it says that by 15 summer 2017 HarbourVest was engaged in preliminary 16 discussions with Highland regarding the investment. Is that 17 a correct statement?

18 A Correct, yes.

19 Q And, in fact, those talks began in the second quarter of 20 2017, correct?

21 A Yes.

22 Q And so the investment closed ultimately on November 15th, 23 2017?

24 A Yes, that's correct.

25 Q So it's fair to say that HarbourVest considered and

1 evaluated this transaction for over six months before
2 investing its $73 million, right?

3 A From the time of the initial conversations that we had 4 with Highland, yes.

5 Q And one of the reasons that it took over six months to 6 complete the investment is that HarbourVest performs due
7 diligence before it makes an investment, correct?

8 A Correct.

9 Q And when you're performing due diligence -- well, first 10 off, you would agree with me that that's a common practice
11 amongst sophisticated investors such as HarbourVest, correct?

12 A To perform due diligence?

13 Q Yes.

14 A Yes.

15 Q And describe -- describe what HarbourVest does in a 16 general sense when it performs its due diligence.

17 A Sure. So, we spend time with the manager -- in this 18 case, Highland -- certainly around the investment thesis, the 19 opportunity, receive materials around the underlying assets.
20 We take that and perform our own independent due diligence
21 around the value of those assets, perform due diligence on 22 the manager itself, the go-forward opportunity. In many 23 cases, and certainly in this case, engage with outside 24 advisors to assist with that due diligence. It's a very 25 robust and thorough process.

1 Q And by outside advisors, are you referring to the outside
2 counsel that you testified about earlier?

3 A Yes. Both outside counsel and outside consultants.

4 Q Okay. And so did you say that it's typical to engage 5 outside counsel when performing due diligence?

6 A Yes.

7 Q And which outside counsel did you retain with respect to 8 this due diligence?

9 A Debevoise and Plimpton as well as Milbank.

10 Q And during the course of HarbourVest's due diligence, did 11 it identify some items of concern?

12 A As with any investment, there are always items that are 13 identified that require further diligence, risks that are 14 identified that we look to mitigate through our due 15 diligence, et cetera.

16 Q And if Harbour -- I'm sorry, did you say something else?

17 A No.

18 Q You were finished? Okay. Now, if HarbourVest identifies 19 an item of concern, is it typical to request additional 20 information regarding those items of concern?

21 A It is, yes.

22 Q And so that actually happened with respect to the HCLOF
23 investment, correct?

24 A In certain cases, yes.

25 Q HarbourVest identified several litigation matters that it

1 had questions about, correct?

2 A Correct. As we would with any investment.

3 Q And it went back to Highland and asked them to explain
4 their position on those litigation matters?

5 A Correct.

6 Q And one of those litigation matters was the Joshua Terry
7 litigation, correct?

8 A Yes.

9 Q And at the time that HarbourVest was considering this 10 investment, beginning in the second quarter and continuing 11 through the summer, that Josh Terry litigation had not 12 resulted in an award or a final judgment, correct?

13 A Correct.

14 Q And I think we looked earlier at a document that your 15 counsel admitted as HarbourVest Exhibits 34 and 35. There 16 was an email from a HarbourVest -- or, I'm sorry, from a 17 Highland representative to a HarbourVest representative that 18 was discussing Highland's position on the litigation,
19 including the Terry litigation, correct?

20 A Are you referring to the document that we looked at 21 earlier?

22 Q I am. And I can put it on the screen if we need to.

23 A No. Right, I recall that, and yes, that's correct.

24 Q Okay. And just to be clear, that document, which stated 25 Highland's positions on the -- and summaries of the

1 litigation, was issued months before the arbitration award to 2 Josh Terry, correct?

3 A I don't remember the exact timing, but it was certainly
4 during our due diligence period and prior to the arbitration
5 award, yes.

6 Q Well, it seems to me that that email that you -- your 7 counsel admitted as an exhibit was issued in August of 2017.
8 Does that sound right to you?

9 A If that's what the email said, yes.

10 Q And if the Terry arbitration award came out in October,
11 then you would agree with me that that is several months 12 prior to the -- or at least two months prior to the 13 arbitration award?

14 A Yes.

15 Q And so when HarbourVest made requests of Highland to 16 provide information regarding its items of concern, Highland 17 complied with those requests, correct?

18 A It did, correct.

19 Q And was there ever a time when HarbourVest requested 20 Highland to provide information and that information was not 21 provided?

22 A Our requests for information, or at least, you know,
23 responses or color to a question, were always met either 24 with, you know, written or verbal communication back to us, 25 yeah.

1 Q And you would agree with me that, in fact, HarbourVest
2 delayed the closing of the investment by two weeks to 3 continue its due diligence, correct?

4 A Correct, related to the structural changes that were made
5 close to closing. That's right.

6 Q And after conducting that due diligence, HarbourVest
7 satisfied itself that the investment was sound?

8 A That the legal structure that had been put in place in 9 connection with those proposed changes by Highland was -- was 10 legally sound, yes, and on the back of, again, statements and 11 misrepresentations on the part of Highland around the nature
12 and potential impact to their ongoing CLO business and HCLOF.

13 MR. WILSON: Well, I'm going to object to the latter 14 part of your response as nonresponsive.

15 THE COURT: Sustained.

16 BY MR. WILSON:

17 Q Now, after you conducted the due diligence, HarbourVest
18 made the investment of $73 million on November 15th, 2017,
19 correct?

20 A Correct.

21 Q And so I think you testified earlier that prior to that 22 investment HarbourVest had become aware that that Josh Terry 23 litigation had resulted in an arbitration award, correct?

24 A Yes.

25 Q But I think you've also testified that HarbourVest did

1 not request that Highland provide a copy of the arbitration
2 award, correct?

3 A That's correct.

4 Q And you further testified that you were represented by 5 outside counsel at the time, correct?

6 A Correct.

7 Q And as of Monday of this week, you had not reviewed that 8 arbitration award; is that correct?

9 A That's correct.

10 Q Have you reviewed that arbitration award since Monday of 11 this week?

12 A I have not.

13 Q But in any event, you testified that Highland told you 14 about the award?

15 A Yes.

16 Q And they told you the amount of the award?

17 A Yes.

18 Q And then they told you that the award had been converted 19 to a judgment?

20 A When you say the award had been converted to a judgment,
21 can you be more specific?

22 Q Well, I don't know how familiar you are with the 23 litigation process, but in this instance, that award was 24 taken to a court and the court entered a judgment on the 25 arbitration award. Did you -- were you aware of that?

1 A I don't recall the specific legal terms of judgment
2 against it. I was award of the existence of the arbitration
3 award and the -- and the obligation for Highland to comply
4 with that arbitration award.

5 Q And HarbourVest did not make an appearance in the Acis
6 bankruptcy, right?

7 A We did not.

8 Q But you were aware of the Acis bankruptcy, correct?

9 A Yes.

10 Q And you were kept apprised of the Acis bankruptcy by 11 Highland individuals, correct?

12 A We had conversations with a couple of Highland 13 individuals throughout the Acis bankruptcy process, yes.

14 Q Right. And in fact, you testified that you participated 15 in regular conference calls with Highland regarding that 16 bankruptcy?

17 A That's correct, yes.

18 Q And do you recall having been provided with over 40,000
19 documents by Highland related to the Acis bankruptcy?

20 A I do not recall that, no.

21 Q Would those documents have been provided to your outside 22 counsel, had you received them?

23 A I don't know the answer to that.

24 Q Did the outside counsel that represented you in the due
25 diligence continue to represent you throughout the Acis

1 bankruptcy?

2 A They did. One of the counsels did, correct.

3 Q And which counsel was that?

4 A Debevoise.

5 Q So was your counsel actively involved with monitoring the 6 Acis bankruptcy?

7 A They were, yes, particularly after we were ultimately
8 accused of having something to do with the original structure
9 and -- as a result of misstatements by Highland.

10 Q Did your counsel attend hearings in the Acis bankruptcy?

11 A I don't recall.

12 Q Are you familiar with the PACER system?

13 A I am not.

14 Q Now, I think that HarbourVest has been described as a 15 passive investor. You recall that description of HarbourVest 16 in this instance?

17 A Yes.

18 Q But, in fact, HarbourVest invested substantial assets
19 such that it owned a 49.98 percent share of HCLOF. Would you 20 agree with that?

21 A That's correct.

22 Q And in fact, the next largest investor was CLO Holdco,
23 which owned 49.02 percent of the shares, correct?

24 A That sounds right.

25 Q And there was an advisory board that was created pursuant

1 to the formation documents of this investment, correct?

2 A That's correct.

3 Q And in fact, that advisory board only had two members,
4 and one was a representative of HarbourVest and one was a
5 representative of CLO Holdco, correct?

6 A Correct.

7 Q And the advisor -- I'm sorry, the portfolio manager was 8 not allowed to disregard the recommendations of the advisory 9 board, correct?

10 A With respect to the limited set of items that the 11 advisory board could opine on, that is correct.

12 Q All right. I want to go over a couple of the 13 misrepresentations that HarbourVest has identified in its 14 filings related to its claim. The first one is -- and just 15 for the record, I'm reading from Docket No. 1057 filed on 16 September 11, 2020, HarbourVest Response to Debtor's First 17 Omnibus Objection.

18 But the first misrepresentation identified in that 19 document says that Highland never informed HarbourVest that 20 Highland had no intention of paying the arbitration award.
21 And was -- was Highland obligated to pay the Josh Terry
22 arbitration award against Acis?

23 MR. MORRIS: Objection to the question to the extent
24 it calls for a legal conclusion.

25 THE COURT: Sustained.

1 MS. WEISGERBER: Join in that objection.

2 THE COURT: Sustained. I think --

3 BY MR. WILSON:

4 Q Your understanding was --

5 MR. WILSON: I'm sorry, Judge?

6 THE COURT: I sustained the objection as calling for 7 a legal conclusion. So, next question.

8 MR. WILSON: Yes, I -- I heard that. Thank you, Your 9 Honor.

10 BY MR. WILSON:

11 Q In your understanding, was Highland responsible for 12 paying the arbitration award to Josh Terry?

13 A My understanding is on the account of the fact that Acis 14 --

15 MS. WEISGERBER: Objection, Your Honor. Objection,
16 Your Honor, same basis.

17 THE COURT: Sustained. It was essentially the same 18 question.

19 MR. WILSON: Well, Your Honor, I didn't ask --

20 THE COURT: It was essentially the same question, Mr.
21 Wilson. Move on.

22 MR. WILSON: Okay.

23 BY MR. WILSON:

24 Q The next misrepresentation identified by HarbourVest said
25 that Highland did not inform HarbourVest that it undertook

1 the transfers to siphon assets away from Acis, LP and that 2 such transfers would prevent Mr. Terry from collecting on the 3 arbitration award. So the basis for that allegation would be 4 that Highland was siphoning assets from Acis to avoid having 5 Acis pay the arbitration award, correct?

6 A That -- that would be the implication, yes.

7 Q Okay. And then that misrepresentation continues on and 8 says that Highland represented to HarbourVest that it was 9 changing the portfolio manager because Acis was toxic. And 10 do you recall that representation being made to you?

11 A Yes, I do.

12 Q And would you agree with me that whether or not Acis is 13 toxic in the industry would be an opinion?

14 A I suppose it would be an opinion, but by the manager of 15 the vehicle responsible for managing the HCLOF investment and 16 the underlying CLOs. Yeah, we viewed the Acis name and the 17 Highland name as synonymous, if you will. I mean, Acis was a 18 subsidiary of Highland. For all intents and purposes, it was 19 the same from our perspective as we made the investment into 20 HCLOF.

21 Q So did HarbourVest have an independent understanding of 22 whether or not the Acis name was toxic in the industry?

23 A We did not, no. We relied on Highland's views of that as 24 manager of HCLOF.

25 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, just a brief housekeeping

1 item. Did you say that we need to be done at 1:00 o'clock?

2 THE COURT: Well, I said I really wanted you to be
3 done by 1:00 o'clock because I have a 1:30 docket and a 2:00
4 o'clock docket and I'd rather not have to hang up 70-
5 something people and reconnect them again at 3:00 o'clock.
6 How close are you to being finished?

7 MR. WILSON: Well, --

8 THE COURT: This is going at a very slow pace.

9 MR. WILSON: Well, I apologize for that, Your Honor.
10 I think I've got at least ten more minutes, but -- but I know 11 we also have closing remarks. And I was just going to ask if 12 Your Honor had a preference of --

13 THE COURT: Keep going.

14 MR. WILSON: -- of breaking now --

15 THE COURT: Keep -- let's --

16 MR. WILSON: -- or keep going? Okay.

17 THE COURT: Let's talk fast and try to get through.
18 You know, even if I'm sacrificing lunch today, I don't want 19 to inconvenience 75 people this way. So we'll just probably 20 start our 1:30 hearing a little late and inconvenience those 21 people.

22 All right. Go ahead.

23 MR. WILSON: All right. Thank you, Your Honor.

24 BY MR. WILSON:

25 Q Did Acis form its -- I can't recall if you answered this

1 question, but did Acis form its own opinion on whether or not
2 -- I'm sorry, strike that. Did HarbourVest form its own
3 opinion on whether or not the Acis name was toxic in the 4 industry?

5 MS. WEISGERBER: Objection, --

6 THE WITNESS: We did not. We didn't have a basis.

7 THE COURT: I'm sorry, did I have an objection?

8 BY MR. WILSON:

9 Q You did not --

10 THE COURT: Did I have an objection?

11 MS. WEISGERBER: Yeah. Objection. Yes. Objection,
12 asked and answered, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Overruled. He can answer.

14 BY MR. WILSON:

15 Q Okay. But --

16 A We did not.

17 Q Did Highland have the ability to investigate the Acis 18 name and make its own determination of whether that name was 19 toxic? I'm sorry, I think I'm misspeaking. HarbourVest.

20 A HarbourVest had the ability to do that, yes.

21 Q I apologize I misspoke. I meant HarbourVest. Did 22 HarbourVest have the ability to investigate that name and 23 determine if it was toxic?

24 A It was irrelevant to our investment thesis. And as I
25 said before, Acis was a subsidiary of Highland. We viewed

1 them as interchangeable in the context of our investment.

2 Q Okay. The next misrepresentation that you refer to says
3 that Highland indicated to HarbourVest that the dispute with 4 Mr. Terry would have no impact on its investment activities.
5 Would you agree with me that that is also an opinion?

6 A It was a statement that --

7 MS. WEISGERBER: Your Honor, I'm going to object to 8 the extent these questions are seeking a legal conclusion
9 regarding, you know, if something's an opinion or not.

10 THE COURT: Okay. Overruled. He can answer.

11 THE WITNESS: It was -- it was a statement that was 12 made to us by Highland and represented in multiple different 13 formats as fact. And a representation that we relied on in 14 connection with our investment.

15 BY MR. WILSON:

16 Q And finally, the misrepresentation, the last 17 misrepresentation identified, is that Highland expressed 18 confidence in the ability of HCLOF to reset or redeem the 19 CLOs. Would you agree with me that that statement is an 20 opinion?

21 A On the basis that it was the core investment thesis of 22 the -- of the investment of HCLOF. Again, whether that's 23 legally viewed as an opinion or a fact, it was -- it was 24 certainly the investment thesis that we made the investment 25 predicated upon.

1 Q And you just testified that you thought that Acis and 2 Highland were interchangeable from the perspective of the 3 investment opportunity, correct?

4 A Correct.

5 Q But you also accepted Highland's recommendation because 6 HarbourVest agreed that the change in the -- to a Highland 7 manager made commercial sense, correct?

8 A We took at face value what Highland recommended because 9 this all had to do with the structuring of an entity that 10 they fully managed with respect to multiple underlying 11 subsidiaries that weren't managed by Highland.

12 Q But would you agree that, at the time, you -- HarbourVest
13 thought that made commercial sense?

14 A It did not seem unreasonable to us based on the 15 explanation we were given.

16 Q Okay.

17 MR. WILSON: I want to refer to HarbourVest Exhibit
18 39.

19 (Pause.)

20 THE COURT: What are we waiting on? What are we 21 waiting on?

22 MR. WILSON: I'm trying to get the document on the 23 screen, Your Honor.

24 (Pause.)

25 THE COURT: We can't hear you. We can't hear you.

1 MR. WILSON: I'm sorry. I'm sorry, Your Honor. I'm 2 speaking with my --

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. WILSON: -- co-counsel here.

5 THE COURT: All right.

6 (Pause.)

7 MS. WEISGERBER: Mr. Wilson, is it 39 or 38 that 8 you're referring to?

9 MR. WILSON: 39. HarbourVest 9019 motion on the 10 main -- on the Dondero file. And then there's the -- it's -- 11 it's John -- and then there's the HarbourVest, and then the 12 exhibits are all in one file.

13 MS. WEISGERBER: Mr. Wilson, I'll just note that 39
14 was subject to confidentiality based on HCLOF's request.
15 HCLOF's counsel is present. I think they know it's an 16 excerpt. But I'd just -- that for HCLOF's counsel.

17 MR. WILSON: Well, is there an objection to showing 18 this document on the screen? Yes. All right. We're not 19 going to put Document 39 on the screen.

20 A VOICE: Yes.

21 MR. WILSON: All right. Scroll down to the next
22 page.

23 BY MR. WILSON:

24 Q This is a -- this is a document that was produced to us
25 this week, the Highland production. It appears to be a

1 Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Statement of Operations for the 2 Year Ended 31 December 2017. Do you see at the top of that --
3 at the top of that document where it says total investment
4 income of $26 million?

5 A I do, yes.

6 Q And total expenses were roughly $1.8 million?

7 A Yes.

8 Q And then net change and unrealized depreciation on 9 investments and net realized loss on investments was $4.26
10 million cumulative, resulting in a net increase in net assets
11 resulting from operations of $20.224 million. Do you agree 12 with that?

13 A Yes.

14 Q Okay.

15 MR. WILSON: Go to the next one.

16 BY MR. WILSON:

17 Q And you understand that, in the course of the Acis
18 bankruptcy, the portfolio managers for certain of the CLOs
19 were changed by the Trustee, correct?

20 A Yes, around the underlying CLOs. That's -- that's my 21 understanding, yes.

22 Q And, in fact, Mr. Seery testified earlier today that that 23 occurred in the summer of 2018, correct?

24 MR. WILSON: Scroll.

25 THE WITNESS: I don't recall the timing, but that's

1 what he testified to.

2 BY MR. WILSON:

3 Q Well, this document is HarbourVest Exhibit 40, and this is 4 the statement of operations for the financial year ended 31
5 December 2018. Here, the total investment income is only 6 $11.1 million. Do you see that?

7 A I do.

8 Q And do you see where the expenses have increased to $13.6
9 million?

10 A I do, yes.

11 MR. WILSON: Okay. Scroll down some more.

12 BY MR. WILSON:

13 Q And do you see where it says net change and unrealized
14 loss on investments of $48.47 million?

15 A Yes.

16 Q And so after Acis and Brigade took over the managements of 17 these CLOs, we had a net decrease in net assets resulting from 18 operations of $52.483 million in the year 2018, correct?

19 MS. WEISGERBER: Objection, Your Honor. Assumes a 20 fact not in evidence.

21 THE COURT: Overruled. He --

22 MR. WILSON: Your Honor, --

23 THE COURT: We're just looking at this statement and 24 testifying about it says, so I overrule the objection.

25 MR. WILSON: Thank you, Your Honor. Thank you, Your

1 Honor. I'm now going to turn to HarbourVest Exhibit 41. All 2 right. I'll --

3 BY MR. WILSON:

4 Q Did you answer the question, Mr. Pugatch?

5 A No, I -- I would agree with the second part of your 6 statement that for the year 2018 the -- the loss was $52
7 million. I don't -- I don't believe that jives with the first
8 part of your statement that that was after Acis and Brigade 9 took over. As I understand, that was in the middle of the 10 year.

11 Q But in any event, Acis and Brigade had been managing this 12 for at least six months of 2018 when that loss occurred,
13 correct?

14 A They had been managing a portion of the underlying CLO
15 portfolio held by Highland CLO Funding.

16 Q All right. We're now looking at Exhibit #41, which is the 17 Draft Unaudited Statement of Comprehensive Income, 31 December
18 2019. Total income has now dropped to $4.664 million.

19 MR. WILSON: And scroll down.

20 BY MR. WILSON:

21 Q Expenditures are at $3.645 million. And then it says
22 investment gains and losses net out to $11.493 million, a 23 negative $11.493 million. And --

24 MR. WILSON: Scroll down to the --

25 BY MR. WILSON:

1 Q And so would you agree with me that in the year 2019,
2 HCLOF showed a net loss of $10.476 million?

3 A Yes, that's what the financial statements say.

4 Q And in this year, the Acis CLOs were solely managed by 5 Acis and Brigade, correct?

6 A The Acis CLOs were. Yes, correct.

7 Q All right.

8 MR. WILSON: Now, go to 42.

9 BY MR. WILSON:

10 Q Now, this is HarbourVest #42.

11 MR. WILSON: Go down to the next page.

12 BY MR. WILSON:

13 Q And this is the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Unaudited
14 Condensed Statement of Operations for the Financial Period 15 Ended 30 June 2020. And so this is just half a year of 16 operations. And would you -- and this actually has a 17 comparison between 2019 and 2020. But do you see where it 18 says investment income has dropped from a million dollars in 19 the first half of 2019 to $381,000 in the first half of 2020?

20 A Yes.

21 MR. WILSON: Okay. Scroll down.

22 BY MR. WILSON:

23 Q And do you see where, in the first half of 2019, total 24 expenses were $1.85 million, and then in the first half of 25 2020 total expenses were $2.16 million? Do you see that?

1 A I do.

2 Q And if you go down below that, where it says Net Realized
3 and Unrealized Gain/Loss on Investments, the first half of 4 2019 HCLOF lost $12 million, and in the first half of 2020 it
5 lost $39.472 million?

6 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I'm going to object. It's 7 John Morris for the Debtor. I'm happy to stipulate. In fact,
8 he can offer this document into evidence. There's no
9 foundation that Mr. Pugatch has any particularized knowledge 10 about any of the numbers behind this. All he's asking him to 11 do is to confirm what the document says. It says what it 12 says. But this -- I'll object on that basis, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Wilson, what about it?
14 You're just getting him to read numbers off of these exhibits.

15 MR. WILSON: Well, --

16 THE COURT: Shall we just --

17 MR. WILSON: -- I understood --

18 THE COURT: -- by stipulation get them into evidence?

19 MR. WILSON: Well, --

20 MR. MORRIS: No objection, Your Honor.

21 MS. WEISGERBER: No objection.

22 THE COURT: All right. So these are exhibits what?
23 We've gone through 39, 41, and I don't know what else. 40,
24 maybe?

25 MR. WILSON: It was Exhibits 39, 40, 41, and 42 that

1 were on the HarbourVest exhibit list.

2 THE COURT: All right. Those will be admitted, and 3 we've already discussed what docket entry number they appear 4 at.

5 (HarbourVest's Exhibits 39 through 42 are received into 6 evidence.)

7 THE COURT: All right. Anything else? You told me
8 you had 10 more minutes about 15 minutes ago.

9 MR. WILSON: Well, I'm sorry if I -- I think I had 10 said I had at least ten more minutes, and I was looking at the 11 -- it was 10:50 [sic] and you wanted to quit at 1:00. So I do 12 have longer than that. I'm sorry, Your Honor.

13 THE COURT: Well, --

14 MR. WILSON: But --

15 THE COURT: -- I feel like I'm being --

16 MR. WILSON: -- I'll try to proffer --

17 THE COURT: Okay, Mr. Wilson, let me just tell you 18 something. I feel like I'm being disrespected now, and the 19 parties are. We really need to pick up the pace. I've told 20 you I've got a 1:30 docket -- with four or five matters on it,
21 by the way. I've got a 2:00 o'clock docket. I'm starting 22 them late. No one advised my courtroom deputy that we were 23 going to need all day today for this, okay? So you've got 24 five more minutes to wrap it up, and then, of course, I have 25 to go to Mr. Draper and see if he has cross. All right? So

1 please don't test my patience any more. Five minutes to 2 finish.

3 MR. DRAPER: Judge, I have no questions.

4 THE COURT: I didn't hear you, Mr. Draper. What did
5 you say?

6 MR. DRAPER: I have no questions.

7 THE COURT: All right. Very good.

8 MR. WILSON: I apologize, Your Honor. I was actually 9 trying to be respectful of your time when I informed you that 10 I had at least ten more minutes left at 12:50, but I will try 11 to be as expedient as I can as I finish up.

12 BY MR. WILSON:

13 Q And I don't see you on my screen.

14 MR. WILSON: You can take that document down.

15 THE WITNESS: Here.

16 BY MR. WILSON:

17 Q Mr. Pugatch, do you have an opinion as to what caused 18 these incredible losses of value at HCLOF?

19 MS. WEISGERBER: Objection to the extent it calls for 20 a legal conclusion.

21 THE COURT: Overruled. He can answer.

22 THE WITNESS: I would say that there's no one cause
23 for the decline in value. I can point to a number of 24 different things, including the exorbitant fees that were 25 charged to HCLOF, including the inability to be able to re --

1 refinance the CLOs on the part of HCLOF, all of which stems
2 from the actions that Highland took prior to our investment in
3 HCLOF.

4 BY MR. WILSON:

5 Q And you've -- I think it's been referenced several times
6 in HarbourVest's arguments that -- that the reset was a 7 fundamental -- the inability to get a reset was a fundamental 8 cause of the loss in value. Is that -- is that HarbourVest's 9 position?

10 A That -- that is a part of the -- the cause in the 11 declining value of the CLOs, yes.

12 Q And you would agree with me that a reset is fundamentally 13 a reset of interest rates, correct?

14 A Of the interest rates of the liabilities of the -- the 15 timing for repayment of those liabilities, yes.

16 Q Now, just say with -- for the sake of a hypothetical 17 example. If you had a home that was valued at $5 million, or 18 let's just say $500,000, let's make it more realistic. If you 19 had a $500,000 home and you had a mortgage on that home at 20 five percent interest, your inability to refinance that home
21 at a lower interest rate would not affect the underlying value
22 of that home, correct?

23 MS. WEISGERBER: Objection, Your Honor. Hypothetical.
24 And objection to relevance as well.

25 THE COURT: Sustained.

1 MS. WEISGERBER: Calls for speculation.

2 THE COURT: Sustained.

3 BY MR. WILSON:

4 Q Is there any reason to believe that the change in the 5 interest rate would have prevented the massive losses of 6 investment value that occurred in HCLOF?

7 MS. WEISGERBER: Object on the same grounds.

8 THE COURT: Sustained.

9 THE WITNESS: The short -- the short answer is yes,
10 with a -- with the amount of leverage --

11 MS. WEISGERBER: I --

12 THE WITNESS: -- that exists. Oh, sorry.

13 MS. WEISGERBER: The objection was sustained.

14 THE COURT: Yeah, I sustained the objection. That 15 means you don't answer.

16 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, Your Honor.

17 BY MR. WILSON:

18 Q So, would you agree with me that if the expenses and the 19 fees charged by the portfolio manager increased dramatically, 20 that would -- that would impact the value of the investment,
21 correct?

22 MS. WEISGERBER: Objection on the same grounds, and 23 relevance. This is a 9019 hearing, Your Honor. We are not 24 here to try every minutia. And in fact, we're trying to avoid 25 a trial on the merits. And it feels like we're getting a bit

1 far afield now.

2 THE COURT: I sustain.

3 MR. WILSON: All right. I'll pass the witness.

4 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Draper said he had no
5 cross. So, any redirect, Ms. Weisgerber?

6 MS. WEISGERBER: No, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Morris, did you have any 8 redirect?

9 MR. MORRIS: I do not, Your Honor. I have a very 10 brief closing and then some additional remarks if -- if we 11 finish.

12 THE COURT: All right. So, Mr. Pugatch, that 13 concludes your testimony. Thank you. You're excused if you 14 want to be.

15 All right. So, as I understood it, there would be no more 16 evidence after this.

17 MR. WILSON: Well, Your Honor, along those lines, as 18 a housekeeping measure, I think everything on my exhibit list
19 is included on someone else's exhibit list, but just for belt
20 and suspenders I would move to admit all of the exhibits on 21 the -- on Mr. Dondero's exhibit list.

22 THE COURT: Well, is that agreed or not? Because we 23 didn't have a witness to get them in.

24 MR. MORRIS: No objection, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Any objection? All right. If there's no

1 objection, I'll --

2 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, --

3 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Was there an objection? I
4 will admit Dondero Exhibits A through M, and those appear at 5 Docket Entry 1721, correct, Mr. Wilson?

6 MR. WILSON: That is correct, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: All right.

8 MR. WILSON: That is correct, Your Honor.

9 (James Dondero's Exhibits A through M are received into 10 evidence.)

11 MR. WILSON: And one final matter is, during the 12 examination of Mr. Seery, you at least partially admitted 13 Dondero's Exhibit N, and I was wondering if we need to -- how 14 we'd need to submit that for the record.

15 THE COURT: Okay. First, I'm confused. I think you
16 said Mr. Terry's testimony. You --

17 MR. WILSON: I said Seery. I'm sorry.

18 THE COURT: Oh, Seery?

19 MR. WILSON: Or I may have said Terry, but I meant to 20 say Seery.

21 THE COURT: Okay. Maybe you said it. Okay. During 22 Mr. Seery's testimony -- oh, the email that I admitted a 23 portion of?

24 MR. WILSON: That is -- that's correct, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: What -- what are you asking? It's not in

1 your notebook. Are you asking do you need to separately
2 submit it or what?

3 MR. WILSON: Yeah, I was just asking what the Court's 4 preference on how we submit that for the -- put it in the 5 record.

6 THE COURT: Okay. That was so garbled I didn't hear
7 you. You need to file that on the docket as a supplemental 8 exhibit that was admitted, okay?

9 MR. WILSON: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

10 THE COURT: All right. Closing arguments? Mr.
11 Morris?

12 CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE DEBTOR

13 MR. MORRIS: Yes, very briefly, Your Honor. The 14 Debtor easily meets the standard here. The settlement
15 consideration relative to the claim establishes and reflects
16 the likelihood of success on the merits.

17 You know, I've never -- I did hear Mr. Pugatch in the 18 deposition the other day, but I otherwise haven't heard from 19 him. I found him to be incredibly credible, Your Honor, and I
20 regret the fact that he and HarbourVest are being blamed twice
21 here. The fact that they got 40,000 documents or didn't read 22 the arbitration award, it's just -- it's a shame that they're 23 being dragged through this yet again.

24 The fact is, Your Honor, there is no evidence that they 25 made the disclosures that HarbourVest claims -- complains

1 about. They just don't. The fraudulent transfers led to the 2 bankruptcy, led to the appointment of a trustee, led to --
3 right? So, so it's -- that's why -- but they're getting 4 something for their claim.

5 It was a hard negotiation, Your Honor. There is no
6 dispute that if we litigated this it would be complex. It
7 would fact-intensive. The Debtor would be forced to rely upon 8 witnesses who are no longer employed by it. That it would be 9 expensive, for sure. There's no dispute about any of that.
10 There's no dispute that the creditor body has spoken loudly
11 here by unanimously refraining from objecting except for Mr.
12 Dondero and the entities controlled by him.

13 And you heard Mr. Seery's testimony. I think he 14 exhaustively informed the Court as to the process by which the 15 transaction was analyzed and negotiated, and there's no
16 evidence to the contrary that this was an arm's-length
17 negotiation.

18 Unless Your Honor has any questions, we would request that 19 the motion be granted.

20 THE COURT: Thank you. Ms. Weisgerber, your closing
21 argument?

22 CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF HARBOURVEST

23 MS. WEISGERBER: Sure. Thank you, Your Honor. I'll 24 also be brief. We again join in Mr. Morris's arguments and 25 comments.

1           The Court has now heard testimony from Mr. Pugatch
2 regarding the factual detail underlying HarbourVest's claims.
3 The Court has also heard about the significant damages that 4 HarbourVest stands to recover for those claims. And 5 HarbourVest came to this Court ready to litigate. It would --
6 it's ready to do so if needed. It believes it would prevail
7 on its claims if it had to do so.

8           But the Court also heard from Mr. Seery about his 9 understanding of HarbourVest's claims, his calculus, and his 10 decision to settle them. And we submit that nothing further 11 is needed by this Court in order to approve the settlement.
12 This is a question of the Debtor's business judgment. We're 13 not here to have a trial on the merits of HarbourVest's
14 claims. The Objectors have made various arguments, including 15 about the cause of HarbourVest's damages. But even the nature
16 of the legal claims that HarbourVest is asserting, some do not 17 require a loss causation. So we submit that's not even 18 relevant to the merits of the claims.

19           The settlement is clearly in the best interest of the 20 estate, and we respectfully request that the Court approve it.

21           THE COURT: Thank you. All right. Mr. Wilson, your 22 closing argument?

23           MR. LYNN: Michael Lynn. I will give the closing
24 argument, if that's satisfactory to the Court.

25           THE COURT: All right. Go ahead.

1 CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF JAMES DONDERO

2 MR. LYNN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. I just want
3 to make a few points, and I'll try to do it as quickly as 4 possible.

5 First, I feel compelled to address the argument of the 6 Debtor that Mr. Dondero is repeating his litigious behavior
7 from the Acis case. I don't know about the Acis case. I
8 wasn't involved except very, very peripherally. But with 9 respect to this case, we have only taken positions in court
10 that we believed -- that is, his lawyers -- believed were 11 warranted by law, facts as we knew them, and that are 12 consistent with professionalism. I'd be glad to explain any 13 position we took.

14 Often, through the Debtor's very persuasive powers, we 15 never had the chance to explain our position previously to the 16 Court. In fact, for the most part, as today, we have been 17 reactive rather than commencing proceedings. In fact, during 18 the first seven months of this case, we only appeared in court 19 a few times, when we felt we had to -- for example, when 20 discovery was being sought by the Creditors' Committee that we 21 feared might invade privilege. Then, much to the Debtor's
22 fury, we opposed the Acis 9019. We did so because we thought 23 it was too much.

24 Since, as the Court can see, the principal instigators of 25 litigation have been the Debtor, and to a lesser extent, the

1 Committee.

2 Indeed, in an apparent effort to drown Mr. Dondero and his
3 counsel in litigation, the Debtor has repeatedly sought court
4 action on a very short fuse, claiming need for expedited
5 hearing.

6 Perhaps the most startling example of this is the recent 7 contempt motion, for which there is no good reason for a quick
8 hearing. Resolution of that motion is not necessary to reach 9 the confirmation hearing. The motion could be heard after the 10 confirmation hearing. There is no need to put Mr. Dondero and 11 his professionals in a position where they have to respond in 12 a couple of days, two business days, and then will have two 13 days to prepare for trial.

14 Second, Your Honor, Mr. Seery has repeatedly asserted, 15 contrary to today's motion, that the HarbourVest claim was of 16 no merit. That is why, when he came in to settle for tens of 17 millions of dollars, we opposed this motion. It appears that 18 the motion is occurring without any cross-party discovery.
19 There is no consideration, apparently, of trying dispositive 20 -- dispositive motions first. There is no consideration for 21 junior classes of equity, which Mr. Seery has previously 22 opined were in the money. This, even though there's no reason
23 that this settlement is necessary pre-confirmation, unless Mr.
24 Seery wants HarbourVest's vote.

25 Third, for whatever reason, that seems to be the driving

1 factor for settling. On its face, the vote seems to be a key
2 factor of the settlement. About the longest provision of the 3 settlement agreement relates to voting. The motion itself --
4 in the motion itself, five of seven bullet points cited by the 5 Debtor for approval of the settlement deal with and emphasize 6 support of the plan or the vote that is to be cast for the 7 plan.

8 If the settlement is a good deal, it didn't need to have 9 as one of its parts the requirement that HarbourVest vote for 10 the plan.

11 Your Honor, I'll stop there. I know Your Honor would like 12 to get just a few minutes before your 1:30 docket. I've been 13 there and I understand that, and I do apologize for taking the 14 time we have, but I think that responsibility is shared with 15 the Debtor and HarbourVest.

16 Thank you, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: All right. Thank you for that.

18 Mr. Draper, any closing argument from you?

19 CLOSING ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF GET GOOD AND DUGABOY TRUSTS

20 MR. DRAPER: Yes, I have three comments. The first 21 is the claim -- the loss claim, absent the fraud claim, is, at 22 best, $7 million. I think Mr. Seery's argument that a hundred 23 -- one hundred percent is attributable to there is just wrong.
24 If he and I both invested in a company 50-50 and it goes 25 broke, we only lost 50 cents each.

1           Number two, I think the Court heard the evidence. I think
2 this is, at best, a subordinated claim under 5 -- under the 3 Bankruptcy Code. It's really a "But for the 4 misrepresentations, we wouldn't have invested."

5           And the last one is the -- Judge Lynn represented the 6 voting, so I won't deal with that. But the one that troubles
7 me the most is the fact that this asset that is ultimately 8 being paid for in claim dollars that's being transferred over 9 to the Debtor and being put it outside the estate, outside the 10 purview of this Court, and placed in some subsidiary, this -- 11 this transaction, if it is approved, must -- should contain a 12 provision that the asset that's being acquired come into the 13 Debtor and be owned by the Debtor.

14           THE COURT: All right.

15           MR. DRAPER: I have nothing further, Your Honor.

16           THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Draper.

17           Mr. Morris, you get the last word since it's your motion.

18           MR. MORRIS: Very quickly, Your Honor. The 19 subordination argument doesn't hold water. This is not a 20 claim against the Debtor for the security; it's a claim for 21 fraud. Okay? So, so 510(b), if it was a claim against HCLOF, 22 that might make sense, but this is a claim against the Debtor.
23 And it's a Debtor -- it's a claim for fraud. That's number 24 one.

25           Number two, we need to keep this exactly as it's been

1 structured in order to avoid litigation. Mr. Seery told the 2 Court. I'm sure the Court can make its own assessment as to 3 Mr. Seery's credibility as to whether or not the Debtor is 4 intending to somehow get this asset beyond the Court.

5 But there are reasons why we've done this, Your Honor.
6 They could have made an objection on that basis. In fact, if 7 they did, it would be overruled, because there's no -- there's 8 no basis for this Court to find that somehow the Debtor and 9 Mr. Seery are doing something untoward to get assets away from 10 this Court's jurisdiction.

11 You know, I don't know what to say about Mr. Lynn's 12 commentary. Much of it had nothing to do with any evidence in 13 the record.

14 The fact remains, Your Honor, that this settlement is 15 fair. It's reasonable. It's in the best interest of the 16 estate. And we would respectfully request that the Court
17 grant the motion.

18 THE COURT: All right. Thank you. Well, I
19 appreciate all the arguments and evidence I have heard today.
20 I'm going to be brief in my ruling here, but I reserve the 21 right to supplement in a more fulsome written order, which I'm 22 going to instruct Mr. Morris to submit. I am approving the 23 motion to compromise the HarbourVest claim today, and I guess
24 subsumed in that is granting the motion to allow their claim 25 for 3018 voting purposes.

1 I in all ways find this compromise to meet the required
2 legal standard set forth in such cases as TMT Trailer Ferry,
3 AWECO, and Foster Mortgage, numerous other Fifth Circuit
4 cases.

5 First, I'm going to specifically say for the record that I
6 found both witnesses today, Mr. Seery and Mr. Pugatch, to be 7 very credible. Very credible testimony and meaningful 8 testimony was provided to the Court today. And based on that 9 testimony, I find, first, that this compromise was the product
10 of arm's-length negotiations. It was a hard-fought 11 negotiation, as far as I'm concerned. The Debtor objected to 12 these numerous HarbourVest proofs of claim. The Debtor did
13 not want to allow HarbourVest a significant claim for voting
14 purposes. I duly note the statements made in the disclosure
15 statement before this compromise was reached suggesting, you
16 know, the Debtor didn't think HarbourVest should have a large 17 claim.

18 That is consistent with everything I typically see in a 19 bankruptcy case when there's a claim objection. The objector 20 vehemently denies the claimant should have a proof of claim,
21 and then people sit down and think about the risks and rewards
22 of litigating things. And I believe very fervently that's 23 what happened here. There were good-faith, arm's-length 24 negotiations that resulted in this proposed compromise.

25 I find the compromise -- and I'll add to that point, on

1 the good-faith point, I find nothing sinister or improper
2 about the fact that the compromise includes a commitment of 3 HarbourVest to vote in favor of the plan. Again, we see this 4 a lot. You know, there's even a buzz word that doesn't even 5 exist in the Bankruptcy Code: "plan support agreement." You
6 know, we see those a lot -- you know, oftentimes negotiated
7 before the case, but sometimes after. You know, it may be 8 improper in certain situations, but there was nothing here
9 that troubles me about that component of the compromise.

10 I find the compromise to meet the paramount interest of 11 creditors here. Notably, we have very large creditors in this 12 case who have not objected. The Foster Mortgage case from the 13 Fifth Circuit tells me I am supposed to consider support or 14 opposition of creditors. No opposition of UBS. No opposition 15 of the Redeemer Committee Crusader Fund. No opposition from 16 Josh Terry or Acis. No opposition from Daugherty.

17 But moreover, when considering the paramount interest of 18 creditors, I find this compromise to be in all ways fair and 19 equitable and in the best interest of the estate, and 20 certainly within the range of reasonableness. The evidence
21 showed that HarbourVest asserted over $300 million. Over $300
22 million. Granted, that was based on all kinds of legal 23 theories that would be contested and expensive to litigate,
24 but the evidence also showed that they invested over $70
25 million. You know, close to $75 million. I forget the exact

1 number. $75 or $80 million, somewhere in that range. And now
2 the credible evidence is that investment is worth about $22
3 million.

4 So, certainly, while the claim may not have, at the 5 ultimate end of the day in litigation, resulted in a $300
6 million proof of claim, certainly, certainly there were strong
7 arguments for a very sizeable claim, more than this compromise
8 amount. So it's certainly fair and equitable and reasonable 9 when considering the complexity and duration of further 10 litigation, the risks and rewards, the expense, delay, and 11 likely success.

12 A couple of last things I'm going to say are these. I 13 understand, you know, there is vehement disagreement on the 14 part of our Objectors to the notion that Highland might have 15 caused a $50 million loss to HarbourVest. But I will tell 16 you, for what it's worth -- I want the record clear that this 17 is part of my evaluation of the reasonableness of the 18 settlement -- my reaction is that, indeed, Highland's
19 litigation strategy in the Acis case caused HCLOF to lose a 20 huge portion of its value, to the detriment of HarbourVest.
21 You know, whether all evidence at the end of the day would 22 convince me of that, I don't know, but that's -- that is 23 definitely this judge's impression.

24 I'm very sympathetic to HarbourVest. It appears in all 25 ways from the record, not just the record before me today, but

1 the record in the Acis case that I presided over, that
2 Highland back then would have rather spent HarbourVest's
3 investment for HCLOF legal fees than let Josh Terry get paid
4 on his judgment. They were perfectly happy to direct the 5 spending of other people's money, is what the record suggested 6 to me.

7 And then, you know, I have alluded to this very recently,
8 as recently as last Friday: I can still remember Mr.
9 Ellington sitting on the witness stand over here to my left
10 and telling the Court, telling the parties under oath, that 11 HarbourVest -- he didn't use its name back then, okay? For 12 the first phase of the Acis case, or most of the Acis case, we 13 were told it was an investor from Boston. And at some point 14 someone even said their name begins with H. I mean, it seemed 15 almost humorous. But Mr. Ellington said it was they,
16 HarbourVest, the undisclosed investor, who was insistent that 17 the Acis name was toxic, and so that's what all of this had 18 been about: the rebranding, the wanting to extract or move
19 things away from Acis.

20 So, you know, I have heard for the -- well, at least the 21 second time today, from Mr. Pugatch, what I perceive to be 22 very credible testimony that that's just not the way it 23 happened.

24 And I guess the last thing I want to say here today, and 25 you know, I guess I have multiple reasons for saying this, not

1 just in connection with approving the settlement, you know,
2 I've heard about how the Acis CLOs, the HCLOF CLOs have lost,
3 you know, a crazy amount of value, that they underperform in 4 the market, that, you know, during the Acis/Brigade tenure
5 and, you know, they should have been reset. You know, I hope
6 those who have not been around as long as some of us in this 7 whole saga know that the -- Mr. Terry, Mr. Phelan, I think
8 Brigade, they all desperately wanted to reset these things,
9 but it was HCLOF, I believe directed by Highland, that wanted
10 to redeem, wanted to liquidate, take the pot of money,
11 warehouse it, and then do their own thing.

12 And there was, I think, from my vantage point, a 13 monumental effort to try to get everyone to the table to do 14 reasonable resets that would be good for the stakeholders at 15 HCLOF and be good for the creditors of Acis, including Josh 16 Terry. That was always the balancing act that most of us were 17 focused on during the Acis bankruptcy. But Highland, I 18 believe, directing HCLOF's strategy, just did not want the 19 resets to happen.

20 So, again, part of me, I suppose, just wants to make the 21 record clear on something that I fear not everyone is clear 22 about. And I say that because the comment was made that the 23 injunctions, the preliminary injunctions sought by the Acis
24 trustee caused the plummet in value, and I think that's just 25 not an accurate statement. I think litigation strategies are

1 what caused the plummet in value, and that's why I think
2 ultimately HarbourVest would potentially have a meritorious
3 claim here in a significant amount if this litigation were to 4 go forward.

5 So, I approve this under 9019. And again, Mr. Morris,
6 you'll upload an order.

7 It is now 1:41, so let's as quickly as possible hear the 8 other motion that I don't think had any objections. Mr.
9 Morris?

10 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, just -- yes, just very 11 quickly, just four things.

12 With respect to the order, I just want to make it clear
13 that we are going to include a provision that specifically 14 authorizes the Debtor to engage in -- to receive from 15 HarbourVest the asset, you know, the HCLOF interest, and that 16 that's consistent with its obligations under the agreement.

17 The objection has been withdrawn, I think the evidence is 18 what it is, and we want to make sure that nobody thinks that 19 they're going to go to a different court somehow to challenge 20 the transfer. So I just want to put the Court on notice and 21 everybody on notice that we are going to put in a specific 22 finding as to that.

23 THE COURT: All right. Fair --

24 MR. MORRIS: Number two is --

25 THE COURT: Fair enough. I do specifically approve

1 that mechanism and find it is appropriate and supported by the 2 underlying agreements.

3 And just so you know, I spent some time noodling this 4 yesterday before I knew it was going to be settled, so I'm not 5 just casually doing that. I think it's fine.

6 Okay. Next?

7 MR. MORRIS: Thank you very much, Your Honor. Number
8 two, with respect to the motion to pay, there is no objection.
9 If we can just submit an order. Or if Your Honor has other 10 guidance for us, we're happy to take it.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Does anyone have anything they 12 want to say about that motion?

13 Again, I looked at it. I didn't see any objections. I 14 didn't see any problem with it. It's -- you know, you're 15 going through this exercise because of the earlier protocol 16 order.

17 MR. MORRIS: Correct.

18 THE COURT: All right. Well, if there's nothing, 19 then, I will approve that, finding there is good cause to 20 grant that motion.

21 MR. MORRIS: Okay.

22 THE COURT: All right. Is the only other 23 housekeeping matter --

24 MR. MORRIS: I --

25 THE COURT: -- we have the contempt motion?

1 MR. MORRIS: It is, and I do -- I do have to point
2 out how troubled the Debtor is to learn that Mr. Dondero was 3 still receiving documents from Highland as late as this 4 morning. It's got to be a violation of both the TRO -- I
5 guess it's now the preliminary injunction.

6 I would respectfully request -- I know that time is what 7 it is -- but maybe Mr. Dondero can answer now where he got the 8 document, who he got the document from, what other documents
9 he's gotten from the Debtor since Your Honor ordered him not 10 to communicate with the Debtor's employees.

11 This is not saying hello in the hallway. I mean, this is 12 just -- it is really troubling, Your Honor, and it's why we 13 need the contempt motion heard as soon as possible.

14 THE COURT: Well, Mr. Wilson, do you want to address 15 that? I think the words I heard were that you just got the 16 document this morning, and you got it from Mr. Dondero, but we 17 don't know where and when Mr. Dondero got it. Mr. Wilson, are 18 you there?

19 MR. LYNN: I'm afraid I'm back, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Okay.

21 MR. LYNN: I am not sure whether Mr. Dondero had it 22 in his files from some -- from back before he was asked not to 23 communicate with members or with employees of the Debtor. I 24 believe -- I believe he's with us, though I don't think he's 25 available by video.

1 Are you there, Mr. Dondero?

2 THE COURT: We can't hear you, Mr. Dondero.

3 MR. DONDERO: Judge?

4 THE COURT: Oh, go ahead.

5 MR. DONDERO: Can you hear me now?

6 THE COURT: Yes.

7 MR. DONDERO: Yes, I -- I -- when I moved offices, I
8 found it in a stack of paper, and --

9 MR. LYNN: I understand it shows that his microphone
10 is working.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

12 MR. DONDERO: Can you hear me?

13 THE COURT: Yes, go ahead.

14 MR. DONDERO: Yeah, I -- I'm sitting in new offices.
15 I've got everything in boxes. I was going through everything
16 yesterday, and I found those emails in a stack of papers and I
17 sent them over because I thought they would be relevant 18 relative to Seery's initial impression.

19 THE COURT: Okay. Well, let's talk about the timing
20 of this hearing. Mr. Morris, I'm going to -- I'm going to ask 21 you why --

22 MR. LYNN: Michael Lynn, Your Honor. I don't want to 23 waste the Court's time. We have not made available anything 24 to the Court objecting to the expedited hearing on the 25 contempt motion. We've been here.

1 I would say to Your Honor that if Mr. Dondero is indeed in 2 contempt, or was in contempt toward the motion, which has
3 nothing to do with the document that was presented as Dondero
4 Exhibit N, there is no need to hear this on an expedited
5 basis.

6 Every time we turn around, Your Honor, the Debtor is 7 asking that something be heard on an expedited basis. And we 8 have not opposed that. We have not fought that, to speak of, 9 to date. But this is getting a little ridiculous. We're 10 within days of confirmation of the Debtor's plan, and it is 11 simply a means of causing pain and suffering to Mr. Dondero 12 and those who are working with him and for him. And he does 13 have employees at NexPoint who are assisting him.

14 So we most strongly object to being put on a schedule
15 where we are expected to get a response to the contempt motion
16 on file by Monday, today being Thursday, and a weekend
17 intervening. And we strongly object to any setting of this 18 contempt motion on Tuesday or Wednesday. It is absurd, and it 19 is done solely, solely, Your Honor, to cause pain.

20 THE COURT: All right.

21 MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may?

22 THE COURT: Please.

23 MR. MORRIS: Just very briefly, we had a hearing the 24 other day. The evidence is the exact same. The evidence is 25 crystal clear that the violations are meaningful, they're

1 substantial, and they are repeated.

2 After the TRO was entered into, Mr. Dondero and only Mr.
3 Dondero chose to interfere with the Debtor's business. Mr.
4 Dondero and only Mr. Dondero chose to communicate with the 5 Debtor's employees, not about saying hello in the hallway but 6 about coordinating a legal defense strategy against the 7 Debtor.

8 The need is immediate, Your Honor, and I would 9 respectfully request that the hearing be set for Tuesday or 10 Wednesday. They've had this motion now since the 7th of 11 January. They had a full evidentiary hearing, so they know 12 most of the evidence that's going to be presented. They have 13 a whole team of -- they have an army of lawyers, Your Honor, 14 and half a dozen firms working on behalf of Mr. Dondero and 15 his interests. For him to cry here, for him to cry that this 16 is too much is really -- it's obscene. It just is.

17 THE COURT: All right. I'm going to say a couple --

18 MR. LYNN: That is absurd.

19 THE COURT: I'm going to say a couple of things. One
20 is that I -- well, the one time I remember getting reversed
21 for holding someone in contempt of court, the District Court
22 felt like I had not given enough notice of that. The District
23 Courts, what they think is reasonable notice, is sometimes 24 very different from what the bankruptcy judges think. We're 25 used to going very lickety-split fast in the bankruptcy

1 courts. And the Courts of Appeals, District Court, Courts of 2 Appeals obviously, for good reason, are very concerned about 3 due process in this kind of context. So I'm sensitive to 4 that.

5 I'm also sensitive to the fact that it is monetary damages
6 that are being sought here to purge the contempt. Okay? The 7 shifting of attorneys' fees is basically what I understand is 8 being sought at this point. You know, we have a preliminary 9 injunction halting behavior at this point, and so I think
10 that's another reason I'm hesitant to give an emergency 11 hearing. I feel like monetary damages can wait and we can 12 give 21-plus days' notice of the hearing.

13 But I'm going to throw this out there as well. If I do
14 feel like there is a showing of contempt, if I do feel like 15 the phone -- as I told you the other day, I'm very, very 16 fixated on the phone that may have been destroyed or thrown 17 away, maybe at Mr. Dondero's suggestion. I mean, the 18 potential monetary sanction here may be very, very large if 19 the evidence plays out in the way I fear it might play out.
20 So I need to make sure everybody has adequate time to prepare
21 for that hearing and make sure I get all the evidence I need 22 to see. All right? Contempt of court is very, very, very,
23 very serious, and I don't think anyone would deny that.

24 So, with that, it was filed what day? January 4th? Is 25 that what I heard? Or --

1 MR. MORRIS: January 7th, I believe, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: January 7th? All right. Well, Traci,
3 are you there? Hopefully, you're not in a hunger coma at this 4 point.

5 THE CLERK: I am here.

6 THE COURT: Okay. We have -- we're going to have to 7 go to that first week of February, right? Because we've got 8 the confirmation hearing that, you know, late in January, and 9 then --

10 THE CLERK: Yes. Uh-huh.

11 THE COURT: Okay. Do you have an available date to 12 give right now?

13 THE CLERK: How about -- if you're willing to hear
14 them on Friday, February 5th.

15 THE COURT: Okay. I can do that. February 5th at 16 9:30. Any -- anybody want to argue about that?

17 MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor. That's 18 acceptable to the Debtor.

19 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Lynn, is that good with you?

20 MR. LYNN: We'll do that, Your Honor. I would say,
21 by the way, that I'll be happy to buy Mr. Seery, out of my own
22 pocket, five cell phones, which ought to make up for the one 23 that was lost, though I recognize that those cell phones will 24 not have on them the privileged information, the conversations 25 between his lawyers and Mr. Dondero that I imagine he was

1 looking forward to seeing.

2 THE COURT: Well, I wouldn't want him to see that
3 information, but I do think he's entitled to any nonprivileged
4 information, texting, or calls that are on that phone. So,
5 again, I'm either going to hear good explanations for that or 6 not, but it's something very concerning to me.

7 All right. So we have a game plan.

8 I'm going to ask, Did we have good-faith negotiations
9 between Dondero and the Committee and anything positive to 10 report? I'll ask Mr. Lynn and Mr. Clemente to weigh in.

11 MR. CLEMENTE: Yes, Your Honor. I'll go first, Your 12 Honor. Mr. Lynn and I have exchanged several emails over the 13 weekend, and the message that I sent to Mr. Lynn was very 14 clear. There had been a term sheet that Mr. Seery had sent 15 back to Mr. Dondero. I had asked Mr. Lynn to take a pencil 16 out and be very specific as to what it was Mr. Dondero was 17 prepared to do in connection with the pot plan. I instructed 18 him that some of the issues that the Committee still has is 19 obviously the overall value, along with the concept that's 20 signing up to a promise from Mr. Dondero to comply with 21 (indiscernible) as part of that value. As Your Honor may 22 understand, the Committee is obviously very skeptical of Mr.
23 Dondero's future performance under an agreement that he enters 24 into.

25 Those are but a couple of issues, Your Honor, that I

1 advised Mr. Lynn were very concerning to the Committee. And I
2 suggested to him that if he wanted to move things forward, the 3 best way to do it would be to come to us with a fulsome term
4 sheet that explained exactly what it was in clear and precise 5 detail that Mr. Dondero was proposing, and that would be the 6 best way to move the process forward, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: All right. Mr. Lynn, anything to add to 8 that?

9 MR. LYNN: Well, Your Honor, my experience in 10 negotiations is that it is useful to agree on substantive 11 terms, or at least be in the ballpark, before term sheets are 12 exchanged. Long ago, a term sheet was prepared and presented 13 to the Committee. Ultimately, I think it was rejected, though 14 I don't know if we ever received a formal rejection.

15 I explained in my emails, which I'm happy to share with 16 the Court if Your Honor wants to see them, why I was reluctant 17 to try to put into a term sheet form the proposal that I 18 suggested to Mr. Clemente. As I said, I'm more than happy to 19 provide you with that email chain and let you form your own
20 judgment, Your Honor, as to whether we're proceeding in good 21 faith.

22 THE COURT: All right. Well I'm not going to ask --

23 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor? Your Honor, this is Jeff 24 Pomerantz.

25 THE COURT: -- to see any of that. Mr. Pomerantz?

1 MR. POMERANTZ: May I just be heard real quickly?

2 THE COURT: Sure.

3 MR. POMERANTZ: Your Honor, we also took Your Honor's
4 comments to heart. We, Mr. Seery and I, had an over-an-hour
5 conversation with Mr. Lynn and with Mr. Bonds. We provided
6 them with our thoughts as to what they needed to do in order
7 to move forward. Of course, it's not really the Debtor to 8 agree. It's the creditors to agree. But as Mr. Seery has 9 testified many times before and as I have told the Court, we 10 would support a plan that the Committee and Mr. Dondero could 11 get behind.

12 So we again -- I'm not going to divulge the nature of 13 those communications, but we suggested several things that Mr.
14 Dondero could do in order to move the ball forward, and 15 unfortunately, we have not seen any of those things done thus 16 far. So we are, at this point, not optimistic that there will 17 be a grand bargain plan.

18 THE COURT: All right.

19 MR. DONDERO: Your Honor, could I comment for a 20 second? This is Mr. Dondero.

21 THE COURT: If you and your counsel want you to 22 comment, you can comment.

23 MR. DONDERO: I'd love to do a pot plan. I would 24 love to reach some kind of settlement and everybody move on 25 with their lives. The estate started with $360 million of

1 third-party assets and $90 million of notes. The $360 million
2 of third-party assets are down to $130 million.

3 MR. POMERANTZ: Again, Your Honor, I must interrupt.
4 I did this at the last hearing, and it's not my practice to 5 interrupt, but issues regarding what the value is or not, it's 6 going to require a response, and that's not really before Your 7 Honor. I think before Your Honor is --

8 MR. DONDERO: Okay.

9 MR. POMERANTZ: -- have there been negotiations?
10 Have they been in good faith? If Mr. Dondero wanted to 11 address that, that's fine, but I object to having any 12 discussion at this point, especially with Mr. Dondero not even 13 under oath, on what the nature of the value of the assets and 14 why they have changed and what not.

15 THE COURT: Well, --

16 MR. POMERANTZ: It's just not appropriate.

17 THE COURT: I understand --

18 MR. DONDERO: Okay. Can I --

19 THE COURT: Stop.

20 MR. DONDERO: Can I -- can I finish?

21 THE COURT: Let me please respond to that. I
22 understand your concern, but I've heard from Mr. Seery 23 testimony many months ago about the value plummeting during 24 the case. And I asked why, and I got some explanations. This 25 is not evidence. This is just, you know, this is not going to

1 be binding in any way. Mr. Dondero can speak as to what he 2 thinks, you know, the situation is.

3 Go ahead, Mr. Dondero.

4 MR. DONDERO: Okay. I'm not trying to fixate on the 5 numbers. And as far as the third-party assets are, we would 6 be willing to pay -- I would be willing to pay for those. I'd 7 be willing to pay more, and even some value for the affiliate
8 notes that were really part of compensation agreements
9 throughout the history of Highland and avoid the POC
10 arguments. I'd be willing to pay for the assets and I'd be 11 willing to pay even more than that.

12 I have no transparency in terms of what the assets are,
13 and there's no fulsome discussion in terms of, well, here are 14 the assets, here are the notes, here's what we think the 15 values are, can you get to this number? It's just a -- you --
16 the -- it -- I don't view there is good-faith negotiations
17 going on because it's always just a: You need to put a big 18 number on a piece of paper; otherwise, you're going to get run 19 over.

