'I would be reluctant to come to the conclusion that this form of duplication was necessary unless it was clear that the jurisdiction under ss 459 and 461 did not permit the whole matter to be dealt with on the petition. It seems to me that although it is true that s 461(2) shows that the normal order under s 461 will be an order against the company or another member, there is no reason why the words of s 461(1) should not be given their full effect and allow the court to give relief in respect of a complaint that the company's affairs have been conducted in a manner unfairly prejudicial to the interests of members, even when this would involve giving relief against a respondent who is no longer a member. For that reason, I am not willing to strike out H as a party to the petition.'

Turning to H's opposition to the buy-out relief sought to be added by amendment and in response to H's argument that no such order could be made against a non-member, Hoffmann J said (at 71):

g
'Section 461(2)(d), which I have already read, provides for such an order being made against members of the company but says nothing about the order being made against a non-member. Counsel for the petitioners, on the other hand, says that there are cases in which a person may be, for the purposes of giving relief, identified with a company which he controls and that it may be possible to obtain an order to that effect against H either under the broad jurisdiction of s 461(1) or by identifying H with the Gibraltar company [the offshore company I have mentioned]. It is not necessary for me to express any view on whether that can be done because I do not think it would be right to strike out the paragraph seeking such relief unless I was satisfied that the possibility of obtaining it was perfectly hopeless. I do not feel in a position at the moment to say that and I do not think it would prejudice H very greatly if the paragraph seeking that relief were to remain in the petition, given that in the light of the conclusion to which I have already come he will remain as a respondent to the petition in respect of the relief sought under para 2.'

a It is notable that, despite his reading ss 459 and 461 together (he speaks (at 71) of 'the jurisdiction under ss 459 and 461') Hoffmann J sees no reason why the words of s 461(1) should not be given their full effect. Mr Aldous can point to the judge's more cautious approach to the buy-out jurisdiction but, even there, where he is saying 'I do not think it would be right to strike out . . . relief unless I was satisfied that the possibility of obtaining it was perfectly hopeless' his words look to me more the language of a judge who b considered that there might well be jurisdiction (but one which it was urged was hopeless in point of its exercise) rather than that of a judge who is indicating his concluded views on whether or not there was a jurisdiction.

c Mr Aldous points to the facts that H had been a controller of the company, a person responsible for the unfair conduct alleged, had been a member of the company, was personally accused of wrongdoing and could have been the object of a derivative action. I can see that Re a company (No 005287 of 1985) thus falls well short of deciding the case before me but I nonetheless attach some importance to the fact that Hoffmann J, upon his reading the two sections together, had seen no reason why the words of s 461(1) should not be given their full effect and accordingly had permitted the addition of a claim for a buy-out against a non-member.

d Next in time was Re a company (No 007281 of 1986) [1987] BCLC 593, a decision of Vinelott J. An investment company, 3i, which had provided working capital, held cumulative convertible participating preferred ordinary shares and cumulative redeemable preference shares in the company. The company's articles had elaborate provisions as to pre-emption rights. One of e the directors was voted off the board. He found the other directors had set up a rival group of companies and had stripped the company of its assets, so he presented a petition under s 459. 3i was a respondent to the petition notwithstanding that it was not said that it had taken any part in or had been concerned in any way in the unfairly prejudicial conduct. No relief was sought against it. The primary relief sought was the purchase of the petitioner's f shares by the three other directors but the petition asked, alternatively, for such other relief under s 461 as the court should think just. Vinelott J held that as 3i was a member of the company and was affected by the relief sought in that an order for a buy-out by the three directors of the petitioner's shares would override 3i's pre-emption rights, it was right that it should remain a respondent. He said ([1987] BCLC 593 at 598-599):

i 'A petition under s 459 is not analogous to litigation in which the issues raised affect only those against whom allegations are made by the plaintiff. A closer analogy is an administration action, where all beneficiaries having an interest in the relief sought should be made parties or represented. The practice that has so far been followed in the Companies Court is to require that all members of the company whose interests would have been affected by the misconduct alleged or who would be affected by an order made by the court under the very wide powers conferred by s 461 are to be made respondents to a petition or served with it. In practice, this means that in the case of a small, private company every member ought to be joined.'

Then, a little later he said ([1987] BCLC 593 at 599):

[1994] 2 BCLC 420

'In my judgment, 3i is clearly affected by the relief sought in the petition which, amongst other things, would override its rights under the pre-emption provisions. 3i also has voting control over the company in general meeting, and would be directly concerned if any order were made regulating the future conduct of the company pending the acquisition of the petitioner's shares. In these circumstances I think that 3i was properly made a respondent and should not now be struck out.'

Mr Aldous is, of course, able to stress that there 3i was, firstly, a member of the company and, secondly, a person affected by the relief claimed. But the case does show that it is not a necessary condition of joinder that a respondent should have been involved in any way as a wrongdoer in the events complained of.

In Re BSB Holdings Ltd [1993] BCLC 246 a similar problem came again before Vinelott J. The petitioner complained that the business of 'Holdings', the company in which it held shares, had been hived down to B Sky B which was at first a wholly owned subsidiary of Holdings but which later then passed into the control and ownership of the respondents in a way which was alleged unfairly to prejudice the petitioner. The petitioner sought an order that the respondents, or some of them, should transfer their shares in B Sky B back to Holdings or direct to the petitioner. No relief was sought against B Sky B itself, which was not a member of Holdings, and it applied that the petition should be struck out as against it.

The 3i case was cited to Vinelott J who took the view that, despite B Sky B not being a member of Holdings, it was clearly affected by the relief sought in that the order sought was that there should be a transfer and registration of its shares. The body of its corporators would change (see [1993] BCLC 246 at 253). But the judge added that its joinder could be justified on another ground, namely that it was directly concerned in the transactions of which complaint was made (see [1993] BCLC 246 at 254). It was a party, and a necessary party, to one of the agreements which was complained of. Vinelott J held that B Sky B was properly joined because it was an actor and played a central role in the transactions of which complaint was made (see [1993] BCLC 246 at 255).

Finally on the authorities, in Re Baltic Real Estate Ltd (No 1) [1993] BCLC 498 Knox J had before him an application in relation to a s 459 petition of a majority (51%) shareholder in a company. The second and third respondents to the petition were the former directors of that company who, the petitioner alleged, had committed breaches of fiduciary duty as directors. The second and third respondents were also its former shareholders as to 49% but had held their shares only briefly before transferring them to the fourth and fifth respondents (persons out of the jurisdiction, not served by the time of the hearing before Knox J and in respect of whom leave to serve out was needed). There were allegations that the fourth and fifth respondents, the registered holders of the 49%, were either controlled by the second and third respondents or held the 49% of the shares in the company in trust for the second and third respondents. The petitioner sought as his principal relief an order that the second and third respondents, alternatively the fourth and fifth respondents, should be ordered to sell or procure the sale of the 49% of the shares in the company registered in the name of the fourth and fifth respondents to the petitioner at such price as the court should think fit.

- a It was argued on behalf of the second and third respondents that as they were not present members they were not proper respondents and, as they were not parties to the relief sought either, the petition should be struck out as against them as not disclosing any reasonable cause of action and as being an abuse of process. That argument succeeded not, as I see it, because the
- b second and third respondents were not members of the company, but because, as Knox J put it (at 502):

‘It seems to me that the proper parties to this relief are the shareholders in whom the shares in question are vested and with whom the court, in dealing with the rights of members, is primarily concerned.’

- c There is no discussion in the judgment of the jurisdiction under s 459. Knox J plainly took the view that the fact (as alleged) that the fourth and fifth respondents were but trustees for the second and third respondents or were controlled by the second and third respondents was not, on its own, enough to justify the second and third respondents, being necessary parties. But there
- d were some other arguments which Knox J indicated had failed to persuade him that the second and third respondents should continue to be respondents. Firstly, that they were the persons against whom the breach of duty was alleged and, secondly, that, under the rubric of ‘such other relief as the court should think fit’, the relief eventually granted by the court might be other than
- e the sale of shares to the petitioner, which was the principal relief sought, and might more involve the second and third respondents than would that sale.

- f That concludes a look at the authorities cited to me. Whilst I would be very willing to following a pattern that emerged from the earlier cases at first instance, I do not regard any clear pattern as having yet emerged, and I have certainly found nothing conclusive that suggests that the words of ss 459 and
- g 461 should not be given their full effect. From the existing authorities cited it can be seen that in an appropriate case relief can be sought against a non-member other than the company itself, or against a person not involved in the acts complained of (at least if that person would be affected by the relief sought) and that a person against whom no relief is in terms sought cannot necessarily escape being a respondent, whilst, on other facts, it can be right to strike out a petition, even as against those whose acts are complained of, so long as no relief is sought against such a person.

- h This summary suggests to me that in point of jurisdiction the wide language of ss 459 and 461 is not to be cut down. None the less, cases may arise where, notwithstanding that the claim cannot be clearly said to be outside that wide jurisdiction, the likelihood of the court’s discretion being exercised so as to lead to relief against, or relief having any material effect upon, a given respondent can be seen to be so remote that the case can fairly be described as ‘perfectly hopeless’, to use Hoffmann J’s phrase, and hence that it would be abusive to require that respondent to remain as such or to be added as such. Is this such a case?

- i It is best first to look at the likelihood or otherwise of OAG being ordered, with the other respondents, to buy the petitioner’s shares – the only substantive relief sought against OAG in the amended petition. Prima facie, when a litigant's case against a person is within the relevant jurisdiction he should be permitted, if he so chooses, to pursue his case against that person. Thus I framed the question at the end of the last paragraph in the way that I did, rather than by reference to RSC Ord 15, r 6, because, on the facts of this case, where no blame can be laid at the petitioner's door for not including OAG from the outset or for delay in applying to amend, it seems appropriate to look at the petitioner's position more as it would be on an application for a strike out by OAG than where the petitioner comes cap in hand, as it were, asking for leave to amend. However, it is also to be borne in mind that it is plainly abusive to press a person into hopeless litigation, litigation which cannot succeed. Quite apart from other vexation inherent in litigation, even a party who recovers an order for his costs against a solvent party on an indemnity basis may well be left substantially out of pocket at the end of a s 459 petition, a type of proceeding known neither for its speed nor its economy.

At this point in the argument, Mr Aldous redeploys on the discretionary side of things many of the arguments used unsuccessfully (as I have held) on the jurisdiction. OAG is not and never has been a member of the company. OAG is not said to have controlled the company or its board or even to have had a nominee on the company's board. True it is that its wholly owned subsidiary, Newco, is a respondent but, as did Knox J in Re Baltic Real Estate Ltd (No 1), I see it as no reason, sufficient in itself, for the joinder of a person as a further party that an existing respondent is owned by or controlled by that person. Newco can respond for itself and were there a principle that shareholders in or directors or controllers of a corporate respondent could, without more, be required to be parties in addition to that corporate respondent itself, then s 459 would indeed be oppressive.

I thus see neither OAG's ownership of Newco nor the potential effect of the petition on Newco as being reason for OAG's joinder. It is said that beyond the buy-out required of it, OAG is affected by the relief sought in that its wholly owned subsidiary Newco may find itself holding its assets on constructive trust for, and may be liable to account to, others, but, again, the simple answer is, as I see it, that Newco, already a party, is able fully to deal with that, and if it sufficed, without more, to require a company to be respondent that the assets of a company in which it held shares might be affected by the relief sought that would, again, be a needlessly oppressive burden on corporations.

Mr Aldous emphasises that no substantive relief is sought against OAG in the petition save that it is sought that with six others (other than the company itself, and on the basis that Star is added) it should be a joint purchaser of the petitioner's shares in the company. There is no suggestion in evidence that the addition of OAG is necessary if there is to be a purchaser able to pay the price required or that the other respondents are of straw. There is nothing to suggest that a buy-out without OAG as a joint or several buyer is impracticable or impossible or that such an order against the original respondents would be worthless or nugatory. As the original respondents include persons who are alleged to be the wrongdoers in relation to the acts complained of and who are said to have profited in substantial amounts from those acts, then if they, if ordered to do so, would be able to buy – and it is nowhere said they would not be so able – Mr Aldous urges that no court is likely to find it necessary to join with them as a co-purchaser a party, OAG, a against whom nothing wrong is urged. It is a strong course, he says, to require a party at what is likely to be considerable expense and against its will to become a shareholder in a company, a shell company, and to do so when the party is not said to have done anything wrong and where there are others who are wrongdoers and who are available as alternative purchasers. So to order, Mr Aldous urges, would be remarkable, unprecedented and unnecessary. He goes on to show that the petition contains no allegation of any wrong done by OAG to the company; it is nowhere said the company has a cause of action against OAG.

b Against this Mr Potts took me to the provisions of the amended petition. As early as December 1990, well before the sale of the company's assets to Newco, OAG and its solicitors were involved in discussions for the grant to OAG of an option to acquire the issued capital of Newco. Mr Potts says that c from the outset a number of related steps were planned to lead to the conclusion that was ultimately arrived at and of which the petitioner complains and that OAG was party to the planning from that outset. He says that OAG was involved in proposals as to a loan to the company which was made with the intent of being lent-on by the company to discharge an individual's debts and that OAG was concerned in carrying through such a d proposal. OAG, the amended petition alleges, was party to an option agreement of 21 December 1990 whereunder it would be able to acquire the capital of Newco for a price strangely expressed as – e 'subject to a maximum sum of £8 million or as might otherwise be agreed between Star and OAG with a maximum of £10 million and an overall minimum of £1 million.'

f It was, says Mr Potts and as the amended petition alleges, the intention of OAG throughout in relation to the option agreement that the company would hive up its business and goodwill to Newco in return for an indemnity and for nothing else of any real worth and that only after that would the option be exercised by OAG. OAG knew and approved the price paid on the hive up to Newco and was conscious of at least the possibility of that transaction being at a substantial undervalue, as it demonstrated by way of its solicitors pressing for and obtaining an undertaking that no steps would be taken for g at least two years to put the company into voluntary winding up. The acquisition of Newco's shares by OAG was an acquisition improperly given financial assistance by the company in breach of s 151 of the 1985 Act, the company at the time being a subsidiary of Newco. In these ways, says Mr Potts, as para 107 of the amended petition states, OAG 'was directly concerned in transactions of which complaint is made herein'. It is in this h context that Mr Potts says that the petitioner's complaint is (and I use his words) that there is here a 'con' and that OAG is 'in it up to its neck'. However, I think I need to be a little more analytical than that. Mr Potts's strong language is surely that of, at worst, conspiracy or, at least, of OAG having knowledge – actual, imputed or constructive knowledge – that its activities or omissions were or might represent 'unfair prejudice to the petitioner or that OAG committed some other material wrongs. But i no such an allegation is anywhere to be found in the petition. Such wrongs, if there were any, under s 151 are not said to be wrongs by OAG. It is nowhere said that what OAG acquired was acquired for less than full market consideration, and the matters pleaded suggest, if anything, that it has paid or will pay a little over the odds for what it received. Mr Potts gave me a list of the paragraphs in the amended petition said to show OAG's involvement in the matters complained of, and para 107 of the amended petition gives a similar but not identical list. I hope I have not overlooked anything material in the 94 pages of the body of the petition but I have not found any reference to anything done or omitted by OAG being alleged to have been wrongful or unlawful or in breach of some duty or obligation upon OAG. Whilst it is undoubtedly the case that OAG was, in a sense, concerned in transactions of which complaint is made, I cannot in the circumstances alleged in the amended petition see that concern as amounting to anything material. Both Mr Aldous and Mr Snowden made the valid point that if a person against whom no wrong doing is alleged, whose involvement, such as it is, has been paid for at 100p in the pound, and who is not a member, can be required against his will to be a respondent who may be ordered to buy shares, then no trading company could feel safe that it would not be expensively drawn into the internal disputes of its customers and of others with whom it might deal.

Mr Aldous next argues that all the attacks made on the hive up agreement are attacks not on anything done or omitted by OAG but by the trio and that the company and the petitioner (by way of derivative action) have full causes of action in respect thereof. The specially adjusted price which the petitioner claims should be paid for the petitioner's shares is, in respect of any suggested adjustment, to be adjusted by reason of complaints against the trio, not against OAG. To require OAG to pay some special price for the petitioner's shares not only involves adjusting the price to be paid by OAG by reference to someone else's wrongs but, as OAG has paid full value already for what it had received, would involve it in paying more than once over for the very same assets, a step which, however possible against a wrongdoer, would be unprecedented against a party not said to be in breach of any duty or obligation whatsoever.

None of these points put by OAG and by the original respondents is devoid of weight. I do not need to ascribe to each a separate force, but I do say that together their weight is such that, in my judgment, it can fairly be said that if the proposed amendments were allowed the petitioner would be quite unable on the amended petition to obtain the only relief, the buy-out, which it seeks against OAG.

Although the court could, if it chose, make a buy-out order against OAG of the kind which the petitioner seeks, it is on the case put in the amended petition, even if wholly true, plain and obvious, in my judgment, that no court would make such an order. Had OAG been a respondent from the start it could, in my view, have successfully moved to have the buy-out provisions and its role as a respondent struck out. It not yet being a respondent, it would be an abuse of process were it to be required, against its will, to be a respondent obliged to resist relief which would in practice never be granted.

Once that has emerged, so far as concerns the buy-out relief, the rest of the matter is readily determinable by reference to RSC Ord 15, r 6, which is made to apply by r 2(2) of the 1986 Rules. So far as material, Ord 15, r 6 provides at para (2) that the court may:

a (b) order any of the following persons to be added as a party, namely
 – (i) any person who ought to have been joined as a party or whose presence before the Court is necessary to ensure that all matters in dispute in the cause or matter may be effectually or completely determined and adjudicated upon, or (ii) any person between whom and any party to the cause or matter there may exist a question or issue arising out of or relating to or connected with any relief or remedy claimed in the cause b or matter which in the opinion of the Court it would be just and convenient to determine as between him and that party as well as between the parties to the cause or matter.’

c Once it is recognised that no buy-out relief will be ordered against it, OAG’s presence is not necessary for the purpose specified in (i), nor is there any question or issue between OAG and the petitioner such that it would be just and convenient to hear that matter alongside the petition. Given, as I have already indicated, that OAG’s ownership or control of Newco is, in my view, no reason to require the joinder of OAG, I see no reason either why OAG is a person who ‘ought to have been joined’ within (i). Once the buy-out relief falls away as a possibility, Ord 15, r 6 requires, in my judgment, d a conclusion that OAG should not be joined as a respondent at all, and I so rule.

e However, the summons before me raises questions other than the one that I have so far dealt with and concerns respondents other than OAG. Subject to my first being addressed on the costs so far and any other questions involving OAG, I shall, once OAG has withdrawn, go on to hear the remaining issues on this summons and on the summons as to security for costs later in the day.

[His Lordship then heard argument on costs]

f LINDSAY J. So far as concerns the costs of OAG, I am concerned only with their costs of 28 March and of the longer later two day hearing. The costs of OAG of and incidental to the summons in relation to those two hearings should be paid by the petitioner, to be taxed and paid forthwith.

g So far as concerns the costs of the original respondents other than the company which, as it transpires, has taken no part, it seems to me that their costs of three occasions are in issue: those before Mr Registrar Buckley on 22 March, those before me on 28 March, and the later fuller hearing of two days or so. The argument has, all along, even on the part of the original respondents, principally concerned the original respondent’s wish that OAG h should not be required to be a respondent and it seems to me that the original respondents were entitled to take that view, just as much as OAG was entitled to take that view and, moreover, the original respondents have in that respect succeeded. Mr Potts argues that they would have been before the court in any event, even if OAG’s addition had not been sought, but it seems to me that the battle would have been then a very much simpler one and might indeed i not have taken place.

I think the appropriate order for the costs of the original respondents other than the company is that those costs should be taxed on a standard basis (not forthwith) and that they should be required to be paid in any event by the petitioners to the original respondents other than the company.

Landlord and tenant—Covenant—Service charge—Long leases for holiday chalets—Clause in leases purporting to provide for payment of charge at fixed sum to be increased at compound rate of 10% per year—Clause inserted at time of high inflation—Inflation subsequently at consistently lower annual rates—Landlord levying service charge in accordance with specified sum—Tenants claiming commercial sense requiring clause to be construed as variable service charge based on actual expenditure with fixed sum as cap only—Whether clause providing for fixed sum payment—Whether open to court to depart from natural meaning of clause to prevent commercially absurd result

From 1974 the then owners of an area of land granted a number of 99-year leases of plots on which holiday chalets were to be built, the preamble to each lease stating that it would be granted “upon terms similar in all respects” to the other leases, the introductory words of clause 3 providing that each lessee's covenants as to use and repair of chalets were, inter alia, for the benefit of other lessees, and clause 4(8) containing a covenant by the lessors that the covenants imposed on other lessees were to like effect. Clause 3 of the first group of leases included, in clause 3(2), a lessee's covenant “to pay ... a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessors in the repair, maintenance, renewal and the provision of services [as set out in the lease] in the yearly sum of £90”, increasing thereafter at a three-yearly compound rate of 10%. Subsequently, leases in respect of further chalets were granted in which clause 3(2) provided for an annual 10% compound increase. In 2011 the tenants of those chalets whose annual service charge had risen to over £2,700, as opposed to £282 for the chalets subject to the earlier leases, and who claimed that an interpretation of the clause which required a fixed sum payment resulted in such an absurdly high annual service charge that it could not be right, claimed that clause 3(2) should be read as requiring them to pay a variable sum, being a fair proportion of the cost of providing the services, with the specified sum being no more than a cap on the maximum sum payable. The landlord commenced CPR Pt 8 proceedings in the county court seeking a declaration that clause 3(2) required the payment of the fixed sum and not any lesser variable amount. The judge accepted the construction contended for by the tenants and so dismissed the claim. Allowing an appeal by the landlord the High Court judge held that, on a natural reading of the clause, the object of the verb “to pay” was the fixed sum of £90 as escalated, whereas the construction contended for by the tenants would involve rewriting the bargain which the parties had made, which, given the high levels of inflation in the United Kingdom when those leases had been granted, could not be said at that time to have lacked commercial purpose. Dismissing the tenants' appeal, the Court of Appeal affirmed the High Court judge's reasoning and held, additionally, that the words “a proportionate part” were not inconsistent with a fixed service charge in circumstances where other lessees were contributing to the overall service charge, which in consequence was to be apportioned between them.

On the tenants' further appeal—

Held, dismissing the appeal (Lord Carnwath JSC dissenting), (1) that the interpretation of a contractual provision, including one as to service charges, involved identifying what the parties had meant through the eyes of a reasonable reader, and, save in a very unusual case, that meaning was most obviously to be *1620 gleaned from the language of the provision; that, although the less clear the relevant words were, the more the court could properly depart from their natural meaning, it was not to embark on an exercise of searching for drafting infelicities in order to facilitate a departure from the natural meaning; that commercial common sense was relevant only to the extent of how matters would or could have been perceived by the parties, or by reasonable people in the position of the parties, as at the date on which the contract had been made; and that, moreover, since the purpose of contractual interpretation was to identify what the parties had agreed, not what the court thought that they should have agreed, it was not the function of a court to relieve a party from the consequences of imprudence or poor advice (post, paras 15-20, 23, 66, 76-77).

Dicta of Lord Hoffmann in Chartbrook Ltd v Persimmon Homes Ltd [2009] AC 1101, para 14, HL(E) and of Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony JSC in Rainy Sky SA v Kookmin Bank [2011] 1 WLR 2900, para 21, SC(E) applied.

(2) That, applying those principles, the natural meaning of the words used in clause 3(2) was clear, namely that the first half of the clause stipulated that the lessee was to pay an annual service charge and the second half identified how that charge was to be calculated, namely by way of a fixed increase in the annual sum, which was explicable on the basis that the parties had assumed that the cost of providing the services would increase in line with the level of inflation then current and so accorded with commercial common sense at the date of the agreement; that the fact that it was now apparent that the sum payable could substantially exceed the parties' expectations at the time of the grant of the lease was not a reason for giving the clause a different meaning; that it followed that clause 3(2) of each lease fell to be applied as charging a fixed amount increasing annually at the compound rate stipulated therein; that such conclusion was unaffected by any building or letting scheme to be implied from the preamble to each lease read together with the introductory words to clause 3 and with clause 4(8), in that, even on an assumption that such a scheme of reciprocity and mutual enforceability of covenants could extend to a positive covenant to pay a service charge, it could not extend to the implication of a term preventing the lessor from recovering more by way of service charge than could be recovered under each of the earlier leases; and that, accordingly, the landlord was entitled to the declaration sought (post, paras 24-26, 35, 48-49, 51, 55-58, 60, 62, 66, 75, 77).

APPEAL from the Court of Appeal

By a claim form issued in the Swansea County Court dated 7 December 2011 the claimant landlord, Paddy Arnold, freehold owner of the Oxwich Leisure Park, Oxwich, Gower, Swansea, sought against the defendant tenants, Rodney Britton and 42 others, each being a lessee of a chalet on the land under a 99-year lease from 12 December 1974, a declaration that (i) clause 3(2) of the lease obliged the lessee to pay a fixed sum of £90 in the first year of the term and thereafter a fixed sum which rose by the rate of 10% per annum, and (ii) accordingly, the sum payable pursuant to clause 3(2) was not a “service charge” within section 18 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 . On 1 June 2012 Judge Jarman QC, sitting in the Cardiff County Court, refused to grant the declaration sought and instead declared that (i) clause 3(2) required the lessee to pay a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessor in the repair, maintenance, renewal and provision of services set out in the respective lease, the charge being limited to a yearly sum of £90 for the first year of the term granted by each lease and to a yearly sum increasing by 10% per annum for every subsequent year of the respective lease, and (ii) such charge was a service charge within section 18 of the 1985 Act.

*1622

The claimant appealed. On 3 December 2012 Morgan J, sitting in the Cardiff District Registry [2012] EWHC 3451 (Ch); [2013] L & TR 174 allowed the appeal and granted a declaration in the terms sought by her.

38 of the tenants appealed. On 22 July 2013 the Court of Appeal (Richards, Davis, Lloyd Jones LJJ) [2013] EWCA Civ 902; [2013] L & TR 371 dismissed the appeal.

On 11 February 2014 the Supreme Court (Lord Neuberger of Abbotsbury PSC, Lord Carnwath, Lord Toulson JJSC) granted those tenants permission to appeal, pursuant to which they appealed. The issue for the court, as stated in the parties' agreed statement of facts and issues, was whether as a matter of interpretation (including the possible implication of a term) the service charge clause in each of the leases provided for a fixed service charge with annual compounded increases at the rate of 10%, or for a variable service charge subject to a cap.

The facts are stated in the judgments of Lord Neuberger of Abbotsbury PSC and Lord Carnwath JSC.

Timothy Morshead QC and Rawdon Crozier (instructed by Fursdon Knapper Solicitors, Plymouth ) for the tenants.

The six principles applicable when ascertaining the meaning of a document which are applicable here are as follow. (i) In order to ascertain the meaning of a document the court must undertake an iterative process, checking each of the rival meanings against other provisions of the document and investigating its commercial consequences: see In re Sigma Finance Corpn [2010] 1 All ER 571 , para 12. (ii) Any test for ambiguity must be conducted after and in light of the iterative process, not before or apart from that process: see Napier Park European Credit Opportunities Fund Ltd v Harbourmaster Pro-Rata CLO 2 BV [2014] EWCA Civ 984 at [36]-[37]. As a matter of law it is wrong to foreshorten or downplay the iterative process merely because language viewed in isolation appears at first glance to be unambiguous. (iii) Generally speaking, the commercial purpose of the contract is more important than niceties of language. Even where neither of the rival meanings produces an outcome which can be characterised as flouting business common sense, it is appropriate to adopt the more, rather than the less, commercial construction where the clause is capable of both meanings: see Rainy Sky SA v Kookmin Bank [2011] 1 WLR 2900 , paras 25-30. If detailed semantic and syntactical analysis of words in a commercial contract is going to lead to a conclusion which flouts business common sense, it must be made to yield to business common sense: see Antaios Cia Naviera SA v Salen Rederierna AB (The Antaios) [1985] AC 191 , 201. (iv) The court should be wary of an interpretation which makes the structure and language of other parts of the document appear arbitrary and irrational when it is possible for the concepts employed by the parties to be combined in a rational way: see Chartbrook Ltd v Persimmon Homes Ltd [2009] AC 1101 , para 20. (v) The document must be construed as a whole, viewing the words used therein against the relevant background and having regard to context. The relevant background includes facts, forming part of the circumstances in which the parties contract, in which one or both may take no particular interest, their minds being addressed to or concentrated on other facts so that if asked they would assert that they did not have these facts in the forefront of their mind, but that will not prevent those facts from forming part of an objective setting in which the *1623 contract is to be construed: see Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Yngvar Hansen-Tangen (trading as HE Hansen-Tangen) [1976] 1 WLR 989 , 996-997 and Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd [2009] 1 WLR 1988 , para 25. Moreover, in the context of leases, service charge provisions should be construed restrictively. (vi) The court's interpretation must promote the purposes and values which are expressed or implicit in the wording: Debenhams Retail plc v Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd [2005] STC 1443 , para 27. This principle is not limited to cases where circumstances have changed since the date of the contract.

After the court has ascertained the meaning of a document, it must correct any mistake made by the parties in their choice of language and/or imply any term necessary to give effect to the ascertained meaning: see Aberdeen City Council v Stewart Milne Group Ltd 2012 SC (UKSC) 240 . In particular, the court will imply a term where the parties contracted on an assumption which has since been falsified by events: see H Waites Ltd v Hambleton Court Ltd [2014] 1 EGLR 119 , paras 65-67.

Here, the reasonable expectations of the parties must have been that, between them, the tenants on the estate would reimburse the landlord for the actual expenditure incurred from year to year, with the overall cost being spread fairly between them, and with the percentage operating merely as a maximum annual increase so as to control excessive expenditure whether driven by inflation or otherwise (in the place of an alternative control such as restricting recovery to “reasonable” expenditure). The drafting of the various versions of the clause in dispute—clause 3(2)—was predicated on an assumption, namely that the landlord's actual expenditure would rise by at least 10% per annum. Where, as has happened, circumstances have changed so that that assumption had become falsified, the correct response of the court, applying the above principles, is to recognise that the effect intended by the parties—having regard to the purpose and the values of the lease—is no longer being achieved, with the result that the implication of a term reflecting that purpose and those values is necessary.

Crozier followed.

Michael Daiches (instructed by Morgan LaRoche Solicitors, Swansea ) for the landlord.

The question whether a term should be implied only falls for consideration after the meaning of the contract has been ascertained from the express language (in context): see Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd [2009] 1 WLR 1988 , para 17. Ordinary principles of contractual construction apply to leases: there is no special rule that service charge provisions are in general to be construed restrictively.

Here, the meaning of clause 3(2) is plain and unambiguous. The lessee was to pay an annual charge of £90 etc, as consideration for the provision by the lessor of the specified services. There is no basis for asserting that there is a linguistic mistake within the clause. In particular, there is nothing in the wording of the leases which shows an intention that the lessee was to pay a variable service charge subject to a cap.

A fixed annual service charge is intended to represent the annualised average expenses and outgoings estimated to be incurred by the lessor throughout the entire term of the lease. The essence of a fixed charge is that the annual payments do not fluctuate according to the actual expenses and *1624 outgoings incurred by the landlord during any particular accounting period. The expression in clause 3(2) requiring payment of “a proportionate part” of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessors is not merely consistent with a fixed service charge; it is paradigm wording for a fixed service charge. If the parties had intended that the lessees should pay a variable service charge subject to a cap, they would undoubtedly have made express provision for the quantification, ascertainment and collection of the yearly variable charge: there is none. Nor is there any commercial purpose for a landlord agreeing to a variable service charge provision subject to a cap. Far from it being clear that the parties intended that the lessee should pay a variable service charge subject to a cap, it is abundantly clear that they did not.

Once the meaning of clause 3(2) has been ascertained by the process of construing the express terms, the iterative process is at an end and there is no need to consider the question of implied terms. In any event, a term cannot be implied which is inconsistent with the meaning derived from the express terms. Any reliance on H Waites Ltd v Hambleton Court Ltd [2014] 1 EGLR 119 is misplaced. The parties did not assume that the landlord's actual expenditure would rise by at least 10% per annum: that would take no account of infrequently occurring major expenditure. In so far as the parties made any assumptions, the only relevant one was that the lessees would pay a fixed service charge, increasing at the rate of 10% per annum, regardless of actual inflation. Such assumption can never be “falsified” by actual inflation rates, no matter how far such rates might diverge from 10% per annum. The fact that the parties may have acted on the basis that the average inflation rate throughout the term would be 10% was not an assumption; it was a best guess made in the knowledge that the chances of average inflation actually turning out to be 10% throughout the term would be virtually nil. That best guess would never be falsified no matter what the actual inflation rates were.

A term cannot be implied into a lease to supply a meaning which is inconsistent with the express language of the contract. Nor can commercial considerations supply a meaning which is inconsistent with the express language of the contract. In any event, any such commerciality argument would be in substance an argument based on 34 years' hindsight, namely that actual inflation would be significantly below 10% per annum. The risk which the parties took in selecting an inflation adjustment rate as a fixed percentage was one which they were perfectly entitled to judge—and must be inferred to have judged—for themselves. It is not for the court to judge the wisdom of the parties' bargain or to second-guess their motives.

Morshead QC replied.

The court took time for consideration.

10 June 2015. The following judgments were handed down.

LORD NEUBERGER OF ABBOTSBURY PSC (with whom LORD SUMPTION and LORD HUGHES JJSC agreed)

1. This appeal concerns the interpretation of service charge contribution provisions in the leases of a number of chalets in a caravan park in south Wales.

The facts

2. The facts may be summarised as follows (although they are more fully set out by Lord Carnwath JSC at paras 81-103).

3. Oxwich Leisure Park is on the Gower peninsular, and contains 91 chalets, each of which is let on very similar terms. The five leases which we have seen were granted between 1978 and 1991, either for a premium (of less than £20,000) or in return for the lessee constructing the chalet. Each of the 91 chalets was let on a lease which was for a term of 99 years from 25 December 1974 and reserved a rent of £10 per annum increasing by £5 for each subsequent period of 21 years. Paragraph (2) of the recital of each lease contains the statement that the chalets on the leisure park were intended to be subject to leases “upon terms similar in all respects to the present demise”.

4. Clause 3 of each lease contains various covenants by the lessee, and it is introduced by the words:

“The lessee hereby covenants with the lessor and with and for the benefit of the owners and lessees from time to time during the currency of the term hereby granted of the other plots on the estate so far as the obligations hereafter mentioned are capable of benefitting them ...”

The covenants that follow concern use, repair, alienation and the like. Crucially for present purposes, clause 3(2) is a covenant to pay an annual service charge. Each lease also contains covenants by the lessor. One such covenant is to provide services to the park, such as maintaining roads, paths, fences, a recreation ground and drains, mowing lawns, and removing refuse. The lessor also covenants in clause 4(8) that leases of other chalets “shall contain covenants on the part of the lessees thereof to observe the like obligations as are contained herein or obligations as similar thereto as the circumstances permit”.

5. 25 of the chalets are said by the respondent, the current owner of the leisure park and the landlord under the leases, to be subject to leases containing a service charge provision in clause 3(2), which requires the lessee to pay for the first year of the term a fixed sum of £90 per annum, and for each ensuing year a fixed sum representing a 10% increase on the previous year —ie an initial annual service charge of £90, which increases at a compound rate of 10% in each succeeding year. The issue on this appeal is whether the respondent's interpretation of clause 3(2) in those 25 leases is correct.

6. Of the 25 leases in question, 21 were granted between 1977 and 1991. Prior to the grant of most of those 21 leases, the other 70 chalets had been the subject of leases granted from the early 1970s. In each of those 70 leases, clause 3(2) was a covenant by the lessee:

“To pay to the lessors without any deduction in addition to the said rent a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessors in the repair maintenance renewal and the provision of services hereafter set out the yearly sum of £90 and VAT (if any) for the first three years of the term hereby granted increasing thereafter by ten pounds per hundred for every subsequent three year period or part thereof.”

*1626 The effect of this clause, at least on the face of it, is that the initial service charge of £90 per annum was to be increased on a compound basis by 10% every three years, which is roughly equivalent to a compound rate of 3% per annum.

7. The 21 leases referred to in para 6 have two slightly different versions of clause 3(2), but the clause can be set out in the following form (with the words shown in italics included in 14 of the 21 leases, but not in the other seven):

8. To complicate matters a little further, the service charge clause in four of these 21 leases (being four of the seven which did not include the words in italics in the preceding quotation), had the word “for” before “the yearly sum of £90”. These four leases also included a proviso to the effect that, so long as “the term hereby created is vested in the [original lessees] or the survivor of them”, clause 3(2) would be treated as being in the form set out in para 6 above. This proviso has ceased to have effect as these four leases are no longer vested in the original lessees.

9. Finally, the service charge clause in four of the 70 leases referred to in para 6 above were varied pursuant to deeds of variation executed between October 1998 and August 2002 so as to be identical to that set out in para 7 above, including the words in italics.

The issues between the parties

10. As already explained, the respondent, the current landlord, contends that the service charge provisions in clause 3(2) of the 25 leases referred to in paras 6-9 above have the effect of providing for a fixed annual charge of £90 for the first year of the term, increasing each subsequent year by 10% on a compound basis. The appellants, the current tenants under 24 of the 25 leases, primarily contend that the respondent's construction results in such an increasingly absurdly high annual service charge in the later years of each of the 25 leases that it cannot be right. They argue that, properly read, each service charge clause in the 25 leases requires the lessee to pay a fair proportion of the lessor's costs of providing the services, subject to a maximum, which is £90 in the first year of the term, and increases every year by 10% on a compound basis. In other words, the appellants argue that, in effect, the words “up to” should be read into the clause set out in para 7 above, between the words “the provision of services hereafter set out” and “the yearly sum of £90”. The appellants also have an alternative contention, based on the provisions of recital (2), the opening words of clause 3 and the provisions of clause 4(8) of their leases, namely that the lessor cannot recover more by way of service charge than could be recovered under each of the first 70 leases.

The evidence

11. Apart from the documents themselves and the published Retail Price Index (“RPI”) for each of the years 1970-2010, there is no evidence as to the surrounding circumstances in which the 21 leases were executed, other than the fact that the four leases referred to in para 8 above were granted to individuals connected with the lessor. Following a request from the court, we were also told that three of the four deeds of variation referred to in para 9 above were entered into with the lessor's daughter as lessee.

12. I do not find it surprising that we have not been provided with any further evidence. So far as the wording of clause 3(2) is concerned, there may have been letters or notes of discussions in connection with the original drafting and granting (and, in the four cases referred to in para 9 above, the amending) of the leases. But, even if such notes or letters had survived, I very much doubt that they would have thrown any light on what was intended to be the effect of the drafting of the various forms of clause 3(2). Even if they had done, they would probably have been inadmissible as I strongly suspect that they would merely have shown what one party thought, or was advised, that the clause meant. If such documents had shown what both parties to the lease in question intended, they would probably only have been admissible if there had been a claim for rectification.

13. As to the possibility of other material, I am unconvinced that, even if it existed, evidence of the original level of services, the original cost of the services or any investigations made on behalf of a potential lessee in relation to the original services and their cost would have assisted on the issue of what clause 3(2) of any of the 25 leases meant. The provisions for increase at the end of clause 3(2) of each lease were plainly included to allow for inflation, and the only evidence which appears to me to be potentially relevant would be contemporary assessments of the actual and anticipated annual rate of inflation, and, as already mentioned, we have the RPI for each of the years in question.

Interpretation of contractual provisions

14. Over the past 45 years, the House of Lords and Supreme Court have discussed the correct approach to be adopted to the interpretation, or construction, of contracts in a number of cases starting with Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 WLR 1381 and culminating in Rainy Sky SA v Kookmin Bank [2011] 1 WLR 2900 .

15. When interpreting a written contract, the court is concerned to identify the intention of the parties by reference to “what a reasonable person having all the background knowledge which would have been available to the parties would have understood them to be using the language in the contract to mean”, to quote Lord Hoffmann in Chartbrook Ltd v Persimmon Homes Ltd [2009] AC 1101 , para 14. And it does so by focussing on the meaning of the relevant words, in this case clause 3(2) of each of the 25 leases, in their documentary, factual and commercial context. That meaning has to be assessed in the light of (i) the natural and ordinary meaning of the clause, (ii) any other relevant provisions of the lease, (iii) the overall purpose of the clause and the lease, (iv) the facts and circumstances known or assumed by the parties at the time that the document was executed, and (v) commercial common sense, but (vi) disregarding *1628 subjective evidence of any party's intentions. In this connection, see Prenn [1971] 1 WLR 1381 , 1384-1386; Reardon Smith Line Ltd v Yngvar Hansen-Tangen (trading as HE Hansen-Tangen) [1976] 1 WLR 989 , 995-997, per Lord Wilberforce; Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA v Ali [2002] 1 AC 251 , para 8, per Lord Bingham of Cornhill; and the survey of more recent authorities in Rainy Sky [2011] 1 WLR 2900 , paras 21-30, per Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony JSC.

16. For present purposes, I think it is important to emphasise seven factors.

17. First, the reliance placed in some cases on commercial common sense and surrounding circumstances (eg in Chartbrook [2009] AC 1101 , paras 16-26) should not be invoked to undervalue the importance of the language of the provision which is to be construed. The exercise of interpreting a provision involves identifying what the parties meant through the eyes of a reasonable reader, and, save perhaps in a very unusual case, that meaning is most obviously to be gleaned from the language of the provision. Unlike commercial common sense and the surrounding circumstances, the parties have control over the language they use in a contract. And, again save perhaps in a very unusual case, the parties must have been specifically focussing on the issue covered by the provision when agreeing the wording of that provision.

18. Secondly, when it comes to considering the centrally relevant words to be interpreted, I accept that the less clear they are, or, to put it another way, the worse their drafting, the more ready the court can properly be to depart from their natural meaning. That is simply the obverse of the sensible proposition that the clearer the natural meaning the more difficult it is to justify departing from it. However, that does not justify the court embarking on an exercise of searching for, let alone constructing, drafting infelicities in order to facilitate a departure from the natural meaning. If there is a specific error in the drafting, it may often have no relevance to the issue of interpretation which the court has to resolve.

19. The third point I should mention is that commercial common sense is not to be invoked retrospectively. The mere fact that a contractual arrangement, if interpreted according to its natural language, has worked out badly, or even disastrously, for one of the parties is not a reason for departing from the natural language. Commercial common sense is only relevant to the extent of how matters would or could have been perceived by the parties, or by reasonable people in the position of the parties, as at the date that the contract was made. Judicial observations such as those of Lord Reid in Wickman Machine Tools Sales Ltd v L Schuler AG [1974] AC 235 , 251 and Lord Diplock in Antaios Cia Naviera SA v Salen Rederierna AB (The Antaios) [1985] AC 191 , 201, quoted by Lord Carnwath JSC at para 110, have to be read and applied bearing that important point in mind.

20. Fourthly, while commercial common sense is a very important factor to take into account when interpreting a contract, a court should be very slow to reject the natural meaning of a provision as correct simply because it appears to be a very imprudent term for one of the parties to have agreed, even ignoring the benefit of wisdom of hindsight. The purpose of interpretation is to identify what the parties have agreed, not what the court thinks that they should have agreed. Experience shows that it is by no means unknown for people to enter into arrangements which are ill-advised, even **1629* ignoring the benefit of wisdom of hindsight, and it is not the function of a court when interpreting an agreement to relieve a party from the consequences of his imprudence or poor advice. Accordingly, when interpreting a contract a judge should avoid re-writing it in an attempt to assist an unwise party or to penalise an astute party.

21. The fifth point concerns the facts known to the parties. When interpreting a contractual provision, one can only take into account facts or circumstances which existed at the time that the contract was made, and which were known or reasonably available to both parties. Given that a contract is a bilateral, or synallagmatic, arrangement involving both parties, it cannot be right, when interpreting a contractual provision, to take into account a fact or circumstance known only to one of the parties.

22. Sixthly, in some cases, an event subsequently occurs which was plainly not intended or contemplated by the parties, judging from the language of their contract. In such a case, if it is clear what the parties would have intended, the court will give effect to that intention. An example of such a case is Aberdeen City Council v Stewart Milne Group Ltd 2012 SC (UKSC) 240 , where the court concluded that “any ... approach” other than that which was adopted “would defeat the parties' clear objectives”, but the conclusion was based on what the parties “had in mind when they entered into” the contract: see paras 21 and 22.

23. Seventhly, reference was made in argument to service charge clauses being construed “restrictively”. I am unconvinced by the notion that service charge clauses are to be subject to any special rule of interpretation. Even if (which it is unnecessary to decide) a landlord may have simpler remedies than a tenant to enforce service charge provisions, that is not relevant to the issue of how one interprets the contractual machinery for assessing the tenant's contribution. The origin of the adverb was in a judgment of Rix LJ in McHale v Earl Cadogan [2010] HLR 412 , para 17. What he was saying, quite correctly, was that the court should not “bring within the general words of a service charge clause anything which does not clearly belong there”. However, that does not help resolve the sort of issue of interpretation raised in this case.

Discussion: interpretation of clause 3(2)

24. When one turns to clause 3(2) of each of the 91 leases of the chalets in Oxwich Park, the natural meaning of the words used, at least until one considers the commercial consequences, seems clear. The first half of the clause (up to and including the words “hereafter set out”) stipulates that the lessee is to pay an annual charge to reimburse the lessor for the costs of providing the services which he covenants to provide, and the second half of the clause identifies how that service charge is to be calculated.

25. The fact that the second half of the clause results in the service charge being a fixed sum, rather than a sum dependent on the costs to the lessor of providing the contractual services is readily explicable. As stated in Wonnacott, The History of the Law of Landlord and Tenant in England and Wales (2012), p 106, clauses which provide for charges which vary with the costs of providing services have resulted, at least since around 1960, in “more trouble between landlord and tenant than anything else”. Further, legislation which started to come into force in 1972 has rendered it progressively more difficult for an “amateur landlord” (to use Wonnacott’s *1630 expression) to recover a disputed service charge calculated on such a basis. The fact that the second half of the clause goes on to provide for a fixed increase in the annual sum is also readily explicable: the parties assumed that the cost of providing the services in sterling terms would increase, or, to put the same point another way, they assumed that the value of money would fall.

26. Davis LJ concisely explained the thinking behind the clause in the course of his judgment in the Court of Appeal [2013] L & TR 371, para 52:

“Lack of correspondence between outlay and receipt is the almost inevitable consequence of such a clause if the parties have elected for a fixed charge formula. It has a similarity with a liquidated damages clause: it represents the parties’ estimate at the outset for the future with neither guarantee nor even expectation of entire coincidence with the eventual outcome. But the advantage is certainty. The parties know from the outset where they stand. Moreover, it is a surrounding circumstance legitimately to be taken into account here that the leases were made at a time of inflation—in some years, very significant inflation—which the parties, objectively and commercially speaking, could be expected to want to confront. They chose to do so by this particular formula of increase.”

27. In those seven leases where the word “as” is not included, I suppose that it might be said that this is not clear unless words such as “quantified in the sum of” were included in order to link the two halves of the clause, but that is, to my mind, a really pedantic argument. Although perfectionist drafting might suggest the inclusion of such words, it seems to me that the absence of such words cannot fairly be invoked to suggest ambiguity or a lack of clarity. The reasonable reader of the clause would see the first half of the clause as descriptive of the purpose of clause 3(2), namely to provide for an annual service charge, and the second half as a quantification of that service charge.

28. It is true that the first part of the clause refers to a lessee paying a “proportionate part” of the cost of the services, and that, unless inflation increases significantly in the next 50 years, it looks likely that the service charge payable under each of the 25 leases may exceed the cost of providing services to the whole of the leisure park. However, if, as I believe is clear, the purpose of the second part of the clause is to quantify the sum payable by way of service charge, then the fact that, in the future, its quantum may substantially exceed the parties’ expectations at the time of the grant of the lease is not a reason for giving the clause a different meaning. As already explained, the mere fact that a court may be pretty confident that the subsequent effect or consequences of a particular interpretation was not intended by the parties does not justify rejecting that interpretation.

29. However, given the way things have turned out, it is tempting to latch onto the absence of words such as “quantified in the sum of”, and to see the two halves of clause 3(2) as mutually inconsistent in their effect. This would be on the ground that the first half of the clause requires the lessee to pay a “proportionate part” of the cost to the lessor of providing services, whereas the latter half requires the lessee to pay a sum which could exceed the whole of that cost. On that basis, it might be said that the court can reject or modify one half to give effect to the real intention of the parties: see *1631 eg Walker v Giles (1848) 6 CB 662. However, as explained in para 24 and 25 above, this argument would, in my view, involve the court inventing a lack of clarity in the clause as an excuse for departing from its natural meaning, in the light of subsequent developments.

30. Were it not for the percentage increases of 10% per annum specified in the 25 service charge clauses which are being considered on this appeal, coupled with the subsequent history of inflation in the United Kingdom, that would be the end of it. Thus, it seems to me that the original 70 leases (referred to in para 6 above), with a clause 3(2) which provided for increases of about 3% per annum (at a time when inflation was running at a significantly higher rate), should plainly be interpreted in the way in which the respondent contends. However, the consequences of the annual sum of £90 being increased annually by 10% on a compound basis are plainly unattractive, indeed alarming, to a lessee holding a chalet under one of the 25 leases. If one assumes a lease granted in 1980, the service charge would be over £2,500 this year, 2015, and over £550,000 by 2072. This appears to be an alarming outcome for the lessees, at least judging by how things look in 2015, because annual inflation in the last 15 years has hardly ever been above 4%, indeed has been under 3% for ten of those years, and has notoriously been falling recently almost to the point of turning negative, whereas the service charge over that period has increased, and will continue to increase, by 10% per annum.

31. The appellants argue that these figures illustrate the extreme unlikelihood of the parties to the 21 leases (or to the four subsequent deeds of variation), and in particular the lessees, having intended to agree that the original £90 service charge would be automatically increased by 10% annually on a compound basis. Accordingly, they contend, the latter half of clause 3(2) should be interpreted as imposing a maximum on the annual service charge recoverable by the lessor. In other words, the effect of the clause is said to be that the lessor is entitled to an appropriate percentage of the annual cost of providing the contracted services, subject to a maximum—which was initially £90, but which increases by 10% compound annually.

32. Despite the unattractive consequences, particularly for a lessee holding a chalet under one of the 25 leases, I am unconvinced by this argument. It involves departing from the natural meaning of clause 3(2) in each of those leases, and it involves inserting words which are not there.

33. Further, the appellants' argument involves attributing to the parties to the 25 leases an intention that there should be a varying service charge and that the lessor (or some other unspecified person) should assess the total costs of the services and determine the appropriate proportion of the cost of the contractual services to allocate to each chalet. Although I accept that it has an element of circularity, it appears to me that the average reader of clause 3(2) would have thought that those are exercises which the clause seems to have been designed to avoid.

34. Although there are one or two very small errors in the drafting, I do not consider that anything has gone significantly wrong with the wording of clause 3(2) of any of the 25 leases. As already explained, I would reject the notion that, on a natural reading, the two parts of the clause do not relate to each other, or appear to say different things, even in the seven cases where the word “as” is not included: as the Court of Appeal said, the first half *1632 imposes a liability for an annual service charge and the second half explains how it is to be assessed. I do not think that the reference to part of a year in the closing words of the clause (para 7 above refers), or the inclusion of an unnecessary “for” (para 8 above refers), in some of the 25 leases can possibly justify departing from the natural meaning of clause 3(2). At best the reference to part of a year is meaningless. However, given that the 99-year term of each lease ran from Christmas 1974, all of them would have ended part way through a year, as they would also have been very likely to do if surrendered or forfeited. Furthermore, the fact that some clauses refer not merely to “repair maintenance and renewal”, but also to “renewal of facilities on the estate” seems to me to be irrelevant to the issue on this appeal.

35. Quite apart from the fact that the effect of clause 3(2) appears clear in each lease as a matter of language, I am far from convinced by the commercially-based argument that it is inconceivable that a lessee would have agreed a service charge provision which had the effect for which the respondent contends, at least in the 1970s and much of the 1980s. Although I would have expected most solicitors to have advised against it, and imprudent though it undoubtedly has turned out to be (at least so far), a lessee could have taken the view that a fixed rate of increase of 10% per annum on a fixed initial service charge, at a time when annual inflation had been running at a higher rate for a number of years (well over 10% per annum between 1974 and 1981, indeed over 15% per annum for six of those eight years; although it was less than 10% per annum after 1981), was attractive or at least acceptable.

36. If inflation is running at, say, 10% per annum, it is, of course, very risky for both the payer and the payee, under a contract which is to last around 90 years, to agree that a fixed annual sum would increase automatically by 10% a year. They are taking a gamble on inflation, but at least it is a bilateral gamble: if inflation is higher than 10% per annum, the lessee benefits; if it is lower, the lessor benefits. On the interpretation offered by the appellants, it is a one way gamble: the lessee cannot lose because, at worst, he will pay the cost of the services, but, if inflation runs at more than 10% per annum, the lessor loses out.

37. The fact that a court may regard it “unreasonable to suppose that any economist will be able to predict with accuracy the nature and extent of changes in the purchasing power of money” over many decades (to quote Gibbs J in Pennant Hills Restaurants Pty Ltd v Barrell Insurances Pty Ltd (1981) 145 CLR 625, 639) is nothing to the point. People enter into all sorts of contracts on the basis of hopes, expectations and assessments which no professional expert would consider prudent, let alone feel able to “predict with accuracy”. I have little doubt that many fortunes have been both made and lost (and sometimes both) by someone entering into such a contract.

38. In terms of commercial justification, the analysis in paras 34 and 35 above becomes more difficult to invoke the further one moves on from 1981, the last year when inflation was above 10% per annum, although in 1990 it almost hit that figure. Accordingly, while I think the analysis comfortably applies to the 21 leases referred to in paras 6-8 above, which were granted between 1977 and 1990, it is unconvincing in relation to the four leases whose service charge provisions were amended around 2000, as mentioned in para 9 above.

39. It seems rather extraordinary that a lessee under a lease which provided for an increase in a fixed service charge at the rate of 10% over three years should have agreed to vary the lease so that the increase was to be at the rate of 10% per annum, at a time when inflation was running at around 3% per annum. However, I do not accept that this justifies reaching a different result in relation to any of the four leases which were varied in 2000. Three of them are relatively easily explicable, as the lessee who agreed the variation was closely connected with the lessor. The fact that they were subsequently assigned is, I accept, remarkable, but that later fact cannot affect the interpretation of the deeds. As to the fourth deed, it was, on any view, an improvident variation to have agreed, but, as already explained, that is not enough to justify the court rewriting the contract under the guise of interpreting it. Further, given that, at least in my view, there could be no ground for suggesting that the original clause 3(2) in the three leases (providing as it did for an annual increase of around 3%) had any effect other than that for which the respondent contends, it is particularly difficult to suggest that the substituted clause, which changed the annual increase to 10%, but was otherwise identically worded (save that it included the word “as” and was therefore even clearer), should have a different effect.

40. I note in this connection that, at a time when inflation was running at well over 10% per annum from 1974 to 1980 (possibly excepting 1984), the lessor was granting leases which provided, in effect, for increases in the £90 at the rate of about 3% per annum (para 6 above refers). Of course, that cannot be taken into account when interpreting any of the 25 leases, but it shows the lessor was prepared to take what appears to have been an unwise decision which was not entirely dissimilar from the unwise decision which, in my view, the lessees under the 25 leases took.

41. I do not think that this is a case where the approach adopted by this court in Aberdeen City Council 2012 SC (UKSC) 240 can assist the appellants. Unlike that case, this is not a case where one of the parties has done something which was not contemplated by the contract. It is clear that the 10% per annum increase in clause 3(2) was included to allow for a factor which was out of the control of either party, namely inflation. In my judgment, there is no principle of interpretation which entitles a court to re-write a contractual provision simply because the factor which the parties catered for does not seem to be developing in the way in which the parties may well have expected.

42. It also appears to me that there is a degree of inconsistency in the appellants' case. That case is, of course, ultimately based on the unlikelihood of a lessor and lessee of a single chalet agreeing that an initial annual service charge of £90 should be increased at a rate which could well lead to the annual charge being an absurdly high figure—possibly more than the cost of providing the services for the whole leisure park. But it is also rather unlikely (albeit less unlikely, I accept) that they will have agreed a ceiling on the annual service charge which would become so absurdly high that it would be meaningless. In other words, it can be said with some force that the appellants' solution to the problem which they identify does not actually address the problem: it merely changes its commercial consequences.

43. I should add that, subject to the point dealt with in the next section of this judgment, I am unconvinced that any assistance can be gained *1634 from the differences between the various forms of clause 3(2). It seems to me positively unlikely that the lessees under the later 21 leases would have been aware of the terms of clause 3(2) of the earlier 70 leases. But, even if they had been so aware, it seems to me that it would assist the respondent's case, not that of the appellants. That is because, given that it appears clear that the second half of clause 3(2) in the earlier 70 leases operated to quantify the service charge, then it seems to me (as explained in the last sentence of para 39 above) that it is very unlikely that the parties can have intended the almost identically worded second half of clause 3(2) in the later 21 leases to have a very different effect from that in the earlier 70 leases.

44. In his judgment at para 116, Lord Carnwath JSC rightly points out that, even after he assigns the lease, the original lessee is bound for the duration (at least if it was granted before 1996). However, I do not see what that adds in this case: on any view, these leases involve long term commitments on both sides. I agree with his view in para 117 that a prospective lessee of a flat in a block or the like (as here) will normally be likely to have less negotiating freedom as to the terms than in relation to a “free standing” property. But so will the lessor, and either is free to walk away if he regards the terms as unsatisfactory.

45. I am also unconvinced that the remedies available (whether in common law or under statute) to the parties in the event of a breach in connection with services or service charge, as discussed in Lord Carnwath JSC's paras 121-123, assists on the issue we have to decide. We are concerned with what a service charge clause means, not how it is being operated.

46. Finally on this first point, Lord Carnwath JSC makes some remarks about service charge provisions in his para 119. There will, I suspect, be many cases where his observations are very much in point: indeed, they may well be normally in point. However, the lessor has no duty to be “fair” when negotiating the terms of a lease (any more than the lessee does), although it may well be in his interest to be (or at least to appear to be) fair. But, whosever interpretation is correct, clause 3(2) was self-evidently not a “normal” service charge clause: on the respondent's case, the landlord might get more or less than the costs of providing the services; on the appellants' case, the landlord might get less than the costs of providing the services.

Discussion: the effect of clause 4(8) and the terms of the other leases

47. The appellants, at the invitation of the court, argued that clause 4(8), which as explained in para 4 above required leases of chalets to be granted subject to identical or similar obligations, substantially mitigated the effect of clause 3(2) of their leases. They contended that clause 4(8), when read together with the opening words of clause 3 and paragraph (2) of the recital to each lease, referred to in paras 3 and 4 above, enable them to limit the service charge which the landlord could otherwise recover under clause 3(2).

48. The appellants' argument in this connection proceeds in two steps. First, as a result of clause 4(8), the opening words of clause 3, and paragraph (2) of the recital in each of their leases, a term was implied into their leases to the effect that clause 3(2) was in the same terms as clause 3(2) of the leases of chalets which had already been granted—ie the 70 leases referred to in para 6 above. Secondly, in those circumstances the lessor is now precluded from recovering more by way of service charge than would *1635 be recoverable under the terms of the service charge provisions in the 70 leases—ie £90 plus 10% compounded every three years. While this argument has obvious attraction, I would reject it.

49. The purpose of clause 4(8), the opening words of clause 3, and recital (2) was, I would accept, to create what is sometimes referred to as a “building scheme”, but, at least in the present context is more accurately described as a letting scheme. Such a scheme, which is recognised and given effect to by equity, has to be apparent from the terms of the relevant leases (or, very unusually, from a side agreement entered into by each lessee with the lessor). A letting scheme involves properties within a given area being let on identical or similar terms, normally by the same lessor, with the intention that the terms are to be enforceable not only by the lessor against any lessee, but as between the various lessees—even by an earlier lessee of one property against a later lessee of another property. There is plainly a strong case for saying the combination of paragraph (2) of the recital, the opening words of clause 3 and the provisions of clause 4(8) establishes that there is such a scheme in relation to the chalets in the leisure park. Accordingly, I am prepared to assume that there was envisaged that there would be a degree of reciprocity and mutual enforceability between the lessees of chalets when it came to the covenants they entered into.

50. However, in my view, the appellants' reliance on the scheme in order to limit the service charges recoverable under clause 3(2) of their leases faces a number of problems.

51. First, it seems to me to be unclear whether a provision such as clause 3(2) could be or was subject to the scheme. There is room for argument whether a letting scheme can only extend, like freehold schemes, to restrictive covenants, or whether it can also extend to positive covenants (on the basis that positive covenants between lessor and lessee are enforceable as between their respective successors, whereas only restrictive covenants are enforceable as against successors of covenantors in relation to freeholds). Even if a leasehold scheme can extend to positive covenants, it is also questionable whether a lessee's covenant to pay a service charge, or any other sum of money to the lessor, can be within the ambit of a scheme.

52. Secondly, in so far as they are dealing with the provisions of leases of other chalets, clause 4(8), and (arguably) the opening words of clause 3 and recital (2) appear to refer to future lettings, not to past lettings. It is quite a bold step to imply a term as to what has happened in the past from an express provision which is limited to the future. Having said that, there is considerable practical force in the contention that the scheme contemplated by the three provisions could only work if leases of all the chalets, past, present and future, were on the same terms.

53. Thirdly, even if the appellants' argument based on an implied term was otherwise correct, there would still be considerable force in the contention that it would not exonerate the appellants from complying with their obligations under clause 3(2). It seems clear that, where there is a letting scheme, a tenant can enjoin the landlord from letting a property within the scheme area on terms which are inconsistent with the scheme. However, as far as I am aware, there is no case where the landlord has been held liable to a tenant in damages (or otherwise) for having let a property within the scheme area on such terms, prior to the grant of the tenant's lease.

54. Fourthly, even if these arguments are all rejected, the closing words of clause 4(8) clearly permit a degree of variation between the terms of the leases of different chalets. If the second part of clause 3(2) is intended to reflect the level of projected inflation, then the parties may well have regarded it as almost inevitable that any annual or triennial adjustment would vary from time to time. On that basis, there may be no breach of any implied term anyway.

55. However, it is unnecessary to address the four points identified in paras 51-54 above, because, in my judgment, there is a fatal flaw in the appellants' argument based on an implied term. In effect, the appellants' case is that the implied term in each of the 21 leases is that the lessor was not asking anything of the lessee which had not been, or would not be, required of lessees of other chalets, whether their leases were in the past or the future. However, it seems to me that, assuming everything else in the appellants' favour, that would not be the correct term to imply. As I see it, if there is an implied term along the lines argued for, it is that the already existing 70 leases of chalets contain a clause 3(2) identical with that in the appellant's leases—ie that the 70 existing leases have service charges which increase at the compound rate of 10% per annum as in the 21 leases.

56. In so far as it relates to the 70 existing leases, the implied term suggested by the appellants is inconsistent with both (a) an express term of the appellants' leases, namely clause 3(2) itself, and (b) what is implied in relation to future leases. As to point (a), the appellants' suggested implied term means that clause 3(2) involves a 10% increase every three years, whereas there is an express term to the effect that the 10% increase is every year; and it is a fundamental principle that one cannot imply a term which is inconsistent with an express term. As to point (b), any reader of an appellant's lease who was asked what future leases of chalets would contain by way of a service charge provision would answer that it would be the same as that in the instant lease—ie £90 pa subject to an increase of 10% per annum compounded; and the implied term applicable to future leases should be the same as that applicable to past leases.

57. If the appellants are right in their contention that there is an implied term, the term which I would favour (as set out at the end of para 55 above) runs into neither of these difficulties. It amounts to saying that, as clause 3(2) of an appellant's lease means that the service charge is to be £90 pa increasing by 10% pa compounded, there is a term implied into the lease that that is what the existing leases provide and it is what future leases will provide.

58. If, as the appellants contend, there is an implied term, but that is its correct characterisation, it is difficult to see how it can help them. An appellant can say that the fact that the 70 existing leases contain a different clause 3(2) means that there is a breach of the implied term, but it is hard to see what damage or other injury has been suffered if the respondent now insists on enforcing clause 3(2) of their leases against the appellants. If an appellant could show that the value of his lease was reduced because the lessor had not granted the first 70 leases with the same clause 3(2) as was in the appellant's lease, the consequent reduction in the value of that lease could well be the appropriate measure of damages. But I cannot at the moment see on what basis the breach can assist an appellant in resisting the full financial consequences of the clause 3(2) he entered into.

59. I should add that, if, contrary to my view expressed in para 43 above, the lessees under the later 21 leases would have been aware of the terms of clause 3(2) of the earlier 70 leases (as Lord Carnwath JSC suggests), it would negative any reliance which the lessees under the 21 leases could place on clause 4(8), as just discussed. This is because the later lessees would have known of, and accepted, the departure from the original clause 3(2).

Conclusion

60. Accordingly, in agreement with the reasons given by Lord Hodge JSC in this court, Davis LJ in the Court of Appeal and Morgan J in the High Court, I would dismiss this appeal, and I do not consider that the appellants are assisted by the additional argument raised in this court. I should, however, make five final points.

61. First, the Court of Appeal suggested that the only way the lessees under the 25 leases could escape from their problems would be by surrendering or suffering forfeiture. In case this is misinterpreted, it is right to point out that surrender is consensual between lessee and lessor, and forfeiture involves unilateral action by a lessor, and so neither course can be forced on the lessor.

62. Secondly, I have considerable sympathy with Lord Carnwath JSC's conclusion that the appeal should be allowed (not least because it is a much more satisfactory outcome in common sense terms, particularly viewed as at today), and I acknowledge that his reasons are as powerful as his conclusion allows. However, for the reasons I have given, I cannot agree with him.

63. Thirdly, the fact that four leases were granted to associates of the lessor with the proviso described in para 8 above, and that three of the deeds of variation described in para 9 above were entered into with a lessee who was a close relation of the lessor, is worthy of comment. It suggests that the lessor or her advisers may have appreciated the potential disadvantages of the clause now contained in the 25 leases. However, I do not see how it can assist the lessees on the issue in these proceedings, namely the interpretation of the clause in the 25 leases.

64. Fourthly, as Lord Carnwath JSC records in para 155 below, it appears that the respondent realistically recognises the unsatisfactory situation in which the lessees under the 25 leases find themselves, and is prepared to agree appropriate amendments to their leases. I hope that a fair and just amendment can be agreed.

65. Finally, as Lord Carnwath JSC also points out in paras 90-93 below, there are various statutory provisions which protect tenants against unreasonable service charges, but none of them applies here. The present case suggests that there may be a strong case for extending such provisions to cases such as the present, even though they involve a fixed sum payable by way of service charge. But that is a policy issue for Parliament, and there may be arguments either way.

LORD HODGE JSC (who agreed with LORD NEUBERGER OF ABBOTSBURY PSC)

66. I agree that the appeal must be dismissed for the reasons which Lord Neuberger of Abbotsbury PSC sets out. But it is a highly unsatisfactory outcome for the chalet tenants who are affected by the annual escalator of the service charge. It is not clear whether there are many long leases *1638 containing fixed service charges with escalators which are beyond the reach of statutory regulation. If there are, there may be a case for Parliament to consider extending the provisions that protect tenants against unreasonable service charges.

67. Mr Morshead QC for the appellants submitted in his written case that what was important was “(a) that the risk [of inflation falling and remaining substantially below 10%] would have been obvious to the officious, reasonable bystander who must be imagined interrogating the actual parties and (b) that no reasonable person in the position of the parties, looking at the leases in their entirety and in context, would understand them to have intended that the tenants should assume that risk”. He envisaged that in a hypothetical dialogue the officious bystander would warn the parties of the risks of their proposed contract and they would make it clear that that was not their intention.

68. In the course of the debate we were referred directly or by reference to several cases concerning the remediation of a mistake by construction or the implication of a term. In my view they do not give the support that Mr Morshead needs.

69. In Homburg Houtimport BV v Agrosin Private Ltd (The Starsin) [2004] 1 AC 715 the mistaken omission of words in a clause was apparent because the bill of lading had been modelled on a standard clause. The person who had transposed the standard clause into the bill of lading had omitted a phrase in the standard clause in which the same word had appeared at the end of two consecutive phrases. The mistake was clear and it was apparent what correction was called for: paras 22 and 23 per Lord Bingham of Cornhill.

70. In Chartbrook Ltd v Persimmon Homes Ltd [2009] AC 1101 a definition, which contained a grammatical ambiguity, made no commercial sense if interpreted in accordance with the ordinary rules of syntax. The background to the deal and the internal context of the contract showed that there was a linguistic mistake in the definition, which the court was able to remove by means of construction. In his speech Lord Hoffmann, at para 23, referred with approval to the judgment of Carnwath LJ in KPMG LLP v Network Rail Infrastructure Ltd [2007] Bus LR 1336. In that case, which concerned a rent review clause in a lease, it was clear from the terms of the clause that its wording did not make sense. The court was assisted by an earlier agreement which set out the then intended clause containing a parenthesis, of which only part had remained in the final lease. It was not clear whether the parties had mistakenly deleted words from the parenthesis, which they had intended to include, or had failed to delete the parenthesis in its entirety. But that uncertainty as to the nature of the mistake, unusually, did not matter as the outcome was the same on either basis.

71. In Aberdeen City Council v Stewart Milne Group Ltd 2012 SC (UKSC) 240 the internal context of the contract provided the answer. The sale contract provided for the payment to the vendor of a further sum on disposal of the land by the purchaser. Two of the methods of disposal required the parties to ascertain the market value of the property on disposal in calculating the additional payment and the other used the “gross sales proceeds” in calculating that payment. The purchaser sold the site at an under-value to an associated company, a circumstance which on the face of the contract the parties had not contemplated. The courts at each level *1639 interpreted the provision, which used the gross sales proceeds in the calculation, as requiring a market valuation where there was a sale which was not at arm's length. They inferred the intention of the parties at the time of the agreement from the contract as a whole and in particular from the fact that the other two methods of disposal required such a valuation. While this line of reasoning was criticised by Professor Martin Hogg “Fundamental Issues for Reform of the Law of Contractual Interpretation” (2011) 15 Edin LR 406 on the ground that it protected a party from its commercial fecklessness, it seems to me to be the correct approach in that case as the internal context of the contract pointed towards the commercially sensible interpretation.

72. The context, whether internal to the contract or otherwise, provides little assistance in this case. Beyond the words of the relevant clauses, there is the context of the other provisions of each of the 25 individual leases which are at issue. They are long leases, having a term of 99 years. The court in interpreting the leases can and should take into account the great difficulty in predicting economic circumstances in the distant future and ask itself whether the parties really intended to do so.

73. The court also can and should take into account the economic circumstances which prevailed at the time each lease was entered into. It is clear from the table which Lord Carnwath JSC has set out in para 100 of his judgment that between 1974 and 1988 the use of a 10% annual escalator achieved a result which was not far off the diminution of the value of money in the difficult economic circumstances that then prevailed. The future was and is unknown.

74. Little else is known and I do not think that it is appropriate to speculate about the extent to which lessees would have known the terms of earlier leases. In my view there is much to be said for the practice, which Lord Drummond Young and other judges have encouraged in Scotland, of requiring parties to give notice in their written pleadings both of the nature of the surrounding circumstances on which they rely and of their assertions as to the effect of those facts on the construction of the disputed words: MRS Distribution Ltd v DS Smith (UK) Ltd 2004 SLT 631, para 14. Such notice of relevant facts, which are either admitted or proved at trial, would avoid disputes on appeal such as whether the affected lessees were aware of the earlier leases.

75. While there are infelicities in the language of the relevant clauses in some of the leases and no clear explanation of minor changes in drafting, I am not persuaded that the meaning of the language is open to question when full weight is given to the very limited factual matrix with which the courts have been presented in this case. We are invited to construe that which reads on a first consideration as a fixed service charge with an escalator to deal with future inflation, as a variable service charge which is subject to a cap to which the escalator applies. I find that very difficult. In my view there is nothing in the relevant context to support the construction of the clause as creating a cap, other than the view, which events have fully justified, that it was unwise of the lessees to agree to a fixed service charge with an escalator based on an assumption that the value of money would diminish by 10% per year.

76. This conclusion is not a matter of reaching a clear view on the natural meaning of the words and then seeing if there are circumstances which displace that meaning. I accept Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-<sup>*1640</sup> Ebony JSC's formulation of the unitary process of construction, in Rainy Sky SA v Kookmin Bank [2011] 1 WLR 2900, para 21:

“the exercise of construction is essentially one unitary exercise in which the court must consider the language used and ascertain what a reasonable person, that is a person who has all the background knowledge which would reasonably have been available to the parties in the situation in which they were at the time of the contract, would have understood the parties to have meant. In doing so, the court must have regard to all the relevant surrounding circumstances. If there are two possible constructions, the court is entitled to prefer the construction which is consistent with business common sense and to reject the other.”

77. This unitary exercise involves an iterative process by which each of the rival meanings is checked against the provisions of the contract and its commercial consequences are investigated: In re Sigma Finance Corpn [2010] 1 All ER 571, para 12, per Lord Mance JSC. But there must be a basis in the words used and the factual matrix for identifying a rival meaning. The role of the construct, the reasonable person, is to ascertain objectively, and with the benefit of the relevant background knowledge, the meaning of the words which the parties used. The construct is not there to re-write the parties' agreement because it was unwise to gamble on future economic circumstances in a long term contract or because subsequent events have shown that the natural meaning of the words has produced a bad bargain for one side. The question for the court is not whether a reasonable and properly informed tenant would enter into such an undertaking. That would involve the possibility of re-writing the parties' bargain in the name of commercial good sense. In my view, Mr Morshead's formulation (para 67 above), on which his case depends, asks the court to re-write the parties' leases on this illegitimate basis.

78. Nor is this a case in which the courts can identify and remedy a mistake by construction. Even if, contrary to my view, one concluded that there was a clear mistake in the parties' use of language, it is not clear what correction ought to be made. The court must be satisfied as to both the mistake and the nature of the correction: Pink Floyd Music Ltd v EMI Records Ltd [2010] EWCA Civ 1429 at [21], per Lord Neuberger of Abbotsbury MR. This is not an unusual case, such as KPMG [2007] Bus LR 1336 in which a mistake was obvious on the face of the contract and the precise nature of the correction had no effect on the outcome.

79. My conclusion that the court does not have power to remedy these long term contracts so as to preserve the essential nature of the service charge in changed economic circumstances does not mean that the lessees' predicament is acceptable. If the parties cannot agree an amendment of the leases on a fair basis, the lessees will have to seek parliamentary intervention.

LORD CARNWATH JSC (dissenting)

Preliminary comments

80. The contractual provisions in this case pose unusual interpretative challenges, which may call for unusual solutions. The leases with which we are concerned are of 25 chalets within Oxwich Leisure Park, in south Wales. *1641 It is an estate of 91 such chalets first developed in 1974. It is in an attractive holiday location close to Oxwich Beach on the Gower peninsular. The challenges arise from a combination of factors. The intention, stated in the preamble to each lease, was that they should be “upon terms similar in all respects ...”. Yet we are faced with five forms of service charge provision, agreed over a period of some 20 years, the variations in which at first sight defy rational analysis. As interpreted by the Court of Appeal, they would lead over the course of the leases to supposedly “proportionate” service charges becoming wholly disproportionate to the costs of the relevant services, to extreme and arbitrary differences between the treatment of different groups of leases within the estate, and to the prospect in the foreseeable future of potentially catastrophic financial consequences for the lessees directly concerned.

81. It does not help that, remarkably, the case has come to us with minimal evidence to explain the circumstances, or “factual matrix”, in which these variations were agreed at different times, or even simply to add some context or colour to the bare legal and statistical analysis. That applies even to the most recent, and most surprising, of the transactions, effected as recently as 2000, and to which Mrs Arnold the present respondent was herself a party. Nor have we been told anything about how the clauses have been operated in practice at any time: for example how the estate has been managed and what costs incurred by the lessor, what service charge payments have been demanded of the various categories of lessee, and what has happened to any surplus.

82. It is to be borne in mind also that in the early 1970s (when this clause was first devised) variable service charge provisions were a relatively “new and modern” addition to the law, prompted in part by rapidly increasing prices: see Mark Wonnacott, The History of the Law of Landlord and Tenant in England and Wales (2012), p 105 and Hyams v Titan Properties Ltd (1972) 24 P & CR 359. Since then, it is said in the same history (p 106), service charges have caused “more trouble between landlord and tenant than anything else”, but they have in turn been regulated by statute to such an extent as to make it “all but impossible for an amateur landlord to recover [a service charge] in the event of a dispute”. Whether or not that extreme view is justifiable, the need for special measures to safeguard the interests of lessees has been acknowledged by the legislature, which has thus for the most part relieved the courts of responsibility for developing a common law response to the problems.

83. As I shall explain, these leases are a rare example of a category of residential lease which has slipped through the statutory net. That is of no direct relevance to the legal issues before us, save that it may help to explain why no ready solutions are to be found in the authorities. Furthermore, in so far as policy has a part to play in the development of the common law, it may be legitimate to seek guidance in the approaches adopted by the legislature in analogous contexts: see Johnson v Unisys Ltd [2003] 1 AC 518, para 37, per Lord Hoffmann.

The leases

84. The first lease was granted on 26 October 1974. Of the others most were granted during the 1970s, and are not directly involved in the present dispute. The 25 with which we are concerned were granted (or varied) in the *1642 period from 1980 to 2000. Whenever granted, all the leases (with one immaterial exception) were expressed as being for terms of 99 years starting from 25 December 1974, and for a yearly rent of £10, increasing by £5 for every subsequent period of 21 years. Each lease began with a preamble which described the “lessor” as the owner of the land edged pink on the attached lay-out plan (“the estate”) and stated: “(2) It is intended to erect chalets on the estate and to grant leases on terms similar in all respects to the present demise.” The lessees' covenants (clause 3) limited the use to that of a “holiday residence of a single family” from March to October: clause 3(12).

85. It seems from the examples before us that the earliest leases were granted in return for lessees' covenants to construct chalets in accordance with plans approved by the lessors (eg chalet 40—lease dated 9 August 1977, clause 3(3)). Later chalets, presumably after erection of chalets by the lessor or others, were granted without such a covenant but for a premium (eg £13,000 for chalet 76—lease dated 22 September 1980; £16,500 for chalet 96—lease dated 1 July 1985). Otherwise no issue arises on the lessee's covenants other than clause 3(2) relating to service charges, to which I will come.

86. The lessors in turn covenanted to provide various common services. They included constructing and maintaining the roads and footways (unless or until becoming maintainable at public expense), mowing lawns, maintaining a recreation ground, keeping fences and drains in good repair, issuing regulations, and arranging refuse collection and a regular patrol to discourage vandalism during the unoccupied period: clause 4. By clause 4(8) the lessors covenanted:

“(viii) That the leases granted by the lessors of all other plots on or comprised in the estate shall contain covenants on the part of the lessees thereof to observe the like obligations as are contained herein or obligations as similar thereto as the circumstances permit.”

87. Five leases have been selected for the purpose of showing the different versions of clause 3(2) relevant to the dispute. The principal difference is between the original leases, granted between 1974 and 1980, in which an initial service charge figure of £90 is increased by 10% every three years (“the triennial formula”), and later leases in which it is increased by 10% every year (“the annual formula”). The five versions were applied as follows (the selected lease in each case is indicated in brackets): (i) Version 1 (Chalet 40, dated 9 August 1977). This was the “original version”, applied to 70 leases granted mainly during the 1970s. The first was granted on 26 October 1974. The rest followed at a steady rate over the next six years at an average of just over 12 per year, until 1980 when seven were granted in this form, the last on 9 July 1980. Four of these leases (granted between August 1977 and July 1980) were varied in 2000 to incorporate the annual formula: see version 5 below. (ii) Version 2 (Chalet 76, dated 22 September 1980). This version applied to 14 leases granted between August 1980 and February 1983, the first being dated 11 August 1980. (iii) Version 3 (Chalet 96 dated 1 July 1985). This applied to three leases granted between July 1985 and January 1988. (iv) Version 4 (Chalet 29 dated 22 March 1991). This applied to four leases granted between December 1988 and March 1991. (v) Version 5 (Deed of variation dated 20 August 2000). This applied to four leases previously subject to version 1. The lessors for the first three *1643 selected leases in this list were Mr A and Mr B Lewis; for version 4, Mrs J Short; and for version 5, Mrs Arnold, the present respondent. In the result the triennial formula now applies to 66 leases on the estate, the annual formula to 25.

88. I now set out the five clauses, emphasising the parts which are material to the dispute:

(i) Version 1 (triennial (1974-1980))

“To pay to the lessors without any deductions in addition to the said rent a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessors in the repair maintenance renewal and the provision of services hereafter set out the yearly sum of £90 and VAT (if any) for the first three years of the term hereby granted increasing thereafter by ten pounds per hundred for every subsequent three year period or part thereof.”