20 And there's no back and forth going on, but it's not due 21 to a lack of willingness on my part. And maybe there needs to 22 be a committee set up. Maybe there needs to be, I don't know,
23 a mediator or an examiner or somebody to try and push through 24 the pot plan, but there's nothing happening. People are not 25 returning the judge's calls, I mean, Mr. Lynn's calls, or my

1 calls. They're -- there's -- despite efforts of our -- of my 2 own and a willingness of my own, there's no negotiations of 3 any sort going on at the moment.

4 THE COURT: All right. I don't want anyone to 5 respond to that. I know people have different views of what's 6 going on. But let me just say a couple of things, and then 7 we're done.

8 We do have a Committee in this case. We have a Committee
9 with very sophisticated members and very sophisticated
10 professionals. Okay? That's who I wanted you to be talking 11 to before the end of the day Tuesday.

12 We have had co-mediators in this case. Okay? And, you 13 know, I identified very sophisticated human beings for that 14 role. Okay? And in fact, there ended up being settlements
15 that flowed out of the co-mediator process.

16 We're now 15 months into the case. There are major,
17 significant compromises now: HarbourVest, UBS, Acis, Terry,
18 and Redeemer Committee. I hate to use a worn-out metaphor, 19 but the train is leaving the station. We've got confirmation.
20 I've pushed out two weeks. I mean, you all are either going
21 to get there in the next few days or we're just going to go
22 forward with I think what everyone, you know, would rather be 23 a pot plan, but if we can't get there, we're just going to 24 have to consider the plan that's on the table now. Okay?

25 You know, the Committee, again, they're sophisticated.

1 They can compare apples to oranges and decide whether the plan
2 on the table, with its risks of future litigation and 3 recoveries, whether it's better or worse than whatever
4 consideration you're offering, Mr. Dondero.

5 And you know, as we all know, there is distrust here,
6 there, and everywhere among these parties. So I can totally 7 understand them, you know, taking a hard line: We either get 8 all cash or we're just not going to mess with it. We don't 9 want to risk broken promises. We'd rather just do litigation.

10 So, anyway, that's as much as I'm going to say except I am
11 going to further direct good-faith negotiations. It sounds
12 like to me a written term sheet might be the appropriate next 13 step, given where I've heard things are at the moment. But,
14 you know, I guess we don't have any hearings between now and 15 the 26th, right? No Highland hearings that I can think of 16 between now and the 26th.

17 MR. POMERANTZ: I don't think so.

18 MR. MORRIS: I think that's correct, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: So you have all this time --

20 MR. MORRIS: At the moment.

21 THE COURT: You have all this time to negotiate and 22 simultaneously get ready for the confirmation hearing without 23 any other battles. So I know you will use the time well.

24 All right. We're adjourned.

25 THE CLERK: All rise.

1 MR. BONDS: Thank you, Your Honor.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

5. The Claimant has not attached the documentation supporting this Claim to this Proof of Claim because the documentation is voluminous and the Debtor has copies of such documents. However, any requested relevant documents will be provided to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, the Court, the United States Trustee and the Debtor in the event of a dispute regarding this Proof of Claim and will be made available for review by other parties in interest as appropriate upon reasonable request and after consultation with the Debtor and execution of appropriate confidentiality agreements.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

7. Claimant's express reservation of all rights and causes of action, includes, without limitation, contingent or unliquidated rights that it or its affiliates may have against the Debtor, as well as defenses, offsets and counterclaims. This description and classification of claims by the Claimant is not a concession or admission as to the correct characterization or treatment of any such claims or a waiver of any rights of the Claimant.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

11. The Claimant reserves the right to withdraw, amend, clarify, modify or supplement this Proof of Claim to assert additional claims, causes of action or additional grounds for this Proof of Claim (including adding any additional contracts, agreements, obligations or other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

5. The Claimant has not attached the documentation supporting this Claim to this Proof of Claim because the documentation is voluminous and the Debtor has copies of such documents. However, any requested relevant documents will be provided to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, the Court, the United States Trustee and the Debtor in the event of a dispute regarding this Proof of Claim and will be made available for review by other parties in interest as appropriate upon reasonable request and after consultation with the Debtor and execution of appropriate confidentiality agreements.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

7. Claimant's express reservation of all rights and causes of action, includes, without limitation, contingent or unliquidated rights that it or its affiliates may have against the Debtor, as well as defenses, offsets and counterclaims. This description and classification of claims by the Claimant is not a concession or admission as to the correct characterization or treatment of any such claims or a waiver of any rights of the Claimant.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

11. The Claimant reserves the right to withdraw, amend, clarify, modify or supplement this Proof of Claim to assert additional claims, causes of action or additional grounds for this Proof of Claim (including adding any additional contracts, agreements, obligations or

UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Partners L.P. on behalf of funds and accounts under management (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant manages investment funds that are limited partners in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third

Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor’s employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

5. The Claimant has not attached the documentation supporting this Claim to this Proof of Claim because the documentation is voluminous and the Debtor has copies of such documents. However, any requested relevant documents will be provided to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, the Court, the United States Trustee and the Debtor in the event of a dispute regarding this Proof of Claim and will be made available for review by other parties in interest as appropriate upon reasonable request and after consultation with the Debtor and execution of appropriate confidentiality agreements.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

7. Claimant's express reservation of all rights and causes of action, includes, without limitation, contingent or unliquidated rights that it or its affiliates may have against the Debtor, as well as defenses, offsets and counterclaims. This description and classification of claims by the Claimant is not a concession or admission as to the correct characterization or treatment of any such claims or a waiver of any rights of the Claimant.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

11. The Claimant reserves the right to withdraw, amend, clarify, modify or supplement this Proof of Claim to assert additional claims, causes of action or additional grounds for this Proof of Claim (including adding any additional contracts, agreements, obligations or other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

5. The Claimant has not attached the documentation supporting this Claim to this Proof of Claim because the documentation is voluminous and the Debtor has copies of such documents. However, any requested relevant documents will be provided to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, the Court, the United States Trustee and the Debtor in the event of a dispute regarding this Proof of Claim and will be made available for review by other parties in interest as appropriate upon reasonable request and after consultation with the Debtor and execution of appropriate confidentiality agreements.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

7. Claimant's express reservation of all rights and causes of action, includes, without limitation, contingent or unliquidated rights that it or its affiliates may have against the Debtor, as well as defenses, offsets and counterclaims. This description and classification of claims by the Claimant is not a concession or admission as to the correct characterization or treatment of any such claims or a waiver of any rights of the Claimant.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

11. The Claimant reserves the right to withdraw, amend, clarify, modify or supplement this Proof of Claim to assert additional claims, causes of action or additional grounds for this Proof of Claim (including adding any additional contracts, agreements, obligations or other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HV International VIII Secondary L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

5. The Claimant has not attached the documentation supporting this Claim to this Proof of Claim because the documentation is voluminous and the Debtor has copies of such documents. However, any requested relevant documents will be provided to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, the Court, the United States Trustee and the Debtor in the event of a dispute regarding this Proof of Claim and will be made available for review by other parties in interest as appropriate upon reasonable request and after consultation with the Debtor and execution of appropriate confidentiality agreements.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

7. Claimant's express reservation of all rights and causes of action, includes, without limitation, contingent or unliquidated rights that it or its affiliates may have against the Debtor, as well as defenses, offsets and counterclaims. This description and classification of claims by the Claimant is not a concession or admission as to the correct characterization or treatment of any such claims or a waiver of any rights of the Claimant.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

11. The Claimant reserves the right to withdraw, amend, clarify, modify or supplement this Proof of Claim to assert additional claims, causes of action or additional grounds for this Proof of Claim (including adding any additional contracts, agreements, obligations or other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

5. The Claimant has not attached the documentation supporting this Claim to this Proof of Claim because the documentation is voluminous and the Debtor has copies of such documents. However, any requested relevant documents will be provided to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, the Court, the United States Trustee and the Debtor in the event of a dispute regarding this Proof of Claim and will be made available for review by other parties in interest as appropriate upon reasonable request and after consultation with the Debtor and execution of appropriate confidentiality agreements.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

7. Claimant's express reservation of all rights and causes of action, includes, without limitation, contingent or unliquidated rights that it or its affiliates may have against the Debtor, as well as defenses, offsets and counterclaims. This description and classification of claims by the Claimant is not a concession or admission as to the correct characterization or treatment of any such claims or a waiver of any rights of the Claimant.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

11. The Claimant reserves the right to withdraw, amend, clarify, modify or supplement this Proof of Claim to assert additional claims, causes of action or additional grounds for this Proof of Claim (including adding any additional contracts, agreements, obligations or other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”), by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this omnibus objection (the “Objection”), seeking entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A (the “Order”), (i) disallowing certain duplicate claims listed on Schedule 1 to the Order (the “Duplicate Claims”), (ii) reducing and allowing certain overstated claims listed on Schedule 2 (the “Overstated Claims”) in amounts which comport with the Debtor’s books and records, (iii) disallowing certain claims that were filed after the applicable bar date listed on Schedule 3 to the Order (the “Late-Filed Claims”), (iv) disallowing certain claims that have already been satisfied listed on Schedule 4 to the Order (the “Satisfied Claims”), (v) disallowing certain claims for which the Debtor’s books and records show no liability listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order (the “No-Liability Claims”), and (vi) disallowing claims which contain insufficient documentation listed on Schedule 7 to the Order (the “Insufficient-Documentation Claims,” and together with the Duplicate Claims, the Overstated Claims, the Late-Filed Claims, the Satisfied Claims, and the No-Liability Claims, the “Disputed Claims”). In support of this Objection, the Debtor respectfully represents as follows:

I. JURISDICTION

1. The Court has jurisdiction to consider and determine this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334. This is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(1) and (b)(2)(A), (B) and (O). Venue is proper before this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

2. The statutory bases for the relief requested herein are sections 105(a) and 502(b) of title 11 of the United States Code (the “Bankruptcy Code”), Rules 3007 and 9014 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the “Bankruptcy Rules”), and Rules 3007-1 and 3007-2 of the Local Bankruptcy Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Local Rules”).

II. BACKGROUND

3. On October 16, 2019 (the “Petition Date”), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the “Delaware Court”).

4. On October 29, 2019, the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the “Committee”) was appointed by the United States Trustee in the Delaware Court.

5. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor’s bankruptcy case to this Court [Docket No. 186].<sup>2</sup>

6. The Debtor has continued in the possession of its property and has continued to operate and manage its business as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code. No trustee or examiner has been appointed in this chapter 11 case.

7. On March 2, 2020, the Court entered its Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488] (the “Bar Date Order”). The Bar Date Order fixed April 8, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time) as the deadline for any person or entity, other than Governmental Units (as such term is defined in section 101(27) of the Bankruptcy Code), to file proofs of claim against the Debtor (the “General Bar Date”). For Governmental Units, the Bar Date Order fixed the deadline to file proofs of claim as April 13, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time). The Bar Date Order also set April 23, 2020 as the deadline to file claims for investors in funds managed by the Debtor (the “Fund Investor Bar Date”). The Debtor also sought and obtained the extended employee bar date of May 26, 2020 per the Order Granting Debtor's Emergency Motion and Extending Bar Date Deadline for Employees to File Claims [Docket No. 560].

8. On March 3, 2020, the Debtor filed the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims [Docket No. 498] (the “Bar Date Notice”). The Bar Date Notice was mailed to all known creditors and equity holders on March 5, 2020. See Certificate of Service [Docket No. 530].

9. The Debtor caused the Bar Date Notice to be published on two occasions each in The New York Times and The Dallas Morning News—once on March 12, 2020, and once on March 13, 2020. See Debtor's Notice of Affidavit of Publication of the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims in The New York Times [Docket No. 533] and Debtor's Notice of Affidavit of Publication of the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims in The Dallas Morning News [Docket No. 534].

The Claims Resolution Process

10. In the ordinary course of business, the Debtor maintains books and records (the “Books and Records”) that reflect, inter alia, the Debtor’s liabilities and the amounts owed to its creditors.

11. The Debtor’s register of claims (the “Claims Register”), prepared and maintained by Kurtzman Carson Consultants LLC (“KCC”)—the court-appointed notice and claims agent in this case—reflects that, as of the date of this Objection, 194 proofs of claim have been filed in the Debtor’s chapter 11 case.

12. The Debtor and its professionals have been reviewing and analyzing claims. This process includes identifying categories of claims that may be targeted for disallowance and expungement, reduction, and/or reclassification.

III. RELIEF REQUESTED

13. The Debtor seeks entry of an order, pursuant to section 502 of the Bankruptcy Code and Bankruptcy Rule 3007, (i) disallowing the Duplicate Claims listed on Schedule 1 to the Order, (ii) reducing and allowing the Overstated Claims listed on Schedule 2 to the Order in amounts which comport with the Books and Records; (iii) disallowing the Late-Filed Claims listed on Schedule 3 to the Order, (iv) disallowing the Satisfied Claims listed on Schedule 4 to the Order, (v) disallowing the No-Liability Claims listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order, and (vi) disallowing the Insufficient-Documentation Claims listed on Schedule 7 to the Order.

IV. OBJECTIONS

14. Section 502(a) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that “[a] claim or interest, proof of which is filed under section 501 of this title, is deemed allowed, unless a party in interest . . . objects.” 11 U.S.C. § 502(a). A chapter 11 debtor has the duty to object to the allowance of any claim that is improper. 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(5), 1106(a)(1), 1107(a); see also Int'l Yacht & Tennis, Inc. v. Wasserman Tennis, Inc. (In re Int'l Yacht & Tennis, Inc.), 922 F.2d 659, 661-62 (11th Cir. 1991).

15. As set forth in Bankruptcy Rule 3001(f), a properly executed and filed proof of claim constitutes prima facie evidence of the validity and amount of the claim under section 502(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. See In re O'Connor, 153 F.3d 258, 260 (5th Cir. 1998); In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 10-43400 (DML), 2012 WL 4464550, at *2 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Sept. 25, 2012). To receive the benefit of prima facie validity, however, “[i]t is elemental that a proof of claim must assert facts or allegations . . . which would entitle the claimant to a recovery.” In re Heritage Org., L.L.C., 04-35574 (BJH), 2006 WL 6508477, at *8 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 27, 2006), aff'd sub nom., Wilferth v. Faulkner, 3:06 CV 510 K, 2006 WL 2913456 (N.D. Tex. Oct 11, 2006). Additionally, a claimant’s proof of claim is entitled to the presumption of prima facie validity under Bankruptcy Rule 3001(f) only until an objecting party refutes “at least one of the allegations that is essential to the claim’s legal sufficiency.” In re Am. Reit, Inc., 07-40308, 2008 WL 1771914, at *3 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. Apr. 15, 2008); In re Starnes, 231 B.R. 903, 912 (N.D. Tex. May 14, 2008). “The ultimate burden of proof always lies with the claimant.” In re Armstrong, 347 B.R. 581, 583 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2006).

16. Section 502(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code requires disallowance of a claim if “such claim is unenforceable against the debtor and property of the debtor, under any agreement or applicable law . . . .” 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(1).

The Disputed Claims Should Be Disallowed and Expunged or Reduced

17. For the reasons set forth below, the Disputed Claims are not enforceable and should be disallowed, expunged, or reduced as set forth herein.

A. Duplicate Claims

18. The Debtor has identified 3 proofs of claim—listed on Schedule 1 to the Order—where each claimant filed multiple proofs of claim representing a single obligation of the Debtor. The Debtor is requesting that the listed Duplicate Claims be disallowed such that only the surviving claims listed on Schedule 1 remain, subject to any other objection the Debtor may bring in the future. Disallowing and expunging these claims will prevent the claimants from receiving multiple recoveries for a single claim.

B. Claims to be Reduced and Allowed

19. The Debtor has examined the 4 proofs of claim listed on Schedule 2 to the Order and has determined that the amounts listed on the claims exceed the liability listed for each claimant on the Debtor's Books and Records. The Debtor is requesting that the amount of each claim be reduced so that it correctly reflects the amount of the Debtor's books and records.

C. Late-Filed Claims

20. The Debtor has identified 1 proof of claim listed on Schedule 3 to the Order that was filed after the passage of the applicable Bar Date.

D. Satisfied Claims

21. The Debtor has identified 11 proofs of claim listed on Schedule 4 to the Order that, according to the Debtor's books and records, were fully satisfied in the ordinary course of business. Disallowing and expunging such claims, therefore, will prevent the claimants from obtaining double-recovery on account of their claims.

E. No-Liability Claims

22. The Debtor has identified 63 proofs of claim listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order that can be characterized as "No-Liability Claims"—i.e., claims that erroneously assert a liability that is not reflected in the Debtor's books and records. Certain claims listed on Schedule 5 to the Order appear to be protective claims for claimants asserting claims related to agreements with the Debtor. No amount is asserted on these claims and, although the claimants have indicated they would supplement the claims within ninety (90) days, that time has passed and no amendment or supplement has been filed and no additional documentation has been provided to support the claims. Each claim listed on Schedule 6 to the Order erroneously asserts a claim against the Debtor which has no basis in the Books and Records and is not an obligation of the Debtor. The Debtor has reviewed each No-Liability Claim listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order and all supporting information and documentation provided therewith, made reasonable efforts to research each No-Liability Claim, and determined that the Debtor is not liable for such No-Liability Claims. Accordingly, the Debtor requests that each No-Liability Claim be disallowed and expunged.

F. Insufficient-Documentation Claims

23. The Debtor was not able to determine the validity of the 10 claims listed on Schedule 7 to the Order because such claims were not filed with sufficient accompanying documentation and provided no explanation for the bases of the claims. Additionally, no liability for these claims appears on the Debtor's books and records. Accordingly, the Debtor requests that the Insufficient-Documentation Claims be disallowed and expunged because the claimants have failed to carry their burden to support their claims.

V. RESPONSES TO OBJECTIONS

24. To contest an objection, a claimant must file and serve a written response to this Objection (each, a "Response") so that it is received no later than September 1, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (Central Time) (the "Response Deadline"). Every Response must be filed with the Office of the Clerk of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (Dallas Division), Earle Cabell Federal Building, 1100 Commerce Street, Room 1254, Dallas, TX 75242-1496 and served upon the following entities, so that the Response is received no later than the Response Deadline, at the following addresses:

Overview

1. HarbourVest’s claims against Highland arise out of its November 15, 2017 investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”) to acquire a 49% interest as a minority, passive investor (the “Investment”). Highland’s actions preceding and following the Investment caused serious injury to HarbourVest, leading to damages well in excess of $100 million. On April 8, 2020, HarbourVest timely filed its proofs of claim, which are listed in the Debtor’s claims register as claims number 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154 (the “Proofs of Claim”), describing its claims (the “HarbourVest Claims”).

2. After HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim, Highland filed the Claim Objection—an omnibus objection to 92 claims. Despite being a bare-bones, omnibus objection, the Claim Objection ostensibly contains substantive (though paper-thin) objections to dozens of claims, including HarbourVest’s, tucked in among procedural and technical objections to other claims.

3. The Claim Objection states that “each claim listed on Schedule 6 to the Order [including the HarbourVest Claims] erroneously asserts a claim against the Debtor which has no basis in the Books and Records and is not an obligation of the Debtor.” Claim Obj. ¶ 22.<sup>2</sup> Schedule 6 further lists the HarbourVest Claims as purportedly having “[n]o liability on the Debtor’s books and records.” Claim Obj. Sched. 6. That is the entirety of Highland’s objection with respect to the HarbourVest Claims. Highland makes no attempt to rebut any of the factual or legal bases of the well-founded HarbourVest Claims, and indeed filed the Claim Objection before even meaningfully engaging with HarbourVest regarding the HarbourVest Claims.<sup>3</sup>

4. In addition to being deficient on its face and procedurally improper, the Claim Objection is simply inaccurate. As described below, the HarbourVest Claims are indeed obligations of Highland, and Highland is well aware of the factual bases for them—namely, the misrepresentations, omissions, and other misconduct of Highland both prior to and during HarbourVest’s Investment. Highland’s failure to book a liability associated with the damages its fraud and misconduct caused is no defense to the liability itself.

5. The Claim Objection does not rebut HarbourVest’s prima facie case for its Claims and fails on its face. For the avoidance of doubt, however, this Response provides additional details regarding the HarbourVest Claims<sup>4</sup>—details of which Highland is well aware, clearly establishing HarbourVest’s right to significant damages from Highland’s misconduct and fraudulent inducement of HarbourVest’s Investment in a fund that has merely served as a pawn

<sup>3</sup> To the extent that Highland raises any substantive objections in a reply to this Response, HarbourVest expressly reserves its rights to move to strike and/or submit additional briefing as appropriate.

in Highland's feud with a former employee (who Highland also defrauded). The Claim Objection should be overruled, and the HarbourVest Claims should be allowed.

Factual Background

6. The events giving rise to HarbourVest's claims begin in June 2016, when Highland terminated the employment of Joshua Terry ("Terry"), the employee who managed Highland's CLO business and served as CLO manager for Acis Capital Management L.P. ("Acis LP").<sup>5</sup> Litigation ensued between Terry and Highland in or around September 2016, with Terry claiming his termination was unlawful. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling at 4.

7. Around that time, on October 7, 2016, Acis LP sold Highland a participation interest in its expected future cash flow in CLO Collateral Management Agreements for $666,655 plus a $12,666,446 note payable from Highland to Acis LP (the "Highland Note"). Id. at 17. On May 31, 2017, a $3,370,694 payment was made on the Highland Note. Id.

8. By summer 2017, HarbourVest was engaged in preliminary discussions with Highland regarding the Investment. On September 8, 2017, Highland sent HarbourVest a draft term sheet, which identified the target fund as "Acis Loan Funding, Ltd." and the fund's portfolio manager as Acis LP. As described below, during the course of negotiations, Highland unilaterally changed the name of the target fund (referred to herein as HCLOF) from "Acis Loan Funding, Ltd." to "Highland CLO Funding, Ltd." and swapped out Acis LP for Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. ("Highland HCF") as portfolio manager, under false pretenses.

9. On October 20, 2017, Terry won an arbitration award of $7,949,749.15 plus post-award interest against Acis (the "Arbitration Award"). 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 4.

HarbourVest did not become aware of many of the facts described herein until long after their occurrence. HarbourVest's investigation of its claims and the surrounding factual circumstances is continuing.

Shortly thereafter, Highland orchestrated several transfers (the “Transfers”) that siphoned assets away from Acis.

10. On October 24, 2017, HCLOF acquired HCLOF shares owned by Acis LP for $991,180.13. Id. at 17–18. As this Court previously described: “[n]o credible business justification was offered for this transaction, other than mostly uncorroborated (and self-serving) statements from Highland witnesses that Acis LP was ‘toxic’ in the market place (due to the litigation with Mr. Terry) and this was a step in the process of extricating Acis LP from the CLO business.” Id. at 18.

11. Thereafter, on October 27, 2017, Acis’s portfolio management rights for HCLOF were transferred to Highland HCF. Id. at 19. Highland HCF entered into a Portfolio Management Agreement with HCLOF that superseded and replaced the HCLOF portfolio management agreements with Acis. Id. at 19. On November 3, 2017, Acis LP transferred its interest in the Highland Note to Highland CLO Management, Ltd. Id. at 19–20. The balance owing on the Note was over $9 million, but Acis received no consideration for the transfer. 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 20–21, n.37.

12. During diligence and negotiations preceding HarbourVest’s Investment, Highland hid from HarbourVest its effort to strip Acis of assets. When Highland changed HCLOF’s portfolio manager from an Acis-branded entity to a Highland-branded entity, in addition to other structural changes, Highland stated that its reason for doing so was “reputational harm” to Acis LP from the Terry Arbitration Award.

13. Further concealing its true motive—denuding Acis of value—Highland informed HarbourVest that, in lieu of redemptions, resetting the CLOs was necessary and that it would be easier to reset under the “Highland” CLO brand than the Acis CLO brand. Through November 2017, Highland continued its misrepresentations and omissions regarding the Arbitration Award and structural changes to the HCLOF investment to conceal the true purpose of these maneuvers and their implications for the Investment. In reliance on these misrepresentations, HarbourVest finalized the Investment on November 15, 2017.

14. Highland’s misrepresentations continued after the initial Investment was made. On November 27, 2017, in an email to HarbourVest attaching a Wall Street Journal article regarding the Terry Arbitration Award, Highland again assuaged HarbourVest’s concerns regarding the dispute with Terry, claiming it “has no impact on our investment activities.”

15. On December 18, 2017, a final judgment confirming the Terry Arbitration Award was entered in state court. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 4. On the same day, Mark Okada (a Highland founder) and Dugaboy Investment Trust (a family trust of Highland founder Jim Dondero) conveyed their limited partnership interests in Acis LP, 25% and 74.9%, respectively, to Neutra, Ltd. (“Neutra”), a company controlled by Highland.<sup>6</sup>

16. On December 19, 2017, Acis LP and Highland CLO Holdings Ltd. (“Highland Holdings”) entered into 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement, which transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP’s interest in the Master Sub-Advisory Agreement and Staff and Services Agreement to manage Acis CLO 2017-7’s portfolio to Highland Holdings. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 21. The agreement also transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP’s indirect equity interests in Acis CLO Management, allegedly for forgiveness of $2.8 million owed by Acis LP to Highland under the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7. Id.

<sup>6</sup> Bench Ruling & Mem. Of L. in Supp. of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; & (B) Confirmation of Ch. 11 Tr.’s Third Am. Joint Plan at 16, In re Acis Capital Mgmt., No. 18-30264-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2019), ECF No. 827 (hereinafter “1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling”); 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling at 22.

17. On January 24, 2018, after Mr. Terry became aware of the Transfers involving Acis LP and HCLOF, he requested a temporary restraining order from the Texas state court that confirmed his arbitration award. Plaintiff’s Application for TRO, Terry v. Acis Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 17-15244 (Dist. Ct. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018), A156. The state court ordered, with the agreement of Acis, that no CLO management contracts or money would be transferred away from Acis for a period of time. Transcript of Hearing held on January 24, 2018 at 42-43, Terry v. Acis Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 17-15244 (Dist. Ct. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018), A225–26.

18. On January 30, 2018, Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions (together, the “Acis Bankruptcy”) against Acis LP and its general partner, Acis Capital Management G.P. LLC (“Acis GP”), stating that the ongoing transfers and restructuring efforts were part of an “orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value.” 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 23. On April 13, 2018, this Court issued a ruling in the Acis Bankruptcy concluding that the involuntary bankruptcy case was appropriately filed and that a “chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to halt the post-Arbitration Award transactions and transfers of value out of Acis LP” Id., at 53. On May 14, 2018, Robin Phelan was appointed as trustee (the “Acis Trustee”) to oversee the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>7</sup>

19. Finally called to account for the Transfers, Highland again defaulted to its modus operandi: deception. Highland made numerous fraudulent statements, including to this Court, accusing HarbourVest of causing the Transfers that denuded Acis LP, including the following:

- Prior to the appointment of the Acis Trustee, Highland-controlled Acis falsely claimed that HarbourVest invested in HCLOF only on the condition that Acis would not have anything to do with the CLOs going forward, and that HarbourVest would demand its money back if a reset transaction was done with Acis:

- “In May 2017, a private equity firm expressed an interest in making a $150 million investment in [HCLOF]. [HCLOF] was the investment vehicle used for the various Acis CLOs, including CLO-3. However, one of the conditions demanded by [HarbourVest] in making its investment was that [HCLOF] would instruct the reissuance of certain CLOs, including CLO-3 and would sever any continuing connection that Acis had with the CLOs, including removing it as Collateral Manager. [HCLOF] issued this instruction requested by [HarbourVest] on October 6, 2017 (two weeks prior to the arbitration award).”<sup>8</sup>
- Highland witnesses claimed that HarbourVest said, with absolute certainty, that it had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was toxic, including:
  - Highland General Counsel Scott Ellington testified that HarbourVest had communicated to Highland that the Acis brand was “so toxic that it’s impossible to sell the bonds with Acis as the manager,” that “nothing can be associated with the Acis brand and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO” and that they said “categorically, with absolute certainty, if there’s any relation to Acis, the Acis brand, the Acis structure, we have no interest in doing business with you at all.”<sup>9</sup>
  - Mr. Ellington further testified that HarbourVest had “demanded” that Highland “call the deal and terminate the [collateral management agreements] or transfer the [collateral management agreements]” and that “their only directive was call and get rid of Acis or get rid of Acis or we’re not doing the deal through a reset.”<sup>10</sup>
  - Highland CEO Jim Dondero claimed that the “Boston investor” deal was “all dependent upon getting as far away from Acis as possible and a new collateral manager.”<sup>11</sup>
- Highland witnesses claimed that HarbourVest had the ability to control and dictate the terms of any reset transactions, including:

- Mr. Ellington testified that because HarbourVest “would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, it had the ability to ‘start calling the shots’ and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.” 2/7/2018 Acis Bankruptcy Transcript at 226, A281.

20. These and other statements led the Acis Trustee to investigate HarbourVest as the alleged perpetrator of the Transfers. Ultimately, the Acis Trustee served HarbourVest with broad Rule 2004 discovery requests seeking extensive information related to the Investment and a deposition of a corporate representative. HarbourVest complied with the Acis Trustee’s requests, producing significant documentation and sitting for a deposition in the Acis Bankruptcy.

21. The HarbourVest investigation was not the only expensive sideshow that Highland’s litigious behavior caused in the Acis Bankruptcy. At each step of the case, Highland and a veritable parade of its affiliates (Neutra, HCLOF, Highland HCF, CLO Holdco) filed objections and motions impeding the orderly progress of Acis’s chapter 11 proceedings. To make matters worse, HarbourVest was effectively forced to foot the bill: many of the legal fees incurred by Highland and its affiliates were funded from the coffers of HCLOF, depleting the value of HarbourVest’s Investment.

22. Despite Highland’s assurance that the Terry Arbitration Award and related restructuring efforts would have no impact on Highland’s investment activities or HarbourVest’s Investment, Highland’s misconduct and fraudulent Transfers necessitated a variety of injunctions that significantly impaired both the ability of HCLOF to operate as expected and the value of HarbourVest’s investment. The below timeline details some of the constraints on HCLOF caused by Highland’s misconduct and the additional litigation generated by it:

- a. On April 30, 2018, HCLOF sent five notices requesting optional redemption, ordering a liquidation of the CLOs.<sup>12</sup>
- b. On May 22, 2018, the Acis Trustee warned that HCLOF's attempted optional redemption notices violated the automatic stay.<sup>13</sup>
- c. On May 30, 2018, Highland and HCLOF initiated adversary proceedings alleging that the Acis Trustee breached the applicable portfolio management agreements by failing to effectuate optional redemptions pursuant to the notices.<sup>14</sup>
- d. On May 31, 2018, this Court issued a sue sponte temporary restraining order in the Acis Bankruptcy preventing any action in furtherance of the optional redemptions or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.<sup>15</sup>
- e. On June 14, 2018, HCLOF withdrew the optional redemption notices.<sup>16</sup>
- f. On June 15, 2018, the TRO expired and HCLOF gave notice to the Acis Trustee that it was requesting an optional redemption. Id. at 3-4. However, the request was ultimately withdrawn on July 6, 2018.<sup>17</sup>
- g. On June 21, 2018, the Acis Trustee filed an adversary proceeding against Highland seeking an injunction preventing Highland/HCLOF from taking steps towards a redemption.<sup>18</sup>
- h. On July 10, 2018, this Court issued an injunction preventing optional redemptions while the Acis Trustee attempted to confirm a plan or otherwise resolve the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>19</sup>
- i. On August 30, 2018, this Court denied confirmation of the First Amended Joint Plan for the Debtors and ruled that the preliminary injunction must stay in place.

- j. On March 20, 2019, following confirmation, HCLOF sent a letter to Acis LP stating that it is “neither interested in pursuing, nor able to pursue, a reset transaction.”<sup>20</sup>

Highland’s fraudulent scheme resulted in severe constraints on the HCLOF investment, including on its ability to redeem, refinance or reset the applicable CLOs, which is and was a critical element of maintaining and growing the value of the Investment. Rather than attempt to mitigate losses, Highland doubled down, further entrenching itself in its litigation positions.

23. Highland concealed its Transfer scheme from HarbourVest before the Investment through a series of fraudulent actions, omissions, and misrepresentations, concealing the truth to lock HarbourVest into a long-term, illiquid investment that was—as a result of Highland’s improper behavior—destined to fail. Had HarbourVest been properly informed of the full extent of behind-the-scenes transfers occurring involving Acis and HCLOF, and the true reasons they were made, it would never have made the Investment, and therefore would have avoided the severe price of being tangled up in Highland’s web.

24. One need look no farther than the rulings and filings in the Acis Bankruptcy to reach the conclusion that Highland’s behavior was improper, illegal, and indeed, fraudulent:

- April 13, 2018: The Court ruled that Joshua Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions against Acis LP and Acis GP due to a good faith belief that these transfers were part of an “orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value.” 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 23.
- July 2, 2018: The Acis Trustee filed counterclaims against Highland, HCLOF, Highland HCF, Highland CLO Management, Ltd., and Highland Holdings alleging they orchestrated a systematic transfer of value away from Acis to other Highland entities after Terry’s termination in 2016 through the period when the Terry Arbitration Award was issued to make Acis judgment-proof.<sup>21</sup>

- January 31, 2019: This Court confirmed Acis’s Third Amended Plan and concluded that: “The record contains substantial evidence of both intentional and constructive fraudulent transfers with regard to the Equity/ALF PMA and other assets. The numerous prepetition transfers that occurred around the time of and after the Terry Arbitration Award appear more likely than not to have been made to deprive the Debtor-Acis of value and with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Debtors’ creditors. Highland’s only purported business justifications for the prepetition transfers were that the Passive Investor demanded it and that the Debtor-Acis’s brand was toxic in the market place. However, these business justifications were not supported (and, in fact, were contradicted) by the evidence.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 27.

The Claim Objection Is Improper and Should Be Denied

28. Highland’s Claim Objection fails to put forward any evidence regarding the HarbourVest Claims. It is a mere denial of the validity of the HarbourVest Claims, based on Highland’s own say-so. It fails to refute—or even address—the legal sufficiency of the HarbourVest Claims. Highland cannot evade substantial claims by one of its largest creditors based on its illegal conduct with a one-sentence, unsupported, and blanket denial. The Claim Objection should be overruled as to HarbourVest’s Proofs of Claim as failing to satisfy even the most minimal legal requirements to object to a claim.

29. The Claim Objection is also procedurally improper. While styled as an “omnibus” objection pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3007(d), Highland’s “no liability” objection has no basis at all in the rule.<sup>24</sup> This is not just a procedural nicety. Highland’s attempt to style its conclusory-but-substantive denial of liability as a procedural objection buried in an omnibus objection underscores Highland’s lack of substantive defenses on the merits of the claims in addition to its disregard for the bankruptcy process.

<sup>24</sup> Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3007(d) provides that “objections to more than one claim may be joined in an omnibus objection if all the claims were filed by the same entity, or the objections are based solely on the grounds that the claims should be disallowed, in whole or in part, because: (1) they duplicate other claims; (2) they have been filed in the wrong case; (3) they have been amended by subsequently filed proofs of claim; (4) they were not timely filed; (5) they have been satisfied or released during the case in accordance with the Code, applicable rules, or a court order; (6) they were presented in a form that does not comply with applicable rules, and the objection states that the objector is unable to determine the validity of the claim because of the noncompliance; (7) they are interests, rather than claims; or (8) they assert priority in an amount that exceeds the maximum amount under §507 of the Code.”

The HarbourVest Claims Are Valid and Should Be Allowed

30. Highland has failed to carry its burden to rebut the prima facie case for the HarbourVest Claims. Accordingly, the HarbourVest Claims should be allowed in full. For clarity of the record, the HarbourVest Claims are described in detail below.

31. In general, the HarbourVest Claims result from (i) Highland's material misrepresentations and omissions relating to the Investment, including the existence and purpose of Highland's scheme to denude Acis and avoid payment of the Arbitration Award; (ii) Highland's gross mismanagement of the HCLOF Investment; (iii) Highland's misuse of fund assets and improper charges to HCLOF; and (iv) Highland's continued fraudulent conduct and misrepresentations during the Acis bankruptcy. Specifically, based on the above-described facts, HarbourVest has claims for, among other things: Fraud, Fraudulent Concealment, Fraudulent Inducement, Fraudulent Misrepresentation, Negligent Misrepresentation; Breach of Fiduciary Duties; Misuse of Fund Assets; U.S. State and Federal Securities Law Claims; Violations of the Federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"); and Unfair Prejudice under the Guernsey Companies Law.

A. Fraud, Fraudulent Inducement, Fraudulent Concealment, Fraudulent Misrepresentation, and Negligent Misrepresentation

32. A plaintiff pleading common law fraud must show (1) a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 8 (Aug. 2020); see also JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. v. Orca Assets G.P., L.L.C., 546 S.W.3d 648, 653 (Tex. 2018). Fraudulent inducement occurs when, through fraud, a defendant induces another to enter into a contract through the use of fraudulent misrepresentations. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 8; Anderson v. Durant, 550 S.W.3d 605, 614 (Tex. 2018).

33. Similarly, claims for fraudulent concealment or fraud by omission will lie where (1) the defendant concealed from or failed to disclose material facts to the plaintiff that the defendant had a duty to disclose; (2) the defendant knew the plaintiff was ignorant of the facts and the plaintiff did not have an equal opportunity to discover the facts; (3) the defendant was deliberately silent when the defendant had a duty to speak; (4) by failing to disclose the facts, the defendant intended to induce the plaintiff to take some action or refrain from acting; (5) the plaintiff relied on the defendant's nondisclosure; and (6) the plaintiff was injured as a result of acting without the undisclosed facts. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 16.

34. Similarly, under Guernsey law, a plaintiff may have a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation against a defendant that makes statements that he knows to be (or is reckless as to whether they are) false with the intent that they shall be acted on by another, who suffers damages as a result of reliance on those statements. Derry v. Peek (1889) 14 AC (HL) 337 (appeal taken from Eng.), A14. Damages extend to the loss actually suffered by the person as a result of the misrepresentation. Doyle v. Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd. (1969) 2 W.L.R. 673, A59.

35. Negligent misrepresentation is established when (1) the defendant made a representation in the course of the defendant's business; (2) the defendant supplied false information for the guidance of others in their business; (3) the defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information; and (4) the plaintiff suffered pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 10. Liability for negligent misstatements may also be asserted under Guernsey law where shareholders suffer financial loss as a result of acquiring shares in reliance on any misstatements made carelessly, if the defendant owes the shareholder a duty of care.<sup>25</sup> Hall v. Cable & Wireless Plc (2009) EWHC 1793 (Comm), A75.

36. Highland's conduct prior to the Investment presents a textbook case of fraud, fraudulent inducement, and fraudulent concealment and fraud by omission. As Highland and HarbourVest were negotiating the terms of the Investment, Highland both concealed and misrepresented the nature of the Transfers undertaken to deprive Acis of assets and Highland's true intentions with respect to the Terry dispute and Arbitration Award. These facts were material: indeed, HarbourVest expressed concern and requested further information regarding the Transfers, the Arbitration Award, and their implications for HCLOF and the Investment's closing date was delayed. The nature and intent behind the Transfers, and Highland's plan to use HCLOF to fund its feud with Terry, were material facts misrepresented and concealed from HarbourVest in order to induce HarbourVest to invest with HCLOF.

37. Highland's multiple, purposeful, knowing, reckless, and/or negligent misrepresentations and omissions include:

- Highland never informed HarbourVest that Highland had no intention of paying the Arbitration Award and was undertaking steps to ensure that Mr. Terry could not collect on his judgment;
- Highland did not inform HarbourVest that it undertook the Transfers to siphon assets away from Acis LP and that such transfers would prevent Mr. Terry from collecting on the Arbitration Award. Instead, Highland simply did not inform HarbourVest and represented to HarbourVest that the reason for changing the portfolio manager for HCLOF was because Acis was "toxic" in the industry and alleged reputational issues relating to Acis would detrimentally affect the HCLOF investment;

<sup>25</sup> As discussed below, during the course of the Investment, Highland owed fiduciary duties to HarbourVest as a "shadow director" or "de facto" director of HCLOF.

- Highland indicated to HarbourVest that the dispute with Mr. Terry (which appeared on a litigation schedule presented to HarbourVest during diligence) would have no impact on investment activities;
- Highland expressed confidence in the ability of HCLOF to reset or redeem the CLOs, notwithstanding that Highland was using HCLOF as part of its scheme to avoid paying the Arbitration Award.

38. Even assuming Highland's statements did not rise to the level of fraud (though they do), such statements were at minimum made negligently by Highland.

39. In reliance on Highland's misrepresentations and omissions, HarbourVest invested in HCLOF. Had these misrepresentations and omissions not occurred, HarbourVest would not have made the Investment.

40. HarbourVest has been injured from the Investment: not only has the Investment failed to accrue value, its value plummeted. The Investment's current value is far less than HarbourVest's initial contribution. This enormous decline can be traced directly back to the fraudulent Transfer scheme that Highland hid from HarbourVest behind a smokescreen of misstatements and omissions, and Highland's subsequent conduct in connection therewith. The situation has been further compounded by HCLOF's use to fund Highland's litigation and HarbourVest incurring its own out-of-pocket fees and expenses from the fallout.

B. Breach of Fiduciary Duties and Misuse of Fund Assets

41. Under Guernsey law, Highland constituted both a "shadow director" and a de facto director of HCLOF. A shadow director is a person in accordance with whose directions or instructions the directors of the company are accustomed to act. Companies (Guernsey) Law 2008 § 132(1). A "de facto" director is a person or entity that similarly has practical decision-making control over a company under Guernsey law. Carlyle Capital Corporation Ltd. v. Conway & Others, Royal Court of Guernsey, 4 September 2017, Judgment 38/2017, A2. As a shadow director and/or de facto director, Highland owed fiduciary duties to HarbourVest, which it breached by the conduct described herein.

42. At all times, Highland exercised complete control over HCLOF and over its Guernsey directors. Highland directed HCLOF's nominal directors, who acted in accordance with Highland's instructions, and Highland itself acted on behalf of HCLOF. Indeed, this Court has previously recognized evidence demonstrating that HCLOF operated at the behest of Highland, not its nominal directors:

- “It was enormously clear to the court. . . that the two Directors of HCLOF Guernsey are—stated in the kindest way possible—mere ‘figureheads’ for HCLOF Guernsey and they defer to Highland entirely to tell them what to do, what to say, and when.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 14.
- HCLOF Guernsey was “absolutely, beyond any reasonable doubt, controlled by Highland.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 17.
- The evidence was overwhelming that “(a) the HCLOF Guernsey Directors do whatever they are told to do by Highland; (b) they do not talk to anyone else but Highland; (c) they have never challenged Highland; (d) they let Highland pick and consult with their lawyers; and (e) they were not made aware by Highland of the Terry Arbitration Award, the Terry Judgment, the involuntary bankruptcy petitions, or pleadings that lawyers filed in the Bankruptcy Cases on HCLOF Guernsey’s behalf. . . [Bill Scott] confirmed that all investment decisions were made by Highland.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 46.
- Ms. Bestwick “testified that she had never talked to the Passive Investor (who, of course, is a 49% owner of HCLOF Guernsey) or Grant Scott (the trustee of the charitable organization that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey). She reiterated that she only talks to Highland employees. . . . She testified that she learned of the Terry Arbitration Award in mid-April 2018 (some six months after the fact) and ‘[y]ou’d have to ask Highland’ why it did not inform her sooner. Her testimony was clear that she defers to Highland on everything, stating that as directors they were ‘heavily reliant on our service providers, and that means Highland.’ With regard to a lawsuit that HCLOF Guernsey filed against Mr. Terry in Guernsey during the Bankruptcy Cases, she testified that it was neither her nor the other director, William Scott’s, idea.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 43–44.
- Highland’s expert, “Mr. Castro, testified that the ‘actual humans’ who would make the decision for HCLOF Guernsey as to whether to request an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs were not the HCLOF Guernsey directors but, rather, Highland executives Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, and Highland employee Mr. Covitz (acting for Highland HCF). Moreover, Mr. Alpern credibly testified that, before the Terry Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis, as the portfolio manager under the Equity/ALF PMA, rather than the HCLOF Guernsey’s directors, issued the notices of optional redemption for HCLOF Guernsey.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 23.

43. Highland’s complete control of HCLOF is further confirmed by the deposition testimony of HCLOF’s nominal directors. In a deposition in the Acis Bankruptcy, HCLOF’s then-Director Heather Bestwick testified that:

- She first learned about the Terry arbitration award from Highland in April 2018 and did not need to do any further independent verification because the directors relied on Highland to keep them updated.<sup>26</sup>
- She was unable to remember a time she disagreed with Mr. Scott or Highland. Id. at 48:10–49:12, A539.
- Highland is involved in any substantive conversation about HCLOF, and Bestwick relied on Highland’s advice and judgment as to what was in the best interest of investors. Id. 50:10–24, 58:12–59:20, 67:13–68:7, 138:4–21 & 172:9–173:6, A540, 542, 544, 552 & 560.
- She lacked a command of the fees that Acis and Highland were receiving from HCLOF, and did not know whether Highland Capital might have differing interests from Highland HCF. Id. at 99:10–100:11 & 155:13–20, A547, 556.
- Conversations with Highland were the extent of the due diligence done with respect to a new portfolio manager. Id. 200:14–201:20, A562.

44. Similarly, HCLOF then-Director William Scott testified that:

- The directors had “no knowledge” of litigation with Terry or the arbitration award until 2018; the litigation did not cause him to second-guess his relationship with Highland.<sup>27</sup>
- The directors went with the counsel selected by Highland to represent HCLOF. Id. at 91:25–94:25, A566–67.
- Investment decisions for HCLOF are formulated by Highland; the role of the directors is just to “police” the performance of the service providers, and he has never disagreed with Ms. Bestwick or Highland on HCLOF matters. Id. at 102:16–104:1, 105:22–107:17, A570–71.

- He did not take any steps to investigate the Terry situation; he got all information he knows about it from Highland. Id. at 140:13–145:5, A575–76.
- Highland has not made key information available to the directors of HCLOF. Id. at 263:20–265:23, A584. Scott himself lacked information about the various Transfers in 2017 that were conducted by Highland. Id. at 214:19–216:14, 220:6–221:11, A579–80.

45. As a “shadow director” or “de facto” director of HCLOF, Highland breached several duties, including its duty of care, its duty to exercise powers for a proper purpose, its duty to avoid/mitigate conflicts of interest, and its duty to act in good faith and in the best interests of the company. Highland breached its fiduciary duties as a shadow/ de facto director as set out below.

46. Highland is liable for breach of fiduciary duty for its continued misrepresentations and omissions relating to the Arbitration Award and the Transfers, including following HarbourVest’s Investment, its conduct of litigation relating to Mr. Terry and the Acis Bankruptcy, and its mismanagement of HCLOF following the Investment.

47. This includes the massive legal fees that were charged to HCLOF by Highland and Highland-related entities in furtherance of Highland’s scheme. Since at least 2018, immense and unwarranted legal fees were borne by HCLOF’s investors for Highland’s scorched-earth litigation relating to Terry and the Acis Bankruptcy, including significant litigation costs that were not in the interests of HCLOF.

48. As this Court noted, the Acis Bankruptcy proceedings “have been astonishingly contentious,” with Highland, HCLOF, and Neutra “in ‘lockstep’ with one another in objecting to virtually every position taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee,” and the Highland entities “have opposed virtually every action taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, resulting in many long hearings.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 3, 11. This extensive litigation has spanned multiple jurisdictions (United States and Guernsey) and venues (state court, federal bankruptcy court, federal district and appellate courts), and included appeals of nearly every substantive ruling during the Acis Bankruptcy. HCLOF's investors—including HarbourVest—bore millions of dollars of legal fees incurred by numerous parties, including attorneys' fees for (i) HCLOF, (ii) Highland, (iii) Acis, (iv) Highland HCF and (v) various affiliated persons, entities and experts.

49. No justifiable basis existed for Highland to cause HCLOF to pay Highland-related parties' expenses and fees arising from the Acis Bankruptcy. Those fees were grossly inappropriate, excessive, and unreasonable, caused by Highland's own malfeasance, and they are not covered under the HCLOF governing documents.

50. On this point, it is worth underscoring that, to HarbourVest's knowledge, HCLOF has, to date, incurred more than $15 million in legal fees since 2018, much of which appears to be related to fighting an $8 million Arbitration Award. Even if such fees could appropriately be charged to HCLOF (and they cannot), the amount of legal fees incurred is grossly unreasonable. Highland's use of HCLOF assets to pay these astounding legal fees creates liability for its misuse of fund assets in gross breach of its duties as a sub-advisor and as a shadow / de facto director.

51. In addition to the improper legal expenses, Highland's gross mismanagement of HCLOF includes Highland (i) directing the Trustee to sell numerous loans during the Acis Bankruptcy and (ii) failing to reset the CLOs and or consider alternatives in light of the court-ordered injunction on resets.<sup>28</sup>

<sup>28</sup> See, e.g., Acis Trustee Complaint at 29, n. 46 (“Defendants have options available that immediately mitigate any purported damage. Namely, Defendants could (1) authorize a ‘refinance’ or ‘reset’ transaction or (2) sell their equity to a third party in an amount that exceeds what they would receive in an Optional Redemption.”), A319; Second Am. Compl. at 24–28, Acis Capital Mgmt GP, L.L.C. v. Highland Capital Mgmt, L.P., Adv. No. 18-03078-sgj (Bankr. N.D. Tex. June 20, 2019), ECF No. 157 (Highland Capital “grossly mismanaged the CLOs” when it “failed to purchase a single loan for the CLOs . . . [and] in an apparent tactical move to accumulate cash in the CLOs . . . ordered that the Trustee sell numerous loans.” When the Trustee found new parties to perform services under the Sub Agreements, Highland Capital “offered to provide the same services it was providing Acis for 17.5 basis points less than it previously charged, a tacit acknowledgement that

C. Securities Claims

52. HarbourVest also has state and federal securities fraud claims against Highland.

53. Under the Texas Securities Act (the “TSA”), “[a] person who offers or sells a security . . . by means of an untrue statement of a material fact or an omission to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading, is liable to the person buying the security from him, who may sue either at law or in equity for rescission, or for damages if the buyer no longer owns the security.” Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-33(A)(2) (West). Hence, “to recover under the TSA, a buyer of a security must prove that the security was sold by means of (1) an untrue statement of material fact or (2) an omission to state a material fact that is necessary in order to make the statements made not misleading.” Kubbernus v. ECAL Partners, Ltd., 574 S.W.3d 444, 480 (Tex. App. 2018). A plaintiff need not show reliance, loss causation, or damages under the TSA. See id.; In re Skyport Glob. Commc'ns, Inc., No. 08-36737, 2011 WL 111427, at *47 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 13, 2011). In addition to primary violators, “[a] person who directly or indirectly controls a seller, buyer, or issuer of a security” or “who directly or indirectly with intent to deceive or defraud or with reckless disregard for the truth or the law materially aids a seller, buyer, or issuer of a security,” is liable under the TSA “jointly and severally with the seller, buyer, or issuer and to the same extent as if he were the seller, buyer, or issuer.” Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-33 (F) (West).

Mr. Scott, a director of HCLOF Guernsey, testified that HCLOF Guernsey can sell its interest in the subordinated notes in the market.”); 1/31/19 Confirmation Ruling at 20 (“[A]fter Mr. Terry was terminated, the fees owed by the Debtor-Acis to Highland under these agreements shot up to an enormously higher level.”).

or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe.” 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b). And Rule 10b-5, promulgated by the SEC under the authority of Section 10(b), makes it unlawful for “any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce, or of the mails or of any facility of any national securities exchange,” to “employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud”; “make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading”; or “engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security.” 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

55. The Supreme Court has recognized an implied private cause of action to enforce Section 10(b) and its implementing regulation, Rule 10b-5. Matrixx Initiatives, Inc. v. Siracusano, 563 U.S. 27, 37 (2011). To state a claim under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 based on an alleged misrepresentation or omission, a plaintiff must show “(1) a material misrepresentation or omission by the defendant; (2) scienter; (3) a connection between the misrepresentation or omission and the purchase or sale of a security; (4) reliance upon the misrepresentation or omission; (5) economic loss; and (6) loss causation.” Id. (citations omitted). Joint and several liability for violations of Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 extends to “[e]very person who, directly or indirectly, controls any person liable under” Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 “to the same extent as such controlled person.” 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a).

56. Here, Highland, in connection with its sale of HCLOF shares to HarbourVest, made material misrepresentations and omitted material facts, as detailed above. That is sufficient to state a claim under the TSA. Those material misrepresentations and omitted material facts likewise state a claim under federal law for the recovery of damages caused by Highland's fraud, because they were made with the intent to deceive HarbourVest, were relied upon by HarbourVest, and caused substantial losses to HarbourVest's investment.

D. RICO Claims

57. RICO makes it unlawful, among other things, for a person associated with an enterprise to conduct or participate in the conduct of the enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity. See 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). Under RICO, any person injured in his business or property by reason of such a violation may recover treble damages and reasonable attorney's fees. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

58. Here, Highland engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity involving numerous predicate acts over multiple years, including mail, wire, and bankruptcy fraud, as part of a scheme to defraud Terry, obstruct the enforcement of his judgment, and obtain investor funding to further finance the scheme. Highland committed these violations through its control of and conduct of the affairs of multiple enterprises, including Acis.

59. In furtherance of that scheme, Highland committed further predicate acts of fraud and bankruptcy fraud as described at length herein, including when, prior to the appointment of the Acis Trustee, Highland caused Acis to make false statements with respect to HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy proceedings. See 18 U.S.C. § 152(2), (3). Highland's statements were made with knowledge of their falsity and caused HarbourVest significant damages as detailed above, including significant and unwarranted fees and expenses from the Acis Trustee's investigation, and Highland is liable for its pattern of deceptive and fraudulent behavior.

E. Unfair Prejudice

60. HarbourVest also has claims against Highland for unfair prejudice under Guernsey law. Under Section 349 of the Companies (Guernsey) Law 2008, shareholders may apply for relief where the affairs of a company have been conducted in a manner that is unfairly prejudicial to the applicant. § 349(1)(a). To succeed on such an application, the applicant need show only that: (1) the acts or omissions of which he complains of were acts of the Company, including acts taken by the board or a shadow director; (2) the conduct of those affairs has caused prejudice to the applicant's interests as a member of the Company, and (3) the prejudice is unfair. Prodefin Trading Ltd. v. Midland Res. Holding Ltd., Royal Court of Guernsey, 14 February 2017, Judgment 7/2017, A91.

61. The court's remedial powers for an unfair prejudice claim are broad. Section 350 of the Guernsey Companies Law provides: "[i]f the Court is satisfied that an application under section 349 is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of." Such relief may include ordering a buyout of the applicant's interests as a member of the Company at a price adjusted to reflect what the value of such interests would have been had the prejudicial conduct not taken place. Id.; see also Re Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. (1985) 3 All ER 523, A117. Relief is commonly granted against those who have caused the unfairly prejudicial conduct, including non-members of the company, where it is just to do so. Re Little Olympian Each-Ways Ltd. (1994) 2 BCLC 420, A140.

62. HarbourVest has been unfairly prejudiced by the full range of Highland's actions and behavior described above, including (i) the fraudulent Transfers immediately preceding and following the Investment, as well as misrepresentations and omissions regarding those Transfers and the Arbitration Award; (ii) breaches of fiduciary duty by Highland as shadow or de facto director of the Company; (iii) misuse of fund assets and legal fee charges to HCLOF; (iv) mismanagement of the HCLOF investment by Highland; and (v) Highland's false statements about HarbourVest, including to this Court, accusing HarbourVest of perpetrating the Transfers.

Such actions warrant relief based upon what the value of HarbourVest's interests in HCLOF would have been had Highland not engaged in such misconduct—a value that far exceeds the Investment's current value.

Prayer for Relief

63. HarbourVest respectfully requests: (i) this Court deny and overrule the Claim Objection with respect to HarbourVest's Proof of Claim, (ii) sustain and allow HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim, and (iii) grant HarbourVest such other and further relief to which it may be justly entitled, both at law and in equity.

EXHIBIT A

(7) The Entity Defendants as Directors

713. The first seven Defendants are individuals who were formally appointed directors of CCC, as its first directors, in accordance with its Articles of Association. The Plaintiffs' claims are made against them as such. The Entity Defendants were not appointed directors of CCC. The Plaintiffs nonetheless claim that, on the facts of this case, they each can and should be held liable as if they had been validly appointed directors of CCC, on the basis that they were, in Guernsey law, either de facto directors of CCC or "shadow" directors of CCC, and that they therefore owed to CCC the same duties as if they had been duly appointed directors. There is little or no Guernsey law on this topic, but there is a large body at least of English law on the requirements for making out either qualification.

(a) De facto* directors

714. The term "de facto director" does not appear in Guernsey company legislation. The material Law in this case is the 1994 Companies Law, as amended in 1996. This was the Law in force at the time of the events complained of; the 2008 Companies Law did not come into effect until 1st July 2008.

Section 117 of the 1994 Companies Law provides that

"In this Law unless the context otherwise requires,

.... 'director' means a person occupying the position of director, by whatever name called".

715. This is slightly different from s.131 of the 2008 Companies Law, and indeed from all the recent English Acts at the time – the Companies Act 1948 s 455(1), Companies Act 1985 s 741(1) and Companies Act 2006, s 250. In all of these the definition is inclusive, rather than exhaustive, as exemplified by s. 131 of the 2008 Companies Law, which reads:

"In this Law "director" includes an alternate director and any person occupying the position of director, by whatever name called." (emphasis added).

716. On a straightforward reading, s. 117 therefore deals only with nomenclature, making it clear that a company officer is to be treated as a "director" if he functions as such, even if he has a different official title. It does not refer to persons acting with no official position or title at all. However, since the thrust of s. 117 is that liability in the eyes of the law arises from "occupying the position of 'director'" (ie carrying out the functions of a director) an appropriately purposive construction suggests that the definition covers persons acting as a director but with no title at all, ie no formal appointment to any office. I would so read it, and I therefore conclude that the minor difference in wording between s. 117 of the 1994 Companies Law and s 131 of the 2008 Companies Law is not of significance for this case, and neither, here, is the fact that the 1994 Companies Law, though modelled on the English statute, used this slightly different wording. In particular, I am satisfied that English authority provides useful assistance as to the scope of de facto directorship under the 1994 Companies Law.

717. The concept of a de facto director in English law was first recognised, in the 19th century, in the case of a person who had acted as a company director, but whose appointment was defective. Such a person could not escape responsibility as a director of the company by relying on the invalidity of his appointment. He had acted as a director de facto.

718. The first English case to extend the concept beyond this, to a person who had never even purportedly been appointed as a director of the company, appears to have been Re Lo-Line Electric Motors Ltd [1988] Ch 477. The defendant there had never been formally appointed, but was found to have been held out by the de iure directors of the company as being a director, and he had behaved as such. He was held to be a de facto director. This led Millett J (as he then was) in Re Hydrodan (Corby) Limited [1994] 2 BCLC 180, to explain the concept in the following terms:

“...a de facto director is a person who assumes to act as a director. He is held out as a director by the company, and claims and purports to be a director although never actually or validly appointed as such. To establish that a person was a de facto director of a company it is necessary to plead and prove that he undertook functions in relation to the company which could properly be discharged only by a director. It is not sufficient to show that he was concerned in the management of the company’s affairs or undertook tasks in relation to its business which can properly be performed by a manager below board level.” (emphasis added).

719. The concept was later extended yet again to include persons who were not even held out by the company as directors but who purported to act as directors of the company with no authority at all. It thus extends to those who “interfere” in the company’s affairs.
720. All this shows, though, that the focus is on the defendant’s acts. The reason for imposing liability is that those who in fact act as company directors should be held responsible as such. However, the extension simply to those who meddle brings a need to define and delimit the factual basis which does import liability. Thus, in the passage of Millett J’s judgment cited above, the passage emphasised is of central importance. The principle is that liability as a director is incurred by a defendant for doing acts, in relation to the company, which could be properly done only by a director. It is therefore necessary to decide if that condition is made out by identifying what acts can only be done by a director in the particular company. This requires investigating and identifying the corporate governance structure of the company, so as to see whether the relevant acts of the defendant are “directorial” (as I shall now refer to them) in that context.
721. Jumping slightly ahead, the most recent English case in which the authorities with regard to de facto directorship have been reviewed is Smithton Ltd v Naggar [2014] EWCA Civ 939, relied on by the Plaintiffs. Arden LJ there synthesised the cases, concluding that:

“where a person had never been even invalidly appointed a director, it was necessary to examine the governance system of the company in order to assess whether he acted as a director”.

At [35] – [42] she set out a series of practical points material to determining whether a person was a de facto director. I distil those which are material to this case, as follows;

- (i) A party may be a de facto director even if there is no invalid appointment; the question is whether he carried out the function, and thus assumed responsibility to act as, a director;
- (ii) To answer that question, the court may have to determine in what capacity the alleged director was acting;
- (iii) The court will in general also have to determine the corporate governance structure of the company, (which can and will vary from company to company), so as to decide whether, in relation to the company’s business the defendant’s acts were “directorial” in nature; it is important that a first instance judge make findings in this regard;
- (iv) The court is required to look at what the party actually did and not any job title he had;

- (v) The test is objective; neither the party's intention, nor his belief that he was or was not acting as a director, is of any relevance;
  - (vi) The test is fact and circumstance dependent. It may be appropriate to look at the party's actions "in the round" but equally, in an exceptional case even a single act may be taken to constitute a person a de facto director; and
  - (vii) Whether the company held the party out as being a director would be a relevant factor; whether third parties regarded him as being a director may be material evidence.
722. I will adopt and apply these principles. I also add my own comments and emphasis to them, being points which I derive from looking at the authorities generally.
723. First, and as to (iii) above, in Holland v HMRC [2010] UKSC 51, Lord Collins observed at [91] that
- "it is just as difficult to define "corporate governance" as it is to identify those activities which are essentially the sole responsibility of a director or board of directors"*.
724. It seems to me that these are two ways of stating what is really the same test. Once one finds "directorial" acts, then whether one describes these as rendering the actor part of the corporate governance structure of the company, or whether one simply says that he must be taken to have assumed the functions of a director by so acting, is simply a matter of language.
725. Also as to (iii), the qualification noted by Millett J in Hydrodan remains; the test requires the finding of actual "directorial" acts on the part of the defendant and merely being involved in the management of the company, or exercising a degree of influence over its decision making, is not in itself enough, although in the former case it may become enough if there is no other person involved in the management of the company in practice. That, however, is not this case.
726. Next, because liability as a de facto director is brought upon a defendant as the legal consequence of his own acts and their being found to be "directorial acts", it is imposed only in respect of such directorial acts; a "de facto director" does not automatically become responsible for the totality of the company's acts or activities.
727. Identifying what are or are not "directorial" acts in any particular case may not be easy. At the company's inception, all its powers to act are vested in its directors (by whatever name called) as a result of company legislation and the particular company's articles of association. Subsequently, such powers can be delegated, to a greater or lesser degree. In the case of a small and simple company, authority to act for the company and deal with its assets may well remain with its directors, both at the high level of strategic decision-making and the low level of everyday decisions and acts of implementation. In the case of companies with large enterprises, employees, advisers and agents will be engaged to carry out the more everyday work, and where the nature of the business is complex or requires expertise, others may be involved in high level decision-making or activities. The structure will vary with the particular needs of the company and the particular skills of the directors. Insofar as the directors delegate active functions, their involvement will then, quite properly, become more supervisory than operational, although a residue of supervisory function will always remain at the core and be non-delegable. Therefore, whilst decisions within the retained area(s) of control remaining with the directors will certainly be "directorial" in nature, how far, within the spectrum of possible structures, actual delegation of power to act may have gone can differ from company to company, and will be fact-specific. Whilst the authorities acknowledge the difficulty of generally identifying what are or are not "directorial" acts in respect of a company, it seems to me that, in practice and like the proverbial elephant, one is likely to be able to recognise such an act in context, even if one cannot easily define it.

728. Thus far, however, the cases have been concerned only with holding a natural person to be a de facto director of a company. What is here alleged is that another corporate entity should be held to have been a de facto director of a company, and this adds yet another dimension to the concept of a de facto director.
729. The important case of Holland v HMRC [2010] UKSC 51 illustrates the analytical issues which have to be grappled with when the factual situation extends to corporate entities. In simple terms, in Holland, the subject company (S) was owned by another company (H) which was in turn owned by Mr Holland with his wife, and Mr Holland was the sole director of company H. The sole director of company S was company H. The issue was whether, through being the sole director of Company H which was the corporate director of Company S, and carrying out acts on behalf of Company S, Mr Holland had been a de facto director of Company S, so as to incur personal liability for an undoubted misapplication of Company S's funds. It was held by the majority of the Supreme Court (led by Lord Collins) that Mr Holland was not a de facto director of Company S, even though every decision of Company S was actually taken by him and implemented by him. This was because he was to be taken to have done those acts as the appropriate organ of, or agent for, Company H, the de iure corporate director. His acts were therefore the acts of Company H.
730. This decision was driven by respect for the distinction between the legal personality of a company and its owners, and a reluctance to pierce the corporate veil, (see [25]), influenced by the fact that company legislation permitted one company to be a director of another company. The dissenting minority, (led by Lord Hope) agreed that merely being a director of a corporate director (H) of a company (S) did not ipso facto render that person a de facto director of company S, and that something "more" (compare Hydrodan (above) at p 184B) was required. However, they considered that the extensive nature of the acts actually performed by Mr Holland in regard to Company S did amount to that something "more", and they would have found him to be a de facto director.
731. On any basis, though, the entire Supreme Court plainly felt it right to reject, as an acceptable basis for the imposition of liability, an impressionistic "broad brush" argument that Mr Holland was "really" a director of the subject company, in the sense that he was its directing mind in a generalised way. All members tested the position by a principled legal analysis of the corporate structures which had been set up, and the position, authority and pertinent acts of the defendant which were claimed to have made him a de facto director. (It is to be borne in mind that no argument as to Mr Holland's being a shadow director of Company S arose in this case.)
732. I do not overlook that the reasoning in the Holland case may well have been influenced by the particular development of English law as regards the use of corporate directors. English company law had expressly provided that a corporation could be the director of a company in the Companies Act 1985, but it had intervened again in the Companies Act 2006 (s.155(1)) to decree that a company must have at least one natural person as a director. This was to avoid the unacceptable consequence that a company might have no natural person who could be held accountable for misapplication of its assets.
733. No such developments have featured in Guernsey law, at any rate at the time with which I am concerned. Corporate directors were (and still are) permitted, by the combined effects of s 117 of the 1994 Companies Law quoted above and the Interpretation (Guernsey) Law 1948, which enacts that unless the context otherwise requires, a reference in any enactment to a "person" means either a natural or a legal person. It follows that the actual decision in Holland, which would not be binding on this court, might be inappropriate in a Guernsey law context. I can see that it also might be thought that there was some force in the minority approach in that case.

734. However, this is not a point which arises for decision here. The actual decision in Holland is not directly material to this case, because there the claim was to hold an individual liable as a de facto director because of his own personal acts, whereas here the claim is the reverse; it is to hold another company liable as a de facto director because of the acts of individuals associated with that company.
735. What is to be derived from Holland, and other cases such as Kuwait Asia Bank EC v National Mutual Life Nominees Ltd [1991] 1 AC 187 (which decides that a party with the power to appoint a director to a company does not thereby become liable for the acts of such director, whether vicariously as his employer, or at all), is the importance of the capacity in which a natural person is acting, for the purpose of the correct legal analysis of the overall situation.
736. It is material in at least two different ways. The first is the requirement already noted that the relevant act within the subject company must be an act required to be done by someone with the capacity of a director. If the defendant could have carried out the acts in question in some other capacity, either because they were not acts which only a director could carry out (Hydrodan) or because the defendant enjoyed some other capacity in which he could properly do them (Holland), then the defendant is not a de facto director.
737. The second is that, since a corporate entity can only act through a natural person, where it is sought to make a corporate entity liable as a de facto director, one must find not only directorial acts done by the relevant natural person on behalf of the subject company, but also that that natural person was carrying out those acts as agent of the corporate entity sought to be made liable as its de facto director. Not only that, but it seems to me that, analysing the authorities, he must be found to be doing so only in such capacity.
738. It follows, in my judgment, that it will be well-nigh impossible to fix a corporate entity with liability as a de facto director of another company through the acts of any individual who was a de iure director of that other company at the time. That individual will obviously be carrying out “directorial acts” in his capacity as a director of the company, and not as agent for the targeted defendant.

(b) Shadow directors

739. The term “shadow director” is found in the 1994 Companies Law only through having been introduced by amendment in 1996. It was introduced, though, only for the purpose of the new section 67C, which relates to wrongful trading:-

“67C ....(7) In this section “director” includes a shadow director, which means a person in accordance with whose directions or instructions the directors of the company are accustomed to act” (emphasis added).

740. It follows that the Plaintiffs can certainly invoke the doctrine of shadow directorship against the Entity Defendants with regard to their wrongful trading claims. The question whether they can do so with regard to their claims based on the general fiduciary duties or duties of skill and care owed by a director to his company is not so clear.
741. The concept of the “shadow director” was enacted into Guernsey law more broadly in the 2008 Companies Law (see s. 132), but that was, of course, only as from 1st July 2008, and even then the enactment did not extend the term “director” as used in the Companies Law generally to include a “shadow director” as there defined. Rather, it enacted that where the term “shadow director” was itself used in the 2008 Companies Law, this meant a “person in accordance with whose directions or instructions the directors of the company are” accustomed to act”, and in s 132(3) it specifically extended the meaning of the word “director” in particular sections of the Law (ss 160 and 162-4, which have no relevance here) to include a “shadow director”, as so defined.

742. Thus, in both the 1994 Law and the 2008 Law, the operation of the defined concept of a “shadow director” is confined to the two situations, first where that term is actually used in the Law itself, and second where it is specifically directed to be treated as if it had been used. These situations do not include the operation of the company director’s fiduciary duties or duties of skill and care, neither of which is actually laid down in the Companies Laws at all. Neither Law enacted that wherever the term “director” was being used or applied in the Law, it included a shadow director.
743. The significance of this is that liability as a de facto director of a company applies because the office of a “director” in company law has been held, by judicial interpretation of that term (in English law but with Guernsey law reasonably following suit), to extend to a person who acts as a director of a company in actual fact, even though not as of right. However, liability as a shadow director is not the result of judicial interpretation, but of legislative enactment. It is therefore confined to the cases stipulated by the enactment.
744. It consequently seems to me, that it is only if the concept of de facto directorship itself could be extended to include the shadow directorship situation that this would enable a finding of liability for breach of fiduciary duty or of duty of skill and care to be made against a shadow director. This would be a perfectly reasonable interpretation. The basis for imposing liability on persons as de facto directors of companies is that of imposing duties and responsibilities to the company on those who are in practice taking the operative decisions on its behalf. This principle can be applied just as readily to the shadow director situation as it does to the conventional de facto director situation.
745. If it were open to me to do so, I would readily construe the Guernsey Companies Laws to the effect that a person could “occupy the position of director” of a company by issuing directions or instructions to its de iure directors which those directors were accustomed to act upon, and thus that person would be a director of the company, in any material respect according to the facts.
746. However, albeit with reluctance and on balance, I do not think that doing so is open to me. It seems to me that the terms of the Companies Laws - and it is even more clear in the 2008 Law - treat the concept of shadow directorship and the situation giving rise to it as being a separate and distinct concept in its own right. The legislature has then prescribed the situations in which the situation of a person falling within that concept is to be taken to impose director’s liabilities or duties, initially on a very limited basis in 1996, and subsequently in a wider range of situations in 2008. That being the case, it seems to me that the legislature has to be taken to have intended those situations to be exhaustive with regard to shadow directorship, and that in enacting those express provisions it was implicitly ruling that the term “director” did not, itself, extend to them. The consequence is that the legislation seems to me to have ruled out any permissible judicial extension of the principles of de facto directorship to include shadow directorship.
747. It would follow that liability as a shadow director in Guernsey law applies only where the applicable Companies Law directly stipulates. I would hold, therefore, that the allegation of shadow directorship against the Entity Defendants is available only in respect of the Plaintiffs’ claim for wrongful trading. However, I have to consider the legal principles regarding a shadow director for the purpose of the wrongful trading claim in any event. I therefore do so generally and what I say below are my findings on the scope of the concept of shadow directorship in Guernsey law, whether its application is limited as just discussed or not.

748. First, a minor point of construction. Under the 2008 Companies Law, the definition of a shadow director was extended by adding the further qualification that a person was

“not to be regarded as a shadow director by reason only that the directors act on advice given by him in a professional capacity” (s. 132(2)).

749. I do not think this makes any substantive difference to the meaning of the concept under s 67 of the 1994 Companies Law as amended. In my judgment, this qualification is really implicit in the original wording, not least because “advice” and “directions or instructions” are different things. I accept that “advice” could conceivably be rendered in such a way that it could fairly be characterised as either “directions” or “instructions”. However, that would be a matter of fact to be proved, and does not mean that advice generally is to be taken as falling naturally within such a description.

750. I do not think that I was urged by Advocate Wessels to infer, from the introduction of this qualification on 1st July 2008, that prior to that time a professional adviser in Guernsey on whose advice directors of a company would generally act was to be taken to be a shadow director of the company, but I would in any event decline to do so. To do so would, in my judgment, be attributing far too much inferential weight to amendments to companies legislation which were probably inserted for the avoidance of doubt, and would in fact be contrary to what I have indicated I would regard as the natural meaning of the words in context, according to their obvious policy intention.

751. I approach the matter, therefore, on the basis that the court is looking for “directions” or “instructions”, even though it would not be precluded from finding, on appropriate facts, that communications which were termed “advice” nonetheless fell into those categories in substance.

752. Once again, the English case of Re Hydrodan (Corby) Ltd (above) provides a useful starting point for formulating the appropriate test. Millett J, at p 183 c-e, and having emphasised the contrast with a de facto director, (in that the former openly acts as a director, whereas the latter claims not to be a director at all), determined that the statutory definition required proof of

“(1) who are the directors of the company, whether de facto or de jure; (2), that the defendant directed those directors how to act in relation to the company or that he was one of the persons who did so; (3) that those directors acted in accordance with such directions; and (4) that they were accustomed so to act. What is needed is first, a board of directors claiming and purporting to act as such; and secondly, a pattern of behaviour in which the board did not exercise any discretion or judgment of its own, but acted in accordance with the directions of others.”

753. Later English authority has established that it is not necessary for all the directors to act in accordance with the relevant directions or instructions; a governing majority will suffice: see Ultraframe (UK) Ltd v Fielding [2005] EWHC 1638 at [1272]. It is also not necessary that an alleged shadow director should control all the decisions of the directors, or all the company’s field of activities: Secretary of State for Industry v Deverell [2001] Ch 340 per Morritt LJ. There must, though, be actual “acts” by the Board which are being controlled in the manner described, because this is what is stated in the statutory definition. There must also be a pre-existing pattern of such allegedly controlled acting. This is necessary in order to satisfy the requirement of “being accustomed”: see Ultraframe (above) at [1277-8].

754. The essence of this concept is that the alleged shadow director is, in reality, the actual director or the “directing mind” of the company in the relevant respects, (ie the offending acts of the de jure – or it could even be: de facto - directors), because those who are actually carrying out the particular offending acts are merely the conduits of his wishes and decisions.

755. Lewison J in Ultraframe expressed some reservations as to the extent of fiduciary duties properly imposed on shadow directors, since they would usually be incurring liability precisely because they would be operating with a conflict of interest as regards another person or entity (at [1290]). I would decline to follow that dictum on any basis, though, for being what I would regard as an unguarded comment, since the whole point of imposing liability for shadow directorship is precisely to hold liable the persons who are in fact directing a company's affairs contrary to what would otherwise be its directors' duties. Fortunately, in Vivendi SA v Richards, [2013]EWHC 3006, Newey J clarified the position sensibly, concluding that shadow directors did owe fiduciary duties to the company, and that

"A shadow director can, I think reasonably be expected to act in the company's interests rather than his own separate interests when giving such [sc. such as the directors will be accustomed to act upon] directions and instructions." [143].

756. Once again, though, discussion of this topic shows the need for careful analysis of what is actually going on in substance, especially as regards defendants with a potential conflict of interest. This is highlighted by some of the examples considered in Ultraframe, which discuss (see [1266-9]) the position of funders, lenders, suppliers, etc, who may be able to dictate the actions of the company to its board because of the strength of their commercial negotiating position. Lewison J accepted and endorsed the view that doing so would not make that counterparty a shadow director of the company. He also accepted that a creditor of the company is entitled to protect his own interests as creditor without necessarily becoming a shadow director of the company. This is a realistic approach and, on a more general plane, it underlines that the courts will be careful, in making judgments in the context of commercial matters, to give appropriate recognition to the realities of the business world. Such recognition, together with the exception of trusted professional advisers from liability, emphasises both the focus of the policy that imposes liabilities on shadow directors, and that any finding is dependent on facts.

757. Advocate Wessels took me to Secretary of State for Industry v Deverell (above) as his principal authority and as epitomising the test for shadow directorship. Morritt LJ summarised his conclusions at [35] in five propositions:

"... (1) The definition of a shadow director is to be construed in the normal way.....it should not be strictly construed....."

"(2) The purpose of the legislation is to identify those, other than professional advisers, with real influence in the corporate affairs of the company. But it is not necessary that such influence should be exercised over the whole field of its corporate activities....."

"(3) Whether any particular communication from the alleged shadow director, whether by words or conduct, is to be classified as a direction or instruction must be objectively ascertained by the court in the light of all the evidence. In that connection I do not accept that it is necessary to prove the understanding or expectation of either giver or receiver. In many, if not most, cases it will suffice to prove the communication and its consequence. Evidence of such understanding or expectation may be relevant but it cannot be conclusive. Certainly the label attached by either or both parties then or thereafter cannot be more than a factor in considering whether the communication came within the statutory description of direction or instruction."

"(4) Non-professional advice may come within that statutory description. The proviso excepting advice given in a professional capacity appears to assume that advice generally is or may be included. Moreover the concepts of "direction" and “instruction” do not exclude the concept of “advice” for all three share the common feature of “guidance”.

“(5) It will, no doubt, be sufficient to show that in the face of “directions or instructions” from the alleged shadow director the properly appointed directors or some of them cast themselves in a subservient role or surrendered their respective discretions. But I do not consider that it is necessary to do so in all cases. Such a requirement would be to put a gloss on the statutory requirement that the board are “accustomed to act” “in accordance with” such directions or instructions.....a qualification beyond that justified by the statutory language.”

758. I would broadly accept these propositions but with the following qualification.
759. First, I do not think that Mr Wessels sought to argue that the “real influence” referred to in proposition (2) can be viewed as either an accurate paraphrase for, or an alternative expression of, the qualifying test for being a shadow director contained in the statutory definition itself. i.e. the requirement of there being “directions or instructions.” If he did, so, then I reject that argument. In my judgment, it is not available, certainly not insofar as it is inconsistent with the actual words of the statute. A test of “real influence” is not only not the statutory requirement, but is both so vague as to be unworkable, and departs too far from the essence of the concept, which is that a “shadow” director is a person who is, in reality, running the company in the relevant respect, albeit doing so through the actions of others who compliantly do his will. It may be possible that a person who has serious influence on the affairs of the company because his views or advice are habitually sought and acted on out of deference could fall within the definition of shadow director, but that would depend on whether the circumstances justified the relevant findings of fact as to the communications amounting to “directions or instructions”.
760. Second, I do not understand Morritt LJ to be saying, in proposition (3), that “directions or instructions” can arise without the intention and objective of, at least, the alleged giver of the instructions being that the Board should act in accordance with his expressed wishes. If he is so saying, then I respectfully disagree. There is a difference of quality between advice, even if forcefully expressed, and a direction or instruction, and that difference is that the maker of the communication is doing so with the intention of procuring a result for his own ends. Of course, that state of mind may be capable of being inferred from indirect evidence in the usual way, but it does not seem to me that the statute authorises dispensing with such a finding. The statute requires a finding that the de iure directors were accustomed to act in accordance with the “directions or instructions” of the alleged shadow director and not merely in accordance with his presumed wishes or interests.
761. Third, I note, and Mr Wessels accepted, that the requirement to find “directions or instructions” requires the finding of actual communications, from the alleged shadow director to the Board Members, which constitute “directions or instructions”. This is plain from Morritt LJ’s proposition No (3). Such a finding is, of course, a matter of evidence and subject to the usual processes of pleading and proof. Again, though, it cannot simply be glossed over or assumed as part of some postulated bigger picture. Any inference that there were “directions or instructions” must be made as a finding of actual fact, justified, on balance of probability by evidence.
762. Fourth, it is clear from the cases such as Kuwait Asia Bank, (above) that the element of influence or even control over a company’s affairs which arises from either holding its shares, or having control over the employment position of its directors, is not sufficient on its own to constitute a party – generally there a company, - a shadow director. This underlines, again, the need for proof of the factual situation which constitutes shadow directorship, and that mere allegation of a relationship of influence, or similar, is not enough.

763. Fifth, and at the risk of stating the obvious, if it is sought to make a corporate entity liable as a shadow director, then it is necessary to find directions or instructions in the form of communications issued by that entity. Since a corporate entity can only act by human agency, then even if actual communications by a human being can be pointed to, issues of the capacity in which those communications were made will still need to be examined, to decide whether the communication was actually that of the corporate entity. In other words, any “directions or instructions” will have to be established to be those of the corporate entity, and this also requires affirmative proof on the evidence. This is not surprising, as the actual director of the company will already be liable, and fixing a shadow director with liability is an extension of liabilities arising out of the corporate structure.
764. Finally I make some general observations. There has been dispute in the English cases as to whether the concepts of de facto and shadow directorships are or are not mutually exclusive. In my judgment, and for the reasons given by Millet J in Re Hydrodan (above), logic dictates that they have to be, certainly now that statute has intervened to delimit the concept and application of the liability of shadow directors as discussed at the beginning of this section. In this situation, it may be possible to be a shadow director and a de facto director at the same time, but not in respect of the same acts, because the test for each basis of liability is materially different. A de facto director is fixed with liability because of what he does. A shadow director is fixed with liability because of what he procures. Fortunately this seems more of an academic dispute than one of real consequence. I have indicated above the extent to which I am concerned with it here.
765. Again, and although not bearing directly on the facts of de facto or shadow directorships, it is helpful context, in my judgment, to keep in mind that a party which is entitled to appoint a director to the board of another company does not ipso facto become either a shadow, or a de facto, director of the company. Whether he (or it) does so has to be judged on the basis of the actual facts; for example, he is plainly more likely to do so if he is in fact able to appoint a majority of the Board. However, the position in law is that by appointing another person as a director of a company, the appointor is taken to authorise the appointee to perform conscientiously the duties of such a director, and therefore to exercise his own judgement and to act in what he perceives to be the best interests of the company, rather than those of his appointor. The appointee becomes agent of the company and not of his appointor.
766. As mentioned in relation to de facto directors, if a company which is entitled to appoint a director to the Board of another company appoints one of its own employees, then even though the employee carries out his directorial functions as part of his employment duties, the employer is not vicariously liable ipso facto for the acts of the employee as such director: see Kuwait Asia Bank EC v National Mutual Life Nominees Ltd [1991] 1 AC 187 (PC) – an instructive and useful case on the position of nominee directors and the proper scope of duties thereby owed. Once again, this principle recognises that the office of director imposes freestanding personal and independent liabilities on the party holding that office, regardless of the origins of his appointment. Of course, if the actual facts demonstrated that the employee director had been following instructions issued to him by his employer, then the situation would be different.
767. Insofar as the foregoing points are not of direct relevance to this case, I find them to provide helpful guidance as to the proper approach to the concept of shadow directorship as it does come to be applied in this case. To distil the essential points for the present case:-
- (i) To fix any of the Entity Defendants with liability as a shadow director of CCC the Plaintiffs need to prove that the actual directors (de iure or possibly de facto if already found) were accustomed to act in accordance with “directions or instructions” given by that corporate entity. This requires proof, on the evidence in the usual way, of actual directions or instructions.

- (ii) “The directors” would include a relevant voting majority of the board of directors.
- (iii) It is insufficient to establish one instance only of obedience to such direction or instruction; there has to be a series of such acts so as to prove the requirement of being “accustomed” so to act. However, that does not necessarily have to be on the same subject matter, and in an appropriate case, relatively minimal evidence of previous biddability might well suffice.

6. The issues to be determined

768. Having now determined the law which I will be applying, it is convenient to marshal the issues which, in consequence, arise for determination, before turning to the evidence and the witnesses.
769. Turning to the allegations in the case, the Defendants say that they have identified 187 separate allegations of breach of duty pleaded against them in the Cause, although I confess that I have not counted them. They appear (from the Defendants’ comments on the unagreed “Concise List of Issues” referred to below) to be the total number of sub-paragraph allegations contained in Paragraphs 263C-263H, 308D-308J, 339B-339G, 367D-367I, 369T-369Y, 390B-390G, and finally 417, 418B-E, 418I-418L, 419, 422 and 424B-424E of the Amended Cause.
770. There are ten defendants. The Plaintiffs’ claims are purportedly made against them jointly and severally, but since the obligations (apart perhaps from wrongful trading) are individual, the liability of each Defendant has to be considered separately as already mentioned. The 187 breaches of duty are not, I think, all alleged against all ten Defendants, but neither are they the sum of allegations against individual Defendants, because there is a pattern of pleading breaches in the Cause against groups of Defendants, comprising either the four “Carlyle Directors”, the three “Independent Directors” or the three Entity Defendants. The total number of individual breaches pleaded, with which I could theoretically be concerned, is therefore well into the 100s.
771. If all the pleaded breaches of duty had identifiable pleaded consequences which might afford the Plaintiffs a remedy at law, then I might have felt obliged to deal with them individually, but as already mentioned, they do not. The relief sought by the Plaintiffs is simply financial relief, being either for compensatory damages claimed for breach of fiduciary duty or for negligence, or for “contribution” on the grounds of wrongful trading (the measure of which is compensatory in nature), or for the “restitution” of unjustifiable fees and expenditure. The last claim is discrete and is straightforward in nature. All the other claims depend on proving wrongful acts or omissions by a relevant Defendant which can be shown to have caused a loss to CCC. In essence, what has been ultimately claimed (the Cause is still somewhat vague in this regard) is the difference between CCC’s net asset value taken at an appropriate date (depending on the findings of fact constituting liability) some time between 26th July 2007 and 27th February 2008, adjusted insofar as necessary to take account of assumed sales which should have been made on the one side, and what was actually realised upon CCC’s liquidation in March 2008 on the other.
772. To try to identify the issues which did require decision within the essential scope of the action, and to provide a working framework for covering these, I directed the parties to try to agree a “Concise List of Issues”. Unfortunately, they were not even able to agree on that. Their attempts appear to have foundered (from the footnotes by each side to a travelling draft which has been shown to me) because any attempt by the Defendants to identify the common thread of the Plaintiffs’ allegations and express the issues in such focused terms has been rebuffed by the Plaintiffs as a “partial and incomplete summary” of their case, as to which they insist on incorporating reference to the minutiae of individual allegations in their pleaded Cause.

SIR HENRY WILLIAM PEEK, BARONET. RESPONDENT.

Action of Deceit—False Representation—Fraud—“Legal Fraud”—Company—Misrepresentation in Prospectus.

In an action of deceit the plaintiff must prove actual fraud. Fraud is proved when it is shewn that a false representation has been made knowingly, or without belief in its truth, or recklessly, without caring whether it be true or false.

A false statement, made through carelessness and without reasonable ground for believing it to be true, may be evidence of fraud but does not necessarily amount to fraud. Such a statement, if made in the honest belief that it is true, is not fraudulent and does not render the person making it liable to an action of deceit.

A special Act incorporating a tramway company provided that the carriages might be moved by animal power, and, with the consent of the Board of Trade, by steam power. The directors issued a prospectus containing a statement that by their special Act the company had the right to use steam power instead of horses. The plaintiff took shares on the faith of this statement. The Board of Trade afterwards refused their consent to the use of steam power and the company was wound up. The plaintiff having brought an action of deceit against the directors founded upon the false statement:—

Held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal and restoring the decision of Stirling J. (37 Ch. D. 541), that the defendants were not liable, the statement as to steam power having been made by them in the honest belief that it was true.

APPEAL from a decision of the Court of Appeal. The facts are set out at length in the report of the decisions below (1). For the present report the following summary will suffice:—

By a special Act (45 & 46 Vict. c. clix.) the Plymouth, Devonport and District Tramways Company was authorized to make certain tramways.

DERRY
v.
PEEK.

By sect. 35 the carriages used on the tramways might be moved by animal power and, with the consent of the Board of Trade, by steam or any mechanical power for fixed periods and subject to the regulations of the Board.

By sect. 34 of the Tramways Act 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78), which section was incorporated in the special Act, "all carriages used on any tramway shall be moved by the power prescribed by the special Act, and where no such power is prescribed, by animal power only."

In February 1883 the appellants as directors of the company issued a prospectus containing the following paragraph:—

"One great feature of this undertaking, to which considerable importance should be attached, is, that by the special Act of Parliament obtained, the company has the right to use steam or mechanical motive power, instead of horses, and it is fully expected that by means of this a considerable saving will result in the working expenses of the line as compared with other tramways worked by horses."

Soon after the issue of the prospectus the respondent, relying, as he alleged, upon the representations in this paragraph and believing that the company had an absolute right to use steam and other mechanical power, applied for and obtained shares in the company.

The company proceeded to make tramways, but the Board of Trade refused to consent to the use of steam or mechanical power except on certain portions of the tramways.

In the result the company was wound up, and the respondent in 1885 brought an action of deceit against the appellants claiming damages for the fraudulent misrepresentations of the defendants whereby the plaintiff was induced to take shares in the company.

At the trial before Stirling J. the plaintiff and defendants were called as witnesses. The effect given to their evidence in this House will appear from the judgments of noble and learned Lords.

Stirling J. dismissed the action; but that decision was reversed by the Court of Appeal (Cotton L.J., Sir J. Hannen, and Lopes L.J.) who held that the defendants were liable to make good to the plaintiff the loss sustained by his taking the shares,

v.

PEEK.

March 28, 29; April 5, 9, 11. Sir Horace Davey Q.C. and Moulton Q.C. (M. Muir Mackenzie with them) for the appellants:—

The law as laid down by the Court of Appeal goes much further than any previous decision and is unsound. To support an action of deceit it always was necessary at common law and still is both there and in Chancery to prove fraud, i.e., that the thing was done fraudulently. Fraud never has been and never will be exhaustively defined, the forms which deceit may take being so many and various. There is a negative characteristic: it must be something which an honest man would not do; not merely what a logical or clear-headed man would not do. However unbusinesslike a man may be he is not fraudulent if he acts honestly. The natural consequences of words or acts must be taken to have been intended, but not so as to impute fraud to honesty. No honest mistake, no mistake not prompted by a dishonest intention, is fraud. The shape of the mistake does not make it more or less a fraud if it is a mistake. Once establish that a man honestly intended to do his duty, the consequences cannot turn his words or acts into a fraud. There may be an obligation to see that no untrue statement is made, but the failure to meet that obligation is not fraud, if there is no dishonest intention. The statement may be inaccurate, yet if the defendants honestly—though mistakenly—believed that it substantially represented the truth, there is no fraud, and an action of deceit will not lie. The decision of the Court of Appeal is that to such a statement the law attaches a meaning which makes it fraudulent. A material misstatement may be a ground for rescinding the contract, but the consequences of fraud and of breach of contract are widely different. In an action for breach of contract the defendant must make good his words. In an action founded on fraud he must bear the whole of the consequences which have been induced by the fraudulent statement, which may be very extensive. The essence of fraud is the tricking a person into the bargain. If the fact that the consent of the Board of Trade