(ii) Version 2 (annual (1980-1983))

“To pay to the lessors without any deductions in addition to the said rent as a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessors in the repair maintenance and renewal of the facilities of the estate and the provisions of services hereafter set out the yearly sum of £90 and VAT (if any) for the first year of the term hereby granted increasing thereafter by ten pounds per hundred for every subsequent year or part thereof.”

Apart from the change from the triennial to the annual 10% rate, other differences are the lengthening of the expression “renewal and the provision of services” to “renewal of the facilities of the estate and the provisions (sic) of services”, and the inclusion of “as” before “a proportionate part”.

(iii) Version 3 (annual (1985-1988))

“To pay to the lessor without any deductions in addition to the said rent a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessor in the repair maintenance renewal and the provision of services hereafter set out the yearly sum of £90 and VAT tax (if any) for the first year of the term hereby granted increasing thereafter by ten pounds per hundred for every subsequent year thereof.”

Changes from version 2 are: reversion to the expression “renewal and the provision of services”, the omission of “as” before “a proportionate part”, and the omission at the end of “or part (thereof)”.

(iv) Version 4 (annual subject to triennial proviso (1988-1991))

“To pay to the lessor without any deductions in addition to the said rent a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessor in the repair maintenance renewal and the provision of services hereafter set out for the yearly sum of £90 and VAT (if any) for the first year of the term hereby granted increasing thereafter by ten pounds per hundred for every subsequent year thereof.”

This version was subject to a proviso:

“Provided always and it is hereby expressly agreed that *whilst the term hereby created is vested in the said William Richard Short and the said *1644 Janice Short or the survivor of them* then maintenance shall be calculated as follows:

“To pay to the lessor without any deduction in addition to the said rent a proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessor in the repair maintenance renewal and the provision of services hereafter set out the yearly sum of £90 and value added tax (if any) for the first three years of the term hereby granted increasing thereafter by ten pounds per hundred for every subsequent three year period or part thereof.”

The main clause is identical to version 3 save for the insertion of “for” before “the yearly sum”. The proviso had the effect of substituting temporarily the triennial formula as in version 1, but that has ceased to be operative following the disposal of the lease by the Shorts.

(v) Version 5 (varied from triennial to annual (2000))

In four of the original 1970s version 1 leases (triennial), a deed of variation dated 20 August 2000, at the same time as revising the extent of land demised, substituted with effect from the beginning of the lease a new clause 3(2) in the form of version 2 (annual formula).

89. Although we have been invited to consider all five versions, the most important for the purposes of interpretation are the first (October 1974) and the second (August 1980), and the circumstances surrounding them. The first is not directly in issue but set the drafting pattern, and provided the background to what followed. The second saw the first incorporation of the controversial annual formula. The later versions are of more limited relevance, save in so far as they throw some light on how the clauses were interpreted in practice, or help to illustrate the relative merits of the rival interpretations.

The statutory provisions

90. By sections 18 and 19 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985, a “service charge” (as defined) payable by a tenant of a “dwelling”, is limited to an amount which reflects the costs “reasonably incurred” in the provision of services. The controls originally applied only to “flats” but were extended by amendment in 1987 to include “dwellings” as defined: see sections 41 and 60 of, and paragraph 1 of Schedule 2 to, the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987. It is not in dispute, in these proceedings at least, that the chalets are “dwellings” for this purpose. The issue is whether the charges are “service charges” as defined by section 18\(1\):

“‘service charge’ means an amount payable by the tenant of a dwelling as part of or in addition to the rent— (a) which is payable, directly or indirectly, for services, repairs, maintenance, improvements or insurance or the landlord’s costs of management, and (b) the whole or part of which varies or may vary according to the relevant costs.”

91. The lessees submit that properly interpreted the clause imposes an obligation to pay a “proportionate part” of the costs incurred, subject only to an upper limit or cap determined by reference to the formula in the second part of the clause. On this footing it is an amount which “varies or may vary according to the relevant costs”: section 18\(1\)\(b\) . The respondent submits that charge is outside the statutory definition because the annual amount is fixed by that formula, without any reference to the costs actually incurred by **1645* the lessor. If the lessees are right, the amount of the charge is limited to the amounts reasonably incurred. If the lessor is right, there is no statutory limit or other control.

92. Other safeguards for lessees were introduced by the 1987 Act, but none covers the present situation. Thus it introduced a new right for any party to a long lease (not only the lessee) of a “flat” to apply to the court (now the First-tier Tribunal) for an order varying a lease on the grounds that it “fails to make satisfactory provision” in respect of various matters, one being the computation of service charges, but this did not apply to other forms of dwelling such as in this case. There is a more general provision, for application by “a majority of parties” for variation of a number of leases under a single lessor ( section 37 ), but again it applies only to flats. On the other hand, section 40 , which allows similar applications for variation of insurance provisions, applies to “dwellings” in general. It is difficult to detect any legislative purposes for these distinctions. The present case illustrates the potentially unfortunate consequences for parties to those rare forms of residential lease which for no apparent reason fall outside any of the protections given by the legislative scheme.

93. For completeness, I note also that no issue arises in the present proceedings as to the possible application of other more general protections relating to unfair contractual terms. Sections 2 to 4 of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 do not in any event apply to contracts relating to the creation or transfer of interests in land: paragraph 1\(b\) of Schedule 1 . No such limitation appears in the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999 (SI 1999/2083), which give effect in this country to Council Directive 93/13/EEC of 5 April 1993 on unfair terms in consumer contracts ( OJ 1993 L95 , p 29). The Directive was first transposed in the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994 (SI 1994/3159) which were later replaced by the 1999 Regulations. The 1994 Regulations came into effect on 1 July 1995, and therefore would not it seems apply to contracts concluded before that date: regulation 1 ; Chitty on Contracts , 31st ed (2014), para 37-087. Accordingly, it could be relevant if at all only to version 5 (2000).

The proceedings

94. We know very little about the background to the present dispute. It first reached the courts in September 2011 in the form of an application by the appellant lessees to the county court for pre-action disclosure. The application was said to be in anticipation of a representative application to resolve an ambiguity in the service charge clause, which “appears to result in a variable service charge but on the other hand create a fixed service charge”. It also spoke of the lessees’ concerns that the sums collected by way of service charge were exceeding the amount of “legitimate” expenditure by “such a substantial amount as to produce a credit balance that should be held in a service charge trust account”; and also that the lessor had disposed of the former clubhouse for the park to provide accommodation for her daughter. They sought disclosure of information about the sums collected as service charge and the amounts expended since 2005.

95. An order for disclosure was made on 20 September 2011, but was quickly met by an application by the lessor for declaratory relief relating to the interpretation of the service charge clause, following which the **1646* disclosure order was stayed pending the determination of these proceedings. The application sought in particular a declaration that on the true interpretation of the service charge clause, the sum payable was not a “service charge” within the meaning of section 18 of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 . In the county court, Judge Jarman QC determined the issue in favour of the lessees. But his decision was reversed on appeal to Morgan J [2013] L & TR 174, whose judgment was upheld by the Court of Appeal (Richards, Davis, Lloyd Jones LJ) [2013] L & TR 371. The lessees appeal to this court with permission granted by the court itself.

96. The issue between the parties has throughout been very narrow: that is, whether the figure of £90 as inflated is to be read as a fixed amount, or as an upper limit or cap. That in turn depends on whether it is permissible and appropriate to read in such words as “limited to” (Judge Jarman QC’s words) or “up to” before the reference to “£90”. As Mr Morshead submits in his printed case: “There is no need to undertake an elaborate drafting exercise. The necessary effect can be achieved by implying the words ‘up to’ before the words ‘£90’; and, in versions 2 and 5, deleting the word ‘as’.”

97. Giving the single judgment in the Court of Appeal, Davis LJ rejected that approach, holding in substantial agreement with Morgan J that the addition of these words “would involve subverting the proper process of construction of the language actually used and would in truth involve the court rewriting the bargain the parties have made”: para 45. He rejected the argument that this interpretation would consign the first part of the clause to “mere surplusage”. Its function was to identify “the character of the payment to be made”. The words “a proportionate part” were apt for a situation where “other lessees also are contributing to the overall service charge: which is in consequence to be apportioned between them”. Although he accepted that the word “incurred” was “the language of actual outlay”, it was “entirely explicable when one appreciates that this part of the sub-clause identifies the character of the payment being made”: paras 48-49. He also pointed to other difficulties in Mr Morshead's interpretation, in particular the problems of calculating a “proportionate” amount, and the lack of any protection for the lessor if the inflation regularly exceeded 10%: para 53.

Inflation calculations

98. The judge was shown without objection two sets of tables, one showing the annual Retail Price Index (“RPI”) from 1948 to 2012, taken from figures published by the Office of National Statistics (“the inflation table”); the other, the effect of the increases of service charge compounded over the period of the leases in accordance with respectively the annual and the triennial formula (“the compounding table”). As I understand it, the information in these tables is accepted as forming part of the factual matrix against which it is appropriate to judge the parties' contractual intentions at the relevant dates. There are some minor but apparently immaterial differences between the hard-copy and electronic versions of the compounding table; I have used the latter.

99. It is helpful to focus on the rates which would have been in immediate contemplation of the parties at dates when each of the five versions was first agreed: that is, 26 October 1974 (the date of the first lease on the estate incorporating version 1, rather than the 1977 lease which was *1647 used as an example at the hearing); 11 August 1980 (the first version 2 lease); 1 July 1985 (version 3); 1 December 1988 (the first version 4 lease); 20 August 2000 (version 5). The table below includes also the rate in contemplation at the date of the county court hearing (June 2012), and in the last year of the lease (2072). The figures in the compounding table are given for 25 December 1974, the commencement of the lease period, and for the same date in each subsequent year. For illustrative purposes I have taken the rate for the year commencing after each of the identified dates (ie 25 December next following each such date), which would have been the rate applicable to the first complete year under each new lease.

100. The resulting figures (rounded) for annual service charges at each such years:

	Triennial	Annual	[Actual inflation]
1974	£90	£90	£90
1980	£109	£159	£219
1985	£132	£257	£310
1988	£145	£342	£350
2000	£212	£1,073	£557
2012	£311	£3,366	£794
2072	£1,900	£1,025,004	N/A

101. The rate of price increase during the 1970s can also be contrasted with the pattern in the previous and subsequent decades. Average annual inflation in the 1950s and 1960s was of the order of 3·5-4%. (It had averaged 2·5% in the 50 years from 1900 to 1950.) It then rose sharply to 6·4% in 1970 and 9·3% in 1973, followed by a much steeper rise to 16% in 1974 and an annual peak of 24·2% in 1975. It dropped to 8·3% in 1978 before rising again to 16% in 1980. The annual rate fell to 12% in 1981, and then to around 5-6% in the period 1983-85 (immediately before version 3), 4-5% in 1986-88 (before version 4), and 3% in 2000 (version 5). It has remained at, or below, that low level ever since.

102. The compounding table enables comparisons to be drawn between the contributions made respectively by the 66 “triennial” and the 25 “annual” leases over different periods, if the lessor is correct. For example, on the 1988 figures, the triennial leases would have contributed a total of £8,712 ( $66 \times \text{£}132$ ), slightly more than the total contribution of the annual leases ( $\text{£}8,550 = 25 \times \text{£}342$ ). On the basis of the figures in the third column, the combined total ( $\text{£}17,262$ ) was still much lower than the figure required to keep pace with actual inflation since 1974 ( $91 \times \text{£}350 = \text{£}31,850$ ). The figures at or about the time of the hearing show a very different picture. On the 2012 figures the triennial leases would have been contributing a total of £18,612 ( $66 \times \text{£}282$ ) compared to £84,150 ( $25 \times \text{£}3,366$ ) contributed by the annual leases. The total amount ( $\text{£}102,762$ ) was now substantially more \*1648 than that required to keep pace with inflation ( $91 \times \text{£}794 = \text{£}72,254$ ). (These figures differ slightly from those in the submitted tables due to rounding.)

103. The table also shows the amounts that, on the lessor's interpretation, would be payable under each formula over the whole period from 24 December 2013 to the end of the term (2072). The total amount payable during that period under each “annual” lease would be £11,238,016, compared to £53,386 payable for the same period under each “triennial” lease.

Inflation and the factual matrix

104. There is no difficulty in principle in taking account of the calculations in the compounding table, which require no outside information, and could have been carried out by the parties (or a reasonable observer) at any of the relevant dates. On the Court of Appeal's interpretation, the figures show increases which appear extraordinary in themselves, in the light of modern conditions of low inflation. No less importantly, they result in dramatically increasing, and ultimately grotesque, differences between the amounts payable by the two different groups of lessees on the same estate. This consequence could and should have been anticipated at the time, certainly by the lessors who were parties to both groups of leases and responsible for maintaining reasonable equivalence between them.

105. The use to be made of the historic inflation figures raises rather different questions. By agreeing to their use, the parties impliedly ask us to assume that the figures up to and including those for each of the relevant years (or the then most recently published figures) would have been known to the parties at the time, and therefore must be taken as part of the relevant factual matrix. This is no doubt a reasonable working assumption to indicate the general trend as known to the public.

106. It is however highly artificial to be asked to take account of the bare statistics, without reference to the political and economic circumstances which surrounded them, so far as they were common knowledge at the time. We are not required to assume total ignorance of current events, in the parties or their reasonable observers. It would not have been difficult to obtain information about contemporary perceptions of the direction of inflation, whether from official reports of the time, or from reports in the south Wales press. Even without such evidence, we are entitled in my view to assume knowledge of some of the key events: for example, of the dramatic rise in oil prices at the end of 1973 and again in 1979, each followed by a sharp increase in inflation in the following year; and also of the election in 1979 of a new Conservative government committed to controlling inflation. We are not required to assume that predictions about future inflation were made in a vacuum.

107. We are also entitled, as part of the factual matrix, to take account of the nature and circumstances of the estate, as they would have been perceived by potential purchasers. It was planned as a holiday estate close to a popular beach. Potential buyers were likely to come from people already familiar with the area from previous visits with their families. It is fair to assume also that they would have regarded the acquisition of a holiday chalet, not simply as source of pleasure, but also as a long term investment *1649 for them and their families. They would have been keen to avoid undue financial burden or risk. It would be strange if they had not taken the opportunity to talk to existing residents about their own experiences of the estate and its management, and of the associated costs. This will become relevant when considering what knowledge of previous terms should be attributed to the first version 2 lessees.

Approach to interpretation

108. In an unusual case such as this, little direct help is to be gained from authorities on other contracts in other contexts. As Tolstoy said of unhappy families, every ill-drafted contract is ill-drafted “in its own way”. However, the authorities provide guidance as to the interpretative tools available for the task. The general principles are now authoritatively drawn together in an important passage in the judgment of Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony JSC in Rainy Sky SA v Kookmin Bank [2011] 1 WLR 2900, paras 14-30. As that passage shows, there is often a tension between, on the one hand, the principle that the parties' common intentions should be derived from the words they used, and on the other the need if possible to avoid a nonsensical result.

109. The former is evident, as Lord Clarke JSC emphasised, in the rule that “where the parties have used unambiguous language, the court must apply it”: para 23. However, in view of the importance attached by others to the so-called “natural meaning” of clause 3(2), it is important to note that Lord Clarke JSC (paras 20-23) specifically rejected Patten LJ's proposition that “unless the most natural meaning of the words produces a result so extreme as to suggest that it was unintended, the court must give effect to that meaning.” In Lord Clarke JSC's view it was only if the words used by the parties were “unambiguous” that the court had no choice in the matter.

110. He illustrated the other side of the coin by quotations from Lord Reid in Wickman Machine Tools Sales Ltd v L Schuler AG [1974] AC 235, 251:

and Lord Diplock in Antaios Cia Naviera SA v Salen Rederierna AB (The Antaios) [1985] AC 191, 201:

“if detailed and syntactical analysis of words in a commercial contract is going to lead to a conclusion that flouts business common sense, it must yield to business common sense.”

As a rider to the last quotation, Lord Clarke JSC cited the cautionary words of Hoffmann LJ ( Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd v National Westminster Bank plc [1995] 1 EGLR 97, 99):

“This robust declaration does not, however, mean that one can rewrite the language which the parties have used in order to make the contract conform to business common sense. But language is a very flexible instrument and, if it is capable of more than one construction, one *1650 chooses that which seems most likely to give effect to the commercial purpose of the agreement.”

111. I agree with Mr Morshead (questioning in this respect the approach of Davis LJ (para 35)) that it may be unnecessary and unhelpful to draw sharp distinctions between problems of ambiguity and of mistake, or between the different techniques available to resolve them. In Chartbrook Ltd v Persimmon Homes Ltd [2009] AC 1101, para 23, Lord Hoffmann cited with approval a passage of my own (in KPMG LLP v Network Rail Infrastructure Ltd [2007] Bus LR 1336, para 50) where I discussed the role of what is sometimes called “interpretation by construction”. I criticised the tendency to deal separately with “correction of mistakes” and “construing the paragraph ‘as it stands’”, as though they were distinct exercises, rather than as “aspects of the single task of interpreting the agreement in its context, in order to get as close as possible to the meaning which the parties intended”. Lord Hoffmann added, at para 25:

“What is clear from these cases is that there is not, so to speak, a limit to the amount of red ink or verbal rearrangement or correction which the court is allowed. All that is required is that it should be clear that something has gone wrong with the language and that it should be clear what a reasonable person would have understood the parties to have meant.”

112. Another permissible route to the same end is by the implication of terms “necessary to give business efficacy to the contract”. I refer again to Lord Hoffmann's words, this time in Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd [2009] 1 WLR 1988, para 22, explaining the “two important points” underlined by that formulation:

“The first, conveyed by the use of the word ‘business’, is that in considering what the instrument would have meant to a reasonable person who had knowledge of the relevant background, one assumes the notional reader will take into account the practical consequences of deciding that it means one thing or the other. In the case of an instrument such as a commercial contract, he will consider whether a different construction would frustrate the apparent business purpose of the parties ... The second, conveyed by the use of the word ‘necessary’, is that it is not enough for a court to consider that the implied term expresses what it would have been reasonable for the parties to agree to. It must be satisfied that it is what the contract actually means.”

113. Aberdeen City Council v Stewart Milne Group Ltd 2012 SC (UKSC) 240 is a useful recent illustration in this court of how these various principles may be deployed, to enable the court to achieve a commercially sensible result in the face of apparently intractable language. A contract for the sale of development land gave the council the right to an uplift (described as “the profit share”) in certain defined circumstances, one being the sale of the property by the purchaser. The issue was the calculation of the profit share, which the contract defined as a specified percentage of the “estimated profit” (defined by reference to “open market value”) or “the gross sale proceeds”. The issue was how the definition should be applied in the case of a sale by the purchaser to an associated party at an undervalue. The court **1651* held in agreement with the lower courts that, in that event, notwithstanding the apparently unqualified reference to gross sale proceeds, the calculation should be based on open market value.

114. In a concurring judgment, with which all the members of the court agreed, Lord Clarke JSC, at para 28, referred to his own judgment in Rainy Sky as indicating the “ultimate aim”, that is:

“to determine what the parties meant by the language used, which involves ascertaining what a reasonable person would have understood the parties to have meant; the relevant reasonable person being one who has all the background knowledge which would reasonably have been available to the parties in the situation in which they were at the time of the contract.”

As he pointed out, “on the face of it” the reference in the contract to the gross sale proceeds was a reference to the “actual sale proceeds” received by the appellants. It was not easy to conclude “as a matter of language” that the parties meant, not the actual sale proceeds, but the amount the appellants would have received on an arm's length sale at market value of the property; nor was it easy to conclude that the parties “must have intended” the language to have that meaning. He referred, at para 31, to the comment of Baroness Hale of Richmond JSC in the course of the argument that:

“unlike Rainy Sky , this is not a case in where there are two alternative available constructions of the language used. It is rather a case in which, notwithstanding the language used, the parties must have intended that, in the event of an on sale, the appellants would pay the respondents the appropriate share of the proceeds of sale on the assumption that the on sale was at a market price.”

He thought the problem should be solved by implying a term to the effect that, in the event of a sale which was not at arm's length in the open market, an open market valuation should be used. As he explained, at para 33:

“If the officious bystander had been asked whether such a term should be implied, he or she would have said ‘of course’. Put another way, such a term is necessary to make the contract work or to give it business efficacy.”

He preferred the use of an implied term to “a process of interpretation”, although “the result is of course the same”: paras 30-33.

115. As Mr Morshead observes, the result in the Aberdeen case could probably have been explained equally as a case of correction by interpretation. In any event, this example provides support for his proposition that, where an ordinary reading of the contractual words produces commercial nonsense, the court will do its utmost to find a way to substitute a more likely alternative, using whichever interpretative technique is most appropriate to the particular task.

Residential leases

116. Long residential leases are an exceptional species of contract, and as such may pose their own interpretative problems. In no other context is a private individual expected to enter into a financial commitment extending for the rest of his or her life, and probably beyond. The original lessee may **1652* have been unaware that (at least under contracts before the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 ) he was taking on a personal legal commitment which could continue even after he had disposed of any interest in the property itself: Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v Low Profile Fashions Ltd [1992] 1 EGLR 86 . So far as it relates only to ground rent, the commitment is unlikely to be burdensome, and it may be readily accepted as a necessary incident of a valuable property interest. Service charges are a different matter, since the amounts may be substantial, and, apart from statute, the lessee is likely to have no direct control over the lessor's expenditure.

117. Where the lease is for one of a number of units in a managed building or estate, provision has to be made for expenditure by the lessor on common services and maintenance, and for the cost to be shared between the lessees. Substantial equivalence of rights and obligations under such leases is normally important for all parties, both for the good management of the building or estate, and for harmony among those living within it. Equivalence can only be achieved by the lessor, who alone is party to them all. After the first lease has been negotiated and granted, later incoming lessees will usually have little choice in practice but to accept the covenants in the form dictated by the lessor. Their reasonable expectation will be that all have been granted in like terms, both in terms of covenants and in terms of sharing financial responsibility for services, with a view to ensuring fair distribution of the overall cost. Often that expectation and the lessor's responsibility for achieving it, will be expressed in the terms of the lease (as here, in the preamble and clause 4(8)).

118. Mr Daiches submits, correctly in my view, that the effect of such words is to create “a letting scheme, or local law, of negative obligations mutually enforceable in equity between all occupiers of the properties on the estate”. He cites authorities such as In re Dolphin's Conveyance [1970] Ch 654, which related to an estate of freehold properties. Examples of the same principle as applied to leasehold developments are given in the textbooks: see Megarry & Wade, The Law of Real Property, 8th ed (2012), para 32-079. As I understand his argument, he asks us to infer that a clause such as 4(8) has to “look to the future not the past”, and that accordingly it is not to be construed as containing any implied representation as to previous leases. I cannot agree. In my view, the existence of such a scheme reinforces the view that each lessee has a legitimate interest in the form and content of all leases within the development, whenever granted. Even if, as in clause 4(8), the lessor's responsibility is expressed as an obligation in respect of future leases, it should in its context (including the preamble) be read also as containing an implied representation that leases previously granted are also in substantially the same form.

119. Provision for services is normally dealt with by reciprocal covenants, positive in form: by the lessor to arrange and pay for the carrying out of the necessary services, and by the lessees to pay their respective shares of the costs so incurred. There is no common format for such service charge covenants, and they can and do vary greatly between different buildings or estates. Unlike negative covenants, it seems that they are not mutually enforceable as such, but the expectation is that they will have been drafted to ensure that the lessees' financial obligations are shared fairly between them all. Again this is in the interests of good management *1653 and harmony within the development for both lessor and lessees. Differences may be necessary to cater for differences in size of the individual units or other features, but otherwise they will normally be in a standard form in all the leases.

120. In the courts below there was some discussion of the “restrictive” approach said to be appropriate to service charge provisions: McHale v Earl Cadogan [2010] HLR 412, para 17, per Rix LJ. I agree, if by this it is meant that the court should lean towards an interpretation which limits such clauses to their intended purpose of securing fair distribution between the lessees of the reasonable cost of shared services.

121. Support for this approach is to be found also in the disparity in practice between the potential remedies available to each party for breach by the other. A lessor who fails to maintain services at the level thought appropriate by the lessees is in principle open to enforcement action in court. But the practical effect of such action for the lessees is uncertain in the absence of a precise definition of what he is required to provide. If there has been a complete breakdown of services, they may be able to obtain injunctive relief or appointment of their own manager. In less extreme circumstances the form of remedy or the extent of any damages may be difficult to define.

122. By contrast, the lessor's remedies for breach of the service charge clause are all too clear. In the Court of Appeal, Davis LJ was apparently content to assume that the charges might “in extremis, force some of these lessees into surrender or forfeiture”: para 57. However, if by this he intended to imply that either escape-route would be available to the lessees other than by agreement with the lessors, he would have been wrong. Apart from any special provision, the lessee's obligation, once the service charge has been determined, will have crystallised into a contractual obligation to pay a fixed amount. That is in principle enforceable by a simple action through the courts, and ultimately by forfeiture and bankruptcy. The legislature intervened long ago to provide some statutory relief against forfeiture: section 146 of the Law of Property Act 1925. But that provides no protection against enforcement of the personal liability to pay the contractual amount.

123. As already explained, the scope for abuse has been recognised by the legislature in the special provision made for controlling “variable” charges as defined in the 1987 Act. Fixed service charges do not normally give rise to the same risk of abuse. The lessee is given the certainty of a fixed financial commitment, and the lessor has the advantage of simplified administration. Provision is needed to deal with price inflation. But if this is fixed by reference to an independent formula, such as an official inflation index, there is no significant risk to either party. The approach adopted in this case seems highly unusual, if not unique. Even where the legislature has not intervened, the courts have a responsibility in my view to ensure that such clauses are interpreted as far as possible not only to give effect to their intended purpose, but also to guard against unfair and unintended burdens being placed on the lessees.

Interpretation of clause 3(2)

124. Against that general background, I come to consider the construction of clause 3(2) in its various versions. At first sight, the main **1654* principles seem reasonably clear: (i) The intention was that all the leases should be on terms as “similar ... as the circumstances permit”, and that it was the lessors' responsibility to achieve such equivalence (necessarily, since only they would be party to all of them): preamble (2); clause 4(8). (ii) The commercial purpose of clause 3(2) was to enable the lessor to recover from the lessees the costs incurred by him in maintaining the estate on their behalf, the payment by each lessee being intended to represent a “proportionate” part of the expenses so incurred. (iii) Although there was a general description of the services which the lessor was contractually obliged to provide, the extent of those services was not precisely defined by the lessors' covenants (clause 4), which left to them a large measure of discretion as to the amounts to be spent in practice. In themselves, these features are typical and uncontroversial. It is at the next stage, in giving effect to those principles, that the clause becomes problematic.

125. It is clear to my mind that something has gone wrong with the drafting, at least in the original wording, as it appeared in the 1974 version, and (apart from the change of inflation formula) was repeated in 1985 and 1988. The clause imposes an obligation to pay, but contains two different descriptions of the payable amount: by reference, first, to a “proportionate part of the expenses and outgoings incurred by the lessor in the repair maintenance renewal and the provision of services ...”, and secondly, to a “yearly sum” determined by reference to a fixed formula. There are two linguistic problems. First, there is no grammatical connection to show the relationship between the two descriptions. Secondly, they are mutually inconsistent. A figure can be determined as a proportionate part of some other variable amount, or it can be a yearly sum, fixed by a predetermined formula; but it cannot be both. There is an inherent ambiguity which needs to be resolved.

126. In the Court of Appeal Davis LJ thought that the first part of the clause was designed simply to identify “the character of the payment to be made”: para 48. I find that unconvincing. If the intention was to indicate no more than the purpose of the payment, one would have expected some such general words as “by way of contribution to the services”, not a detailed and specific formula. Conversely, if the character of the contributions was to be that of payments determined by reference to a fixed formula and nothing else, the description in the first part was neither accurate nor useful. Proportionality had no part to play in such a fixed calculation, nor any relation to reality after 1980 if the court's interpretation is correct. Nor is it easy to explain the purpose of the specific reference to “expenses and outgoings incurred” by the lessor on a defined range of services, unless it was intended to play some material part in the calculation.

127. At this point it is convenient to note the minor differences of wording in some later versions. A change such as the omission of the words “or part ...” in version 3 can readily be dismissed as a copying error. Others give more room for argument. It would be tempting to read more significance into the word “as”, which appears for the first time in the important 1980 version 2. Grammatically, it may be said (with Davis LJ, at para 54), the insertion of the word “as” implies that the operative text is in the second part of the clause, the first part being merely descriptive. There are two difficulties with that explanation. First, for the reasons I have given, neither the reference to proportionality nor the detail of the **1655* formula in the first part is compatible with that limited sense. Secondly, there are linguistic indications the other way. The word “as” did not survive into any of the later versions, except the 2000 deed of variation (version 5), which seems to have been copied directly from version 2. Version 2 itself also saw the introduction of a new reference to expenditure on “the renewal of the facilities of the estate”, which is hard to explain if the detail of the first part had no practical significance. Version 4 added to the mystery by adopting a different connecting word “for”, this time in front of the second description (“for the yearly sum of £90”). That is even more difficult to interpret, but if anything it seems to imply that it was the first part of the clause which was the primary description. In the end I conclude that no persuasive guidance, one way or the other, is to be derived from these minor changes.

128. There are only two realistic possibilities for the second part of the clause, which are those respectively adopted by Judge Jarman, on the one hand, and Morgan J and the Court of Appeal, on the other. Either it is a fixed amount which in effect supplants any test of proportionality under the first part; or it is no more than an upper limit to the assessment of a proportionate amount. I reject the theoretical alternative that it was designed as a lower limit for the benefit of the lessors. That interpretation would have made no sense at all in relation to version 1, agreed at a time when the possibility of inflation falling below 3% would have occurred to no-one as a risk requiring special provision, particularly for the lessor who unlike the lessees was in control of the level of his own expenditure. There is thus no doubt that this part of the clause was originally designed for the benefit of the lessees, and I see no reason to think that its purpose had radically changed by the time of version 2.

129. Davis LJ was concerned as to the practicalities of determining the “proportionate” amount of the qualifying expenditure. Morgan J ([2013] L & TR 174, para 51) described it as “workable but not ideal”. I do not see any great difficulty. The relevant items are precisely defined. The lessor has simply to demonstrate (to the lessees and if necessary to the court) that the expenditure has been properly incurred on those items, and that it has been divided “proportionately” between the lessees.

130. I note that in Hyams v Titan Properties 24 P & CR 359 (see para 82 above), which was decided two years before the first of these leases, the court had to fix the terms of a new business lease under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 taking account of rapid price inflation. Buckley LJ recorded, at p 362, that “the modern practice generally accepted ... was to make service charges payable on a proportional basis”. In that case (where there were nine units) the court approved a clause “requiring the tenant to pay one-ninth of the cost of providing the services under the covenant in addition to the rent payable under the lease”. There was no suggestion that this formulation was defective in the absence of specific machinery to settle the figure. The first half of clause 3(2) follows the same model, allowing for the fact that the precise number of units was probably not known at the outset, so that it was not possible to put in a specific fraction. The use of the same figure of £90 in all the leases (whatever its precise purpose) would have been a strong indication that equal shares were intended.

131. I turn therefore to consider the two alternatives as applied to each of the five versions in its own context. In the words of the authorities, we must inquire “what a reasonable person would have understood the parties to have meant”, that person being one who had “all the background knowledge which would reasonably have been available to the parties in the situation in which they were at the time of the contract”, and who would have also taken into account “the practical consequences of deciding that it means one thing or the other”. Where necessary the reasonable observer can be invited notionally to take on the more active role of “official bystander”, in order to interrogate the parties as to their common intentions.

The five versions in context

Version 1 (October 1974-July 1980)

132. It is impossible to do more than guess at the common intentions of the parties to the first lease in relation to this part of clause 3(2). It is hard at first sight to see any rational basis for selecting a rate of 10% every three years, at a time when annual inflation was running at around twice that rate. At little over 3% per year, it was a little low even by reference to the inflation of the two previous decades, although it was in line with the historic long term average.

133. In such inflationary conditions, there is no difficulty in understanding why it was acceptable to the lessees. It is the lessor's thinking which needs explaining. We know nothing of the first lessors (the Lewises). They may perhaps have been builders, themselves involved in the development of the estate, and so more able to absorb the initial costs of maintenance in their other expenditure. If so, to make the estate attractive to purchasers, they may have gambled on being able to bear the price increases during the early years, in the expectation of inflation falling to more reasonable levels in the near future. (Comparable optimism seems to have been reflected in their view of ground rent, which was to be increased by only 50% every 21 years.)

134. In any event, their apparent generosity would be more explicable if, as may have been the case, the figure of £90 was based not simply on an estimate of current costs, but gave a reasonable margin for anticipated inflation in the short term. That possibility is borne out to some extent by the fact that the triennial formula survived, apparently without question, for six years of high inflation. If so, it is certainly possible that, even during that period, it was treated as a cap, the contributions being based on a share of actual expenditure from year to year. (Unlike Morgan J [2013] L & TR 174, para 32, I see no basis, in the absence of evidence, for any positive inference that service charges were paid, then or later, “in accordance with the lessor's interpretation”.)

135. Since version 1 is not in issue, it is unnecessary to decide between the alternative interpretations at this stage. Version 1 does however provide the necessary background to the contentious versions which came later. It makes clear that the inclusion of a specific figure for inflation was designed originally for the benefit of the lessees not the lessor. It may also enable one to discount any intention on the part of the Lewises at least to take unfair advantage of their lessees.

Version 2 (August 1980-February 1983)

136. As I have said, the fact that it took the Lewises six years to react to the apparent disparity between the triennial formula and actual inflation suggests that, one way or another, they were able to maintain expenditure within the initial figure for some time. The change of heart may well have been triggered by the renewed jump in inflation in 1979, which reached its peak in summer 1980, although it is notable that the last version 1 lease was granted as late as July 1980. If the Court of Appeal is right, there was then in August 1980 a dramatic change in their thinking, from the exaggerated optimism which had prevailed over the last six years, to such abject pessimism about the future of the economy that they thought it reasonable to assume continuing 10% inflation for the remaining 93 years of the leases, and to expect their purchasers to share that assumption.

137. If that is the correct interpretation, they would have been contemplating an impossibility, even for economists. In Pennant Hills Restaurants Pty Ltd v Barrell Insurances Pty Ltd (1981) 145 CLR 625, 639 Gibbs J spoke of the reasons for making no allowance for inflation in awards for future loss:

“It is unreasonable to suppose that any economist will be able to predict with accuracy the nature and extent of changes in the purchasing power of money during a period extending for several decades ahead. Whether inflation increases or is brought under control depends upon political and economic events and decisions at home and abroad as to whose occurrence it is not possible to do more than conjecture. Predictions as to the economic future in 30 years time may perhaps be made by a soothsayer but expert evidence cannot rationally be given on such a subject.” (cited with approval by Lord Hope of Craighead DPSC in Simon v Helmot (2012) 126 BMLR 73, para 45)

If that is unreasonable for an economist, how much less likely is it as an explanation of the thinking of the lessors or lessees of these modest holiday chalets in August 1980?

138. The improbability becomes even more striking when one compares the figures for the new and old groups of lessees. It is true that, even as a cap, the annual formula would result in the new lessees paying more initially than the existing lessees (£159 in 1980, compared to £109 under version 1). But over the period of the lease the differences become grotesque. On the Court of Appeal's interpretation the parties were accepting, as a mathematical certainty, that by the end of the lease period each lessee's service charges would have totalled over £11m, more than 200 times the amounts payable by the existing lessees. Put the other way, if the assumed prediction were correct, the lessees of more than two-thirds of the chalets on the estate would by then have contributed 200 times less than the figure necessary for the lessors' expenditure to keep pace with inflation. Even from the lessors' point of view, that scenario implied commercial disaster.

139. Whatever the lessors' state of mind, it beggars belief that the new lessees would have been content to proceed on that basis. It is particularly improbable for a person of ordinary means investing perhaps limited savings in a holiday home. It is simply inconceivable that such a potential purchaser would have been willing to accept a prediction of continuing inflation at that level for over 90 years, and to take that as a basis for undertaking a **1658* contractual obligation lasting for the rest of his life and beyond without any escape route.

140. There has been some discussion before us as to whether the lessees would have known of the comparable clauses in the previous leases. Mr Daiches asks us (and through us the reasonable observer) to proceed on the basis that the new lessees in 1980 would have been unaware of the triennial formula used in the previous leases, and says that is the basis on which the case has been approached hitherto. I am unwilling to make that assumption, which I regard as wholly unrealistic. It is not on any view an assumption that can be made in respect of versions 4 and 5, where the change was apparent on the face of the documents: see below.

141. Even without direct information in the documents, a potential purchaser in 1980 could be expected to have wanted to satisfy himself about the existing arrangements within the estate, and would have had a legitimate interest in doing so. Absent bad faith, it is hard to see any reason why the lessor would have wished or felt able to hide information about the previous leases. In any event, it could readily have been discovered by talking to other lessees within the estate. In Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony JSC's words in Rainy Sky SA v Kookmin Bank [2011] 1 WLR 2900, para 21 it would have been “background knowledge ... reasonably ... available to the parties” in the circumstances of the contract. I would accordingly approach the interpretation of version 2 on the assumption that both parties (like their reasonable observer) would have been aware of the proposed change from the triennial formula, and that they are to be taken as having accepted the change for what they regarded as good reasons.

142. On the basis that it was intended as a cap, the lessees' thinking is understandable. They would have needed persuasion to take the leases on less generous terms than their predecessors. On the other hand, they would have understood that any assumptions made in 1974 about the prospects of an early fall in inflation had been falsified by events. They would have understood also that the lessor would find it difficult to support reasonable expenditure on services without some adjustment. We do not of course know what if anything may have been said about increasing future contributions from the existing lessees to ensure fair distribution. But from their own point of view, with current inflation at or around 20%, substitution of a limit of 10% might have been seen by them as an acceptable compromise for the immediate future, while allowing for a return to more normal levels in the medium term. That may not be a complete explanation, but it is at least plausible, unlike the alternative.

143. As in the Aberdeen case 2012 SC (UKSC) 240, we can imagine the responses of lessor and lessee to questioning by the officious bystander as to the purpose of the clause. Did they really intend to enter into a contract which had the extraordinary long term implications outlined in the previous paragraphs? I find it hard to conceive of any other response than “of course not; it is a cap not a fixed amount”. The alternative would have seemed absurd and unreasonable to both, as much to the lessor as to the lessees.

144. The Court of Appeal thought they were applying the “natural meaning” of the clause, and that it was not the task of the court to relieve the lessees of a “bad bargain” entered into in different circumstances, albeit possibly without having done their arithmetic. For the reasons I have given, **1659* I am not convinced that the “natural meaning” is that adopted by the Court of Appeal, at least once one discounts the inclusion of the word “as” in version 2, or that, even if it is, it relieves the court of the obligation to seek a sensible result. On the other side of the coin, I agree with Mr Morshead that “bad bargain” is a gross understatement of the implications of their interpretation, which as he says were from the outset “not only stark but disastrous”. Nor do I see any reason to assume that these contracting parties, treated (in Lord Hoffmann's words in Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd [2009] 1 WLR 1988, para 22) as alive to the “practical consequences” of the alternative interpretations, should have been ignorant of the ordinary principles governing compound interest.

Version 3 (1985)

145. By this time inflation had fallen significantly to around 5-6%. Pessimistic thoughts about the future direction of inflation for the foreseeable future would have largely dissipated. If it was difficult in 1980, it would surely be impossible now, for the reasonable observer to imagine the parties committing themselves, even in the medium term, to a fixed inflation figure of almost double the current rate. As a cap, it would hardly have attracted attention.

Version 4 (1988)

146. By this time annual inflation had fallen to less than 5%. The annual formula produced a figure more than double that implied by the triennial formula, but one closely comparable to that resulting from actual inflation since 1974 (£342 compared to £350, in the table at para 100 above). If the then lessor, Mrs Short, was still charging her pre-1980 lessees by reference to the lower triennial rate, it raises a question of how she was covering her own expenditure on services, in circumstances where two-thirds of the leases were contributing at only half the rate implied by inflation since 1974. That may suggest either that she was able in practice to keep expenditure to a level significantly below that implied by inflation, or possibly that in order to maintain services at a reasonable level some of the pre-1980 lessees had been persuaded to pay more than their strict obligation.

147. The only novel feature of this version is that it was subject to a proviso in effect substituting the triennial formula during the tenure of the named lessees. It appears to have escaped notice in the courts below that the example used for this version was in a lease between the lessor, Mrs J Short, and herself and a Mr W R Short (her husband) as joint lessees. Since the hearing it has been confirmed that she had the same interest in the other three “proviso” leases granted between 1988 and 1991. They were clearly not arms-length transactions.