H. L. (E.) was necessary was suppressed by these defendants in order to 1889 make the bait more alluring there was fraud. The issue then
 ~~~~~
 DERRY is one of fact, was there an intention to make the bait more
 v. alluring? It is not the carelessness leading to an untrue state-PEEK. ment which makes fraud; it is the carelessness whether the state——— ment is untrue or not. It is in this sense that the authorities have held defendants liable for fraud when they have made untrue statements "recklessly." The above propositions are the result of the authorities. The law laid down in the earlier cases is well exemplified by Taylor v. Ashton (1), where, however, the head-note does not truly represent the effect of the decision, and Joliffe
v. Baker (2). In Polhill v. Walter (3)—which may be relied on by the respondent—the Court considered that the misrepresentation was made by the defendant knowing it to be untrue. The idea that something less than fraud was necessary to found an action of deceit crept in first in Lord Chelmsford's observations in Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie (4), and was extended by Cotton L.J. in Weir v. Bell (5), where he treats "recklessly" as if it meant "negligently," whereas it means "indifferent whether the statement be true or false." This confusion has arisen mainly since the Judicature Act, actions of deceit being tried in Chancery by judges who, sitting without juries, have confounded issues of fact with issues of law. Here the Court of Appeal held that an action of deceit lies if the defendant makes an untrue statement, without reasonable ground for believing it to be true, though he did in fact honestly believe it to be true. If that be the law a negligent, improvident, or wrong-headed man is a fraudulent man. A want of reasonable ground may be evidence of fraud, but it is not the same thing as fraud.

As to the facts, Stirling J. found that the defendants believed the misstatement to be true, and that finding ought to be conclusive. The Court of Appeal do not contradict that finding.

The misstatement complained of really meant that the company had obtained the necessary statutory authority to use steam power, without which authority no consents could have given authority, because by the Tramways Act 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78 s. 34) steam power is prohibited except where the special Act authorizes steam power. It may be that the defendants knew the statement was not strictly accurate, but if so they honestly thought that the statement conveyed a substantially accurate representation of the fact, either because they thought it not worth while to encumber the prospectus with the qualifications, or because those qualifications were not present to their minds when they made the statement. In the prospectus reference is made to the special Act, so that any one who consulted the Act could see for himself what the authority was.

Lastly, the plaintiff was no doubt in some degree influenced by the misstatement, but there was no evidence that he would not have taken the shares if the statement had contained the full truth as to the necessary consents being obtained.

Bompas Q.C., and Byrne Q.C. (Patullo with them) for the respondent:—

The decision of the Court of Appeal is right and for the reasons there given. Directors are liable not only for a false statement which they know to be false, but for a false statement which they ought to have known to be false. This proposition is supported by the obiter dictum of Lord Westbury in New Brunswick &c. Co. v. Conybeare (1), and by the obiter dicta of the Lords in Peek v. Gurney (2) as to what the liability of the defendants would have been to original shareholders, and by the judgment of Jessel M.R. in Smith v. Chadwick (3).

It is not necessary that there should be carelessness whether the statement is true or not: it is enough if there be carelessness or negligence in making the statement. Making an untrue statement without reasonable ground is negligence which will support an action of deceit. In support of the respondent's contention the following authorities are relied on: Slim v. Croucher (4); Evans v. Bicknell (5); Brownlie v. Campbell (6); Polhill v. Walter (7); Milne v. Marwood (8); Denton v. Great

But it is not necessary to go the full length of the propositions contended for. Even if the fourth proposition of Lopes L.J. is not law, the appellants are nevertheless liable; for the evidence shews that the statements were made either with the knowledge that they were untrue or with no belief on the subject.

It was stated that it was fully expected that a considerable saving would be effected by the use of steam. In fact the directors had not considered the matter, and when they did so afterwards there was a majority of one only in favour of steam. The effect of the evidence is not the same as to all the directors. As to Derry, the inference is that he never took the trouble to consider whether the statement was true or false. Wakefield and Wilde had complete knowledge but made statements which they knew not to be true at the time, thinking the requisite consents would be given. Pethick's evidence is inconsistent with itself. At one moment he says that he thought the Board of Trade had no right to refuse consent if its reasonable requirements were met, at another that he thought they had an absolute right to refuse. Moore, it must be admitted, stands in a different position, and can only be held liable under the fourth proposition of Lopes L.J.

The respondents are entitled to judgment on the grounds accepted by Lord Cranworth in Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie (11) and by the Earl of Selborne in Smith v. Chadwick (12): The belief which would justify the appellants must be one founded on an exercise of judgment. Grounds which would be sufficient in some cases would not be so in others, where uberrima fides is required, e.g. in statements made to an intending partner. As

v.
PEEK.

The House took time for consideration, LORD HALSBURY L.C. saying that notice would be given to the appellants if their Lordships desired to hear a reply.

July 1. LORD HALSBURY L.C. :—

My Lords, I have so recently expressed an opinion in the Court of Appeal on the subject of actions of this character that I do not think it necessary to do more than say that I adhere to what I there said (3). To quote the language now some centuries old in dealing with actions of this character, “fraud without damage or damage without fraud” does not give rise to such actions. I have had also the opportunity of reading the judgment of my noble and learned friend Lord Herschell, and I could desire to add nothing to his exhaustive and lucid treatment of the authorities.

My Lords, when I turn to the question of fact I confess I am not altogether satisfied. In the first place I think the statement in the prospectus was untrue,—untrue in fact, and to the minds of such persons as were likely to take shares I think well calculated to mislead. I think such persons would have no idea of the technical division between tramways that had rights to use mechanical means and tramways that had not. What I think they would understand would be that this particular tramway was in an exceptionally advantageous position,—that the statement was of a present existing fact, that it had at the time of the invited subscription for shares the right to use steam. And I think such a statement if wilfully made with the consciousness of its inaccuracy would give rise to an action for deceit, provided that damage had been sustained if a person had acted upon a belief induced by such a prospectus.

But upon the question whether these statements were made with a consciousness of their misleading character, I cannot but

H. L. (E.) be influenced by the opinions entertained by so many of your 1889 Lordships that they are consistent with the directors' innocence
DERBY of any intention to deceive.

v.
PEEK.

Lord Halsbury,
L.C.

The learned judge who saw and heard the witnesses acquitted the defendants of intentional deceit, and although the Court of Appeal held them liable, overruling the decision of the learned judge below, they appear to me to have justified their decision upon grounds which I do not think tenable, namely, that they, the directors, were liable because they had no reasonable ground for the belief which nevertheless it is assumed they sincerely entertained.

My Lords, I think it would have been satisfactory to have had a more minute and exact account of how this prospectus was framed, the actual evidence of the draftsman of it, and the discussions which took place upon the alteration in form; which alteration gave such marked and peculiar prominence to the special feature of this particular tramway, in respect of the possession of power to use steam. Nevertheless, if, as I have said, the facts are reconcilable with the innocence of the directors, and with the absence of the mens rea which I consider an essential condition of an action for deceit, the mere fact of the inaccuracy of the statement ought not to be pressed into constituting a liability which appears to me not to exist according to the law of England.

As to the question whether Sir Henry Peek was induced to take his shares by reliance on the misleading statement, I admit that I have very considerable doubt. On the one hand I do not believe that any one can so far analyse his mental impressions as to be able to say what particular fact in a prospectus induced him to subscribe. On the other hand the description of Sir Henry Peek, even now that the question has been pointedly raised and brought to his mind, of what did or did not induce him to take his shares is hardly reconcilable with his having been substantially induced by the statement in question to take them.

On the whole I acquiesce in the judgment which one of your Lordships is about to move, namely, that the judgment appealed from be reversed.

LORD WATSON:—

H. L. (E.)

My Lords, I agree with Stirling J. that, as matter of fact, the appellants did honestly believe in the truth of the representation upon which this action of deceit is based. It is by no means clear that the learned judges of the Court of Appeal meant to differ from that conclusion; but they seem to have held that a man who makes a representation with the view of its being acted upon, in the honest belief that it is true, commits a fraud in the eye of the law, if the court or a jury shall be of opinion that he had not reasonable grounds for his belief. I have no hesitation in rejecting that doctrine, for which I can find no warrant in the law of England. But I shall not trouble your Lordships with any observations of mine, because I accept without reserve the opinion about to be delivered by my noble and learned friend upon my left (Lord Herschell).

1889
v.
PEEK.

LORD BRAMWELL:—

My Lords, I am of opinion that this judgment should be reversed. I am glad to come to this conclusion; for, as far as my judgment goes, it exonerates five men of good character and conduct from a charge of fraud, which, with all submission, I think wholly unfounded, a charge supported on such materials as to make all character precarious. I hope this will not be misunderstood; that promoters of companies will not suppose that they can safely make inaccurate statements with no responsibility. I should much regret any such notion; for the general public is so at the mercy of company promoters, sometimes dishonest, sometimes over sanguine, that it requires all the protection that the law can give it. Particularly should I regret if it was supposed that I did not entirely disapprove of the conduct of those directors who accepted their qualification from the contractor or intended contractor. It is wonderful to me that honest men of ordinary intelligence cannot see the impropriety of this. It is obvious that the contractor can only give this qualification because he means to get it back in the price given for the work he is to do. That price is to be fixed by the directors who have taken his money. They are paid by him to give him a good price, as high a price as they can, while their duty to their shareholders is to give him one as low as they can.

But there is another thing. The public, seeing these names, may well say, "These are respectable and intelligent men who think well enough of this scheme to adventure their money in it; we will do the same," little knowing that those thus trusted had made themselves safe against loss if the thing turned out ill, while they might gain if it was successful. I am glad to think that Mr. Wilde, a member of my old profession, was not one of those so bribed. The only shade of doubt I have in the case is, that this safety from loss in the directors may have made them less careful in judging of the truth of any statements they have made.

There is another matter I wish to dispose of before going into the particular facts of the case. I think we need not trouble ourselves about "legal fraud," nor whether it is a good or bad expression; because I hold that actual fraud must be proved in this case to make the defendants liable, and, as I understand, there is never any occasion to use the phrase "legal fraud" except when actual fraud cannot be established. "Legal fraud" is only used when some vague ground of action is to be resorted to, or, generally speaking, when the person using it will not take the trouble to find, or cannot find, what duty has been violated or right infringed, but thinks a claim is somehow made out. With the most sincere respect for Sir J. Hannen I cannot think the expression "convenient." I do not think it is "an explanation which very clearly conveys an idea;" at least, I am certain it does not to my mind. I think it a mischievous phrase, and one which has contributed to what I must consider the erroneous decision in this case. But, with these remarks, I have done with it, and will proceed to consider whether the law is not that actual fraud must be proved, and whether that has been done.

Now, I really am reluctant to cite authorities to shew that actual fraud must be established in such a case as this. It is one of the first things one learned, and one has never heard it doubted until recently. I am very glad to think that my noble and learned friend (Lord Herschell) has taken the trouble to go into the authorities fully; but to some extent I deprecate it, because it seems to me somewhat to come within the principle Qui s'excuse s'accuse. When a man makes a contract with another he is bound by it; and, in making it, he is bound not to bring it about by fraud. Warrantizando vendidit gives a cause of action if the warranty is broken. Knowingly and fraudulently stating a material untruth which brings about, wholly or partly, the contract, also gives a cause of action. To this may now be added the equitable rule (which is not in question here), that a material misrepresentation, though not fraudulent, may give a right to avoid or rescind a contract where capable of such rescission. To found an action for damages there must be a contract and breach, or fraud. The statement of claim in this case states fraud. Of course that need not be proved merely because it is stated. But no one ever heard of or saw a statement of claim or declaration for deceit without it. There is not an authority at common law, or by a common law lawyer, to the contrary; none has been cited, though there may be some incautious, hesitating, expressions which point that way. Every case from the earliest in Comyns' Digest to the present day alleges it. Further, the learned judges of the Court of Appeal hardly deny it. There is indeed an opinion to the contrary of the late Master of the Rolls, but it must be remembered that his knowledge of actions of deceit was small, if any. I did not think, then, that it was necessary to cite cases to shew that to maintain this action fraud in the defendant must be shewn, though I am glad it has been done.

Now, as to the evidence. The plaintiff's case is that the defendants made an untrue statement, which they knew to be untrue, and likely to influence persons reading it; therefore they were fraudulent. It is not necessary to consider whether a prima facie case was made out by the plaintiff. We have all the evidence before us, and must judge on the whole. The alleged untrue statement is that, "The company has the right to use steam or mechanical power instead of horses," and that a saving would be thereby effected. Now, this is certainly untrue, because it is stated as an absolute right, when in truth it was conditional on the approval of the Board of Trade, and the sanction or consent of two local boards; and a conditional right is

H. L. (E.) not the same as an absolute right. It is also certain that the 1889 defendants knew what the truth was, and therefore knew that DEURY what they said was untrue. But it does not follow that the
 v. statement was fraudulently made. There are various kinds of PEEK. untruth. There is an absolute untruth, an untruth in itself, Lord Bramwell. that no addition or qualification can make true; as, if a man says a thing he saw was black, when it was white, as he remembers and knows. So, as to knowing the truth. A man may know it, and yet it may not be present to his mind at the moment of speaking; or, if the fact is present to his mind, it may not occur to him to be of any use to mention it. For example, suppose a man was asked whether a writing was necessary in a contract for the making and purchase of goods, he might well say "Yes," without adding that payment on receipt of the goods, or part, would suffice. He might well think that the question he was asked was whether a contract for goods to be made required a writing like a contract for goods in existence. If he was writing on the subject he would, of course, state the exception or qualification.

Now, consider the case here. These directors naturally trust to their solicitors to prepare their prospectus. It is prepared and laid before them. They find the statement of their power to use steam without qualification. It does not occur to them to alter it. They swear they had no fraudulent intention. At the very last they cannot see the fraud. There is their oath, their previous character unimpeached, and there is to my mind this further consideration: the truth would have served their purpose as well.
 "We have power to use steam, etc., of course with the usual conditions of the approval of the Board of Trade and the consent of the local authorities, but we may make sure of these being granted, as the Board of Trade has already allowed the power to be inserted in the Act, and the local authorities have expressed their approbation of the scheme." (See plaintiff's answer, 313 (1), which shews that he would have been content with that statement.)

During the argument I said I am not sure that I should not have passed the prospectus. I will not say so now, because

(1) The references are to the Appendix printed for the House.

certainly I would not pass it now after knowing the unfortunate use made of the statement, and no one can tell what would have been the state of his mind if one of the factors influencing it was wanting. But I firmly believe it might have been, and was, honestly done by these defendants. Stirling J. saw and heard them, and was of that opinion. It is difficult to say that the plaintiff was not. The report of the 6th of November 1884 shewed that the consent of the Board of Trade was necessary, shewed also that the corporation of Devonport would not consent, shewed therefore the "untruth" and the defendants' knowledge of it, and yet the plaintiff "had every confidence in the directors;" and see his answers to questions 53 and 365.

I now proceed to consider the judgments that have been delivered. It is not necessary to declare my great respect for those who have delivered them. Stirling J. refuses to say whether actual fraud must be shewn, and deals with the case on the footing that the question is whether the defendants had reasonable grounds for making the statement they did. He holds, as I do, that they thought the company had the right, as put in the prospectus, to use steam. Then he says he must "come to the conclusion that they had reasonable grounds for their belief; at all events, that their grounds were not so unreasonable as to justify me in charging them with being guilty of fraud." It is singular that the learned judge seems to consider that unreasonableness must be proved to such an extent as to shew fraud. He then proceeds, for what seem to me unanswerable reasons, to shew that they did every one believe that they had the right stated in the prospectus. He refers to what he saw of them in the box. He says he cannot come to the conclusion that their belief was so unreasonable and so unfounded, and their proceedings so reckless or careless that they ought to be fixed with the consequences of deceit. He makes an excellent remark, that "mercantile men dealing with matters of business would be the first to cry out if I extended the notion of deceit into what is honestly done in the belief that these things would come about, and when they did not come about, make them liable in an action of fraud." My only variation of this would be that it may be that the objection did not, and naturally did not, occur to them. It has

H. L. (E.) not been argued, and I will say no more on the question, whether 1889 had the plaintiff known the contents of the Act he would or DERRY would not have applied for the shares, than that I agree with
 v. Stirling J.
 PEEK.

Lord Bramwell.

Cotton L.J. says the law is "that where a man makes a statement to be acted on by others which is false, and which is known by him to be false, or is made by him recklessly, or without care whether it is true or false, that is without any reasonable ground for believing it to be true," he is liable to an action for deceit. Well, I agree to all before the "that is" and I agree to what comes after if it is taken as equivalent to what goes before, viz., "recklessly or without care whether it is true or false," understanding "recklessly" as explained by "without care whether it is true or false." For a man who makes a statement without care and regard for its truth or falsity commits a fraud. He is a rogue. For every man who makes a statement says "the truth is so and so, and I know it or believe it." I say I agree to this as I understand it.

It seems to me, with great respect, that the learned Lord Justice lost sight of his own definition, and glided into a different opinion. He says (p. 451, F.), "There is a duty cast upon a director who makes that statement to take care that there are no statements in it which in fact are false; to take care that he has reasonable ground for the material statements which are contained in that document (prospectus), which he intends to be acted on by others. And although in my opinion it is not necessary there should be what I should call fraud, there must be a departure from duty, . . . and he has violated the right which those who receive the statement have to have true statements only made to them." This seems to be a most formidable matter. I agree there is some such duty. I agree that not only directors in prospectuses, but all persons in all dealings should tell the truth. If they do not they furnish evidence of fraud; they subject themselves to have the contract rescinded. But to say that there is "a right to have true statements only made," I cannot agree, and I think it would be much to be regretted if there was any such right. Mercantile men, as Stirling J. says, would indeed cry out. No qualification is stated.

If this is law the statement may be reasonably believed to be true by him who makes it, but if untrue there is to be a cause of action; and that although he may have refused a warranty. I hope not. There is a duty to tell the truth, or, rather, what is believed to be the truth. At page 452, B., his Lordship says: "Where a man makes a false statement without reasonable ground to suppose it to be true, and without taking care to ascertain if it is true, he is liable civilly as much as a person who commits what is usually called fraud." I say I agree if that means making a statement of which he knows or believes not the truth. His Lordship proceeds to examine whether the defendants had reasonable ground for believing what they said, and comes to the conclusion that they had not, and so holds them liable, not because they were dishonest, but because they were unreasonable. I say they never undertook to be otherwise. He says (461 G.): "It is not that I attribute to them any intention to commit fraud, but they have made a statement without any sufficient reason for believing it to be true."

Sir James Hannen says that he agrees with Cotton L.J.'s statement of the law, and adds: "If a man takes upon himself to assert a thing to be true, which he does not know to be true, and has no reasonable ground to believe to be true," it is sufficient in an action of deceit. I agree, if he knows he has no such reasonable ground and the knowledge is present to his mind; otherwise, with great respect, I differ. He cites Lord Cairns (465 F.), that, "if persons take upon themselves to make assertions as to which they are ignorant whether they are true or untrue, they must in a civil point of view be held as responsible as if they had asserted that which they knew to be untrue." So say I, but this does not support Sir James's proposition. Nor does he deal with what he quotes from Lord Cranworth. But further (466), he speaks of legal fraud as meaning "that degree of moral culpability in the statement of an untruth to induce another to alter his position, to which the law attaches responsibility." But if there is moral culpability, I agree there is responsibility. But to believe without reasonable grounds is not moral culpability, but, (if there is such a thing) mental culpability. He says, "the word 'fraud' is in common parlance reserved for actions of great turpitude, but

H. L. (E.) the law applies it to lesser breaches of moral duty." I agree the 1889, law applies it to all breaches of the moral duty to tell the truth
DERRY in dealing with others; but that duty cannot be honestly broken.
v. To be actionable, a breach of that duty must be dishonest. Nay, PEEK. it is a man's duty sometimes to tell an untruth. For instance, Lord Bramwell. when asked as to a servant's character, he must say what he believes is the truth, however he may have formed his opinion, and however wrong it may be. His Lordship says he cannot think the directors had any reasonable ground for believing the prospectus to be true. But had they the matter present to their minds?
Even if this were the question I should decide in their favour.

As to the judgment of Lopes L.J., I quite agree with what he says: "I know of no fraud which will support an action of deceit to which some moral delinquency does not belong." I think that shews the meaning of what he says "fourthly," though that is made doubtful by what he says at 472 D.

I think, with all respect, that in all the judgments there is, I must say it, a confusion of unreasonableness of belief as evidence of dishonesty, and unreasonableness of belief as of itself a ground of action.

I have examined these judgments at this length owing to my sense of their importance and the importance of the question they deal with. I think it is most undesirable that actions should be maintainable in respect of statements, made unreasonably perhaps, but honestly. I think it would be disastrous if there was "a right to have true statements only made." This case is an example. I think that in this kind of case, as in some others, Courts of Equity have made the mistake of disregarding a valuable general principle in their desire to effect what is, or is thought to be, justice in a particular instance. It might, perhaps, be well to enact that in prospectuses of public companies there should be a warranty of the truth of all statements except where it was expressly said there was no warranty. The objection is to exceptional legislation, and to the danger of driving respectable and responsible men from being promoters, and of substituting for them those who are neither.

In this particular case I hold that unless fraud in the defendants could be shewn, the action is not maintainable. I am satisfied there was no fraud. Further, if an unreasonable misstatement were enough, I hold there was none. Still further, I do not believe that the plaintiff was influenced by the misstatement, though I am entirely satisfied that he was an honest witness.

1889
v.
PEEK.

LORD FITZGERALD :—

My Lords, the pleadings and the facts have been already referred to by the noble Lords who have addressed the House. The action is for deceit. The writ was sued out in February 1885, and originally claimed rescission of the contract with the company. It was subsequently amended by striking out the company as defendants, and also the prayer for rescission, and it assumed the character of an action for deceit against the present appellants (five of the directors), and claimed "damages for the fraudulent misrepresentations of the defendants."

The statement of claim, which is sufficient in form to raise the real question, alleged the misrepresentation to exist in the prospectus issued in February 1883, and to consist of the paragraph so often read, that the company had a right to use steam or other mechanical motive power; and it was further alleged "that the defendants intended thereby to represent that the company had an absolute right to use steam and other mechanical power," and that such representation was made fraudulently, and with the view to induce the plaintiff to take shares in the company.

So far, my Lords, the real issue seems to have been raised fairly and clearly, and to depend on matters of fact. There were circumstances connected with the promotion of the company, and the procuring of four of the defendants to act as directors, which tended to create suspicion as to their statements and their bona fides, and attracted directly the attention of the learned judge before whom the case was tried. The defendants, who were severally produced as witnesses at the trial, were exposed to a very lengthened and searching cross-examination by counsel for the plaintiff, and were also carefully examined by the judge as to these transactions, with the result apparently of freeing them from any imputation therein of moral misconduct.

The question which I am about to examine in the first in-

H. L. (E.) stance, and excluding for the present the element of fraud, is, 1889 whether the impugned statement in the prospectus was a false DERRY statement in the sense of being untrue. That it was inaccurate
 v. so far as it purported to give the legal effect of the special Act I PEEK. do not doubt, but was it untrue as representing the position of Lord FitzGerald. the company in a popular and business sense? The General Tramways Act (33 & 34 Vict. c. 78), which regulates tramways generally, but subject to the provisions of the special Act, if any, of each company, places them under the supervision of the Board of Trade with a view to public safety, and for public protection generally, and by its 34th section it provides "that all carriages used on tramways shall be moved by the power prescribed by the special Act."

The special Act of this company became law on the 24th of July 1882, and by ss. 4 and 5 the company incorporated by the Act is empowered to make the seven tramways in question in all respects in accordance with the plans and sections. Sect. 15 provides minutely for their formation, subject to the orders of the Board of Trade, and by sect. 16 the tramway is not to be opened for public traffic until it shall have been inspected and certified by the Board of Trade to be fit for such traffic.

Before referring to the 35th section of the special Act we may glance at sect. 37 of that Act, which empowers the Board of Trade to make bye-laws as to any of the tramways on which steam may be used under the authority of the Act, and sect. 44, which provides that where the company intends to use steam they shall give two months' notice.

There are several other sections providing for the use of steam power if the company should elect to use it as the motor.

In the light of those sections of the special Act, and of sect. 34 of the general Act, let us now look at the particular paragraph of the prospectus, and sect. 35 of the special Act. By that section Parliament has done that which Parliament could do, and which the Board of Trade could not do. It has conferred on the company authority to use steam as its motive power. It has not imposed on the company the use of steam power, but it says that they may use it if they elect to do so. Before dealing with the consent of the Board of Trade I desire to call attention to the proviso in the 35th section, "that the exercise of the powers hereby conferred with respect to the use of steam shall be subject to the regulations in Schedule 'A,' and to any regulations which may be added thereto or substituted therefor by the Board of Trade for securing to the public all reasonable protection against danger in the exercise of the powers by this Act conferred with respect to the use of steam."

v.

PEEK.

Lord FitzGerald.

Schedule A., referred to in sect. 35, contains no less than ten regulations for the direction of the company in the exercise of the right so conferred to use steam power.

Now, turning back to the words "with the consent of the Board of Trade," in sect. 35 of the special Act, that consent could not confer, nor would its absence take away, the right conferred by the legislature to use steam as a motor. Its true character is that of a precaution imposed by the legislature to defer the actual exercise of the right conferred until the supervision of the Board of Trade secures to the public all reasonable protections against danger. To attain these objects the legislature provides that the powers it has conferred should not be actually exercised without the consent of the Board of Trade.

My Lords, I have, though with difficulty, arrived at the conclusion that the statement in the prospectus, that by the special Act the company had the right to use steam power, was not untrue in a popular or business sense.

Let us see for a moment in what way and with what meaning General Hutchinson used similar expressions. In his report of the 12th of July 1884 he says: "The Act of 1882 gives, however, the company authority to use mechanical power over all their system, and I think it would be most objectionable that this power should be exercised on parts of Tramway No. 1 on account of the narrowness of three of the roads."

The remainder of the incriminated paragraph of the prospectus is, "and it is fully expected that by means of this (i.e., the use of steam) a considerable saving will result in the working expenses of the line as compared with other tramways worked by horses." This was not untrue: there had been a division of opinion in the directory on the subject, which was finally and before the issue of the prospectus resolved in favour of steam.

v.

PEEK.

Lord FitzGerald.

The conclusion I have arrived at, my Lords, is that this paragraph of the prospectus, though inaccurate in point of law in one particular, seems on the whole to have been morally true.

If this view is correct it is an answer to the action, but assuming that it is not correct, or that your Lordships are not prepared to adopt it, I proceed to express my opinion on the remaining substance of the action. Cotton L.J. describes the action as "an action of deceit, a mere common law action." The description is accurate, and I proceed to deal with it as a mere common law action. It has not been in the least altered in its characteristics by having been instituted in the Chancery Division, or tried by a judge without the aid of a jury, nor are your Lordships necessarily driven to consider on the present appeal some of the subtle and refined distinctions which have been engrafted on the clear and simple principles of the common law. The action for deceit at common law is founded on fraud. It is essential to the action that moral fraud should be established, and since the case of Collins v. Evans (1), in the Exchequer Chamber, it has never been doubted that fraud must concur with the false statement to maintain the action. It would not be sufficient to shew that a false representation had been made. It must further be established that the defendant knew at the time of making it that the representation was untrue, or, to adopt the language of the learned editors of the Leading Cases, that "the defendant must be shewn to have been actually and fraudulently cognisant of the falsehood of his representation or to have made it fraudulently without belief that it was true." The leading counsel for the respondent met the argument fairly on the allegations of fact. He alleged "that the defendants were not honest; that they stated in the prospectus a definite lie, and knew that it was a lie." That is the very issue, in fact, in the case.

The whole law and all the cases on the subject will be found in the notes to Chandelor v. Lopus (2) and Pasley v. Freeman (3). There is also a clear and able summary of the decisions, both in law and in equity, brought down to the present time in the recent edition of Benjamin on Sales, by Pearson-Gee and Boyd.

I desire to make an observation on Chandelor v. Lopus (1). The report in Cro. Jac. 4 would seem to have but little direct bearing on the present case were it not for the opinion attributed to Anderson J.; but there is a valuable note in 1 Dyer by Vaillant (75a) which is as follows: Lopus brought an action upon the case against Chandelor, and shewed that, whereas the defendant was a goldsmith, and skilled in the nature of precious stones, and being possessed of a stone which the defendant asserted and assured the said plaintiff to be a true and perfect stone called a bezoar stone &c., upon which the plaintiff bought it &c. There the opinion of Popham C.J. was "that if I have any commodities which are damaged (whether victuals or otherwise), and I, knowing them to be so, sell them for good, and affirm them to be so, an action upon the case lies for the deceit: but although they be damaged, if I, knowing not that, affirm them to be good, still no action lies, without I warrant them to be good." The action seems originally to have been on a warranty which failed in fact, as there had been no warranty, and it was then sought to support it as an action for deceit; but it was not alleged in the count that the defendant knew the representation to be untrue. It was in reference to that that the observation of Popham C.J. was made. He had the reputation of being a consummate lawyer.

 Lord FitzGerald

The note in 1 Dyer (75a) was probably by Mr. Treby, afterwards Chief Justice Treby. He edited an edition of Dyer published in 1688. I have not had an opportunity of referring to it, but it is said that he gave the public some highly authoritative notes in that edition. I have quoted from Mr. Vaillant's edition, published in 1794.

The whole evidence given on this appeal has been laid before your Lordships, and we have to deal with it as a whole. That evidence has been already so fully stated and criticised that it is not necessary for me to do more than to state the conclusions of fact which in my opinion are reasonably to be deduced from it, viz. that the several defendants did not know that the incriminated statement in the prospectus was untrue, and that, on the contrary, they severally and in good faith believed it to be

H. L. (E.) true. The conclusions, in fact, at which I have arrived, render 1889 it unnecessary for me to consider the long and rather bewildering DERRY list of authorities to which your Lordships were referred, or to
v. criticise the reasons given in the Court of Appeal for their deci-PEEK. sion in the present case. I desire, however, to make a single Lord FitzGerald. observation.

There is one characteristic which, as it seems to me, pervades each of the several judgments in the Court of Appeal, viz. that the bonâ fide belief of the defendants in the truth of the representation was unavailing unless it was a reasonable belief resting on reasonable grounds. If this is correct, it seems to me that in an action for "deceit" it would be necessary to submit to the jury (if tried before that tribunal) not only the existence of that belief bonâ fide, but also the grounds on which it was arrived at, and their reasonableness.

I am by no means satisfied that such is the law, and if now driven to express an opinion on it, I would prefer following the opinion of Lord Cranworth in Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie (1), in which he said: "I confess that my opinion was that in what his Lordship (the Lord President) thus stated, he went beyond what principle warrants. If persons in the situation of directors of a bank make statements as to the condition of its affairs, which they bonâ fide believe to be true, I cannot think they can be guilty of fraud, because other persons think, or the Court thinks, or your Lordships think, that there was no sufficient ground to warrant the opinion which they had formed. If a little more care and caution must have led the directors to a conclusion different from that which they put forth, this may afford strong evidence to shew that they did not really believe in the truth of what they stated, and so that they were guilty of fraud. But this would be the consequence, not of their having stated as true what they had not reasonable ground to believe to be true, but of their having stated as true what they did not believe to be true."

A director is bound in all particulars to be careful and circumspect, and not, either in his statements to the public or in the performance of the duties he has undertaken, to be careless

v.
PEEK.

My Lords, I am of opinion that the decision of the Court of Appeal should be reversed.

LORD HERSCHELL:—

My Lords, in the statement of claim in this action the respondent, who is the plaintiff, alleges that the appellants made in a prospectus issued by them certain statements which were untrue, that they well knew that the facts were not as stated in the prospectus, and made the representations fraudulently, and with the view to induce the plaintiff to take shares in the company.

“This action is one which is commonly called an action of deceit, a mere common law action.” This is the description of it given by Cotton L.J. in delivering judgment. I think it important that it should be borne in mind that such an action differs essentially from one brought to obtain rescission of a contract on the ground of misrepresentation of a material fact. The principles which govern the two actions differ widely. Where rescission is claimed it is only necessary to prove that there was misrepresentation; then, however honestly it may have been made, however free from blame the person who made it, the contract, having been obtained by misrepresentation, cannot stand. In an action of deceit, on the contrary, it is not enough to establish misrepresentation alone; it is conceded on all hands that something more must be proved to cast liability upon the defendant, though it has been a matter of controversy what additional elements are requisite. I lay stress upon this because observations made by learned judges in actions for rescission have been cited and much relied upon at the bar by counsel for the respondent. Care must obviously be observed in applying the language used in relation to such actions to an action of deceit. Even if the scope of the language used extend beyond the particular action which was being dealt with, it must be remembered that the learned judges were not engaged in deter-

H. L. (E.) mining what is necessary to support an action of deceit, or in discriminating with nicety the elements which enter into it.

DERRY

v.
PEEK.

Lord Herschell

There is another class of actions which I must refer to also for the purpose of putting it aside. I mean those cases where a person within whose special province it lay to know a particular fact, has given an erroneous answer to an inquiry made with regard to it by a person desirous of ascertaining the fact for the purpose of determining his course accordingly, and has been held bound to make good the assurance he has given. Burrowes v. Lock (1) may be cited as an example, where a trustee had been asked by an intended lender, upon the security of a trust fund, whether notice of any prior incumbrance upon the fund had been given to him. In cases like this it has been said that the circumstance that the answer was honestly made in the belief that it was true affords no defence to the action. Lord Selborne pointed out in Brownlie v. Campbell (2) that these cases were in an altogether different category from actions to recover damages for false representation, such as we are now dealing with.

One other observation I have to make before proceeding to consider the law which has been laid down by the learned judges in the Court of Appeal in the case before your Lordships. "An action of deceit is a common law action, and must be decided on the same principles, whether it be brought in the Chancery Division or any of the Common Law Divisions, there being, in my opinion, no such thing as an equitable action for deceit." This was the language of Cotton L.J. in Arkwright v. Newbould (3). It was adopted by Lord Blackburn in Smith v. Chadwick (4), and is not, I think, open to dispute.

In the Court below Cotton L.J. said: "What in my opinion is a correct statement of the law is this, that where a man makes a statement to be acted upon by others which is false, and which is known by him to be false, or is made by him recklessly, or without care whether it is true or false, that is, without any reasonable ground for believing it to be true, he is liable in an action of deceit at the suit of anyone to whom it was addressed or anyone of the class to whom it was addressed and who was materially induced by the misstatement to do an act to his prejudice." About much that is here stated there cannot, I think, be two opinions. But when the learned Lord Justice speaks of a statement made recklessly or without care whether it is true or false, that is without any reasonable ground for believing it to be true, I find myself, with all respect, unable to agree that these are convertible expressions. To make a statement careless whether it be true or false, and therefore without any real belief in its truth, appears to me to be an essentially different thing from making, through want of care, a false statement, which is nevertheless honestly believed to be true. And it is surely conceivable that a man may believe that what he states is the fact, though he has been so wanting in care that the Court may think that there were no sufficient grounds to warrant his belief. I shall have to consider hereafter whether the want of reasonable ground for believing the statement made is sufficient to support an action of deceit. I am only concerned for the moment to point out that it does not follow that it is so, because there is authority for saying that a statement made recklessly, without caring whether it be true or false, affords sufficient foundation for such an action.

That the learned Lord Justice thought that if a false statement were made without reasonable ground for believing it to be true an action of deceit would lie, is clear from a subsequent passage in his judgment. He says that when statements are made in a prospectus like the present, to be circulated amongst persons in order to induce them to take shares, "there is a duty cast upon the director or other person who makes those statements to take care that there are no expressions in them which in fact are false; to take care that he has reasonable ground for the material statements which are contained in that document which he prepares and circulates for the very purpose of its being acted upon by others."

The learned judge proceeds to say: "Although in my opinion it is not necessary that there should be what I should call fraud, yet in these actions, according to my view of the law, there must be a departure from duty, that is to say, an untrue statement made without any reasonable ground for believing that statement

H. L. (E.) to be true; and in my opinion when a man makes an untrue state-

v. makes a default in a duty which was thrown upon him from the PEEK. position he has taken upon himself, and he violates the right
Lord Herschell. which those to whom he makes the statement have to have true statements only made to them."

Now I have first to remark on these observations that the alleged "right" must surely be here stated too widely, if it is intended to refer to a legal right, the violation of which may give rise to an action for damages. For if there be a right to have true statements only made, this will render liable to an action those who make untrue statements, however innocently. This cannot have been meant. I think it must have been intended to make the statement of the right correspond with that of the alleged duty, the departure from which is said to be making an untrue statement without any reasonable ground for believing it to be true. I have further to observe that the Lord Justice distinctly says that if there be such a departure from duty an action of deceit can be maintained, though there be not what he should call fraud. I shall have by-and-by to consider the discussions which have arisen as to the difference between the popular understanding of the word "fraud" and the interpretation given to it by lawyers, which have led to the use of such expressions as "legal fraud," or "fraud in law;" but I may state at once that, in my opinion, without proof of fraud no action of deceit is maintainable. When I examine the cases which have been decided upon this branch of the law, I shall endeavour to shew that there is abundant authority to warrant this proposition.

I return now to the judgments delivered in the Court of Appeal. Sir James Hannen says: "I take the law to be that if a man takes upon himself to assert a thing to be true which he does not know to be true, and has no reasonable ground to believe to be true, in order to induce another to act upon the assertion, who does so act and is thereby damnified, the person so damnified is entitled to maintain an action for deceit." Again, Lopes L.J. states what, in his opinion, is the result of the cases. I will not trouble your Lordships with quoting the first three propositions which he lays down, although I do not feel sure that the third is distinct from, and not rather an instance of, the case dealt with by the second proposition. But he says that a person making a false statement, intended to be and in fact relied on by the person to whom it is made, may be sued by the person damaged thereby: "Fourthly, if it is untrue in fact, but believed to be true, but without any reasonable grounds for such belief."

H. L. (E.)

v.

PEEK.

Lord Herschell.

It will thus be seen that all the learned judges concurred in thinking that it was sufficient to prove that the representations made were not in accordance with fact, and that the person making them had no reasonable ground for believing them. They did not treat the absence of such reasonable ground as evidence merely that the statements were made recklessly, careless whether they were true or false, and without belief that they were true, but they adopted as the test of liability, not the existence of belief in the truth of the assertions made, but whether the belief in them was founded upon any reasonable grounds. It will be seen, further, that the Court did not purport to be establishing any new doctrine. They deemed that they were only following the cases already decided, and that the proposition which they concurred in laying down was established by prior authorities. Indeed, Lopes L.J. expressly states the law in this respect to be well settled. This renders a close and critical examination of the earlier authorities necessary.

I need go no further back than the leading case of Pasley v. Freeman (1). If it was not there for the first time held that an action of deceit would lie in respect of fraudulent representations against a person not a party to a contract induced by them, the law was at all events not so well settled but that a distinguished Judge, Grose J., differing from his brethren on the Bench, held that such an action was not maintainable. Buller J., who held that the action lay, adopted in relation to it the language of Croke J., in 3 Bulstrode 95, who said: "Fraud without damage, or damage without fraud, gives no cause of action, but where these two concur an action lies." In reviewing the case

(1) 2 Smith's L. C. 74.

H. L. (E.) of Crosse v. Gardner (1) he says: "Knowledge of the falsehood of the thing asserted is fraud and deceit;" and further, after pointing out that in Risney v. Selby (2) the judgment proceeded wholly on the ground that the defendant knew what he asserted to be false, he adds: "The assertion alone will not maintain the action, but the plaintiff must go on to prove that it was false, and that the defendant knew it to be so," the latter words being specially emphasised. Kenyon C.J. said: "The plaintiffs applied to the defendant, telling him that they were going to deal with Falch, and desired to be informed of his credit, when the defendant fraudulently, and knowing it to be otherwise, and with a design to deceive the plaintiffs, made the false affirmation stated on the record, by which they sustained damage. Can a doubt be entertained for a moment but that this is injurious to the plaintiffs?" In this case it was evidently considered that fraud was the basis of the action, and that such fraud might consist in making a statement known to be false.

1889
v.
PEEK.
Lord Herschell,

Haycraft v. Creasy (3) was again an action in respect of a false affirmation made by the defendant to the plaintiff about the credit of a third party whom the plaintiff was about to trust. The words complained of were, "I can assure you of my own knowledge that you may credit Miss R. to any amount with perfect safety." All the judges were agreed that fraud was of the essence of the action, but they differed in their view of the conclusion to be drawn from the facts. Lord Kenyon thought that fraud had been proved, because the defendant stated that to be true within his own knowledge which he did not know to be true. The other judges thinking that the defendant's words vouching his own knowledge were no more than a strong expression of opinion, inasmuch as a statement concerning the credit of another can be no more than a matter of opinion, and that he did believe the lady's credit to be what he represented, held that the action would not lie. It is beside the present purpose to inquire which view of the facts was the more sound. Upon the law there was no difference of opinion. It is a distinct decision that knowledge of the falsity of the affirmation made is essential to the maintenance of the action, and that belief in its truth affords a defence.

I may pass now to Foster v. Charles (1). It was there contended that the defendant was not liable, even though the representation he had made was false to his knowledge, because he had no intention of defrauding or injuring the plaintiff. This contention was not upheld by the Court, Tindal C.J. saying: "It is fraud in law if a party makes representations which he knows to be false, and injury ensues, although the motives from which the representations proceeded may not have been bad." This is the first of the cases in which I have met with the expression "fraud in law." It was manifestly used in relation to the argument that the defendant was not actuated by a desire to defraud or injure the person to whom the representation was made. The popular use of the word "fraud" perhaps involves generally the conception of such a motive as one of its elements. But I do not think the Chief Justice intended to indicate any doubt that the act which he characterised as a fraud in law was in truth fraudulent as a matter of fact also. Wilfully to tell a falsehood, intending that another shall be led to act upon it as if it were the truth, may well be termed fraudulent, whatever the motive which induces it, though it be neither gain to the person making the assertion nor injury to the person to whom it is made.

Foster v. Charles (1) was followed in Corbett v. Brown (2), and shortly afterwards in Polhill v. Walter (3). The learned counsel for the respondent placed great reliance on this case, because although the jury had negatived the existence of fraud in fact the defendant was nevertheless held liable. It is plain, however, that all that was meant by this finding of the jury was, that the defendant was not actuated by any corrupt or improper motive, for Lord Tenterden says, "It was contended that . . . in order to maintain this species of action it is not necessary to prove that the false representation was made from a corrupt motive of gain to the defendant or a wicked motive of injury to the plaintiff; it was said to be enough if a representation is made which the party

PEEK. wilful falsehood of such a nature was contended to be in the legal Lord Herschell. sense of the word a fraud, and for this position was cited Foster
v. Charles (1), to which may be added the recent case of Corbett v.
Brown (2). The principle of these cases appears to us to be well founded, and to apply to the present."

In a later case of Crawshay v. Thompson (3) Maule J. explains Polhill v. Walter (4) thus: "If a wrong be done by a false representation of a party who knows such representation to be false, the law will infer an intention to injure. That is the effect of Polhill v. Walter" (4). In the same case, Cresswell J. defines "fraud in law," in terms which have been often quoted. "The cases," he says, "may be considered to establish the principle that fraud in law consists in knowingly asserting that which is false in fact to the injury of another."

In Moens v. Heyworth (5), which was decided in the same year as Crawshay v. Thompson (3), Lord Abinger having suggested that an action of fraud might be maintained where no moral blame was to be imputed, Parke B. said: "To support that count (viz., a count for fraudulent representation) it was essential to prove that the defendants knowingly" (and I observe that this word is emphasised), "by words or acts, made such a representation as is stated in the third count, relative to the invoice of these goods, as they knew to be untrue."

The next case in the series, Taylor v. Ashton (6), is one which strikes me as being of great importance. It was an action brought against directors of a bank for fraudulent representations as to its affairs, whereby the plaintiff was induced to take shares.
The jury found the defendants not guilty of fraud, but expressed the opinion that they had been guilty of gross negligence.
Exception was taken to the mode in which the case was left to the jury, and it was contended that their verdict was sufficient to render the defendants liable ; Parke B., however, in delivering the opinion of the Court said : “ It is insisted that even that (viz., the gross negligence which the jury had found), accompanied with a damage to the plaintiff in consequence of that gross negligence, would be sufficient to give him a right of action. From this proposition we entirely dissent, because we are of opinion that, independently of any contract between the parties, no one can be made responsible for a representation of this kind unless it be fraudulently made. . . . But then it was said that in order to constitute that fraud, it was not necessary to shew that the defendants knew the fact they stated to be untrue, that it was enough that the fact was untrue if they communicated that fact for a deceitful purpose, and to that proposition the Court is prepared to assent. It is not necessary to shew that the defendants knew the facts to be untrue ; if they stated a fact which was untrue for a fraudulent purpose, they at the same time not believing that fact to be true, in that case it would be both a legal and moral fraud.”

DERRY
v.
PEEK.
Lord Herschell.

Now it is impossible to conceive a more emphatic declaration than this, that to support an action of deceit fraud must be proved, and that nothing less than fraud will do. I can find no trace of the idea that it would suffice if it were shewn that the defendants had not reasonable grounds for believing the statements they made. It is difficult to understand how the defendants could, in the case on which I am commenting, have been guilty of gross negligence in making the statements they did, if they had reasonable grounds for believing them to be true, or if they had taken care that they had reasonable grounds for making them.

All the cases I have hitherto referred to were in courts of first instance. But in Collins v. Evans (1) they were reviewed by the Exchequer Chamber. The judgment of the Court was delivered by Tindal C.J. After stating the question at issue to be “ whether a statement or representation which is false in fact, but not known to be so by the party making it, but, on the contrary, made honestly and in the full belief that it is true, affords a ground of action,” he proceeds to say : “ The current of

Is it not clear that the Court considered that fraud was absent if the statement was "made honestly, and in the full belief that it was true"?

v.

PEER.

Lord Herschell.

In Evans v. Edmonds (2) Maule J. expressed an important opinion, often quoted, which has been thought to carry the law further than the previous authorities, though I do not think it really does so. He said: "If a man having no knowledge whatever on the subject takes upon himself to represent a certain state of facts to exist he does so at his peril, and if it be done either with a view to secure some benefit to himself or to deceive a third person he is in law guilty of a fraud, for he takes upon himself to warrant his own belief of the truth of that which he so asserts. Although the person making the representation may have no knowledge of its falsehood the representation may still have been fraudulently made." The foundation of this proposition manifestly is, that a person making any statement which he intends another to act upon must be taken to warrant his belief in its truth. Any person making such a statement must always be aware that the person to whom it is made will understand, if not that he who makes it knows, yet at least that he believes it to be true. And if he has no such belief he is as much guilty of fraud as if he had made any other representation which he knew to be false, or did not believe to be true.

I now arrive at the earliest case in which I find the suggestion that an untrue statement made without reasonable ground for believing it will support an action for deceit. In Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie (3) the Lord President told the jury "that if a case should occur of directors taking upon themselves to put forth in their report statements of importance in regard to the affairs of the bank false in themselves and which they did not believe, or had no reasonable ground to believe to be true, that would be a misrepresentation and deceit." Exception having been taken to this direction without avail in the Court of Session, Lord Chelmsford in this House said: "I agree in the propriety of this interlocutor. In the argument upon this exception the case was put of an honest belief being entertained by the directors, of the reasonableness of which it was said the jury, upon this direction, would have to judge. But supposing a person makes an untrue statement which he asserts to be the result of a bonâ fide belief in its truth, how can the bona fides be tested except by considering the grounds of such belief? And if an untrue statement is made founded upon a belief which is destitute of all reasonable grounds, or which the least inquiry would immediately correct, I do not see that it is not fairly and correctly characterised as misrepresentation and deceit."

DERBY

v.

PEEK.

Lord Herschell.

I think there is here some confusion between that which is evidence of fraud, and that which constitutes it. A consideration of the grounds of belief is no doubt an important aid in ascertaining whether the belief was really entertained. A man's mere assertion that he believed the statement he made to be true is not accepted as conclusive proof that he did so. There may be such an absence of reasonable ground for his belief as, in spite of his assertion, to carry conviction to the mind that he had not really the belief which he alleges. If the learned Lord intended to go further, as apparently he did, and to say that though the belief was really entertained, yet if there were no reasonable grounds for it, the person making the statement was guilty of fraud in the same way as if he had known what he stated to be false, I say, with all respect, that the previous authorities afford no warrant for the view that an action of deceit would lie under such circumstances. A man who forms his belief carelessly, or is unreasonably credulous, may be blameworthy when he makes a representation on which another is to act, but he is not, in my opinion, fraudulent in the sense in which that word was used in all the cases from Pasley v. Freeman (1) down to that with which I am now dealing. Even when the expression "fraud in law" has been employed, there has always been present, and regarded as an essential element, that the deception was wilful either because the untrue statement was known to be untrue, or because belief in it was asserted without such belief existing.

DERRY

v.

PEEK.

Lord Herschell.

I have made these remarks with the more confidence because they appear to me to have the high sanction of Lord Cranworth. In delivering his opinion in the same case he said: "I confess that my opinion was that in what his Lordship (the Lord President) thus stated, he went beyond what principle warrants. If persons in the situation of directors of a bank make statements as to the condition of its affairs which they bonâ fide believe to be true, I cannot think they can be guilty of fraud because other persons think, or the Court thinks, or your Lordships think, that there was no sufficient ground to warrant the opinion which they had formed. If a little more care and caution must have led the directors to a conclusion different from that which they put forth, this may afford strong evidence to shew that they did not really believe in the truth of what they stated, and so that they were guilty of fraud. But this would be the consequence not of their having stated as true what they had not reasonable ground to believe to be true, but of their having stated as true what they did not believe to be true."

Sir James Hannen, in his judgment below, seeks to limit the application of what Lord Cranworth says to cases where the statement made is a matter of opinion only. With all deference I do not think it was intended to be or can be so limited. The direction which he was considering, and which he thought went beyond what true principle warranted, had relation to making false statements of importance in regard to the affairs of the bank. When this is borne in mind, and the words which follow those quoted by Sir James Hannen are looked at, it becomes to my mind obvious that Lord Cranworth did not use the words "the opinion which they had formed" as meaning anything different from "the belief which they entertained."

The opinions expressed by Lord Cairns in two well-known cases have been cited as though they supported the view that an action of deceit might be maintained without any fraud on the part of the person sued. I do not think they bear any such construction. In the case of Reese Silver Mining Co. v. Smith (1) he said: "If persons take upon themselves to make assertions as to which they are ignorant whether they are true or untrue

(1) Law Rep. 4 H. L. 64, 79.

they must, in a civil point of view, be held as responsible as if they had asserted that which they knew to be untrue." This must mean that the persons referred to were conscious when making the assertion that they were ignorant whether it was true or untrue. For if not it might be said of any one who innocently makes a false statement. He must be ignorant that it is untrue, for otherwise he would not make it innocently; he must be ignorant that it is true, for by the hypothesis it is false. Construing the language of Lord Cairns in the sense I have indicated, it is no more than an adoption of the opinion expressed by Maule J. in Evans v. Edmonds (1). It is a case of the representation of a person's belief in a fact when he is conscious that he knows not whether it be true or false, and when he has therefore no such belief. When Lord Cairns speaks of it as not being fraud in the more invidious sense, he refers, I think, only to the fact that there was no intention to cheat or injure.

DERRY
v.
PEEK.
Lord Herschell

In Peek v. Gurney (2) the same learned Lord, after alluding to the circumstance that the defendants had been acquitted of fraud upon a criminal charge, and that there was a great deal to shew that they were labouring under the impression that the concern had in it the elements of a profitable commercial undertaking, proceeds to say: "They may be absolved from any charge of a wilful design or motive to mislead or defraud the public. But in a civil proceeding of this kind all that your Lordships have to examine is the question, was there, or was there not, misrepresentation in point of fact? If there was, however innocent the motive may have been, your Lordships will be obliged to arrive at the consequences which properly would result from what was done." In the case then under consideration it was clear that if there had been a false statement of fact it had been knowingly made. Lord Cairns certainly could not have meant that in an action of deceit the only question to be considered was whether or not there was misrepresentation in point of fact. All that he there pointed out was that in such a case motive was immaterial: that it mattered not that there was no design to mislead or defraud the public if a false representation were knowingly made. It was therefore but an affirmation of the law laid down in Foster

H. L. (E.) v. Charles (1), Polhill v. Walter (2), and other cases I have already referred to.

1880

v.

PEEK,

Lord Herschell.

I come now to very recent cases. In Weir v. Bell (3) Lord Bramwell vigorously criticised the expression “legal fraud,” and indicated a very decided opinion that an action founded on fraud could not be sustained except by the proof of fraud in fact. I have already given my reasons for thinking that, until recent times at all events, the judges who spoke of fraud in law did not mean to exclude the existence of fraud in fact, but only of an intention to defraud or injure.

In the same case Cotton L.J. stated the law in much the same way as he did in the present case, treating “recklessly” as equivalent to “without any reasonable ground for believing” the statements made. But the same learned judge in Arkwright v. Newbold (4) laid down the law somewhat differently, for he said: “In an action of deceit the representation to found the action must not be innocent, that is to say, it must be made either with knowledge of its being false, or with a reckless disregard as to whether it is or is not true.” And his exposition of the law was substantially the same in Edgington v. Fitzmaurice (5). In this latter case Bowen L.J. defined what the plaintiff must prove in addition to the falsity of the statement, as “secondly, that it was false to the knowledge of the defendants, or that they made it not caring whether it was true or false.”

It only remains to notice the case of Smith v. Chadwick (6). The late Master of the Rolls there said, “A man may issue a prospectus or make any other statement to induce another to enter into a contract, believing that his statement is true, and not intending to deceive; but he may through carelessness have made statements which are not true, and which he ought to have known were not true, and if he does so he is liable in an action for deceit; he cannot be allowed to escape merely because he had good intentions, and did not intend to defraud.” This, like everything else that fell from that learned judge, is worthy of respectful consideration. With the last sentence I quite agree, but I cannot assent to the doctrine that a false statement made through carelessness, and which ought to have been known to be untrue, of itself renders the person who makes it liable to an action for deceit. This does not seem to me by any means necessarily to amount to fraud, without which the action will not, in my opinion, lie.

DEBBY

v.

PEEK.

Lord Herschell

It must be remembered that it was not requisite for Sir George Jessel in Smith v. Chadwick (1) to form an opinion whether a statement carelessly made, but honestly believed, could be the foundation of an action of deceit. The decision did not turn on any such point. The conclusion at which he arrived is expressed in these terms: "On the whole I have come to the conclusion that this, although in some respects inaccurate, and in some respects not altogether free from imputation of carelessness, was a fair, honest, and bonâ fide statement on the part of the defendants, and by no means exposes them to an action for deceit."

I may further note that in the same case, Lindley L.J. said: "The plaintiff has to prove, first, that the misrepresentation was made to him; secondly, he must prove that it was false; thirdly, that it was false to the knowledge of the defendants, or at all events that they did not believe the truth of it." This appears to be a different statement of the law to that which I have just criticised, and one much more in accord with the prior decisions.

The case of Smith v. Chadwick was carried to your Lordships' House (2). Lord Selborne thus laid down the law: "I conceive that in an action of deceit it is the duty of the plaintiff to establish two things: first, actual fraud, which is to be judged of by the nature and character of the representations made, considered with reference to the object for which they were made, the knowledge or means of knowledge of the person making them, and the intention which the law justly imputes to every man to produce those consequences which are the natural result of his acts; and secondly, he must establish that this fraud was an inducing cause to the contract." It will be noticed that the noble and learned Lord regards the proof of actual fraud as essential, all the other matters to which he refers are elements to be considered in determining whether such fraud has been

(1) 20 Ch. D. 27, 44, 67.

(2) 9 App. Cas. 187, 190.

H. L. (E.) established. Lord Blackburn indicated that although he nearly 1889 agreed with the Master of the Rolls, that learned judge had not DERRY quite stated what he conceived to be the law. He did not point
 v. out precisely how far he differed, but it is impossible to read his PEEK judgment in this case, or in that of Brownlie v. Campbell (1) with-Lord Herschell. out seeing that in his opinion proof of actual fraud or of a wilful deception was requisite.

Having now drawn attention, I believe, to all the cases having a material bearing upon the question under consideration, I proceed to state briefly the conclusions to which I have been led. I think the authorities establish the following propositions: First, in order to sustain an action of deceit, there must be proof of fraud, and nothing short of that will suffice. Secondly, fraud is proved when it is shewn that a false representation has been made (1) knowingly, or (2) without belief in its truth, or (3) recklessly, careless whether it be true or false. Although I have treated the second and third as distinct cases, I think the third is but an instance of the second, for one who makes a statement under such circumstances can have no real belief in the truth of what he states. To prevent a false statement being fraudulent, there must, I think, always be an honest belief in its truth. And this probably covers the whole ground, for one who knowingly alleges that which is false, has obviously no such honest belief. Thirdly, if fraud be proved, the motive of the person guilty of it is immaterial. It matters not that there was no intention to cheat or injure the person to whom the statement was made.

I think these propositions embrace all that can be supported by decided cases from the time of Pasley v. Freeman (2) down to Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie (3) in 1867, when the first suggestion is to be found that belief in the truth of what he has stated will not suffice to absolve the defendant if his belief be based on no reasonable grounds. I have shewn that this view was at once dissented from by Lord Cranworth, so that there was at the outset as much authority against it as for it. And I have met with no further assertion of Lord Chelmsford's view until the case of Weir v. Bell (1), where it seems to be involved in Lord Justice Cotton's enunciation of the law of deceit. But no reason is there given in support of the view, it is treated as established law. The dictum of the late Master of the Rolls, that a false statement made through carelessness, which the person making it ought to have known to be untrue, would sustain an action of deceit, carried the matter still further. But that such an action could be maintained notwithstanding an honest belief that the statement made was true, if there were no reasonable grounds for the belief, was, I think, for the first time decided in the case now under appeal.

DERRY
v.
PEEK.
Lord Herschell.

In my opinion making a false statement through want of care falls far short of, and is a very different thing from, fraud, and the same may be said of a false representation honestly believed though on insufficient grounds. Indeed Cotton L.J. himself indicated, in the words I have already quoted, that he should not call it fraud. But the whole current of authorities, with which I have so long detained your Lordships, shews to my mind conclusively that fraud is essential to found an action of deceit, and that it cannot be maintained where the acts proved cannot properly be so termed. And the case of Taylor v. Ashton (2) appears to me to be in direct conflict with the dictum of Sir George Jessel, and inconsistent with the view taken by the learned judges in the Court below. I observe that Sir Frederick Pollock, in his able work on Torts (p. 243, note), referring, I presume, to the dicta of Cotton L.J. and Sir George Jessel M.R., says that the actual decision in Taylor v. Ashton (2) is not consistent with the modern cases on the duty of directors of companies. I think he is right. But for the reasons I have given I am unable to hold that anything less than fraud will render directors or any other persons liable to an action of deceit.

At the same time I desire to say distinctly that when a false statement has been made the questions whether there were reasonable grounds for believing it, and what were the means of knowledge in the possession of the person making it, are most weighty matters for consideration. The ground upon which an alleged belief was founded is a most important test of its reality. I can conceive many cases where the fact that an alleged belief was

[VOL. XIV.]

H. L. (E.) destitute of all reasonable foundation would suffice of itself to 1889 convince the Court that it was not really entertained, and that DERRY the representation was a fraudulent one. So, too, although
v. means of knowledge are, as was pointed out by Lord Blackburn PLEEK. in Brownlie v. Campbell (1), a very different thing from knowledge, Lord Herschell. if I thought that a person making a false statement had shut his eyes to the facts, or purposely abstained from inquiring into them, I should hold that honest belief was absent, and that he was just as fraudulent as if he had knowingly stated that which was false.

I have arrived with some reluctance at the conclusion to which I have felt myself compelled, for I think those who put before the public a prospectus to induce them to embark their money in a commercial enterprise ought to be vigilant to see that it contains such representations only as are in strict accordance with fact, and I should be very unwilling to give any countenance to the contrary idea. I think there is much to be said for the view that this moral duty ought to some extent to be converted into a legal obligation, and that the want of reasonable care to see that statements, made under such circumstances, are true, should be made an actionable wrong. But this is not a matter fit for discussion on the present occasion. If it is to be done the legislature must intervene and expressly give a right of action in respect of such a departure from duty. It ought not, I think, to be done by straining the law, and holding that to be fraudulent which the tribunal feels cannot properly be so described. I think mischief is likely to result from blurring the distinction between carelessness and fraud, and equally holding a man fraudulent whether his acts can or cannot be justly so designated.

It now remains for me to apply what I believe to be the law to the facts of the present case. The charge against the defendants is that they fraudulently represented that by the special Act of Parliament which the company had obtained they had a right to use steam or other mechanical power instead of horses.
The test which I purpose employing is to inquire whether the defendants knowingly made a false statement in this respect, or whether, on the contrary, they honestly believed what they stated to be a true and fair representation of the facts. Before considering whether the charge of fraud is proved, I may say that I approach the case of all the defendants, except Wilde, with the inclination to scrutinise their conduct with severity. They most improperly received sums of money from the promoters, and this unquestionably lays them open to the suspicion of being ready to put before the public whatever was desired by those who were promoting the undertaking. But I think this must not be unduly pressed, and when I find that the statement impeached was concurred in by one whose conduct in the respect I have mentioned was free from blame, and who was under no similar pressure, the case assumes, I think, a different complexion.

1889
DERRY
v.
PEEK.
Lord Herschell.

I must further remark that the learned judge who tried the cause, and who tells us that he carefully watched the demeanour of the witnesses and scanned their evidence, came without hesitation to the conclusion that they were witnesses of truth, and that their evidence, whatever may be its effect, might safely be relied on. An opinion so formed ought not to be differed from except on very clear grounds, and after carefully considering the evidence, I see no reason to dissent from Stirling J.'s conclusion. I shall therefore assume the truth of their testimony.

I agree with the Court below that the statement made did not accurately convey to the mind of a person reading it what the rights of the company were, but to judge whether it may nevertheless have been put forward without subjecting the defendants to the imputation of fraud, your Lordships must consider what were the circumstances. By the General Tramways Act of 1870 it is provided that all carriages used on any tramway shall be moved by the power prescribed by the special Act, and where no such power is prescribed, by animal power only (1). In order, therefore, to enable the company to use steam-power, an Act of Parliament had to be obtained empowering its use. This had been done, but the power was clogged with the condition that it was only to be used with the consent of the Board of Trade. It was therefore incorrect to say that the company had the right to use steam; they would only have that right if they obtained the consent of the Board of Trade. But it is impossible not to see that the fact which would impress itself upon the minds of those connected with the company was that they had, after submitting the plans to the Board of Trade, obtained a special Act empowering the use of steam. It might well be that the fact that the consent of the Board of Trade was necessary would not dwell in the same way upon their minds, if they thought that the consent of the Board would be obtained as a matter of course if its requirements were complied with, and that it was therefore a mere question of expenditure and care. The provision might seem to them analogous to that contained in the General Tramways Act, and I believe in the Railways Act also, prohibiting the line being opened until it had been inspected by the Board of Trade and certified fit for traffic, which no one would regard as a condition practically limiting the right to use the line for the purpose of a tramway or railway. I do not say that the two cases are strictly analogous in point of law, but they may well have been thought so by business men.

I turn now to the evidence of the defendants. I will take first that of Mr. Wilde, whose conduct in relation to the promotion of the company is free from suspicion. He is a member of the Bar and a director of one of the London tramway companies. He states that he was aware that the consent of the Board of Trade was necessary, but that he thought that such consent had been practically given, inasmuch as, pursuant to the Standing Orders, the plans had been laid before the Board of Trade with the statement that it was intended to use mechanical as well as horse-power, and no objection having been raised by the Board of Trade, and the Bill obtained, he took it for granted that no objection would be raised afterwards, provided the works were properly carried out. He considered, therefore, that, practically and substantially they had the right to use steam, and that the statement was perfectly true.

Mr. Pethick's evidence is to much the same effect. He thought the Board of Trade had no more right to refuse their consent than they would in the case of a railway; that they might have required additions or alterations, but that on any reasonable requirements being complied with they could not refuse their consent. It never entered his thoughts that after the Board had passed their plans, with the knowledge that it was proposed to use steam, they would refuse their consent.

AND PRIVY COUNCIL.

Mr. Moore states that he was under the impression that the passage in the prospectus represented the effect of sect. 35 of the Act, inasmuch as he understood that the consent was obtained. He so understood from the statements made at the board by the solicitors to the company, to the general effect that everything was in order for the use of steam, that the Act had been obtained subject to the usual restrictions, and that they were starting as a tramway company, with full power to use steam as other companies were doing.

 v.
 PEEK.
 _____
 Lord Herschell.

Mr. Wakefield, according to his evidence, believed that the statement in the prospectus was fair; he never had a doubt about it. It never occurred to him to say anything about the consent of the Board of Trade, because as they had got the Act of Parliament for steam he presumed at once that they would get it.

Mr. Derry's evidence is somewhat confused, but I think the fair effect of it is that though he was aware that under the Act the consent of the Board of Trade was necessary, he thought that the company having obtained their Act the Board's consent would follow as a matter of course, and that the question of such consent being necessary never crossed his mind at the time the prospectus was issued. He believed at that time that it was correct to say they had the right to use steam.

As I have said, Stirling J. gave credit to these witnesses, and I see no reason to differ from him. What conclusion ought to be drawn from their evidence? I think they were mistaken in supposing that the consent of the Board of Trade would follow as a matter of course because they had obtained their Act. It was absolutely in the discretion of the Board whether such consent should be given. The prospectus was therefore inaccurate. But that is not the question. If they believed that the consent of the Board of Trade was practically concluded by the passing of the Act, has the plaintiff made out, which it was for him to do, that they have been guilty of a fraudulent misrepresentation? I think not. I cannot hold it proved as to any one of them that he knowingly made a false statement, or one which he did not believe to be true, or was careless whether what he stated was true or false. In short, I think they honestly believed that what they asserted was true, and I am of opinion that the charge of fraud made against them has not been established.

HOUSE OF LORDS

[VOL. XIV.]

H. L. (E.) It is not unworthy of note that in his report to the Board of 1889 Trade, General Hutchinson, who was obviously aware of the pro-DERRY v. PEEK.visions of the special Act, falls into the very same inaccuracy of Lord Herschell. language as is complained of in the defendants, for he says: "The Act of 1882 gives the company authority to use mechanical power over all their system."

I quite admit that the statements of witnesses as to their belief are by no means to be accepted blindfold. The probabilities must be considered. Whenever it is necessary to arrive at a conclusion as to the state of mind of another person, and to determine whether his belief under given circumstances was such as he alleges, we can only do so by applying the standard of conduct which our own experience of the ways of men has enabled us to form; by asking ourselves whether a reasonable man would be likely under the circumstances so to believe. I have applied this test, with the result that I have a strong conviction that a reasonable man situated as the defendants were, with their knowledge and means of knowledge, might well believe what they state they did believe, and consider that the representation made was substantially true.

Adopting the language of Jessel M.R. in Smith v. Chadwick (1), I conclude by saying that on the whole I have come to the conclusion that the statement, "though in some respects inaccurate and not altogether free from imputation of carelessness, was a fair, honest and bonâ fide statement on the part of the defendants, and by no means exposes them to an action for deceit."

I think the judgment of the Court of Appeal should be reversed.

[COURT OF APPEAL]

DOYLE v. OLBY (IRONMONGERS) LTD. AND OTHERS C

[1964 D. No. 981]

1969 Jan. 30, 31

Lord Denning M.R., Winn and Sachs L.JJ.

Damages—Deceit—Measure—Principle applicable—Sale of business induced by fraud and conspiracy—Damages at large—Measure of damages all loss directly flowing from fraudulent inducement including consequential loss. D

Estoppel—Conduct by—Counsel’s argument—On law at first instance wrong—Party not estopped from taking different course on appeal where no prejudice to party opposing shown. Barrister—Conduct in court—Erroneous statement of law—Error at first instance—Whether client bound on appeal. E

The plaintiff saw an advertisement of an ironmongers’ business for sale at £4,500 for the lease, business and goodwill, the stock to be taken at a valuation. He made inquiries, and the company’s director produced accounts for the preceding three years which showed considerable annual profits. The director’s brother told the plaintiff, inter alia, that all the trade was over the counter. The plaintiff agreed to buy and went into occupation under a new lease at a higher rent, but with a covenant that the vendors would not engage in a similar business within a 10-mile radius for five years. Having undertaken liabilities of some £7,000, he soon found that the turnover had been misrepresented and, in particular, that half the trade had been obtained by the director’s brother acting as part-time traveller at £555 a year; and shortly after he took over, an associated company began to canvass the vendors’ former customers in the district. F G

The plaintiff began an action against the two companies, the director, and his brother, for damages for fraud and conspiracy. Meanwhile, after three years’ disastrous efforts to trade, he sold the business, but was left with liabilities of some £4,000. At the trial Swanwick J. found all the defendants guilty of fraud and conspiracy and awarded the plaintiff damages of £1,500 calculated on the basis suggested by counsel for the plaintiff in his closing speech, namely, two and a half times the cost of employing a part-time traveller at £600 a year, as equivalent to the cost of making good the representation or the reduction in the value of the goodwill. 2 Q.B. Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

A The defendants filed an appeal against the findings of fraud and conspiracy and the plaintiff appealed in person against the amount of damages. The defendants withdrew their appeal on the first day of the hearing.

B The court had not been supplied with a transcript of the eight days of evidence at the trial, but questioned the plaintiff about his financial position, and also received a contemporary note of the opening speech of his counsel at the trial. For the defendants it was submitted that as the trial judge had assessed the damages on the basis of the closing submission by the plaintiff's counsel as to the proper measure of those damages, the court should not on the appeal substitute a different, albeit correct, measure of damages for deceit.

C Held, allowing the appeal: (1) that the court could apply the proper measure of damages for deceit despite the fact that the wrong measure was proposed by the plaintiff's counsel at the trial, for the court would not let a man with a just claim suffer by reason of his counsel's mistake unless it were shown that to take a different course would do injustice to the defendants; and that had not been shown.

D (2) That the proper measure of damages for deceit, as distinct from damages for breach of contract, was all the damage directly flowing from the tortious act of fraudulent inducement which was not rendered too remote by the plaintiff's own conduct, whether or not the defendants could have foreseen such consequential loss. The plaintiff's position before the fraudulent inducement should be compared with his position at the end of the transaction. As in the instant case the plaintiff had been tricked into buying a business which he would otherwise not have bought at all, the court should award him his overall loss up to his final disposal of the business, less any benefits he had received.

E (3) That as the evidence before the court was limited, the court should estimate the damages by treating the matter as one for a jury, and on that broad approach a proper round figure would be £5,500.

Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

[1969]

The plaintiff, Herbert Leonard Doyle, brought an action against Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd., Mr. Cecil Augustus Olby, an employee employed as a part-time traveller at £555 a year, Mr. Leslie Morton Olby, a director of both defendant companies, and A. Olby & Sons Ltd., an associated company, in which he claimed damages for fraud and conspiracy in connection with the sale of a shop and dwelling-house at 12, Upper High Street, Epsom, Surrey, assigned to him by Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd. on January 31, 1964.

By his statement of claim, after a number of amendments and abandonment of a number of claims either before or at the trial, he claimed in deceit that the second defendant, Mr. Cecil Olby, as express or implied or ostensible agent for the vendor company, made false and fraudulent statements to the effect that all sales of the business being offered were over the counter and that the wages bill was £42 a week whereas in fact it was £57 5s., the wages of the manager and of himself as a part-time traveller being omitted. Secondly, in regard to conspiracy he claimed that all the defendants were engaged to injure his interest by cheating him of his bargain, the plot alleged being ostensibly to sell the whole business as a profitable concern whereas (a) it was declining and unprofitable and its unprofitability was masked by the deceit alleged and other ancillary abuses; and (b) the real intention was to abstract the trade, or wholesale part of the business, both by concealing that the fourth defendants, A. Olby & Son Ltd., were operating and would continue to operate in competition in the area and also by deflecting customers to that company and away from the plaintiff both before and after the sale.

Thirdly, there was a claim for breach of covenant against the vendor company as parties to the agreement for sale and the assignment of the lease to the plaintiff, on the ground that though the vendors were a separate company and not a subsidiary of the fourth defendant company, they were "interested" in that company's business of ironmongers and builders' merchants within the meaning of the covenant and that that business continued to be carried on within the 10-mile radius specified in the restrictive covenant.

The defendants' defence on deceit (as summarised by Swanwick J.) was that Mr. Cecil Olby was not an agent of the vendors to make any representation and probably did not make any, but that if he did it was by negligence and not by fraud. On conspiracy the defendants denied any intention to injure or cheat the plaintiff and any conspiracy to do so; claimed that the business was offered on terms suggested to them as fair by their accountants; that if the plaintiff failed to appreciate the position that was due at most to innocent misrepresentation which at that time would have given no cause of action and was indeed largely due to the plaintiff's failure to make appropriate inquiries; that the maxim caveat emptor applied; that the fourth defendants had for many years traded in that area, as the plaintiff should have suspected from their well-known and wide-spread interests, and were entitled to continue to do so; that the plaintiff's failure was due largely to his own errors and misjudgments; and that in any event there was nothing to give him a cause of action against any of the defendants, alone or in conjunction with one another. The alleged breach of covenant was denied in that the fourth defendants were not a party to it and that the vendors who were an independent company in law ceased to trade after the plaintiff took

2 Q.B. Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

A over the business and had no interest in the fourth defendants' business within the meaning of the covenant; and that if there was any breach of it there was no evidence that it resulted in any gain to any of the defendants or any loss to the plaintiff.

B The hearing lasted ten days before Swanwick J. and he gave his judgment on July 24, 1967. He found that the plaintiff and his wife were "thoroughly honest and decent people" now completely convinced that they had been "tricked into buying a pup" and deliberately robbed of part of what they had bought. His Lordship said that in deciding that question he had also to bear in mind that the Olbys also bore high reputations for integrity in their business and private lives and that if he had to find for the plaintiff it must mean that on the present occasion they had departed from their normal rectitude; and that though the burden was not so high as in a criminal case, a finding of fraud or conspiracy was no light matter.

C The judge having dismissed the claim for breach of covenant, went on to find that the accounts as presented by Mr. Leslie Olby were to his knowledge inaccurate, that the statement by Mr. Cecil Olby about the staff and wages was made with knowledge of its falsity and intending that the plaintiff should act on it; that he gave the information probably because he had been told to do so by Mr. Leslie; that the plaintiff acted on it to his detriment, particularly in regard to the travelling part of the business, and that there were therefore present all the elements of fraud in law and of conspiracy between all the defendants.

D After a full consideration of the evidence his Lordship turned to the question of damages. He said:

E "My task is simplified . . . by the submission of [counsel for the plaintiff] which I accept, that there are two alternative bases for damages, each of which arrives at virtually the same round figure. . . . The first is that to preserve the trade custom it would have been necessary to employ a part-time traveller at about £600 a year, and I think there is a reasonable prospect that such a person could have been obtained. If two and a half times this figure is taken, that being the normal basis for valuing goodwill, it actually represents . . . a reduction in the value of the goodwill equivalent to the cost of making good the representation, that is, about £1,500. Secondly and alternatively, if the trade custom was 50 per cent. of the turnover, its loss would result in a reduction in the value of the goodwill of 35 per cent. to 40 per cent. which, applied to the accountant's figures of £4,000, again would approximate to a round figure of about £1,500. Therefore, I think it is at this figure that I can best quantify the loss."

G He granted a stay of execution on terms that £750 which had been paid into court with a denial of liability should remain in court.

H The defendants filed a notice of appeal against the finding of fraud and conspiracy and also against the amount of the damages. The plaintiff filed a cross-appeal against the amount of damages. Later the defendants abandoned their appeal, the stay was removed, and the damages were paid over to the Law Society, the plaintiff having been legally aided at the trial. When the plaintiff, having been refused legal aid, pursued his appeal in person, an application by the defendants for security for costs of the appeal was granted, and £250 was paid into court on behalf of the plaintiff. The defendants thereupon revived their appeal and it remained on the record until the beginning of the hearing of the appeal, when it was withdrawn. A

[1969]

By his notice of appeal the plaintiff asked that judgment should be entered for him for greatly increased damages or alternatively for a new trial. The grounds of appeal included eight respects in which it was said that the judge had erred in his findings of fact on the evidence. Ground (9) was that the judge in awarding £1,500 damages had completely underestimated the amount of damage done by the fraudulent information given or withheld before contracts were signed and exchanged and had also failed to take into account that had the plaintiff known of any or all of the fraudulent points he would not have purchased, nor would he have been compelled to run the business for three years at a very heavy loss. B

No transcript of the evidence at the trial was available to the Court of Appeal, but the plaintiff made statements and answered questions put to him on his financial position, supported by a number of exhibits which had been before the trial judge; and when it was submitted for the defendants that the plaintiff was putting the case on a basis quite different from that on which his counsel had conducted it at the trial, counsel for the defendants provided for the assistance of the court his own note of the opening submissions by counsel for the plaintiff at the trial, which indicated that counsel had not at that stage advanced any argument as to the extent of the damages. The court inferred from the passage in the judgment of Swanwick J. (supra) the concluding submission for the plaintiff as to the basis on which the damages should be assessed. C D

The plaintiff in person told the court about his financial position up to the date of resale of the business and to the present date. E

David Smout for the defendants. The damages were assessed on the basis of calculations put to the accountant who prepared the accounts whose integrity was never challenged, and in accordance with the submissions of counsel for the plaintiff. It would be unjust to the defendants if the court, without the assistance of even a transcript of eight days of evidence, decides on a different basis the measure and quantum of damages, in view of the fact that the plaintiff has put before this court a case for damages at large which was not put at the trial on his behalf. There is no evidence before the court about the way in which the plaintiff carried on the business for three years other than what he has told the court; and such evidence might have an important bearing on the question of consequential loss and to what extent the defendants were responsible for it. F G

The first question is whether it is open to the plaintiff to ask for general damages on any footing other than that put forward on his behalf at the trial by leading counsel.

If the plaintiff is not estopped by reason of his counsel's submissions, the second question is whether the measure of damages for fraudulent misrepresentation is limited by the same principles as are damages for breach of contract or warranty. H

[WINN LJ. Contributory negligence is no defence to a charge of fraud. If in principle the damages for fraudulent misrepresentation are at large.

2 Q.B.

Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

A surely the burden would lie on the defendants to establish that the plaintiff could have avoided some part of the loss he has sustained; and if the evidence before the judge was relevant on that matter it would have been for the defendants to provide the transcript.]

On the first question, it is conceded that the contemporary note of counsel's opening speech at the trial shows that though he did not expressly ask for damages at large he did not at that point restrict his submissions on the assessment of damages to the basis which the judge eventually accepted. If counsel deliberately took the course he did—as he appears to have done since he did not lead any evidence on special damage—the defendants are entitled to challenge any different approach in this court. Though the appellate court has a discretion about allowing points to be taken before it which were not taken in the court below, it is a discretion which will be exercised with great caution and only when the court is satisfied that the manner of putting the case to the judge was accidental rather than deliberate. [Reference was made to Wilson v. United Counties Bank Ltd. [1920] A.C. 102 and Hickman v. Kent or Romney Marsh Sheep Breeders' Association (1920) 37 T.L.R. 163, 164.]

C On the second question the authors of Mayne & McGregor on Law of Damages, 12th ed. (1961), at pp. 802–3, paras. 955 to 957, have put forward propositions on the measure of damages for fraudulent misrepresentation; but their propositions are not supported by the authorities cited. [Reference was made to Pearson v. Wheeler (1825) Ry. & M. 303; Clark v. Urquhart [1930] A.C. 28, per Lord Atkin at pp. 67–8; McConnell v. Wright [1903] 1 Ch. 546, per Lord Collins M.R. at p. 554; Clarke v. Yorke (1882) 47 L.T. 381; and Milne v. Marwood (1855) 15 C.B. 778.]

E So far as it is possible to recollect the extensive evidence given at the trial the transcript might not assist much in any attempt by this court to evaluate how much of the loss was attributable to the defendants and how much to the plaintiff.

[LORD DENNING M.R. That often happens on a jury point. Damages at large are jury matters, and in many cases the jury has to do the best it can.]

F It is singularly unfortunate in a case where the figure could be very substantial if the damages are at large. There is a sum in court as security for costs of the plaintiff's appeal and that might be used to obtain a transcript.

G [LORD DENNING M.R. The defendants should have obtained it if they were seriously going to pursue their appeal against the findings of fraud and conspiracy; but they abandoned that appeal at the last moment and there is no reason why an impecunious plaintiff should supply it.]

H LORD DENNING M.R. Mr. Doyle in 1963 was minded to buy a business. He saw an advertisement in "Daltons Weekly." He got particulars. The business was said to belong to Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd., 12 Upper High Street, Epsom, Surrey, and the turnover £27,000. The price asked for the lease, the business and goodwill was £4,500. The stock was to be taken at valuation. Mr. Doyle made further enquiries about it. On November 6, 1963, Mr. Leslie Olby, a director of the company, produced accounts

Lord Denning M.R.

Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

[1969] to him. They were for the three years ending December 31, 1962. In a covering letter Mr. Olby said:

A

“ Dear Mr. Doyle,

As requested we are enclosing accountant’s figures covering Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd., 12 Upper High Street, Epsom, Surrey.”

Those figures showed that for those three years there had been considerable profits: £1,921 net profits in 1960; £1,749 in 1961; and £1,361 in 1962. Mr. Doyle also saw Mr. Cecil Olby who worked on the premises. Mr. Doyle asked Mr. Cecil Olby what staff were employed. Mr. Cecil Olby said; “ One manager, two assistants, one van-driver, and a part-time clerical assistant; with a wage bill of £42 a week.” He added that one of the staff was a very old man. Mr. Doyle also asked Mr. Cecil Olby how the trade was geared as between the retail trade and the wholesale trade. Mr. Cecil said:

B

“ Two-thirds retail; one-third wholesale—all over the counter.”

C

In other words, it was trade which was done from the shop itself and would not need a traveller to go round and canvass for orders. On those representations, Mr. Doyle agreed to buy this business.

The agreement was entered into in January, 1964. Mr. Doyle agreed to pay £4,500 down in cash, which covered the goodwill, fixtures and fittings, and the remainder of the lease (which had about four years to run). The stock was to be bought on valuation. In addition, there was a restrictive covenant on the sellers, Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd., in which they covenanted that they would not for five years engage in any ironmongers’ business within a radius of ten miles from 12 Upper High Street, Epsom.

D

Mr. Doyle paid the £4,500. He took over stock at a valuation of £5,000 which he paid. He needed a longer lease, so he surrendered the existing lease and took a longer lease at a greatly increased rent. The freeholder who benefited was Mr. Cecil Olby himself.

E

In order to pay all the money, Mr. Doyle put up all the cash he had—£7,000; and he raised £3,000 on mortgage from Askinex Ltd.

So he went into occupation. But I am afraid that things were very different from what he was led to believe. The turnover was far less than he had been told. The trade was not all over the counter. Half of the trade was wholesale business which could only be obtained by employing a traveller to go round to the customers. Mr. Doyle could not afford to employ a traveller. So all that trade was lost. The whole transaction was a disaster for Mr. Doyle. To add to his troubles, in February, 1964, soon after Mr. Doyle went into occupation, a company called A. Olby & Son Ltd. of Penge (which was closely associated with the vendor company, Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd.) canvassed and sent travellers round to customers who had previously been customers of the Epsom business. The judge held that this was not a breach of the restrictive covenant, though I am not so sure about it.

F

G

Mr. Doyle was most dissatisfied, and in May, 1964, he brought this action for damages for fraud and conspiracy against the company which sold him the Epsom business, that is, Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd.; against Mr. Cecil Olby, who was the man who worked in that business; Mr. Leslie Olby, his brother, who was a director; and against A. Olby & Son Ltd.,

2 Q.B.

Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

Lord Denning M.R.

A which was the company at Penge, of which Mr. Leslie Olby was managing director.

Although Mr. Doyle had started the action, he had to remain in occupation. He had burnt his boats and had to carry on with the business as best he could. He tried to sell it, but there were difficulties. One was that the landlord, Mr. Cecil Olby, would not give him a licence to assign, and so forth. After three years he did manage to sell it for a sum of some £3,700.

B This cleared off the mortgage to Askinex Ltd., but he was left with many outstanding debts to the bank, to suppliers, and the like. His debts came to £4,000, and he has been sued in the county court by many of his creditors.

The case came for trial before Swanwick J. in July, 1967. It took many days, but in the end Swanwick J. found that the defendants had been guilty of fraud and conspiracy. The accounts which were produced in November, 1963, to Mr. Doyle contained "a blatantly wrong figure" for wages and management remuneration. The representation by Mr. Cecil Olby that the sales were "all over the counter" was completely untrue, and must have been known to Mr. Cecil Olby to be untrue. He was a traveller himself and went round to customers on two days a week at least. His wages amounted in the year 1962 to £555. That figure was not brought into the accounts which were produced to Mr. Doyle, and made them completely false. It turned out that Mr. Cecil Olby had had a breakdown and was not really capable of doing much business. But Mr. Doyle was not to know that. The judge found that the representations were false to the knowledge of Mr. Cecil Olby, and that this knowledge must be imputed to the other defendants because he was acting on their behalf. Furthermore, there was a conspiracy between them to defraud Mr. Doyle.

E The defendants put in a notice of appeal against the finding of fraud and conspiracy. It was in the list in this court when the case was called on for hearing yesterday, but it was not persisted in. Mr. Smout abandoned it. So we approach the case on the accepted footing that Mr. Doyle was induced by the fraud and conspiracy of the defendants to buy this business.

F The judge awarded Mr. Doyle £1,500 damages. Mr. Doyle appeals against that award. He says it is far too small. The judge arrived at the figure of £1,500 by accepting the submissions of counsel then appearing for Mr. Doyle. The judge said as to damages:

G "My task is simplified by the submissions of the plaintiff's counsel, which I accept, that there are two alternative bases for damages, each of which arrives at virtually the same round figure. . . . The first is that to preserve the trade custom it would have been necessary to employ a part-time traveller at about £600 a year, and I think there is a reasonable prospect that such a person could have been obtained. If two-and-a-half times this figure is taken, that being the normal basis for valuing goodwill, it actually represents, as I have said, a reduction in the value of the goodwill equivalent to the cost of making good the representation, that is, about £1,500. Secondly and alternatively, if the trade custom was 50 per cent. of the turnover, its loss would result in a reduction in the value of the goodwill of 35 per cent. to 40 per cent., which, applied to the accountant's figures of £4,000, again would approximate to a round figure of £1,500. Therefore, I think it is at this figure that I can best quantify the loss."

A

It appears, therefore, that the plaintiff's counsel submitted, and the judge accepted, that the proper measure of damages was the "cost of making good the representation," or what came to the same thing, "the reduction in value of the goodwill" due to the misrepresentation. In so doing, he treated the representation as if it were a contractual promise, that is, as if there were a contractual term to the effect "The trade is all over the counter. There is no need to employ a traveller." I think it was the wrong measure. Damages for fraud and conspiracy are assessed differently from damages for breach of contract.

B

It was submitted by Mr. Smout that we could not or, at any rate, ought not to correct this error. I do not agree. We never allow a client to suffer for the mistake of his counsel if we can possibly help it. We will always seek to rectify it as far as we can. We will correct it whenever we are able to do so without injustice to the other side. Sometimes the error has seriously affected the course of the evidence, in which case we can at best order a new trial. But there is nothing of that kind here. The error was made at the end of the case. All the evidence had been taken on the footing that the damages were at large. It was only in the final submission that the error was made. Such an error we can, and will, correct.

The second question is what is the proper measure of damages for fraud, as distinct from damages for breach of contract. It was discussed during the argument in Hadley v. Baxendale ((1854) 9 Ex. 341), and finds a place in the notes to Smith's Leading Cases, 13th ed. (1929) at p. 563, where it is suggested there is no difference. But in McConnel v. Wright [1903] 1 Ch. 546, 554, Lord Collins M.R. pointed out the difference. It was an action for fraudulent statements in a prospectus whereby a man was induced to take up shares. Lord Collins said of the action for fraud:

"It is not an action for breach of contract, and, therefore, no damages in respect of prospective gains which the person contracting was entitled by his contract to expect to come in, but it is an action of tort—it is an action for a wrong done whereby the plaintiff was tricked out of certain money in his pocket, and, therefore, prima facie, the highest limit of his damages is the whole extent of his loss, and that loss is measured by the money which was in his pocket and is now in the pocket of the company."

F

But that statement was the subject of comment by Lord Atkin in Clark v. Urquhart [1930] A.C. 28, 67-68. He said:

"I find it difficult to suppose that there is any difference in the measure of damages in an action of deceit depending upon the nature of the transaction into which the plaintiff is fraudulently induced to enter. Whether he buys shares or buys sugar, whether he subscribes for shares, or agrees to enter into a partnership, or in any other way alters his position to his detriment, in principle, the measure of damages should be the same, and whether estimated by a jury or a judge. I should have thought it would be based on the actual damage directly flowing from the fraudulent inducement. The formula in McConnel v. Wright [1903] 1 Ch. 546 may be correct or it may be expressed in too rigid terms."

2 Q.B. Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.) Lord Denning M.R. 167

A I think that Lord Collins did express himself in too rigid terms. He seems to have overlooked consequential damages. On principle the distinction seems to be this: in contract, the defendant has made a promise and broken it. The object of damages is to put the plaintiff in as good a position, as far as money can do it, as if the promise had been performed. In fraud, the defendant has been guilty of a deliberate wrong by inducing the plaintiff to act to his detriment. The object of damages is to compensate the plaintiff for all the loss he has suffered, so far, again, as money can do it. In contract, the damages are limited to what may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties. In fraud, they are not so limited. The defendant is bound to make reparation for all the actual damages directly flowing from the fraudulent inducement. The person who has been defrauded is entitled to say:

C "I would not have entered into this bargain at all but for your representation. Owing to your fraud, I have not only lost all the money I paid you, but, what is more, I have been put to a large amount of extra expense as well and suffered this or that extra damages."

D All such damages can be recovered: and it does not lie in the mouth of the fraudulent person to say that they could not reasonably have been foreseen. For instance, in this very case Mr. Doyle has not only lost the money which he paid for the business, which he would never have done if there had been no fraud: he put all that money in and lost it; but also he has been put to expense and loss in trying to run a business which has turned out to be a disaster for him. He is entitled to damages for all his loss, subject, of course to giving credit for any benefit that he has received. There is nothing to be taken off in mitigation: for there is nothing more that he could have done to reduce his loss. He did all that he could reasonably be expected to do.

E This brings us to the third question: must we send the case back for a new trial for damages; or can we assess them ourselves? The difficulty is that we have not got a transcript of all the evidence. Mr. Doyle is a poor man. He comes here without legal aid. He was unable to afford a transcript. The defendants, I presume, could afford it, but they have not thought fit to get one. There was a finding of fraud and conspiracy against them. They gave notice of appeal against that finding. Yet, they did not get a transcript of the evidence. It was they who ought to have done so. In these circumstances, I do not think it would be right to put either party to the expense of getting a full transcript of eight or nine days' evidence with all the delay that would entail. The court must do the best it can to put right the error which has taken place. I will not go into the details myself as to the figures. It is a case for assessing damages at large, much as a jury would do. Winn L.J. has considered the matter carefully, and he will deal with it; but I say in advance that I agree with the figure which he is going to propose, that the damages should be in the sum of £5,500.

H WINN L.J. I agree respectfully and entirely with the judgment delivered by my Lord, and desire only to echo and then add a little to what he has said about the proper measure of damages for deceit. It is a most remarkable fact, as my Lord has remarked, that there is a complete dearth of authority on the topic of the proper measure of damages in such a case.

I would pay tribute to the passage in Mayne & McGregor on Damages, 12th ed. (1961), where, in Chapter 41, paragraph 955 and some following paragraphs, the authors have in effect proposed, in the absence of authority—since the cases to which they refer really lend no support for their proposition—that there should be a clear distinction drawn between the measure of damages which can be recovered for such a breach of contract as a breach of warranty as to the quality or value or condition of goods or premises sold, and the measure of damages for deceit—tortious fraudulent deceit. They make that proposition, and perhaps, if the judgment of this court were to stand, they will in their next book have support for what they themselves were thinking. They refer to McConnel v. Wright [1903] 1 Ch. 546 and Clark v. Urquhart [1930] A.C. 28, where a passage from Lord Atkin may be found which has been read by my Lord. It is right to observe that that passage of Lord Atkin's speech was entirely obiter, since the subject-matter of the case then before their Lordships' House was nothing more than the proper form of order which should be made in the particular case, where there had been a payment into court with a denial of liability and a number of complicated events.

When one finds a great lawyer of Lord Atkin's standing saying that which my Lord has quoted, I, for my part, think there is ample authority for the propositions in the edition of Mayne to which I have referred, and the ruling which this court is now giving. It is of interest, though of no direct support to that ruling, to note that a very similar distinction is found in decided authorities between damages for breach of contract and damages for breach of warranty of authority to contract on a principal's behalf. In Firbank's Executors v. Humphreys (1886) 18 Q.B.D. 54 Lord Esher M.R. said, at p. 60:

“The damages, under the general rule, are arrived at by considering the difference in the position he would have been in had the representation been true, and the position he is actually in, in consequence of its being untrue.”

It appears to me that in a case where there has been a breach of warranty of authority, and still more clearly where there has been a tortious wrong consisting of a fraudulent inducement, the proper starting-point for any court called upon to consider what damages are recoverable by the defrauded person is to compare his position before the representation was made to him with his position after it, brought about by that representation, always bearing in mind that no element in the consequential position can be regarded as attributable loss and damage if it be too remote a consequence: it will be too remote not necessarily because it was not contemplated by the representor, but in any case where the person deceived has not himself behaved with reasonable prudence, reasonable common sense, or can in any true sense be said to have been the author of his own misfortune. The damage that he seeks to recover must have flowed directly from the fraud perpetrated upon him. I, myself, gave during the argument in this court, an illustration—hypothetical, of course—which I understood Mr. Smout was prepared to accept as theoretically a sound illustration of the principle which these judgments are enunciating, it may

Winn L.J.

A be, for the first time, always assuming, of course, that that principle was itself to be accepted.

B If a man in this country is made the victim of a fraudulent misrepresentation that a business in Bangkok, Hongkong, Manila or the Fiji Islands has certain equipment, certain assets, certain goodwill, certain trade contracts and profits, and is thereby induced to pay for that business, it being, of course, understood by both parties to the transaction of sale, for the procurement of which a fraudulent misrepresentation is made, that he will set out to that remote place with his family and, it may be, his household goods, at very considerable expense, and on arrival will acquire living accommodation and, perhaps, have to buy additional furniture and engage staff or servants; and if he acts upon the representations and incurs all such expenses, and the business is found to be very different from that which it was fraudulently represented to be, so that he cannot survive out in the remote place to which he has gone, and is bound to come back again, then I, speaking for myself, would not hesitate to give him all the outgoings from his pocket of the kinds which I have indicated, up to such time as he should sensibly have come home again, and had the money to come back again, less, of course, by way of set-off, any benefit which he has derived from the exploitation of such assets as he found there upon his arrival.

D Having said that much, one turns to the instant case. It is, as my Lord has said and I respectfully agree, essentially a matter for a jury. I think, myself, with confidence that there is already sufficient evidentiary material available to enable this court to make a jury assessment in round figures. It would be wrong and, indeed, an intolerable expenditure of judicial time and the money of the parties to embark upon any detailed consideration of isolated items in the account on which a balance must be struck. I have looked at it myself in this way, and have arrived, let me say at once, at the same figure that my Lord has already mentioned. The starting point is a simple one: £4,500 was paid away out of his pocket by the plaintiff to acquire this business; and a further £5,000, in round figures, to take over stock at valuation. That was £9,500. When he came ultimately to leave the business, I say quite confidently that he is not revealed by the evidence now before this court, nor do I think it could have been shown by any evidence, having regard to the general circumstances of the case, to have hung on too long or to have behaved otherwise than as a sensible business man or to have brought misfortune upon himself. When he gave up the business after three years, he got out of it at that time £3,500 from the purchaser to whom he sold it, and he had, at a knock-down price, which I think was forced upon him, £800 for the sale of such stock as he then had. During the time that he was running or trying to run and revive this moribund, if not dead, business, he drew £10 a week to live on out of the till, if one may use that expression, and he lived with his wife in part of the premises, for the totality of which he was paying a rental of £800 a year, plus, of course, rates. I think he should be debited with the £10 a week for the period and debited with £300 a year, making £900, for such living accommodation benefit as he and his wife then received from these premises. I would take those two items at a round figure together of £2,500. Adding up the benefits which I have mentioned, I arrive at a figure of £6,700 and call it £7,000.

Winn L.J.

Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

[1969]

At that point, comparing outgoings with such benefits as ought to be set off, there is a gap or balance of losses of £2,500. Then one considers other consequences in terms of finance, because no damages are being awarded, at any rate, in this case today, by the court for worry, strain, anxiety and unhappiness; it may be that in some cases such considerations might well be appropriate. He lost during the time he was trying to run this business additionally £700 that he borrowed from his mother and another relative. He incurred an overdraft of £1,400 with his bankers. At the time when he came out of occupation he was owing £480 odd for rates. He also owed some items, the items which he could actually recall in court, totalling about £100, for goods supplied. He had been paying £22 odd a month interest on the loan of £4,000 which he had to raise in order to enable him to meet the purchase price of the business and the stock, which I have already mentioned. I do not propose to say more about details. If it were appropriate to go into those item by item, then I would think that three or four days would be set aside before some tribunal to investigate with more complete discovery; I venture to hope the result would not differ very much from that which I, as a common juror, have arrived at. As I say, one brings in those items. I have taken them at £6,800, which I have called £7,000 for the benefits, a gap of £2,500; and, having regard to the plaintiff's evidence—when I say "evidence" I mean evidence before the trial judge—and his answers to questions in this court which I accept from him as an honest man, I think that a further round figure of £3,000 (for an estimated £3,380) should be added, and that his total loss should be £2,500 plus £3,000—£5,500, as an award of damages. That means that this appeal should be allowed, in my view, to that extent.

SACHS L.J. I agree with all that has fallen from my Lords and with the award they propose.

I would first like to add a few words on the question whether anything that happened at trial should debar the plaintiff from recovering the amount of damages to which he is in law entitled. It has been submitted on behalf of the respondents that because in his closing address counsel for the plaintiff adopted at first instance an approach which led to the judge making an assessment of damages upon the wrong basis, this court cannot now award this plaintiff the sum to which in law he is entitled. Where an argument presented to this court is different from that put before the trial judge, this court must approach with a degree of caution the question of whether to consider the new argument: but, after such examination it should be slow to impose a bar which would drive from the judgment seat any man with a just claim merely because it was not at trial presented in the best way. Unless the respondent can, at any rate, show that he has been prejudiced by the course taken at first instance to such an extent that departure from it would be unjust to him, there should be no bar. The books are full of instances where an appellant has succeeded on a different point from that taken at the trial. If, and in so far, as an erroneous approach at trial merely results in additional costs to the respondents, that can, of course, in appropriate cases be a matter to be dealt with by the appellate court.

1 Q.B.

Doyle v. Olby Ltd. (C.A.)

171
Sachs L.J.

A In the present case, one has the position that the plaintiff has been the victim of a deplorable fraud—deplorable as regards the complete disregard of the defendants for commercial honesty; he has been awarded a sum that goes nowhere near the proper compensation, and to my mind, for the reasons given by the Master of the Rolls, there is no good reason why this court should not order a proper compensatory award.

B Turning now to the issue as to how much shall be awarded, it is the fact that the law as to the measure of damages recoverable in actions for deceit is one in which there is a dearth of direct authority except in cases relating to the purchase of shares, of goods, and of land, all of which have certain factors in common. The resulting problem is one which, for my part, I first came across some 35 years ago, and it is a problem that has in various forms recurred not infrequently in cases with which it has been my lot to be concerned. I take some comfort in the fact that, over
C all that period, it has seemed to me that practitioners have, in general, taken the same clear course as this court is today adopting—based upon that passage in Clark v. Urquhart [1930] A.C. 28, which is worth again recalling. There Lord Atkin said in a concise manner (at p. 68): “I should have thought it”—that is the measure of damages—“would be based on the actual damage directly flowing from the fraudulent induce-

E In cases such as the present the wrong done is tricking a plaintiff into a contract, and the plaintiff is entitled by way of damages to whatever sum he has lost by being thus tricked. The question as to what a purchaser has lost must naturally depend on the subject-matter of the contract. If the contract is simply one such as the purchase of shares, normally the maximum loss will be the money out of which the purchaser has been
F tricked, a sum which, however, may well include brokerage or stamp duty: the value of benefits received will be taken into account. If the purchase is one of a business which the plaintiff but for the fraud would not have acquired at all, the objective of the court is to put the plaintiff, so far as it is possible, into the same position financially as if he had not entered into the contract at all; in other words, one must look at the end result
G of his having entered into the transaction and find out what was his loss over all. In this behalf, I entirely agree with what has fallen from my Lords. The acquiring of a business normally entails the expenses of moving into fresh premises, keeping the business going, and at any rate continuing to keep it going until such time as it can be disposed of; and then one looks also at the expenses of selling. The computation of the loss may in many cases not be easy. Thus, the court must obviously take
H care not to include sums for consequences which may be due to the plaintiff's own unreasonable actions, and also not to include results which are too remote—matters which often involve difficult questions of fact and degree. But such difficulties do not alter the duty of the court, which should approach the matter on a broad basis.

In this case, the central fact is that the plaintiff was tricked into buying a business which he would not otherwise have bought at all. It was one which, even with suitable protective covenants from the fourth defendant—and none were acquired—would anyway have been singularly unattractive to anyone who had honestly been told all the relevant facts. It was a business on which such goodwill as there was depended greatly on whatever course might be adopted by the fourth defendant in the future; and I, for my part, doubt whether a suitable protective covenant which would have worked from a practical point of view could have been devised.' Any value attached to the business itself as being a going concern on an independent basis was very small indeed; and it would seem to me that when once the facts were fully known to a purchaser, any sizable payment for goodwill would have been very unlikely.

In fact, as matters turned out, the fourth defendants, A. Olby & Son Ltd., part of what was called "the Olby empire," within weeks of the sale of the relevant business (which was being carried on as A. Olby & Sons), for reasons which they were in law entitled to adopt, did take a course which in practice saw to it that any goodwill of the business sold was recovered for the empire and got back into the hands of the fourth defendants. For, when the plaintiff raised the question of whether he had not been tricked by the first defendant, the fourth defendant cut off his supplies and set about canvassing the customers of the business sold. We have the benefit of having seen a letter signed by a director of the fourth defendant which contains, among other things, two lists, "B" and "C" and refers to them as follows: "The list marked 'B' contains accounts which dealt with Epsom"—that is to say, the business sold—"and Mr. Coombe was instructed on February 20, 1964, to call on those customers on behalf of Penge. As regards list 'C,' also containing Epsom accounts, another gentleman was asked 'to call on behalf of Penge' (i.e., the fourth defendants) as from the same date." I mention those facts because, while that defendant was in law entitled to take that course, it does demonstrate the risks which a purchaser of the business sold would take and would thus have a bearing on what is the proper measure of damages if one had in this instance to make a separate assessment of the value of the business sold, as Mr. Smout submitted. In practice, however, any value it had is taken into account in the balance worked out by Winn L.J.

Now, turning from the general picture to figures, for my part I do not wish to add anything to what has been said on detail by Winn L.J. I would only add that making my calculations, at times by a slightly different route, from that taken in the course of his judgment, I came to a figure within a very small margin indeed of £5,500, before I had heard any of the questions put to or answers given by Mr. Doyle to certain matters in this court. That figure of £5,500 seems the right figure, purely on the basis of those facts which were, we have been told, in evidence before the trial judge: it has been reached on a broad basis, and it is one with which I find myself in full agreement.

Appeal allowed.

Judgment for £5,500 instead of £1,500, with all plaintiff's costs.

Later application by plaintiff for leave to appeal on the amount of damages refused.

The claimants bought shares in the defendant, a publicly listed company, between 1997 and 2002. In August 1999 the defendant sold its interest in a mobile telephone company to a third party under an agreement which contained a clause (the ratings clause) to the effect that if the defendant’s debt rating fell below a specified level it was obliged to provide the purchaser with a bank guarantee for £1.5bn or pay £1.5bn into escrow. The ratings clause was not disclosed to the market when details of the sale were announced in 1999. From about March 2000 to December 2002 the share price of the defendant fell until on 6 December 2002 its debt rating fell below the level specified in the ratings clause. On that date it issued a press release revealing the ratings clause and its obligation to provide a bank guarantee for £1.5bn or to pay that amount into escrow. That news caused the shares to fall even further. The claimants sold their shares in November and December 2002 incurring heavy losses. On 10 November 2008 they filed claims against the defendant for damages for breach of statutory duty, market abuse, negligent misrepresentation under the Misrepresentation Act 1967, and negligence. The breach of statutory duty relied on was breach of the stock market listing rules made under s 73A of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000. Those rules required a listed company to give public notice of any major new developments in its sphere of activity, and in particular any guarantee or security, which was not public knowledge and which might affect its assets and liabilities or financial position, and to take all reasonable care to ensure that any statement, forecast or other information was not deceptive or omitted relevant information. The claimants contended (i) that the breaches of the listing rules gave them a right of action under s 90 of the 2000 Act, which made a person responsible for listing particulars liable to pay compensation to any person who suffered loss as a result of any untrue or misleading statement in listing particulars, (ii) the defendant was guilty of ‘market abuse’ contrary to s 118 of the 2000 Act by deliberately withholding information which might damage its share price, and (iii) the defendant had negligently misrepresented the position regarding the ratings clause and negligently failed to publish full and accurate information about the clause when details of the sale of its mobile telephone interests were first announced and later when statutory accounts and a company restructuring were announced. The defendant applied for summary judgment or an order that the claims be struck out, on the grounds that they had no real prospect of success and were time-barred.

Held – (1) The 2000 Act specified different modes of enforcement for breaches of different rules made by the Financial Services Authority under the Act, namely penalties, ‘restitution orders’ or a right of action, which indicated clearly that Parliament had expressly considered which duties or obligations imposed by the 2000 Act would give rise to a cause of action at the suit of a private person. It followed that the absence of any express provision that breach of a rule gave rise to a cause of action at the suit of a private person indicated that it was not intended that there should be a private right of action for such breach (see [14]–[16], [21], below).

(2) Applying that principle, the claimants had no cause of action for breach of statutory duty or market abuse, because—

(a) although s 150 of the 2000 Act provided that contravention by an ‘authorised person’ of a rule made by the Financial Services Authority was actionable at the suit of a private person, the listing rules were specifically excluded from s 150 and it could not be inferred from that exclusion that a private cause of action could be brought against persons, such as the defendant, who did not fall into the category of authorised persons; moreover, the claim for breach of statutory duty based on failure to abide by the listing rules also failed because the documents issued and announcements made by the defendant after listing which were alleged to

- a* have breached the listing rules were not ‘listing particulars’ within s 90 of the 2000 Act, since ‘listing particulars’ were confined to the particulars, including supplementary listing particulars, issued prior to listing and commencement of dealings on the stock exchange (see [18], [20], [49], below); Possfund Custodian Trustee Ltd v Diamond [1996] 2 BCLC 665 considered.
- b* (b) the provision in ss 123 and 383 for the imposition of penalties or restitution orders for market abuse and the absence of an express cause of action at the suit of a private person indicated that Parliament intended that penalties or restitution orders were the means of preventing market abuse (see [23]–[24], [49], below).
- c* (3) The claimants had no cause of action for negligent misrepresentation pursuant to the 1967 Act because, assuming they fulfilled the requirement for a cause of action under s 2(1) of the 1967 Act of having entered into a contract with the defendant when they were registered as members of the company, any loss arose from the contract to purchase the shares and not as a result of entering into any such contract with the defendant (see [25], [49], below).
- d* (4) It could not be said with certainty that the claimants had no real prospect of establishing a cause of action in negligence based on a duty of care owed by the defendant to publish full and accurate information about the ratings clause. However, if the claims were based on negligent inflation of the share price caused by non-disclosure of the ratings clause at the time the claimants purchased their shares, their loss occurred and the cause of action was complete at the time of purchase, because that was when the damage was caused, in the form of paying more than the shares were worth, and since the shares had been purchased more than six years before the issue of the claims on 10 November 2008 the claims would be time-barred. Moreover, the claimants could not rely on s 32 of the Limitation Act 1980 to have the limitation period extended because there was no allegation of deliberate concealment of the ratings clause. On the other hand, if the basis of the claims was that the damage was caused on 6 December 2002 when the ratings clause was disclosed, with adverse consequences for the share price, those claimants who sold before that date had no real prospect of being able to establish that the defendant’s negligence had caused them to suffer loss and only the claimant who sold his shares after that date had a possible cause of action in negligence, and then only in respect of the fall in the share price on and after 6 December 2002 caused by the announcement of the ratings clause. Accordingly, that was the only claim that would be allowed to proceed (see [32]–[34], [41], [46], [48]–[51], below). ### Application

The defendant, Cable and Wireless plc, applied for summary judgment or an order striking out the causes of actions relied on by the claimants, Derek William Hall, William Donald Parry and Elaine Parry, and Peter Martin, in the claims brought by them on 10 November 2008 seeking damages from the defendant for breach of statutory duty, market abuse, misrepresentation and negligence. The facts are set out in the judgment. c 21 July 2009. The following judgment was delivered.

TEARE J.

[1] This is an application by the defendant in these three actions for summary judgment or, alternatively, an order striking out one or more of the causes of actions relied upon on the grounds that there is no real prospect that the actions will succeed. It is accepted that if there is more than a fanciful prospect of success then the application should be refused. f

[2] The claimants were shareholders in the defendant company. They allege that the defendant wrongfully failed to disclose information to the market and that as a result they suffered loss. g

[3] The background to the claim is that in August 1999 the defendant sold its interest in the mobile telephone company One2One to Deutsche Telekom. The defendant gave the buyer an indemnity in respect of One2One's tax liabilities. The defendant also agreed that if its debt rating fell below a particular level it would either provide Deutsche Telekom with a bank guarantee in the sum of £1.5bn or pay £1.5bn into escrow. This obligation has been described as the ratings clause. h

[4] From about March 2000 to December 2002 the market price of the shares in the defendant fell steadily. On 6 December 2002 the defendant's debt rating fell below the relevant level and the defendant issued a press release to the effect that it was obliged to procure a bank guarantee for £1.5bn or pay that sum into escrow. The market price of the shares fell further. i

[5] Each of the claimants issued proceedings on 10 November 2008, shortly before the expiry of six years from the press release of 6 December

Hall v Cable and Wireless (Teare J)

a 2002. The delay in commencing proceedings, long after the expiry of six years from the dates on which the shares were purchased, has created problems for the claimants with regard to proof of loss and limitation of actions.

b [6] The particulars of claim in each action are in identical form save that the number of shares which were purchased and sold differ as do the dates of the transactions. The losses claimed therefore also differ. The pleaded share transactions and resulting losses are as follows:

(I) MR HALL

c Purchases: 9 June 2001, 64,000 shares @ 407p
 14 August 2002 38,000 @ 146.75p
 14 August 2002 20,000 @ 145.45p
 Sales: 14 November 2002 122,000 shares @ 73p
 Loss: £256,546

d

(II) MR AND MRS PARRY

Purchases: Between August 1999 and 2002 31,784 @ average price of 331p Sales: 18 November 2002 31,784 @ 76p
e Loss: £81,050

(III) MR MARTIN

Purchases: Between 1997 and 2001 21,234 as follows
f 7,739 @ 738.99p
 5,422 @ 553.3p
 5,241 @ 884p
 2,832 @ 383.25p
 Sales: 12 December 2002 21,234 @ 46p
 Loss: £134,591.14

g [7] In each case the losses have been calculated by reference to the difference between purchase and sale price.

[8] The causes of action relied upon against the defendant are described as breach of statutory duty, market abuse, misrepresentation and negligence.

h [9] The facts on which these causes of action are based have been pleaded as follows:

i '3. As a publicly listed company the defendant had obligations, set out more fully below, to disclose any information which was not public knowledge and may affect the market price of the defendant's shares. The escrow requirement was not disclosed when details of the agreement were first announced in August 1999 and was not subsequently announced until 6 December 2002. In 1999 Moody's rating of the defendant was A3. Between that date and 6 December 2002 the defendant's credit rating deteriorated, in August 2002 it was A3, on 6 December 2002 it was reduced from Baa2 to Ba1, known as a "junk" rating ...

[2010] 1 BCLC 95

5. Before 6 December 2002 the defendant had issued public statements and statutory accounts (including but not limited to the accounts for the years ending 2001 and 2002) stating that it held net cash of approx £2.65 billion and omitting any reference to the escrow requirement (hereinafter the published information). On 5 August 2002 in response to a reduction in the credit rating of Moody's the defendant confirmed that there was no new material information since the defendant's annual accounts were issued on 15 May 2002 and that the defendant had one of the strongest balance sheets in the industry. On 13 November 2002 the defendant announced a company restructuring and expected substantial losses without revealing the escrow requirement. On a date or dates unknown to the claimants before 6 December 2002 the defendant held unsuccessful meetings with Moody's in order to persuade them not to downgrade its credit rating. The effect of the announcement of the escrow requirement on 6 December was that the market concluded that there had been a material non-disclosure and the share price fell sharply.'

[10] The causes of action themselves have been pleaded as follows:

'7. By reason of the above the defendant was in breach of the Listing Rules made under s 73A of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA) known as the "Part 6 rules" as provide as follows:

(a) Listing Rule 9.1. "A company must notify the Company Announcement Office without delay of any major new developments in its sphere of activity which is not public knowledge and which may: (i) by virtue of the effect of those developments on its assets and liabilities or financial position or on the general course of its business, lead to a substantial movement in the price of its listed securities; or (ii) in the case of a company with debt securities listed, by virtue of the effect of those developments on its assets and liabilities of financial position or on the general course of its business, lead to substantial movement in the price of its listed securities, or significantly affect its ability to meet its commitments."

(b) Listing Rule 9.3A. "A company must take all reasonable care to ensure that any statement or forecast or any other information it notifies to the Company Announcements Office or makes available through the UK Listing Authority is not deceptive and does not omit anything likely to affect the import of such statement, forecast or other information."

(c) Listing Rule 9.10. "A company must notify the Company Announcements Office without delay (unless otherwise indicated) of the following information relating to its capital ... New issues of debt securities (b) where a company has listed debt securities, any new issues of debt securities, and in particular any guarantee or security in respect thereof:"

(d) By Listing Rule 10, consent for the escrow requirement should have been obtained from shareholders in advance ...

9. Further, the defendant was in breach of s 118 of FSMA in that it committed market abuse as therein defined in that it deliberately withheld information which might damage its share price since: (a) knowledge of the escrow requirement was not generally available, a would have been thought by a regular user of the market to be relevant to the market price of the share, and would be thought by the same regular user to be a failure by the person withholding it to observe the standard of behaviour expected of a person in his position in relation to the market, and (b) by so doing the defendant was disseminating information likely to mislead.

b 10. Further, the defendant made misrepresentations in the company accounts for the years ending 2001 and 2002 (the omission of any reference to the escrow requirement and the assertion of a net cash balance of approximately £2.65 billion) and in other formal statements made to the market between those dates upon which the claimants were entitled and did rely in acquiring the said shares and in holding the shares whilst the share price declined throughout 2001 and 2002. As a result of the said misrepresentation the claimants suffered damages as set out hereafter.

c 11. Further the defendant owed the claimants a duty of care to publish information about the escrow requirement because of the defendant knew or ought to have known that otherwise misleading statements were being put into general circulation and were likely to be relied upon by person considering acquiring the defendant's shares and once, acquired, in deciding whether to hold them or sell them. The claimants suffered damage as a result of the defendant's failure to comply with such duty of care as set out hereinafter.'

d [11] Counsel for the defendant submitted that the claimants had no real prospect of succeeding on causation, that the causes of action were time barred and that in any event there was no real prospect that the causes of action themselves would be established. I prefer to deal with these submissions in the reverse, and more conventional, order, commencing with the alleged causes of action.

BREACH OF STATUTORY DUTY

e [12] The breach relied on is of the listing rules made under s 73A of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (the 2000 Act). Counsel for the defendant submitted that on the true construction of the 2000 Act Parliament did not intend that breach of such rules would give rise to a civil cause of action for loss caused by such breach of duty.

f [13] It is accepted that the listing rules relied upon (save for rule 9.3A) were in force at the material time. However, they had been made under s 74, not s 73A which did not come into force until 1 July 2005.

g [14] The 2000 Act provides that breach of certain rules will give rise to a penalty, that breach of others will enable 'restitution orders' to be made and that others will give rise to a right of action.

h [15] Thus, s 91 gives the Financial Services Authority power to impose a penalty where there has been a contravention of the listing rules. Section 382 gives the court power, on the application of the FSA or the Secretary of State, where a person has contravened 'a relevant requirement' (which would include the listing rules) to make a restitution order where one or more persons have suffered loss as a result of that contravention. Section 384 gives similar powers to the FSA. Section 71 specifically provides that a contravention of ss 56(6) or 59(1) or (2) is actionable at the suit of a private person. Section 150 provides that contravention of a rule by an 'authorised person' is actionable at the suit of a private person but 'Part 6 rules', which it is accepted are the listing rules, are excluded from the definition of rule for the purposes of s 150. a

[16] These provisions indicate clearly that Parliament expressly considered which of the duties or obligations imposed by the 2000 Act would give rise to a cause of action at the suit of a private person. Parliament did not provide expressly that a breach of the listing rules would give rise to a cause of action at the suit of a private person. Other remedies and penalties were provided by ss 382, 384 and 91. That is a clear indication that Parliament did not intend that a breach of the listing rules would give rise to a cause of action at the suit of a private person. To hold that Parliament did so intend would interfere with the scheme and modes of enforcement provided by the 2000 Act. b

[17] It was submitted on behalf of the claimants that:

(i) it is to be inferred from the fact that s 150 excluded listing rules from the cause of action created by s 150 against authorised persons that breach of such rules was intended to give rise to a cause of action for breach of the listing rules; c

(ii) s 90 provides that a person responsible for listing particulars is liable to pay compensation to any person who has suffered loss as a result of any untrue or misleading statement in the particulars. Such liability applies to all breaches of the listing rules; d

(iii) in any event it would be absurd if a breach of the listing rules were not actionable at the suit of a private person. e

[18] I shall deal with each submission in turn. Section 150 provides a cause of action against an authorised person at the suit of a private person where a rule is contravened but expressly excludes breach of the listing rules. I do not understand why it is to be inferred from this section that a breach of the listing rules by persons other than authorised persons (such as the defendant) will give rise to a cause of action. Section 150 does not provide for such a cause of action and the scheme of the Act, variously providing for penalties, restitution orders and causes of action, prevents the court from inferring that where a cause of action is not expressly created such a cause of action is to be implied. f

[19] Section 90 is concerned with untrue or misleading statements in 'listing particulars'. Section 90 is within Pt VI of the Act which is concerned with 'official listing'. 'Listing rules' may be made for the purposes of this part of the Act: s 74(4). 'Listing particulars' are referred to in ss 79–83. It was submitted on behalf of the defendant that 'listing particulars' are particulars prepared to enable securities to be listed on the official list. It was submitted that 'listing particulars' did not include statements made by a company after the securities had been listed. This submission appears to be supported by a consideration of the terms of ss 79, 80 and 81. g

[20] Counsel for the claimants relied upon s 79(2) which defined 'listing particulars' as meaning 'a document in such form and containing such information as may be specified in listing rules'. Chapter 5 of the listing rules is concerned with listing particulars. I was not referred to any part of Ch 5 which specified the form and content of listing particulars in such a way as to include post-listing announcements. Instead, I was referred to Possfund Custodian Trustee Ltd v Diamond [1996] 2 BCLC 665. That case h

- a* concerned the question whether those who issue a prospectus in connection with the flotation of shares on the unlisted securities market owed a duty of care not only to subscribers at the time of the placing of the shares but also to ‘after-market’ purchasers. In the course of his judgment Lightman J referred to s 150 of the Financial Services Act 1986 and noted that protection was afforded by it to all purchasers of listed securities (whether
- b* placees or after-market purchasers) ‘who had relied on the continuing and updated representations in the listing particulars and the updates’. I assume that the cause of action created by s 90 of the 2000 Act is likewise for the benefit of all purchasers of listed securities. However, the relevant question is whether the documents issued by the defendant after listing but allegedly in breach of the listing rules are ‘listing particulars’ within s 90. Although
- c* ‘listing rules’ create obligations on the company in respect of announcements made long after listing, ‘listing particulars’ appear to me to be the particulars issued prior to listing. They expressly include supplementary listing particulars (see s 90(10)) which are issued after preparation of the listing particulars and before the commencement of
- d* dealings in the securities following their admission to the official list (see s 81(1)). Since the announcements alleged in this case to have been made in breach of the listing rules were not listing particulars in the sense of particulars issued prior to listing, including supplementary particulars, s 90 cannot give the claimants a cause of action in respect of them. In any event, a cause of action pursuant to s 90 of the 2000 Act is not one of the pleaded
- e* causes of action and no application was made to amend the pleadings to include such a cause of action.

[21] I must also reject the third submission, that it would be absurd if a breach of the listing rules were not actionable at the suit of a private person. Remedies for breaches of the listing rules are provided by ss 382 and 384, via the FSA. In those circumstances it is not absurd that a breach of the

f listing rules is not actionable at the suit of a private person.

[22] For these reasons I have concluded that the claimants do not have a cause of action for the alleged breaches of statutory duty.

g MARKET ABUSE

[23] Market abuse is defined by s 118 of the 2000 Act. Section 123 of the 2000 Act provides that the FSA may impose a penalty on a person who has engaged in market abuse. Section 383 provides that the court may, on the application of the FSA, make a restitution order where one or more persons have suffered loss as a result of market abuse. As with the breach of

h statutory duty the question is whether Parliament intended that those who have suffered loss as a result of market abuse should have a cause of action. Counsel on behalf of the claimants submitted that the object of the legislation can only be achieved if civil liability attaches to market abuse. I must disagree. The sections of the Act to which I have referred indicate that the intent of Parliament was that the object of the Act would be achieved by

i the imposition of penalties or restitution orders pursuant to ss 123 and 383. In those circumstances the absence of an express cause of action at the suit of a private person is a clear indication that none was intended.

[24] I have therefore concluded that the claimants have no cause of action for the alleged market abuse.

MISREPRESENTATION

[25] The question raised by counsel for the defendant is whether there can be a cause of action for damages for misrepresentation pursuant to the Misrepresentation Act 1967 in circumstances where the claimants entered into a contract to purchase shares but not with the defendant as is required by s 2(1) of the 1967 Act. The only suggested answer to this point was that a contract also arises between the defendant and the claimants when the latter are registered as members of the defendant. It was suggested that the transfer of shares was a 'tripartite arrangement'. Whether or not the claimants enter into a contract with the defendant when they are registered as members, s 2(1) of the Act requires the person claiming damages to have suffered loss as a result of entering into the contract with the representor. If the claimants have suffered loss it is as a result of entering into the contract of purchase, not as a result of entering into the contract between the claimants and the defendant which (it is assumed) arises when the claimants are registered as members of the defendant. I therefore do not consider that a claim for damages under the Misrepresentation Act 1967 has a real prospect of success.

NEGLIGENCE

[26] The allegation in negligence, as I understand it, is that the defendant owed the claimants a duty of care to publish full and accurate information about the ratings clause. The defendant failed to do so in August 1999 (when details of the sale of One2One were first announced), in May 2001 and May 2002 (when statutory accounts were announced), on 5 August 2002 (in response to a reduction in the credit rating of Moody's) and on 13 November 2002 (when a company restructuring was announced).

e

[27] In so far as reliance is placed on the publication of statutory accounts it was submitted on behalf of the defendant that such a claim was doomed to failure because of the decision in Caparo Industries plc v Dickman [1990] BCLC 273, [1990] 2 AC 605. Particular reliance was placed on a passage in the speech of Lord Jauncey ([1990] BCLC 273 at 321–322, [1990] 2 AC 605 at 661–662). However, the basis of the claim as pleaded (and as explained in oral argument to me) relies also upon an allegation that the publication of accurate information was required because of other misleading statements made by the defendant. This may allow the principle in Caparo v Dickman to be circumvented. For example a duty of care might be said to arise, when issuing the accounts, by reason of the failure to disclose the rating clause in 1999. Whether or not it does will depend upon the facts as proved. I do not consider therefore that it can be said at this stage with confidence that the claim in negligence based upon the published accounts has no real prospect of success.

f

g

h

[28] With regard to the balance of the negligence claim it is said that the claim requires some explanation, that no evidence is offered to explain why the defendant was negligent and that it is not clear that all of the claimants reasonably relied upon the misleading statements. These are questions of evidence which cannot be investigated at this stage of the trial process. Leaving aside the questions of limitation and causation of loss I do not consider that there grounds for holding at this stage that there is no real prospect of establishing a cause of action in negligence.

i

[29] It follows that the claimants have no real prospect of succeeding on a any of the pleaded causes of action save as to negligence.

LIMITATION

b [30] The cause of action in negligence is only complete when damage has been caused. The simplest manner in which it can be said that the claimants suffered damage is that the shares were purchased in reliance upon negligent misstatements by the defendant and that, because information about the ratings clause was withheld, the market price was higher than it would have been had the market known of the ratings clause. It was therefore submitted on behalf of the defendant that the claimants must have suffered loss when they purchased the shares. But the latest date on which shares were purchased was August 2002 which was more than six years before these proceedings were commenced on 10 November 2008. It was therefore said that claims based upon the purchase of the shares must be time-barred (subject to the effect of s 32 of the Limitation Act 1980).

c [31] It is submitted on behalf of the claimants that the loss was sustained when the shares were sold, which was after 10 November 2002, in which case the claims are not time-barred.

[32] In my judgment, upon the assumption that the claimants purchased shares at a price which was inflated by reason of the alleged non-disclosure of the ratings clause, then they must have suffered an immediate loss at the time of purchase because they paid out more than the shares are worth.

e [33] I was referred to Nykredit Mortgage Bank plc v Edward Erdman Group Ltd (No 2) [1998] 1 All ER 305 at 310, [1997] 1 WLR 1627 at 1632 where Lord Nicholls said, in the context of a lender who relies on a security which has been over-valued by reason of negligent advice:

f ‘Realisation of the security does not create the lender’s loss, nor does it convert a potential loss into an actual loss. Rather, it crystallises the amount of a present loss, which hitherto had been open to be aggravated or diminished by movements in the property market.’

[34] I consider that that analysis also applies to a purchaser of an asset who pays a price which has been inflated by negligent misstatements.

g [35] However, in order to avoid the conclusion that the damage was sustained more than six years before the proceedings were commenced the claimants advanced a further argument (in counsel’s skeleton argument):

h ‘[I]t is possible that earlier disclosure (say in 1999) might not have affected the share price but failure to disclose until it became a very significant (and immediate) liability caused the damage (particularly amongst other bad news) because it confirmed to the market that there had been material non-disclosure before.’

i [36] Thus the case which may be run on the facts is that earlier non-disclosure did not affect the share price but later non-disclosure did. It may be possible to show that no loss was caused on purchase but that loss was caused on 6 December 2002 when, it is said, the market reacted adversely to the discovery that there had been a material non-disclosure. Whilst this has not been pleaded in terms it is difficult to say that the present pleading is not wide enough to encompass such a factual case. No expert evidence has yet been produced to support it but I am not able to say that it is doomed to fail. It would appear to derive support from the witness statement of Mr Cotton of the defendant's solicitors that—

'prior to November 2002 the ratings clause was unimportant. The defendant was four or five notches above the ratings clause trigger throughout the period prior to 14 November 2002, and any trigger of the ratings clause was therefore a remote prospect.'

[37] Thus the cause of action in negligence may not have been completed until 6 December 2002 when damage was caused by the share price being affected by the ratings clause only at that time.

[38] If that is so then the claimants have no need of s 32 of the Limitation Act 1980. But I should nevertheless deal with the suggested argument. Section 32 provides that where any fact relevant to the claimant's right of action has been deliberately concealed from him by the defendant the period of limitation shall not begin to run until the claimant has discovered the concealment. The claimants wish to say that the existence of the ratings clause was not discovered until 6 December 2002 and therefore that the 6 year limitation period did not expire until 6 December 2008, before which proceedings had been commenced on 10 November 2008. This raises the question whether the claimants have a real prospect of establishing that the defendant was guilty of 'deliberate concealment' within the meaning of s 32.

[39] No particulars of the allegation of deliberate concealment have been pleaded but counsel has stated that the claimants will not allege that the defendant was aware of a duty to disclose the existence of the ratings clause and deliberately chose not to disclose it. What will be said is that the defendant was aware in general terms that it had a duty to disclose price sensitive matters and that the decision not to disclose the ratings clause was deliberate.

[40] The meaning of deliberate concealment in s 32 has been explained by Lord Millett in Cave v Robinson Jarvis & Rolfe (a firm) [2002] UKHL 18, [2002] 2 All ER 641 at paras 23–25, [2003] 1 AC 384:

'23. As I have explained, in enacting the 1980 Act Parliament substituted "deliberate concealment" for "concealed fraud". This is a different and more appropriate concept. It cannot be assumed that the law remained the same. But reference to the old law explains why Parliament enacted s 32(2) and did not rely on s 32(1)(b) alone to cover the whole ground. With all reference to fraud or conscious impropriety omitted, there was an obvious risk that "deliberate concealment" might be construed in its natural sense as meaning "active concealment" and not as embracing mere non-disclosure. Section 32(2) was therefore enacted to cover cases where active concealment should not be required. But such cases were limited in two respects: first, the defendant must have been guilty of a deliberate commission of a breach of duty; and secondly, the circumstances must make it unlikely that the breach of duty will be discovered for some time.'

24. Given that s 32(2) is (or at least may be) required to cover cases of non-disclosure rather than active concealment, the reason for limiting it to the deliberate commission of a breach of duty becomes clear. It is a only where the defendant is aware of his own deliberate wrongdoing that it is appropriate to penalise him for failing to disclose it.

b 25. In my opinion, s 32 deprives a defendant of a limitation defence in two situations: (i) where he takes active steps to conceal his own breach of duty after he has become aware of it; and (ii) where he is guilty of deliberate wrongdoing and conceals or fails to disclose it in circumstances where it is unlikely to be discovered for some time. But it does not deprive a defendant of a limitation defence where he is charged with negligence if, being unaware of his error or that he has failed to take proper care, there has been nothing for him to disclose.'