148. We know nothing about Mrs Short, or her thinking. It is difficult to understand how this special personal protection could have been reconciled with her obligation to the other post-1980 lessees (under clause 4(8)) to ensure that the covenants in these leases were as “similar ... as the circumstances permit”. It is even more difficult, at least on the Court of Appeal's interpretation, to understand how she would have explained the change to her future assignees, who were to lose that protection. The contrast between the two versions could not have been drawn more clearly *1660 to their attention. On the basis that the revised percentage figure was no more than a cap, they may plausibly have been content to accept an obligation to keep pace with inflation, in line with other post-1980 lessees. The alternative assumes that, at time when inflation rates were less than 5% and apparently falling, they knowingly accepted a continuing obligation to pay service charges increasing at twice that rate for the rest of the term. On any view that is absurd.

149. By this time inflation had fallen to about 3%. The clause 3(2) figure was by now more than five times greater under the annual formula than under the triennial formula. As Mr Daiches accepts, the parties to these transactions were fully aware of the differences between the two versions. In those circumstances, whatever the changes in the extent of their holdings, there is on the face of it no rational explanation for four lessees agreeing not only to the loss of the protection of version 1, but to the substitution of a permanent obligation to pay service charges increasing at a rate three times the then current rate of inflation.

150. Since these variations were agreed only 15 years ago, and since by this time the respondent, Mrs Arnold, was herself directly involved, it might have been thought that she at least would be able to throw some light on these extraordinary transactions. After the hearing, the parties were put on notice of the court's concern on this point, and invited to comment. It has emerged that three out of the four variations were agreed between Mrs Arnold and her daughter, Mrs Fraser (signed under a power of attorney by Mrs Arnold's son). The fourth was a Mrs Pace, of whom no information has been provided, save that she is apparently still the owner of the chalet, and she is named as one of the defendants in these proceedings.

151. If there was in Mrs Arnold's thinking a rational explanation for these particular variations, she has not taken the opportunity to disclose it. Instead of such direct evidence, Mr Daiches remarkably asks us to imagine a series of "inferences" drawn by the parties (including his client and her daughter) and the reasonable observer. They would have inferred, he says, that version 1 lessees were paying less than the rates required by inflation and that there were in consequence "historic shortfalls" in the lessor's service charge income; and that the multiplier was to be increased, not only to take account of actual inflation since 1974, and to reflect the fact that it might once again rise to levels above that implied by the triennial formula, but also to compensate the lessor both for past shortfalls, and for the risk that he or she might not be able to persuade other lessees to agree to similar increases in the future.

152. With respect to Mr Daiches I have to say that, even in this extraordinary case, I find these submissions quite astonishing. Given that his client and her daughter were the principal parties to these transactions, why on earth should the court be expected to draw "inferences" as to what was in their minds? Why should we speculate as to the extent of any "historic shortfalls", when she presumably has access to the actual accounts, and has resisted the lessees' requests for disclosure? What evidence is there that by 2000 anyone was seriously concerned about an imminent risk of return to double-digit inflation? Finally, what possible reason would these lessees *1661 have had for wishing to "compensate" the lessor for the past or future financial consequences of imperfections in leases for which they were not responsible?

153. With regard to the only independent party, Mrs Pace, Mr Daiches asks us to note that her variation was agreed shortly after the sale of the lease to her by the respondent herself. It should not be difficult, he says, to "infer that the purchase price paid by her to the respondent reflected her agreement to increase the multiplier". Although she is apparently one of the appellants represented by Mr Morshead, he has not volunteered any specific explanation on her behalf. He merely points to the difficulty of imagining any price reduction or other inducement sufficient to compensate her for "the devastating implications" of the multiplier if it operates as Mrs Arnold contends.

154. In the absence of further evidence from either side, it is impossible to draw any clear conclusions about the purpose of these curious transactions. It is enough to observe that, viewed objectively, they are at least consistent with an interpretation which limits the lessees' future exposure to actual inflation, within a defined limit. On the lessors' interpretation, as with version 4, they make no sense at all.

Conclusion

155. The true explanation for these wretchedly conceived clauses may be lost in history, but the problems for the parties are all too present and deeply regrettable. No doubt in recognition of such considerations, Mr Daiches, on behalf of Mrs Arnold, indicated that his client “fully understands the appellants' predicament and is sympathetic to it”, and that if the appeal fails there would have to be a re-negotiation of the leases “for pragmatic if not for legal reasons”. She wished it to be stated openly that:

“she is willing for the appellants' leases to be renegotiated on terms that would, among other things, involve the leases being varied by substituting an adjustment linked to the Consumer Price Inflation index instead of the current fixed adjustment of 10% per annum.”

156. Although on its face this indication seems helpful and realistic, it is not clear what it would mean in practical terms. It rightly acknowledges that the problems may well be incapable of truly satisfactory resolution by conventional legal analysis. The main obstacle may be that hinted at in Mr Daiches' post-hearing submission. That is the need to find some way of making good the shortfall resulting from the unrealistically low contributions required from more than two-thirds of the lessees under the pre-1980 leases. Even if the lessees' interpretation prevails, it will still leave an unhappy imbalance between these lessees, and the version 1 lessees, who will be left paying substantially less than their proportionate share.

157. Whatever the strict legal position, the other lessees may perhaps be persuaded that they have a common interest in the good management of the estate, and at least a moral obligation to contribute their fair share of its costs. A long-running dispute of this kind can hardly be conducive to the atmosphere appropriate to a holiday location, even for those not directly involved. It is to be hoped that some way can be found of bringing them into *1662 the discussions. On any view, the case seems to cry out for expert mediation, if it has not been attempted before, preferably not confined to the present parties. If thought appropriate, one possibility might be an application by consent to the President of the First-Tier Tribunal (Property Chamber—Residential Property) to appoint as mediator a senior judge of that tribunal, with the benefit of that tribunal's experience of dealing with service charge issues under statute. However, that must be a matter for the parties not this court.

158. It is necessary therefore to return to the essential question: what in the view of a reasonable observer did clause 3(2) mean? It will be apparent from my detailed analysis that I regard the consequences of the lessor's interpretation as so commercially improbable that only the clearest words would justify the court in adopting it. I agree with Judge Jarman QC that the limited addition proposed by the lessees does not do such violence to the contractual language as to justify a result which is commercial nonsense.

159. For these reasons, in respectful disagreement with the majority, I would have allowed the appeal and restored the order of Judge Jarman QC.

Appeal dismissed.

Introduction

1. By an application dated 13 February 2013, T, as trustee of a settlement to which I will refer as “The C Trust” (hereafter referred to as “the Trustee”), has sought relief pursuant to section 69(1)(a)(i) and (iv) and (2)(b) of the Trusts (Guernsey) Law, 2007 and/or the inherent jurisdiction of the Court. The principal relief sought is declaratory in nature or, in the alternative, for rectification of a Declaration of Exclusion made on 21 October 1997.
2. At the first appointment on 15 February 2013, Advocate Kapp, on behalf of the Trustee, applied for the proceedings to be heard in camera. After considering the submissions set out in her Skeleton Argument dated 13 February 2013, as expanded upon at the hearing, as requested, I made that order, at least insofar as it attached to the first stage of the proceedings dealing with the construction point on which this judgment focuses. In doing so, I was mindful of the helpful general guidance about the presumption in favour of open justice set out in the judgment of Lieutenant-Bailiff Day in IFS Investments Limited v Manor Park (Guernsey) Limited [2003-04] GLR 77 and the position often adopted in trusts cases involving the private affairs of individuals, as exemplified by In re Mr and Mrs W’s 1966 Settlement (1998) 25.GLJ.46. I expressly reserved the position if the alternative basis of the Application needed to be pursued, recognising that the public interest in rectification proceedings might outweigh any private sensitivities that confidential information would be disclosed (see, e.g., Jersey Evening Post Limited v Al Thani [2002] JLR 542, as well as the approach adopted in In re The Colour Trusts (unreported, 24 May 2012) and In the matter of the Sanne Trust Company Limited [2009] JRC 25B).
3. The second issue considered at that first hearing was whether any other persons needed to be convened. In particular, two questions arose about the potential interests of unascertained beneficiaries and the position of the “Reserve Beneficiary”, a well-known international charity (hereafter referred to as “the Charity”). I took the view that the interests of the unascertained beneficiaries were already adequately protected because the Application had the support of a foundation (hereafter referred to as “The C Foundation”). I also took the view that the nature of the principal relief sought, being declarations to be made as a result of construing some documentation, meant that the arguments that might be advanced on behalf of the persons potentially affected would not provide any further assistance to the Court. The construction issues would, in my view, be capable of being canvassed adequately by considering the material put before the Court and through Advocate Kapp reviewing all the possible outcomes, in accordance with her duty as an officer of the Court. Moreover, whether or not the declarations sought are made, the Charity will continue to be the Reserve Beneficiary under the settlement. I also took into account that rule 35 of the Royal Court Civil Rules, 2007 provides that beneficiaries are bound by the outcome of proceedings, even if they have not been made parties, unless the Court directs otherwise. Accordingly, whilst reserving the position if the rectification aspect of the Application needed to be pursued, I decided that the construction arguments could be made without the need to convene any other party.
4. Finally, in terms of case management, I directed that the questions of law arising from the construction of the documentation should be heard by me sitting unaccompanied by Jurats and that the Court should then only convene with Jurats if the declaratory relief sought did not resolve the matter in a manner acceptable to the Trustee. Although section 79 of the 2007 Law permits the Court to be properly constituted by a judge alone, in my view, in rectification cases (as indeed in other situations relating to trusts) it is desirable, unless it is impracticable to do so for whatever valid reason, for the Jurats to participate.

5. This judgment, therefore, deals with the declaratory relief sought at para. 4 of the Application, which is in the following terms:

“on a proper construction of the Trust, Clause 4.9(d) of the Trust does not prohibit the Trustee from exercising a power or discretion in favour of a Beneficiary if an Excluded Person is intended to or might otherwise benefit indirectly therefrom; and the declaration of exclusion made by the Trustee on 21 October 1997 (the “1997 Exclusion”) did not preclude the Trustee from exercising its powers under the Trust to add the [C] Foundation (the “Foundation”) as a beneficiary of the Trust in accordance with the deed of appointment made by the Trustee on 21 October 1997 even though the persons who were declared Excluded Persons under the 1997 Exclusion were intended or might otherwise benefit under the [C] Foundation, nor precludes the Trustee for exercising any dispositive powers in favour of the Foundation or any other beneficiary of the Trust if an Excluded Person is intended to or might otherwise benefit indirectly therefrom”.

The Evidence

6. In support of the Application, four Affidavits have been filed. They are from A, a former director of the Trustee who was responsible for the C Trust at the relevant time, sworn on 25 January 2013, B, an executive manager of the C Foundation, also sworn on 25 January 2013, the Settlor, sworn on 7 February 2013, and D, a director of the Trustee, sworn on 12 February 2013. The material facts relevant for the purposes of the construction issues are taken from those Affidavits and the exhibits thereto.
7. The C Trust was declared by the Trustee on 3 February 1993. The Settlor is an extremely successful and driven businessman. The assets of the Trust have become, and are at present, very significant. The Settlor is divorced and has two sons and one adopted daughter. His daughter has three minor children. Sadly, the Settlor does not enjoy good health. In 2012, his health deteriorated further. He has realised that, rather than leaving it until after his death for his children to benefit from the fruits of his endeavours, he would derive pleasure from seeing them enjoy those fruits during his lifetime.
8. Shortly after the Trust was established, consideration was given to it being restructured. This was a consequence of plans for the Settlor to change where he lived. The Trustee dealt with F, the Settlor’s South African in-house legal adviser, in relation to this. It was suggested that it might be beneficial for the Settlor to be excluded as a beneficiary of the C Trust. The proposal was to make use of a new trust in Liechtenstein, although in due course this was modified so that it was a Liechtenstein foundation that was being thought about.
9. Progress in relation to these proposals was intermittent over the next few years. The Trustee took advice as to the legal status of a Liechtenstein foundation, receiving confirmation that it is “an asset holding body, ... a legal entity fully capable to obligate itself towards third parties and to be the holder of legal rights and titles”. The Trustee did not wish simply to exclude the Settlor’s linear descendants from a fairly substantial trust fund (although the assets then were many times smaller than they are now) unless satisfied it was in their best interests. F confirmed that the Settlor’s lawful linear descendants were fully eligible to benefit under the C Foundation, which had been established in Liechtenstein. F also commented on and revised the draft documentation prepared by the Trustee to give effect to the proposal to appoint the C Foundation as a beneficiary and to exclude the Settlor and his linear descendants as beneficiaries.

10. The Trustee took the precaution of seeking confirmation from the Settlor, with one of his closest friends and colleagues acting as witness, that he supported the proposed changes to the C Trust. By signing the document on 13 May 1997, the Settlor confirmed his opinion that he considered it to be in the best interests of his lawful linear and adopted descendants “who are beneficiaries of the [C] Foundation of Liechtenstein” for the changes to be made.
11. Once the position had been checked once more with B, the Trustee convened a meeting of its directors on 21 October 1997. The minutes of that meeting recorded, under appropriate headings:

“IT WAS NOTED that the Trustees had received a recommendation from [the Settlor] regarding the beneficiaries of the trust. The recommendation refers to the addition of the [C] Foundation of Liechtenstein as a beneficiary of the trust and the exclusion of the lawful linear and adopted descendants of [the Settlor] as beneficiaries of the trust. A copy of the recommendation is attached hereto and forms part of these minutes. IT WAS FURTHER NOTED that the aforementioned recommendation is dated 13 May 1997 and the Trustees wish to record the fact that the time span between that date and this has occurred because the Trustees have wished to consider all aspects of the recommendation which has involved consulting with [the Settlor] and his legal advisers.

IT WAS NOTED the administrators of the [C] Foundation, ... had confirmed in writing (copy attached) that the beneficiaries of the [C] Foundation include the lawful linear and adopted descendants of [the Settlor], including adopted children.

IT WAS RESOLVED that, in accordance with the terms of Clause 4.9(b) of the [C]Trust deed, the lawful linear and adopted descendants of [the Settlor] shall henceforth be Excluded Persons for all the intents and purposes of the Trust so that none of them shall be eligible to benefit from the Trust.

IT WAS RESOLVED that, in accordance with the terms of Clause 4.8(a) of the [C] Trust deed, The [C] Foundation of Vaduz be and is hereby irrevocably nominated to be a members of the Appointed Class for all the intents and purposes of the Trust.”

A and the corporate company secretary were authorised to seal and sign the necessary documents, which they then did.

12. B has exhibited a copy of the Regulations and Supplementary Regulations of the C Foundation and confirmed that it was established for the benefit of the Settlor’s lawful linear descendants, including adopted children, and whether born or unborn. They have no vested right or interest in the Foundation but only a contingent interest in it.
13. The Trustee became aware of the Settlor’s desire to see various distributions made for the benefit of his family and some other associates in September 2012. The Trustee has been liaising since that time in relation to the most appropriate ways in which to achieve the Settlor’s desired outcomes. In doing so, the possibility that the terms of the Declaration of Exclusion executed in 1997 (hereafter referred to as “the Deed of Exclusion”) prevent the C Trust being used to benefit the Settlor’s linear descendants has arisen.
14. On behalf of the Trustee, Carey Olsen sought advice from English Counsel, Judith Bryant. Her Opinion dated 6 December 2012 is exhibited to A’s Affidavit. She has identified that the extremely wide wording used in the Deed of Exclusion would, in her view, be construed in such a way as to exclude the Settlor's linear descendants "from all future benefit under the Trust". Nicholas Le Poidevin QC was also instructed to advise. His Opinion dated 28 January 2013 is exhibited to D's Affidavit. Whilst agreeing in principle with Ms Bryant's conclusion, he noted that her conclusion assumed "an intention to effect the sweeping exclusion" and that such an outcome "would plainly be incorrect" because the Deed of Exclusion "must have been intended to be consistent with" the Deed of Addition. It is fair to note that the advice sought from Nicholas Le Poidevin QC was specific to this issue, whereas Judith Bryant was apparently instructed to advise more generally about a proposal to establish a new trust to which part of the trust fund of the C Trust could be transferred and without the benefit of a full explanation of the background to events in 1997.

15. Because of the difference of Opinion between Counsel and the fact that confirmation one way or the other is certainly desirable for the Trustee before such a momentous decision as will be called for by the Trustee is taken the present Application has been made.

The Documents

16. The Deed of Exclusion provides:

"Under the terms of Clause 4.9(b) of the Declaration of Trust whereby The [C] Trust ("the Trust") was brought into being we the Trustees do hereby declare that the undermentioned shall henceforth be Excluded Persons for all the intents and purposes of the Trust so that none of them shall be eligible to benefit in any way from the Trust, namely

The lawful linear descendants of [the Settlor] whether now alive or yet to be born (including persons lawfully adopted as his children or as the children of his lawful linear descendants as here defined)

This declaration is irrevocable and applies to the whole Trust Fund".

The Deed of Addition executed the same day simply provides:

"Under the terms of Clause 4.8(a) of the Declaration of Trust whereby The [C] Trust ("the Trust") was brought into being we the Trustees do hereby irrevocably nominate THE [C] FOUNDATION Vaduz to be a member of the Appointed Class for all the intents and purposes of the Trust".

17. The Declaration of Trust of the C Trust provides that the settlement is irrevocable (clause 1.3) and established under the laws of Guernsey (clause 2.2(a)). The Trust Period was 100 years unless declared by the Trustee to end earlier (clause 2.1). It is a discretionary trust of income and capital (clause 3.1). In Schedule One, the expression "Beneficiaries" was originally defined as the Settlor (who was also declared to be the Primary Beneficiary by Schedule Two), "His lawful linear descendants whether now alive or yet to be born (including persons lawfully adopted as his children or as the children of his lawful linear descendants, as here defined)", "All persons who are for the time being members of the Appointed Class", any charity selected by the Trustee with the consent of the Primary Beneficiary, and the Reserve Beneficiary, the Charity.
18. Clause 4.9 of the Declaration of Trust on exclusion of persons as beneficiaries provides:

"a) Notwithstanding anything herein contained any of the Beneficiaries (being of full age) shall have the power at any time or times during the Trust Period by instrument or instruments in writing to declare that he is no longer to be a Beneficiary (an Excluded Person).

- b) Notwithstanding anything herein contained and without prejudice to the power of any Beneficiary to declare that he shall be an Excluded Person the Trustees shall also have power at any time or times during the Trust Period to declare that any person is thenceforth to be an Excluded Person.
- c) Any such declaration made pursuant hereto may
- i) be either revocable or be made so that it shall not under any circumstances be revoked,
  - ii) be either in respect of the whole of the Trust Fund or any specified part or parts thereof, and
  - iii) be in respect of income alone or capital alone or both income and capital.
- d) As from the date hereof or of any such declaration as the case may be (and in the case of a revocable declaration until such time if at all at which it shall be revoked) the Trustees shall be absolutely prohibited from exercising in favour of the person who is or thereby becomes an Excluded Person (or as the case may be his personal representatives) any power or discretion conferred on appropriation or application of the income or capital of the Trust Fund or of the part or parts thereof to which such declaration may relate but the Trustee shall not be liable in respect of any such payment appropriation or application which may be made by them before receiving notice of such declaration.”

By clause 1.1.8, the term “Excluded Persons” is defined as “The persons (if any) declared to be Excluded Persons pursuant to the provisions of Part 4 hereof”.

19. Clause 4.8 of the Declaration of Trust deals with the appointed class as follows:

- “a) The Trustees may at any time and from time to time before the termination of the Trust Period by deed or deeds revocable or irrevocable nominate one or more individuals charities or corporations (none of whom is an Excluded Person) to be a member of the Appointed Class.
- b) If the Trustees shall revocably nominate a person to be a member of the Appointed Class the Trustees may revoke that nomination and upon such revocation the person nominated shall cease to be a member of the Appointed Class.
- c) The Trustees shall have the power to renominate (on any number of occasions) any person who has ceased to be a member of the Appointed Class by virtue of the revocation of a previous nomination.
- d) No beneficiary may prevent the nomination of new members of the Appointed Class.”

By clause 1.1.3, the term “Appointed Class” is defined as “Such persons (not being Excluded Persons) as are for the time being the subject of a nomination duly made according to the provisions of the section hereof entitled Trustees’ Powers of Appointment”, that section being Part 4. “Corporation” is defined in clause 1.1.5 as “Any corporate body (of whatsoever kind) incorporated or otherwise brought into existence in any part of the world”.

20. Although not expressly referred to in the Deed of Exclusion, Judith Bryant’s Opinion refers to a number of other provisions in Part 4 that the Trustee may be taken to have exercised. Clause 4.1(a) (power of appointment) provides:

“Notwithstanding the provisions of Part 3 the Trustees shall have power at any time and from time to time during the Trust Period to appoint that they shall hold the whole or any part or parts of the Trust Fund Upon Trust for all or such one or more exclusively of the other or others of the Beneficiaries at such age or time or respective ages or times if more than one in such shares and with such trusts for their respective advancement maintenance and education as they shall think fit”.

Clause 4.4 (powers of revocation and declaration of new trusts) provides:

- “a) The Trustees shall have power at any time or times before the expiration of the Trust Period in their absolute discretion by deed or deeds revocable or irrevocable wholly or partially to revoke or otherwise vary all or any of the trusts hereinbefore declared and to declare such other trusts as they shall think fit for the benefit of such one or more of the Beneficiaries in such manner and in all respects as they shall think fit.*
- b) The Trustees shall have power to release either entirely or to such extent as they shall think fit the foregoing power and any such release shall be binding on their successors.*
- c) Any such revocable deed if not revoked before the date of expiry of the Trust Period shall become irrevocable on that date.”*

The law

Interpretation guidance

21. There is helpful guidance relating to the principles for the construction of a trust instrument set out by the Royal Court of Jersey in In the matter of the Internine and the Intertraders Trusts [2005] JLR 236, at para. 62 per Commissioner Page:

“The correct approach to the task before the court is to a large extent the same as it is for any instrument the meaning of which is in contention:

- (i) the aim is to establish the presumed intention of the maker(s) of the document from the words used ...;*
- (ii) words must, however, be construed against the background of the surrounding circumstances or “matrix” of facts existing at the time when the document was executed – a principle that has been a bedrock of English law since the judgment of Lord Wilberforce in Prenn v Simmonds [1971] 1 W.L.R. 1381 and appears now to have been accepted as also properly reflecting the approach that this court should adopt in relation to such matters;*
- (iii) the circumstances relevant and admissible for this purpose are those that must be taken to have been known to the maker at the time or, where there are more than one, known to the makers of or the parties to the document and include (to use the language of Lord Hoffmann in Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd. v West Bromwich Bldg Socy ([1998] 1 W.L.R. at 913), from whose speech only Lord Lloyd of Berwick dissented) – “... absolutely anything which would have*

- (iv) evidence of subjective intention, drafts and negotiations and other matters extrinsic to the document in question is inadmissible, as is evidence of events subsequent to the making of the instrument (evidence of this kind being relevant where an estoppel is said to arise but not in this jurisdiction, unlike some others, as an aid to construing the original meaning of the document);
- (v) the critical provisions ..., as with all words and phrases, have to be read in the context of the document as a whole;
- (vi) words should as far as possible be given their ordinary meaning: “Loyalty to the text of a commercial contract, instrument, or document read in its contextual setting is the paramount principle of interpretation”: per Lord Steyn in Society of Lloyd’s v Robinson ([1999] 1 W.L.R. at 763); and
- (vii) this last precept may, however, have to give way if consideration of the document as a whole, having regard to the principles set out above or common sense, points to a different conclusion: “common sense” in the context being best reflected by the passage from the speech of Lord Reid in Schuler (L.) A.G. v Wickman Machine Tool Sales Ltd. ([1974] A.C. at 251) in which he observed:

(See also Lord Steyn, again in Society of Lloyd’s v Robinson ([1999] 1 W.L.R. at 763), and Lord Hoffmann’s observations in the Investors Compensation Scheme case concerning the need, on occasion, for a court to accept that the parties must have used the wrong words or syntax.)”

The learned Commissioner continued in paragraph 63:

*“It is also elementary, first, that when attempting to discern the true meaning of a power conferred in a trust deed or other instrument the court must have regard to the nature of the deed and the purpose for which the power appears to have been granted – though this will depend to a large extent on the terms of the instrument itself; and secondly, that a power of amendment reserved in a trust must be exercised for the purpose for which it was granted and not for one beyond the contemplation of the makers of the original instrument (Lord Steyn (ibid.), citing Hole v Garnsey [1930] A.C. 472).”*

This guidance was adopted and applied in In the matter of the Representation of BBB Limited [2011] JRC 240 and I propose to adopt it in the present case as being equally useful under the laws of Guernsey.

- 22. In many respects, that guidance explains and elaborates on the summary of the principles given by Lord Hoffmann in his speech in Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd. v West Bromwich Building Society [1998] 1 All ER 98, at 114g, which has been accepted and applied by this Court previously:

- “(1) Interpretation is the ascertainment of the meaning which the document would convey to a reasonable person having all the background knowledge which would reasonably have been available to the parties in the situation in which they were at the time of the contract.
- (2) The background was famously referred to by Lord Wilberforce [in Prenn v Simmonds] as the ‘matrix of fact’, but the phrase is, if anything, an understated description of what the background may include. Subject to the requirement that it should have been reasonably available to the parties and to the exception to be mentioned next, it includes absolutely anything which would have affected the way in which the language of the document would have been understood by a reasonable man.
- (3) The law excludes from the admissible background the previous negotiations of the parties and their declarations of subjective intent. They are admissible only in an action for rectification. The law makes this distinction for reasons of practical policy and, in this respect only, legal interpretation differs from the way we would interpret utterances in ordinary life. The boundaries of this exception are in some respects unclear. But this is not the occasion on which to explore them.
- (4) The meaning which a document (or any other utterance) would convey to a reasonable man is not the same thing as the meaning of its words. The meaning of words is a matter of dictionaries and grammars; the meaning of the document is what the parties using those words against the relevant background would reasonably have been understood to mean. The background may not merely enable the reasonable man to choose between the possible meanings of words which are ambiguous but even (as occasionally happens in ordinary life) to conclude that the parties must, for whatever reason, have used the wrong words or syntax (see Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd [1997] 3 All ER 352, [1997] 2 WLR 945).
- (5) The ‘rule’ that words should be given their ‘natural and ordinary meaning’ reflects the commonsense proposition that we do not easily accept that people have made linguistic mistakes, particularly in formal documents. On the other hand, if one would nevertheless conclude from the background that something must have gone wrong with the language, the law does not require judges to attribute to the parties an intention which they plainly could not have had.”

Further, in the context of construing a trust deed, in British Airways Pension Trustee Ltd v British Airways plc [2002] EWCA Civ 672 it was noted that “a provision of a trust deed must be interpreted in the light of the factual situation at the time it was created” (para. [30]).

23. In W.T. Ramsay v IRC [1982] AC 300, Lord Wilberforce also commented on the need to ascertain the true intention from the document, adding (at p. 323):

“This is a cardinal principle but it must not be overstated or overextended. While obliging the court to accept documents or transactions found to be genuine, as such, it does not compel the court to look at a document or transaction in blinkers, isolated from any context to which it properly belongs. If it can be seen that a document or transaction was intended to have effect as part of a nexus or series of transactions, or as an ingredient of a wider transaction intended as a whole, there is nothing in the doctrine to prevent it being so regarded: to do so is not to prefer form to substance, or substance to form ...”.

Further general guidance is found at the end of the judgment of Sir Thomas Bingham MR in Arbuthnott v Fagan [1995] CLC 1396:

“Courts will never construe words in a vacuum. To a greater or lesser extent, depending on the subject matter, they will wish to be informed of what may variously be described as the context, the background, the factual matrix or the mischief. To seek to construe any instrument in ignorance or disregard of the circumstances which gave rise to it or the situation in which it is expected to take effect is in my view pedantic, sterile and productive of error. But that is not to say that an initial judgment of what an instrument was or should reasonably have been intended to achieve should be permitted to override the clear language of the instrument, since what an author says is usually the surest guide to what he means. To my mind construction is a composite exercise, neither uncompromisingly literal nor unswervingly purposive: the instrument must speak for itself, but it must do so in situ and not be transported to the laboratory for microscopic analysis.”

Contemporaneity

24. The fact that the Deed of Exclusion and the Deed of Addition were so closely related is also relevant. In Gartside v Silkstone and Dodworth Coal and Iron Company (1882) 21 Ch D 762, Fry J (at p. 767) stated:

“I think the law stands in this way, that when two deeds are executed on the same day, the Court must enquire which was in fact executed first, but that if there is anything in the deeds themselves to shew an intention, either that they shall take effect pari passu or even that the later deed shall take effect in priority to the earlier, in that case the Court will presume that the deeds were executed in such order as to give effect to the manifest intention of the parties.”

The inference from the minutes of the meeting of the directors of the Trustee held on 21 October 1997 is that the business conducted first was to exclude the Settlor’s linear descendants and the business conducted second was to add the C Foundation as an Appointed Class. In any event, the two transactions are clearly so inter-related that the Deed of Addition is relevant background for the purposes of the proper construction of the Deed of Exclusion. Indeed, the precise order in which they were executed is probably irrelevant because they were being treated almost as if they were equal and opposite elements of a combined transaction. This approach is also consistent with general contractual principles: “A document executed contemporaneously with, or shortly after, the primary document to be construed may be relied upon as an aid to construction, if it forms part of the same transaction as the primary document” (Lewison, The Interpretation of Contracts, 5th ed., para. 3.03).

Imputed exercise of power

25. Under English law, the imputation to a trustee of an intention to exercise a power available to him to achieve the desired result unless it can be inferred that there was an intention not to exercise it, to which Judith Bryant referred, derives from Davis v Richards & Wallington Industries Ltd [1990] 1 WLR 1511. The analysis of Scott J (on p. 1530) begins by referring to Sugden on Powers, 7th ed. (1845), vol. 1, p. 356:

“A donee of a power may execute it without referring to it, or taking the slightest notice of it, provided that the intention to execute it appears.”

to which was added (at p. 421):

“It is intention then that in these cases governs: therefore, where it can be inferred that the power was not meant to be exercised, the court cannot consider it as executed.”

Scott J then states (at p. 1530F):

“A disponent (A) purports to make a disposition of property. The disposition cannot be effective unless associated with the exercise of a power vested in A and that A could properly have exercised in order to make the disposition. The disposition makes no mention of the power and does not purport to be an exercise of it. The effect of the principle and the cases to which I have referred is that A’s intention to make the disposition justifies imputing to him an intention to exercise the power, provided always that not to exercise the power cannot be inferred. If the requisite intention [sic] can be imputed, the court will treat the disposition as an exercise of the power. In the present case, Industries purported, in conjunction with Mr. Davis and Mr. Wardle, to bring into effect valid rules for the pension scheme. It was objected that Mr. Parsons was a trustee whose concurrence was necessary. But Industries had power to remove Mr. Parsons as a trustee and could properly have exercised that power in order to bring the rules into effect. I can see no difference in principle between the position of A in my example and the position of Industries, nor any reason why the courts should be prepared to apply an ameliorating principle of equity only to disposition of property. In my judgment, the principle is applicable in the present case, unless an intention on Industries’ part not to exercise its power of removal can be inferred.”

I have quoted the application of the principle in that case as well as the bare principle in order to explain that it was used to render effective what would otherwise have been an ineffective act. I also note that it is referred to as “an ameliorating principle of equity”, whereas the effect of applying it without more ado in the present case might arguably produce an outcome that is adverse to the interests of everyone concerned.

Direct or indirect benefit

26. The main case, however, to which reference has been made is Commissioners of Inland Revenue v Botnar [1999] STC 711, but also bearing the reference “1999 WL 477359”. It is a judgment of the English Court of Appeal dated 23 June 1999. Mr Botnar and his wife had been excluded as beneficiaries under the settlement in question, which contained the following provision at clause 23:

“NO Excluded Person shall be capable of taking any benefit in accordance with the terms of this Settlement and in particular but without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing provisions of this Clause:-

- (a) The Trust Fund shall henceforth be possessed and enjoyed to the entire exclusion of any such Excluded Person and of any benefit to him by contract or otherwise*
- (b) No part of the capital or income of the Trust Fund shall be paid or lent or applied for the benefit of any such Excluded Person”.*

The Settlement also contained a power (in clause 3(c)) for the trustees to pay or transfer the whole or any part of the capital to the trustees of another trust, the only restriction being that at least one of the Appointed Class must be interested in the transferee trust. The question was whether the possibility of Mr Botnar being a beneficiary of such a transferee trust meant that, in the words of section 478(1) of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970, he had “power to enjoy, whether forthwith or in the future, any income of” a company that was resident or domiciled out of the United Kingdom, that income being accumulated in the transferor trust. If the trust documentation had been construed so that Mr Botnar could never benefit from such a transferee trust, then such a “power to enjoy” could not be shown.

27. Mance LJ (as he then was) drew a distinction between a payment or transfer “between” trusts and a payment, application or appointment “under” the trust. In relation to clause 23, he highlighted the words “in accordance with the terms of this Settlement”. Accordingly, when read as a whole, the powers in the Settlement enabled the trustees to make a payment or transfer to a transferee trust from which Mr Botnar might benefit and there was nothing within the Settlement prohibiting the trustees from conferring such a benefit indirectly, meaning he had a “power to enjoy”, even though they could not confer a direct benefit on an Excluded Person such as Mr Botnar. That conclusion was shared by Aldous LJ:

Accordingly, a trustee decision to pay or transfer to another settlement from which Mr Botnar might benefit would not contravene the doctrine of fraud on the power, which “invalidates the exercise of a power which appears to be in conformity with its terms but is in fact made for some collateral purpose not within its proper scope”. Morritt LJ, however, took the view that it was not permissible to exercise the power if the purpose of doing so (as opposed to any incidental effect) was to benefit an excluded person.

Discussion

28. With those principles in mind, I turn to consider what construction to give to the Deed of Exclusion, bearing in mind the powers in the Declaration of Trust. I take the view that the principles of English law to which I was referred (and on which Judith Bryant and Nicholas Le Poidevin QC relied when giving their respective Opinions) are equally applicable as a matter of Guernsey law. The principal exercise in this case is to construe the relevant documents and I am not aware of anything in Guernsey law that would lead to a different approach being required to that to which I have already referred set out in the English law authorities.
29. The power in clause 4.9(b) is “to declare that any person is thenceforth to be an Excluded Person”. The Deed of Exclusion does not name any person or persons but refers to a class of person. I consider that this is permissible under the terms of clause 4.9(b) because the wording used for the class in the Deed of Exclusion means the persons to be included were capable of being ascertained. It was also a means by which any future persons coming within the definition were covered. In effect, the Deed of Exclusion removed (a)(ii) from Schedule One to the Declaration of Trust as if it had been capable of being excised through amendment.
30. The first significant thing to note is the final sentence of the Deed of Exclusion (“This declaration is irrevocable and applies to the whole Trust Fund”). In my view, this wording accurately reflects the powers of the Trustee under clause 4.9(c). The Trustee chose to make the declaration irrevocable rather than revocable and applied it to the entirety of the Trust Fund rather than specifying a part only. By choosing not to refer to just income or just capital, the declaration must be taken to cover both income and capital. The effect of the exclusion of the Settlor’s linear descendants was, therefore, as complete as it could be under clause 4.9.

31. Because of the inclusion of those words, the issue for determination is what meaning to give to the words earlier in the Deed of Exclusion: “for all the intents and purposes of the Trust so that none of them shall be eligible to benefit in any way from the Trust”. Taking those words at face value, my immediate reaction to them is that declaring the class of the lawful linear descendants of the Settlor to be “Excluded Persons for all intents and purposes of the Trust” offers a similar focus to the words “in accordance with the terms of this Settlement” in clause 23 of the Settlement in the Botnar case. If the final sentence of the Deed of Exclusion had not been inserted, these words would have been indicative of the Trustee wishing to exercise the power to exclude the class of persons from the whole of the Trust Fund. To that extent, the words “for all the intents and purposes of the Trust” appear to do no more than duplicate, rather than add to, what the Trustee was permitted to do. However, the addition of the words “so that none of them shall be eligible to benefit in any way from the Trust” may be construed as meaning something over and above that or they may be yet another way of saying exactly the same thing. The latter construction is possible because of the benefit being confined to being a benefit “from the Trust”, but the words “in any way” might point to a broader meaning.
32. I note that in Judith Bryant’s Opinion she concludes that clause 4.4(a) of the Declaration of Trust “is sufficiently widely drafted to have enabled the Trustee to vary the trusts of the Trust so as to exclude the Linear Descendants from all future benefit from under the Trust, such a variation being for the benefit of the Beneficiaries other than the Linear Descendants” (para. 11) and that (at para. 12):

“... there is nothing in the Declaration of Exclusion to suggest that the Trustee did not intend to exercise the power conferred on it by clause 4.4(a) to exclude the Linear Descendants from future benefit under the Trust. On that basis, there would appear to be nothing to prevent the Court from imputing to the Trustee an intention to exercise the power conferred on it by clause 4.4(a) to bring about the result intended in the Declaration of Exclusion, and on that basis, it seems most likely that the Court would decide that the Declaration of Exclusion was effective to exclude the Linear Descendants from being eligible to benefit from the Trust Fund in any way whatsoever”.

Looking at the Deed of Exclusion, I accept that that is one possible construction of the document and, if looking solely at that document, the conclusion that can properly be reached.

33. As I have already indicated, though, it is not the only possible construction of the document. Further, it relies on imputing to the Trustee an intention to exercise the power conferred on it by clause 4.4(a) when to do so would be contrary to what appear to be the interests and intention of the Primary Beneficiary. As such, applying the principle of imputation would also potentially lead to an outcome not desired by the Trustee, which took care to ensure that the Deed of Exclusion and Deed of Addition produced an effect that was not automatically disadvantageous to that class of persons. Having regard to the steps taken by the Trustee, on a balance of probabilities, I consider that the evidence supports the inference that the Trustee did not intend to exercise any power under clause 4.4(a).
34. Moreover, unlike in Davis v Richards & Wallington Industries Ltd (supra), the imputation of an intention to exercise the power in clause 4.4(a) would not result in a transaction that might otherwise fail being saved, but rather might produce the opposite outcome. As it was put by Nicholas Le Poidevin QC (at para. 19 of his Opinion), “Despite the wide words of the deed of exclusion, the inference that the descendants were meant to be excluded from benefit via the Foundation would be plainly incorrect: that deed must have been intended to be consistent with the deed of addition”.
35. I am satisfied that this is the proper conclusion to reach as to the meaning of the words in the Deed of Exclusion. It is consistent with the approach of the English Court of Appeal in the Botnar case to have regard to what it means for a Beneficiary to be declared to be an Excluded Person. This prohibits the Trustee from conferring a direct benefit on such a person under the Trust. It should not, and in my view does not, prohibit the Trustee from conferring a direct benefit on a person in the Appointed Class which may have the incidental effect of conferring a benefit on a person who has been declared to be an Excluded Person. If that were the consequence of the Deed of Exclusion, it would mean that the Deed of Addition was entered into in error and the precautions taken by the Trustee back in the run-up to 1997 would all have been for nothing.

36. In reaching this conclusion, I have paid particular attention to the minutes of the meeting of the directors of the Trustee on 21 October 1997 and the inter-connection between the Deed of Exclusion and the Deed of Appointment. In my view, they cannot be regarded as anything other than part of the overall transaction to be effected in these two documents. Looked at in the round, “the surrounding circumstances or “matrix” of facts existing at the time” were that those concerned in considering the re-structuring of the C Trust wanted to interpose the C Foundation above the Settlor’s descendants, thereby enabling them to benefit directly from that Foundation rather than directly from the C Trust. I note the need to be careful to distinguish here between the Trustee’s subjective intent and the surrounding background. None of the evidence indicates that it is a proper inference that the power in clause 4.4(a) was to be executed by the Trustee, but rather that it was not to be executed despite the wording contained in the Deed of Exclusion. As Mance LJ noted in the Botnar case, “the court should eschew remote hypotheses of unlikely fact”. I think that it would be a remote hypothesis of unlikely fact to suggest that it was the presumed intention of the Trustee, or of anyone corresponding with the Trustee in the 1990s, to exclude the Settlor’s linear descendants from any benefit, direct or indirect, and at the same time to add the C Foundation in the Appointed Class.
37. As regards the words “for all the intents and purposes of the Trust”, I further note that they were also included in the Deed of Addition. I consider that their use in both documents supports the conclusion that these words mean that the Trustee was doing no more than clarifying that the exclusion or addition, as the case may be, was to be effective in respect of the entirety of the Trust. I further consider that it is significant that the words that follow in the Deed of Exclusion commence with “so that”. Those two words, in my view, provide a clear link with the preceding words, demonstrating that the proper meaning of the following words (“none of them shall be eligible to benefit in any way from the Trust”) arises from the context of a further explanation of the generality of the exclusion. In giving the Deed of Exclusion this construction, I have sought to identify the presumed intention of its maker, namely the Trustee, from the words actually used, construing the document as a whole, and the background of the surrounding circumstances at the time in 1997 and for the years since 1993.
38. This interpretation is also consistent with the meaning of clause 4.9(d) of the Declaration of Trust. As was noted in both Opinions from Counsel, something has gone wrong with the wording of this paragraph. The final words refer to “the Trustee [not being liable] in respect of any such payment appropriation or application which may be made by them before receiving notice of such declaration”, whereas the preceding words refer to “any power or discretion conferred on appropriation or application” but without referring to “payment”. The omission of some words, “on the Trustees to effect any payment” possibly being needed immediately after “conferred”, does not make any difference for the purposes of determining this case. This is because the operative words are the absolute prohibition on the Trustee “exercising in favour of the person who is or thereby becomes an Excluded Person ... any power or discretion conferred” (emphasis added).
39. As in the Botnar case, the Trustee acts within the confines of the powers or discretions contained in the C Trust. In my judgment, use of “in favour of” indicates that the paragraph relates to direct benefits under the C Trust rather than indirect benefits obtained more broadly as a result of it. If, contrary to the conclusion I have reached, the imputation of intention principle were applicable, it would mean that clause 4.9(d) would have to be modified to make it accord with the wider exclusion suggested in Judith Bryant's Opinion. Because the Deed of Exclusion is completely silent about such a modification and how it would operate, I regard this as a further reason why the Trustee should not be treated as purporting to exercise the power conferred by clause 4.4(a). In my view, it is simply asking too much to introduce into the Deed of Exclusion this much wider construction of the wording. I therefore agree with the Trustee's contention (at para. 44 of its Skeleton Argument) "that the prohibition in Clause 4.9(d) simply prevents the Trustee exercising a power or discretion to make a payment, appropriation or application of the trust fund directly in favour of an Excluded Person but it would not prevent the Trustee exercising a power or discretion in favour of a beneficiary who was not an Excluded Person in circumstances where there was either the intention or a possibility that an Excluded Person or Excluded Persons could also benefit indirectly."

Conclusion

40. For the reasons given, I will grant the relief sought by the Trustee at paragraph 4 of its Application. The interpretation I have given to the documentation leads to the result that the Deed of Addition has not been rendered invalid and confirms that the Trustee is free, as appears to have been the presumed intention of all those concerned, to treat the C Foundation as a Beneficiary, even if the consequences of doing so may be that one or more of the Settlor's linear descendants, who have been declared to be Excluded Persons, take an indirect benefit. As a result, the alternative relief pursued in para. 5 of the Application falls away and the hearing with Jurats provisionally scheduled can be vacated.
41. In accordance with paragraph 6 of the Application, I am also content to make the customary order that "all the costs of the Application ... be paid from the funds of the Trust on an indemnity basis". As a final note, I should also record my gratitude to Advocate Kapp for her helpful written and oral submissions.

EXHIBIT F

[2005 JLR 236]

IN THE MATTER OF THE INTERNINE AND THE INTERTRADERS TRUSTS

SHEIKH ABDULLAH ALI M. ALHAMRANI v. RUSSA MANAGEMENT and NINE OTHERS

ROYAL COURT (Page, Commr.): May 27th, 2005

Trusts-trust protector-powers and duties-power to amend-to be exercised bona fide, for proper purpose and in interests of beneficiaries because protector's position is fiduciary, even if also beneficiary-radical amendments increasing protector's power require greater justification-amendment of administrative provisions not beyond contemplation of maker if no increase in financial burdens or reduction of beneficial entitlements

The representor sought a declaration that his amendments to two trust deeds were valid.

The representor and the third to tenth respondents were siblings and the beneficiaries of two Jersey trusts. The trust deeds provided that the representor and the third respondent, the eldest brothers, were to be the first protectors of the trusts and they therefore supervised the management of the extensive trust assets on behalf of themselves and the other beneficiaries.

After serious disagreements arose between the representor and the third respondent, however, the representor purported unilaterally to amend the trust deeds so as inter alia to appoint himself the sole first protector from then on and to entrench himself in that position by deleting the provision providing for his removal by the beneficiaries. He claimed to have the power to make those amendments under cll. 2(b) and 6(f) of the trust deeds and also to have had good reasons for so doing. Clause 2(b) of the deeds originally read: “[T]he first protectors shall have the right ... to revoke ... or otherwise amend ... this instrument” and clause 6(f) provided that “the first protectors may exercise their powers individually and the exercise by one of the first protectors of any of their powers under cll. 2(b) ... shall bind the other first protector.”

The representor initially claimed that his power to amend the trust deeds was not subject to any limitations but he subsequently agreed that it was in fact a fiduciary power. He submitted that, when construing the original deeds to determine the validity of his amendments, account should not be taken of any later events nor of any potential future exercise by him of the power to amend.

The third to tenth respondents challenged the validity of the representor's purported amendments. They were also concerned as to what further amendments to the deeds the representor might make and therefore sought to adduce at trial evidence of certain events alleged to have occurred after the amendments were made as being illustrative of his intentions.

Held, ruling as follows:

(1) As one of the first trust protectors, the representor had the power, under cll. 2(b) and 6(f) of the trusts, unilaterally to make the amendments-so as inter alia to make himself the sole first protector and to remove the beneficiaries' power to displace him from that position-and also thereby to bind the third respondent, previously the joint first protector. The clauses amended were not so fundamental that the original maker(s) of the deeds would not have envisaged their amendment, as they merely concerned the administration of the trusts, and the amendments did not therefore impose additional financial burdens nor deny substantive beneficial entitlements. Nor was there a term in the deeds by which the amended clauses were expressed to be entrenched and thus incapable of amendment. In addition, the protectors' power to amend was a fiduciary one and the representor's exercise of it was therefore subject to the restraints necessarily inherent in the exercise of such a power, namely, that it was exercised bona fide, for a proper purpose and in the interests of the beneficiaries as a whole, even though he was also a beneficiary. Consequently, the more radical the departure from the original deed effected by an amendment, the greater the need for justification. Since the result of certain of the amendments in the present case was a substantial accretion of additional power to the representor and the elimination of means by which he could be removed by the beneficiaries, there was a heavy burden on him to explain the necessity for such measures and to justify them as being for a proper purpose and in the bona fide exercise of his power for the benefit of the beneficiaries as a whole (paras. 73–76; para. 79; para. 81).

(2) Evidence of events which occurred after the amendments were made or of actions which the representor might take in the future would be inadmissible in the present proceedings concerning the validity of the amendments. When construing cl. 2(b) and 6(f) of the trust deeds, so as to determine whether the representor had the power to make the amendments in question, the presumed intention of the maker(s) of the deeds had to be established from the words used, construed against the background circumstances or “matrix of facts.” The only relevant circumstances would be those which must have been known to the maker at the time the deeds were made. Evidence of subsequent events and extrinsic evidence of subjective intentions, negotiations, etc. would not be admissible. Furthermore, cl. 2(b) and 6(f) should be read in the context of the trust deeds as a whole and the words used should be given their ordinary meaning. When construing the true meaning of the power conferred on the first protectors in those clauses, regard should be had to the nature of the deeds and the purpose for which it appears the power was granted. The first protectors' power of amendment should only be exercised for that purpose and not for one beyond the contemplation of the maker(s) of the deeds (para. 60; paras. 62–63).

Background to the litigation

The Alhamranis are a well-known Saudi Arabian family with widespread commercial interests and investments both inside and outside the Kingdom. In June 1976 (I shall be forgiven, I hope, if I use the western calendar for the purposes of this judgment), Sheikh Ali Mohamed Alhamrani, then head of the family, died leaving seven sons and two daughters. According to Sharia law, the Sheikh's estate was to be distributed as to one share to each son and as to one half-share to each daughter.

2 The inherited assets within Saudi Arabia have, for the most part, been held by the Alhamrani group of companies. On the other hand, the inherited foreign-based wealth of the family was at one time held through certain Liechtenstein foundations and Cayman Islands trusts, but in 1998 was transferred for the most part into three new Jersey-based trusts: the Intertraders Trust, the Internine Trust and the Manastar Trust. Manastar was later wound up and its assets transferred into Internine. Each of the nine brothers and sisters is a beneficiary of each trust.

3 The trustee of Intertraders is Russa Management Ltd., represented by Advocate Le Quesne of Viberts, and the trustee of Internine is J.P. Morgan Trust Company (Jersey) Ltd., formerly known as Chase Bank & Trust Company (C.I.) Ltd., represented by Advocate Binnington of Mourant du Feu & Jeune. J.P. Morgan was also the trustee of the Manastar Trust until it was dissolved.

4 The current litigation arises out of a number of disputes between different factions among the siblings, the precise composition of those factions having changed as alliances and perceived interests have shifted. The most recent groupings, each separately represented, are: Sheikh Abdullah Ali Alhamrani ("Sheikh Abdullah"), represented by Advocate James of Crill Canavan; Sheikhs Mohamed, Siraj, Khalid, Abdulaziz and Ahmed Ali Alhamrani (often referred to, collectively, as "the first party" for reasons that will become apparent later in this judgment), together with Sheikh Fahad Ali Alhamrani ("Sheikh Fahad"), represented by Advocate Taylor of Bedell Cristin; and Ladies Noura and Adawiya Ali Alhamrani ("the Ladies"), represented by Advocate Young of Bois Bois. So far as concerns the issues with which this present judgment deals, Sheikh Abdullah is in a minority of one, opposed, as he is, by all the others.

5 Procedurally, the matters discussed in this judgment originated in three representations: the first by Russa, dated March 28th, 2003, the second by Sheikh Abdullah, dated May 12th, 2003, and the third by the members of the first party, dated September 26th, 2003. The disputes encompassed in the litigation, taken as a whole, are numerous and in some cases complex. In very broad terms, they arise in one way or another out of the following circumstances.

6 Originally, and at all times up until mid-April 2000, there were two first protectors of each trust, Sheikh Mohamed and Sheikh Abdullah.

Between them they managed the family wealth on behalf of themselves and their brothers and sisters. By 2000, however, serious disagreements had arisen between them. In April that year, Sheikh Abdullah executed two deeds by which he claimed to exercise powers under cll. 2(b) and 6(f) of the trust instruments, as then constituted, to vary them so as to appoint himself sole first protector from then on, and thus remove his brother Sheikh Mohamed as a co-first protector. There were, he says, good reasons for doing this. Sheikh Mohamed and the other members of the first party subsequently wrote to each of the trustees, challenging Sheikh Abdullah's conduct and terminating-or at least claiming to terminate-his authority to act on their behalf (the effect of these letters being a matter for another day). The validity or otherwise of these amendments is the central issue with which this judgment is concerned.

7 Peace appeared to have been secured when, on September 16th, 2000, an instrument known as the "disengagement" or "separation" agreement was signed in the expectation that this would put an end to hostilities. The parties to that agreement were Sheikh Mohamed and the other members of the first party (this being the origin of that expression) and Sheikh Abdullah, Sheikh Fahad and the Ladies, who were referred to as "the second party." The purpose of that agreement, which was governed by the law of Saudi Arabia, was to effect a fair division of the family assets in accordance with the inheritance provisions of Sharia law, the intention being-broadly speaking-that the Saudi Arabian interests would go to the first party and the foreign assets, represented by the two Jersey trusts, to the second party. But, before this could be done, a complicated and protracted exercise of valuing the family's extensive interests and assets was to be undertaken by a valuation committee, composed of KPMG (representing the first party), PricewaterhouseCoopers (representing the second party), and Arthur Anderson (as arbitrator).

8 Much of the next two and a half years was devoted to a variety of steps and events designed to carry out that valuation and to put the disengagement agreement into effect, the detail of which is of no relevance for present purposes. But the process ran into serious difficulties, not least because of differences of view between the two parties as to the extent to which the members of the first party were entitled to be provided with information about distributions, investments and certain pledges of assets held in the Jersey trusts. This latter issue came to a head in February 2003, when Sheikh Abdullah made it clear that he objected to the provision of any further information by either of the trustees on the ground that, as a result of the disengagement agreement and subsequent events, the members of the first party had disclaimed all interest in the Jersey trusts and no longer had any standing as beneficiaries to demand such information-a state of affairs vigorously contested by the first party. Shortly afterwards, J.P. Morgan, the Internine trustee, wrote to say that it proposed to cease making distributions from the trust until the issue of entitlement had been clarified. Russa adopted a similar, though slightly more flexible, position.

9 This impasse led, on March 28th, 2003, to Russa issuing a short representation in the Royal Court, reciting the dispute that had arisen and Russa's inability to determine the rights and wrongs of it, and seeking determination of the question whether or not there had been any such disclaimer.

10 That was followed, on May 12th, 2003, by the issue of a representation in the Royal Court by Sheikh Abdullah, seeking positive declarations to the effect that the members of the first party had disclaimed all interest in Internine and Intertraders, that they were, accordingly, not entitled to any further information about them from the respective trustees and that the trustees were entitled to make distributions to those persons who remained beneficiaries of those trusts: in other words, the members of the second party. At around the same time, Sheikh Abdullah also started proceedings before the Grievance Board in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, seeking orders to compel the members of the first party to abide by the terms of the disengagement agreement.

11 By that stage, Sheikh Fahad and Ladies Noura and Adawiya had parted company with Sheikh Abdullah and had revoked the power of attorney previously held by him to represent them in connection with the disengagement agreement. They too started proceedings before the Grievance Board, in their case seeking to have that agreement declared void and the process of division of assets stopped.

12 On September 26th, 2003, the third of three representations in the Royal Court was issued, this time by the members of the first party. It sought a variety of orders challenging Sheikh Abdullah's purported amendments to the two trust deeds by which he had claimed to appoint himself sole first protector in April 2000; requiring the trustees to provide certain information; and seeking to hold both sets of trustees to account for alleged breaches of duty. It sought no specific declaration about the disengagement agreement, presumably because this was already the subject of Sheikh Abdullah's representation.

13 Shortly afterwards, Sheikh Fahad joined forces with the members of the first party, authorizing Sheikh Mohamed to act for him. From this point onwards, the alignment and representation of the parties in the Royal Court litigation has been as described in para. 4 above.

14 On October 2nd, 2003, Mourants, on behalf of J.P. Morgan, wrote to the other parties listing what they saw as the 12 principal issues raised by the three representations in so far as they concerned Internine (though, for the most part, the same issues also arose in relation to Intertraders). They were grouped under four headings:

(i) the validity of the April 17th, 2000 instrument, by which Sheikh Abdullah had purported to appoint himself sole first protector (Issues 1–5);

(ii) the effect of the disengagement agreement and related documents (the question of “disclaimer”: Issue 6);

(iii) issues concerning the provision by the trustee of information and the making of distributions from the trust fund (Issues 7–9); and

(iv) matters concerning the conduct of the Internine trustee, including allegations of breach of duty (Issues 10–12).

This breakdown of issues, with certain modifications, has been the effective working basis for the management of the litigation.

15 On November 7th, 2003, the Bailiff, giving directions in effect in all three sets of proceedings, ordered the trial of Issues 1–5 and Issue 6 before all other issues. At the same time, he ordered that, until further order, the Internine trustee should discharge present and future obligations under certain specified loans without prejudice to the right of the beneficiaries to contend subsequently that these were not properly obligations of Internine; and that both the Internine trustee and the Intertraders trustee should “pay and discharge their operational expenses on an ongoing basis,” again without prejudice to subsequent argument as to the propriety of such payments being made from trust funds. Finally, he directed that, pending further argument, neither trustee should disclose any further information or documents concerning either trust to any member of the first party or to Sheikh Fahad, a restriction that was subsequently modified on January 14th, 2004 to permit disclosure of pre-September 2000 information.

16 At a further hearing before the Bailiff, on December 4th, 2003, orders were made temporarily suspending, without prejudice to any later decision by the court, all powers of the “protectors or purported protectors” of Internine and Intertraders (though leaving all previous directions in force) and conferring, in the meantime, an unfettered discretion on the two trustees as regards the investment of trust funds. In addition, any further loans or distributions out of the trust funds to or at the behest of any beneficiary or purported beneficiary were banned without the approval of the court.

17 The “interim regime” established by these two sets of directions remains, for the moment, largely in force, one consequence of which has been that both trustees have felt obliged to seek directions from the court in relation to the exercise of their discretion on a number of issues where the beneficiaries-or potential beneficiaries-have been at loggerheads as to the appropriate course.

18 For much of 2004, as well as 2003, Issue 6 dominated the litigation in three respects. First, because until it was resolved the question of the identity of the beneficiaries of the two Jersey trusts remained uncertain; secondly, because if Sheikh Abdullah were to succeed on this particular issue much of the remaining dispute would be likely to fall away; and thirdly, because it was being litigated in both Jersey and Saudi Arabia without any certainty as to where a definitive, final ruling would first be obtained. The matter continued, in particular, to dog the question of whether or not the trustees should be authorized to release further, post-September 2000 information to the members of the first party, Sheikh Abdullah maintaining that this would be wrong until such time as Issue 6 had been finally decided and all possibilities of appeal exhausted.

19 In the event, the issue was finally determined in the courts of Saudi Arabia before it ever came to trial in the Royal Court when, in or about July 2004, the Saudi Court of Appeal upheld an earlier ruling of the Grievance Board in January that year that the disengagement agreement was null and void. For a brief period thereafter, Sheikh Abdullah continued to contend that there were still avenues of further appeal open to him and to resist the provision of post-September 2000 information to members of the first party (and the Ladies). But following an adverse ruling by the Jersey Court of Appeal on September 10th, 2004, rejecting Sheikh Abdullah’s plea that it was still premature for such information to be released, and the refusal of the Privy Council to grant leave to appeal, he eventually conceded defeat and, on November 3rd, 2004, formally sought, and was granted, leave to abandon Issue 6.

20 From then on, Issue 6 ceased to be of immediate relevance and the parties were effectively back to the pre-September 2000 position: no split of assets had been agreed and all nine brothers and sisters remained, and remain today, beneficiaries of each of the trusts.

21 Of the remaining five issues directed by the Bailiff's order of November 7th, 2003 to be tried first, Issues 1–3 were the main ones. Issues 4 and 5, which concern the circumstances, validity and effect of two trust "instruments" exhibited by Sheikh Abdullah to his first affidavit of May 24th, 2003, are probably subsidiary aspects of Issue 3.

22 The terms of Issues 1 and 2 are as follows:

(i) What is the true construction of cl. 6(c) and (f), and cl. 2(b) of the Internine Trust deed, dated June 22nd, 1998, and the Intertraders Trust deed, dated January 23rd, 1998?

(ii) Whether a first protector had, and whether Sheikh Abdullah has, the right freely to modify the terms of the Internine Trust deed, likewise the Intertraders Trust deed, pursuant to such provisions.

23 Issue 3 originally read:

"Whether Sheikh Abdullah's (a) purported amendments to the Intertraders Trust by an instrument dated October 14th, 1998 are invalid and whether, as a result, all distributions from the Intertraders Trust required the consent of both protectors at all times; and (b) unilateral amendments, by two instruments dated April 17th, 2000 are invalid and whether, as a result, Sheikh Mohamed remains as first protector of the Internine Trust and the Intertraders Trust."

But, as a result of further orders made on February 9th and 13th, 2004, and confirmed at a directions hearing before the Bailiff on March 18th, 2004, its terms were amended by the addition of the following words:

"Without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing-

(1) whether the representor's [i.e. Sheikh Abdullah's] amendments or any of them are invalid by reason of breach of fiduciary duty and/or improper motivation and/or made in fraud of his power (if any) to make them and/or for any other reason; and/or

(2) notwithstanding the answers to (1) above, whether the first party is precluded from challenging the amendments or any of them for any reason advanced before February 20th, 2004 or that may be advanced with leave of the court after the date hereof."

24 Later, following certain amendments by the first party to its pleaded case, it became evident that the scope of the factual inquiry for the purposes of Issue 3, expanded in this way, might well overlap significantly with that required for the purpose of dealing with the later Issues 10–12, concerning alleged breaches of duty by trustees. Deliberations between the parties and the court led, accordingly, to a decision in September 2004 to confine the stage 1 trial-which was set for January 2005-to Issues 1, 2 and 6. On the subsequent abandonment by Sheikh Abdullah of Issue 6 in November 2004, the scope of the January hearing was further reduced to Issues 1 and 2.

25 It is against the background described above that these issues came to trial. Because the issues were largely ones of law, the parties agreed and the court concurred and duly certified that it would be appropriate for me to sit alone without Jurats.

26 Before I go further, I wish to express my very considerable gratitude to all counsel involved in this matter for the assistance that they have given the court in this difficult case, particularly Advocates James, Taylor and Binnington, who bore the brunt of the debate (Advocates Young and Le Quesne, for budgetary reasons, having taken a more limited part in the proceedings); and also my gratitude to the parties and their respective advocates and advisers for their forbearance while awaiting delivery of this overdue judgment.

27 It is convenient at this point to mention the stance taken by the two sets of trustees in relation to Issues 1 and 2. Both were given leave to participate in the trial of Issues 1 and 2, without prejudice to the question of how the costs of such involvement ought properly to be dealt with (a matter that was reserved until after the trial). In the event, J.P. Morgan, via Mr. Binnington, chose to make fairly extensive submissions, while Russa, via Mr. Le Quesne, took a less active part. Both understandably insisted that their role was entirely neutral as regards these particular issues, neither of which directly involved any consideration of the trustees' conduct (those issues being reserved for trial at a later stage). At the same time, both clearly had and have an interest in the outcome of these issues, given that they were the trustees at the time when the relevant amendments were made by Sheikh Abdullah and that both are criticized by the first party for permitting these amendments to be made—a factor that it has been necessary to keep in mind when weighing those of the trustees' submissions that were supportive of Sheikh Abdullah's case.

The original declarations of trust and letters of direction

28 The structure and terms of the Intertraders and Internine Trust deeds are substantially the same, though their antecedents are slightly different. In the case of Intertraders, the original instrument took the form of a declaration of trust made by Russa on January 23rd, 1998, at the request and on the authority of Sheikh Abdullah, as set out in a two-page letter from him addressed to and countersigned by Russa, dated January 15th, 1998. That letter made reference to a declaration of trust “the terms of which have previously been agreed between us,” summarized some of the more important provisions and requested Russa's signature as confirmation that this accurately reflected what had been agreed.

29 Some five months later, the Internine deed was executed. This also took the form of a declaration of trust, this time by Chase Bank & Trust Company (C.I.) Ltd. (“Chase,” now J.P. Morgan), dated June 22nd, 1998, but differed in some respects from the Intertraders deed. The request and authority for the establishment of this trust was contained, in this case, in a more formal, four-page Chase “Declaration of trust letter of direction,” which was signed by Sheikh Abdullah on June 19th, 1998 and “agreed and accepted” by Chase. Among other things, this required Chase to incorporate and manage, as part of the trust property, a BVI private investment company by the name of Wingara Enterprises Inc.: this was and is the principal corporate vehicle through which the Internine Trust assets are held.

30 The establishment of Manastar was contemporaneous with that of Internine and followed the same pattern, though in this case the investment company was to be Sidara Ventures Ltd., another BVI corporation.

31 There are several points about these instruments, particularly the letters of direction, that are of note.

32 The Internine and Manastar letters open by emphasizing that they are not intended to amount to an additional trust or to override any discretionary power vested in the trustee. It is plain, therefore, that if and to the extent that there is any disparity between the two, the executed declarations of trust were to prevail.

33 Secondly, under the heading, “Declaration of trust and transfer of assets,” both these letters declare:

“I am/we are transferring to you the property listed below with the intention that you should declare a trust substantially in the terms of the draft which you have supplied to me/us a copy of which is attached to this letter ** reference [B or A]. The property which is being transferred is my/our own absolutely and I am/we are entitled to dispose of it by way of gift.”

This was, to say the least, an inexactitude: Sheikh Abdullah, the sole author-signatory of these letters, was clearly not the absolute owner of the property in question. To describe him as the “settlor” of these trusts, as was suggested from time to time, is therefore incorrect.

34 Thirdly, the Internine and Manastar letters give minimal information about the assets to be taken into the trust: in the former case, it merely says “(a) Chase accounts: Global Custody, $** . . . New York, ** As per attached ‘map reports’”[copies of which were not included in the versions in evidence]. There is no sub-para. (b). In the case of Manastar, sub-para. (a) is in identical terms, but a sub-para. (b) reads: “The entire issued share capital of Delapluma N.V., a Netherlands Antilles company.” The less formal Intertraders letter says nothing at all about the identity of the relevant assets. None of the three declarations of trust does any more than define “the trust fund” as the sum of US$100 and any other property that might thereafter be paid or transferred to the trustee by any of the beneficiaries and accepted by the trustee.

35 Fourthly, each of the three letters includes the following passages:

“Sheikh Mohamed Ali M. Alhamrani and Sheikh Abdullah Ali M. Alhamrani have been appointed first protectors under the terms of the trust and as such will represent the beneficiaries to the extent set forth in the trust instrument.”

And a little later:

“The trust instrument sets out the powers, and provides for succession, of the protectors . . . The protectors have the right and power to amend the terms of the trust, subject to certain restrictions being placed on the exercise of the powers of amendment by the successor protectors . . .”

36 Fifthly, each of the letters refers to the fact that the trust instrument listed the beneficiaries and also describes the manner in which capital and/or income is to be distributed from the trusts as follows:

37 Sixthly, the only member of the Alhamrani family to sign the three letters was Sheikh Abdullah: in the case of Intertraders, without any description of the capacity in which he did this, but in the case of the other two letters under the rubric: “Client (Protector).” Neither letter gives any indication as to the source of the relevant funds, or how and on whose authority they were to be transferred into these new trusts.

38 There seems little doubt that the reality is that the funds in question were, for the most part at least, the family’s inherited “foreign assets,” previously held in two Liechtenstein foundations (Clubnine and Manaskaf) and in nine Cayman Islands trusts. And the necessary transfers, however formally effected (of which this court knows little), were almost certainly authorized by Sheikh Abdullah, acting under a wide-ranging authority granted to him and to Sheikh Mohamed jointly and severally some six years earlier. On March 5th, 1992, the brothers and sisters had made a formal declaration before a notary public in Saudi Arabia, the effect of which was to create what, for the purposes of this litigation, has been called a “power of attorney.” By this declaration, each of them appointed Sheikh Mohamed and Sheikh Abdullah (as recorded in the English translation of the original Arabic notarial Act)- with wide powers and no territorial limit. It concluded with the following passage:

“individually and jointly, to represent us, the inheritors of Ali Alhamrani according to the inheritance deed issued by the Baljuashi court under 224 on 1/6/1396H, in everything that concerns us in the inheritance from our father ...”

“This is a general proxy for both of them authorizing them

individually and jointly ... The two representatives [that is, Sheikh Mohamed and Sheikh Abdullah] ... in their capacity as inheritors to their father as mentioned above, agree that each of them has appointed the other as his legal representative.”

The October 14th, 1998 Intertraders amendment

39 On October 14th, 1998, a further instrument, amending the January 23rd, 1998 Intertraders declaration of trust, was made and executed by Sheikh Abdullah and Russa in order to bring the terms of Intertraders into line with those of Internine and Manastar: that was, at least, the purpose according to Sheikh Abdullah and was undoubtedly the effect. In executing this deed, Sheikh Abdullah claimed to act in his capacity as one of the two first protectors of Intertraders and to exercise his power to amend the trust deed pursuant to cll. 2(b) and 6(f). For present purposes, the principal change of significance was to reduce the trustees’ former obligation to obtain the written consent of the protectors to make distributions of income or capital to one of consultation with the protectors (cl. 3(a)). Changes were also made to cll. 2(b) and 6(f).

40 From then onwards, the terms of these cll. 2(b) and 6(f)-which lie at the heart of Issues 1, 2 and 3-were identical in all three trust deeds. I shall refer to them hereafter as “the original” provisions.

41 These October 1998 amendments to the Intertraders Trust are also challenged by the first party and the Ladies, as well as the later April 2000 amendments to all three Jersey trusts.

The critical provisions

42 The expression “first protectors” was originally defined by cl. 1(b) as meaning “the persons appointed as the first protectors pursuant to cl. 6(b)” (in other words, Sheikh Abdullah and Sheikh Mohamed); and the meaning of the terms “the protectors” and “the successor protectors” were likewise defined by reference to persons appointed pursuant to cl. 6.

43 By cl. 3, the trustees declared themselves possessed of the trust fund on terms, among others, that, upon expiration of the trust period, both capital and income should be held upon trust absolutely for the nine siblings (who were defined as the beneficiaries) as to one share each for the brothers and one half-share each for the Ladies.

44 Clause 6 provided as follows:

“(a) The protectors shall at all times comprise two persons.

(b) The first protectors shall be Sheikh Mohamed Ali M. Alhamrani and Sheikh Abdullah Ali M. Alhamrani

2005 JLR 249

(c) A person shall cease to be a protector:

(i) If he dies.

(ii) If he shall be found to be lunatic or of unsound mind, as confirmed by any court order.

(iii) If he informs the trustee and the other protector of his desire to resign.

(iv) If he shall be removed by notice in writing served on him by the trustee and the other protector signed by beneficiaries who would be entitled to at least 75% of the trust fund as if the trust period had expired on the date of such notice pursuant to the provisions of cl. 3(c).

(d) In the event of a person ceasing to be one of the protectors, the next person in the order listed below shall automatically and immediately become a protector in his place and the trustee shall cause a memorandum to this effect to be endorsed on or annexed to this trust, namely [there then followed a list of the seven siblings other than Sheikh Mohamed and Sheikh Abdullah, starting with Sheikh Siraj].

(f) The first protectors may exercise their powers individually and the exercise by one of the first protectors of any of their powers under cll. 2(b), 5(b), 6(h) or 9 hereof and any consent given by one of the first protectors under the provisions of this trust shall bind the other first protector or successor protector (as the case may be) and shall be binding on the trustee who shall act in accordance with the action or consent of such first protector. Successor protectors shall exercise their powers jointly and the consent of a successor protector shall not bind the other protector.

- (g) In the event that the successor protectors shall be unable to agree as to the manner in which they should exercise any of their powers, then in such event if either of the successor protectors obtains the written consent of beneficiaries who including himself or herself would be entitled to at least 75% of the trust fund pursuant to the provision of cl. 3(c) to a specified course of action this shall be notified in writing to the other protector and to the trustee and will be binding on them.

- (j) The protectors may exercise any power conferred on the protectors under this trust notwithstanding that any protector may be a beneficiary hereof.”

45 The first of the four provisions mentioned in cl. 6(f), that is, cl. 2(b), provided:

“The first protectors shall have the right at any time and from time to time to revoke (as to the whole or any part or parts of the trust fund) or otherwise amend (both as to its beneficial and administrative provisions) this instrument by written instrument delivered to the trustee provided (first) that no such amendment shall diminish the compensation or the provisions for exoneration to which the trustee is entitled or increase its obligations hereunder without its consent in writing and (secondly) that no such amendment shall have retrospective effect or otherwise invalidate or prejudice any previous exercise by the trustee of its powers hereunder.”

46 The second, cl. 5(b), provided that the protectors should have wide powers to give directions to the trustee as regards investment. The third, cl. 6(h), empowered the protectors to remove any requirement for their consent otherwise contained in the trust deed. And the fourth, cl. 9, gave the protectors the power to require a trustee to resign and to appoint a replacement.

The April 17th, 2000 amendments

47 On April 17th, 2000, Sheikh Abdullah, acting alone under powers conferred on him by a combination of cll. 2(b) and 6(f) (as he claimed at the time and claims today), executed three instruments in substantially identical form and terms, one for each trust. According to the provisions of these deeds, far-reaching amendments to the pre-existing trusts were introduced and, in effect, were made irrevocable without the consent, alone, of Sheikh Abdullah himself.

48 In the first place, cl. 1(b) was revoked and replaced by the words: “‘the first protector’ or ‘the first protectors’ means the person [note the singular] appointed as first protector pursuant to cl. 6(a) hereof.” Corresponding amendments were made to the terms “protectors” and “successor protectors.”

49 In the second place, the original text of cl. 6 was revoked and replaced, so far as material to the present issues, by the following:

- “(a) The first protector shall be Sheikh Abdullah Ali M. Alhamrani. [The original cl. 6(a) to the effect there should at all times be two first protectors was removed.]
- (b) The first protector shall cease to be the protector:

2005 JLR 251

- (i) If he dies.
- (ii) If he shall be found to be lunatic or of unsound mind as confirmed by any court order.
- (iii) If he informs the trustee and the other protector of his desire to resign. [The previous cl. 6(c)(iv), providing for removal by a 75% vote of the beneficiaries did not appear.]
- (c) In the event of the first protector ceasing to be the protector the protector shall at all times thereafter comprise two persons who shall be appointed in accordance with the provisions of sub-cll. (e) or (f) of this clause.
- (d) A successor protector shall cease to be the protector if [there was then enumerated the same set of circumstances as those applicable to the first protector, but retaining, in the case of successor protectors, the power of beneficiaries representing 75% of the trust fund to remove him or her].
- (e) [This, together with (f) listed the potential successor protectors and made provision for their succession, substantially as before.]
- ...
- (g) Successor protectors shall exercise their powers jointly and the consent of a successor protector shall not bind the other protector. [This represented the residue of the previous cl. 6(f) after the removal of the original provision for first protectors to act individually, which was now redundant.]”

It is unnecessary to set out the terms of the remaining sub-clauses.

50 Shortly after this development, on June 12th, 2000, the entirety of the Manastar Trust fund, consisting of the shares in Sidara, was transferred into Internine by the trustee, exercising powers conferred on it by the original Manastar deed of June 1998, as amended by Sheikh Abdullah’s April 17th, 2000 instrument and a further supplemental instrument, dated June 8th, 2000, executed by Sheikh Abdullah in (purported) exercise of his power as sole “present protector” (as he was described there).

51 The effect of these amendments, if valid, was and is radical. Not only have they established Sheikh Abdullah in the position of sole first protector, to the exclusion of Sheikh Mohamed, but they have also done so in a way that entrenches him in it irreversibly until such time as he dies, becomes of unsound mind or chooses to resign. As there is no longer another first protector, there is no one with power to displace Sheikh

Abdullah in the same way that he claims to have been able lawfully to remove Sheikh Mohamed from office in order (allegedly) to protect the trust and the interests of the beneficiaries. The ability of beneficiaries representing 75% of the trust fund to remove him, as provided in the old cl. 6(c)(iv), has also been eliminated (though retained, as just noted, in the case of successor protectors).

The scope of the trial

52 Two matters that had a significant bearing on the course and scope of the trial can be conveniently mentioned at this point. First, Sheikh Abdullah's contentions as to whether the power to amend conferred by cl. 2(b) was subject to any constraint of a fiduciary nature and whether that question was within the scope of Issues 1 and 2. Secondly, the rival contentions of Sheikh Abdullah and Sheikh Mohamed in particular as to the extent to which, if at all, Issue 2 required and entitled the court to concern itself with the future as well as the past, and the extent to which the court should admit in evidence and have regard to post-April 17th, 2000 documents and events.

53 As to the first of these, Sheikh Abdullah's pleaded case denied that the cl. 2(b) power of amendment was subject to any limitation, whether as a matter of construction or otherwise, and later again denied that the exercise by a first protector of any of the said powers is subject to the overriding common law fiduciary duty alleged, or any like duty or other limitation, other than as expressly provided for by the terms of the trust deed. And, as late as December 8th, 2004, when he swore his 15th affidavit, Sheikh Abdullah appeared still to be maintaining this stance, though perhaps with less confidence than before:

“It was always my understanding that my powers to amend the trust deed, both before and after the October 14th, 1998 instrument of amendment, were unconstrained. It is alleged (and as I understand that this issue is not to be determined at the January 2005 trial, which relates only to questions of construction) that there were some external constraints on my ability to amend arising from the existence of some fiduciary obligations on my part. I make no comment on the existence or otherwise of any such obligations. Suffice to say that as far as I am concerned, and it was always my intention that this should be the case, there is nothing in the wording of the deeds that restricts the powers of first protectors to amend the terms of the trust deed.”

54 It will be apparent from the words in parenthesis in para. 53 that Sheikh Abdullah and his advisers had hoped to dissuade the court from addressing the question of any fiduciary element attaching to the exercise of the power of amendment conferred by cl. 2(b) in the course of the

January trial. But, as was made clear by the court at a directions hearing on December 20th, 2004, such an approach was neither justified by the formulation of Issues 1 and 2 nor realistic, given the nature of the questions posed for determination. Whether or not the power to amend was a fiduciary one was inextricably bound up with the questions of construction.

55 This stance of Sheikh Abdullah resulted in a considerable portion of the subsequently-delivered skeleton arguments of the other parties being devoted to an analysis of the nature of the cl. 2(b) power and its correct characterization (as beneficial (or personal); restricted; qualified fiduciary; or wholly fiduciary). But, by the time Sheikh Abdullah's own skeleton argument came to be delivered, his position had moved on to the point where he no longer sought to contest the proposition that that power, properly construed, was subject to certain constraints of a fiduciary nature. He conceded and indeed argued, instead, that its proper classification was that of a “restricted personal” or “qualified fiduciary” power (in terms of his preferred four-fold classification, derived from Lewin on Trusts, 17th ed., para. 30–02, at 771–772 (2000)), there being, it was suggested, little difference between these two in the present case, and that the power was one which by its nature must be exercised for a proper purpose and (it may well be) with due consideration to the interests of the trusts (including all beneficiaries) as a whole. This concession, it must be said, was properly and necessarily made: Sheikh Abdullah’s previous position was untenable. An attempt to reconcile this new position with Sheikh Abdullah’s earlier stance was no more than wishful thinking.

56 This development left all the parties more or less agreed that the power was and is a fiduciary one: not “beneficial or personal,” nor at the other end of the scale “fully or wholly fiduciary” as both first protectors were themselves designated beneficiaries and were expressly authorized by cl. 6(j) to exercise their powers notwithstanding this fact; but in the middle territory, covered by what can most conveniently be termed a “qualified fiduciary” power. To the extent that the discussion of classification of powers reduced the ambit of the dispute between the parties, it served a useful purpose. But, important as it is, this conclusion alone is not necessarily sufficient to arrive at the correct answers to the questions posed by Issues 1 and 2. Such categorization is no more than a convenient, rough shorthand for various “baskets” of ideas: the full range and nuances of powers is as varied as the circumstances of the settlements under which they are given: see Smellie, J. in In re Z Trust (6) (1997 CILR at 265) (a decision of the Grand Court of the Cayman Islands). The terms of the particular document(s) in question still have to be construed.

57 The second area of difference between the parties concerning the scope of the trial was whether and to what extent the court should be concerning itself with what might or might not happen in the future as regards any further exercise- or purported exercise-of the power to amend the trust deeds.

58 Mr. Taylor, on behalf of the first party, made no secret of his clients’ concerns as to what Sheikh Abdullah might attempt (illegitimately, in their view) to do next in exercise of his claimed powers as sole first protector and was anxious to try to ensure that the court was cognizant of certain events that had happened (as he contended) subsequent to the April 17th, 2000 amendments. These were said to be indicative of Sheikh Abdullah’s mischievous intentions, or at least illustrative of what could happen. From this he sought to argue that it was “essential that the court should decide not only on the powers and the nature of the powers that a first protector had but on the powers and the nature of the powers that the first protector has.” For a while it also seemed that he was seeking to use post-April 17th, 2000 materials as an aid to construction of the trust deeds, though this was later disavowed.

59 At the other end of the spectrum, Mr. James, on behalf of Sheikh Abdullah, was insistent that it was no part of the function of the court on the trial of Issues 1 and 2 to concern itself with the validity of any particular amendment, actual or hypothetical, other than those that were effected by the instruments of October 14th, 1998 and April 17th, 2000, his concern evidently being that to go down that road might allow the first party to “obtain the collateral advantage of fettering [Sheikh Abdullah] in the exercise of his powers as first protector for the future.” He accepted, however, that it would be perfectly legitimate for the court to take account of “the scope of amendments which would be permitted on a particular construction of the trust deeds.”

60 I can well understand the nervous concern of Mr. Taylor’s clients as to what Sheikh Abdullah might consider it appropriate and legitimate to do next in the exercise of powers which-until shortly before the trial-he was repeatedly asserting were not subject to any limitation of any kind whatever, fiduciary or otherwise. But it would be wrong and unnecessary, for the purpose of determining Issues 1 and 2, for me to take account of the sort of matters that Mr. Taylor invites me to look at. Mr. James rightly submits-as does Mr. Binnington for the Internine trustee-that what is at issue in the present trial is the construction of the relevant provisions of the trust deeds with a view to determining the validity or otherwise of the amendments made by the instruments executed by Sheikh Abdullah on October 14th, 1998 and April 17th, 2000 and that no other specific amendments are currently in issue. In the course of that exercise of construction it was, of course, inevitable that the possible ramifications of competing submissions as to the true meaning and intent of the relevant provisions might be explored and that this might involve considering what the position would be in a variety of hypothetical circumstances as indicators for or against a particular construction. But this was something that could be done perfectly well as a matter of submission and debate, and required no evidence of anything. I would, moreover, have been in no position in the present trial to make any finding of fact on any contested issue. Nor would evidence of post-amendment events have been admissible as an aid to construction.