c [41] Since it is not alleged, and I am told will not be alleged, that the defendant was aware its own deliberate wrongdoing it follows that there is no real prospect of establishing that the limitation period can be extended by reason of deliberate concealment pursuant to s 32 of the Limitation Act 1980. However, for the reason given earlier in this judgment I am unable to conclude that the claims are clearly time-barred.

d [42] I have not considered the effect of limitation on the causes of action for breach of statutory duty, market abuse or misrepresentation because I do not consider that such causes of actions have a real prospect of success. If, contrary to my opinion, they do, the limitation analysis is the same since they are, or are to be regarded as, causes of action in tort.

e CAUSATION

f [43] Counsel for the defendant has observed that Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry sold their shares before 6 December 2002, that is, before the defendant disclosed the ratings clause to the market. It must follow that when the shares were sold Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry were able to achieve a sale price unaffected by market knowledge of the ratings clause. It was therefore submitted that Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry are unable to establish that they had suffered any loss caused by the failure of the defendant to disclose the ratings clause to the market until 6 December 2002. The shares had been purchased at a price which was not affected by market knowledge of the ratings clause and had been sold at a price which was not affected by market knowledge of the ratings clause. The market price had been steadily falling from 2000–2002 but the claimants are not able to say that that fall was caused by the alleged negligence of the defendant; see South Australia Asset Management Corp v York Montague Ltd [1996] 3 All ER 365 at 371, [1997] AC 191 at 213.

g [44] What is said by counsel on behalf of the claimants is that—

h 'expert evidence will be needed to establish the effect of the defendant's announcements. Such evidence is expected to show that the market was already affected by suspicion of non-disclosure prior to 6 December 2002 although it also reacted adversely immediately after that announcement ... it was already happening in the run up to the announcement ...'

i [45] This argument is also developed in the witness statement of Mr Lally of the claimants' solicitors. Whilst there is evidence to support the assertion that the share price was falling in November 'because there was great suspicion in the market that the defendant had more bad news to disclose' a there is no evidence that the ratings clause was suspected by the market.

There is a suggestion in Mr Lally's witness statement that directors knew and sold their shares and that ratings agencies were informed about it. But the first part of that suggestion is based upon a misunderstanding. None of the trades was a share sale by an individual director and the majority were b sales by the trustees of the defendant's employee share ownership trust over which the directors have no operational control. The second part is based upon the evidence of Mr Cotton that the ratings clause was discussed with Standard & Poor's on 4 December 2002. However, it is no more than speculation to suggest that participants in the market either knew of or suspected the existence of the ratings clause before 6 December 2002. In c any event, the particulars of claim do not allege that the defendant was responsible for generating suspicion in the market as to the existence of the ratings clause.

[46] I must therefore conclude that Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry have no real prospect of being able to establish that the alleged negligence of the defendant caused them to suffer loss. When the ratings clause was disclosed d to the market on 6 December 2002 the share price fell but Mr Hall and Mrs and Mrs Parry had avoided that fall by selling their shares on 14 and 18 November 2002.

[47] Mr Martin sold his shares on 12 December 2002 so he does not face this particular problem. Counsel for the defendant submitted that Mr Martin faces another problem. Had the defendant performed its alleged e duty by disclosing the existence of the ratings clause, say on 13 November 2002, thereby causing Mr Martin to decide not to hold the shares but to sell them Mr Martin would have sustained the very same loss he in fact incurred when he sold after 6 December 2002. That is because the market price would have fallen following an earlier disclosure of the ratings clause. f
Thus the defendant says that whether a claimant sold before 6 December 2002 (like Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry) or after (like Mr Martin) the alleged negligence caused no loss.

[48] However, Mr Martin may argue that he suffered loss in December 2002 because he had held on to his shares throughout 2000 and 2001 as a result of the failure by the defendant to disclose the ratings clause in 2000 g and 2001. That failure did not affect the share price (because the possibility that the ratings clause would be invoked was remote) but when the ratings clause was disclosed in December 2002 it then caused the market price to fall. There will be (at the very least) a tension in the evidence between saying, on the one hand, that the ratings clause was sufficiently material in 2000 and 2001 that it had to be disclosed and saying, on the other hand, h that such early disclosure would not have affected the market price. But these evidential difficulties cannot be resolved on an application of this nature. However, if Mr Martin can establish any loss on this basis it will be far less than that pleaded because the market price had already fallen greatly before December 2002, a fall which he cannot attribute to the alleged failings by the defendant. i

a CONCLUSIONS

[49] The claims of Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry have no real prospect of success for these reasons:

(i) They have no cause of action for breach of statutory duty, market abuse or negligent misrepresentation pursuant to the Misrepresentation Act 1967.

b (ii) Whilst they have a cause of action in negligence which may not be time-barred there is no real prospect that they will establish that the alleged negligence caused them any loss because they sold their shares on 14 and 18 November 2002 and so did not suffer the losses caused by the disclosure of the ratings clause on 6 December 2002.

c [50] The claim of Mr Martin has no real prospect of success in so far as it relies on breach of statutory duty, market abuse and negligent misrepresentation. Mr Martin has a cause of action in negligence which may not be time barred and may have caused him loss. That loss will however be restricted to the fall in the market value of the shares on and after 6 December 2002 caused by the announcement of the ratings clause.

d [51] It follows that the defendant is entitled to summary judgment against Mr Hall and Mr and Mrs Parry. As against Mr Martin the defendant is not entitled to summary judgment but the claims based on breach of statutory duty, market abuse and negligent misrepresentation pursuant to the Misrepresentation Act 1967 should be struck out.

1. The applications before me concern a company registered in Guernsey, Midland Resources Holding Limited (to which I refer both as the “Company” and as “Midland Guernsey”), which is ultimately owned equally by two businessmen who have been referred to in the proceedings as the Russian businessman and the Canadian businessman. The Company was at one time the holding company of a large group of companies with interests in Eastern Europe and elsewhere. The two businessmen have largely unwound their mutual interests, although there remain a small number of assets, or contingent assets, of the Company which may or may not have very substantial value. The two businessmen are in total disagreement as to how to deal with one of those contingent assets.
2. The Company has two directors. One of them, Robert Edward Lee, is a resident of Canada and a trusted associate of the Canadian businessman. The sister of the Russian businessman, Inna Sergiyenko, is the only other director of the Company unless I determine that she was validly removed as a director and replaced by another associate of the Canadian businessman, Daniel Tilis, by a purported resolution of the board of the Company, executed by Mr Lee, dated 18th November 2016. (I refer to the three of them as “Mr Lee”, “Ms Sergiyenko” and “Mr Tilis”). Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko both claim to have acted at all times in the best interests of the Company but each faces allegations that they have been pursuing the interests of the businessman at whose behest he or she was appointed in priority to the interests of the Company. Each of Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko has lost all trust and confidence in the other and there is also clear evidence that each of the two businessmen has lost trust and confidence in the other businessman. Consequently, the board of directors of the Company is deadlocked (unless Mr Tilis’s appointment as a director is valid). Each side has brought applications with a view to seeking to resolve the deadlock so that the actions that remain to be taken in order to complete the realisation of the Company’s assets may be pursued.
3. The Applicant, Prodefin Trading Limited, owns 50% of the Company’s shares and is ultimately owned by family trusts connected to the Russian businessman. The other 50% of the Company’s share capital is held by the Second and Third Respondents, both of which are ultimately controlled by the Canadian businessman. The Company is the First Respondent.

The Applications

4. By an application dated 28th September 2016 (“the Application”), the Applicant applied for: an Order that the Company “be wound up pursuant to Sections 350 and/or 406(i) and 412” of the Companies (Guernsey) Law, 2008 as amended (“CGL”); an Order that Timothy Le Cornu of Krys Global (Guernsey) Limited and John Skelton of Krys Global (UK) Limited be appointed as the joint liquidators of the Company; some consequential Orders relating to the powers of the joint liquidators; and costs. The Application was amended on 2nd December 2016 (the “Amended Application”) by including an application for declarations both that the purported removal of Ms Sergiyenko as a director of the Company on 18th November 2016 was unlawful and also that the appointment of Mr Tilis is invalid and hence he is not a director of the Company.

5. In response, the Second and Third Respondents filed an Application (“the Alternative Relief Application”) dated 17th November 2016 seeking: an Order pursuant to Section 350(2)(b) of CGL that the Company be required to continue the arbitration proceedings referred to as the “Gorlane Proceedings”; an Order, pursuant to Section 350(2)(d) of CGL, that the Applicant’s shares in the Company be purchased by the Canadian businessman or a company nominated by him on terms set out at paragraph 39 of Mr Lee’s first affidavit; and costs.

The Witnesses

6. On behalf of the Applicant, evidence was given by Ms Sergiyenko and by Michael Timothy Fenn (“Mr Fenn”), a partner in Pinsent Masons, a London firm of solicitors instructed by Ms Sergiyenko. Ms Sergiyenko produced one affidavit dated 30th December 2016 and there were three affidavits by Mr Fenn, dated 28th September and 24th November 2016 and 9th January 2017. Mr Lee gave evidence on behalf of the Second and Third Respondents; he had sworn four affidavits dated 17th November and 12th December 2016 and 13th January and 18th January 2017. The affidavits stood as the evidence in chief of the three witnesses, each of whom was cross-examined. There was also in evidence a letter from the Russian businessman to the Canadian businessman dated 12th January 2017 and a letter from the Canadian businessman to the Russian businessman dated 18th January 2017.
7. Advocate Jonathan Barclay appeared for the Applicant and Advocate Mathew Newman appeared for the Second and Third Respondents. Skeleton arguments were produced by them on behalf of the Applicant and the Second and Third Respondents, both dated 16th January 2017. The skeleton arguments stood as the opening speeches of counsel. The First Respondent played no part in the proceedings.

The Facts

8. To a large extent the facts were agreed, or at least not disputed. The disputed evidence was more concerned with disagreements as to who was responsible for events that had occurred or for actions that should have, but had not, been taken; and the underlying motives and intentions of those concerned.
9. I will begin by setting out the key facts which are either agreed or not disputed.
  - (1) 20.02.1998 - the Company was incorporated in Guernsey.
  - (2) 12.06.2007 - Ms Sergiyenko was appointed as a director of the Company.
  - (3) 2009 - The two businessmen agreed to go their separate ways and to begin to liquidate and separate their interests.
  - (4) 19.05.2010 - the Company entered into a sale and purchase agreement (“SPA”) with five parties known collectively as the “Gorlane Purchasers” for a substantial steel business located in the Ukraine. The total consideration was $850,000,000 US dollars of which $50,000,000 (“the Holdback Amount”), was to be paid into an account known as the “Blocked Account” for a period of 18 months following “Completion” during what was effectively a warranty period, following which adjustments were to be made to the purchase price to take account of provisions detailed in the SPA relating to the “Net Debt Adjustment Amount”. Post Completion, the Company was to transfer to the Gorlane Purchasers a number of assets defined as the “Future Interests”. The present position is that the Blocked Account has not been opened, the Holdback Amount has not been paid, the Net Debt Adjustment Amount has not - been calculated and the Future Interests have not all been transferred. Where the responsibility falls for such failures is a matter of dispute between the parties and something to which I turn later in this judgment.

- (5) 23.05.2010 - “Completion” of the transaction took place.
  - (6) 19.08.2010 - The Gorlane Purchasers wrote regarding the failure to transfer the Future Interests.
  - (7) 05.10.2010 - The date of the first of three “Unwind Agreements” made between the Russian businessman and the Canadian businessman, agreeing how to unwind their shared business interests.
  - (8) 02.2011 - Further letter from Gorlane Purchasers re the failure to transfer the Future Interests.
  - (9) 29.03.2011 - Mr Lee was appointed as a director of the Company.
  - (10) 28.04.2011 - Allen and Overy (“A&O”), instructed by the Company, wrote to the Gorlane Purchasers.
  - (11) 12.05.2011 - The date of the second Unwind Agreement made by the Canadian Businessman and the Russian Businessman.
  - (12) 05.10.2011 - the Gorlane Purchasers wrote again regarding the failure to transfer the Future Interests.
  - (13) 23.11.2011 - being 18 months after Completion of the transaction was the date by which the Holdback Amount should have been paid to the Blocked Account by the Gorlane Purchasers.
  - (14) 28.11.2011 - A&O wrote demanding payment of the Holdback Amount. No response has been received from the Gorlane Purchasers
  - (15) 10.07.2012 - the Russian businessman and the Canadian businessman entered into the third Unwind Agreement.
  - (16) 17.07.2013 - A&O produced a memorandum of advice to the effect that pursuit of the Holdback Amount from the Gorlane Purchasers was relatively straightforward and there was no meritorious defence to the claim.
  - (17) 28.03.2014 - letter to the Gorlane Purchasers seeking payment.
  - (18) 24.04.2014 - three of the Gorlane Purchasers wrote to the Company regarding the failure to transfer the Future Interests.
  - (19) 17.06.2015 - a meeting took place with representatives of the Gorlane Purchasers at their offices, attended by Ms Sergiyenko and Alexander Zyuba (“Mr Zyuba”), a Russian lawyer, appointed by the Canadian businessman.
  - (20) 29.06.2015 - A list of the Gorlane Purchasers’ counter-claims was sent to the son of the Russian businessman, “Igor”, along with claims relating to the Net Debt Adjustment Amount and the failure to transfer the Future Interests.
  - (21) 04.12.2015 - the Canadian businessman commenced arbitration proceedings against the Russian businessman in the London Court of International Arbitration (“LCIA”) alleging that he had suffered a fraud perpetrated by the Russian businessman in the region of several million US dollars (“the Fraud Claim”).
  - (22) April/May 2016 - correspondence was exchanged between Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko in which Mr Lee was seeking agreement that the Company commence proceedings for payment of the Holdback Amount, to which Ms Sergiyenko objected for reasons that include the risk of a counter-claim by the Gorlane Purchasers and doubts as to the enforceability of any judgment, which I describe in more detail later in this judgment.

- (23) 13.05.2016 - proceedings were commenced in the LCIA against the Gorlane Purchasers (“the Gorlane Arbitration”, also the “Gorlane Proceedings”) issued by Messrs DWF LLP (“DWF”) purporting to act on behalf of the Company but instructed solely by Mr Lee. Their authority to do so is challenged by Ms Sergiyenko and the Applicant who also has concerns that DWF have a conflict of interest in that the same firm is acting for the Canadian businessman in the Fraud Claim. The conduct of the Gorlane Arbitration is discussed further by me later in this judgment.
- (24) 28.09.2016 - the Applicant issues the Application.
- (25) 17.11.2016 - the Second and Third Respondents issue the Alternative Relief Application.
- (26) 18.11.2016 - Mr Lee acting as a sole director of the Company purports to remove Ms Sergiyenko and replace her as a director with Mr Tilis.

Subsequent events are described by me later in this judgment.

The Blocked Account

10. The SPA was negotiated with the Gorlane Purchasers over a short period of time, a mere two days. Prior to then, negotiations that had been going on over a period of six months with another party for the purchase of the steel business had fallen through. Clause 3 of the SPA provided for the purchase price of $850,000,000 to be paid in three tranches. On 19th May 2010, or such other day as the parties might agree, $425,000,000 was to be paid to an escrow agent pending Completion. On Completion, a further $375,000,000 was to be paid to the Company’s account and the balance of $50,000,000 to the Blocked Account, this being the Holdback Amount. The first two tranches of the purchase price were duly paid but the final tranche has never been paid. Clause 5.2(b) specified that if the Blocked Account had not been opened by the Completion date, the Gorlane Purchasers were to retain the Holdback Amount until the Blocked Account had been opened and were to deposit it within two days following the opening of such account.
11. A proviso to clause 5.2 stated that the Company was not obliged to complete the sale of the “Shares” as defined in the SPA unless the entire completion payment was made, the Blocked Account was opened by the Completion date and the entire Holdback Amount was paid into the Blocked Account. Clause 6.5 specified that the Company was to procure that the Future Interests be transferred to the Gorlane Purchasers for nominal value, as soon as reasonably practical, but in any event no later than 10th June 2010, the longstop date. The Blocked Account was to be operated in accordance with the principles set out in schedule 10 of the SPA and in accordance with a Blocked Account Agreement which I understand has not been completed. Schedule 10 stated that payments would be made from the Blocked Account to settle any adjustments to the purchase price, including any relating to the Net Debt Adjustment Amount and pursuant to a completion statement which was to be prepared within ninety days of Completion.
12. Neither Ms Sergiyenko nor Mr Lee accepted any responsibility for the failure to open the Blocked Account. Mr Lee is by profession a chartered accountant who joined the Midland Group in 2002, not as an employee of the Company, but employed by a Canadian company that represented the Group’s interests in Canada. He has always been based in Toronto. He described his role in 2002 as being the preparation and collation of financial data from the Group’s activities around the world for presentation to auditors to enable the preparation of financial statements for showing to banks and others who required them. Ms Sergiyenko alleged, in cross-examination, that Group bank accounts were dealt with by the Toronto office and she claimed that it was Mr Lee's responsibility to open the Blocked Account. She said that, as far as she was concerned, he was the finance director in the Group's structure, he was responsible for opening the account, he was de facto dealing with it so she left him to it as she had no reason to mistrust him.

13. Mr Lee said that he had initially proposed two banks that he considered were suitable to open and operate the Blocked Account. However, neither of them was acceptable to the Gorlane Purchasers who requested that the account be opened with the bank that had provided the finance to them for the purchase. Further discussions were needed and as it was the son of the Russian businessman ("Igor") and Ms Sergiyenko who had conducted the negotiations for the purchase and continued to deal with the Gorlane Purchasers after Completion, Mr Lee said that he left it to Igor to agree with them the setting up of the Blocked Account. Mr Lee said that when he became a director of the Company in 2011, he was aware that the Blocked Account had not been opened.
14. Mr Lee acknowledged that the failure to open the account was never formally discussed at a board meeting but said it was discussed in e-mail correspondence exchanged with Ms Sergiyenko. He then explained how he and Ms Sergiyenko had conducted their management of the Company. They never held regular physical meetings of the directors. The best way for them to communicate was by e-mail, although there were occasional telephone conversations between the two of them. Email communication worked best because of their geographical separation, the time difference between Toronto and Kiev and language differences (Ms Sergiyenko has a command of English but relies on dictionaries to translate words that she does not immediately recognise and Mr Lee's command of Russian is much worse). The Company's agents in Guernsey arranged for the completion of statutory records and for filing requirements to be satisfied.
15. It was suggested to Ms Sergiyenko in cross-examination that the failure to open the Blocked Account was the reason for the present proceedings. It was also suggested to her that if the account had been opened, the Holdback Amount would have been paid into it. She refused to accept that would be the case as she said that the Gorlane Purchasers would have had to be motivated to make the payment. Regarding the responsibility for the proceedings, she said that difficulties with the Gorlane Purchasers were not the only issue. Indeed, she described a number of difficulties dating back to 2010. The steel business in the Ukraine had been the main source of funding for the Midland Group. After its sale and after other assets had been divided between the businessmen or liquidated pursuant to the Unwind Agreements, it was difficult for her to obtain the finance needed to run the office in Kiev. She was reliant upon the two businessmen providing the funds required and she experienced what she described as major disputes over every item of expenditure. She said that the relationship between the Russian businessman and the Canadian businessman deteriorated day by day because of the lack of a source of finance from the Group's operations.
16. Despite the reference to numerous emails passing between Ms Sergiyenko and Mr Lee, none of the contemporaneous correspondence was produced to the Court by either party even though it might have helped to clarify or explain the conflicting oral evidence.

Taking action against the Gorlane Purchasers

17. In 2011, A&O were instructed to write to the Gorlane Purchasers. Exhibited to the first affidavit of Mr Lee is a letter from A&O dated 28th November 2011, addressed to the five purchasers and a memorandum written by A&O dated the 17th July 2013, addressed to Igor, entitled "Possible Claims Resulting from Gorlane SPA". Mr Lee said that A&O were not instructed by him but by Igor. Ms Sergiyenko was asked whether she was involved in instructing the firm. She said she did not know and would have to check, although she acknowledged that she knew of A&O. She said they never asked her for any documents or information and she does not know who they obtained instructions or information from. A&O purported to be acting on behalf of the Company but even though Mr Lee had become a director of the Company on 29th March 2011, A&O refused to disclose their file to him when he asked for it. My interpretation of the evidence is that A&O were instructed on behalf of the Company by the Russian businessman and/or by his son acting on his behalf.

18. The letter from A&O dated 28th November 2011 noted that no reply had been received to an earlier letter of 28th April that year which has not been produced to the Court. Nor have I seen “the numerous letters you have received about the draft Completion statement or Net Debt Adjustment” to which it was also said that no replies had been received either by A&O or their client. The Completion statement was long overdue and the 18 month period from the date of Completion during which the Holdback Amount was to have been paid had expired. The letter claimed that the Holdback Amount was therefore now due direct to the Company. A&O concluded the letter by saying: “It appears, therefore, that you have no possible defence to a claim by [the Company] for the Holdback amount. [The Company] therefore requires you to pay this amount, and an amount equal to the interest which would have accrued had you paid funds into Blocked Account, immediately”.
19. The Gorlane Purchasers have not replied to the letter of 28th November 2011.
20. The memorandum from A&O to Igor dated 17th July 2013, stated that it was in response to a request from him for advice “on a number of points about a possible claim arising from the sale of Gorlane”. They advised that “subject to what follows, [the Company] appears to be entitled to receive the Holdback Amount”. A&O understood that the purchasers had refused to pay the Holdback Amount by arguing that they were entitled to set off against the payment a Net Debt Adjustment. However, the entitlement to receive a Net Debt Adjustment was dependent upon production of the Completion Statement within ninety days of the Completion date. As the Completion Statement had not been produced, A&O advised that “we do not think this is a strong argument”. The advice proceeded to explain that the dispute resolution mechanism is arbitration rather than court proceedings. A&O addressed the enforceability of any award against the Gorlane Purchasers, one of which is incorporated in the BVI and the others in Cyprus. They raised the practical consideration of considering whether those companies were shell companies that might not still hold any assets and advised that the Company should check whether they would be worth suing. The advice envisaged that the Gorlane Purchasers would bring counter-claims and anticipated the tribunal would order payment of the full amount of any award, even if there were unresolved outstanding counter-claims and stated “it is almost inconceivable that they would be able to persuade the tribunal dealing with your claim to off-set any potential award that the Purchasers might receive in a separate arbitration”. The final paragraph stated, “Arbitrations can take from around a year, to several years, from the date the request (for arbitration) is issued to the date of an award, depending on the complexity of the case. For the reasons mentioned above, this claim at present appears to be reasonably straightforward and we would therefore expect it would be a relatively quick claim to resolve.”
21. Ms Sergiyenko was asked in cross-examination to explain why she considered it was not in the best interests of the Company to pursue a claim against the Gorlane Purchasers in accordance with the advice received from A&O. She raised a number of difficulties including that the Company no longer retained the managers who could have assisted by providing any evidence and advice needed. Secondly, she envisaged that the costs of pursuing the claim would be jolly expensive and the Company no longer had the funds to enable it to do so. She was having difficulty at that time in raising sufficient funds from the ultimate shareholders to pay the staff employed in the Kiev office and said that a decision was taken not to issue proceedings. She added that it was not in the best interests of the Company and pure fantasy to look at the prospects of success identified by A&O unencumbered by the other issues such as potential counter-claims. In taking the decision not to issue proceedings she had taken account of the fact that the Future Interests had not been transferred, notwithstanding that the matter had not been raised by A&O and said she did not know whether A&O were aware of that issue. She maintained that she took the decision not to follow A&O's advice in the best interests of the Company uninfluenced by her brother and his personal interests. She has taken no other legal advice on the claim other than that given by A&O.

22. For his part, Mr Lee said he was aware that A&O had been instructed by the Russian businessman through Igor and that A&O had written to the Gorlane Purchasers to chase payment. He described himself as being only loosely involved. He had requested to be kept informed. He was comfortable leaving others to deal with the matter notwithstanding that he acknowledged that he was not kept fully informed. He considered it was a matter for the Russians (i.e. the Russian businessman, Ms Sergiyenko and Igor) to deal with as they were the ones principally involved with the Gorlane Purchasers, they conducted discussions in Russian and were familiar with dealing with them. However, with the passage of time, he became increasingly dismayed at the lack of progress and concluded that there was some ulterior motive for their lack of progress. He had been unable to obtain any information from A&O who had told him that they would need a board resolution, signed by Ms Sergiyenko, before releasing any information to him. He described A&O as being obstructive towards him. He referred to extensive correspondence between him and Ms Sergiyenko on the matter and he said the issues were repeatedly dealt with by him but not by her. Mr Lee exhibited to the Court correspondence passing between him and Ms Sergiyenko in respect of the period starting in April 2016. The Bailiff understood Mr Lee also to have referred to other extensive correspondence that was not exhibited to the Court.
23. There was little other evidence before the Court of the steps being taken by Ms Sergiyenko or anyone else on behalf of the Company to pursue the payment of the Holdback Amount during the period from Completion until about 2015. On 30th April 2015, Ms Sergiyenko wrote to Mr Lee advising him of a meeting with the Gorlane Purchasers "to negotiate final settlement". The meeting took place on 17th June 2015 at the office of representatives of the Gorlane Purchasers. The Company was represented by Ms Sergiyenko and Mr Zyuba, a lawyer. Mr Lee explained that he chose not to attend because he had been told by Ms Sergiyenko that no decision-makers would be present and that the meeting would be conducted in the Russian language. After discussion with the Canadian businessman, they determined that the most efficient way was to engage the Russian lawyer who was instructed to report to Mr Lee after the meeting. Ms Sergiyenko described her purpose in attending the meeting as being to try to understand the nature of the claims that the Gorlane Purchasers might pursue against the Company with a view to assisting with negotiations. At the meeting, the Gorlane Purchasers presented a list of their counter-claims and a calculation of the Net Debt Adjustment. The total value of the threatened counter-claims was $136,000,000 which greatly exceeded the Company's claim for payment of the Holdback Amount of $50,000,000 plus interest and consequently Ms Sergiyenko concluded that a settlement should be reached if at all possible. In her oral evidence, Ms Sergiyenko said that she has continued to have meetings with the Gorlane Purchasers, including as recently as the week before the hearing, with the view to trying to resolve outstanding issues. There is no clear evidence before the Court as to what these meetings and discussions have achieved.
24. Mr Lee became increasingly concerned about the non-payment of the Holdback Amount as the date of expiry of the limitation period for commencing any proceedings of 22nd May 2016 (six years after Completion) was approaching. On 18th April 2016, he e-mailed Ms Sergiyenko seeking her agreement that the Company should commence proceedings and Ms

Sergiyenko responded asking him not to do so as Igor was dealing with the matter. Mr Lee questioned Igor's authority and referred to a board minute of 19th May 2010, executed immediately prior to Completion of the transfer of the steel business under the terms of the SPA, under which he asserted that he had authority to deal with the matter. The resolution upon which he was relying reads:

"Any one Director (or his alternate) is authorised to do all other such acts and things as might in his sole opinion and absolute discretion be necessary or desirable for the purposes of the effecting (sic) the transactions contemplated by the SPA".

25. Ms Sergiyenko responded with reference to the risk of the counter-claims; the difficulties of enforcing any arbitral awards against the Gorlane Purchasers, each of which might be shell companies with little or no assets; requiring the Canadian businessman to fund the claim whilst indemnifying the Russian businessman; and suggesting that an extension of time be negotiated for filing the claim.
26. Without authorisation from Ms Sergiyenko, Mr Lee instructed DWF to act on behalf of the Company to seek recovery of the Holdback Amount, plus interest, claiming a total of approximately $86,000,000 US dollars. When asked why he had not gone back to A&O who previously had been instructed in the matter, Mr Lee said he did not ask them to quote in relation to the present matter because he considered them to be expensive based on his previous knowledge of their services. He had also been dissatisfied on previous occasions with the quality of advice given by them and he said that, in his experience, such large firms do not give the client "the right bang for your buck".
27. DWF were already acting for the Canadian businessman in relation to the fraud claim brought against the Russian businessman, a matter to which I turn later in this judgment.
28. He did not seek Ms Sergiyenko's agreement to instruct DWF because she was strongly resisting the commencement of proceedings against the Gorlane Purchasers and he knew that she and the Russian businessman would object to the actions he was taking. The arrangements for payment of DWF's fees are that the Canadian businessman is paying them; the payment would be recorded as an expense in the books of the Company, shown as being funded by a loan from the Canadian businessman. Ms Sergiyenko had proposed to Mr Lee that a standstill agreement be entered into in order to agree an extension of time for issuing any proceedings. Had the same been agreed, she said it would have given more time to properly consider whether to issue proceedings, taking into account all the issues. Mr Lee saw no merit in proposing any standstill agreement to the Gorlane Purchasers because, in his view, they were certain to object to it.

Relationship between the Businessmen

29. In the background of all these events and of the applications before the Court is the relationship between the Russian businessman and the Canadian businessman as well as the question of whether Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko were at all times acting in the best interests of the Company, which they both repeatedly claimed to be doing, or whether they were acting in furtherance of the interests of the businessman at whose behest each had been appointed.
30. It is apparent that relations between the two businessmen had deteriorated by 2010, hence the decision taken the previous year to go their separate ways and the reason for entering into the first Unwind Agreement between the two of them on 5th October 2010. Ms Sergiyenko gave evidence that after the sale of the steel business in the Ukraine, relations became more difficult because the Group had lost a significant revenue source. Expenses had to be funded by the two businessmen and expenditure items were queried, giving rise to difficulties for those managing the affairs of the Group.

31. By 4th December 2015, the relationship had deteriorated to the point where the Canadian businessman commenced the Fraud Claim in the LCIA. The details of that arbitration claim are confidential to the parties and, I was told, are not material to the Applications before this Court. It is not disputed that both businessmen have lost all trust and confidence in each other, just as Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko have each lost all trust and confidence in their fellow director.
32. In these proceedings, the Second and Third Respondents allege that the reason the Russian businessman and Ms Sergiyenko have not actively pursued the Holdback Amount is that the money has been diverted by the Russian businessman for his own purposes. The Second and Third Respondents have no direct proof, but invite me to draw that inference on the basis that it is the only plausible explanation for the conduct of Ms Sergiyenko and the Russian businessman. In addition, Mr Lee said on oath that he is firmly of the opinion that is what has happened. This allegation was strongly denied by Ms Sergiyenko.
33. The solicitors acting on behalf of the Canadian businessman in the Fraud Claim are DWF, the firm instructed by Mr Lee to represent the Company in the Gorlane Proceedings. The Applicant challenges the ability and propriety of DWF acting in both matters. Mr Lee said in cross-examination that DWF had taken advice from the Solicitors' Regulation Authority to the effect that there was no conflict. I do not see it as the function of the Royal Court of Guernsey to express an opinion as to whether an English solicitor is or is not acting with a conflict of interest. In any event, I am not in a position to do so as the answer will depend upon the precise instructions given to DWF in both sets of proceedings and those have not been disclosed to me. Within DWF, the same partner is supervising both sets of proceedings and some of the associates involved are concerned with both matters. Ms Sergiyenko said that DWF could not properly act without full instructions which would include statements and documents from her, yet they had not contacted her. Mr Lee's response was that as a director of the Company, she had an obligation to volunteer such information as she has to the liquidator in the event he is appointed, in order to maximise recovery on behalf of the Company.
34. Ms Sergiyenko and the Applicant maintain that DWF have been instructed to pursue the Gorlane Proceedings as a fishing expedition to obtain documents and evidence for use by the Canadian businessman in the Fraud Claim. That allegation was denied by Mr Lee. Nevertheless it is, in my view, understandable that Ms Sergiyenko has not volunteered to contact DWF in circumstances where they are acting against her brother. It is apparent from the evidence of Mr Lee that DWF have not set up any Chinese walls within their firm and it is difficult to see how they could deal with issues of confidentiality if matters disclosed to them by Ms Sergiyenko in relation to the Gorlane Arbitration were also relevant to the other set of proceedings they are conducting against her brother on the instructions of the Canadian businessman.
35. The present proceedings in the Royal Court commenced with the Applicant's Application issued on 28th September 2016. The Second and Third Respondents replied with the Alternative Relief Application issued on 17th November, alleging, inter alia, deadlock between the two directors of the Company. In an attempt to resolve the deadlock, on 18th November 2016, Mr Lee purported to remove Ms Sergiyenko as a director of the Company and replace her with Mr Tilis. There was in evidence a letter of the same date giving notice to Ms Sergiyenko that he intended to do so. He purported to be acting in accordance with the provisions of the Articles of Association of the Company and to have acted lawfully. The basis on which he acted, and the question of whether it was lawful to do so, are considered later in this judgment.

36. On 28th October 2016 an article was published on www.dispatchweekly.com written with intimate knowledge of the Guernsey proceedings. Mr Lee alleged that the information could only have originated from Ms Sergiyenko or the Russian businessman. He alleged that publication of the article is contrary to the best interests of the Company as it will alert the Gorlane Purchasers to the proceedings in Guernsey and the allegations contained therein which, he says, will further dent the Company's bargaining position in the Gorlane Proceedings with the Gorlane Purchasers.

The Offer Letters

37. On 9th November 2016, the Canadian businessman wrote to the Russian businessman and Ms Sergiyenko marked "subject to contract" with two alternative offers. The first was an offer to buy shares on the following terms –

"We enter into an agreement pursuant to which:

- (2) You procure the transfer of your shares in [the Company] (i.e. the shares held by [the Applicant]) to a company nominated by me; and*
- (3) (After being paid the legal fees that I pay for running the Gorlane Arbitration) I will pay to you 50% of the net proceeds of the sums recovered in respect of:*
  - (a) The Gorlane Arbitration; and*
  - (b) The sums owed to [the Company] in the Shtaif Case."*

38. In the alternative, the Canadian businessman proposed that he would fund the Gorlane Arbitration and indemnify Ms Sergiyenko against any liability arising from her directorship as a result of pursuing the claim. He offered to do so on the basis that the Company would receive the sums recovered, the Canadian businessman would be repaid the costs incurred in running the claim and the two businessmen would share the net proceeds equally. The Canadian businessman requested a response within seven days i.e. by the 16th November. As it transpired, no response had been received by the 17th November, the date upon which the Alternative Relief Application was served.
39. By letter dated 18th November, Ms Sergiyenko responded repeating an earlier request for copies of correspondence between DWF and the Gorlane Purchasers and asking whether DWF had considered the earlier A&O memorandum particularly in relation to the counter-claim and the prospect of recovering any money that might be awarded. She asked for assurances that the Canadian businessman would not simply make off with any proceeds received from a claim and questioned how she and the Applicant could be protected from any third-party costs exposure. She requested an irrevocable guarantee or letter of credit to support the indemnity being offered in the magnitude of $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 US dollars.
40. On the same day, Mr Lee wrote to Ms Sergiyenko formally requesting her resignation as a director of the Company. In a separate letter of the same date, he advised that he had removed her as a director and referred to the three 'well considered' proposals in his earlier letter and the stay in the Gorlane Arbitration which was due to come to an end on 25th November. He wrote that it was the need to make progress prior to that date which had caused him to remove Ms Sergiyenko, purportedly under Article 82(d) of the Articles of Association, and appoint Mr Tilis in her place. The letter also advised that irrevocable instructions had been given by him to DWF to hold any funds recovered in the Gorlane Arbitration, after payment of legal fees, in their client account until agreement could be reached as to the distribution of the proceeds between the businessmen or pursuant to any court order.

41. Ms Sergiyenko did not accept her removal from the board and, on 20th November 2016, purported to sign a Consent Order on behalf of the Company extending the stay in the Gorlane Arbitration until 25th February 2017. On 25th November 2016, the Russian businessman wrote to the Canadian businessman offering that he (the Canadian businessman) and Mr Lee pursue the Gorlane Arbitration on terms that the Russian businessman and Ms Sergiyenko be provided personal indemnities secured by way of bank guarantee or letter of credit and that the Company also be indemnified with a similar security. In the event of any recovery being made following successful proceedings, after payment of any legal costs incurred by the Canadian businessman, the proceeds would be divided equally between the two businessmen.
42. On 9th January 2017 the Canadian businessman wrote to the Russian businessman stating that the basis for requesting indemnities was misconceived. He repeated his offer to purchase the shares on terms that they would submit to a reputable jurisdiction such as the LCIA to deal with any enforcement concerns and that the Russian businessman would be indemnified in respect of a non-party costs order, even though he saw no legal basis for it.
43. The Russian businessman responded on 12th January stating that he had been advised there was a risk of a costs order being made against him, to which he did not wish to be exposed and therefore required an indemnity, fortified by way of an irrevocable bank guarantee or letter of credit. He also made reference to the Shtaif proceedings. As an alternative to the Canadian businessman's offer, he indicated the Applicant would be willing to sell its shares in the Company for $50,000,000 US dollars in order to achieve a clean break.
44. His proposals were answered, and rejected, by the Canadian businessman by letter dated 18th January.
45. Thus the position at the hearing was that all offers had been rejected.

Declaration concerning the Removal of Ms Sergiyenko

46. In purporting to remove Ms Sergiyenko as a director, Mr Lee relied upon Article 82(d) of The Company's Articles of Association which provides that "the office of Director shall, ipso facto, be vacated if .... (d) he is requested to resign in writing signed by all his co-directors". To interpret the article, Advocate Newman quoted Article 1 which provides, "words importing the singular number only shall include the plural number vice versa". Thus, taking the two Articles together, it is submitted that one director has the power to remove another director in a situation where, as here, there are only two directors of the company. In doing so, Mr Lee claims he was acting bona fide in the best interests of the members of the Company in view of Ms Sergiyenko's conduct which was detrimental and prejudicial to the Company as she had placed the personal interests of her brother ahead of the Company's interests.
47. Advocate Newman submitted that the principles applicable to the construction of documents were established under the law of England and Wales, most recently, in the UK Supreme Court in Arnold v Britton [2015] AC 1619 per Lord Neuberger (with whom Lord Sumption and Lord Hughes agreed):

"When interpreting the written contract, the court is concerned to identify the intention of the parties by reference to 'what a reasonable person having all the background knowledge which would have been available to the parties would have understood them to be using the language in the contract to mean' ... and it does so by focussing on the meaning of the relevant words ... in their documentary, factual and commercial context. That meaning has to be assessed in the light of:

- (i) The natural and ordinary meaning of the clause,
- (ii) Any other relevant provisions of the [contract],
- (iii) The overall purpose of the clause and the [contract],
- (iv) The facts and circumstances known or assumed by the parties at the time the document was executed and
- (v) Commercial common-sense, but
- (vi) Disregarding subjective evidence of any parties' intentions."

48. Advocate Newman noted that in some recent decisions of the Jersey courts, such as O'Brien v Marett [2008] JCA 178, a more subjective approach has been adopted pursuant to Pothier's Traité des Obligations and Modern French Law. He submitted however that in the present case there is no real difference between an objective and a subjective test because the Court has no evidence of any subjective intention when the Company's Articles were drafted and the Company incorporated. Thus he submitted the Articles are to be construed objectively.
49. If I were to find in favour of his submissions, the current constitution of the board would be Mr Lee and Mr Tilis, both of whom are employed within the Canadian businessman's group of companies and (it is to be assumed) will work together, thereby removing the deadlock that currently exists between Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko. The Company would then be able to continue to operate under the new board of directors and there would be no need to proceed to consider the other heads of relief being claimed in the Application and the Amended Relief Application.
50. In my judgment, I note that if the singular of the word "co-directors" were substituted in Article 82(d), it would read that "the office of director shall, ipso facto, be vacated if ... (d) he is requested to resign in writing signed by all his co-director". "All his co-director" would not be grammatically correct. Any interpretation of the Article cannot ignore the word "all". If that word were absent, the Article would read that "a director could be removed if requested by his co-director" and the meaning sought by the Second and Third Respondents would be permissible. However, the inclusion of the word "all" means that the Article can only be invoked if there are at least three, if not four, directors all but one of whom unanimously agree to the removal of the other director. That is the natural and ordinary meaning of the clause, construed objectively in accordance with the principles set out by Lord Neuberger. Advocate Newman correctly stated that we have no evidence of the subjective intention of the parties at the time of approving the Articles. However, it seems inconceivable that they would have intended that if there were only two directors, one representing each shareholder, one director could remove the other, thus depriving one of the shareholders of any representation on the board, with the result depending upon which director struck first.
51. Having reached that conclusion, there is no need, in this context, to consider whether or not Mr Lee was acting bona fide in the best interests of the Company. Indeed, the Article does not apparently require any such good intentions.

The Law – Relief for Unfair Prejudice

52. In the Amended Application, the Applicant seeks the winding up of the Company by way of relief in respect of unfair prejudice suffered by it pursuant to Sections 349 and 350 of the CGL. Alternatively, it seeks the winding up of the Company pursuant to Section 406(i) of the CGL on "just and equitable" grounds and pursuant to Section 412 by which the Court may grant such an application "on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit" or may "make such order as it thinks fit". The Second and Third Respondents also rely upon Sections 349 and 350 of the CGL in the Amended Relief Application.

53. I will consider first the circumstances in which the Court may grant relief for unfair prejudice and the nature of the relief available, before addressing the "just and equitable" winding up provisions.

54. The material parts of Section 349 and 350 of the CGL are as follows:

"349. (1) A member of a company may apply to the Court for an order under section 350 on the ground that –

(a) the affairs of the company are being or have been conducted in a manner that is unfairly prejudicial to the interests of members generally or of some part of its members (including at least himself), or

(b) an actual or proposed act or omission of the company (including an act or omission on its behalf) is or would be so prejudicial."

.....
(5) The provisions of sections 349 and 350 are without prejudice to any other remedy.

"350. (1) If the Court is satisfied that an application under section 349 is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1), an order of the Court may –

(a) regulate the conduct of the company's affairs in the future,

(b) ....

(c) authorise civil proceedings to be brought in the name and on behalf of the company by such persons and on such terms as the Court may direct,

(d) provide for the purchase of shares of any member of the company by other members of the company or by the company itself and, in the case of a purchase by the company itself, the reduction of the company's capital accordingly,

(e) ...

And the Court may make such consequential alterations to the company's memorandum or articles and any of its resolutions as the Court thinks fit."

55. There is little, if any, Guernsey authority on the interpretation and application of the unfair prejudice provisions. Consequently both counsel addressed me on English authorities on the similar (but not identical) provisions contained in Sections 994 et seq of the UK Companies Act 2006 which, I accept, are persuasive authority in this jurisdiction. The English provisions were helpfully summarised by Hildyard J in Apex Global Management Limited v Fi Call Limited [2015] EWHC 3269 (Ch) at paras 34 – 51, and in particular at para 37 where the learned judge said that the petitioner must establish three things:

- “(1) first, that the matters of which he complains are either actual or proposed acts or omissions of the company or consist of the conduct of the company’s affairs;*
- (2) secondly, that those matters have caused prejudice to his interests as a member of the company; and*
- (3) thirdly, that the prejudice is unfair.”*

56. I am satisfied that the natural meaning of Section 349(1) of the CGL requires the applicant for relief from unfair prejudice to establish the same three elements to the civil standard of proof.

57. Regarding the nature of the prejudice that must be established, David Richards J in Re: Coroin Limited (No 2) [2012] EWHC 2343 (Ch), (affirmed by the Court of Appeal in the same matter at [2013] EWCA Civ 781), held that prejudice is capable of being established either as economic prejudice in some capacity connected with the members’ shareholding or in a non-economic sense.

“The prejudice must be to the petitioner in his capacity as a member but this is not to be strictly confined to damage to the value of his shareholding. Moreover, prejudice need not be financial in character. A disregard of the rights of a member as such, without any financial consequences, may amount to prejudice falling within the section.”

58. In Section 349, “prejudicial” is qualified by the adverb “unfairly” indicating that there may be some managerial decisions taken by a company which are prejudicial to one or more of its shareholders but that the court will only intervene in cases of unfairness. I do not consider it necessary to give a comprehensive definition of what could amount to unfairness in this context, but Advocate Newman helpfully referred me to certain persuasive English authorities including O’Neill v Phillips [1999] 1BCLC 1, Ebrahimi v Westbourne Galleries Limited [1973] A.C. 360 and Grace v Biagioli [2006] 2 BCLC 70. Those decisions show that the required degree of unfairness may be established: either by breach of an applicant’s contractual rights, especially where the board has acted in bad faith or for an ulterior purpose; or where equitable factors such as those available in a quasi-partnership relationship may be proved. The particular conduct relied upon by the Applicant can be summarized as:

- (1) The Canadian businessman and the Russian businessman were engaged in a joint venture, akin to a quasi-partnership which has now come to an end and the Canadian businessman is accusing the Russian businessman of fraud in connection with the business of the Company. In those circumstances it is wholly unrealistic to suppose any such relationship can continue.
- (2) Ms Sergiyenko has been excluded from the management of the Company and denied access to the Company’s documents and information, both before and after her purported removal as a director.
- (3) Mr Lee is conducting the affairs of the Company in a manner which is wholly hostile, both to Ms Sergiyenko and to the Russian businessman, for example by instructing DWF to act on behalf of the Company in pursuing the Gorlane Purchasers.

59. The Second and Third Respondents allege unfair prejudice based on different facts although they preface their contentions by saying that if the appointment of Mr Tilis as a director had been valid, there would be no continuing boardroom deadlock. In the light of my decision that Ms Sergiyenko was not validly removed and that Mr Tilis has not been validly appointed to the board of the Company, Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko are the continuing directors and they are deadlocked. The matters of prejudice alleged by the Second and Third Respondents can be summarized as follows:

- (1) The failure to pursue payment of the Holdback Amount and the failure to arrange the opening of the Blocked Account.
- (2) Despite instructing A&O on behalf of the Company in 2011, the failure to make progress in pursuing the Gorlane Purchasers prior to Mr Lee commencing the Gorlane Arbitration.
- (3) The inference drawn by them that the Russian businessman is prioritising his personal interests, with the assistance of Ms Sergiyenko, in priority to the best interests of the Company.
- (4) Publication of the Article in Dispatch Weekly based on information supplied by the Russian businessman or a person or persons acting on his behalf, such as Ms Sergiyenko.

The Law – “Just and Equitable” Winding-Up

60. Section 406(i) of the CGL provides as follows;

“406. A company may be wound up by the Court if –

....

- (i) the Court is of the opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up.”

61. The leading English decisions on the principles that constitute “just and equitable” grounds for winding-up a company, such as Ebrahimi v Westbourne Galleries Limited [1973] 360 have been followed in this jurisdiction, see for example Hubert v Circuit Skips Limited (unreported, Royal Court, 24th January, 2001). Such English decisions make clear that the “just and equitable” principles were borrowed from the law of partnership, recognising not only that in many cases there may have been a pre-existing partnership but also that behind many companies, “there are individuals, with rights, expectations and obligations inter se which are not necessarily submerged in the company structure”, per Lord Wilberforce at page 379C. He went on to say, at 379E: “It would be impossible, and wholly undesirable, to define the circumstances in which these considerations may apply”.

62. Lord Wilberforce added the following, at page 379G:

“The superimposition of equitable considerations requires something more, which typically may include one, or probably more, of the following elements: (i) an association formed or continued on the basis of a personal relationship, involving mutual confidence – this element will often be found where a pre-existing partnership has been converted into a limited company; (ii) an agreement, or understanding, that all, or some (for there may be “sleeping members”), of the shareholders shall participate in the conduct of the business; (iii) restriction upon the transfer of the members’ interest in the company – so that if confidence is lost, or one member is removed from the management, he cannot take out his stake and go elsewhere.

It is these, and analogous, factors which may bring into play the just and equitable clause, and they do so directly through the force of the words themselves.....A company, however small, however domestic, is a company not a partnership or even a quasi-partnership and it is through the just and equitable clause that obligations, common to partnership relations, may come in.”

Discussion

63. The board of directors of the Company is deadlocked. Both sides are agreed on that fact and, even if they were not agreed, there is very clear, uncontroverted, evidence that it is so.

However, that fact needs to be placed in context. This is not a normal company acting in accordance with normally accepted standards of good governance. There are two directors but they never meet, they do not hold board meetings, the only board minute that has been drawn to my attention is the minute of 19th May 2010 authorising the entry into and execution of the SPA and other activities in connection therewith, a minute which reads as if it has been prepared by lawyers for the purpose of ensuring that the Gorlane transaction was properly authorised. There are reasons why the directors operate as they do and it is helpful to set those out.

64. The Company was formed as a joint venture holding company to hold the shared interests of the two businessmen. That was in 1998 when the two businessmen reposed mutual trust and confidence in each other. There is no evidence of any underlying shareholder agreement or partnership agreement and the inference is that none exists or, at least, if there is an agreement, it did not make provision for what would happen if the two businessmen wished to separate their interests and dissolve their relationship. Had there been such a prior agreement, it is likely that one or other of them would have been seeking to enforce its terms, rather than relying upon the provisions of the CGL and the Articles of Association of the Company that do not seem to have been tailored to suit a joint venture.
65. The Court was told that at one time the board of directors was larger, up to eight in number. I have no evidence as to how it operated at that time or whether formal meetings were convened. What is in evidence is how the board has operated with only two directors: Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko. Precisely who nominated each of them and who appointed them may be unclear but the evidence shows that each was appointed to represent the interests of one of the businessmen. Mr Lee is a senior employee of the Canadian businessman and Ms Sergiyenko is the sister of the Russian businessman.
66. Although the two directors claim to act at all times in the best interests of the Company, they consult with and may take instructions from their respective businessman. They do so in circumstances where the two businessmen have lost all trust and confidence in each other. As long ago as 2009 they agreed to go their separate ways and since then have been working to separate or unwind their mutual interests. The events that led to the decision to separate are not material. I note that Mr Fenn suggests (in a statement that is hearsay) the reason was that during the period 2005 to 2009, the Canadian businessman had made a number of business decisions that were unprofitable and in some cases extremely loss-making to the joint venture. For his part, Mr Lee said (in a statement that may also be hearsay) that the reason to separate was that the Russian businessman wanted to continue to invest in new business projects in Russia and the Canadian businessman did not. I am not required to determine why they decided to separate as nothing turns on the truth of their reason to do so.
67. The entry into the SPA for the purpose of selling the Ukrainian steel business was a significant step in unwinding the joint venture. As a result, and possibly following the disposal of other profitable assets, Ms Sergiyenko explained that the Company's activities no longer generated sufficient funds to operate the Kiev office and she was dependent upon the businessmen providing funds, the requests for which were often challenged. She said that as a result of the lack of an internal source of funds, the Company was not functioning normally and it experienced problems which started in 2010 and became exacerbated later.
68. I conclude from that evidence that since about 2010, the need to request funds and justify expenditure has inevitably limited the directors' ability to act independently in the best interests of the Company. When taking decisions they have had to be conscious of the requirement to justify their actions to the businessmen and/or to whoever in their respective organisations controlled the purse strings.

69. I mentioned that there were never formal board meetings. Both Ms Sergiyenko and Mr Lee said that they conducted the management of the Company through email exchanges, apparently on a very frequent basis although very few emails have been produced in evidence, giving the impression that the full facts may not have been disclosed to the Court, save in respect of the period from April 2016 onwards.. I accept that I have to decide the outcome of the Applications on the evidence that is before the Court, not on what might be undisclosed.
70. Much of the evidence was in the form of documents that were not challenged. Regarding the evidence of the two main witnesses, Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko, there were some discrepancies but by and large the discrepancies were not material. I agree with Advocate Newman's assessment of Ms Sergiyenko's evidence, that at times she attempted to avoid questions, she was unnecessarily verbose, she was not candid and was sometimes evasive. I should add that I have allowed for the fact that she was giving evidence through an interpreter. I do not agree with Advocate Newman's assessment of Mr Lee as being at all times cogent and frank. I paid careful attention to both witnesses and having observed the demeanour of them both when giving their evidence, the impression I have is that neither of them told "the whole truth". As for Mr Fenn, he gave largely hearsay evidence and without the protection of a Hearsay Notice having been served, little weight can be attached to his hearsay. However that is not significant as Ms Sergiyenko was able to plug some of the gaps with her evidence and the documents produced by Mr Fenn spoke for themselves (save when they were in the Russian language without a translation, when they were of no assistance to me whatsoever).
71. Returning to how the directors operated, I understand that one of the ways in which they managed was by delegating. Mr Lee and/or others based in Canada took care of the Company's activities in the western hemisphere while Ms Sergiyenko and others situated in Eastern Europe, including the Russian businessman's son Igor, took care of activities in that area. The East European activities included responsibility for negotiating the SPA and dealing with post-completion matters. However, delegation to one director does not absolve the other director from responsibility if he or she fails to supervise. The failure to hold regular board meetings might explain why there was apparently no process for reporting back to the board the progress, or lack of progress, in dealing with post-completion matters such as the opening of the Blocked Account and chasing payment of the Holdback Amount.
72. Both directors tried to blame the other. Ms Sergiyenko said in cross-examination that it was Mr Lee's responsibility to open the Blocked Account; he dealt with accounts from the office in Toronto, together with Mr Tilis. Mr Lee said that after Completion of the sale, he suggested the names of two banks but neither was acceptable to the Gorlane Purchasers so he left it to those who were dealing with the Purchasers, that is to say people in the Kiev office, to agree the arrangements. It is not clear precisely what each of Mr Lee and Ms Sergiyenko knew at different times but they have both known for several years that the Blocked Account has not been opened. Mr Lee said that when he became a director of the Company in 2011 he was aware that the account had not been opened. Ms Sergiyenko was aware in 2014 when A&O were involved and I am satisfied that she was aware long before that date. Even though both directors were aware that the Blocked Account had not been set up, they did not convene a board meeting to discuss what should be done. It was not the board of directors who instructed A&O nor was it the board who authorised the involvement of A&O. That was arranged by someone on the Russian side of the joint venture, possibly Igor. Mr Lee was not made aware or kept informed; he was even denied access to A&O. That is not how a properly functioning board of directors should act especially when the sum involved is a significant amount of money: US$50 million.
73. The nature of the Company's operations changed after the two businessmen took the decision to separate, since when the focus has been on separating and liquidating the assets. The management has inevitably had to change too. The two businessmen have co-operated with each other in agreeing how to divide the assets and have been able to agree the terms of three separate Unwind Agreements. Since 2014, the pursuit of the Fraud Claim in the LCIA by the Canadian businessman against the Russian businessman has not prevented them working together when it has suited them, for example in the handling of the “Shtaiif” case. There the Company has obtained a judgment on a counter-claim for US$137million, which is subject to appeal by the judgment debtor. It is not known whether there is any real value in the judgment as the Company does not know what assets may be available to satisfy the judgment. If and when there is any recovery, Mr Lee said that he had given irrevocable instructions to the solicitors acting for the Company to hold the net proceeds of the claim in their client account pending division between the two businessmen. What is interesting about the handling of the claim is that, apart from those instructions, the directors are not involved in it. Instead, Mr Lee informed the Court that the solicitors have been taking their instructions direct from the two businessmen and have continued to do so.

74. I have concluded from Mr Lee’s evidence on the Shtaiif claim that the directors are not in full control of the Company. I have also concluded that the two businessmen can continue to work together when it suits them. It is not surprising that they do so. The evidence is that these are two successful businessmen who take pragmatic, commercial, decisions by assessing the risks and rewards of a decision and then acting accordingly. When it suits them, their commercial instincts override their mutual distrust of each other.
75. Who then is truly controlling the Company and has been doing so for the past several years? Is it the two directors in the, now deadlocked, board or is control exercised from elsewhere? Understandably, neither businessman would wish to be found to be a shadow director so they are seeking to protect themselves from any allegations that they are. When asked whether the Canadian businessman and Russian businessman directed the business of the Company and determined what was to happen with it, Mr Lee replied that “they were both active, and they were the ultimate beneficial owners. So, it’s fair to say that everyone else regarded them as their bosses.” Ms Sergiyenko said that the two businessmen participated more when the business was larger. Presently, her brother does not issue much by way of instruction and she does not communicate with him a lot because it is difficult to do so as communications are poor between their countries. The impression given by both of the directors is that the businessmen are involved. Whilst the directors may retain some element of control, the scope they have for reaching independent decisions as to what is in the best interests of the Company is limited because of the need to discuss with the businessmen and not least because it is the businessmen who fund the Company’s activities.
76. Further evidence of the involvement of the businessmen can be seen in the actions taken to instruct solicitors to pursue the Gorlane Purchasers for the Holdback Amount. Mr Lee could not have instructed DWF to commence the arbitration claim without the consent of the Canadian businessman who is funding the proceedings. Previously, A&O had been instructed but not by the directors; Mr Lee was not involved and could not even get access to the solicitor’s file. Ms Sergiyenko could not recall who had instructed A&O and did not know what instructions they had been given. A&O addressed their memorandum of advice to Igor and it may have been he who instructed them. If he did, it was not with the authority of a board resolution from the Company; most likely, it was on instructions from his father.
77. The Shtaiif claim is, as I have said, being run directly by the two businessmen giving instructions to the solicitors.
78. There is a further claim in the Ukraine known as the “Amstor” claim which may or may not realise any value eventually. Again, the board is not in control of the action which is being run by a person or persons in Kiev. It is inconceivable that such persons could do very much unless they have the agreement of the Russian businessman who is presumably funding it or assisting in some way. I cannot say much about the claim because the evidence was very limited but what was clear to me is that the board of directors of the Company do not have control of it.

79. Since 2009, the activities of the Company have been directed towards giving effect to what was described as the “economic divorce” between the two businessmen. By and large, the businessmen have been able to agree what should happen and they continue to be able to do so when it suits them, for instance over the Shtauf claim. The underlying cause of the present proceedings appears to be that the two of them are at loggerheads over the Gorlane Proceedings where they have very different views as to what should or should not happen.
80. Each side challenges the other’s motives. The Canadian businessman thinks that the Russian businessman has diverted the Holdback Amount of US$50 million for his own purposes. The evidence against him is that Ms Sergiyenko, Igor and, no doubt, others working from Kiev are the ones handling the post-completion issues with the Gorlane Purchasers. Ms Sergiyenko said that she continues to communicate with them and had done so as recently as in the week before the hearing. If there has been so much contact, it is surprising that no correspondence or meeting notes were produced to evidence the discussions and that there is little evidence of any progress having been made either in securing payment of the Holdback Amount or in the transfer of the Future Interests. A&O were instructed to write to the Gorlane Purchasers and gave a memorandum of advice but that firm has not been instructed to do anything to chase replies to correspondence or to commence proceedings. Ms Sergiyenko and Mr Zyuba attended a meeting in 2015 but the purpose of the meeting was very limited, no decision makers were present and little or nothing was achieved. Ms Sergiyenko gave some potentially plausible reasons for not commencing proceedings such as the risk of a counter-claim and the prospect of the Gorlane purchasers having no assets against which a judgment could be enforced. However, she had not taken advice on those issues and does not appear to have explored them in the competent and thorough manner that is to be expected of the directors of a Company wishing to recover a potentially very valuable debt. When expiry of the limitation period was fast approaching her response was to seek a standstill agreement even though they have, in effect, been standing still for years. The overall impression is one of inactivity, obstruction and prevarication. The clearest evidence of the unwillingness of the Russian businessman to pursue the Gorlane Proceedings is that he will not fund the liquidators to do so (if they are appointed) and he is not co-operating constructively with the Canadian businessman’s offer to conduct the Proceedings at his expense. Despite the concerns advanced by the Second and Third Respondents, there is no evidence before me upon which I could find that the Russian businessman has diverted the Holdback Amount for his own benefit and I cannot say what motives he may have when he has not given evidence.
81. As for the Canadian businessman, the Russian businessman is suspicious of his motives in instructing DWF to pursue proceedings. The proceedings were commenced without further express authority from the board, in the knowledge that Ms Sergiyenko had expressed opposition to them. It is not clear what instructions were given to DWF but I was told that they had no information from Ms Sergiyenko or Igor about their ongoing discussions with the Gorlane Purchasers. The precise legal advice on which the decision to issue proceedings was based has not been disclosed, the Court was only told that DWF and an unnamed counsel had agreed with A&O’s memorandum of advice given in 2013. It is not clear what advice has been given on the merits or otherwise of any potential counter-claim. Mr Lee expressly refused to disclose the advice for fear, he says, that someone on the Russian side will leak it to the Gorlane Purchasers and thereby weaken any negotiating position. Unilateral action has been instituted by the Canadian businessman who is funding the action, or at least on his instructions. The Russian businessman is unhappy that it is DWF who have been instructed when the same supervising partner and some of the associates engaged on the case are pursuing the Fraud Claim against him. Mr Lee may have added to those concerns by saying in evidence that DWF have been told that the Canadian businessman believes that the Russian businessman has diverted the Holdback Amount for his own purposes. The reasons given by Mr Lee for instructing DWF instead of A&O who were previously instructed require examination. He said that A&O would be more expensive but he did not seek a fee quote from DWF to confirm whether that would be so. He said he had been dissatisfied with the quality of A&O's advice on other occasions but he has no concerns about the advice they gave in relation to the Gorlane Purchasers, indeed he relied upon their advice as justification for issuing proceedings. The Canadian businessman is prepared to fund the Gorlane Proceedings while he (or Mr Lee) is in control but he will not presently agree to do so if liquidators are to be appointed. Against that background, it is not surprising that Ms Sergiyenko and, presumably the Russian businessman, suspect that the reason or one of the reasons for issuing the Gorlane Proceedings is to attempt to gather evidence for use against the Russian businessman in the Fraud Claim.

82. The evidence established that it is in relation to Gorlane that the parties have had their biggest differences. If there have been other differences, the businessmen have been able to resolve them. The management of the Company has no doubt been difficult for some time whilst its activities are wound down. There may be many factors that have had a bearing on the current deadlock but it is in relation to Gorlane that matters have come to a head. The reason they have done so is more likely to be because the two businessmen are of different minds as to what to do. If they were in agreement, I can see nothing that would prevent them from running the Gorlane Proceedings in the same way that they are instructing lawyers on the Shtaif claim.
83. In conclusion, the board of directors is in deadlock, but that deadlock would not prevent the businessmen from proceeding with their "economic divorce" if they were in agreement as to what should happen in the Gorlane Proceedings.

The Alternative Relief Application

84. I turn now to consider the relief sought in the Amended Application and in the Alternative Relief Application, starting with the latter as an order for compulsory liquidation would be more Draconian and would be a remedy of last resort.
85. The basis for the Alternative Relief Application is that the affairs of the Company are being conducted in a manner that is unfairly prejudicial to the Second and Third Respondents, two of the members in the Company. There was very little evidence about any of the Second and Third Respondents or the Applicant other than that they were the owners of the share capital of the Company and held the shares ultimately for the benefit of the respective businessmen and their families.
86. "Prejudice" is to be interpreted broadly. It includes, but is not limited to, financial prejudice as David Richards J held in Re Coroin. The prejudicial acts alleged by the Second and Third Respondents relate in one way or another to the cost implications of the Gorlane Proceedings, their impact on the value of the Company and hence of the shares held by its members. The allegations are that the value of the Company has decreased because of the failure to secure payment of the Holdback Amount, the failure to pursue the Gorlane Purchasers and the publication of an article in Dispatch Weekly which will have reduced the strength of the Company's negotiating hand.
87. I accept that the delay in securing the Holdback Amount and the furnishing of information to the magazine are matters capable of causing unfair prejudice to the members of the Company and therefore could invoke the Court's powers to grant relief under section 350 of CGL.

88. The two alternative orders sought are either an order that the Company continue the Gorlane Proceedings or an order for the sale of the Applicant's shares. Neither proposal can be acceptable. (Paragraphs 1 and 2 of the Alternative Relief Application refer respectively to paragraphs "x" and "39" of Mr Lee's first affidavit; I have taken those references to be to paragraphs 38, 39 and 40.)
89. I do not have the evidence that I would require before making an order that the Gorlane Proceedings be continued. I would require expert evidence by way of a legal opinion given by or on behalf of those conducting the extant Gorlane Proceedings, opining upon matters such as the merits of the claim as issued, the merits of any counter-claim, the costs of the proceedings and the prospects of recovering any award. The memorandum issued by A&O in 2013 is wholly insufficient, lacking in content and of course being several years out of date.
90. I am also unable to order a sale of the Applicant's shares on the terms proposed for lack of a sufficiently detailed proposal and for the reason that terms proposed would not achieve a clean break between the parties. Advocate Newman relied upon the judgment of Patten J sitting as a judge of the Court of Appeal in Grace v Biagioli [2006] 2 BCLC 70 (at para 75):

"[75] In most cases, the usual order to make will be the one requiring the respondents to buy out the petitioning shareholder at a price to be fixed by the court. This is normally the most appropriate order to deal with intra-company disputes involving small private companies. This is the relief which Mr Grace says that the judge should have granted and which he seeks on this appeal. The reasons for making such an order are in most cases obvious. It will free the petitioner from the company and enable him to extract his share of the value of its business and assets in return for foregoing any future right to dividends. The company and its business will be preserved for the benefit of the respondent shareholders, free from his claims and the possibility of future difficulties between shareholders will be removed. In cases of serious prejudice and conflict between shareholders, it is unlikely that any regime or safeguards which the court can impose will be as effective to preserve the peace and to safeguard the rights of the minority. Although, as Lord Hoffmann emphasised in O'Neill v Phillips, there is no room within this jurisdiction for the equivalent of no-fault divorce, nothing less than a clean break is likely in most cases of proven fault to satisfy the objectives of the court's power to intervene."

91. For all the reasons given by Patten J, a buyout of shares would be a good solution to the present matter if it could achieve a clean break but it would not do so. One major drawback is that the payment of the purchase price would be deferred, and not only the payment but ascertainment of the price would be delayed pending the conclusion of legal proceedings. There is no clarity or precision as to what is meant by "running the Arbitration" or what is meant by "the sums owed to the [Company] in the Shtauf case" (quoting from the Canadian businessman's letter of 9 November 2016). In particular, the letter does not specify what the Canadian businessman would be undertaking to do in order to run the Arbitration or to ascertain the sums owed in the Shtauf claim. Could he settle either claim by agreement with the other parties to each claim or would he have to pursue each to the conclusion of proceedings? Would "the proceedings" be deemed to include appeal proceedings? Would he have to use his best endeavours, reasonable endeavours or what? There are so many uncertainties, I cannot list them all. In his oral evidence, Mr Lee admitted that in respect of the Gorlane Proceedings there would have to be a funding agreement between the Company and the Canadian businessman which he would prepare. In saying that, he acknowledged that the present arrangement regarding the funding of the litigation is not finalised and hence is unsatisfactory.

92. In conclusion in relation to the Alternative Relief Application, the evidence may have been sufficient to engage the Court's powers to order some form of alternative relief but unfortunately, neither of the options presented to the Court would be appropriate. I therefore have to consider whether grounds have been established that would justify an order for compulsory liquidation.

The Amended Application

93. The principal ground on which it is sought to place the Company into liquidation is that it is "just and equitable" to do so. The Applicant also sought to rely upon the Court's powers under the "unfair prejudice" provisions of the CGL. I consider that there is sufficient overlap between the two grounds on the facts of the present case that there is no need for me to consider the "unfair prejudice" ground.
94. English authorities such as Ebrahimi considered the basis and origins of that test, tracing it back to the law of partnership and the circumstances in which the courts would intervene to dissolve a partnership. Counsel disagreed as to whether the two businessmen could properly be described as "partners" in the joint venture. As I have said, there was no evidence before the Court of any agreement between the two businessmen underpinning the joint venture so I cannot say that the two of them had formed a legal partnership. I do not consider it necessary to equate their joint venture either to a partnership or to a quasi-partnership, but insofar as the former is suggestive of a legal relationship and the latter of something less than a formal legal agreement to work together, the latter may be the more accurate. It is sufficient to say that the two businessmen were equal beneficial owners and participants together in a joint venture that operated through the Company.
95. I do not accept the submission that the Company should be wound up on the ground that the purpose for which it existed has come to an end. As the owner of the remaining activities of the joint venture, the Company will continue to have a purpose until all those activities have either been liquidated or distributed between the two businessmen. However, the fact that the decision has been taken to unwind the activities of the joint venture is a factor to be considered when deciding whether liquidation is appropriate.
96. It is apparent that the CGL borrowed the expression "just and equitable" from the English legislation and it is to be inferred that in doing so the legislature intended that the expression should be interpreted by the Guernsey courts with the same meaning as the expression has been given by the courts of England and Wales. Hence the relevant English authorities are to be regarded in this jurisdiction as being highly persuasive. The passage from the judgment of Lord Wilberforce cited above from Ebrahimi is apposite. The joint venture was formed or continued on the basis of a personal relationship involving mutual confidence and there was an understanding that the two businessmen were to participate in the decision making, at least indirectly if not directly. I have heard no evidence as to whether there was a restriction on the transfer of shares but there may well have been. However, Lord Wilberforce said that not all of those elements need be present; he said that one or more of those elements is "typical" of the circumstances where equitable considerations may apply. I am satisfied that the circumstances in the present matter are such as to bring the just and equitable clause into play, as he put it.
97. The facts I set out above, such as the deadlock within the board of directors of the Company, the failure of the two businessmen to agree a common approach to handling the Gorlane Proceedings, the steps taken by one director to remove another and, generally, the failure to agree what is in the best interests of the Company in dealing with the Gorlane Purchasers and the outstanding issues arising from the sale of the steel business are all sufficient to justify making an order for liquidation on just and equitable grounds.

98. The factor that I find especially troubling and which justifies taking the Draconian step of placing the Company into liquidation is that there are two directors who both claim to have the authority to act in relation to the Gorlane Purchasers including taking steps to instruct lawyers or to engage with the Purchasers, or both, without requiring the authority of a board decision and without fully informing the other director of what they are doing. In doing so they may contradict each other and undermine the steps taken by the other director. Such behaviour is not in the best interests of the Company. It is a consequence of the deadlock. The circumstances are such that the Court has the jurisdiction to intervene and it is just and equitable to do so. There is no proposal before me which would resolve the deadlock other than to appoint independent liquidators in place of the directors.
99. I have reservations as to how much the liquidators will be able to achieve with the limited funding offered by the Russian businessman. I am also conscious that in deciding what action to take in the best interests of the Company, the liquidators will be dependent upon the information supplied to them, including what is supplied by the present directors and the two businessmen. I would hope that the full support and co-operation of them all will be forthcoming. I take comfort from the fact that the two directors have both said on oath that they act only in the best interests of the Company. The liquidators will have access to the files held by the solicitors instructed by the Company and those files will contain instructions, correspondence and advice that will undoubtedly be of assistance to the liquidators in carrying out their duties under the supervision of the Royal Court from whom they may seek directions at any time. Although the initial funding promised by the Russian businessman is limited to £20,000, it should be sufficient to enable the liquidators to investigate the principal issues and advise whether the Gorlane Proceedings should be pursued. When they have received the liquidators' informed opinion, the two businessmen will be better able to decide what further action, if any, they wish to have taken.
100. In Ebrahimi, Lord Cross of Chelsea held (per curiam) that a petitioner who relies on the "just and equitable" clause must come to court with clean hands. I accept, as I have said, that by adopting the "just and equitable" ground, it must be inferred that our legislature imported English equitable principles into the test to be applied by the Royal Court. I will assume for the purposes of this judgment that there remains a requirement under modern English law that an applicant shall come with clean hands.
101. The Applicant company has "clean hands". There is no evidence that it has ever done anything in relation to the Company other than to act as the vehicle through which shares in the Company are held on behalf of the Russian businessman. However, I will treat the "hands" with which I need to be concerned as being those of the Russian businessman.
102. No allegations in the nature of dishonesty or fraud have been proved in these proceedings. Having taken the decision to unwind the joint venture, the two businessmen have been working to dissolve or distribute their joint activities. On the whole, they have done that successfully but in relation to the issues arising from the sale of the steel business to the Gorlane Purchasers, they have been unable to agree and instead, each of them has been seeking to act in his own best interests. In the absence of proof of something more, that does not amount to "unclean hands" or to conduct which would deprive either of them of the right to come before the court seeking equitable relief.

Conclusion

103. In conclusion, whilst it might have been preferable to make an order of relief on the unfair prejudice principles, the proposals in that regard that are before the Court are not acceptable. Taking all the circumstances into account, I am persuaded that it would be just and equitable to order that the Company be placed in compulsory liquidation, being the only other relief available to the Court.

The company was formed in August 1975 in order to combine B.'s expertise in the manufacturing of precision bellows with the general experience of A. and N. in financial, commercial and industrial matters. At the first meeting of directors A. was appointed chairman, N. was appointed financial director and company secretary, neither of them receiving remuneration as directors, and B. was appointed as managing director, with a yearly salary. The company's capital was so arranged that the petitioners, A. and N. and N.'s family, held 26 per cent. of the issued share capital. Restrictions were placed by the articles of

A association on the transfer of shares. Between 1975 and mid-1980 the company's affairs worked smoothly, and the company began to prosper, but thereafter the relationship of mutual confidence became impaired and in April 1981, at an extraordinary general meeting, A. and N. were removed as directors. The petitioners presented their petition, under section 75 of the Companies Act 1980,<sup>1</sup> for an order that their shares should be purchased by the respondent majority shareholders at their fair value. Vinelott J. ordered, by consent, pursuant to section 75 of the Act that the majority shareholders should purchase the petitioners' shares "at such price as the court shall hereafter determine." The order gave liberty to all parties to apply for, inter alia, "directions as to the payment of the purchase price and interest if appropriate." On the hearing to determine the appropriate purchase price of the shares Nourse J. found that the company constituted a quasi-partnership and that the exclusion of A. and N. from the company had been unjustified and amounted to conduct unfairly prejudicial to the petitioners' interests; and he held that, that being so, the fair basis for valuing the petitioners' shares was to fix the price pro rata according to the value of the shares of the company as a whole without any discount because they represented a minority holding. The judge further held that the petitioners were not entitled to interest on the purchase price for any period before it had been determined.

D On appeal by the majority shareholders and cross-appeal by the petitioners on the issue of interest:—

E Held, (1) dismissing the appeal, that section 75 of the Companies Act 1980 conferred on the court a wide discretion to do what was fair and equitable in all the circumstances so as to put right the unfair prejudice to a petitioner and cure it for the future; that that discretion extended to the terms of an order for the purchase of a petitioner's shares under section 75(4)(d), so that the proper price for a petitioner's shareholding was the price which the court, pursuant to that discretion, determined to be proper in all the circumstances of the case; that, on its true construction, the consent order entitled the court to exercise in full its discretion under section 75; and that, in so doing, the judge was right in concluding that it was appropriate to treat the company as a quasi-partnership and value its shares as a whole and the petitioners paid the proportionate part of that value which corresponded to their shareholding and not its market value as a minority shareholding (post, pp. 669D–F, G–H, 673H–674B, 677F, 678F–H, 679B–C).

G (2) Dismissing the cross-appeal, that the liberty to apply for directions in the consent order was provided to enable the court to order payment of interest on the purchase price after the court had fixed the price should it remain unpaid; and that, accordingly, the judge was right in rejecting the claim for interest (post, pp. 677C–E, F, 679C, D–F).

APPEAL from Nourse J.

The respondents, Philip Arthur Bird, Mrs. E. M. Bird, Stanley Rowden and Pipe-Chem Holdings Ltd., to a petition dated 12 October 1981 by Ernest Armstrong Stanley David Nin, his wife Edith Nin and his three children, appealed from the judgment of Nourse J. dated 28 October 1983 whereby the judge determined, pursuant to section 75 of the Companies Act 1980, that the fair price at which the respondents, as majority shareholders ("the majority shareholders"), should buy the petitioners' shares in Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. was £18.25 per share, making a total price of £142,350. The majority shareholders sought an order that a fair price at which they ought to purchase the petitioners' shares should be determined at £10.04 per share, making a total price of £78,312. E

The grounds of appeal were that (1) the judge was wrong in law in disregarding the market price of the shares (which, according to the evidence of both valuers was to be fixed by taking the value of the company as a whole, calculating the pro rata price for the shares in question, and discounting the price by 45 per cent.) by reason of the fact that, as the judge decided, the company was a quasi-partnership; (2) the judge failed to take account of the parties' rights as set out in the articles of association of the company which provided the only, or the only fair, basis for valuing the shares, and which basis would have produced a value of £10.04 per share; (3) the judge made a distinction which was valid neither in law nor in logic between the fair value to be ascribed to the petitioners' shares if they wished to sell their shares voluntarily (when a discount was to be applied) and if they wished to G

- A sell their shares because they had been unfairly prejudiced by the way in which the company was run (when no discount was to be applied); (4) if that distinction was correct, the judge was wrong in law in applying it to the present case (i) in the light of the compromise of the petition by the parties without any admission of any oppression or unfair prejudice or any ground entitling the petitioners to present a petition, and (ii) in which the company was a respondent; (5) in failing to apply the discount to the price of the shares in accordance with the evidence of both parties' valuers, and in the circumstances of the instant case, the judge was effectively giving damages to the petitioners, notwithstanding that (a) he had no power so to do in the absence of evidence to the effect that the value of the company had been reduced by any acts of the majority shareholders, (b) the petitioners, by their counsel, at the outset of the hearing before the judge, abandoned any claim for damages and (c) the petition had been compromised without any admission of wrongdoing by the majority shareholders or any of them, and the judge's function merely involved determination of a price; (6) the judge failed to determine a fair price for what was effectively a piece of property in the hands of the petitioners, but rather sought to compensate them for some uncertain and unqualified loss; and (7) in the light of the judge's findings as to the petitioners' conduct, alternatively Mr. Nin's conduct, in relation to an agreement as to the sale of Pipe-Chem (Holdings) Ltd.'s shares in the company, the judge was wrong in failing to apply a discount on the basis that the petitioners had constructively offered their shares, or Mr. Nin had constructively offered his shares, for sale or on the basis that by reason of such conduct, it would be unfair not to apply a discount.

- E By a respondent's notice dated 29 December 1983 the petitioners sought to have the judge's order affirmed on the following additional grounds that (1) on the true construction of the articles of association of the company the value to be attributed to a share of the company was a rateable proportion of the value of the shares of the company as a whole; (2) a valuation of shares pursuant to section 75 of the Act of 1980 should not be less favourable to the petitioners than a valuation pursuant to the articles; (3) the consent order dated 23 November 1981 precluded the majority shareholders from contending that that was not an appropriate case for relief under the section and/or from relying on the petitioners' conduct.

- G The petitioners further contended, by way of cross-appeal, that in addition to £18.25 per share awarded to them they should be awarded interest, or its equivalent, on the total purchase price of £142,350 at the short term investment rate from time to time from 23 November 1981 until payment (or at such other rate and for such other period as the Court of Appeal should think fit) and that the judge was wrong to refuse to make such an award in his further judgment given on 25 November 1983.

- H The grounds of the cross-appeal were that (1) the judge failed to exercise his discretion to award interest, or its equivalent; (2) the judge should have held (in so far as he did not) that the court had power to award interest, or its equivalent, under section 75 of the Act of 1980 and should further have held that it was appropriate to award interest, or its equivalent, at the rate and over the period aforesaid; (3) the judge wrongly characterised the petitioners' claim for interest, or its equivalent, as "damages;" (4) the judge wrongly held that the majority shareholders might not have had sufficient opportunity to deal with the claim for interest, or its equivalent, having regard to (a) the liberty to apply reserved to the parties in the order of 23 November 1981, (b) the fact that the hearing as regards interest was adjourned and that the majority shareholders took the opportunity to adduce evidence on that point either during the trial itself or at the adjourned hearing and (as regards the adjourned hearing) did so; (5) the sum awarded to the petitioners, amounting to £142,350, was in excess of any offer the majority shareholders had made and in particular exceeded the sums of (a) £120,000, which the petitioners had been prepared to accept in satisfaction of all or any claims prior even to the commencement of proceedings herein, and (b) £115,000, offered by the majority shareholders in full settlement prior to the hearings.

The facts are stated in the judgment of Oliver L.J.

Charles Sparrow Q.C. and I. E. Jacob for the appellant majority shareholders. There is, here, an agreement between the parties clothed in the consent order: Purcell v. F. C. Trigell Ltd. [1971] 1 Q.B. 358. Since that order the case has depended on the true interpretation of that agreement which provides directly and simply for the purchase of the minority shares by the majority shareholders. "Purchase" is an ordinary word and courts have consistently given to its ordinary meaning which is "purchase for an ordinary and reasonable price." The courts have assessed reasonable price as a fair price and fair valuation: Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd. v. Eggleton [1983] 1 A.C. 444; In re Westminster Property Group Plc. [1985] 1 W.L.R. 676 and Talbot v. Talbot [1968] Ch. 1.

Nourse J. expressly held [1984] Ch. 419, 426F, that there was no "rule of universal application" that the value of a minority holding had always to be fixed pro rata according to the value of the company's shares as a whole or that the price of a minority holding had always to be discounted. It follows, therefore, that such valuation should be, throughout, an exercise of expert principles that determine value as a fact and the judge was wrong in regarding this issue as "a question of law to be decided by the court:" [1984] Ch. 419, 436A. He was also wrong to regard such valuation as involving a "discounted" price. The valuation for which the majority shareholders contend does not involve "discounting" a price. It is directed to ascertaining a price of the minority shareholding: In re A Company (No. 002567 of 1982) [1983] 1 W.L.R. 927. It is true that the court has power to make an order for compensation. Such an order has to be to compensate for some loss: Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. v. Meyer [1959] A.C. 324. The order, here, is not an order of that nature.

As to valuation, the judge found that the petitioners did not deserve their exclusion from the company's management. It does not necessarily

A follow that the measure of valuation should be valuation of the company's shares as a whole. That approach is inconsistent with ascertaining the actual value of the particular minority. It would amount to an extra element of consideration to the purchase price and is outside the consent order. [Reference was made to In re Jermyn Street Turkish Baths Ltd. [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1194.]

B William Stubbs Q.C. and Charles Purle for the petitioners. Vinelott J.'s order dated 23 November 1981 gave the court a complete discretion as to the criteria to be adopted for determining the price to be paid for the petitioners' shares. There is no justification for reading any limitation into the order. It was, in fact, a consent order and was expressly stated to be made "pursuant to section 75." In order to have jurisdiction to make any order under the section the court had to be satisfied that the petition is well founded: see section 75(3). Thus, the consent by the majority shareholders to the making of the order necessarily involved the admission by them that the petition was well founded, that is to say, there had been unfair prejudice to the interests of the petitioners. The express reference in the order of Vinelott J. to section 75 also confirms the intention that under section 75(4)(d) in determining the price to be paid for the petitioners' shares, the court was to have an unfettered discretion to impose upon the parties whatever settlement the court considered just and equitable. Accordingly, Nourse J. was to fix what he regarded to be a fair price on the basis of a rateable part of the value of the company's total issued share capital. [Reference was made Ward v. James [1966] 1 Q.B. 273.]

E An appellate court will only interfere with the exercise of this discretion if it was plainly wrong. That general principle also applies to appeal on the question of valuation. [Reference was made to Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. v. Meyer [1959] A.C. 324.] Nourse J. was not wrong. He postulated a general rule that where in the case of a quasi-partnership company, a minority shareholder's interest have been unfairly prejudiced by the manner in which the affairs of the company have been conducted by the majority and an order under section 75(4)(d) for the purchase of the minority shareholder's interests is made then the correct course is to fix the price pro rata according to the value of the shares as a whole and without any discount. In the context of section 75 the expression "just and equitable" is very wide: see Lord Wilberforce in In re Westbourne Galleries Ltd. [1973] A.C. 360, 374–375, 379, about the same words in section 222(f) of the Companies Act 1948. The nature of the just and equitable solution to be imposed under section 75(4)(d) of the Act of 1980 cannot depend merely on objective concepts of value. It is appropriate for the court to take into account the underlying nature of the company, the agreed basis on which it was established by the shareholders, and of the conduct of the parties prior to the presentation of the petition. Only by doing this can the court enable a minority shareholder to obtain a proper price for his shareholding: see Lord Cross of Chelsea in In re Westbourne Galleries Ltd. [1973] A.C. 360, 385. Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. v. Meyer [1959] A.C. 324 also supports Nourse J.'s approach.

Nourse J. appears to be of the view [1984] Ch. 419, 431G-H, that, A even outside the context of an order under section 75, the fair price, payable for shares in a quasi-partnership, would normally be a pro rata
one. That view is correct. The pro rata basis is the normal basis provided for in articles of partnership in respect of a voluntary retirement, and is also the basis often adopted in quasi-partnership companies where, as not infrequently happens, the quasi-partners make express contractual provisions. Such an approach is consistent with that B adopted by the House of Lords to quasi-partnerships in In re Westbourne Galleries Ltd. [1973] A.C. 360.

If it is accepted that the court has a very wide discretion under section 75(4)(d) of the Act of 1980 it can fix a higher price than that which, under the relevant company's pre-emption articles, a majority would be required to pay on a transfer notice voluntarily given by the minority. As a general rule however it cannot be right for the price so fixed to be lower than the price payable under the articles. On the true construction of the pre-emption provisions of the company's article 21 any valuation by the auditor must be a pro rata valuation: *Dean v.
Prince* [1954] Ch. 409, 427-428, 430-431. C

On cross-appeal, section 75(3) of the Act of 1980 gives power to the court to grant such relief as it thinks fit. That power is wide enough to cover the award of interest on the purchase price of the shares to the shareholders whose shares are being bought under a court order.
Nourse J. was wrong not to award such interest. [Reference was made to House Property & Investment Co. Ltd. v. James Walker, Goldsmith and Silversmith Ltd. [1948] 1 K.B. 257.] Furthermore, Vinelott J's order, on its true construction, gives liberty to apply in effect for all the things the petitioners complained of, including the question of damage caused to them. D

Sparrow Q.C. in reply. Section 75(3) of the Act of 1980 cannot apply unless the court is satisfied that the petition under the section is well founded. The order of 23 November 1981 was a consent order without any admission on the part of the majority shareholders that the petition was well founded. The subsection, thus, cannot be invoked. The petitioners cannot be entitled to interest for a further reason that there was no principal until the price was fixed by the court and, thus, no interest can be charged on it. E

OLIVER L.J. This is an appeal against an order of Nourse J. made on 28 October 1983 determining, pursuant to an order previously made by Vinelott J. on 23 November 1981, that shares in a private company which were to be purchased by the appellants in this appeal, who were the respondents to a petition, at a price of £18.25 each. I read at this stage only the last three lines of the judge's judgment [1984] Ch. 419,
436: G

"I value the shares of the company as a whole at £547,500. I determine the price at which the respondents are jointly and severally to purchase the shares of the petitioners at £18.25 each." H

The way in which this matter came before the court was this. The company was a private company, Bird Precision Bellows Ltd., which

19-34054-sgj11 Doc 1057-1 Filed 09/11/20 Entered 09/11/20 21:36:04 Page 1

A had been incorporated in 1975. The petitioners, Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Nin, were the holders of some 7,800 shares out of the total issued capital of 30,000 shares. The judge found that the company had been incorporated in the first instance as a sort of quasi-partnership between the petitioners and the respondents who were the majority shareholders, for the exploitation of certain processes with which the principal shareholder, Mr. Bird, was very much concerned and in which he was very expert. The two petitioners were there substantially, I think, in the role of consultants and gave their services to the company in the early stages of its career at very much less than the value which was properly to be attributed to those services.

C It is unnecessary to go in any great depth into the facts. The parties fell out in August 1981. The petitioners were then removed from the board of directors of the company and in October 1981 they presented a petition under section 75 of the Companies Act 1980, in which they claimed that they should be bought out. There was also at that stage, although it was subsequently dropped by amendment, an alternative claim to have the company wound up.

D I think I should read the material parts of section 75, because that section has some bearing on what subsequently occurred:

E “(1) Any member of a company may apply to the court by petition for an order under this section on the ground that the affairs of the company are being or have been conducted in a manner which is unfairly prejudicial to the interests of some part of the members (including at least himself) or that any actual or proposed act or omission of the company (including an act or omission on its behalf) is or would be so prejudicial. . . . (3) If the court is satisfied that a petition under this section is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of. (4) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (3) above, an order under this section may”—and then there are various things which can be done, terminating with—“(d) provide for the purchase of the shares of any members of the company by other members or by the company itself and, in the case of a purchase by the company itself, the reduction of the company’s capital accordingly.”

G What happened in this case was that there appears to have been considerable correspondence between the parties with regard to the possibility that the majority shareholders should buy out the petitioners and there was some disagreement as to how the price of a purchase ought to be arrived at. Ultimately, when the matter came before the Companies Court, as it did on 23 November 1981, it was dealt with by agreement and a consent order (although it is not expressed as such) was made by Vinelott J. on that day. The order recites the petition and the evidence which had been filed on it up to that point, and it went on:

H “This court doth order pursuant to section 75 of the Companies Act 1980 that the respondents”—and then it names them—“do jointly and severally purchase the 3,900”—it is common ground that that was a mistake for 7,800—“shares of the company registered in the name of the petitioners”—and then it names the petitioners—“at such price as the court shall hereafter determine provided that such purchases may subject to the approval of this court be effected by means of a reduction of the share capital of the company. And it is ordered that on the question of the appropriate purchase price for the said shares the evidence of the petitioners be filed within 14 days of the date of this order the evidence of the respondents be filed within 21 days thereafter discovery by exchange of lists do take place on or before 11 January 1982 with inspection within 14 days thereafter and exchange of reports by experts within 28 days after inspection.”

There is a paragraph as regards costs, which I need not read, which provides in effect that the respondents, the majority shareholders, should pay the petitioners’ costs of the petition down to and including the foot of the order. Then there is a final paragraph:

C

“Liberty to all parties to apply (1) for further and better particulars of the allegations in the affidavits (2) for directions as to the payment of the purchase price and interest if appropriate and (3) generally.”

D

Following that order there was a substantial amount of evidence filed; experts were engaged and their reports were, as I understand it, duly exchanged and the matter came on for hearing before Nourse J. It appears to have proceeded, up to the date of the hearing before Vinelott J. and at least for a month or so thereafter, with commendable celerity, but thereafter it adopted a somewhat molasses-like speed, and it finally terminated in the matter coming before the court on 25 November 1983. The judge, having considered all the evidence and the reports of the valuers, concluded in the way which I have read [1984] Ch. 419, 436. The basis of the judge’s valuation is to be found in two passages from the judgment, at pp. 429 and 430: and there is a further passage at p. 431. The judge said, at pp. 429–430:

E

“Although both sections 210”—which of course was the predecessor of section 75—“and 75 are silent on the point, it is axiomatic that a price fixed by the court must be fair. While that which is fair may often be generally predicated in regard to matters of common occurrence, it can never be conclusively judged in regard to a particular case until the facts are known. The general observations which I will presently attempt in relation to a valuation of shares by the court under section 75 are therefore subject to that important reservation. Broadly speaking, shares in a small private company are acquired either by allotment on its incorporation or by transfer or devolution at some later date. In the first category it is a matter of common occurrence for a company to be incorporated in order to acquire an existing business or to start a new one, and in either event for it to be a vehicle for the conduct of a business carried on by two or more shareholders which they could, had they wished, have carried on in partnership together. Although it has been pointed out on the high authority to which I will soon refer that the

- 141
- A description may be confusing, it is often convenient and it is certainly usual to describe that kind of company as a quasi-partnership. In the second category, irrespective of the nature of the company, it is a matter of common occurrence for a shareholder to acquire shares from another at a price which is discounted because they represent a minority holding. It seems to me that some general observations can usefully be made in regard to each of these examples.”

Nourse J. then referred to the well known passage from the speech of Lord Wilberforce in In re Westbourne Galleries Ltd. [1973] A.C. 360, 379, and went on:

- C “His Lordship, having observed that it is not enough that the company is a small one, or a private company, identified three typical elements, one, or probably more, of which will characterise the company as a quasi-partnership. They are, first, an association formed or continued on the basis of a personal relationship involving mutual confidence; secondly, an agreement or understanding that all or some of the shareholders shall participate in the conduct of the business; and, thirdly, restrictions on share transfers. No doubt these three elements are the most familiar, and perhaps the most important, but they were not intended to be exhaustive. In my view there may be other typical and important elements, in particular the provision of capital by all or some of the participants.”

Next comes a passage which I think has assumed some importance in the argument, so perhaps it is worth reading:

- E “I would expect that in a majority of cases where purchase orders are made under section 75 in relation to quasi-partnerships the vendor is unwilling in the sense that the sale has been forced upon him. Usually he will be a minority shareholder whose interests have been unfairly prejudiced by the manner in which the affairs of the company have been conducted by the majority. On the assumption that the unfair prejudice has made it no longer tolerable for him to retain his interest in the company, a sale of his shares will invariably be his only practical way out short of a winding up. In that kind of case it seems to me that it would not merely not be fair, but most unfair, that he should be bought out on the fictional basis applicable to a free election to sell his shares in accordance with the company’s articles of association, or indeed on any other basis which involved a discounted price. In my judgment the correct course would be to fix the price pro rata according to the value of the shares as a whole and without any discount, as being the only fair method of compensating an unwilling vendor of the equivalent of a partnership share. Equally, if the order provided, as it did in In re Jermyn Street Turkish Baths Ltd. [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1194, for the purchase of the shares of the delinquent majority, it would not merely not be fair, but most unfair, that they should receive a price which involved an element of premium.”

Then, Nourse J. said, at p. 431:

[1986]

“Next, I must consider the example from the second category of cases in which, broadly speaking, shares in a small private company are acquired. It is not of direct relevance for present purposes, but I mention it briefly in order finally to refute the suggestion that there is any rule of universal application to questions of this kind. In the case of the shareholder who acquires shares from another at a price which is discounted because they represent a minority it is to my mind self-evident that there cannot be any universal or even a general rule that he should be bought out under section 75 on a more favourable basis, even in a case where his predecessor has been a quasi-partner in a quasi-partnership. He might himself have acquired the shares purely for investment and played no part in the affairs of the company. In that event it might well be fair—I do not know—that he should be bought out on the same basis as he himself had bought, even though his interests had been unfairly prejudiced in the meantime. A fortiori, there could be no universal or even a general rule in a case where the company had never been a quasi-partnership in the first place.”

C

Nourse J. said, in summary, that there is no general rule and then comes the passage to which particular criticism has been directed:

D

“On the other hand, there is a general rule in a case where the company is at the material time a quasi-partnership and the purchase order is made in respect of the shares of a quasi-partner. Although I have taken the case where there has in fact been unfairly prejudicial conduct on the part of the majority as being the state of affairs most likely to result in a purchase order, I am of the opinion that the same consequences ought usually to follow in a case like the present where there has been an agreement for the price to be determined by the court without any admission as to such conduct. It seems clear to me that, even without such conduct, that is, in general, the fair basis of valuation in a quasi-partnership case, and that it should be applied in this case unless the respondents have established that the petitioners acted in such a way as to deserve their exclusion from the company.”

F

The judge went on to conclude that the petitioners had not in fact deserved their exclusion on the facts of this case.

I have read those passages because they serve to indicate the approach of the judge to the problem with which he was confronted under the terms of the order. That approach has been criticised by Mr. Sparrow on two grounds: first of all, on the general ground that it was a wrong order in any event, or a wrong approach in any event, under section 75; and, secondly, on the ground that it was a wrong order, or a wrong approach, having regard to the specific terms of the consent order in this case which, as Mr. Sparrow rightly says, has to be looked at as a contract between the parties agreeing to the consent order.

G

What Mr. Sparrow suggests is this. I take the two points which he makes in inverse order, that is to say, I am taking his second point first. He suggests that an order made under section 75(4) is simply an order for a purchase, without any discretion in the court to give directions

H

- A which might have the effect of increasing or reducing the value of the shares in the open market, as shares in a private company. If the shares with which the purchase order is concerned are a majority holding, they are to be valued as such; if they are a minority holding they are to be valued as such, and in his submission the court is not entitled to look behind the company and to reflect, in the order for purchase or for sale, the actual relationship between the parties. According to this approach,
- B any agreement which has been made between the parties as to the basis upon which they were to participate in the company's affairs, or as to the way in which the company's affairs were to be conducted, any contribution which the petitioner may have made to the company's success, any absence of any contribution at all by the respondent, apart from the mere fact of his shareholding, is to be ignored. The court, in
- C other words, is to be rigidly restricted, if it is to make an order under section 75(4)(d) at all, to making an order for a purchase at a market price of the holding being purchased, to be arrived at only by the ordinary valuation principles, which will take into account the proportionate size of the holding in relation to the issued capital as a whole and to the control of the company.

- D For my part I find myself quite unable to accept this submission. It seems to me that the whole framework of the section, and of such of the authorities as we have seen, which seem to me to support this, is to confer on the court a very wide discretion to do what is considered fair and equitable in all the circumstances of the case, in order to put right and cure for the future the unfair prejudice which the petitioner has suffered at the hands of the other shareholders of the company; and I
- E find myself quite unable to accept that that discretion in some way stops short when it comes to the terms of the order for purchase in the manner in which the price is to be assessed. It has been pointed out, and I mention it again, that section 75(4) is merely a collection of possible methods of giving effect to section 75(3), and it is expressed to be without prejudice to the generality of subsection (3), which gives the court a very wide discretion as to the granting of relief in general terms
- F in respect of the matters of which complaint has been made.

We have been referred to the speech of Lord Cross of Chelsea in In re Westbourne Galleries Ltd. [1973] A.C. 360, 385, where he said in a very short passage, to which Mr. Stubbs drew attention:

- G "What the minority shareholder in cases of this sort really wants is not to have the company wound up—which may prove an unsatisfactory remedy—but to be paid a proper price for his shareholding."

- H It is on the question of a "proper" price that the parties here divide. So, Mr. Sparrow's second submission, which I have dealt with first, I find myself quite unable to accept. In my judgment, the "proper" price is the price which the court in its discretion determines to be proper having regard to all the circumstances of the case.

I come now to Mr. Sparrow's first submission, namely, that as a matter of interpretation of the order which, as he says and as I mention again, is a consent order, there is to be implied a contractual obligation that the shares should be purchased at the market value as a minority holding. The basis for this submission is that the consequence which I have outlined is one which flowed simply from the use in the order of the word "purchase;" and it is said that "purchase" ordinarily means purchase at market value, and therefore one reads into the order the words "a purchase at market value to be determined by the court." I confess that I am entirely unable to see why that should be. In my judgment, "purchase" ordinarily means no more than purchase for a money consideration; what that consideration is is at large and the order is one which only makes sense, and indeed can only be given any operative life, if the purchase price is fixed in the exercise of the full discretion vested in the court by section 75. The court has no jurisdiction, as it seems to me, to act as a sort of arbitrator between experts, and if Vinelott J. had been told that that was what was intended, and that all that was intended was simply that there should be submitted to the court the decision of the issue of what was the market value of the petitioners' holding, I confess that I doubt very much whether he would have made the order in that form, or indeed would have considered that he had any jurisdiction to do so.

C

Essentially what is suggested is that in assessing the price Nourse J. was wrong to consider the evidence which had been filed in support of the petition, and indeed subsequently, or to enter into any consideration of the merits of the case, the inception of the relationships between the parties and so on. I would find that a difficult submission to accept in any event, but the submission might have had more force, I think, if, as might at first be supposed from the terms of the order, the court was simply being asked to embark on an inquiry into the value of the shares on the assumption that it had been conceded in some unspecified way that the petitioners had been subjected to unfair prejudice and that it was therefore irrelevant to consider the manner in which they had in fact been unfairly prejudiced.

But it is the majority shareholders' own case, and it was so put to the judge, that no such admission had in fact been made. As I have pointed out, the terms of section 75(3) are perfectly clear. They simply provide that if the court is satisfied that a petition under this section is well founded, it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of. If of course it is not so satisfied, then it has no jurisdiction to give the relief which is referred to in section 75(3) or in section 75(4). As it seems to me, this only has to be read for it to be seen straight away that the court, in making a valuation of the shares, can only do so if it is satisfied that the petition is well founded.

F
G

The judge therefore had to go into these questions, because it was expressly said that there was no admission of any unfair prejudice, and so the judge had to go into the question of whether there had been unfair prejudice to the petitioners and how it had taken place, in order to see whether he had any jurisdiction at all to embark on the inquiry which he was invited to undertake. The judge referred to the question of whether he ought to inquire into these matters as follows [1984] Ch. 419, 426:

Oliver L.J.
A “The first question which arose was whether the respondents, by consenting to the order of 23 November 1981 and, I suppose, by agreeing to pay the petitioners’ costs to date, had effectively admitted that they had been conducting the affairs of the company in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the petitioners as members. There was some disagreement between counsel as to what was or was not said on the respondents’ side at the hearing before
B Vinelott J., but on what I saw and heard I was satisfied that there had been no admission to that effect. The respondents had merely agreed to buy out the petitioners at a price to be determined by the court. Assuming that unfair prejudice might sometimes affect the price which ought to be paid for the shares, I was nevertheless unable to see how, in the absence of some explicit statement of the C respondents’ position, they could be taken to have made any admission as to that matter.”

He went on, at p. 427:

D “It was unfortunate that the hopes and expectations of both sides for a shorter hearing should have been disappointed, but that was made inevitable by my decision on the first of the preliminary points and by the positions which the parties adopted in regard to the second and third. I myself suggested certain ways in which the hearing might be shortened by agreement, but without success. In future, parties who wish to limit the issues or the evidence in a case of this kind would be well advised to go further than a mere agreement that the price of the shares shall be determined by the

Then he said, at p. 434:

F “I have to say that I regard the evidence of both Mr. Bird and Mr. Rowden on the bribery question as having been extremely unsatisfactory. If it had been necessary for me to make any finding on that question, I would have rejected their evidence in its entirety and accepted that of Mr. Nin and Mr. Armstrong. Having said that, I do not think that it is either necessary or desirable that I should go into this or any of the many other matters which were made the subject of allegations and counter allegations between the parties, both at the time and in evidence in this court. Having considered all the material evidence, I am satisfied that the exclusion of Mr.
G Armstrong and Mr. Nin was wrongful and that in that and certain other respects into which I need not go, the affairs of the company were conducted in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the interests of them and the other petitioners as members. That finding, although strictly speaking unnecessary on the view which I take of the case, is one which I feel that I ought to make, if only in fairness to Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Nin and after a full and exhaustive investigation
H of the merits.”

If I have any criticism of the judge’s judgment, it is only that he based his inquiry on the supposition that the merits might affect only the question of the basis of the valuation of the shares, as indeed in my judgment they clearly can. But it was, I think, much more fundamental than that. Unless unfair prejudice was proved, the court was simply being asked to undertake a sort of arbitration in vacuo, which it had no jurisdiction to do. It seems to me quite unarguable that the judge, having perforce considered the merits and having heard evidence from the parties, should be expected, or indeed required, by the terms of this order, then to put that entirely out of his mind when it came to the question of the terms of the purchase.

141

We have been referred to a number of authorities, first of all to a decision of Pennycuik J. in In re Jermyn Street Turkish Baths Ltd. [1970] 1 W.L.R. 1194, 1208, and I read an extract from his judgment:

“Section 210 gives the court an unlimited judicial discretion to make such order as it thinks fit with a view to bringing to an end the matters complained of, including an order for buying out one faction by the other. It is not disputed on behalf of the respondents that in prescribing the basis on which the price of such a sale is to be calculated the court can in effect provide compensation for whatever injury has been inflicted by the oppressors.”

C

In Scottish Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd. v. Meyer [1959] A.C. 324, 369, Lord Denning said:

D

“One of the most useful orders mentioned in the section—which will enable the court to do justice to the injured shareholders—is to order the oppressor to buy their shares at a fair price: and a fair price would be, I think, the value which the shares would have had at the date of the petition, if there had been no oppression. Once the oppressor has bought the shares, the company can survive. It can continue to operate. That is a matter for him. It is, no doubt, true that an order of this kind gives to the oppressed shareholders what is in effect money compensation for the injury done to them: but I see no objection to this. The section gives a large discretion to the court and it is well exercised in making an oppressor make compensation to those who have suffered at his hands.”

F

What I think is being suggested here is that these citations in some way support the arguments of the majority shareholders, because it is said that what in effect the judge was seeking to do was to compensate the oppressed shareholders, and that that was not within the terms of the order. I do not read what the judge did as doing that at all. Speaking for myself, I have been quite unable to see why these two authorities should be supposed to support the arguments which the majority shareholders have advanced. They seem to me to be entirely against them because, as it seems to me, they indicate as clearly as can be the wide discretion which the court has in directing the basis on which shares should be valued for the purpose of a purchase ordered under this section. It may be true that it can be compensatory, but what the court is required to do, in the exercise of its very wide discretion, is that which is just and equitable between the parties.

G
H

It does not seem to me in any event that the matter ends simply with the mere fact that the order, to be effective as an order under section 75

19-34054-sgj11 Doc 1057-1 Filed 09/11/20 Entered 09/11/20 21:36:04 Page 1

A necessarily has to invoke the discretionary jurisdiction of the court, because there are in fact, as it seems to me, positive pointers in the order that that is exactly what was intended.

B Going back to the terms of the order, it starts with the words “this court doth order pursuant to section 75 of the Companies Act 1980.” I have already said that I do not for a moment think that the mere use of the word “purchase” which then follows—“that the respondents . . . do jointly and severally purchase”—contains any implication at all that they should purchase necessarily at market value. It seems to me that quite the contrary is imported by the words “pursuant to section 75.” What they are doing is purchasing pursuant to section 75, and it is pursuant to that section that the court is to determine price. That brings in, as it seems to me, by necessary implication the general discretion of the court to do what is fair and equitable.

C Secondly, one wonders, if all that was being asked for was an order for purchase at market price, what the purpose was, as Mr. Stubbs says, of involving the court in the matter at all. A market price could quite easily be determined outside the court by arbitration, or by submitting the matter to two valuers and their umpire. It seems to me to be quite evident from the first paragraph of the order that what was intended was that the matter should be approached in the full sense as an application under section 75 of the Act, and that the court was expected, in arriving at the price to be paid, to take into account all the circumstances of the case.

D That, as it seems to me, is underlined by the next part of the order, where it goes on with the question of the “appropriate” purchase price for the shares, and proceeds with directions as to evidence. The evidence is quite clearly intended to be general evidence with regard to all the circumstances—there are provisions for discovery. So far as the accountancy aspect is concerned, that is dealt with by the last words of this section of the order: “and exchange of reports by experts within 28 days after inspection.” So quite clearly, as it seems to me, the whole concept of the order was that there would be a full investigation into the circumstances, with evidence filed on both sides, and, indeed, that is what took place.

F Finally we come to the liberty to apply:

G “Liberty to all parties to apply (1) for further and better particulars of the allegations in the affidavits (2) for directions as to the payment of the purchase price and interest if appropriate and (3) generally.”

So the parties were to have liberty to apply for further and better particulars, and again it seems to me that that could only be on the footing that the judge was to inquire fully into the circumstances of the case and into the affidavits that were directed to be filed.

H Speaking for myself, I am quite satisfied, as a matter of construction of the terms of the order, that the judge was entitled to exercise in full his discretion under section 75(3) and (4). Those subsections give him a very wide discretion, and I am quite satisfied that no ground has been shown for interference by this court with the actual manner in which the judge in fact exercised the discretion which was vested in him by the section, and by which he concluded that this was a quasi-partnership case, and that being so it would be appropriate that the shares of the company should be valued as a whole and that the petitioners should then simply be paid the proportionate part of that value which was represented by their shareholding, without there being made a discount for the fact that this was a minority shareholding.

A

In my judgment, the judge was perfectly entitled to arrive at the conclusion at which he did. I think that I myself, certainly on a reading of the judgment and on such material as we have had, would not have come to any other conclusion, and I am fortified in the view that I have taken by an additional point which Mr. Stubbs takes on the articles of association of the company. This company, as one might expect, had articles of association which contained a pre-emption provision in the ordinary form. It was one which had this perhaps unusual feature, that it had a specific provision relating to the way in which a transfer notice was to be treated. I can read the relevant paragraphs very simply; it is the usual form of article which enables shares to be transferred to other members, or to members of their family, and then provides that apart from that no share shall be transferred until the pre-emption rights have been exhausted. Article 21(c) provides:

D

“Except where the transfer is made pursuant to subarticle (a) hereof, the person proposing to transfer any share (hereinafter called ‘the proposing transferor’) shall give notice in writing (hereinafter called ‘the transfer notice’) to the company that he desires to transfer the same, and such notice shall specify the sum he fixes as the fair value, and shall constitute the company his agent for the sale of the share to any member of the company (or to any person selected by the directors as one whom it is desirable in the interests of the company to admit to membership) at the price so fixed or, at the option of the purchaser, at the fair value to be fixed by the auditor in accordance with subarticle (e) of this article.”

E

Then there is this important sentence: “The transfer notice may include two or more shares, and in such case shall operate as if it were a separate notice in respect of each.” In paragraph (e) we have the valuation:

F

“In case any difference arises between the proposing transferor and the purchaser as to the fair value of a share the auditor shall, on the application of either party, certify in writing the sum which in his opinion is the fair value, and such sum shall be deemed to be the fair value, and in so certifying the auditor shall be considered to be acting as an expert and not as an arbitrator; and accordingly the Arbitration Act 1950 shall not apply.”

G

Mr. Stubbs has referred us to two passages in Dean v. Prince [1954] Ch. 409. Denning L.J. said, at pp. 427-428:

H

“The right to control the company. Harman J. said that the auditor should have taken into account the fact that the 140 shares were a majority holding and would give a purchaser the right to control the

141
A company. I do not think that the auditor was bound to take that fact into account. Test it this way: Supposing it had been Prince who had died, leaving only 30 shares. Those 30 shares, being a minority holding, would fetch nothing in the open market. But does that mean that the other directors would be entitled to take his shares for nothing? Surely not. No matter which director it was who happened to die, his widow should be entitled to the same price per share, irrespective of whether her husband's holding was large or small. It seems to me that the fair thing to do would be to take the whole 200 shares of the company and see what they were worth, and then pay the widow a sum appropriate to her husband's holding. At any rate if the auditor was of opinion that that was a fair method, no one can say that he was wrong. The right way to see what the whole 200 shares were worth, would be to see what the business itself was worth: and that is what the auditor proceeded to do."

Wynn-Parry J. refers to a particular article in the company's articles in these terms, at pp. 430-431:

D "the fair value shall be the auditor's valuation of the current worth of the company's shares.' That language appears to me to preclude the auditor from placing any extra value on a block of shares because it constitutes, or will in the hands of the particular transferee constitute, a controlling interest."

E It is of course true that in the instant case the articles did not contain that rather important provision; but they did have this extraordinary provision for each share to be treated separately, as if it had been comprised in a separate transfer notice. As I have said, one does not have an express provision to value the company's shares as a whole, but one has an express provision that, if a transfer notice is given in respect of more than one share, it is to be treated as a separate notice in respect of each. So the valuer has, theoretically, to go through the process of ascertaining the value separately in relation to each share concerned, and I am bound to say that it is difficult to see then how there could be any room for any account to be taken of whether the shares comprised in a transfer notice as a whole formed a minority or a majority holding. Without expressing any concluded view on the matter, I am very much inclined to the view that the valuation of a share under the pre-emption articles in this case ought to be on the same basis as that held by this court to be appropriate in Dean v. Prince [1954] Ch. 409, and that if the valuer was unwise enough to give his reasons for valuation, and to indicate that in those reasons he had taken into account the fact that all the shares which were being offered by all the deemed separate transfer notices together constituted a majority or minority holding, I think his valuation could be upset. But, as I say, it is unnecessary to express any concluded view on the matter, because in a sense this is a makeweight submission. If it is right it would, to say the least, have a very odd result if the effect of an order designed to enable the court to do what is just and equitable between the parties under section 75 should result in a minority holding being bought out at a price which is less than that which it would be expected to achieve on a sale under the articles of association. A

[1986]

For all the reasons I have given, therefore, I have no hesitation in dismissing the appeal.

I turn now to the petitioners' cross-appeal, which arises in this way. Under the last paragraph of the order there was liberty to apply in relation to interest and, the judge having determined the price at which the shares were to be bought out, application was then made for an award of interest on the amount of the purchase price when ascertained, as from a date which I think was not actually specified at that time, because argument then proceeded as to whether in principle interest could or could not be awarded. That argument was adjourned and it came before the judge again on 25 November 1983, when he determined that there could be no award of interest on the purchase money. B C

The petitioners challenge that, and they seek an order that interest should be paid up to 9 December 1983. There was, as the result of a hearing before the judge, an agreed order as to the way in which, subject to this appeal, the purchase was to be carried into effect, and that provided for interest; no question of interest arises after 9 December 1983. But by their notice of cross-appeal the petitioners asked for interest, either from 31 August 1980 or, if that is rejected, from the date of the presentation of the petition, which was 12 October 1981; or, if that is rejected, from the date of the judge's order; or again, if that be wrong, from Vinelott J.'s order, and if that be wrong, from 7 August 1981, when the petitioners were removed from the board. D

The judge rejected the claim on two grounds. First of all it was argued that, although it was conceded, I think, that there was no orthodox ground for payment of interest, nevertheless interest could be paid under the general discretion which is contained in section 75(3), in effect as a means of awarding damages in respect of matters which had occurred in the course of the carrying on of the company's business constituting the unfair prejudice. The judge rejected that, saying [1984] Ch. 419, 437: E F

"I have never heard of interest being payable before there is an obligation to pay principal. On analysis, it appears that what Mr. Purle is really saying is that the court has power under section 75(3) to award something equivalent to interest. That must, I think, be damages for loss of the use of the purchase moneys during a period when they ought to have been in hand. As will appear, the view which I take of this case makes it unnecessary for me to express a view on that point and I do not do so." G

He then went on to what was the real ground of his decision:

"In the present case there was an agreement that the respondents should buy out the petitioners on a certain basis, i.e., at such price as the court should determine. That price was held to be a sum equivalent to the fair value of the shares. There was no agreement that the price should bear interest from some date prior to its determination or, indeed, from any date. An agreed H

A liberty to apply for directions as to the payment of interest, if appropriate, is not an agreement that the price should bear interest. There was no agreement that the petitioners should receive damages for loss of the use of the purchase moneys. Moreover, even if, which I emphatically refute, such an agreement could be implied, it is far too late to make that claim. A claim for damages, even of that limited character, would have entitled the respondents to adduce evidence and make submissions to the effect that the petitioners' loss was by no means what it might have seemed. Mr. Purle says that the order has not yet been drawn up. That may be so, but it is no reason for allowing the petitioners to re-open the trial under the guise of a claim for interest. I am of the clear opinion that there is no case for interest, or so-called interest, before judgment in the present case, and I therefore do not propose to enter into any questions of date or rate."

D Mr. Stubbs, on behalf of the petitioners, has submitted that the true construction of the order, in giving liberty to apply for interest, is giving liberty to apply on the hearing before the judge, in effect for damages for all the things of which the petitioners complain and that therefore the judge was wrong in refusing to entertain, as he did, the claim as being in effect a sort of disguised claim for damages.

E I find myself quite unable to accept that submission. It seems to me as plain as can be that the liberty to apply for directions as to payment of interest on the purchase price was simply inserted for the purpose of enabling the court, when it fixed the terms of the purchase, to provide, if the purchase price was not paid, for interest to be paid on it as from a certain date. It seems to me that the judge was perfectly right in refusing to allow any question to be ventilated as to the payment of interest, as it were, in lieu of damages. I would therefore dismiss the cross-appeal.

F So in my judgment the appeal fails, and so does the cross-appeal.

PURCHAS L.J. I agree that this appeal should be dismissed. Out of respect to the able argument of Mr. Sparrow, I propose to add a few words of my own.

G The short issue raised is whether, in valuing the shares that were to be transferred, the valuer should apply a discount in recognition of the fact that the holdings being transferred were minority holdings in the company. The starting point is an order made by Vinelott J. on 23 November 1981. The material parts of that order have already been cited by Oliver L.J., but I propose for the sake of convenience to repeat the critical words only:

H "This court doth order pursuant to section 75 of the Companies Act 1980 that the respondents"—who are there named—"do jointly and severally purchase the [7,800 shares] of the company registered in the name of the petitioners . . . at such price as the court shall hereafter determine . . ."

19-34054-sqj11 Doc 1057-1 Filed 09/11/20 Entered 09/11/20 21:36:04 Page 141

Mr. Sparrow submits that the phrase "at such price as the court shall hereafter determine" can only mean the price, being the fair market price, which would have been agreed between a willing buyer and a willing seller in the open market, including the discount which stems from the very nature of the holding being sold. It must ignore the concept of the authority to which Oliver L.J. has already referred in Dean v. Prince [1954] Ch. 409.

A

It would also exclude the basis upon which the powers under section 75 of the Act of 1980 arise as defined in subsection (1), and further would exclude the whole basis upon which the parties came together in the commercial enterprise and upon which the petitioners accepted their respective minority shareholdings. The judge found that the basis of this was fairly described as a "quasi-partnership" as considered in the leading case, In re Westbourne Galleries Ltd. [1973] A.C. 360 and in particular in the part of the speech of Lord Wilberforce, at p. 379.

C

Mr. Sparrow submits that to do otherwise would in effect be to award compensation either in respect of the prejudicial conduct which was the basis, albeit not admitted by the majority shareholders, of the jurisdiction under section 75, and/or the determination of the quasi-partnership; that is, the loss of the continuing rights, if they were of any value, attributable to the minority shareholders for the loss of their future participation.

D

Mr. Sparrow submitted that to grant such an extra element of consideration to the purchase price would therefore be outside the terms of the consent order itself. Put another way, his submission was that under the terms of that consent order the function of the judge, or the court, envisaged in the future by that order, would be merely one of an arbitrator, namely, to determine the quantum of the price regardless of the other aspects which would be considered by the court were it acting in the ordinary way under the provisions of section 75 of the Act.

E

I think Mr. Sparrow conceded that had this petition been fought through, rather than concluded, partly at least, by consent under the provisions of section 75, and particularly subsection (3), the relief ordered by the court in its discretion could have been such as to effect the transfer of shares as a consideration valued on a pro rata distribution of the whole value of the company. But whether he made that concession or not, I am for my part quite unable to make the distinction which Mr. Sparrow attempted to import into the existence of the consent order in the terms restricting the power of the court to section 75(4) as Mr. Sparrow would interpret that section; that is, the purchase of the shares at a market value.

F

G

I agree with all that has been said by Oliver L.J., that the effect of section 75(4) is merely to expand the wide powers granted under section 75(3), and not in any way to restrict them. Moreover, the use of the expression in the consent order "the purchase of the shares" is not, in my judgment, intended in any way to restrict the powers otherwise enjoyed by the court. If it were, as Mr. Stubbs has submitted and as Oliver L.J. has already commented, the purpose of the order and the purpose of the future involvement of the court would be negated.

H

I Ch. In re Bird Precision Ltd (C.A.) Purchas L.J.

A In my judgment, the proper interpretation of this order importing, as it does, the consent between the parties was to leave in the discretion of the court the full jurisdiction which it would have enjoyed had the matter been fought, and the effect of the consent order was merely to exclude the earlier part of the process under section 75 and to select the means by which the court, being certainly hypothetically satisfied of the sound basis of the petition for this purpose—and of course, that is the only basis upon which the court could act—that it would chose the particular course provided by section 75(4)(d) to give relief in the terms of section 75(3) in respect of the matters complained of in the petition.

B For those reasons, in my judgment, the judge was right to accept the submission that the powers were unfettered and that, therefore, taking into account the quasi-partnership nature of the interests held by the petitioners in this particular instance, the method of valuation should be on a pro rata basis.

C For these reasons and those already given by Oliver L.J., I agree that this appeal should be dismissed.

I also agree that, so far as the cross-appeal is concerned, that also should be dismissed. I echo only the words of the judge [1984] Ch. 419, 437:

D “The first point to be made is that in a normal section 75 case, where there has been no agreement of any kind, I cannot see how there can be any question of interest being payable before a purchase order is made.”

and the order is not complete in this case until the judgment of the court, which is the judgment at present under appeal.

E The reliance placed by Mr. Stubbs on the final paragraph of the order made by Vinelott J., in my judgment, takes his submission no further. The liberty to apply which was given to all parties was clearly for the further carrying out of the order, and certainly could not form the basis of a jurisdiction, or a consent, on the part of the parties that the court should proceed to calculate an award of interest as a matter of general jurisdiction.

F For those reasons I also agree that the cross-appeal should be dismissed.

Minority oppression – Appropriate parties to the petition – Jurisdiction of the court to make an order against a non-member – Companies Act 1985, ss 459, 461.

The petitioner was a preference shareholder in the respondent company. The petitioner alleged that the affairs of the company had been conducted in a manner which was unfairly prejudicial to its interest as a member. Broadly it claimed that the company's business had been transferred to Newco at a gross undervalue. Initially there were six respondents to the petition. As a result of discovery, it was shown that the business of Newco had been transferred to Star Vacations Ltd (Star) which in turn had transferred it to Owners Abroad Group plc (OAG). In the present proceedings leave was sought to add OAG as respondents to the petition. The relief sought was inter alia that OAG should with the other respondents purchase the shares of the petitioner. The question before the court was twofold: (a) whether the court had jurisdiction to join OAG in that OAG was not a member of the company and was not alleged to be a wrongdoer (the jurisdiction point), and (b) if the court did have such jurisdiction, whether this was an appropriate case in which it should exercise it to join Newco (the discretion point).

Held – As regards the jurisdiction point, the court had jurisdiction and as regards the discretion point, this was not an appropriate case in which the jurisdiction should be exercised.

(1) The language of ss 459 and 461 conferred the widest jurisdiction on the court as regards parties against whom relief could be sought. In an appropriate case, relief can be sought against a non-member, or against a person not involved in the conduct complained of (at least if that person could be affected by the relief sought), and in appropriate cases a person could be made a respondent even though no relief was sought against that person. However, the court could strike out a petition, even against a person who had been involved in the allegedly unfairly prejudicial conduct, if no remedy was sought against that person. There may be circumstances where the prospects of an order being made were perfectly hopeless and hence where it would be an abusive use of the process to require the respondent to remain as such or to be added as such.

(2) On the facts, no court would make the buy-out order sought against OAG and accordingly the court would not exercise its discretion to join OAG as a respondent.

5 May 1994. The following judgment was delivered.

- f LINDSAY J. I have before me an application which, amongst other issues, raises questions as to the boundaries of ss 459 and 461 of the Companies Act 1985. A petitioner under a s 459 petition seeks here to amend its petition to add a respondent and to include amongst the relief sought an order against that new respondent, Owners Abroad Group Plc (OAG). OAG has never been a shareholder in, nor a director or manager or person responsible for the conduct of, the company whose affairs are said to have been conducted in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the interest of the petitioner. Nor is OAG
- g alleged to be a wrongdoer. None the less, if the relief claimed were to be granted, OAG would become obliged, with others, to buy from the petitioner the petitioner's shares in that company. Does s 459 confer a jurisdiction so broad that such an order could be made against such a respondent? Even if it does, should leave for such joinder and amendment here be granted?
- h I shall first outline the position as it is before the amendment which is sought. On 30 August 1991, Supreme Travel Ltd, a company incorporated in Jersey (the petitioner) presented a petition to the Companies Court under s 459 of the Companies Act 1985 in the matter of Little Olympian Each-Ways Ltd (the company). The company was incorporated under the Companies Act 1948 and its registered office is in London. The petitioner describes itself
- i in the petition as holding 1,017,472 preference shares in the capital of the company and as having held the same for more than the necessary six months.

Counsel for Highland Capital Management, L.P.

The original petition was relatively short – some nine pages. It described the only shareholders of ordinary shares in the company as being Olympic Vacations Ltd (OVL) (51%) and a Mr George Michalias (49%) and said that the company and OVL were members of a group of companies known as the Olympic Holidays Group, of which the ultimate holding company was said to be Star Vacation Ltd (Star), a company incorporated in Cyprus. The directors of the company were described as being Mr Pylotis, Mr Michalias and Mr Christoforou, each of whom was a director of OVL. It is not necessary for me to set out, even in summary, all the matters complained of in the original petition but, in outline, one material complaint ran as follows:

(1) on 24 November 1990 2,448,000 preference shares in the company were transferred to a company referred to as Newco, which was owned by Star and Mr Christoforou;

(2) on 21 March 1991 at an extraordinary general meeting of the company it was purportedly approved that the business and goodwill of the company should be transferred to Newco in return for which Newco would take over the company's liabilities and would be obliged to pay the company £1;

(3) that resolution was implemented on 30 April 1991;

(4) the company was thereafter left as a shell. It ceased to trade;

(5) the consideration given by Newco was grossly inadequate;

(6) there were breaches of pre-emption provisions which should have operated in the petitioner's favour as a holder of existing preference shares and breaches, too, of provisions requiring notice to have been given to the petitioner of the extraordinary general meeting;

(7) those and other matters led to an allegation that the affairs of the company had been conducted in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the interests of the petitioner.

The petition was intended to be served on the company itself, on OVL, on the three individuals I have mentioned – Mr Michalias, Mr Pylotis and Mr Christoforou (referred to as the trio) and also on Olympic Holdings Ltd, the name assumed by Newco, but which I shall continue to call Newco.

In due course affidavits were sworn in support of and in opposition to the petition and there was a very substantial discovery. The story emerging from this mass of paper was, the petitioner began to see, a story going well beyond the bare bones of the original petition. For various reasons, counsel originally instructed by the petitioner could not continue with their case and a new team, Mr Potts QC and Mr Mabb were instructed in their place to consider the mass of new information.

In the result, on 1 March 1994 a summons was issued by the petitioner addressed to the six persons on whom the original petition had been served (whom I shall call together the original respondents), who appear before me by Mr Snowden. The summons asks, inter alia, that the petitioner should have leave to amend the petition by adding Star as a seventh respondent and OAG as eighth respondent. Leave is sought for a comprehensive amendment to the petition. The proposed amended petition is now a creature of some 94 pages in length. Again, I do not need to summarise all of it but the story now alleged (so far as material for immediate purposes) alleges far more complicated wrongdoings than the relatively simple sale of the company's assets to Newco for what was said to be the grossly inadequate consideration of £1 plus assumption by Newco of the company's liability as alleged in the original petition. In broadest outline the most material allegations in the amended petition (as I shall call it for convenience, although leave to amend is not yet given and is resisted) are as follows:

a (i) the company of whom the trio were directors sold the business and goodwill of the company for a grossly inadequate consideration to Newco, a company of which the trio were directors, and the capital of which was owned by Star, a company in which the trio were shareholders;

b (ii) the company was thus reduced to a shell and the shares in it not held by the petitioner were next sold for £1 to Star;

(iii) Star then sold the shares in Newco (which by then represented the value of the erstwhile business and goodwill of the company and, says the petitioner, nothing else) to OAG for a variable price likely to reach £10m.

c The basic complaints in the original petition remain. The petitioner is left with a holding in a shell company whilst the trio and some others have shared a substantial jackpot no part of which has come to the petitioner. Leaving aside how far various heads of relief asked for need to be alternative to one another, the amended petition claims by way of relief, inter alia, that the respondents (that is to say including OAG) should buy the petitioner's preference shares in the company on described bases which I apprehend are intended to reflect the true value of the shares had there been no wrongdoing; that Newco, now a subsidiary of OAG, should account for certain benefits to the company as constructive trustee; that Newco should make certain payments to the company and that the transfer of assets from the company to Newco should be declared voidable.

e The first question I have to decide is whether, as Mr Potts and Mr Mabb argue for the petitioner, the court has jurisdiction to add OAG as the eighth respondent. It is common ground OAG is not a member of the company but it is, urges Mr Potts, a person against whom relief is properly sought in the amended petition. It is, he says, also a person involved in the misdeeds alleged in the amended petition and a person affected by the relief claimed against others in the amended petition in that the position of its wholly-owned subsidiary Newco would be radically affected were the relief there claimed against Newco, or even some of it, to be granted. If I have the jurisdiction to add OAG, then the question becomes whether I should, in the exercise of the discretion conferred on me by the rules as to amendment and as to the joinder of parties, exercise it to join OAG and to allow the amendment against OAG. Mr Aldous QC and Mr Walton for OAG argue that the court does not have the necessary jurisdiction and further, even if it had, that in point of discretion the joinder and amendment so far as concerns OAG should be refused.

h I shall first look at the question as to jurisdiction and, initially, shall do so without reference to the authorities that have been cited to me. The relevant sections are ss 459 and 461 of the 1985 Act. I shall not set out either in full. I go first to s 461 which begins by conferring on the court by sub-s (1) a power to give relief in very wide terms. If the court is satisfied that the petition under s 459 is well founded, then 'it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of.'

i The relief does not, for example, necessarily have to compensate for or prohibit the recurrence of the matters complained of. The only nexus required between relief and complaint is that the former has to be 'in respect of' the latter.

Then s 461(2) opens with the words 'Without prejudice to the generality of sub-s (1) the court's order may' and it goes on in paras (a) to (d) to give examples of relief within the wider generality which is not to be prejudiced. Mr Potts argues that the two sections, ss 459 and 461, read together are an example of a practice exemplified by the provisions considered in the well known case of Aiden Shipping Co Ltd v Interbulk Ltd, The Vimeira [1986] 2 All ER 409, [1986] 1 AC 965 whereby Parliament confers an exceptionally wide jurisdiction and leaves it to the courts or to a rule-making body or to both to find for themselves boundaries, not to the jurisdiction proper, but, by way of the exercise of the discretion in individual cases, to the areas in which and the manner in which, in practice, the jurisdiction would be likely, save in exceptional circumstances, to lead to relief.

I do not think it profitable to determine how far Aiden Shipping Co Ltd v Interbulk Ltd is or is not a wholly acceptable analogy but I do see force in Mr Potts' submission which, in my view, is supported also by the legislative history of s 459 and its predecessors. As to that history, a precursor of s 459, s 210 of the Companies Act 1948, was reported on in 1960 by the Jenkins Committee as appearing not to have produced the results expected of it, and it was given in evidence to that committee that the section needed amendment if effective protection was to be given to minorities in the circumstances in which it had been intended that it should be (see the Jenkins Report 1960, para 200).

Section 210 was then superseded by s 75 of the Companies Act 1980, but s 75, which required that the prejudice should be suffered by 'some part of the members', inevitably led to doubts and discussion as to whether the section afforded relief in cases where the prejudice was suffered by the whole membership. There was thus, once again, the need to widen the statutory provision. Although the width of the jurisdiction conferred by ss 459 and 461 is, of course, a matter of the construction of the language Parliament has used, the earlier sequences of statutory provision, construction by the court, a dawning recognition of shortcomings later followed by a statutory extension is at least consistent with there having been engendered in the legislature by 1985 a sense that the thing to do was to give a very wide jurisdiction and to let the courts get on with it.

The broad provisions of the Companies (Unfair Prejudice Applications) Proceedings Rules 1986, SI 1986/2000 are examples of the same view. In relation to who is to be respondent, those rules provide that on the return date 'the court shall give such directions as it thinks appropriate with respect to . . . (a) service of the petition on any person' (see r 5) and for a day upon which 'unless the court otherwise directs, the petitioner and any respondent . . . shall attend before the registrar . . . for directions to be given in relation to the procedure on the petition.' (see r 3(3)).

The impression given both in the sections and in the rules is that the greatest possible flexibility was intended by the legislature to be given to the courts. Thus s 459 does not, for example, require that it is by a respondent or by the respondents to the petition that the company's affairs are being or have been conducted in the manner complained of. It does not require that the respondents to the petition should be limited to members of the company or to its directors or to those conducting its affairs and, of course, it is a familiar practice that the company itself should be a respondent (see r 4(1)).