61 For the record, however, I note that the trustee gives an assurance, in response to the first party’s skeleton argument, that there is no “other secret amendment” planned.

Construing cl. 2(b) and 6(c) and (f): the principles

62 The correct approach to the task before the court is to a large extent the same as it is for any instrument the meaning of which is in contention:

(i) the aim is to establish the presumed intention of the maker(s) of the document from the words used: in the present case, there being no settlor-signatory, the maker must be taken in each case to be the trustee-or possibly the trustee and Sheikh Abdullah as the parties to the letters of instruction which conferred authority on the trustees to execute the declarations of trust (it makes little difference which in the present case);

(ii) words must, however, be construed against the background of the surrounding circumstances or “matrix” of facts existing at the time when the document was executed-a principle that has been a bedrock of English law since the judgment of Lord Wilberforce in Prenn v. Simmonds (3) and appears now to have been accepted as also properly reflecting the approach that this court should adopt in relation to such matters;

(iii) the circumstances relevant and admissible for this purpose are those that must be taken to have been known to the maker at the time or, where there are more than one, known to the makers of or the parties to the document, and include (to use the language of Lord Hoffmann in Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd. v. West Bromwich Bldg. Socy. (2) ([1998] 1 W.L.R. at 913), from whose speech only Lord Lloyd of Berwick dissented)-“ . . . absolutely anything which would have affected the way in which the language of the document would have been understood by a reasonable man”;

(iv) evidence of subjective intention, drafts and negotiations and other matters extrinsic to the document in question is inadmissible, as is evidence of events subsequent to the making of the instrument (evidence of this kind being relevant where an estoppel is said to arise but not in this jurisdiction, unlike some others, as an aid to construing the original meaning of the document);

(v) the critical provisions, cll. 2(b), 6(c) and 6(f), as with all words and phrases, have to be read in the context of the document as a whole;

(vi) words should as far as possible be given their ordinary meaning: “Loyalty to the text of a commercial contract, instrument, or document read in its contextual setting is the paramount principle of interpretation”: per Lord Steyn in Society of Lloyd’s v. Robinson (5) ([1999] 1 W.L.R. at 763); and

(vii) this last precept may, however, have to give way if consideration of the document as a whole, having regard to the principles set out above or common sense, points to a different conclusion: “common sense” in this context being best reflected by the passage from the speech of Lord Reid in Schuler (L.) A.G. v. Wickman Machine Tool Sales Ltd. (4) ([1974] A.C. at 251) in which he observed:

“The fact that a particular construction leads to a very unreasonable result must be a relevant consideration. The more unreasonable the result the more unlikely it is that the parties can have intended it, and if they do intend it the more necessary it is that they shall make that intention abundantly clear.”

63 It is also elementary, first, that when attempting to discern the true meaning of a power conferred in a trust deed or other instrument the court must have regard to the nature of the deed and the purpose for which the power appears to have been granted-though this will depend to a large extent on the terms of the instrument itself; and secondly, that a power of amendment reserved in a trust must be exercised for the purpose for which it was granted and not for one beyond the contemplation of the makers of the original instrument (Lord Steyn (ibid.), citing Hole v. Garnsey (1)).

64 In the present case, the party most concerned to appeal to extrinsic evidence as part of the relevant surrounding circumstances or factual matrix was the first party. Mr. Taylor’s submissions originally envisaged an examination of a substantial body of material, running to several lever-arch files, as necessary for this purpose. But by the start of the trial this had been reduced to fewer than 20 documents and a limited number of affidavits, and it was whittled down further in the course of the hearing to a few very limited passages of affidavit evidence and a handful of documents, most of which were either uncontroversial, inadmissible or of no particular help. The matters of which these materials were said to contain relevant evidence were, essentially, these-tracing them back in chronological sequence from the execution of the two trust deeds:

(i) The three letters of instruction: all parties were agreed that these letters, and the fact that the resulting declarations of trust were executed in pursuance of them, were admissible and relevant circumstances.

(ii) The fact that, of the siblings, Sheikh Abdullah alone was involved in negotiations surrounding the creation of the trusts, although all nine siblings were entitled to share in the intended creation of the intended trust assets: this again was common ground.

(iii) The fact that the immediate source of the settled funds was the Liechtenstein foundations and the Cayman trusts: this was common ground between all parties as regards Internine and Manastar but, in the case of Intertraders, was not accepted by Mr. Le Quesne as having been known to Russa and thus a legitimate part of the factual matrix. Beyond this there was, however, no agreement. Mr. Taylor suggested that the court should look at the terms of foundation documents with a view to making submissions as to similarities between them and the Jersey trusts. Sheikh Abdullah had acknowledged in his fourth affidavit that the form of the Intertraders deed was “loosely based on that previously entered into between me and ABN AMRO in Geneva.” But it was plain that this would be an exercise of uncertain value, not least because there was no evidence before the court of the relevant laws of these other jurisdictions to help with a proper understanding of them; and, in the case of the Clubnine by-laws and statutes, the power to amend was not, in any event, vested in the protectors but in another body, the so-called “Foundation Board.” Nor do I think that any useful or legitimate assistance can be gained from a letter, dated May 7th, 1997, in which Mr. Allan Johnson, then managing director of Russa, wrote to Le Gallais & Luce, Russa’s then lawyers, reporting his client’s request that the trust that was to be established should “follow the lines of a Liechtenstein Foundation which the family has”: other considerations apart, this would be getting into the forbidden and unreliable area of pre-deed “negotiations” and subjective intention.

(iv) The power of attorney conferred on Sheikh Mohamed and Sheikh Abdullah by the other brothers and sisters on May 3rd, 1992: again it was accepted by all concerned with Internine and Manastar that Sheikh Abdullah held such a power of attorney authorizing him (acting individually) to represent his eight siblings in respect of (at least) those assets which became assets of those two trusts and that the trustee was aware of this. Russa, however, did not accept that it knew of this at the relevant time, though I find it difficult to believe that this can really have been the case.

(v) The fact that the settled funds were substantial and derived originally from those constituting the inheritance of the children of Sheikh Ali Alhamrani, that they were, in short, “family assets”: here too there was no dispute that this was known to all concerned at the time when the declarations of trusts were made.

65 But, when all is said and done, with one important exception, none of these matters helps very much to answer the disputed issue of construction with which the court is faced. It may, in particular, have been the practice of the members of the family to confer authority on the two eldest brothers, Sheikhs Mohamed and Abdullah, to act in one capacity or another on behalf of the others, as in the case of the March 1992 power of attorney, or (perhaps) as protectors under the Liechtenstein foundations or the Cayman trusts, but that of itself does nothing to further the present inquiry as to the meaning and effect of the provisions of the two later Jersey trusts with which we are now concerned.

66 What these contextual facts and matters do, however, is to put beyond any doubt whatever the fiduciary nature of the role of the protectors (whether first or successor) and of the powers conferred on them and the need for that role to be performed, and those powers to be exercised, for the benefit of the beneficiaries as a whole.

67 Turning to the terms of the declarations of trust themselves, a striking feature of them is that, although the possibility of dissent between successor protectors was expressly recognized, and provision was made for resolving it by allowing the beneficiaries, on a 75% vote, to hold the balance of power (cl. 6(g)), no attempt was made by the draftsman to cater for the equivalent situation arising between the first protectors. Nor is it obvious what the draftsman had in mind as regards the combined operation of cl. 6(f) and cl. 5(b)(iii) in the event of a breakdown in relations between the two first protectors. The latter clause provides: “Directions [by protectors under cl. 5(b)(i)] shall be in writing and shall be effective when received by the trustee.” But what would the position be in the event of sequential conflicting directions being given by each of the first protectors in relation to a matter that was not irreversible, such as the buying or selling of a particular investment? On the face of things, there was, in theory, nothing to stop a direction to the trustee from first protector A on Monday, to sell X bonds and buy Y shares, being followed by a direction from B a week later to the opposite effect, and so on indefinitely. Clause 6(f) makes the exercise of any cl. 5(b) power, and thus the giving of any investment direction, by one first protector binding on the other; but it is difficult to see that A’s direction in the example given could have been intended to require the trustee not only to make the specified investment in the first place but to continue to hold it without limit in time so as to preclude B from ever giving a direction of his own. No counsel was able to offer a satisfactory solution to this conundrum other than to suggest that, in practice, sooner or later the beneficiaries would intervene or the directions of the court would be sought.

68 What then was the thinking behind this? How were differences between first protectors “concerning the manner in which they should exercise any of their powers” (to borrow the language of cl. 6(g)) expected to be resolved? It is difficult to see that the omission to make the beneficiaries the arbiters of any dispute, in the same way as that established by cl. 6(g) in the case of successor protectors, was anything other than deliberate. And while one can speculate that it may have been thought, at the time, that any conflict was unlikely to arise as Sheikh Abdullah and Sheikh Mohamed would probably each be content to leave the other to get on with looking after matters in his traditional sphere of influence—the foreign assets in the case of the former and the Saudi Arabian assets in the latter case—there could be no guarantee that differences might not arise one day. Logically, the only solution would appear to be the extreme remedy of removal altogether of one or other first protector by the beneficiaries under cl. 6(c)(iv)—or, if Sheikh Abdullah is right in his submission, by one of the first protectors amending the trust so as to remove the other or restrict his powers. Either way, this seems a heavy-handed solution for each and every contentious situation.

69 Another striking feature is that, while there were only two exceptions to the first protectors' power to revoke or amend (designed to protect the trustee and to rule out any retrospective effect or the undoing of any previous exercise by the trustee of its powers), in the case of successor protectors there was a third limitation expressed in the following terms:

“[P]rovided ... that any such amendment increasing the powers of the successor protectors shall only be exercised with the prior or simultaneous written consent of the beneficiaries who would be entitled to at least 75% of the trust fund pursuant to the provisions of cl.6 (c).”
[Emphasis supplied.]

It is plain, therefore, that there was deliberately intended to be no restriction on first protectors amending the trust deed so as to increase their powers without reference to the beneficiaries.

70 The main thrust of the attack by Mr. Taylor and Mr. Young on Sheikh Abdullah's April 17th, 2000 amendments (and those of October 14th, 1998) was fairly simple and direct (though none the worse for that) and can be summarized as follows:

(i) Clause 6(a) provides in terms that the protectors “shall at all times comprise two persons,” a stipulation that broadly reflects the position in the case of the 1992 power of attorney and the earlier foundations and trusts, and the intention of the other members of the family to entrust their affairs, as represented by their shares in the trust funds in question, to the joint care of the two eldest brothers.

(ii) Clause 6(d) ensures that in the event of a protector vacancy occurring, it is automatically filled by the next senior sibling.

(iii) Clause 6(c) contains a comprehensive code of the circumstances in which a first protector ceases to hold office, to which it is not legitimate to add by use of the power to amend contained in cl. 2(b); or, to put it another way, cl. 2(b) has to be read in such a way as to exclude, by necessary implication, any amendment that would be inconsistent with cl. 6(c).

(iv) To do otherwise would be “outside the contemplation of the parties” at the time when the power of amendment was conferred by cl. 2(b) and would make a nonsense “at a stroke” (as Mr. Young put it) of those provisions of the trust deeds that contemplate the existence of two protectors-provisions that are intended to create a necessary system of “checks and balances” against the abuse of power and should be regarded as fundamental and unalterable.

(v) To accede to Sheikh Abdullah's arguments would amount to a licence for him to use his power as a first protector in breach of fiduciary duty and/or for improper motivation and/or in fraud on his power.

71 The case so advanced undoubtedly has an immediate and superficial appeal, reflecting as it does the lapidary observation of Lord Acton that “power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely,” and thus (it is implied) ought not, in the latter form, to be tolerated wherever it can be avoided. It could also be said to draw support from the dictum of Lord Reid in Wickman (4) mentioned earlier. The idea that, from Day 1-and, as others have observed in the past, it always salutary to test these things by reference to a time when “the ink is still wet on the paper”-either first protector should have had the capacity to pre-empt action by the other by cutting down his power or removing him completely from office, is not something that immediately strikes one as obviously reasonable. And these would be powerful submissions indeed were the terms of cl. 2(b) such as to confer no more than a wide-ranging power on each of the first protectors to do, say, “all things necessary for the protection of the trust fund and the interests of the beneficiaries,” without reference to any power to amend the very instrument under which they hold office. But that is not the case here. Once the capacity to amend the source of the power, the “constitution,” is granted, the whole premise of arguments such as those advanced on behalf of the first party and the Ladies goes out of the window-the premise being that the original deed is the sole, exclusive and definitive determinant of what can and cannot be done. The argument then becomes remorselessly circular.

72 This, in short, is the problem that Sheikh Abdullah’s opponents face. And it is not as if the power to amend is one that is only there by inference: it is clearly and unequivocally stated, is not expressed to be limited in any way, and is said in terms (by cl. 6(f), with its express reference to cl. 2(b)) to be exercisable by either first protector individually and to be binding on the other. Advocate Young suggested that cl. 6(f) was unworkable and should be disregarded, alternatively, that it should be construed as limited to the right of each first protector to communicate the result of any jointly-reached decision, but I cannot say that I find either submission persuasive.

73 The only way out of this labyrinth is to have recourse to the constitutional device of the “entrenched” or “fundamental” provision. But, for this to be justifiable, there either has to be an express term or there have to be circumstances so compelling as to leave no doubt that, as a matter of implication, amendments of a certain nature are off-limit. Hole v. Garnsey (1), to which reference has previously been made, was just such a case of this second kind, the Appellate Committee being unwilling to accept that the amendment to the society’s rules in question could ever have been within the contemplation of its members. But the “fundamental” nature of the relevant provision there stemmed from the fact that the effect of the amendment would have been to impose additional financial obligations (to subscribe capital) not only on those members who assented to the proposed amendment but also on those who voted against it. It therefore went beyond purely administrative matters: see, in particular, the speech of Lord Atkin ([1930] A.C. at 496), in which he expressed the view that full effect could be given to the rule “. . . by limiting its operation as against dissentients to matters which are within the scope of the administration of the venture as originally framed . . . an increase in capital contribution is something quite different,” being a matter to which no man can be bound against his will.

74 In the present case, there is no express entrenching provision and there are, as I see it, no considerations equivalent to those in Hole v. Garnsey that bear on the true meaning and effect of the provisions under consideration here and compel one, as a matter of principle, common sense or logic, to conclude that they are so fundamental as to have been beyond the contemplation of the maker(s) of the original deeds as falling within the scope of cll. 2(b) and 6(f).

75 In the first place, the amendments in issue concern the administration of the trusts; they neither impose any additional financial obligations on anyone nor destroy any substantive beneficial entitlement.

76 In the second place, once the fiduciary nature of the power to amend or revoke is recognized, there is nothing in the terms of the deeds themselves or in the circumstances or factual matrix in which these trusts came into existence that necessarily requires this conclusion: the potential vice, and potentially unreasonable result, otherwise inherent in a concentration of power in one person is restrained and controlled at every point by the effect of this fiduciary overlay. Mr. Taylor's suggestion, in relation to Issue 2, that the case put forward by Sheikh Abdullah would, if right, give him a licence to use his power in breach of his fiduciary duty, was a fair response to Sheikh Abdullah's original case, but it ceases to apply once the true nature of the power to amend is acknowledged (the opportunity to act in breach of fiduciary duty may of course be there, but not the "licence" in the sense of legitimation).

77 In the third place, the main problem with the concept of entrenchment in the present case is the difficulty of discerning with confidence which provisions would enjoy this specially protected status and which would not. On any view, there must be many that would not fall within this category, otherwise the power of amendment by either one of the protectors becomes meaningless. On the other hand, it is by no means clear why the two-first-protector provision should be the only entrenched one, important as it plainly is. On what sure basis could one draw a logical distinction between the two-first-protector provision and what one might reasonably regard as the highly important safeguard enabling the beneficiaries to get rid of one or both first protectors on a 75% vote? Or, to take another example, what about the identities of successor protectors: would it be open to a first protector, acting alone, to change this so as to bring in someone from outside the family circle altogether? Would not such far-reaching possibilities also have to be ruled out on the ground that the relevant provisions were beyond the contemplation of the maker(s) of the original declarations of trust and must be accorded special-status protection? And if so, what is the touchstone by reference to which these difficult questions fall to be decided? The answers are elusive.

78 Further conundrums arise if one asks what difference it would make, in relation to some of these provisions, if the two first protectors were to act in concert. Would that factor be of relevance if and when it came to considering whether or not it was within their power of amendment to free themselves of any risk of removal by vote of the beneficiaries? What logical basis would there be for concluding that such a move was permissible if done by agreement of the two first protectors but impermissible if done unilaterally? Either way, the other members of the family would be disenfranchised as regards any specific right to exercise ultimate control over the first protectors.

Conclusion

79 The conclusion to which I find that I am compelled in the end is that the true meaning and intent was that each of the two first protectors was to be entrusted with far-reaching powers to act individually within the scope expressly assigned to them in the trust deeds; that that scope included (as an inescapable conclusion from the matters discussed above) the power unilaterally to amend, or even revoke, the administrative provisions of the trusts, including those concerning the number, identity, appointment and removal of protectors, whether first or successor, so as to bind the other first protector; that this power, exercised bona fide, constituted-among other things-the effective and only check on the potential abuse of power by an errant first protector; and that there was, accordingly, nothing to stop Sheikh Abdullah executing the amending deeds of October 14th, 1998 and April 17th, 2000 other than the constraints necessarily inherent in the exercise of fiduciary powers of the kind involved here. I say nothing, for the moment, as to whether the same conclusion would necessarily apply to amendments purporting to affect the identity or entitlement of the beneficiaries.

80 The matter could, of course, have been better expressed in the original declarations of trust. And how exactly a duality of individually plenipotentiary, equal-ranking commanding officers-every military man's nightmare-was expected to work in the event of conflict between them, other than by the extreme measure of one exercising his power of amendment to remove the other, remains unsolved. With the benefit of hindsight it is, of course, easy to see that it was always a potential recipe for serious contention. And whether it was a case of the consequences never having been rigorously thought through, or of a deliberate decision based on the view that the risk of such problems was a price worth paying for the advantages of having two people with extensive powers to "protect" the trusts in any and every eventuality, it is impossible to be wholly certain. But I can well understand that the latter might have been the case, given the substantial nature and potential geographical spread of the trusts' foreign investments. Seen in this way, far from being wholly unreasonable or repugnant to common sense, it could have been thought highly desirable that in extremis each first protector should have been able to curtail the power of the other, or even remove him from office altogether, if that were necessary in order to protect the trust and could in all other respects be justified in terms of fiduciary considerations.

81 The importance of the fiduciary element in all this cannot be overstated. The more radical the departure from the original instrument, particularly where, as here, the result is the substantial accretion of additional power to the remaining first protector and the elimination of all means of removing him from office against his will, the greater the need for explanation and justification. Amending the original January 1998 Intertraders declaration of trust to bring it in line with the later Internine declaration might be one thing (if that were indeed the sole motive, a matter for inquiry on another occasion). But the April 17th, 2000 amendments are plainly of an altogether different order and put a heavy burden on Sheikh Abdullah to explain the necessity for these draconian measures and otherwise to justify them as being for a proper purpose and in the bona fide exercise, for the benefit of the beneficiaries as a whole, of the powers conferred on him. Sheikh Abdullah has sworn a number of affidavits giving what he says is his explanation for what he did, but the actual circumstances and motivations are matters for the trial of Issue 3.

82 It may also be-though I put the matter no higher than this, as the point was not debated at the trial of Issues 1 and 2-that there is another point that will also have to be addressed: that is whether, irrespective of the justification or otherwise of the April 17th, 2000 amendments, the indefinite perpetuation of the new state of affairs introduced by those amendments can also be justified in the face of the sustained, united opposition of all the other beneficiaries, the passage of time and (possibly) changing circumstances, or whether, like wartime or emergency legislation, there comes a point when the force of the original justification (if there were one) is spent.

83 In conclusion, it should be clearly understood that nothing in this judgment is to be construed as qualifying or varying any extant order of this court and that, unless and until otherwise expressly ordered, the interim regime imposed in late 2003 remains in force.

Judgment

Andrew Burrows QC:

1 Introduction

(1) General

1. This judgment deals with an application by the defendant, JP Morgan Chase Bank NA, for reverse summary judgment against the claimant, the Federal Republic of Nigeria, under CPR 24.2; and/or for the claimant's statement of case to be struck out under CPR 3.4\(2\). The defendant submits that, under CPR 24.2, the claimant has no real prospect of succeeding and that there is no other compelling reason for a trial; and that, under CPR 3.4\(2\), the Re-amended Particulars of Claim disclose no reasonable grounds for bringing the claim. The claim is one by a sovereign state against an international bank. Even by the standards of this court, it is a very large claim amounting to some US$875,740,000. The claimant alleges that the defendant bank made three transfers ($401,540,000, $400,000,000, and $74,200,000.03) from an account that the claimant held with it, which the defendant bank would not have made had it been exercising reasonable care. More specifically, it is alleged that the defendant bank was in breach of what is commonly referred to as the 'Quincecare duty of care', named after the case of [Barclays Bank plc v Quincecare Ltd \[1992\] 4 All ER 363](#) in which Steyn J first set out this duty of care. What is being alleged, therefore, is that, although the bank had reasonable grounds for believing that the payments out of its customer's account were defrauding the customer, the bank went ahead, in breach of its duty of care to its customer, and made those payments.

2. The claim was commenced on 29 November 2017. Amended Particulars of Claim were served on 4 July 2018 and an Amended Defence was served on 24 July 2018. This application for summary judgment/striking out was commenced on 31 July 2018. Since then, the claimant has put forward (draft) Re-amended Particulars of Claim. They significantly differ from the Amended Particulars of Claim. In particular, a number of claims have been abandoned (such as breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the Nigerian constitution, breach of anti-money laundering legislation, knowing receipt and breach of mandate). Instead it has been made clear that the claim in contract and tort rests solely on the breach of the Quincecare duty of care; and brief particulars of the alleged fraud are also pleaded. Rosalind Phelps QC, for the defendant bank, indicated at the start of the hearing (see transcript day 1, p 9, lines 13-20) that there would be no objection to those re-amendments if this application fails. The important point — and there is no dispute about this between the parties — is that the court is required to deal with this application on the basis of the Re-amended Particulars of Claim.

(2) the relevant facts

3. It is alleged by the claimant that the full background to this case is a complex web of facts that reveal a fraudulent and corrupt scheme whereby the claimant (and hence ultimately the people of Nigeria) has been defrauded of large sums of money. Plainly the court on a summary judgment application cannot possibly attempt to get to the bottom of such allegations and no-one is suggesting that it should. What this application is therefore concerned with is narrow and, as is explained in paragraph 6(iii) below, the court must assume that the claimant will be able to prove the facts it is alleging unless it is clear that those allegations have no real substance.

4. For the purposes of this application, the relevant and undisputed facts can be stated in a few sentences. In this respect, I was assisted by Ms Phelps, who guided me through the first parts of a helpful agreed chronology of events. The claim centres on a depository account that was opened pursuant to a depository agreement dated May 20, 2011 between the Federal Government of Nigeria and the defendant bank. Under that agreement, the defendant bank was the 'depository' and the Federal Government of Nigeria was the 'depositor'. The background to that depository agreement was a long-running dispute about an offshore Nigerian oilfield known as OPL 245. In 1998, the rights to exploit OPL 245 had been originally awarded by the Federal Government of Nigeria to Malabu Oil and Gas Nigeria Ltd ('Malabu'), owned by the then Minister of Petroleum, Chief Daniel Etete (who in 2007 was convicted in France of money-laundering arising out of bribery offences committed in Nigeria). That dispute was settled and, as part of its obligations under the resolution/settlement agreements (dated 29 April 2011), the Federal Government of Nigeria was required to set up an escrow account and, subsequently, set up the depository account with the defendant bank for the purpose of money being paid to those entitled under the settlement. On 23 August 2011, the defendant bank, on instructions by authorised signatories of the Federal Government of Nigeria, made two transfers, of $401,540,000 and $400,000,000 respectively, from the depository account to two separate accounts in the name of Malabu at First Bank of Nigeria plc and Keystone Bank Ltd. On 29 August 2013, the defendant bank, on instructions by authorised signatories of the Federal Government of Nigeria, made a further transfer of the remaining funds in the depository account, $74,200,000.03, to an account in the name of Malabu at Keystone Bank Ltd.

5. Under the Re-amended Particulars of Claim, it is alleged (see paras 20-21D of the Re-amended Particulars of Claim) that, in breach of its contractual and tortious Quincecare duty of care, the defendant, having been put on inquiry that the claimant was being defrauded, paid out irrevocably (to the accounts in the name of Malabu) sums of $801,540,000 and $74,200,000.03 from the depository account. It is alleged that that money was used to pay off corrupt former and contemporary Nigerian government officials and/or their proxies. It is alleged that some of the money was also intended to be used (and some was used) to make payments to senior executives at Royal Dutch Shell and Eni Corporation (those companies having formed an alliance for the purposes of acquiring the rights to develop the OPL 245 oilfield from Malabu).

(3) the law on summary judgment and the grounds for this application

6. The correct approach for a court to take on an application for summary judgment under CPR 24.2 has been clarified in several cases. These include Swain v Hillman [2001] 2 All ER 91, ED & F Man Liquid Products Ltd v Patel [2003] EWCA Civ 472, at [10], Easyair Ltd v Opal Telecom Ltd [2009] EWHC 339 (Ch) at [15], and Daniels v Lloyds Bank plc [2018] EWHC 660 (Comm), [2018] IRLR 813, at [48]. As regards applications by defendants for reverse summary judgment, the central points to be derived from those cases are as follows:

- i. The burden of proof is on the defendant.
- ii. The court must consider whether the claimant has a 'realistic', as opposed to a 'fanciful', prospect of success.
- iii. The court should not conduct a mini-trial. Where there is a dispute on the facts, the court should assume that the claimant will be able to prove the facts it is alleging unless it is clear that there is no real substance to those allegations, as where they are contradicted by the documentary evidence.
- iv. If there is a short point of law, or construction, and the court is satisfied that it has before it all the evidence necessary for the proper determination of the question and that the parties have had an adequate opportunity to address it in argument, the court should grasp the nettle and decide it.

7. The defendant bank's application rests on three grounds. The first is that there was no Quincecare duty of care applicable on these facts because such a duty was inconsistent with, or was excluded by, the express terms of the depository agreement. We can refer to this as the 'no Quincecare duty of care' issue. The second ground is that, even if such a duty was owed, there is no realistic prospect of the claimant establishing causation of loss: the same outcome would have eventuated even if the defendant had not been in breach of its duty. This is the 'causation of loss' issue. The third ground is that, even if the claimant could establish the breach of a Quincecare duty of care causing the alleged loss, the defendant bank would have a complete defence to the claim because of an indemnity clause in the depository agreement: as the defendant bank would be entitled under that clause to be indemnified by the claimant, the claim would fail for circularity. This is the 'circularity' issue.

8. It is important to clarify that an 'incorrect party' ground is not now being put forward by the defendant bank. The claim is being brought by the Federal Republic of Nigeria although the depository agreement was made by the Federal Government of Nigeria. The defendant bank previously contended that that was a reason why summary judgment should be given and/or the claim should be struck out. But in the light of expert evidence put forward on behalf of the claimant — to the effect that, as a matter of Nigerian law, the Federal Government of Nigeria and the Federal Republic of Nigeria are not different legal entities - that line of argument has been abandoned by the defendant bank for the purposes of this application. More generally, it is not in dispute that for the purposes of this application the Federal Republic of Nigeria and the Federal Government of Nigeria should be treated as one and the same.

9. It was common ground between the parties that, leaving aside the 'causation of loss' issue, the court should grasp the nettle and decide the 'no Quincecare duty of care' and 'circularity' issues on this application. This is because they are concerned with questions of law as to the contractual interpretation of the depository agreement and the nature of the Quincecare duty of care. In other words, in respect of those issues, there has been full legal argument before me and nothing will be changed by having further evidence at trial. I accept that that is the correct approach. So I will be deciding those two issues one way or the other (rather than asking whether the claimant has a realistic prospect of success on the particular point of law). In contrast, the 'causation of loss' issue is primarily a factual issue, although also raising some legal issues, and should be approached by directly asking whether the claimant has a realistic prospect of success.

2 Outline of the Main Submissions of the Parties

10. Although I will be referring at various stages later to further details of the parties' submissions, it will be helpful now to give an outline of their main submissions.

(1) Outline of the Defendant Bank's Main Submissions

(i) the 'no Quincecare duty of care' issue

11. This issue took most time at the hearing. In general terms, Ms Phelps submitted that the nature and purpose of the depository account, as set out in the terms of the depository agreement, left no room for a Quincecare duty of care. In contrast to an ordinary current account, the depository account was essentially a single-purpose account, analogous to an escrow account, and was set up to enable the claimant to fulfil its specific payment obligations under the resolution/settlement agreements. The depository agreement contained, for example, detailed and narrow depository release conditions. These required written instructions in the form of a 'release notice' (a draft of which was scheduled to the agreement), signed by an authorised officer and confirmed by a telephone call-back. The contract was a detailed code setting out expressly the conditions which had to be satisfied before the 'depository amount' could be released. The contract was designed to preclude any additional duty of care to go behind instructions which were in compliance with the contract. The defendant bank could not be liable, outside the express terms of the contract, for following compliant instructions. The role of the defendant bank was intended to be largely automatic or mechanical.

12. More specifically, Ms Phelps submitted that a Quincecare duty of care, whether seen as arising by reason of an implied term or in the tort of negligence, was in conflict with particular express terms of the depository agreement. She categorised the conflicting terms into three broad types. First, there was clause 5.1 which excluded a Quincecare duty of care because it confined the defendant bank's obligations to those under the express terms of the contract. Secondly, there were clauses (clauses 5.8, 7.2, 7.4 and 11.5) which had a content which was inconsistent with a Quincecare duty of care. Thirdly, even if a Quincecare duty of care did apply, clauses 8.2(d) and 10.1(a) were exemption clauses which excluded the defendant bank from the consequences of complying with the mandate given. In interpreting some clauses of the contract it was relevant to recognise that, in her submission, the cases show that the Quincecare duty of care embodies a duty to enquire/investigate: it is not merely a negative duty to refrain from paying in certain circumstances.

13. It is helpful at this point to set out the specific terms of the depository agreement relied on by Ms Phelps:

'5.1 The duties and obligations of the Depository in respect of the Depository Cash shall be determined solely by the express terms of this Agreement. The Depository has no knowledge of the terms and provisions of any separate agreement or any agreement relating to the Depositor's Obligations, and shall have no responsibility for compliance by the Depositor with terms of any other agreement, or for ensuring that the terms of any such agreement are reflected in this Agreement and shall have no duties to anyone other than the Depositor.'

'5.8 The Depositor hereby authorises the Depository to act hereunder notwithstanding that: ... (ii) the Depository or any of its divisions, branches or affiliates may be in possession of information tending to show that the instructions received may not be in the best interests of the Depositor and the Depositor agrees that the Depository is not under any duty to disclose any such information.'

'7.2 The Depository shall be under no duty to enquire into or investigate the validity, accuracy or content of any instruction or other communication.'

'7.4 The Depository need not act upon instructions which it reasonably believes to be contrary to law, regulation or market practice but is under no duty to investigate whether any instructions comply with any applicable law, regulation or market practice.'

'8.2 (d) [The Depository shall not be liable to the Depositor for any loss suffered by the Depositor by] the Depository acting on what it in good faith believes to be instructions or in relation to notices, requests, waivers, consents, receipts, or other documents which the Depository in good faith believes to be genuine and to have been given or signed by the appropriate parties.'

'10.1 The Depositor hereby irrevocably and unconditionally agrees on demand to indemnify, and to keep fully and effectively indemnified ... the Depository, and its directors, officers, agents and employees (the "indemnitees") against all costs, claims, losses, liabilities, damages, expenses, fines, penalties, Tax and other matters ("Losses") which may be imposed on, incurred by or asserted against the indemnitees or any of them directly or indirectly in respect of:

(a) the following of any instruction of other directions upon which the indemnitees is authorised to act or rely pursuant to the terms of this Agreement, or arising as a result of entering into this Agreement or their status as holder of the Depository Cash;'

'11 The Depositor hereby represents and warrants to the Depository on a continuing basis that:

11.5 ...the transactions to be effected under this Agreement will not violate any law, regulation, by-law or rule applicable to it or any agreement by which it is bound or by which any of its assets are affected and it is not restricted under the terms of its constitution or in any other manner from performing its obligations hereunder.'

(ii) the 'causation of loss' issue

14. Ms Phelps submitted that, even if a Quincecare duty of care was imposed on the defendant bank in this case, there is no realistic prospect of the claimant successfully showing causation of loss: the same outcome would have eventuated even if the defendant had not been in breach of its duty. In other words, there is no realistic prospect of the claimant showing that the payments out would have been avoided had that duty been complied with. This was because reasonable enquiries would not have uncovered the alleged fraud. Indeed, the defendant bank sought and obtained a letter from the Attorney-General of Nigeria to the effect that the payment instructions were legitimate. Moreover, the investigation into the alleged fraudulent scheme has taken years of work by, for example, the Italian and Nigerian law-enforcement authorities so that the idea that the defendant bank, faced with payment instructions that on the face of it complied with the mandate — and with the express assurances of the Attorney-General of Nigeria — would, or should, reasonably have taken on this task, in order to decide whether to make the payments, is wholly unrealistic. Put another way, if, as alleged, the fraudulent scheme went to the highest level of the Nigerian government — including the then President Goodluck Jonathan — reasonable checks with the highest of officials would merely have served to satisfy the defendant bank that the money should be paid. So, in short, the essential submission here is that because of the nature and extent of the alleged fraudulent scheme there is no realistic prospect of the claimant establishing that it would have avoided paying the money away, even if a Quincecare duty of care was imposed on it.

(iii) the 'circularity' issue

15. Ms Phelps submitted that, even if the claimant could establish that the defendant bank owed the claimant a Quincecare duty of care and had a realistic prospect of establishing breach causing loss, the defendant bank has a complete defence to the claim by reason of the indemnity clause, clause 10.1(a), in the depository agreement (set out in paragraph 13 above). As the defendant bank would be entitled to be indemnified against the claim by the claimant, the claim fails for circularity.

(2) Outline of the Claimant's Main Submissions

(i) the 'no Quincecare duty of care' issue

16. Roger Masefield QC for the claimant initially stressed — and Ms Phelps did not dispute this — that because, on a summary judgment application, the court should assume that the claimant will be able to prove the facts alleged (and there was nothing sufficient here to counteract that assumption), the court must accept the following: that the claimant was defrauded by way of a fraudulent and corrupt scheme; that the defendant bank was 'on inquiry' (ie it had reasonable grounds for believing) that the payment instructions it received were part of an attempt to defraud the claimant; and that, despite that, the defendant bank went ahead and made the payments to Malabu of $801,540,000 in 2011 and $74,200,000.03 in 2013. The factual basis for the Quincecare duty of care arose because the defendant bank was 'on inquiry'. Mr Masefield then submitted that the terms of the depository agreement did not displace that Quincecare duty of care, whether one stood back and looked at the contract generally or one examined the particular terms highlighted by Ms Phelps (each of which, he submitted, should be given a different interpretation than the one Ms Phelps was putting forward). The Quincecare duty of care arose by reason of a term implied by law at common law and/or by statute (under s 13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982); and/or was imposed by the tort of negligence. As the duty gave the customer a valuable right and was imposed by the general law for good policy reasons — to encourage banks to help combat fraud — the correct approach to interpretation was that there had to be clear wording in the contract to displace it. There was no such clear wording in the depository agreement. Moreover, there was no reason of principle or authority why the Quincecare duty of care should not be applied to a depository account (rather than a current account). Indeed, as such an account had a limited purpose with limited numbers of transactions and instructions — and in that sense would place a less onerous burden on the bank than where an account involves multiple transactions — it was a fortiori that a Quincecare duty of care should be owed.

17. In so far as relevant to interpreting the contract, Mr Masefield submitted that the Quincecare duty of care is a duty which requires a bank, while it is 'on inquiry' that a payment out would be a fraud on its customer, to refrain from paying out. In his submission, the authorities do not establish that, once the bank is on inquiry, it is under any duty to investigate: all that the cases lay down is that the bank should refrain from paying unless and until it no longer has reasonable grounds for believing that the payment would be defrauding the customer.

(ii) the 'causation of loss' issue

18. Mr Masefield submitted that this was pre-eminently a triable issue which the court would need to decide in the light of all the evidence at trial. It raised questions of fact and law; and the legal issues would be influenced by the precise scope of the Quincecare duty of care (on which banking expertise would be needed). The defendant bank could not show that the claimant had no realistic prospect of successfully establishing causation of loss. In answer to the defendant bank's submission that further checks by the bank would have led to the same outcome - the money being paid out - Mr Masefield submitted that that would depend on the relevant counterfactual for the causation enquiry. He went through some details of the background, in particular drawing my attention to concerns David Steel J had expressed about instructions to the defendant bank for money to be paid out of the depository account. That was in the context of a freezing order that had been granted over the depository account in relation to a claim brought by Energy Venture Partners Ltd against Malabu (see the comments of David Steel J at a hearing on 21 July 2011 (at bundle 3/23/16) and his judgment at [2011] EWHC 2215 (Comm)). This was put forward by Mr Masefield as part of a general submission that, had the defendant bank not paid out the money, one realistic possibility was that the account would have been frozen by court order (perhaps by reason of the defendant bank invoking clause 5.7 of the depository agreement which, according to Mr Masefield, expressly allowed the bank to come to court for a determination of its duties in the event of a dispute or uncertainty as to its duties).

(iii) the 'circularity' issue

19. Mr Masfield submitted that, on the correct interpretation of clause 10.1(a), there was no circularity. The clause was dealing with the customer indemnifying the bank in respect of claims by third parties against the defendant bank, not claims by the customer. If it were not construed in that way, it would conflict with other clauses of the contract (for example, clause 8 on exclusion of the bank to its customer) and indeed would tend to remove any legal liability of the bank to its customer therefore emptying the contract of its content. Even if that were incorrect, it is well-established in the cases that indemnity clauses should be narrowly construed so that general words, as opposed to clear explicit words, are insufficient for an indemnity clause to cover against negligence, including a negligent breach of contract. One was here concerned with the alleged negligence of the defendant bank (and indeed gross negligence was alleged) and yet there were no words in clause 10.1(a) clearly referring to negligence.

3 The Relevant Law

20. I now set out the relevant law on, first, the Quincecare duty of care and, secondly, the interpretation of exemption, indemnity, and entire agreement clauses. As regards the former, the parties disagreed as to whether the Quincecare duty of care embodies a duty to make enquiries. As regards the latter, the parties were largely in agreement as to the legal principles, albeit with differences of emphasis and starting points, but disagreed as to how those legal principles should be applied in interpreting the depository agreement.

(1) the law on the Quincecare duty of care

21. The Quincecare duty of care was very carefully formulated and explained by Steyn J in Barclays Bank plc v Quincecare Ltd [1992] 4 All ER 363. His mode of expression was that it is a duty on a bank to refrain from executing a customer's order if, and for so long as, the bank is 'put on inquiry' in the sense that the bank has reasonable grounds for believing — assessed according to the standards of an ordinary prudent banker — that the order is an attempt to defraud the customer. It is an aspect of the bank's duty of reasonable skill and care in or about executing the customer's orders and therefore arises by reason of an implied term of the contract or under a coextensive duty of care in the tort of negligence.

22. On the facts of the Quincecare case, a bank had agreed to loan £400,000 to a company. Under the loan facility, the chairman of the company caused the bank to transfer some £340,000 to a firm of solicitors who, under prior arrangements with him, then transferred that sum into his account in the USA. This constituted a defrauding of the company by the chairman. In the bank's action against the company for repayment of the loan, the company counterclaimed for loss caused by the bank's breach of duty to the company. The counterclaim/defence failed because, on the facts, it was held that the bank was not 'put on inquiry': ie it had no reasonable grounds for believing that the chairman's instruction to make the transfer was an attempt to defraud the company. The duty to refrain from payment did not therefore arise.

23. Steyn J set out the position as follows and, given that he was the first judicial expositor of this duty, I make no excuse for citing this long passage from his judgment which repays careful reading (see [1992] 4 All ER 363 at 376-377 with my emphasis):

In my judgment it is an implied term of the contract between the bank and the customer that the bank will observe reasonable skill and care in and about executing the customer's orders. Moreover, notwithstanding what was said in Tai Hing Cotton Mill Ltd v Liu Chong Hing Bank Ltd [1985] 2 All ER 947 at 957, [1986] AC 80 at 107, a banker may in a case such as the present be sued in tort as well as in contract: see Midland Bank Trust Co Ltd v Hett Stubbs & Kemp (a firm) [1978] 3 All ER 571, [1979] Ch 384. But the duties in contract and tort are coextensive, and in the context of the present case nothing turns on the question whether the case is approached as one in contract or tort.

Given that the bank owes a legal duty to exercise reasonable care in and about executing a customer's order to transfer money, it is nevertheless a duty which must generally speaking be subordinate to the bank's other conflicting contractual duties. Ex hypothesi one is considering a case where the bank received a valid and proper order which it is prima facie bound to execute promptly on pain of incurring liability for consequential loss to the customer. How are these conflicting duties to be reconciled in a case where the customer suffers loss because it is subsequently established that the order to transfer money was an act of misappropriation of money by the director or officer? If the bank executes the order knowing it to be dishonestly given, shutting its eyes to the obvious fact of the dishonesty, or acting recklessly in failing to make such inquiries as an honest and reasonable man would make, no problem arises: the bank will plainly be liable. But in real life such a stark situation seldom arises. The critical question is: what lesser state of knowledge on the part of the bank will oblige the bank to make inquiries as to the legitimacy of the order? In judging where the line is to be drawn there are countervailing policy considerations. The law should not impose too burdensome an obligation on bankers, which hampers the effective transacting of banking business unnecessarily. On the other hand, the law should guard against the facilitation of fraud, and exact a reasonable standard of care in order to combat fraud and to protect bank customers and innocent third parties. To hold that a bank is only liable when it has displayed a lack of probity would be much too restrictive an approach. On the other hand, to impose liability whenever speculation might suggest dishonesty would impose wholly impractical standards on bankers. In my judgment the sensible compromise, which strikes a fair balance between competing considerations, is simply to say that a banker must refrain from executing an order if and for as long as the banker is 'put on inquiry' in the sense that he has reasonable grounds (although not necessarily proof) for believing that the order is an attempt to misappropriate the funds of the company ... And, the external standard of the likely perception of an ordinary prudent banker is the governing one. That in my judgment is not too high a standard. Indeed, the evidence of Mr Redhead, a most experienced banker, showed that the principle which I have stated is the very criterion usually applied by bankers. He used the language of a banker being put on inquiry. He explained that if the order had been to transfer £350,000 to a local casino, the money would not have been sent. In this case the bank knew that the funds were required to purchase a business, and the bank expected the funds, or a large part of it, to go to the company's solicitors. Mr Redhead made clear that if he had reason to suspect the payment to [the solicitors], he would have made further inquiries, and notably from the solicitors. He would, he said, have put up with the embarrassment. This evidence reinforces my view that the principle which I have stated does not impose too high a duty on a bank.

Having stated what appears to me to be the governing principle, it may be useful to consider briefly how one should approach the problem. Everything will no doubt depend on the particular facts of each case. Factors such as the standing of the corporate customer, the bank's knowledge of the signatory, the amount involved, the need for a prompt transfer, the presence of unusual features, and the scope and means for making reasonable inquiries may be relevant. But there is one particular factor which will often be decisive. That is the consideration that, in the absence of telling indications to the contrary, a banker will usually approach a suggestion that a director of a corporate customer is trying to defraud the company with an initial reaction of instinctive disbelief... [I]t is right to say that trust, not distrust, is ... the basis of a bank's dealings with its customers. And full weight must be given to this consideration before one is entitled, in a given case, to conclude that the banker had reasonable grounds for thinking that the order was part of a fraudulent scheme to defraud the company.'

24. Having then decided that, on the facts, the bank was not 'put on inquiry', Steyn J went on briefly to consider the position if the duty had arisen on the facts: ie if the bank had been 'put on inquiry'. He concluded that, in that situation, causation could not in any event have been satisfied because the only conceivable enquiries that the bank would have made would not have alerted the bank to the fraud so that the payments would still have been made and the loss would not have been averted. In his words, in relation to 'the question of causation' (see [1992] 4 All ER 363 at 381):

'In my judgment, the only inquiries which the bank could conceivably have made would not have alerted the bank to the impending fraud, and would not have averted the loss. For this additional reason the defence must fail.'

25. I was referred to two subsequent cases in which the Quincecare duty of care has been discussed. The first was Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd in the Court of Appeal, [1989] 1 WLR 1340. That became a celebrated case in the law of unjust enrichment when it was appealed on separate matters to the House of Lords. But the relevance of the case for present purposes is that the Court of Appeal discussed the duty of care owed by a banker to its customer in terms that are similar to those of Steyn J; and May LJ acknowledged (at 1356) the 'substantial assistance' he had derived from the judgment of Steyn J which, at that stage, had only been reported in The Times. On the facts, Cass, a partner in a firm of solicitors, had been drawing on the client account (he was an authorised signatory) to subsidise his addiction to gambling. It was held that the bank, where the client account was held, was not 'put on inquiry' — ie it did not have 'reasonable grounds for believing that Cass was operating the client account in fraud' (to use the words of Parker LJ at 1377) — so that the bank was not in breach of a duty of care by honouring cheques drawn by Cass.

26. The second case is Singularis Holdings Ltd v Daiwa Capital Markets Europe Ltd [2018] EWCA Civ 84, [2018] 1 WLR 2777. The claimant company, Singularis, was wholly owned by Mr Al Sanea. A large sum of money was held for the claimant in a client account by the defendant 'bank' (Daiwa). The defendant paid out that money on Sanea's instructions to bank accounts in the names of three other companies within the group. This was a fraud by Sanea on the claimant company. The claimant's liquidators successfully argued, inter alia, that the defendant had been in breach of its Quincecare duty of care. The major question on appeal, which was decided in the claimant liquidators' favour (subject to a reduction for contributory negligence), was whether Sanea's illegal conduct should be attributed to the claimant so that illegality was a defence to the claim. But a subsidiary question on the appeal was whether the Quincecare duty of care applied where only the claimant company's creditors stood to benefit from the claim (because the claimant was insolvent). The important point for our purposes is that, in holding in favour of the claimant on this question, the Court of Appeal (the leading judgment being given by Sir Geoffrey Vos C, with whom Gloster and McCombe LJ agreed) succinctly explained the Quincecare duty of care, and contrasted it with the duty of care owed by an auditor. Sir Geoffrey Vos C said the following, at [87]-[88]:

'The [Quincecare] duty was to protect the funds held in Singularis's account from fraudulent disposition, and the fact that vindicating that right will benefit only creditors rather than the company itself is nothing to the point... That duty is a binary one to stop payments from being made out of the customer's bank account in certain very limited circumstances. It is unlike the duty of an auditor in reporting publicly on a company's financial statements, where any number of potential claimants may wish to claim that they suffered loss as a result of what the auditor said having been inaccurate. The question of the scope of the duty is far more difficult there, because it would create an impossible situation if the duty were to protect everyone from loss. The limited scope of the Quincecare duty makes it obvious that it is only to protect the customer from the loss of its money, and that only the customer can vindicate a claim for breach of it.'

27. It is relevant to note that, of the three cases, this is the only one in which the claimant succeeded in its claim based on a Quincecare duty of care: ie it is the only case of the three in which the bank was held to have the necessary reasonable grounds for believing that the payments were defrauding the customer (and causation of loss was also satisfied). I should add that, although Mr Masfield submitted that Sir Geoffrey Vos C's reference to a 'binary' duty was because the Quincecare duty was an 'on-off' duty (to pay or not to pay) and did not impose a duty of enquiry, there is much to be said for Ms Phelps' submission that, putting that description in its context, Sir Geoffrey Vos C was talking about who the duty was owed to, not the content of the duty: ie it was owed only to the customer and, in contrast to the scope of an auditor's duty of care, not to any wider class.

28. These three cases make clear that the core of the Quincecare duty of care is the negative duty on a bank to refrain from making a payment (despite an instruction on behalf of its customer to do so) where it has reasonable grounds for believing that that payment is part of a scheme to defraud the customer. What is not entirely clear is whether, in addition to that core duty, a bank with such reasonable grounds has a duty to make reasonable enquiries so as to ascertain whether or not there is substance to those reasonable grounds. I strongly incline to the view (although, as will become clear at paragraphs 47-50 below, I do not ultimately need to decide this) that Ms Phelps is correct in her submission that the cases do envisage there as being an additional duty of enquiry.

29. In support of this additional duty of enquiry, Ms Phelps invoked, for example, the following passages from the three cases we have referred to above (with Ms Phelps' emphasis).

From Steyn J in the Quincecare case:

"If the bank executes the order knowing it to be dishonestly given, shutting its eyes to the obvious fact of the dishonesty, or acting recklessly in failing to make such inquiries as an honest and reasonable man would make, no problem arises: the bank will plainly be liable. But in real life such a stark situation seldom arises. The critical question is: what lesser state of knowledge on the part of the bank will oblige the bank to make inquiries as to the legitimacy of the order?" (at 376d-e).

"[One of the factors to be considered is] the scope and means for making reasonable inquiries" (at 377b).

"I propose to examine only those matters which could arguably be said to be known to the Hull branch, or which they should, on the basis of what was known, have inquired about." (at 380b-c).

From Lipkin Gorman v Karpnale Ltd :

"... it is, in my opinion, only when the circumstances are such that any reasonable cashier would hesitate to pay a cheque at once and refer it to his or her superior, and when any reasonable superior would hesitate to authorise payment without inquiry, that a cheque should not be paid immediately on presentation and such inquiry made." (at 1356E-F, per May LJ).

" A single telephone call to Mr Gorman, one of the partners in the plaintiff firm of solicitors, would have brought the whole enterprise to a close. Was there any duty on the bank to make such as call ? Rather more searching inquiry by the bank of Cass about where he was obtaining his funds with which to gamble, even to the extent of which they were aware, might well also have had the same effect. Was there any duty on the bank to make that inquiry until the truth was out?" (at 1357C, per May LJ).

" I think that if Mr Fox [the bank manager] had or ought to have learned of the frequent and substantial withdrawals by Cass in cash from the clients' account even the limited duty of care to which he was subject would have required him to tell Mr Gorman ." (at 1358, per May LJ).

"The question must be whether, if a reasonable and honest banker knew of the relevant facts, he would have considered that there was a serious or real possibility, albeit not amounting to a probability, that its customers might be being defrauded, or, in this case, that there was a serious or real possibility that Cass was drawing on the client account and using the funds so obtained for his own and not the solicitors' or beneficiaries' purposes. That, at least, the customer must establish. If it is established, then in my view a reasonable banker would be in breach of duty if he continued to pay cheques without inquiry ." (at 1378B, per Parker LJ).

From Sir Geoffrey Vos C in the Singularis Holdings case:

" The judge held that Daiwa had breached its duty of care to Singularis in making the payment without any proper inquiry ." (at [5] citing Rose J at first instance [2017] EWHC 257 (Ch), [2017] 1 Lloyd's Rep 226, [164].)

'[The duty is] a duty not to pay away money in a customer's account without proper inquiry .' (at [87].)

30. To recognise such a duty of enquiry would be in line with sound policy. In the fight to combat fraud, banks with the relevant reasonable grounds for belief should not sit back and do nothing. Moreover, the duty of enquiry on banks would not be unduly onerous because it would always be limited by what an ordinary prudent banker would regard as reasonable enquiries in a situation where there are reasonable grounds for believing that the customer is being defrauded.

31. But even assuming that Ms Phelps is correct in her submission that a bank with the relevant reasonable grounds for belief has a duty of care to make reasonable enquiries, it would be potentially misleading to go on from that to describe the Quincecare duty of care as a duty of care to make enquiries/to investigate. The core of the Quincecare duty is, as Steyn J set it out, a negative duty not to pay while the bank has the relevant reasonable grounds. A positive duty of enquiry/investigation would be additional to that. In any event, a bank, which is acting honestly and without reasonable grounds for believing that its customer is being defrauded, has no duty of care to enquire/investigate. In other words, there is no duty of care to enquire/investigate prior to the point in time when the bank has reasonable grounds for believing that its customer is being defrauded. I shall return to these issues at paragraphs 47-50 below where I deal with the interpretation of clauses 7.2 and 7.4.

(2) the law on the interpretation of exemption, indemnity, and entire agreement clauses

32. I have elsewhere summarised the modern approach in English law to contractual interpretation: see, eg, Greenhouse v Paysafe Financial Services Ltd [2018] EWHC 3296 (Comm) at [11]. The modern approach is to ascertain the meaning of the words used by applying an objective and contextual approach. One must ask what the term, viewed in the light of the whole contract, would mean to a reasonable person having all the relevant background knowledge reasonably available to the parties at the time the contract was made (excluding the previous negotiations of the parties and their declarations of subjective intent). Business common sense and the purpose of the term (which appear to be very similar ideas) may also be relevant. But the words used by the parties are of primary importance so that one must be careful to avoid placing too much weight on business common sense or purpose at the expense of the words used; and one must be astute not to rewrite the contract so as to protect one of the parties from having entered into a bad bargain. Important cases of the House of Lords and Supreme Court articulating the modern approach include Investors Compensation Scheme Ltd v West Bromwich Building Society [1998] 1 WLR 896, HL, especially at 912-913 (per Lord Hoffmann giving the leading speech), Rainy Sky SA v

Kookmin Bank [2011] UKSC 50, [2011] 1 WLR 2900, Arnold v Britton [2015] UKSC 36, [2015] AC 1619, and Wood v Capita Insurance Services Ltd [2017] UKSC 24, [2017] AC 1173.

33. In this case I am particularly concerned with applying the modern approach to contractual interpretation to the interpretation of exemption, indemnity and entire agreement clauses (see, respectively, clauses 8, 10 and 5 of the depository agreement). The submissions of counsel raised two topical questions of legal principle. First, in interpreting exemption and indemnity clauses, what is the present status of the contra proferentem rule? Secondly, does an entire agreement clause operate to exclude terms implied by law?

(i) the interpretation of exemption and indemnity clauses: what is the present status of the contra proferentem rule?

34. When Lord Hoffmann set out the modern approach to contractual interpretation in Investment Compensation Scheme v West Bromwich, he said, at 912: 'Almost all the old intellectual baggage of "legal" interpretation has been discarded'. One question that arises, therefore, is whether the traditional rule of interpretation contra proferentem survives and in what form. In the context of exemption clauses that rule was to the effect that an exemption clause should be construed strictly against the person who drew up the exemption clause or was relying on it. But the recent authorities — see, especially, HIH Casualty and General Insurance Ltd v Chase Manhattan Bank [2003] UKHL 6, [2003] 2 Lloyd's Rep 61, at [11], [58]-[67], [95], [116]; Stocznia Gdynia SA v Gearbulk Holdings Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 75, [2010] QB 27, at [23]; Capita (Bamstead 2011) Ltd v FRIB Group Ltd [2015] EWCA Civ 1310, [2016] QB 835, at [10]; Nobahar-Cookson v Hut Group Ltd [2016] EWCA Civ 128, [2016] 1 CLC 573, at [18]-[21] (and see generally Chitty on Contracts (ed Beale) (33rd edn, 2018) paras 15-012 — 15-020) — indicate that the law is as follows:

- i. The ambiguity of who is the 'proferens' (is it the person who drew up the exemption or the person relying on it?) means that reference to a contra proferentem rule is problematic.
- ii. In any event, the modern objective and contextual approach to the meaning of the words, with business common sense and purpose also being relevant in some cases, renders it unnecessary to regard there as being a separate contra proferentem rule.
- iii. Applying the modern approach, the force of what was the contra proferentem rule is embraced by recognising that a party is unlikely to have agreed to give up a valuable right that it would otherwise have had without clear words. And as Moore-Bick LJ put it in the Stocznia case, at [23], 'The more valuable the right, the clearer the language will need to be'. So, for example, clear words will generally be needed before a court will conclude that the agreement excludes a party's liability for its own negligence. The well-known principles in Canada Steamship Lines Ltd v The King [1952] AC 192 (that general words, not explicitly mentioning negligence, will not exclude or indemnify against negligence unless that is the only possible liability) should be regarded as a flexible guide and not as a rigid code.

35. I should add for completeness that the passing of the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 (and see now the Consumer Rights Act 2015) adds a further reason for not distorting standard principles of interpretation in the context of exemption clauses (and indemnity clauses in consumer contracts) given the power conferred on the courts by the legislature to strike down such clauses as unreasonable.

(ii) the interpretation of an entire agreement clause: are terms implied by law excluded?

36. In relation to clause 5, I was referred to two cases dealing with the law on the question of whether an entire agreement clause excludes implied terms — AXA Sun Life Services v Campbell Martin Ltd [2011] EWCA Civ 133, [2011] 2 Lloyd's Rep 1, at [41] and Great Elephant Corp v Trafigura Beheer BV [2012] EWHC 1745 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep 503, at [88]-[91] (reversed on appeal on a different point: [2013] EWCA Civ 905, [2014] 1 Lloyd's Rep 1) — and to passages on this question in Chitty on Contracts at para 14-019 and Lewison, The Interpretation of Contracts (6th edn, 2015) p 156.

37. The correct approach here is in line with what I have set out in paragraph 34 above in relation to exemption and indemnity clauses. One must, as ever, apply the modern approach to contractual interpretation (see paragraph 32 above). It is unnecessary to regard there as being a separate rule for the interpretation of an entire agreement clause. However, where the entire agreement clause will have the effect of excluding an implied term that would otherwise arise, one should recognise that a party is unlikely to have agreed to give up a valuable right that it would otherwise have had without clear words. The more valuable the right, the clearer the words will need to be. It follows that an entire agreement clause may or may not exclude an implied term. This will primarily depend on the words used, in their context, but it will also be relevant to consider, for example, the nature of the implied term. So it may be that a term implied by law, at common law or by statute, as opposed to some terms implied by fact or by custom, confers a particularly valuable right so that it is unlikely that a party has agreed to give up that right other than by clear wording. In our case, it is not in dispute that the Quincecare duty of care arises either by reason of a term implied by law at common law — because necessary to the particular type of contract or relationship, applying the test in, for example, Liverpool CC v Irwin [1977] AC 239 — or by reason of a term implied by s 13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 ; or it arises in tort. It is plain that the right that would otherwise be conferred is of considerable value to the customer — hence the implication by law or the imposition by tort — so that clear wording is needed to exclude it.

4 The Reasons Why the Application for Summary Judgment Fails

38. Having outlined the parties' submissions, and having articulated the relevant law, I can now explain why the defendant bank's application for reverse summary judgment (or striking out) fails. I shall take each of the three grounds in turn. The first will take the most time.

(1) the 'no Quincecare duty of care' issue

39. In line with the allegations made by the claimant in the Re-amended Particulars of Claim and in the witness statement of Jonathan Cary (dated 26 October 2018), it is not in dispute that I must assume on this application that the claimant has a realistic prospect of successfully establishing at trial that the defendant bank had reasonable grounds for believing that the payments out were part of an attempt to defraud the claimant: ie that the defendant bank was 'put on inquiry'. Prima facie that means that the bank owed a Quincecare duty of care to the claimant; and there is no good reason of principle or policy why that duty of care should be confined to current accounts and should not apply to the depository account in this case. That duty of care entailed that the defendant bank could not simply follow the mandate of abiding by the instructions given by the claimant because the bank's duty of care, at its core, was to protect the claimant against being defrauded by not paying out unless and until it was 'off inquiry': ie unless and until those reasonable grounds, for believing that the payment out was part of an attempt to defraud the customer, no longer existed. Indeed, as was forcefully said by Mr Masefield, if the defendant bank's submissions were correct, and the depository agreement, on its true interpretation, meant that no Quincecare duty of care was owed in this case, it would appear that the defendant bank, while still reasonably believing that the payment out was an attempt to defraud its customer, should have gone ahead (or at least was entitled to go ahead) and paid out those huge sums of money. Mr Masefield submitted that that would have been an extraordinary contract for the claimant to have entered into and I accept that, at the very least, it would have been an imprudent contract for the claimant.

40. Applying the law on contractual interpretation set out at paragraphs 32-37 above, the depository agreement was not inconsistent with and did not exclude, either generally or by particular terms, the Quincecare duty of care. That duty, as we have seen (see paragraphs 21-23 above) is a specific manifestation of the duty of care owed by a banker to its customer in relation to instructions. It is imposed as an implied term of law by common law or by statute under s 13 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 or is imposed by the tort of negligence. The duty is imposed by law for good policy reasons, not least to encourage banks to help combat fraud, and it gives the customer a valuable right. It is of course possible that the Quincecare duty may not arise because it is inconsistent with the express terms of the contract or it may be excluded by an exemption clause. It is trite common law that an implied term cannot be inconsistent with an express term; and that idea is spelt out, as regards the s 13 implied term, in s 16 of the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 . Similarly, the duty of care in tort may be shaped by, and can be excluded by, contractual terms. But given that the Quincecare duty of care is imposed for good policy reasons and is a valuable right for the customer, clear wording, including clear inconsistency, will be needed before a court concludes that that duty of care does not arise. In my view, there is no such clear wording in the depository agreement whether looked at generally or in focussing on particular clauses.

41. I now turn to the particular clauses in the depository agreement relied on by the defendant bank. Before I do so, I should make clear the perhaps obvious point that I have had the benefit — which is important in applying the modern objective and contextual approach to interpretation — of reading the full depository agreement and the full clauses from which these specific terms, or parts of terms, have here been extracted.

(i) Clause 5.1

42. '5.1 The duties and obligations of the Depository in respect of the Depository Cash shall be determined solely by the express terms of this Agreement. The Depository has no knowledge of the terms and provisions of any separate agreement or any agreement relating to the Depositor's Obligations, and shall have no responsibility for compliance by the Depositor with terms of any other agreement, or for ensuring that the terms of any such agreement are reflected in this Agreement and shall have no duties to anyone other than the Depositor.'

43. 'Entire agreement' clauses come in many forms and one may describe this as an 'entire agreement' clause. The question at issue concerns the first sentence. Does that sentence, with its words 'express terms', exclude the Quincecare duty of care given that that duty of care arises either by operation of a term implied by law (whether at common law or under statute) or under the tort of negligence?

44. I have set out at paragraphs 36-37 above, the law on the interpretation of entire agreement clauses, and the question of whether implied terms are excluded. Applying that law, the first sentence of clause 5.1 does not exclude the Quincecare duty of care implied term, or the imposition of that duty of care by the tort of negligence, for the following reasons:

- i. Clear words are required to exclude the valuable right conferred by the Quincecare duty of care. But there is no express mention of implied terms, including terms implied by law, being excluded; nor is there any mention of the operation of the tort of negligence being excluded.
- ii. If one were to interpret the reference to 'express' terms of the contract as ruling out a Quincecare duty of care, it would also operate to rule out (because there are no other relevant express terms) all other manifestations of a bank's implied duty of care to its customer in respect of the depository cash; and all other liabilities imposed in tort or in equity (in respect of the depository cash) including, for example, the tort of deceit or knowing receipt or dishonest assistance or breach of confidence. That would be an alarming interpretation given that it would deprive the customer of many valuable rights.
- iii. The ruling out of tort duties would be inconsistent with other clauses in the contract. For example, clause 8.1 limits liability to the customer for 'fraud' or 'gross negligence' but there is nothing in the express terms of the contract prohibiting such conduct: it must follow that at least some tort liability is not being excluded. Again that clause goes on to refer expressly to obligations in tort: ie it limits the bank's liability for indirect or consequential loss for liability under the agreement 'or for obligations relating to this Agreement (including... obligations in tort)'. Excluding breach of confidence (in respect of the depository cash) would also be inconsistent with clauses 2.2 and 5.9 which assume that there would otherwise be a liability for breach of confidence. Again clause 19 on the Governing Law envisages there as being non-contractual obligations. It reads 'This Agreement and any non contractual obligation arising out of it, is governed by, and shall be construed in accordance with, English law.'
- iv. The relevant context, in applying the required objective and contextual approach to the interpretation of the first sentence of clause 5.1, includes the context of the full clause. In other words, one should not interpret the first sentence in isolation. Looked at as a whole, clause 5.1 is seeking to make clear that the terms of this contract, and no other agreement, govern. In other words, one cannot go outside the provisions of this agreement (for example, to the resolution agreements of 29 April 2011 which are mentioned in the preamble/recital on page 1 of the agreement) to determine what the parties have agreed.
- v. Although the word 'express' could equally well not have been included, the correct interpretation is that this was emphasising that the relevant terms are those of this contract and no other.

45. In reaching this conclusion on clause 5.1, I have not found it necessary to resolve the question whether, as Ms Phelps tentatively submitted, some of what Teare J said in Great Elephant Corp v Trafigura Beheer BV [2012] EWHC 1745 (Comm), [2012] 2 Lloyd's Rep 503, at [90] — a case I have referred to in paragraph 36 above — cannot stand in the light of the apparent criticism made by the Supreme Court in Marks and Spencer plc v BNP Paribas Services Trust Company (Jersey) Ltd [2015] UKSC 72, [2016] AC 742 of some of Lord Hoffmann's reasoning in Attorney-General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd [2009] UKPC 10, [2009] 1 WLR 1988. Teare J was considering an entire agreement clause which included the following words: 'Each party further acknowledges that it will only be entitled to remedies in respect of breach of the express terms of the contract...' Part of Teare J's reasoning in deciding that an implied term by law under s 12 of the Sale of Goods Act 1979 was not excluded by that clause was that, applying Belize Telecom, implied terms merely 'spell out in express words what the instrument, read against the relevant background, would reasonably be understood to mean' (Teare J at [21], citing Lord Hoffmann). In other words, in a high level sense, a reference to express terms included, and did not exclude, implied terms because the two types of term go together in answering the essential single question (as Lord Hoffmann saw it) which is what the contract, read in context, would be reasonably understood to mean. I merely note — because it may possibly make a difference to the analysis — that Belize Telecom and the Marks and Spencer case were both concerned with terms implied by fact — that is, a term based on the parties' common intentions objectively understood and to which the well-established 'officious bystander' and 'business efficacy' tests apply — rather than terms implied by law (whether at common law or by statute). We are here concerned only with terms implied by law.

(ii) Clauses 7.2 and 7.4

46. '7.2 The Depository shall be under no duty to enquire into or investigate the validity, accuracy or content of any instruction or other communication.'

'7.4 The Depository need not act upon instructions which it reasonably believes to be contrary to law, regulation or market practice but is under no duty to investigate whether any instructions comply with any applicable law, regulation or market practice.'

47. These clauses are consistent with, at least, the core Quincecare duty of care. I have considered in detail above (see paragraphs 21-31) what the Quincecare duty of care requires. I have explained that, at its core, the Quincecare duty of care imposes a negative duty not to pay (ie to refrain from paying) despite compliant instructions where the bank has reasonable grounds (assessed according to the standards of an ordinary prudent banker) for believing that to make the payment would defraud its customer. I have also explained that, in line with what has been said in the three cases on the Quincecare duty and as a matter of policy, I am strongly inclined to the view that, once the bank has those reasonable grounds for belief (ie it is 'put on inquiry'), the Quincecare duty imposes an additional positive duty to make reasonable enquiries: but that, even if that is correct, it would be potentially misleading to describe the Quincecare duty of care as a duty to enquire/investigate not least because there is no duty of care on an honest bank to enquire or investigate prior to the point at which the bank has the relevant reasonable grounds for belief.

48. The correct interpretation of clauses 7.2 and 7.4 is that, apart from the opening sentence in clause 7.4 (which is plainly consistent with a Quincecare duty of care), they do not apply at all where the bank has reasonable grounds for believing that the customer is being defrauded. In other words, the references to there being no duty to enquire or investigate are making clear, consistently with the law as I have summarised it in the last paragraph, that there is no duty of care to enquire or investigate prior to the point at which the bank has the relevant reasonable grounds for belief. Put another way still, clauses 7.2 and 7.4 are consistent with the Quincecare duty of care even if it is correct that that duty of care imposes an additional positive duty to enquire/investigate along with the core negative duty not to pay.

49. But even if I am wrong on that interpretation, clauses 7.2 and 7.4 are consistent with the core Quincecare duty of care and would only go as far as excluding any additional positive duty to enquire or investigate. One might say that the draftsman has explicitly drawn a distinction between, on the one hand, paying out where the bank has reasonable grounds for believing that the instructions are contrary to law - where the bank is expressly not bound to act upon instructions and, applying Quincecare, would be bound not to pay out - and, on the other hand, an additional duty to enquire or investigate which is excluded. Put another way, on this interpretation what clauses 7.2 and 7.4 are doing is modifying the Quincecare duty of care by excluding any additional duty to enquire or investigate while leaving in place the core negative duty. Such a modification would produce no difficulty for the claimant if, as I understand it — see, for example, the claimant's skeleton argument at paragraph 46 — the claimant is alleging only a breach of that core negative duty. It would only be if the claimant were alleging that there was a duty to make enquiries that clauses 7.2 and 7.4 would bite on the claim (admittedly the last sentence of paragraph 56 of the Re-amended Particulars of Claim still refers to the defendant needing to make further enquiries; and see also paragraph 32.2 of the claimant's Reply). Even then, clauses 7.2 and 7.4 would only bite on the claim to the extent of knocking out an additional positive duty to enquire or investigate: the core negative duty not to pay would be left intact.

50. I consider the interpretation in paragraph 48 to be the correct one. But even if I am wrong about that, I would adopt the alternative interpretation in paragraph 49 which would leave intact the core Quincecare duty of care.

(iii) Clauses 5.8 and 11.5

51. '5.8 The Depositor hereby authorises the Depository to act hereunder notwithstanding that :... (ii) The Depository or any of its divisions, branches or affiliates may be in possession of information tending to show that the instructions received may not be in the best interests of the Depositor and the Depositor agrees that the Depository is not under any duty to disclose any such information.'

'11 The Depositor hereby represents and warrants to the Depository on a continuing basis that:

11.5 ...the transactions to be effected under this Agreement will not violate any law, regulation, by-law or rule applicable to it or any agreement by which it is bound or by which any of its assets are affected and it is not restricted under the terms of its constitution or in any other manner from performing its obligations hereunder.'

52. It is hard to see how these clauses impact on whether there is a Quincecare duty of care or not. Neither of them is purporting to deal with where the customer is itself the victim of a fraud. Neither indicates that the bank should go ahead with instructions where the bank has reasonable grounds for believing that the customer would be the victim of a fraud if the payment were made. The reference in clause 5.8 to being 'in possession of information' so that the instructions may not be in the 'best interests of the Depositor' is best interpreted as referring to commercial information and to the best commercial interests of the customer and does not cover the different and extreme case where the bank has information giving it reasonable grounds for believing that complying with the instructions would defraud the customer. Clause 11.5 is dealing with regulations 'applicable to it' (ie to the bank) such as the laws of Nigeria and it cannot plausibly be regarded as a reference to the law of fraud where the customer is the victim of that fraud: to deny that would be tantamount to adopting a far-fetched interpretation that the customer is warranting to the bank that the customer is not being defrauded by relevant transactions.

(iv) Clause 8.2(d)

53. '8.2(d) [The Depository shall not be liable to the Depositor for any loss suffered by the Depositor by] the Depository acting on what it in good faith believes to be instructions or in relation to notices, requests, waivers, consents, receipts, or other documents which the Depository in good faith believes to be genuine and to have been given or signed by the appropriate parties.'

54. Again this does not help the defendant bank in the situation with which we are here dealing for the following reasons:

- i. In deciding on the correct interpretation, I must apply the law on the interpretation of exemption clauses, as set out at paragraph 34 above. This requires there to be clear words if there is to be an exclusion of the valuable right that, on the facts of this case, would otherwise be conferred on the customer by the Quincecare duty of care. Here there are no such clear words.
- ii. On its correct interpretation, clause 8.2(d) does not apply to the alleged facts. This clause protects a bank where apparently authorised instructions have not been authorised (eg because someone impersonated one of the authorised officers) or where apparently genuine documents were non-genuine. But in our case it is not alleged that the instructions were unauthorised (ie it is not in dispute that the authorised officers gave the instructions) or that the documents were non-genuine. Rather the allegation is that authorised instructions (and, in so far as relevant, genuine documents) were being used as part of a scheme to defraud the customer. So the correct interpretation of this clause is that it does not exclude the Quincecare duty of care in relation to the alleged facts as to fraud in this case.
- iii. Even if I am wrong on that interpretation, a bank, which has reasonable grounds for believing that its customer is being defrauded, and goes ahead with paying out, may not be acting in 'good faith'. Whether that is so or not will be dependent on the precise facts including the knowledge of the bank. That must be a matter for full evidence at trial and one cannot say now that the claimant has no realistic prospect of successfully showing that the defendant bank was not acting in 'good faith'. Ms Phelps submitted that it was not open to the claimant to rely on this point because there has been no pleading by the claimant that the defendant bank was not acting in good faith (although it has pleaded 'gross' negligence at paragraph 107 of the Re-amended Particulars of Claim). I do not agree. The first indication that the defendant bank was relying on clause 8.2(d) was in paragraph 100 of the Amended Defence dated 24 July 2018. The claimant would then have had the opportunity to plead that the defendant bank was not acting in good faith, so that that clause did not apply, in a Reply to that Amended Defence. But that did not happen because the normal timing and sequence for pleadings were overtaken by the defendant bank issuing its summary judgment application on 31 July 2018. Indeed this was one day after a letter from the claimant's solicitors to the defendant bank's solicitors saying that they would be serving an Amended Reply. It follows that, as Mr Masefield submitted, it cannot fairly be held against the claimant that it has not put in an Amended Reply which includes pleading no good faith. Mr Masefield made clear in open court that, in so far as the normal order for pleadings is resumed following this judgment, the claimant will be pleading the 'good faith' point in an Amended Reply. So I reject Ms Phelps' pleading objection.

55. Alongside clause 8.2(d), Ms Phelps relied on the indemnity clause 10(1)(a) as also constituting an exclusion of liability for the defendant bank acting in accordance with its mandate and therefore as excluding a Quincecare duty of care. That indemnity clause is set out and considered in more detail below under the circularity issue. Even if treated as excluding the liability of the defendant bank to the claimant, rather than indemnifying the bank against liability to third parties (see paragraph 63 below), it would not here exempt the defendant bank for the reasons set out at paragraph 64 below.

(v) Conclusion on the 'no Quincecare duty of care' issue

56. My conclusion on this first issue is that the defendant bank did owe a Quincecare duty of care to the claimant, which was imposed by an implied term in the depository agreement (implied by law at common law and/or under statute) and/or by the tort of negligence. On the correct interpretation of the depository agreement, that Quincecare duty of care was neither inconsistent with, nor excluded by, the terms of that agreement.

(2) the 'causation of loss' issue

57. I have explained at paragraph 9 above that, in contrast to the other two issues, this is primarily a factual issue, although also raising some legal issues, and should be approached by directly asking whether the claimant has a realistic prospect of success.

58. In my view, causation of loss in this case, as one would expect in most cases, is plainly one that should go to trial where the court will have the benefit of full evidence. Although Ms Phelps submitted that this was the unusual case where one could now say on causation that the claimant has no realistic prospect of success, I disagree. Indeed the complexity of the underlying facts in this case — and the nature and scale of the alleged fraud — means that, far from it being the unusual case where reverse summary judgment can be given on causation of loss, it is a fortiori a case where a court needs to examine all the relevant evidence that would be put forward at a trial in order to make a proper determination on the causation issue.

59. It is true that the defendant bank made checks with the Attorney-General of Nigeria and he gave assurance that the money could be paid out. And Ms Phelps submitted that if, as alleged, even the then President of Nigeria was involved in the fraud, it followed that, had the bank been under a duty of care, reasonable checks by it would still have resulted in the money being paid out. But that is a speculative submission. The starting point is that, had the defendant bank complied with its core Quincecare duty of care, the payments would not have been made. The determination of what would, or should, then have occurred is dependent on full evidence. I cannot now say what an ordinary prudent bank would have done in those circumstances: that is a matter on which evidence from banking experts would be needed. On the face of it, one plausible possibility would have simply been for the bank — because of continuing reasonable grounds for believing that the payments would defraud the customer - to continue to refrain from making any payment so that the money would have remained in the account. As I have outlined at paragraph 18 above, Mr Masefield submitted that another plausible outcome was that the money would have been frozen in the account by court order. Although Ms Phelps submitted that, if the government were corrupt, there would be no party disputing the payment out, so that interpleader proceedings would not eventuate, and there would be no obvious route to a freezing injunction, I cannot say now that the freezing of the account by court order (perhaps by reason of intervention by the regulatory authorities, such as the Serious Organised Crime Agency) is an unrealistic analysis of what would have happened. It may have been open to the defendant bank to seek directions or a declaration from a court not least by reason of clause 5.7 of the depository agreement which reads as follows (my emphasis):

'5.7 In the event of any dispute between or conflicting claims by any person or persons with respect to the Depository Cash, or the Depository is uncertain as to its duties or rights hereunder , the Depository shall be entitled to apply to a court of law to determine the rights of such persons and meanwhile at its option to refuse to comply with any and all claims, demands or instructions with respect to such Depository Cash or any obligations hereunder so long as such dispute or conflict shall continue.'

60. In conclusion on this second issue, the defendant bank has failed to establish that the claimant has no realistic prospect of success in proving causation of loss.

(3) the 'circularity' issue

61. This is a question of law in relation to which, as I have explained at paragraph 9 above, I am grasping the nettle and making a decision at this stage.

62. The relevant clause of the depository agreement on this issue is clause 10.1(a) (clause 10 is headed 'Indemnity'). This reads as follows:

'10.1 The Depositor hereby irrevocably and unconditionally agrees on demand to indemnify, and to keep fully and effectively indemnified ... the Depository, and its directors, officers, agents and employees (the "indemnitees") against all costs, claims, losses, liabilities, damages, expenses, fines, penalties, Tax and other matters ("Losses") which may be imposed on, incurred by or asserted against the indemnitees or any of them directly or indirectly in respect of:

(a) the following of any instruction or other directions upon which the indemnitees is authorised to act or rely pursuant to the terms of this Agreement, or arising as a result of entering into this Agreement or their status as holder of the Depository Cash...'

63. On its correct interpretation, there is no circularity problem posed by this clause. This clause does not entitle the defendant bank to be indemnified against the claim by the claimant. Given that clause 8 deals with the exclusion of the liability of the bank to the customer, this clause is best interpreted as dealing with the liability of the bank to third parties. If that were not so, one would have a clash with clause 8: eg clause 8.1 excludes the bank from liability to the customer for action pursuant to the agreement unless caused by the fraud, gross negligence or wilful misconduct of the bank in which event the extent of liability is limited to the market value of the depository cash. But if, by reason of clause 10.1(a), the customer is bound to indemnify the bank in any event, the exception for fraud, gross negligence or wilful misconduct would be undermined.

64. Even if one were to interpret clause 10.1(a) as excluding the liability of the defendant bank to the claimant, rather than indemnifying the defendant bank against liability to third parties, it would not exempt the defendant bank here. I have set out the law on the interpretation of exemption and indemnity clauses at paragraph 34 above. Although to be treated as a flexible guide, rather than as a rigid code, the Canada Steamship principles indicate that a court should be reluctant to find that a generally worded clause, rather than an explicit reference to negligence, exempts, or indemnifies against, negligence (which would take away a valuable right). The following of instructions negligently — in breach of a Quincecare duty of care — is in my view not covered by the general words of clause 10.1(a) which do not explicitly refer to negligence.

65. In conclusion, therefore, on a correct interpretation of clause 10.1(a) in the depository agreement, the claim does not fail for circularity.

5 Conclusions

66. My conclusions are therefore as follows:

- i. On the 'no Quincecare duty of care' issue, the defendant bank did owe a Quincecare duty of care to the claimant, which was imposed by an implied term in the depository agreement (implied by law at common law and/or under statute) and/or by the tort of negligence. On the correct interpretation of the depository agreement, that Quincecare duty of care was neither inconsistent with, nor excluded by, the terms of that agreement.
- ii. On the 'causation of loss' issue, the defendant bank has failed to establish that the claimant has no realistic prospect of success in proving causation of loss.
- iii. As regards the 'circularity' issue, on the correct interpretation of clause 10.1(a) in the depository agreement, the claim does not fail for circularity.
- iv. My overall conclusion, therefore, is that the defendant bank has failed to establish that the claimant has no real prospect of success under CPR 24.2 .

67. For these reasons, the application for reverse summary judgment under CPR 24.2 fails. It also follows that the Re-amended Particulars of Claim do disclose reasonable grounds for bringing the claim so that the application to strike out under CPR 3.4\(2\) also fails.

68. It remains for me to thank counsel on both sides for their helpful submissions.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF ORDERS FOR RELIEF ISSUED AFTER TRIAL ON CONTESTED INVOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS

Joshua N. Terry (the "Petitioning Creditor" or "Mr. Terry") filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions (the "Involuntary Petitions") against each of the two above-referenced related companies (the “Alleged Debtors”) on January 30, 2018.<sup>1</sup> The Involuntary Petitions were contested, and the court held a multi-day trial (the “Trial”) spanning March 21, 22, 23, 27, and March 29, 2018.<sup>2</sup> This constitutes the court’s findings of fact, conclusions of law and ruling, pursuant to Fed. Rs. Bankr. Proc. 7052 and 9014.<sup>3</sup> As explained below, the court has decided that Orders for Relief are legally required and appropriate as to each of the Alleged Debtors.

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Introduction.

1. The Alleged Debtors—Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”), a Delaware limited partnership, and ACIS Capital Management GP, L.L.C. (“Acis GP/LLC”), a Delaware limited liability company—are two entities in the mega-organizational structure of a company that is known as Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”).

2. Highland is a Dallas, Texas-based company that is a Registered Investment Advisor. Highland was founded in 1993 (changing its original name from “Protective Asset Management” to Highland in 1997) by James D. Dondero (“Mr. Dondero”), originally with a

<sup>2</sup> Shortly after the Involuntary Petitions were filed, the court held hearings on February 6-7, 2018, on the Petitioning Creditor’s Emergency Motion to Abrogate or Modify 11 U.S.C. § 303(f), Prohibit Transfer of Assets, and Import, Inter Alia, 11 U.S.C. § 363 [DE # 3] (the “303(f) Motion”) and the Alleged Debtors’ Emergency Motion to Seek Emergency Hearing on the Alleged Debtors’ Motion to Dismiss Involuntary Petitions and Request for Award of Fees, Costs, and Damages [DE # 9] (the “Emergency Motion to Set Hearing on Motion to Dismiss”). The court ultimately granted the 303(f) Motion and denied the Emergency Motion to Set Hearing on Motion to Dismiss. Both the Petitioning Creditor and the Alleged Debtors have proposed that the court should consider the evidence it heard at the hearings held on February 6-7, 2018, in determining whether it should enter orders for relief. The court has, accordingly, considered such evidence in this ruling.

<sup>3</sup> Bankruptcy subject matter jurisdiction exists in this contested matter, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1334(b). This is a core proceeding over which the bankruptcy court may exercise subject matter jurisdiction, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(2)(A) and (O) and the Standing Order of Reference of Bankruptcy Cases and Proceedings (Misc. Rule No. 33), for the Northern District of Texas, dated August 3, 1984. This bankruptcy court has Constitutional authority to issue a final order or judgment in this matter, as it arises under a bankruptcy statute—11 U.S.C. § 303. Venue is proper in this district, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409(a), as the Alleged Debtors have their business headquarters in this district.

75% ownership interest, and Mark K. Akada (“Mr. Akada”), originally with a 25% ownership interest.<sup>4</sup>

3. Both Mr. Dondero and Mr. Akada provided witness testimony at the Trial on the Involuntary Petitions, and their names are mentioned numerous times herein—since they were generally the subject of significant evidence and argument presented at the Trial. Mr. Dondero is the chief executive officer for Highland and Mr. Akada is the chief investment officer. Mr. Dondero is also the president of each of the two Alleged Debtors.

4. Highland, through its organizational structure of approximately 2,000 separate business entities, manages approximately $14-$15 billion of investor capital in vehicles ranging from: collateral loan obligation funds (“CLOs”); private equity funds; and mutual funds.

5. Highland’s CLO business was front-and-center at the Trial on the Involuntary Petitions. The Alleged Debtor, Acis LP, for approximately the past seven years, has been the vehicle through which Highland’s CLO business has been managed.

6. The Petitioning Creditor, Mr. Terry, became an employee of Highland in the year 2005, starting as a portfolio analyst, promoting to a loan trader, then ultimately becoming the portfolio manager for (and 25% limited partner in) Highland’s CLO business—specifically, Mr. Terry was the human being who was acting for the CLO manager, Acis LP.

7. Mr. Terry was highly successful in his role in the CLO business, managing billions of dollars of assets during his tenure, but Mr. Terry and Mr. Dondero had a bitter parting of ways on June 9, 2016. Specifically, Mr. Terry’s employment was terminated on that date (for reasons that have been highly disputed) and his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was deemed forfeited without any payment of consideration to him.

8. In September 2016, Highland sued Mr. Terry in the 162nd Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (“State Court 1”) for breach of fiduciary duty/self-dealing, disparagement, breach of contract, and various other causes of action and theories. Mr. Terry asserted his own claims against Highland, and also claims against the two Alleged Debtors, Mr. Dondero, and others and demanded arbitration. On September 28, 2016, State Court 1 stayed the litigation and ordered the parties to arbitrate. The parties participated in ten days of arbitration in September 2017 before JAMS. On October 20, 2017, Mr. Terry obtained an Arbitration Award (herein so called),<sup>5</sup> jointly and severally against both of the Alleged Debtors in the amount of $7,949,749.15, plus post-award interest at the legal rate, which was based on theories of breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duties.

9. There are still claims pending between and among the Petitioning Creditor, Highland, and others (not including the Alleged Debtors) in State Court 1.

10. A Final Judgment (herein so called) confirming the Arbitration Award was entered by the 44th Judicial District Court of Dallas County, Texas (“State Court 2”) on December 18, 2017, in the same amount as that contained in the Arbitration Award—$7,949,749.15.<sup>6</sup>

11. Mr. Terry began pursuing post-judgment discovery soon after obtaining his Arbitration Award and even more so after entry of the Final Judgment. Mr. Terry undertook a UCC search on November 8, 2017, to investigate whether there were any liens on the Alleged Debtors' assets (none appeared).<sup>7</sup> Mr. Terry also pursued a garnishment of an Acis LP bank account (at a time when there was only around $2,000 in the account). Mr. Terry's counsel deposed Highland's General Counsel Scott Ellington (who sat for the deposition as a representative of Acis, LP) on January 26, 2018, and asked numerous questions about: (a) how many creditors the Alleged Debtors had,<sup>8</sup> and (b) whether Acis LP was able to pay its debts as they became due,<sup>9</sup> but did not receive meaningful answers.

12. Mr. Terry requested a temporary restraining order ("TRO") from State Court 2, on January 24, 2018, after discovering certain transactions and transfers involving Acis LP's interests, that he believed were pursued without any legitimate business purpose and with the purpose of denuding Acis LP of its assets and to make it judgment proof. Most particularly, it appeared as though Highland was engaged in a scheme to transfer certain fee-generating CLO management contracts of Acis LP away from it and into a Cayman Island affiliate of Highland.<sup>10</sup> At a January 24, 2018 hearing on the request for a TRO, Acis LP agreed and State Court 2 ordered that, between that hearing and a later hearing on a request for a temporary injunction, no CLO management contracts would be transferred away from Acis LP and that no monies would be diverted from it.<sup>11</sup>

13. Then, on January 29, 2018, the Controller of and CPA for Highland (David Klos) submitted a Declaration to State Court 2 concerning the net worth of the Alleged Debtors, stating that Acis GP/LLC had a net worth of $0 and that Acis LP might have a net worth, at best, of $990,141.<sup>12</sup> Mr. Terry thought this was preposterous—given the management fees that Acis LP was entitled to and the receivables that should be owing to it. Mr. Terry believes that the collateral management agreements on which Acis LP receives management fees have a present value of $30 million (about $6 million for each of the five CLOs which Acis LP has been managing).

14. On January 29, 2018, the Alleged Debtors filed a motion for leave to post a supersedeas bond in the amount of $495,070.50 with State Court 2 (purportedly half of the net worth of the two Alleged Debtors—as stated in the David Klos Declaration), so that they could suspend enforcement of the Final Judgment while they appealed it.<sup>13</sup> Although there is a very stringent standard for appealing an Arbitration Award, the Alleged Debtors apparently believe they have an argument that State Court 2 lacked the subject matter jurisdiction to confirm the Arbitration Award (a motion to vacate the Final Judgment based on this argument has previously been denied by State Court 2).<sup>14</sup>

15. Meanwhile, Mr. Terry was learning of more transactions and transfers involving Acis LP's assets and interests. On January 29, 2018, Mr. Terry filed supplemental pleadings with State Court 2, alleging that further shenanigans (i.e., transfers and transactions that would amount to fraudulent transfers) were underway at Acis LP and seeking a receiver.<sup>15</sup> Also, at some point, in the weeks leading up to this, an Acis LP lawyer represented to Mr. Terry's counsel that the Alleged Debtors were "judgment proof."<sup>16</sup>

16. At approximately 11:57 p.m. on January 30, 2018 (on the evening before a scheduled temporary injunction hearing in State Court 2—at which time State Court 2 presumably might have considered the Alleged Debtors' request to post the $495,070.50 supersedeas bond to stay enforcement of the Final Judgment), Mr. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions, as a sole petitioning creditor, against both Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC.

17. For purposes of this Trial (and this Trial only), the Alleged Debtors do not dispute that Mr. Terry has standing to be a petitioning creditor pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)—in other words, they do not dispute that Mr. Terry is a holder of a claim against the Alleged Debtors that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount and that aggregates at least $15,775 in unsecured amount. However, the Alleged Debtors argue that: (a) the Alleged Debtors have 12 or more creditors and, thus, three or more petitioning creditors were required to prosecute the Involuntary Petitions pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(b)(1); (b) the Petitioning Creditor did not establish, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 303(h)(1), that the Alleged Debtors are not generally paying their debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount; (c) regardless of whether the Petitioning Creditor has met the statutory tests in sections 303(b)(1) and (h)(1), the Petitioning Creditor has acted in bad faith—which serves as an equitable basis for dismissal of the Involuntary Petitions; and (d) if the court disagrees with the Alleged Debtors and determines that the section 303(b) and (h) statutory tests are met, and also determines that the Petitioning Creditor has not acted in bad faith, the court should nevertheless abstain in this matter, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 305, since this is essentially a two-party dispute and the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by dismissal.

18. The Petitioning Creditor argues that he has met the statutory tests of sections 303(b) and (h) but, even if he has not, there is a “special circumstances” exception to the section 303 statutory requirements, whenever a petitioning creditor establishes fraud, trick, scheme, artifice or the like on the part of an alleged debtor—which “special circumstances,” Mr. Terry alleges, have been established here. Moreover, the Petitioning Creditor argues that the facts here do not warrant section 305 abstention because the interests of creditors and the Alleged Debtors would not be better served by dismissal.

19. As further explained below, the court finds and concludes that the Petitioning Creditor has met his burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the statutory tests of sections 303(b) and (h) are met here. Thus, the court does not need to reach the question of whether there is a “special circumstances” exception to the section 303 statutory requirements, whenever a petitioning creditor establishes fraud, trick, scheme, artifice or the like on the part of an alleged debtor, and—if so—whether the exception is applicable here.<sup>17</sup>

20. Moreover, the Alleged Debtors have not shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the Petitioning Creditor acted in bad faith, such that the Involuntary Petitions should be dismissed.

21. Finally, the Alleged Debtors also have not shown facts here that warrant section 305 abstention because they have not shown that the interests of creditors and the Alleged Debtors would be better served by dismissal.

B. The CLO Business: Understanding the Alleged Debtors' Business Operations, Structure, and What Creditors and Interest Holders They Actually Have.

22. Highland set up its first CLO in the year 1996. Highland was one of the early participants in the CLO industry.

23. The Alleged Debtors were formed in 2011 to be the new “brand” or face of the Highland CLO business, after Highland’s name had suffered some negative publicity in the marketplace.

24. Acis LP has acted as the portfolio manager of Highland’s CLOs since 2011. Acis LP currently has a contractual right to CLO portfolio management fees on five CLOs<sup>18</sup> which were referred to at the Trial as CLO 2013-1; CLO 2014-3; CLO 2014-4; CLO 2014-5; and CLO 2016-6. CLOs typically have an 8-12 year life. Thus, there are still several years of life left on these CLOs (since the oldest one was established in the year 2013).

25. The key “players” in and features with regard to the Highland CLOs, during the time period relevant to the issues adjudicated at the Trial, have been:

- (a) The CLO manager. As mentioned earlier, the CLO manager is the Alleged Debtor, Acis LP. Acis LP, has collateral management agreements (hereinafter, the “CLO Collateral Management Agreements”) with the CLOs (which CLOs were set up as special purpose entities) and, pursuant thereto, receives management fees<sup>19</sup> from the CLOs in exchange for managing the pool of assets within the CLOs and communicating with investors in the CLOs.<sup>20</sup> As mentioned earlier, Mr. Terry was the human being that performed the management function at Acis LP until Highland fired him on June 9, 2016 and also terminated his limited partnership interest in Acis LP. Mr. Terry, and all employees who have ever provided services to the CLO manager, are Highland employees—which were provided to Acis LP through shared and sub-advisory services agreements—as further explained below. Thus, to be clear, Acis LP has always essentially subcontracted its CLO managerial function out to Highland.

- (b) The pool of assets. Within each CLO that the CLO manager manages is a basket of loans that the CLO manager purchases. The basket of loans typically consists of approximately 200 loans-payable (or portions of loans payable), on which large well-known companies typically are the makers/obligors (and which loans, collectively, provide a variable rate of interest).<sup>21</sup> The CLO manager can typically decide to buy and sell different loans to go into the pool of assets, with certain restrictions, during a four or five year reinvestment time period.

<sup>19</sup> These fees typically include “senior fees” (e.g., 15 basis points); additional “subordinate fees” (e.g., 25 basis points) if the CLOs are passing certain tests; and perhaps even an “incentive fee” beyond a certain hurdle rate (e.g., after the equity in the CLO received an internal rate of return of 10%, the CLO manager would get 15% of the excess). Exh. 82, p. 59, lines 14-25.

<sup>20</sup> See, as an example, Exh. 3 (the collateral management agreement between Acis LP and CLO 2014-3). Note that the document is entitled “Portfolio Management Agreement” but, to avoid confusion with other similarly titled documents and to highlight the true nature of the agreement, the court uses the defined term “CLO Collateral Management Agreement,” which terminology the lawyers also sometimes used at the Trial.

- (c) The CLO investors (i.e., CLO note holders). These may be any number of persons or entities, including pension funds, life insurance companies, or others who decide to invest in the CLOs and contribute capital to fund the purchase of a CLO's loan pool, and, in return, receive fixed rate notes payable—the ratings on which can range anywhere from Triple-A to Single-B, depending upon the risk option the investor chooses. There are typically five or six tranches of notes issued by the CLO (with the top AAA-rated tranche being the least risky and the bottom tranche being the most risky) and—to be clear—the CLO itself (again, in each case, the CLO is a special purpose vehicle) is the obligor. As the CLO manager receives income from the pool of loans in the CLO, he distributes that income to the CLO investors, in accordance with their note indentures,<sup>22</sup> starting with the top tranche of notes and then down to the other tranches. The top tranche of notes (AAA-rated) is considered the “controlling” class and a majority of holders in this class can terminate the CLO manager (i.e., Acis LP) for cause on 45 days' notice, although all parties seem to agree this would be a rare event.
- (d) The CLO equity holder. The CLO equity holder actually is a holder of subordinated notes issued by the CLOs (i.e., the bottom tranche of notes on which the CLO special purpose entity is obligated), and has voting rights and is itself a capital provider, but it takes the most risk and receives the very last cash flow from the CLOs. It, in certain ways, controls the CLO vehicle<sup>23</sup>—for example, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain “no-call” period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A’s). Note that, until recently, a separate entity known as Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“ALF”), which was incorporated under the laws of the island nation of Guernsey,<sup>24</sup> was the CLO equity holder. To be clear, ALF was essentially the equity owner in the CLO special purpose entities—not the equity owner of Acis LP. Acis LP was a party to a separate portfolio management agreement with ALF (hereinafter, the “ALF Portfolio Management Agreement”—not to be confused with the CLO Collateral Management Agreements that Acis LP separately has with the special purpose CLOs). No fees were paid from ALF to Acis LP pursuant to the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement (rather, fees are only paid to Acis LP on the CLO Collateral Management Agreements). The complicated structure of the CLO business—all parties seemed to agree—has been developed, among other reasons, to comply with “risk-retention requirements” imposed by the U.S. Congress’s massive Dodd-Frank financial reform legislation<sup>25</sup> enacted in year 2010, in response to the financial crisis and recession that first began in 2008.

(e) The Equity Owners of ALF. Until recently (i.e., until October 24, 2017—four days after the Arbitration Award), Acis LP itself, as required for a CLO manager, had a 15% indirect ownership in ALF, in order to be regulatory compliant.<sup>26</sup> The parties sometimes refer to ALF (and the web of ownership between it and Acis LP) as the “risk retention structure.”<sup>27</sup> The evidence at the Trial revealed that ALF (which has recently been renamed), now, has three equity owners: (i) a 49% equity owner that is a charitable fund (i.e., a donor advised fund or “DAF”) that was seeded with contributions from Highland, is managed/advised by Highland, and whose independent trustee is a long-time friend of Highland’s chief executive officer, Mr. Dondero; (ii) 2% is owned by Highland employees; and (iii) finally, ALF may be 49% owned by a third-party institutional investor based in Boston that Highland believed it was required to keep anonymous at the Trial. Not only is the court unaware of who this independent third-party is, but the evidence seems to suggest that it may have acquired its interest fairly recently or may have simply committed to invest recently.<sup>28</sup> issued, the CLO manager would need to retain at least 5% or $20 million of the assets in the CLO (which 5% could be either all at the equity level or vertically, up and down the note tranches). There are multiple ways to accomplish this 5% retention (i.e., with either the CLO manager directly investing in at least 5% of the CLO or doing it through a controlled subsidiary). This particular rule was announced in December 2014 and the SEC thereafter issued a no action letter stating that if a CLO was issued prior to December 2014, then any refinancing of such CLO that happens within four years can be done without risk retention in place. Resets of any CLO (i.e., changes in terms and maturity—as opposed to mere changes in interest rates), on the other hand, must have risk retention in place. Four of Acis LP’s current CLOs were issued prior to December 2014. Thus, these four CLOs are still technically able to do a refinancing without a risk retention structure in place. In any event, by early-to-middle 2017, Acis LP was risk retention compliant. Exh. 82, pp. 65-69 & 75. That was recently changed—on October 24, 2017—four days after the Arbitration Award—as later explained herein.

As with any publicly traded notes, there is an underwriter for the CLO notes which solicits investors for the CLO notes (examples given at the Trial: Mizuho Securities USA, LLC; Merrill Lynch; JP Morgan Chase).<sup>29</sup> The CLO notes are traded on the Over-the-Counter Market.

26. Mr. Terry, the Petitioning Creditor, as earlier mentioned, began working for Highland in 2005 until his employment was terminated on June 9, 2016.

27. Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC have never had any employees. Rather, all employees that work for any of the Highland family of companies (including Mr. Terry) have, almost without exception, been employees of Highland itself. Highland has approximately 150 employees in the United States. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC, through both the mechanism of: (a) a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called),<sup>31</sup> which provides “back office” personnel—such as human resources, accounting, legal and information technology to the Highland family of companies; and (b) a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called),<sup>32</sup> which provides “front office” personnel to entities—such as the managers of investments like Mr. Terry. The evidence indicated that this is typical in the CLO industry to have such agreements. The court notes that all iterations of the Shared Services Agreements and Sub-Advisory Agreements between Acis LP and Highland were signed by Mr. Dondero both as President of Acis LP and as President of the General Partner of Highland.

28. Because Acis LP essentially subcontracts out all of its functions to Highland pursuant to the Shared Services Agreement and the Sub-Advisory Agreement, Acis LP has very few vendors or creditors. Rather Highland incurs expenses and essentially bills them to Acis LP through these two agreements.<sup>33</sup> In other words, Highland is one of Acis LP's largest and most frequent creditor.

29. The evidence reflected that at all times Mr. Dondero has been the President of both of the Alleged Debtors, and there have been, at all times, very few, if any, other officers. It appears that the only other officer of Acis GP/LLC that ever existed was Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer.<sup>34</sup> It also appears that the only other officer of Acis LP that ever existed was Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer, Mr. Terry as Portfolio Manager, and someone named Patrick Boyce as Secretary at one time.<sup>35</sup>

30. Mr. Dondero testified that he has decision making authority for the Alleged Debtors but usually delegates that authority to Highland's in-house lawyers, Scott Ellington (General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and Partner of Highland) and Isaac Leventon (Assistant General Counsel of Highland) and is rarely involved in "nitty gritty negotiations." Sometimes instructions will come to him from the compliance group headed up by Chief Compliance Officer Thomas Surgent. Additionally, he testified that he signs hundreds of documents per week, and much of what he signs is on advice of counsel and he sometimes even delegates to his assistant the authority to sign his name. As set forth above, Mr. Ellington (who did not testify at the Trial)<sup>36</sup> and Mr. Leventon (who did testify at the Trial) are not officers, directors, or employees of the Alleged Debtors. Mr. Leventon is designated to be the representative for the Alleged Debtors (and testified as a Rule 30(b)(6) witness during pre-Trial discovery)—he explained that this representative-authority derives from the Shared Services Agreement. Mr. Leventon testified that he takes his instructions generally through his direct supervisor, Mr. Ellington, although Highland partners can ask him to perform legal services for any of Highland’s 2,000 entities.

C. Transfers and Transactions Involving the Alleged Debtors Since the Litigation with Mr. Terry Commenced—and Especially After the Arbitration Award.

31. Below is a listing of some (but not necessarily all) of the transfers and transactions that the Alleged Debtors, Highland, and related parties undertook after the litigation with Mr. Terry commenced.

- (a) Acis LP’s Sale to Highland of a “Participation Interest” in its CLO Cash Flow Stream. On October 7, 2016 (approximately one month after the litigation arose among Mr. Terry, Highland, and the Alleged Debtors), Acis LP sold to Highland a participation interest in its expected future cash flow from the CLO Collateral Management Agreements—specifically, it sold a portion of the cash flow it expected to earn from November 2016 to August 2019 (not the full life of the CLOs), for $666,655 cash, plus a $12,666,446 note payable from Highland to <sup>36</sup> Mr. Ellington did testify at a hearing in the bankruptcy court on February 6, 2018—which the parties asked this court to take judicial notice of—and also provided deposition testimony that was submitted into evidence. See Exh. 25.

Acis LP (hereinafter, the “Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland”). Mr. Dondero signed the purchase and sale agreement for both purchaser and seller.<sup>37</sup> Mr. Dondero signed the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland, which accrued interest at 3% per annum. It appears that the $666,665 cash down payment was actually paid, and a payment required on the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland of $3,370,694 on May 31, 2017, was actually made. The Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland was payable in three installments, with a $5,286,243 payment required on May 31, 2018, and a $4,677,690 payment required on May 31, 2019. When viewed in complete isolation, this transaction does not necessarily appear problematic. Although there was evidence that Acis LP had been managing the five CLOs for about $10 million per year of fees, some of the recitals in the purchase and sale agreement suggest that there may have been a sound business reason for the transaction and the arbitration panel,<sup>38</sup> viewing this transaction in isolation, did not think it was necessarily problematic or actionable. In any event, Highland is adamant it was a net neutral transaction.

- (b) Transfer of Acis LP’s interest in ALF. Recall that ALF was the entity that held equity (i.e., the subordinated notes) in the CLO special purpose vehicles, and held voting rights and was a capital provider to the overall risk retention structure supporting the CLOs. And Acis LP, in turn, held a 15% indirect interest in ALF. On October 24, 2017 (four days after the Arbitration Award), Acis, LP entered into an agreement with ALF whereby ALF acquired back the shares that Acis LP indirectly held in ALF (966,679 shares) for the sum of $991,180.13.<sup>39</sup> No credible business justification was offered for this transaction, other than mostly uncorroborated (and self-serving) statements from Highland witnesses that Acis LP was “toxic” in the market place (due to the litigation with Mr. Terry) and this was a step in the process of extricating Acis LP from the CLO business.<sup>40</sup> The court finds the testimony about Acis LP’s toxicity in the marketplace to not be credible or at all convincing. For one thing, a new CLO (Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd.) was closed on April 10, 2017 with Acis LP as the portfolio manager. Moreover, Acis LP subcontracts all of its CLO management function to Highland—and there was no evidence to suggest that anyone in the marketplace at this juncture differentiates between Acis LP (whose president is Mr. Dondero) and Highland (whose president is Mr. Dondero). In any event, the October 24, 2017 transaction had the highly consequential effect of making Acis LP “noncompliant” or unable to continue serving as a CLO manager for regulatory purposes for any new CLOs or reset CLOs (or for a refinancing of any of the Highland CLOs that had been created after December 2014)<sup>41</sup> because aspects of the federal Dodd Frank legislation require CLO managers to have “skin in the game” with regard to the CLOs they manage (i.e., they must retain at least 5% of CLOs they manage). Mr. Akada, who testified that he had been involved with the CLO business from the beginning and that the CLO team reported to him (including Mr. Terry before his termination), testified that he had no knowledge of this particular transaction. The document effectuating this transaction was signed by Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer for and on behalf of Acis LP, acting by its general partner, Acis GP/LLC.<sup>42</sup>

- (c) ALF Next Decides to Jettison Acis, LP as its Portfolio Manager and Replace it with a new Highland Cayman Island Entity. On October 27, 2017 (seven days after the Arbitration Award), ALF—having purchased back the ownership interest that Acis LP had in it, just three days earlier—decided that it would no longer use Acis LP as its portfolio manager and entered into a new portfolio management agreement to supersede and replace the ALF Portfolio Management Agreement. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, ALF entered into a new Portfolio Management Agreement with a Cayman Island entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd., replacing Acis LP in its role with ALF.<sup>43</sup> This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017.<sup>44</sup>
- (d) The Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland is Transferred from Acis LP to Yet Another Highland Cayman Island Entity. On November 3, 2017 (10 days after the Arbitration Award), Acis LP assigned and transferred its interests in the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland—which at that point had a balance owing of over $9.5 million—to a Highland Cayman Island entity known as Highland CLO

Management Ltd. which apparently was created sometime recently to be the new collateral manager of the CLOs (in other words, the new Acis LP).<sup>45</sup> The Assignment and Transfer Agreement memorializing this transaction is signed by Mr. Dondero for Acis LP and Mr. Dondero for Highland and some undecipherable name for Highland CLO Management Ltd.<sup>46</sup> The document recites that (i) Highland is no longer willing to continue providing support services to Acis LP, (ii) Acis LP, therefore, can no longer fulfill its duties as a collateral manager, and (iii) Highland CLO Management Ltd. agrees to step into the collateral manager role if Acis LP will assign to it the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. One more thing: since Acis LP was expected to potentially incur future legal and accounting/administrative fees, and might not have the ability to pay them when due, Highland CLO Management Ltd. agreed to reimburse Acis LP (or pays its vendors directly) up to $2 million of future legal expenses and up to $1 million of future accounting/administrative expenses.<sup>47</sup>

- (e) Various Additional Transactions that further Transitioned CLO Management and Fees Away from Acis LP to Highland Cayman Island Entity. On December 19, 2017—just one day after the Arbitration Award was confirmed with the entry of the Final Judgment—the vehicle that can most easily be described as the Acis LP “risk retention structure” (necessitated by federal Dodd Frank law) was transferred away from Acis LP and into the ownership of Highland CLO

- (f) In addition to transferring Acis LP's interest in the Acis LP risk retention structure on December 19, 2017, Acis LP also transferred its contractual right to receive management fees for Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. (which had just closed April 10, 2017), which Mr. Terry credibly testified had a combined value of $5 million, to Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd., another Cayman entity, purportedly in exchange for forgiveness of a $2.8 million receivable that was owed to Highland under the most recent iteration of the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7.<sup>49</sup> In conjunction with this transfer, Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. then entered into new Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements with Highland.<sup>50</sup>
- (g) Change of Equity Owners of the Alleged Debtors. When Acis LP was first formed, it was owned by one general partner (Acis GP/LLC, with a .1% interest) and it had three limited partners: (a) Dugaboy Investment Trust (a Dondero family trust of which either Mr. Dondero or his sister, Nancy Dondero, have been the Trustee at all relevant times) with a 59.9% interest; (b) Mr. Terry with a 25% interest; and (c) Mr. Akada with a 15% interest. When Acis GP/LLC was formed

(i.e., the .1% owner of Acis LP), its sole member was the Dugaboy Investment Trust. After Mr. Terry was terminated by Highland, his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was forfeited and divided among the two remaining limited partners: Mr. Akada (increasing his interest by 10% up to 25%), and Dugaboy Investment Trust (increasing its interest by 15% up to 74.9%). But, more importantly, on the day after entry of Mr. Terry's Final Judgment (i.e., on December 18, 2017), both Mr. Akada and Dugaboy Investment Trust conveyed their entire limited partnership interests in Acis LP—25% and 74.9%, respectively—to a Cayman Island entity called Neutra, Ltd., a Cayman Islands exempted company. Dugaboy Investment Trust also conveyed its 100% membership interest in Acis GP/LLC to Neutra, Ltd. Mr. Akada testified that he did this on advice of counsel. He also did not dispute that he had made millions of dollars of equity dividends from his equity investment in Acis LP in recent years<sup>51</sup>—which he conveyed away for no consideration on December 18, 2017.

- (h) The Intended Reset of Acis CLO 2014-3. With all of the above maneuverings having been accomplished, Highland was posed to do a reset on Acis CLO 2014-3 in February 2018 (until Mr. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions). The investment bank Mizuho Securities USA, LLC was engaged November 15, 2017<sup>52</sup> and a final offering circular was issued in January 2018<sup>53</sup>—contemplating a reset of Acis CLO 20-14-3 with the recently created Highland CLO Management Ltd.

Identified as the new portfolio manager, rather than Acis LP. The act of implementing a reset on the CLO was not in itself suspect. However, the reset would, of course, have the effect of depriving Acis LP from a valuable asset—an agreement that could realistically be expected to provide millions of dollars of future collateral management fees—coincidentally (or not) just after Mr. Terry obtained his large judgment.

D. Findings Regarding Credibility of Witnesses.

32. The court found the testimony of Mr. Terry to be very credible. He was very familiar with the financial condition of the Alleged Debtors, since he presided over the business of the Alleged Debtors from their inception until June 9, 2016, and has also closely followed publicly available information regarding the companies since his termination. Mr. Terry credibly testified that the Alleged Debtors have never had a significant number of creditors, since most of the Alleged Debtors' vendors are engaged by and send their invoices to Highland, and Highland simply obtains reimbursement from the Alleged Debtors (and other entities in the Highland family), as its in-house lawyers determine is appropriate, through the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement. Thus, Highland should at all times be the Alleged Debtors' main creditor. The court finds that Mr. Terry had a good faith belief that the Alleged Debtors had only a handful of creditors (maybe four or so) besides him and Highland. The court also finds that Mr. Terry—at the time he filed the Involuntary Petitions—had a good faith belief that the Alleged Debtors and those controlling them were engaged in an orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value (i.e., transferring assets and rights for less than reasonably equivalent value), which started with intensity after issuance of the Arbitration Award (if not sooner).<sup>54</sup>

33. The court found the testimony of almost all of the witnesses for the Alleged Debtors to be of questionable reliability and, oftentimes, there seemed to be an effort to convey plausible deniability. For example, sometimes business decisions concerning the Alleged Debtors were said to have been made by a “collective,” and other times the in-house Highland lawyers (who, of course, are not themselves officers or employees of Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC) stressed that Mr. Dondero (the president and manager of the two entities) had ultimate decision making authority for them. Meanwhile, Mr. Dondero testified that, while he has decision making authority at Acis LP, he usually delegates to Highland’s in-house lawyers Scott Ellington and Isaac Leventon. He testified that he signs hundreds of documents per week and often must rely on information of others when signing. Additionally, Mr. Dondero (again, the President of each of the Alleged Debtors) testified that he had never even read the Arbitration Award. While Mr. Dondero is the chief executive of a multi-billion dollar international investment company, and naturally has widespread responsibilities and must delegate to and rely upon others including lawyers, this court simply does not believe that he never read the Arbitration Award. The court perceived the animosity between Mr. Dondero and Mr. Terry to be rather enormous and Mr. Dondero even testified (as did others) that the litigation with Mr. Terry was hurting Acis LP and Highland in the CLO marketplace (i.e., no investors or underwriters wanting to be associated with the Acis brand).<sup>55</sup> If that were the case, it strains credulity to suggest Mr. Dondero never even read the Arbitration Award.

34. As mentioned earlier, in December 2017, Acis GP/LLC became 100% owned by a Cayman Island entity known as Neutra, Ltd. (whose beneficial owner is a Dondero family trust) and Acis LP became 99.9% owned by Neutra, Ltd. The directors of Acis GP/LLC and Acis LP are provided to it now by an entity known as “Maples Fiduciary Services”—another Cayman Island entity, but the Highland Assistant General Counsel could not remember the names of those directors provided to Acis GP/LLC and Acis LP, except for perhaps one. Mr. Dondero, when questioned about some of the recent transactions pertaining to Acis LP, testified that there were tax reasons—tax lawyers recommended the recent transactions and transfers. No tax lawyers testified. Mr. Dondero also testified that certain transactions were at the directive of the Thomas Surgent group (the Highland chief compliance officer). Neither Mr. Surgent nor anyone else from the compliance group testified.

35. Meanwhile, Mr. Akada, who, while testifying, seemed like a generally lovely person and seemed as knowledgeable as a human being could possibly be on the topic of CLOs generally, had no idea if he was an officer or director of the Alleged Debtors, nor did he know whom its officers were. He could not testify as to the meaning of certain transactions in which Acis LP had engaged in during recent weeks and said that he signed certain documents on advice of counsel. He also could not even testify as to whether Highland was opposing the Involuntary Petitions.

36. Again, there was a lot of plausible deniability at Trial as to the “whos” and “whys” for the recent maneuverings involving the Alleged Debtors assets and rights in the weeks since the Arbitration Award. The one thing that the court was wholly convinced of was that conflicts of interest among Highland and the Alleged Debtors abound, and no one is looking out for the interests of the Alleged Debtors as a fiduciary should.

37. The Alleged Debtors do not dispute Mr. Terry's claim for the purposes of counting creditors under section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. However, Mr. Terry asserts that the Alleged Debtors have fewer than 12 creditors, and the Alleged Debtors dispute this fact. Specifically, the Alleged Debtors initially filed on January 31, 2018, a Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Dondero listing 18 creditors (the "Original Notice of Creditors").<sup>57</sup> The Alleged Debtors subsequently filed on February 5, 2018, a First Amended Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Leventon listing 19 creditors (the "First Amended Notice of Creditors").<sup>58</sup> Finally, the Alleged Debtors filed on March 6, 2018, a Second Amended Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bank. P. 1003(b) signed by Mr. Leventon listing 20 creditors (the "Second Amended List of Creditors").<sup>59</sup> The following chart summarizes the name, amount, and nature of the 20 creditors listed by the Alleged Debtors in their Second Amended List of Creditors.

<sup>56</sup> The court notes that neither Mr. Terry nor the Alleged Debtors attempted to differentiate between the creditors of Acis GP/LLC versus the creditors of Acis LP, but rather presented evidence regarding the collective number of creditors for both of the Alleged Debtors. This seems legally appropriate, since Acis LP is the entity that incurred most of the debt, and ACIS GP/LLC would be liable on such debt as the general partner of Acis LP.

40. Next, the court finds that there are certain creditors included in the “Law Firm Vendor” category (e.g., experts, data hosting, document managers, court reporters) that are really creditors of the individual law firms and/or Highland, and that these law firm vendor creditors should not be considered creditors of the Alleged Debtors. For these, there was no evidence of a direct contractual obligation on the part of either the Alleged Debtors or Highland—although the court certainly understands that, when the law firms would retain vendors, they would bill these to either the Alleged Debtors or Highland as an expense to be reimbursed. Most of these were already eliminated with agreement of the Alleged Debtors but, from the remaining list of creditors, this would include David Langford (a Dallas County court reporter).<sup>66</sup> To be clear, while the individual law firm creditors may ultimately have a right to reimbursement for these vendor expenses from Highland (who may then potentially have a right to reimbursement from the Alleged Debtors via the Shared Services and Sub-Advisory Agreements), the court does not find this vendor to have a claim directly against the Alleged Debtors for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

41. Next, as to the Stanton Law Firm, the court finds that this creditor should also be removed from the pool of creditors that “count,” for section 303(b) purposes, since this claim appears to be the subject of a “bona fide dispute as to liability or amount,”<sup>67</sup> based on the evidence presented at the Trial. First, there was no engagement letter between either of the Alleged Debtors and the Stanton Law Firm produced.<sup>68</sup> Second, the heavily redacted invoice of the Stanton Law Firm dated October 18, 2016 shows only that it was relating to the “Joshua Terry Matter” and that it was billed to Highland.<sup>69</sup> Third, the Responses and Objections to Mr. Terry’s Notice of Intention to Take Depositions by Written Questions sent to the Stanton Law Firm<sup>70</sup> provides the following responses:

Question No. 11: What is the total amount of debt Acis Capital Management L.P. to the Firm. is liable to the Firm.

Answer: Acis Capital Management L.P.’s debt to the Firm is unknown at this time.

Question No. 12: What is the total amount of debt Acis Capital Management GP, LLC is liable for to the firm?

N.D. Tex. 2009) (only “a holder of a claim ... that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount” is counted in determining the number of creditors necessary to file an involuntary petition).

The court finds that this evidence demonstrates that the claim of the Stanton Law Firm is the subject of a bona fide dispute as to either liability or amount and should not be counted since there is no real way of even knowing who the Stanton Law Firm was engaged by and, thus, whether the Alleged Debtors are even responsible for these alleged legal fees. The court would also specifically refer to the testimony of Mr. Leventon, the in-house lawyer employed by Highland who was in charge of allocating all of the bills that came into Highland’s legal invoicing system, where he described a process in which all legal bills relating to the “Terry Matter” would automatically be assigned to the Alleged Debtors, without any real regard to whether the particular law firm had even been engaged by the Alleged Debtors or if whether the representation was actually relating to one of the other parties in the Terry litigation (e.g., Highland, Mr. Dondero, etc.). Accordingly, the court finds that there is a bona fide dispute as to whether the Alleged Debtors are actually liable for the Stanton Law Firm legal fees and that they should not be counted as a creditor for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>72</sup>

42. Thus, it appears, at most, that there are 11 creditors<sup>73</sup> of the Alleged Debtors as set forth in the chart below:

<sup>73</sup> The court notes that, in all likelihood, the list of creditors that should be tallied for purposes of section 303(b) may actually be less than 11, because certain of the remaining creditors (i.e., Drexel Limited, Highfield Equities, Inc., Lackey Hershman LLP, and David Simek) received payments during the 90 days preceding the Petition Date—and, thus, arguably should not be counted as creditors pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code (which instructs that transferees of voidable transfers should not be counted). See, e.g., Exh. 124 & Exh. 131. Additionally, certain of the remaining law firm creditors that are owed legal fees are also creditors of Highland and Highland-affiliates, not just the Alleged Debtors. To elaborate, many of these law firm creditors were employed to represent not only the Alleged Debtors, but also Highland and Highland-affiliates, so there may be an actual dispute as to the allocation of these legal fees among Highland and the Alleged Debtors (thus there could be bona fide disputes as to the amounts allocated by Highland's in-house lawyers to the Alleged Debtors). See, e.g., Ex. 123 (McKool Smith, P.C. engagement letter referencing representation of numerous parties) & Exhibit 90 (Reid Collins & Tsai's Answers and Objections to Mr. Terry's Deposition by Written Questions, questions 13 & 14, stating that based upon allocation determinations to be made by Highland, other individuals may be liable for the full amount of the debt including Acis LP, Highland, Mr. Dondero, and Mr. Okada).

43. Finally, on the topic of creditor numerosity, the court further finds that the evidence strongly suggested hurried manufacturing of creditors on the part of the Alleged Debtors and Highland, in order to bolster an argument that having a sole petitioning creditor was legally inadequate in this case.<sup>75</sup> For example, the Klos Declaration and other information, that was provided to State Court 2 and in discovery, only days before the Involuntary Petitions were filed, <sup>74</sup> Mr. Terry has also argued that certain of the law firm creditors (McKool Smith, P.C., Lackey Hershman, LLP, and Reid Collins & Tsai) are “insiders” that must be excluded from the creditor list pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. While there may be some support in case law for such an argument, Mr. Terry would ultimately need to show by a preponderance of the evidence that the law firms exercised such control or influence over the Alleged Debtors as to render their transactions not at arm’s length. See In re CorrLine Intern., LLC, 516 B.R. 106, 157-58 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2014) (citing to Kepler v. Schmalbach (In re Lemanski), 56 B.R. 981, 983 (Bankr.W.D.Wis.1986)). See also In re