I am unable to find in s 459 itself any language which points to who may be, who has to be or who cannot be respondents to a petition under its terms.

a Those are subjects which it does not attempt to address.

Mr Aldous and Mr Snowden argue that some restrictions in the jurisdiction have to be read in. For example, they say that there is no jurisdiction to require a person to be a respondent where no relief is claimed against him and where he is not affected by any relief which is sought. A distinction needs to be drawn, says Mr Aldous, between the conduct and position of those who are in control of the company or who are members, on the one hand, and, on the other, the position and conduct of third parties, 'outsiders', as he calls them, in respect of whom the company has no cause of action and whose involvement may be no more than that, innocent of any intent to prejudice anyone and innocent also of any foresight that anyone might be prejudiced, they are, as third parties, concerned in the activity complained of as being prejudicial. That some distinctions will in some cases need to be drawn is, I accept, likely enough, but I cannot find any warrant in the language of ss 459 and 461 for introducing them as matters of jurisdiction.

c

Leaving aside what the authorities I next turn to require of me, I do not feel able to decline the joinder of OAG and to refuse the proposed amendment of the petition against OAG on the ground that the petition, if so amended, would be trespassing outside the statutory jurisdiction. It may be material to add that a decision to exclude as a matter of jurisdiction would have the result not only of excluding respondents, such as OAG, who wish not to be joined, but also of excluding those who, in a corresponding position, would wish to be joined as, or to continue as, respondents.

e

I now turn to the authorities cited to find out what guidance I am given. First in time of the cases cited to me was Re RA Noble & Sons (Clothing) Ltd [1983] BCLC 273 per Nourse J. It was cited by Mr Aldous only so as to lead to the citation in it (at 290) from Re Bovey Hotel Ventures Ltd (31 July 1981, unreported) of a passage in which Slade J held, in relation to s 75 of the 1980 Act, that the test of unfairness was an objective one; it was not necessary for the petitioner to show that those who had de facto control of the company acted in the conscious knowledge that what they were doing or omitting to do was unfair to the petitioner. Mr Aldous argues that it would be remarkable if a person, a stranger to the company, could properly find himself a respondent to a s 459 petition without, as Re Bovey Hotel Ventures Ltd indicates, the least conscious knowledge that he was being, or was likely to be, unfair to anyone, but simply because he was involved in some transaction which was unfairly prejudicial to the petitioner. I see the force of that but, as I have said, I cannot find any words, either in or necessarily to be implied into ss 459 and 461, which would aid in excluding a respondent as a matter of jurisdiction in such a case. Whilst I would not quarrel with a line of Re Bovey Hotel Ventures Ltd, I do not see it as restrictive of the jurisdiction conferred by s 459.

f

g

h

The next authority was Re a company (No 005287 of 1985) [1986] BCLC 68, a decision of Hoffmann J in a case where the erstwhile controlling shareholder of the company, H, sought to strike out a petition which was under s 459 and, alternatively, for the winding up of the company. H had, it was alleged, conducted the company in breach of his fiduciary duties and in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the petitioners. Negotiations began before

i

c a petition was presented but, when it was found that H had transferred his shares to an offshore company, the petitioners then issued their petition under s 459 requiring H to account for payments of company money made without authority. The petitioners found a little later that H had left this jurisdiction and had sold the company's assets for cash. The petitioners then sought to make amendments to the petition and to include a request for an order that H and the offshore company should jointly and severally buy the petitioners' shares. Unabashed, H argued that in respect of the original relief it was only the offshore company that should have been respondent (see at 70). There was no justification, he argued, for extending relief to relief against persons, the company itself apart, who had ceased to be members (see at 71), but the petitioner could, it was argued, proceed against H by derivative shareholders' action. Hoffmann J thought that would be inconvenient, and he went on to say (at 71):

e
'I would be reluctant to come to the conclusion that this form of duplication was necessary unless it was clear that the jurisdiction under ss 459 and 461 did not permit the whole matter to be dealt with on the petition. It seems to me that although it is true that s 461(2) shows that the normal order under s 461 will be an order against the company or another member, there is no reason why the words of s 461(1) should not be given their full effect and allow the court to give relief in respect of a complaint that the company's affairs have been conducted in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the interests of members, even when this would involve giving relief against a respondent who is no longer a member. For that reason, I am not willing to strike out H as a party to the petition.'

f
Turning to H's opposition to the buy-out relief sought to be added by amendment and in response to H's argument that no such order could be made against a non-member, Hoffmann J said (at 71):

g
i
'Section 461(2)(d), which I have already read, provides for such an order being made against members of the company but says nothing about the order being made against a non-member. Counsel for the petitioners, on the other hand, says that there are cases in which a person may be, for the purposes of giving relief, identified with a company which he controls and that it may be possible to obtain an order to that effect against H either under the broad jurisdiction of s 461(1) or by identifying H with the Gibraltar company [the offshore company I have mentioned]. It is not necessary for me to express any view on whether that can be done because I do not think it would be right to strike out the paragraph seeking such relief unless I was satisfied that the possibility of obtaining it was perfectly hopeless. I do not feel in a position at the moment to say that and I do not think it would prejudice H very greatly if the paragraph seeking that relief were to remain in the petition, given that in the light of the conclusion to which I have already come he will remain as a respondent to the petition in respect of the relief sought under para 2.'

144

a It is notable that, despite his reading ss 459 and 461 together (he speaks (at 71) of 'the jurisdiction under ss 459 and 461') Hoffmann J sees no reason why the words of s 461(1) should not be given their full effect. Mr Aldous can point to the judge's more cautious approach to the buy-out jurisdiction but, even there, where he is saying 'I do not think it would be right to strike out . . . relief unless I was satisfied that the possibility of obtaining it was perfectly hopeless' his words look to me more the language of a judge who

b considered that there might well be jurisdiction (but one which it was urged was hopeless in point of its exercise) rather than that of a judge who is indicating his concluded views on whether or not there was a jurisdiction.

Mr Aldous points to the facts that H had been a controller of the company, a person responsible for the unfair conduct alleged, had been a member of the company, was personally accused of wrongdoing and could have been the c object of a derivative action. I can see that Re a company (No 005287 of 1985) thus falls well short of deciding the case before me but I nonetheless attach some importance to the fact that Hoffmann J, upon his reading the two sections together, had seen no reason why the words of s 461(1) should not be given their full effect and accordingly had permitted the addition of a claim for a buy-out against a non-member.

d Next in time was Re a company (No 007281 of 1986) [1987] BCLC 593, a decision of Vinelott J. An investment company, 3i, which had provided working capital, held cumulative convertible participating preferred ordinary shares and cumulative redeemable preference shares in the company. The company's articles had elaborate provisions as to pre-emption rights. One of e the directors was voted off the board. He found the other directors had set up a rival group of companies and had stripped the company of its assets, so he presented a petition under s 459. 3i was a respondent to the petition notwithstanding that it was not said that it had taken any part in or had been concerned in any way in the unfairly prejudicial conduct. No relief was sought against it. The primary relief sought was the purchase of the petitioner's

f shares by the three other directors but the petition asked, alternatively, for such other relief under s 461 as the court should think just. Vinelott J held that as 3i was a member of the company and was affected by the relief sought in that an order for a buy-out by the three directors of the petitioner's shares would override 3i's pre-emption rights, it was right that it should remain a g respondent. He said ([1987] BCLC 593 at 598-599):

h 'A petition under s 459 is not analogous to litigation in which the issues raised affect only those against whom allegations are made by the plaintiff. A closer analogy is an administration action, where all beneficiaries having an interest in the relief sought should be made parties or represented. The practice that has so far been followed in the Companies Court is to require that all members of the company whose interests would have been affected by the misconduct alleged or who would be affected by an order made by the court under the very wide powers conferred by s 461 are to be made respondents to a petition or served with it. In practice, this means that in the case of a small, private i company every member ought to be joined.'

Then, a little later he said ([1987] BCLC 593 at 599):

[1994] 2 BCLC 420

'In my judgment, 3i is clearly affected by the relief sought in the petition which, amongst other things, would override its rights under the pre-emption provisions. 3i also has voting control over the company in general meeting, and would be directly concerned if any order were made regulating the future conduct of the company pending the acquisition of the petitioner's shares. In these circumstances I think that 3i was properly made a respondent and should not now be struck out.'

Mr Aldous is, of course, able to stress that there 3i was, firstly, a member of the company and, secondly, a person affected by the relief claimed. But the case does show that it is not a necessary condition of joinder that a respondent should have been involved in any way as a wrongdoer in the events complained of.

In Re BSB Holdings Ltd [1993] BCLC 246 a similar problem came again before Vinelott J. The petitioner complained that the business of 'Holdings', the company in which it held shares, had been hived down to B Sky B which was at first a wholly owned subsidiary of Holdings but which later then passed into the control and ownership of the respondents in a way which was alleged unfairly to prejudice the petitioner. The petitioner sought an order that the respondents, or some of them, should transfer their shares in B Sky B back to Holdings or direct to the petitioner. No relief was sought against B Sky B itself, which was not a member of Holdings, and it applied that the petition should be struck out as against it.

The 3i case was cited to Vinelott J who took the view that, despite B Sky B not being a member of Holdings, it was clearly affected by the relief sought in that the order sought was that there should be a transfer and registration of its shares. The body of its corporators would change (see [1993] BCLC 246 at 253). But the judge added that its joinder could be justified on another ground, namely that it was directly concerned in the transactions of which complaint was made (see [1993] BCLC 246 at 254). It was a party, and a necessary party, to one of the agreements which was complained of. Vinelott J held that B Sky B was properly joined because it was an actor and played a central role in the transactions of which complaint was made (see [1993] BCLC 246 at 255).

Finally on the authorities, in Re Baltic Real Estate Ltd (No 1) [1993] BCLC 498 Knox J had before him an application in relation to a s 459 petition of a majority (51%) shareholder in a company. The second and third respondents to the petition were the former directors of that company who, the petitioner alleged, had committed breaches of fiduciary duty as directors. The second and third respondents were also its former shareholders as to 49% but had held their shares only briefly before transferring them to the fourth and fifth respondents (persons out of the jurisdiction, not served by the time of the hearing before Knox J and in respect of whom leave to serve out was needed). There were allegations that the fourth and fifth respondents, the registered holders of the 49%, were either controlled by the second and third respondents or held the 49% of the shares in the company in trust for the second and third respondents. The petitioner sought as his principal relief an order that the second and third respondents, alternatively the fourth and fifth respondents, should be ordered to sell or procure the sale of the 49% of the shares in the company registered in the name of the fourth and fifth respondents to the petitioner at such price as the court should think fit.

- a* It was argued on behalf of the second and third respondents that as they were not present members they were not proper respondents and, as they were not parties to the relief sought either, the petition should be struck out as against them as not disclosing any reasonable cause of action and as being an abuse of process. That argument succeeded not, as I see it, because the second and third respondents were not members of the company, but because, as Knox J put it (at 502):

‘It seems to me that the proper parties to this relief are the shareholders in whom the shares in question are vested and with whom the court, in dealing with the rights of members, is primarily concerned.’

- c* There is no discussion in the judgment of the jurisdiction under s 459. Knox J plainly took the view that the fact (as alleged) that the fourth and fifth respondents were but trustees for the second and third respondents or were controlled by the second and third respondents was not, on its own, enough to justify the second and third respondents, being necessary parties. But there were some other arguments which Knox J indicated had failed to persuade him that the second and third respondents should continue to be respondents. Firstly, that they were the persons against whom the breach of duty was alleged and, secondly, that, under the rubric of ‘such other relief as the court should think fit’, the relief eventually granted by the court might be other than the sale of shares to the petitioner, which was the principal relief sought, and might more involve the second and third respondents than would that sale.

- d* That concludes a look at the authorities cited to me. Whilst I would be very willing to following a pattern that emerged from the earlier cases at first instance, I do not regard any clear pattern as having yet emerged, and I have certainly found nothing conclusive that suggests that the words of ss 459 and 461 should not be given their full effect. From the existing authorities cited it can be seen that in an appropriate case relief can be sought against a non-member other than the company itself, or against a person not involved in the acts complained of (at least if that person would be affected by the relief sought) and that a person against whom no relief is in terms sought cannot necessarily escape being a respondent, whilst, on other facts, it can be right to strike out a petition, even as against those whose acts are complained of, so long as no relief is sought against such a person.

- e* This summary suggests to me that in point of jurisdiction the wide language of ss 459 and 461 is not to be cut down. None the less, cases may arise where, notwithstanding that the claim cannot be clearly said to be outside that wide jurisdiction, the likelihood of the court’s discretion being exercised so as to lead to relief against, or relief having any material effect upon, a given respondent can be seen to be so remote that the case can fairly be described as ‘perfectly hopeless’, to use Hoffmann J’s phrase, and hence that it would be abusive to require that respondent to remain as such or to be added as such. Is this such a case?

- f* It is best first to look at the likelihood or otherwise of OAG being ordered, with the other respondents, to buy the petitioner’s shares – the only substantive relief sought against OAG in the amended petition. Prima facie, when a litigant's case against a person is within the relevant jurisdiction he should be permitted, if he so chooses, to pursue his case against that person. Thus I framed the question at the end of the last paragraph in the way that I did, rather than by reference to RSC Ord 15, r 6, because, on the facts of this case, where no blame can be laid at the petitioner's door for not including OAG from the outset or for delay in applying to amend, it seems appropriate to look at the petitioner's position more as it would be on an application for a strike out by OAG than where the petitioner comes cap in hand, as it were, asking for leave to amend. However, it is also to be borne in mind that it is plainly abusive to press a person into hopeless litigation, litigation which cannot succeed. Quite apart from other vexation inherent in litigation, even a party who recovers an order for his costs against a solvent party on an indemnity basis may well be left substantially out of pocket at the end of a s 459 petition, a type of proceeding known neither for its speed nor its economy.

At this point in the argument, Mr Aldous redeploys on the discretionary side of things many of the arguments used unsuccessfully (as I have held) on the jurisdiction. OAG is not and never has been a member of the company. OAG is not said to have controlled the company or its board or even to have had a nominee on the company's board. True it is that its wholly owned subsidiary, Newco, is a respondent but, as did Knox J in Re Baltic Real Estate Ltd (No 1), I see it as no reason, sufficient in itself, for the joinder of a person as a further party that an existing respondent is owned by or controlled by that person. Newco can respond for itself and were there a principle that shareholders in or directors or controllers of a corporate respondent could, without more, be required to be parties in addition to that corporate respondent itself, then s 459 would indeed be oppressive.

I thus see neither OAG's ownership of Newco nor the potential effect of the petition on Newco as being reason for OAG's joinder. It is said that beyond the buy-out required of it, OAG is affected by the relief sought in that its wholly owned subsidiary Newco may find itself holding its assets on constructive trust for, and may be liable to account to, others, but, again, the simple answer is, as I see it, that Newco, already a party, is able fully to deal with that, and if it sufficed, without more, to require a company to be respondent that the assets of a company in which it held shares might be affected by the relief sought that would, again, be a needlessly oppressive burden on corporations.

Mr Aldous emphasises that no substantive relief is sought against OAG in the petition save that it is sought that with six others (other than the company itself, and on the basis that Star is added) it should be a joint purchaser of the petitioner's shares in the company. There is no suggestion in evidence that the addition of OAG is necessary if there is to be a purchaser able to pay the price required or that the other respondents are of straw. There is nothing to suggest that a buy-out without OAG as a joint or several buyer is impracticable or impossible or that such an order against the original respondents would be worthless or nugatory. As the original respondents include persons who are alleged to be the wrongdoers in relation to the acts complained of and who are said to have profited in substantial amounts from those acts, then if they, if ordered to do so, would be able to buy – and it is nowhere said they would not be so able – Mr Aldous urges that no court is likely to find it necessary to join with them as a co-purchaser a party, OAG, a against whom nothing wrong is urged. It is a strong course, he says, to require a party at what is likely to be considerable expense and against its will to become a shareholder in a company, a shell company, and to do so when the party is not said to have done anything wrong and where there are others who are wrongdoers and who are available as alternative purchasers. So to order, Mr Aldous urges, would be remarkable, unprecedented and unnecessary. He goes on to show that the petition contains no allegation of any wrong done by OAG to the company; it is nowhere said the company has a cause of action against OAG.

b Against this Mr Potts took me to the provisions of the amended petition. As early as December 1990, well before the sale of the company's assets to Newco, OAG and its solicitors were involved in discussions for the grant to OAG of an option to acquire the issued capital of Newco. Mr Potts says that c from the outset a number of related steps were planned to lead to the conclusion that was ultimately arrived at and of which the petitioner complains and that OAG was party to the planning from that outset. He says that OAG was involved in proposals as to a loan to the company which was made with the intent of being lent-on by the company to discharge an individual's debts and that OAG was concerned in carrying through such a d proposal. OAG, the amended petition alleges, was party to an option agreement of 21 December 1990 whereunder it would be able to acquire the capital of Newco for a price strangely expressed as – e 'subject to a maximum sum of £8 million or as might otherwise be agreed between Star and OAG with a maximum of £10 million and an overall minimum of £1 million.'

f It was, says Mr Potts and as the amended petition alleges, the intention of OAG throughout in relation to the option agreement that the company would hive up its business and goodwill to Newco in return for an indemnity and for nothing else of any real worth and that only after that would the option be exercised by OAG. OAG knew and approved the price paid on the hive up to Newco and was conscious of at least the possibility of that transaction being at a substantial undervalue, as it demonstrated by way of its solicitors pressing for and obtaining an undertaking that no steps would be taken for at least two years to put the company into voluntary winding up. The g acquisition of Newco's shares by OAG was an acquisition improperly given financial assistance by the company in breach of s 151 of the 1985 Act, the company at the time being a subsidiary of Newco. In these ways, says Mr Potts, as para 107 of the amended petition states, OAG 'was directly concerned in transactions of which complaint is made herein'. It is in this h context that Mr Potts says that the petitioner's complaint is (and I use his words) that there is here a 'con' and that OAG is 'in it up to its neck'. However, I think I need to be a little more analytical than that. Mr Potts's strong language is surely that of, at worst, conspiracy or, at least, of OAG having knowledge – actual, imputed or constructive knowledge – that its activities or omissions were or might represent 'unfair prejudice to the petitioner or that OAG committed some other material wrongs. But i no such an allegation is anywhere to be found in the petition. Such wrongs, if there were any, under s 151 are not said to be wrongs by OAG. It is nowhere said that what OAG acquired was acquired for less than full market consideration, and the matters pleaded suggest, if anything, that it has paid or will pay a little over the odds for what it received. Mr Potts gave me a list of the paragraphs in the amended petition said to show OAG's involvement in the matters complained of, and para 107 of the amended petition gives a similar but not identical list. I hope I have not overlooked anything material in the 94 pages of the body of the petition but I have not found any reference to anything done or omitted by OAG being alleged to have been wrongful or unlawful or in breach of some duty or obligation upon OAG. Whilst it is undoubtedly the case that OAG was, in a sense, concerned in transactions of which complaint is made, I cannot in the circumstances alleged in the amended petition see that concern as amounting to anything material. Both Mr Aldous and Mr Snowden made the valid point that if a person against whom no wrong doing is alleged, whose involvement, such as it is, has been paid for at 100p in the pound, and who is not a member, can be required against his will to be a respondent who may be ordered to buy shares, then no trading company could feel safe that it would not be expensively drawn into the internal disputes of its customers and of others with whom it might deal.

Mr Aldous next argues that all the attacks made on the hive up agreement are attacks not on anything done or omitted by OAG but by the trio and that the company and the petitioner (by way of derivative action) have full causes of action in respect thereof. The specially adjusted price which the petitioner claims should be paid for the petitioner's shares is, in respect of any suggested adjustment, to be adjusted by reason of complaints against the trio, not against OAG. To require OAG to pay some special price for the petitioner's shares not only involves adjusting the price to be paid by OAG by reference to someone else's wrongs but, as OAG has paid full value already for what it had received, would involve it in paying more than once over for the very same assets, a step which, however possible against a wrongdoer, would be unprecedented against a party not said to be in breach of any duty or obligation whatsoever.

None of these points put by OAG and by the original respondents is devoid of weight. I do not need to ascribe to each a separate force, but I do say that together their weight is such that, in my judgment, it can fairly be said that if the proposed amendments were allowed the petitioner would be quite unable on the amended petition to obtain the only relief, the buy-out, which it seeks against OAG.

Although the court could, if it chose, make a buy-out order against OAG of the kind which the petitioner seeks, it is on the case put in the amended petition, even if wholly true, plain and obvious, in my judgment, that no court would make such an order. Had OAG been a respondent from the start it could, in my view, have successfully moved to have the buy-out provisions and its role as a respondent struck out. It not yet being a respondent, it would be an abuse of process were it to be required, against its will, to be a respondent obliged to resist relief which would in practice never be granted.

Once that has emerged, so far as concerns the buy-out relief, the rest of the matter is readily determinable by reference to RSC Ord 15, r 6, which is made to apply by r 2(2) of the 1986 Rules. So far as material, Ord 15, r 6 provides at para (2) that the court may:

a                      ‘(b) order any of the following persons to be added as a party, namely
 – (i) any person who ought to have been joined as a party or whose presence before the Court is necessary to ensure that all matters in dispute in the cause or matter may be effectually or completely determined and adjudicated upon, or (ii) any person between whom and any party to the cause or matter there may exist a question or issue arising out of or relating to or connected with any relief or remedy claimed in the cause b                      or matter which in the opinion of the Court it would be just and convenient to determine as between him and that party as well as between the parties to the cause or matter.’

c                      Once it is recognised that no buy-out relief will be ordered against it, OAG’s presence is not necessary for the purpose specified in (i), nor is there any question or issue between OAG and the petitioner such that it would be just and convenient to hear that matter alongside the petition. Given, as I have already indicated, that OAG’s ownership or control of Newco is, in my view, no reason to require the joinder of OAG, I see no reason either why OAG is a person who ‘ought to have been joined’ within (i). Once the buy-out relief falls away as a possibility, Ord r 5, r 6 requires, in my judgment, d                      a conclusion that OAG should not be joined as a respondent at all, and I so rule.

e                      However, the summons before me raises questions other than the one that I have so far dealt with and concerns respondents other than OAG. Subject to my first being addressed on the costs so far and any other questions involving OAG, I shall, once OAG has withdrawn, go on to hear the remaining issues on this summons and on the summons as to security for costs later in the day.

[His Lordship then heard argument on costs]

f                      LINDSAY J. So far as concerns the costs of OAG, I am concerned only with their costs of 28 March and of the longer later two day hearing. The costs of OAG of and incidental to the summons in relation to those two hearings should be paid by the petitioner, to be taxed and paid forthwith.

g                      So far as concerns the costs of the original respondents other than the company which, as it transpires, has taken no part, it seems to me that their costs of three occasions are in issue: those before Mr Registrar Buckley on 22 March, those before me on 28 March, and the later fuller hearing of two days or so. The argument has, all along, even on the part of the original respondents, principally concerned the original respondent’s wish that OAG h                      should not be required to be a respondent and it seems to me that the original respondents were entitled to take that view, just as much as OAG was entitled to take that view and, moreover, the original respondents have in that respect succeeded. Mr Potts argues that they would have been before the court in any event, even if OAG’s addition had not been sought, but it seems to me that the battle would have been then a very much simpler one and might indeed i                      not have taken place.

I think the appropriate order for the costs of the original respondents other than the company is that those costs should be taxed on a standard basis (not

JOSHUA N. TERRY,	§	IN THE DISTRICT COURT

v.	§	OF DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS

ACIS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P. and	§
ACIS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT GP, LLC,	§
	§
Defendants.	§	44 th JUDICIAL DISTRICT

PLAINTIFF’S APPLICATION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Plaintiff Joshua N. Terry (“Mr. Terry”) files this Application for Temporary Restraining Order against Defendants Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (“Acis GP”) (collectively “Acis”), and shows the Court as follows:

SUMMARY OF APPLICATION

Acis is in the midst of an audacious scheme to transfer all of its assets to Cayman affiliates to avoid satisfaction of Mr. Terry’s judgment. Acis fought hard to avoid post-judgment discovery because it had something big and bad to hide. Starting shortly after the $8 million arbitration award was entered against it, Acis has fraudulently transferred assets in excess of $16.6 million to several affiliated entities in the Cayman Islands, including:

- A $10 million promissory note from an affiliate, Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”), to a Cayman affiliate (14 days after the Final Award);
- An interest in several entities worth in excess of $6.6 million (the day after the Court entered the Judgment).

Based on documents produced two days ago by Acis pursuant to Court order, it is clear that Acis is poised to fraudulently transfer its most significant assets: management contracts worth well in excess of $30 million, again to another Cayman affiliate. If that transfer occurs, Acis will have few, if any, assets. Mr. Terry requests the Court enter a temporary restraining order restraining Acis from taking any further action to transfer the management contracts, or any of Acis' other assets.

RELEVANT FACTS

1. From September 6-15, 2017, an arbitration panel consisting of Hon. Harlan Martin (former), Hon. Glen M. Ashworth (Ret.), and Hon. Mark Whittington (Ret.) (the "Arbitration Panel") held a final hearing in Dallas County.

2. On October 20, 2017, the Arbitration Panel issued its Final Award in the Arbitration (the "Final Award") against Acis.

3. On October 24, 2017 (4 days after the Panel issued the Final Award), an employee of Highland and representative of Acis, Frank Waterhouse, executed an agreement for Acis which reflects a sale of Acis' interest in its risk retention vehicle, Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("Acis Loan Funding"). A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

4. On October 27, 2017 (7 days after the Panel issued the Final Award), James Dondero signed an agreement transferring management of Acis Loan Funding from Acis to Highland HCF Advisor Ltd., a Cayman entity ("Highland Cayman 1") for no consideration. That transfer deprived Acis of the value to which it was entitled. A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 2. When Mr. Terry was a partner in Acis, Acis was the portfolio manager of Acis Loan Funding. That contractual arrangement between Acis and Acis Loan Funding was a valuable asset of Acis, as was Acis' ownership interest in Acis Loan Funding.

5. On October 31, 2017, counsel for Acis, Jamie Welton, called Rogge Dunn on the telephone. See Declaration of Rogge Dunn attached hereto as Exhibit 3. In that call, Mr. Welton stated that Acis is "judgment proof."

6. On the same day, October 31, 2017 (11 days after the Panel issued the Final Award), Dondero caused a filing in the Registry of the island nation of Guernsey (one of the Channel Islands in the English Channel). In that filing, Acis Loan Funding was renamed “Highland CLO Funding, Ltd.”

7. On November 3, 2017, Acis, Highland, and Highland CLO Management Ltd., another Cayman entity (“Highland Cayman 2”), entered into an Agreement for Assignment and Transfer of Promissory Note (the “Note Transfer”), a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit 4. The Note Transfer affected a $10 million promissory note by Highland in favor of Acis, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit 5 (the “Highland Note”). Among other things, the Note Transfer transferred the Highland Note, for no consideration, from Acis to Highland Cayman 2.

8. Significantly, the Note Transfer also purports to initiate the transfer of management contracts to Highland Cayman 2 for the CLOs listed on Schedule A to a prior agreement, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit 6 (the “Management Contracts”). Acis is to receive no consideration for transferring its most significant assets, the Management Contracts.

9. On November 6, 2017, Terry filed this action to confirm the Final Award.

10. When Terry was a partner in Acis a year and a half ago, Acis had assets in excess of $40 million, and no liabilities or liens against its property.

11. On November 22, 2017, Mr. Terry filed his Motion for Expedited Discovery.

12. On December 18, 2017, the Court entered its (i) Order Confirming Arbitration Award, (ii) Final Judgment, and (iii) Order Granting Expedited Discovery.

13. On December 19, 2017, Acis transferred $6.6 million of additional assets to Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd., another Cayman entity (“Highland Cayman 3”), purportedly in exchange for forgiveness of a receivable. A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 7.

14. Also on December 19, 2017, the partners of Acis transferred their partnership interest to yet another Cayman entity, Neutra, Ltd. (“Highland Cayman 4”). A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 8.

15. On January 22, 2018, Acis produced documents and answered discovery that revealed much of the foregoing.

ARGUMENT & AUTHORITY

Post-judgment injunctive relief is provided for in the Texas Civil Practices and Remedies Code and the Texas Rules of Appellate Procedure. TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 52.006(e); TEX. R. APP. P. 24.2(d).

The standard for post-judgment injunctive relief is simple: a determination of “whether the judgment debtor is likely to dissipate or transfer its assets to avoid satisfaction of the judgment.” Emeritus Corp. v. Ofczarzak, 198 S.W.3d 222, 227 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2006, no pet.); Sargeant v. Al Saleh, 512 S.W.3d 399, 409 (Tex. App.—Corpus Christi 2016, no pet.) (“In the post-judgment context, the question is only whether the judgment debtor is likely to dissipate or transfer its assets to avoid satisfaction of the judgment.”) (internal quotations omitted). “Evidence of the actual dissipation or transfer of assets is not necessary to meet this standard.” Sargeant, 512 S.W.3d at 409 (emphasis added); Miga v. Jensen, 02-11-00074-CV, 2012 WL 745329, at *11 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth Mar. 8, 2012, no pet.).

Attached as Exhibit 9 is the Declaration of Joshua N. Terry, which details the following, among other things:

- Mr. Terry ran Acis’ day-to-day operations from 2011 until he was wrongfully terminated in June 2016;
- Mr. Terry is well-versed in the CLO industry, where he worked since 2005. Mr. Terry has earned the right to use the Chartered Financial Analyst designation. From my experience, education, and training, I became familiar with the common and legitimate business practices of CLO managers in the industry, as well as the value of CLO management contracts.

- In 2015, Mr. Terry valued Acis in excess of $70 million, a conclusion that was accepted by David Klos, a Highland employee;
- On February 28, 2012, Highland sold four European CLO management contracts to The Carlyle Group for $43.6 million in an arms-length transaction. Those four CLO management contracts are less valuable than the five Management Contracts Acis owns and which it now seeks to transfer for no consideration;
- The Management Contracts are the most substantial asset of Acis and are valued in excess of $30 million;
- There is no legitimate business purpose for Acis to transfer the Management Contracts for no consideration;
- There is no legitimate business purpose for Acis to transfer the Highland Note for no consideration;
- It is not in the normal course of Acis' business to transfer all of its Management Contracts for no consideration, or to transfer the Highland Note for no consideration;
- If Acis transfers the Management Contracts, Acis will not have assets adequate to satisfy the Judgment.<sup>1</sup>

The standard for post-judgment injunctive relief is not only met in this case, but is far exceeded. Indeed, there is direct and compelling evidence that Acis actually transferred and dissipated assets, and intends to transfer more. Consequently, Mr. Terry clearly met his burden to show transfers or dissipation is “likely.” The Court should enter a temporary restraining order pending a hearing on a temporary injunction.

CONCLUSION

Counsel for Acis represented to the Court and to counsel for Mr. Terry that Acis had not, and was not, transferring assets. The documents Acis produced two days ago—which they fought so hard to withhold—tell a very different story. This Court has the “inherent power to enforce its judgments.” Harleaux v. Harleaux, 154 S.W.3d 925, 928 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2005, no pet.). One means by which a Court can enforce its judgment is through injunctive relief, and injunctive relief is certainly appropriate under the circumstances. Mr. Terry requests the Court enter a temporary restraining order prohibiting Acis from taking any further action to transfer the Management Contracts and any other assets, set a hearing on a preliminary injunction, and for such other relief to which Mr. Terry is entitled.

<sup>1</sup> If and when Acis attempts to supersede the Judgment, Terry will request the Court include all of the fraudulently-transferred assets in any calculation of Acis' net worth.

Respectfully submitted,

THIS PORTFOLIO MANAGEMENT AGREEMENT (this "Agreement"), dated to be effective from 27 October 2017 (the "Effective Date") is entered into by and between Acis Loan Funding, Ltd., a closed-ended investment company limited by shares incorporated under the laws of Guernsey with registered number 60120, (the "Company") and Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., a company organized under the laws of the Cayman Islands (the "Portfolio Manager" or "Highland"). Acis Capital Management, L.P., a limited partnership organized under the laws of the State of Delaware (the "Predecessor Portfolio Manager"), joins in the execution and delivery of this Agreement solely for the purpose of consenting and agreeing to Section 1 hereof.

RECITALS

WHEREAS, the Company and the Predecessor Portfolio Manager entered into that certain Portfolio Management Agreement, dated to be effective from December 22, 2016 (the "Predecessor Portfolio Management Agreement"); and

WHEREAS, the Company desires to supersede and replace the Predecessor Portfolio Management Agreement in its entirety with this Agreement;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants herein contained and for other good and valuable consideration, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, the parties hereto agree as follows:

1. Termination of the Portfolio Services Agreement. Effective as of the Effective Date, (x) the Predecessor Portfolio Management Agreement is hereby cancelled and terminated in its entirety and shall have no further force or effect; (y) each party thereto releases the other party from all claims, suits or causes of action arising out of or relating to the Predecessor Portfolio Management Agreement and (z) each party hereby ratifies all prior transactions effected in accordance with the Predecessor Portfolio Management Agreement.

2. Appointment of the Portfolio Manager. The Portfolio Manager shall act as the investment manager to the Company and shall manage the investment and reinvestment of the cash, Financial Instruments (as defined in Section 5 below) and other properties comprising the assets and liabilities of the Company, in each case, subject to and in accordance with the investment policy of the Company (the "Investment Policy").

3. Additional Portfolio Services. The Portfolio Manager shall discuss with the directors of the Company (the "Directors") the investment objectives of the Company and assist the Directors to develop, monitor and update the Company's Investment Policy; shall identify and present information to the Directors with respect to potential investments available to the Company in furtherance of the Investment Policy, including (without limitation) credit and market research and analysis in connection with the origination or acquisition of such investments; shall provide such assistance with respect to the administration and valuation of the Company's investment portfolio as the Directors shall reasonably require; and shall make available to the Company such personnel and resources as are necessary in connection with the foregoing services.

4. Custody. The Financial Instruments (as defined in Section 5 below) shall be held in the custody of State Street Custodial Services (Ireland) Limited or one or more banks selected by the Company (each such bank, a "Custodian"). The Company will notify the Portfolio Manager promptly of the proposed selection of any other Custodians. The Custodian shall at all times be responsible for the physical custody of the Financial Instruments; for the collection of interest, dividends, and other income attributable to the Financial Instruments; and for the exercise of rights and tenders on the Financial Instruments after consultation with and as then directed by the Company. At no time shall the Portfolio Manager have possession of or maintain custody over any of the Financial Instruments. The Portfolio Manager shall not be responsible for any loss incurred by reason of any act or omission of the Custodian.

5. Authority of the Portfolio Manager. Subject at all times to (i) provisions of applicable law, and (ii) the Investment Policy, the Portfolio Manager shall have the authority for and in the name of the Company to:

(b) engage in such other lawful Financial Instruments transactions as the Portfolio Manager may from time to time determine;

(c) provide credit and market research and analysis in connection with the investments and ongoing management of the Company and direct the formulation of investment policies and strategies for the Company;

(d) purchase Financial Instruments and hold them for investment;

(e) enter into contracts for or in connection with investments in Financial Instruments;

(f) invest in other pooled investment vehicles, which investments shall be subject in each case to the terms and conditions of the respective governing document for each such vehicle;

(g) possess, transfer, mortgage, pledge or otherwise deal in, and exercise all rights, powers, privileges and other incidents of ownership or possession with respect to Financial Instruments and other property and funds held or owned by the Company and/or its subsidiaries;

(h) lend, either with or without security, any Financial Instruments, funds or other properties of the Company, including by entering into reverse repurchase agreements, and, from time to time, undertaking leverage on behalf of the Company;

(i) open, maintain and close accounts, including margin and custodial accounts, with brokers and dealers, including brokers and dealers located outside the United States;

(j) open, maintain and close accounts, including custodial accounts, with banks, including banks located outside the United States, and drawing checks or other orders for the payment of monies;

(k) combine purchase or sale orders on behalf of the Company with orders for other accounts to which the Portfolio Manager or any of its affiliates provides investment services ("Other Accounts") and allocate the Financial Instruments or other assets so purchased or sold, on an average-price basis or in any other manner deemed fair and equitable to the Portfolio Manager in its sole discretion, among such accounts:

(l) enter into arrangements with brokers to open "average price" accounts wherein orders placed during a trading day are placed on behalf of the Company and Other Accounts and are allocated among such accounts using an average price;

(m) organize one or more corporations and other entities formed to hold record title, as nominee for the Company (whether alone or together with the Other Accounts), to Financial Instruments or funds of the Company;

(n) cause the Company to engage in (i) agency, agency cross, related party principal transactions with affiliates of the Portfolio Manager and (ii) cross transactions with Other Accounts, in each case, to the extent permitted by applicable laws;

(o) engage and/or provide personnel, whether part-time or full-time, and attorneys, independent accountants or such other persons (including, without limitation, finders, consultants, investment bankers and any human resources as may be necessary for the Company to conduct any matters related to its portfolio of assets on behalf of or for the Company);

(p) provide certain support and assistance (including back office and middle office functions) to the Company; and

(q) vote Financial Instruments, participate in arrangements with creditors, the institution and settlement or compromise of suits and administrative proceedings and other like or similar matters.

6. Policies of the Company. The activities engaged in by the Portfolio Manager shall be subject to the policies and control of the Company, including (without limitation) the Investment Policy.

The Portfolio Manager shall submit such periodic reports, recommendations, research and analytic material to the Company regarding the Investment Policy, the Company's investment portfolio and the Portfolio Manager's activities hereunder as the Company may reasonably request and a representative of the Portfolio Manager shall be available to meet with the Company (whether in person or by telephone) as reasonably requested by the Company.

In furtherance of the foregoing, the Company hereby appoints the Portfolio Manager as the Company's attorney-in-fact, with full power of authority to act in the Company's name and on its behalf with respect to the matters set forth in Section 5 above.

7. Status of the Portfolio Manager. The Portfolio Manager shall, for all purposes, be an independent contractor and not an employee of the Company, and nothing herein shall be construed as making the Company a partner, member or co-venturer with the Portfolio Manager or any of its affiliates or clients. The Portfolio Manager shall have no authority to act for, represent, bind or obligate the Company except as specifically provided herein.

8. Reimbursement by the Company. The Portfolio Manager may retain, in connection with its responsibilities hereunder, the services of others to assist in the investment advice to be given to the Company with respect to the Company and/or its subsidiaries (any such appointee, a "Sub-Services Provider"), including, but not limited to, any affiliate of the Portfolio Manager, but payment for any such services shall be assumed by the Portfolio Manager, and the Company shall not have any liability therefor, provided, however, that the Portfolio Manager, in its sole discretion, may retain the services of independent third party professionals, including, without limitation, attorneys, accountants and consultants, to advise and assist it in connection with the performance of its activities on behalf of the Company, and the Company shall bear full responsibility therefor and the expense of any fees and disbursements arising therefrom, including any irrecoverable VAT arising on such costs and expenses.

9. Expenses.

(a) The Company shall pay or reimburse the Portfolio Manager and its affiliates for all expenses related to the services hereunder, including, but not limited to, investment-related expenses, brokerage commissions and other transaction costs, expenses related to clearing and settlement charges, professional fees relating to legal, auditing or valuation services, any governmental, regulatory, licensing, filing or registration fees incurred in compliance with the rules of any self-regulatory organization or any federal, state or local laws, research-related expenses (including, without limitation, news and quotation equipment and services, investment and trading-related software, including, without limitation, trade order management software (i.e., software used to route trade orders)), accounting (including accounting software), tax preparation expenses, costs and expenses associated with reporting and providing information to the Company, any taxes imposed upon the Company (including, but not limited to, any irrecoverable VAT arising on such costs and expenses), fees relating to valuing the Financial Instruments, and extraordinary expenses. In no event shall any of the foregoing costs or expenses include any salaries, occupational expense or general overhead of the Portfolio Manager. For the avoidance of doubt, (i) the cost of all third party expenses incurred in connection with this Agreement shall not exceed standard market rates (which may include standard soft dollar arrangements) and (ii) to the extent any of the foregoing expenses were incurred on behalf of, or benefit of a number of Portfolio Manager's advised accounts, such expenses shall be allocated pro rata among such accounts.

(b) To the extent that expenses to be borne by the Company are paid by the Portfolio Manager or by any Sub-Services Provider, the Company shall reimburse the Portfolio Manager (or the relevant Sub-Services Provider, as applicable) for such expenses so long as such expenses are determined on an arm's length basis.

10. Exculpation; Indemnification.

(a) Whether or not herein expressly so provided, every provision of this Agreement relating to the conduct or affecting the liability of or affording protection to the Portfolio Manager, its managers, directors, officers, partners, shareholders, agents and employees, or any of their respective affiliates and their respective managers, directors, officers, partners, shareholders, agents and employees (including parties acting as agents for the execution of transactions) (each, a "Covered Person" and collectively, "Covered Persons") shall be subject to the provisions of this Section.

(b) To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall be liable (whether directly or indirectly, in contract or in tort or otherwise) to the Company or any of its subsidiaries or anyone for liabilities incurred by the Company as a result of or arising out of or in connection with the performance by the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement, or for any losses or damages resulting from any failure to satisfy the Standard of Care (including but not limited to (i) any act or omission by any Covered Person in connection with the conduct of the business of the Company, that is determined by such Covered Person in good faith to be in or not opposed to the best interests of the Company, (ii) any act or omission by any Covered Person based on the suggestions of any professional advisor of the Company or any of its subsidiaries whom such Covered Person believes is authorized to make such suggestions on behalf of the Company, (iii) any act or omission by the Company, or (iv) any mistake, negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any broker or other agent of the Company selected by Covered Person with reasonable care), unless any such liabilities were incurred by reasons of acts or omissions constituting bad faith, fraud, willful misconduct or gross negligence (with such term given its meaning under New York law) or reckless disregard of the duties and obligations of the Portfolio Manager (as determined by a non-appealable judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction), (a "Portfolio Manager Breach").

(c) Covered Persons may consult with legal counsel or accountants selected by such Covered Person and any act or omission by such Covered Person on behalf of the Company or in furtherance of the business of the Company in good faith in reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel or accountants shall be full justification for the act or omission, and such Covered Person shall be fully protected in so acting or omitting to act if the counsel or accountants were selected with reasonable care.

(d) To the fullest extent permitted by law, the Company shall indemnify and hold harmless Covered Persons, from and against any and all claims, liabilities, damages, losses, costs and expenses ("Losses"), including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromises and settlements, as fines and penalties and legal or other costs and expenses of investigating or defending against any claim or alleged claim, of any nature whatsoever, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated, that are incurred by any Covered Person and arise out of or in connection with the business of the Company, any investment made under or in connection with this Agreement, or the performance by the Covered Person of Covered Person's responsibilities hereunder and against all taxes, charges, duties or levies incurred by such Covered Person in connection with the Company, provided that a Covered Person shall not be entitled to indemnification hereunder to the extent the Covered Person's conduct constitutes a Portfolio

Manager Breach. The termination of any proceeding by settlement, judgment, order or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the Covered Person's conduct constituted a Portfolio Manager Breach.

(c) Expenses incurred by an Covered Person in defense or settlement of any claim that shall be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder, shall be advanced by the Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder.

(f) The right of any Covered Person to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives.

(g) The provisions of this Section are expressly intended to confer benefits upon Covered Persons and such provisions shall remain operative and in full force and effect regardless of the expiration or any termination of this Agreement.

(h) In no event shall any Covered Person be liable for special, exemplary, punitive, indirect, or consequential loss, or damage of any kind whatsoever, including without limitation lost profits.

(i) No Covered Person shall be liable hereunder for any settlement of any action or claim effected without its written consent thereto.

(j) Pursuant to the exculpation and indemnification provisions described above, the Portfolio Manager and each Covered Person will generally not be liable to the Company for any act or omission (or alleged act or omission), absent a Portfolio Manager Breach, and the Company will generally be required to indemnify such persons against any Losses they may incur by reason of any act or omission (or alleged act or omission) related to the Company, absent a Portfolio Manager Breach. As a result of these provisions, the Company (not the Portfolio Manager or any other Covered Person) will be responsible for any Losses resulting from trading errors and similar human errors, absent a Portfolio Manager Breach or the inability to waive or limit such Losses under applicable law. Trading errors might include, for example, keystroke errors that occur when entering trades into an electronic trading system or typographical or drafting errors related to derivatives contracts or similar agreements. Given the volume of transactions executed by the Portfolio Manager and its affiliates on behalf of the Company, the Company acknowledges that trading errors (and similar errors) will occur and that the Company will be responsible for any resulting Losses, even if such Losses result from the negligence (but not gross negligence) of the Portfolio Manager or its affiliates.

11. Activities of the Portfolio Manager and Others. The Portfolio Manager, and its affiliates may engage, simultaneously with their portfolio servicing and management activities on behalf of the Company, in other businesses, and may render services similar to those described in this Agreement to other individuals, companies, trusts or persons, and shall not by reason of such engaging in other businesses or rendering of services for others be deemed to be acting in conflict with the interests of the Company. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Portfolio Manager and its affiliates shall devote as much time and resources to the performance of its obligations hereunder as the Portfolio Manager deems necessary and appropriate. In addition, the Portfolio Manager or any of its affiliates, in their individual capacities, may engage in securities transactions which may be different than, and contrary to, any guidance provided by the Portfolio Manager to the Company. The Portfolio Manager may give advice and recommend securities to, or buy securities for, accounts and other clients, which advice or securities may differ from guidance given to, or securities recommended for, the Company, even though their investment objectives may be the same or similar. The Portfolio Manager may recommend transactions in securities and other assets in which the Portfolio Manager has an interest, including securities or other assets issued by affiliates of the Portfolio Manager. The Company acknowledges that it has received a copy of Part 2 of the Portfolio Manager's Form ADV, which further describes conflicts of interest, including the Portfolio Manager, its affiliates and their respective advised accounts.

12. Standard of Care. Under this Agreement, the Portfolio Manager agrees to perform its obligations hereunder, with reasonable care (a) using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Portfolio Manager exercises with respect to comparable assets that it manages for itself and others having similar investment objectives and restrictions, and (b) to the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, in a manner consistent with the Portfolio Manager's customary standards, policies and procedures (the "Standard of Care"); provided that the Portfolio Manager shall not be liable for any loss or damages resulting from any failure to satisfy the Standard of Care except to the extent any act or omission of the Portfolio Manager constitutes a Portfolio Manager Breach. The Standard of Care may change from time to time to reflect changes by the Portfolio Manager to its customary standards, policies and procedures provided that such customary standards, policies and procedures are at least as rigorous as the foregoing.

13. Term; Termination.

(a) This Agreement shall remain in effect through an initial term concluding August 10, 2018 and shall be automatically extended for additional three-year terms thereafter, provided, however, this Agreement may be terminated in the event of: (A) the Company determining in good faith that the Company or the portfolio has become required to register as an investment company under the provisions of the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "Investment Company Act") (where there is no available exemption), and the Company has given prior notice to the Portfolio Manager of such requirement, (B) the date on which the portfolio has been liquidated in full and the Company's financing arrangements have been terminated or redeemed in full, (C) such other date as agreed between the Company and the Portfolio Manager and (D) under subsection (b) of this Section 13 or Section 14 of this Agreement.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision hereof to the contrary but subject to the provisions of clause (d) below, this Agreement may be terminated without cause by the Portfolio Manager, and the Portfolio Manager may resign, upon at least ninety (90) days' (or such shorter notice as is acceptable to the Company) written notice to the Company. The resignation shall not be effective until the date as of which a successor adviser has been appointed. The Portfolio Manager may immediately resign by providing written notice to the Company upon the failure of the Company to comply in any material respect with any investment policy or investment objective to which it is bound to comply, a willful breach or knowing violation by the Company of a material provision of this Agreement or the occurrence of insolvency proceedings in respect of the Company.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of clause (b) above, no resignation or removal of the Portfolio Manager or termination of this Agreement pursuant to such clause shall be effective until the date as of which a successor Portfolio Manager shall have been appointed and approved in accordance with Section 13(d) and has accepted all of the Portfolio Manager's duties and obligations pursuant to this Agreement in writing and has assumed such duties and obligations.

(d) Any termination, removal or resignation of the Portfolio Manager shall be effective only upon (a) the appointment by the Company of a successor Portfolio Manager that is an established institution which (i) has demonstrated an ability to professionally and competently perform duties reasonably comparable to those imposed upon the Portfolio Manager hereunder, (ii) is legally qualified and has the capacity to act as successor to the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement in the assumption of all of the responsibilities, duties and obligations of the Portfolio Manager hereunder and under the terms of the offering memorandum dated August 10, 2015 (as amended from time to time, the "Offering Memorandum") applicable to the Portfolio Manager, (iii) shall not cause the Company to become required to register under the provisions of the Investment Company Act and (iv) shall not result in the imposition of any entity-level or withholding tax on the Company or cause any other material adverse tax consequences to the Company and (b) written acceptance of appointment by such successor Portfolio Manager. The Company shall use its commercially reasonable efforts to appoint a successor Portfolio Manager to assume the duties and obligations of the removed or resigning Portfolio Manager. The Company, the Custodians and the successor Portfolio Manager shall take such action (or cause the outgoing Portfolio Manager to take such action) consistent with this Agreement and the terms of the Offering Memorandum applicable to the Portfolio Manager, as shall be necessary to effectuate any such succession. In the event that a successor has not been appointed or has not assumed the duties of the Portfolio Manager in writing within a 60-day period the Portfolio Manager or the Company may petition a court of competent jurisdiction for the appointment of a successor Portfolio Manager, which appointment will not require the consent of, or be subject to the approval or disapproval of, the Company (so long as such court appointed successor meets the requirements of clauses (a)(i) through (iv) above).

(e) In the event of removal of the Portfolio Manager pursuant to this Agreement, the Company shall have all of the rights and remedies available with respect thereto at law or equity, and, without limiting the foregoing, the Company may by notice in writing to the Portfolio Manager as provided under this Agreement terminate all the rights and obligations of the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement (except those that survive termination pursuant to Section 13(d) above). Upon resignation or removal of the Portfolio Manager in accordance with this Section 13 or Section 14 of this Agreement, as applicable, and upon acceptance by a successor Portfolio Manager of appointment, all authority and power of the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement and the Offering Memorandum, shall automatically and without further action pass to and be vested in the successor Portfolio Manager.

(f) For so long as Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. or an Affiliate thereof is the Portfolio Manager, the Company shall be permitted to use the "Highland" name; provided that, if the Portfolio Manager ceases to be Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. or an Affiliate thereof, the Company shall use commercially reasonable efforts to change its name to remove all reference to the name "Highland" therefrom. In addition, the Portfolio Manager, without the consent of the Company, may change the name of the Portfolio Manager.

14. Termination by the Company for Cause. This Agreement may be terminated, and the Portfolio Manager may be removed for Cause (as defined below) by the Company upon ten (10) days' prior written notice to the Portfolio Manager. No such termination or removal shall be effective until the date as of which a successor Portfolio Manager shall have agreed in writing to assume all of the Portfolio Manager's duties and obligations pursuant to this Agreement and as specified in the Offering Memorandum. "Cause" shall mean any one of the following events:

(a) the Portfolio Manager willfully violates, or takes any action that it knows breaches any material provision of this Agreement or the Offering Memorandum applicable to it in bad faith (not including a willful and intentional breach that results from a good faith dispute regarding reasonable alternative courses of action or interpretation of instructions);

(b) the Portfolio Manager breaches in any respect any provision of this Agreement or any terms of the Offering Memorandum applicable to it (other than as covered by clause (a) and except for any such violations or breaches that have not had, or could not, either individually or in the aggregate, reasonably be expected to have, a material adverse effect on the Company) and fails to cure such breach within 30 days of the Company receiving notice of such breach, unless, if such breach is remediable, the Portfolio Manager has taken action that the Portfolio Manager believes in good faith will remedy such breach, and such action does remedy such breach, within sixty (60) days after the Company receives notice thereof;

ASSIGNMENT AND TRANSFER AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT FOR ASSIGNMENT AND TRANSFER OF PROMISSORY NOTE (this "Agreement"), dated as of November 3, 2017, is entered into by and between ACIS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("Acis"), HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("HCM") and HIGHLAND CLO MANAGEMENT, LTD., a Cayman Islands exempted company ("HCLOM", and together with HCM and Acis, the "Parties"). Capitalized terms used herein but not defined have the meanings ascribed thereto in the Agreement for Purchase and Sale of CLO Participation Interests between Acis and HCM dated as of October 7, 2016 (the "Purchase Agreement" and the promissory note therein, the "Note").

RECITALS

Whereas, Acis is portfolio manager to certain collateralized loan obligations listed in Schedule A of the Purchase Agreement and is entitled to fee compensation in connection therewith as set forth therein (the "CLOs", the governing documents thereof, the "CLO Documents" and such fees, the "Servicer Fees");

Whereas, Acis and HCM entered into the Purchase Agreement, whereby Acis sold a portion of its future Servicer Fees to HCM in exchange for cash flows from HCM, in each case as set forth in the Note (such future Servicer Fees identified to be paid to HCM pursuant to the Purchase Agreement, the "HCM Stabilization Fees" and such cash flows from HCM, the "Stabilization Payments");

Whereas, HCM has notified Acis that HCM is unwilling to continue to provide support personnel and other critical services to Acis with respect to the CLOs (the "Notification");

Whereas, Acis has determined that the effect of the Notification is that it cannot fulfill its duties as portfolio manager of the CLOs, and in order to ensure the continued operation of such CLOs and protection for its stakeholders, it must assign its rights as portfolio manager in the CLOs to a qualified successor portfolio manager pursuant to the CLO Documents (a "Successor Manager");

Whereas, HCLOM, a qualified Successor Manager, irrevocably commits to be appointed as Successor Manager in consideration of Acis assigning to it the Note, subject to the conditions set forth in the CLO Documents and pursuant to the terms herein;

Whereas, Acis is expected to incur significant costs and expenses related to ongoing claims and litigation to which Acis is either a party or is otherwise obligated with respect to such costs and expenses (the "Acis Legal Expenses"); and

Whereas, Acis also is expected to have ongoing accounting and administrative expenses (the "Acis Administrative Expenses" and together with the Acis Legal Expenses, the "Acis Expenses").

AGREEMENT

Now, therefore, in consideration of the promises and mutual agreements set forth herein, and in consideration of the mutual representations, warranties and covenants herein, and intending to be legally bound hereby, the Parties agree as follows:

1. Succession. Acis shall promptly provide the Controlling Class (as defined in each of the CLO Indentures) with notice requesting the appointment of HCLOM as Portfolio Manager pursuant to the requirements of the CLO Documents (each, a "Notice" and the period between the Notice and an Appointment (as such term is defined below), the "Post-Notice Period").
2. Successor Manager. Subsequent to the Notices, each of Acis and HCLOM shall promptly pursue Successor Manager appointment of HCLOM in respect of each CLO, including but not limited to achieving all conditions precedent required by the CLO Documents in such respect (consummation of HCLOM's appointment as Portfolio Manager of a given CLO, an "Appointment").
3. Assignment and Transfer of the Promissory Note; Stabilization Payments.
  - a. Effective immediately upon execution of this Agreement by the Parties, all right, title and interest of Acis under the Note, including the right to any and all Stabilization Payments not yet paid to Acis, are hereby irrevocably assigned and transferred by Acis to HCLOM, it being understood that from the date of such assignment, HCLOM shall become the "Payee" thereunder.
  - b. For so long as Acis shall receive Servicer Fees following the date hereof, Acis shall remit to HCM the HCM Stabilization Fees pursuant to the Note Purchase Agreement.
  - c. For so long as HCLOM receives any Servicer Fees following any Appointment, then HCLOM shall remit to HCM any portion of such fees that would otherwise have constituted HCM Stabilization Fees pursuant to the Note Purchase Agreement if Acis was the recipient of such fees.
  - d. HCLOM shall sign a joinder to Note Purchase Agreement upon HCM's written notice thereof.
4. Expense Support. In the event Acis delivers written notice to HCLOM that Acis is unable to pay when due any Acis Expenses, then HCLOM shall promptly pay to Acis, or at Acis' written request, to Acis' creditors, the amount of such shortfall, provided that in no event shall HCLOM's obligations under this paragraph exceed greater than $2 million of Acis Legal Expenses in the aggregate, or greater than $1 million of Acis Administrative Expenses in the aggregate.
5. Indemnity. Acis shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, advance, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated (“Claims”), that my accrue to or be incurred by any Covered Person, or in which any Covered Person may be threatened, relating to this Agreement, including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromise or as fines or penalties, and attorneys’ fees and expenses incurred in connection with the preparation for or defense or disposition of any investigation, action, suit, arbitration or other proceeding (a “Proceeding”), whether civil or criminal (all of such Claims, amounts and expenses referred to therein are referred to collectively as “Damages”), except to the extent that it shall have been determined ultimately by a court of competent jurisdiction, in a final nonappealable judgment, that such Damages arose primarily from fraud, bad faith or willful misconduct of such Covered Person. The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from fraud, bad faith or willful misconduct of any Covered Persons. “Covered Person” means each of HCLOM and HCM, as well as each and every one of their affiliates (other than Acis), and all of HCLOM’s and HCM’s respective managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED, the undersigned, Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("Maker"), hereby promises to pay to the order of Acis Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("Payee"), at its office at 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201 in lawful money of the United States of America, the principal sum of TWELVE MILLION SIX HUNDRED SIXTY-SIX THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED FORTY-SIX DOLLARS ($12,666,446), together with interest on the outstanding principal balance thereof from day to day remaining at the rate of three percent (3%) per annum, as provided herein.

Payments

THE UNPAID PRINCIPAL HEREOF, TOGETHER WITH ALL ACCRUED AND UNPAID INTEREST THEREON, SHALL AUTOMATICALLY BE DUE AND PAYABLE IN FULL, WITHOUT NECESSITY OF DEMAND OR NOTICE, ACCORDING TO THE AMORTIZATION TABLE ATTACHED HERETO AS EXHIBIT A.

Interest on the indebtedness evidenced by this Note shall be computed on the basis of a year of 360 days and the actual number of days elapsed (including the first day but excluding the last day) unless such calculation would result in a rate that exceeds the maximum rate allowed by applicable law (such rate, the "Maximum Rate") in which case interest shall be calculated on the basis of a year of 365 or 366 days, as the case may be. If the regularly scheduled due date for any payment under this Note is not a Business Day, the due date for such payment shall be the next succeeding Business Day, and payment made on such succeeding Business Day shall have the same force and effect as if made on the regularly scheduled due date. "Business Day" means a day, other than a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday, on which a bank in Dallas, Texas is open for business.

- (a) this Note executed by Maker;
- (b) the Agreement for Purchase and Sale of CLO Participation Interests dated of even date herewith (the "Purchase Agreement"), by and between Maker and Payee, and copies of all agreements, documents and instruments executed or delivered in connection therewith and evidence that all conditions to the effectiveness of the Purchase Agreement have been or will be fulfilled contemporaneously with the initial advance under this Note;
- (c) evidence that the execution, delivery and performance by Maker of this Note and all other documents and instruments related to this Note have been duly authorized by, or on behalf of, Maker; and

(d) such other agreements, documents, information, and other assurances as Payee may reasonably request.

Events of Default

Maker shall be in default under this Note upon the occurrence of any of the following events or conditions (each, an "Event of Default"):

(a) the failure of Maker to make any payment required to be made under this Note when such payment becomes due;

(b) Maker defaults in the performance of any obligation, covenant, or agreement now or hereafter made or owed by Maker to Payee, whether under this Note or any related document;

(c) any representation or warranty made by Maker to Payee in connection with this Note or any document executed or delivered in connection therewith, is false or misleading in any material respect when made;

(d) Maker shall commence a voluntary proceeding seeking liquidation, reorganization, or other relief with respect to itself or its debts under any bankruptcy, insolvency, or other similar law now or hereafter in effect, or seeking the appointment of a trustee, receiver, liquidator, custodian, or other similar official for it or a substantial part of its property or shall consent to any such relief or to the appointment of or taking possession by any such official in an involuntary case or other proceeding commenced against it or shall make a general assignment for the benefit of creditors or shall generally fail to pay its debts as they become due or shall take any corporate action to authorize any of the foregoing;

(e) any involuntary proceeding shall be commenced against Maker seeking liquidation, reorganization, or other relief with respect to it or its debts under any bankruptcy, insolvency, or other similar law now or hereafter in effect, or seeking the appointment of a trustee, receiver, liquidator, custodian, or other similar official for it or a substantial part of its property, in each case, that results in the entry of an order for any such relief or appointment that has not been vacated, discharged or stayed or bonded pending appeal within 60 days from the entry thereof;

(f) any lien, attachment, sequestration or similar proceeding against any of Maker's assets or properties other than liens in favor of Payee;

(g) any event or condition occurs that results in any indebtedness of Maker becoming due prior to its scheduled maturity or that enables or permits (with or without the giving of notice, the lapse of time, or both) the holder of such indebtedness to cause any of such indebtedness to become due, or to require the prepayment, repurchase, redemption or defeasance thereof, prior to its scheduled maturity; or

(h) the validity or enforceability of this Note shall be contested or challenged by Maker.

Remedies

Should an Event of Default exist, Payee may but without any obligation to do so, at its option and at any time, and without presentment, demand, or protest, notice of default, dishonor, demand, non-payment, or protest, notice of intent to accelerate all or any part of the advances hereunder, notice of acceleration of all or any part of the indebtedness evidenced by this Note, or notice of any other kind, all of which Maker hereby expressly waives, except for any notice required by applicable statute which cannot be waived: (a) terminate Payee's commitment to make any advances under this Note; (b) declare the indebtedness evidenced by this Note, or any part thereof, immediately due and payable, whereupon the same shall be due and payable (provided, however, that upon the occurrence of any event described in clause (e) of the definition of "Event of Default", such indebtedness shall become immediately due and payable in full without demand or acceleration); (c) reduce any claim to judgment; (d) to the maximum extent permitted under applicable laws, set-off and apply any and all deposits, funds, or assets at any time held and any and all other indebtedness at any time owing by Payee to or for the credit or the account of Maker against any and all obligations, whether or not Payee exercises any other right or remedy hereunder and whether or not such obligations are then matured; (e) may cure any Event of Default, or event of nonperformance under this Note and/or (f) exercise any and all rights and remedies afforded by this Note, or by law or equity or otherwise, as Payee deems appropriate. No failure or delay of the holder hereof to exercise any of its rights or remedies shall not constitute a waiver thereof.

If the holder hereof incurs any costs or expenses in any attempt to enforce payment of all or any part of this Note, or if this Note is placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, Maker agrees to pay all such costs fees and expenses incurred, including without limitation, reasonable attorneys' fees.

Miscellaneous

It is expressly stipulated and agreed to be the intent of Maker and Payee at all times to comply with the applicable law of the State of Texas governing the maximum rate or amount of interest payable on or in connection with the indebtedness under this Note (or applicable United States federal law to the extent that it permits Payee to contract for, charge, take, reserve or receive a greater amount of interest than under Texas law). If such law is ever judicially interpreted so as to render usurious any amount contracted for, charged, taken, reserved or received with respect to this Note, or if any payment by Maker results in Maker having paid any interest in excess of the amount that is permitted by such law, then it is Maker's and Payee's express intent that all excess amounts theretofore collected by Payee be credited on the principal balance hereof (or, if the principal balance has been or would thereby be paid in full, refunded to Maker), and the provisions of this Note shall immediately be deemed reformed and the amounts thereafter collectible thereunder reduced, without the necessity of the execution of any new documents, so as to comply with all such applicable laws, but so as to permit the recovery of the fullest amount otherwise called for thereunder. All sums paid or agreed to be paid to Payee for the use, forbearance or detention of money and other indebtedness evidenced by this Note shall, to the extent permitted by applicable law, be amortized, prorated, allocated and spread throughout the full term of such indebtedness until payment in full so that the rate or amount of interest on account of such indebtedness does not exceed the applicable usury ceiling provided by such applicable law. Notwithstanding any provision contained herein to the contrary, the total amount of interest that Maker is obligated to pay and Payee is entitled to receive with respect to this Note shall not exceed the amount calculated on a simple (i.e., non-compounded) interest basis at the maximum rate allowed by applicable law on principal amounts actually advanced hereunder to or for the account of Maker.

MAKER AND EACH SURETY, GUARANTOR, ENDORSER, AND OTHER PARTY EVER LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF ANY SUMS OF MONEY PAYABLE ON THIS NOTE JOINTLY AND SEVERALLY WAIVE NOTICE, PRESENTMENT, DEMAND FOR PAYMENT, PROTEST, NOTICE OF PROTEST AND NON-PAYMENT OR DISHONOR, NOTICE OF ACCELERATION, NOTICE OF INTENT TO ACCELERATE, NOTICE OF INTENT TO DEMAND, DILIGENCE IN COLLECTING, GRACE, AND ALL OTHER FORMALITIES OF ANY KIND, AND CONSENT TO ALL EXTENSIONS WITHOUT NOTICE FOR ANY PERIOD OR PERIODS OF TIME AND PARTIAL PAYMENTS,

BEFORE OR AFTER MATURITY, AND ANY IMPAIRMENT OF ANY COLLATERAL SECURING THIS NOTE, ALL WITHOUT PREJUDICE TO THE HOLDER. Without limiting the foregoing, any notice or demand upon Maker in connection with this Note shall be in writing and shall become effective (a) upon personal delivery, (b) three (3) days after it shall have been mailed by United States mail, first class, certified or registered, with postage prepaid or (c) when properly transmitted by telecopy, in each case addressed to Maker's address for notice specified in connection with its signature below.

THIS NOTE SHALL BE GOVERNED BY AND CONSTRUED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF TEXAS AND THE APPLICABLE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. THIS NOTE IS PERFORMABLE IN DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS. ANY ACTION OR PROCEEDING UNDER OR IN CONNECTION WITH THIS NOTE AGAINST MAKER OR ANY OTHER PARTY EVER LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF ANY SUMS OF MONEY PAYABLE ON THIS NOTE MAY BE BROUGHT IN ANY STATE OR FEDERAL COURT IN DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS. MAKER AND EACH SUCH OTHER PARTY HEREBY IRREVOCABLY (I) SUBMITS TO THE NONEXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION OF SUCH COURTS AND (II) WAIVES ANY OBJECTION IT MAY NOW OR HEREAFTER HAVE AS TO THE VENUE OF ANY SUCH ACTION OR PROCEEDING BROUGHT IN SUCH COURT OR THAT SUCH COURT IS AN INCONVENIENT FORUM.
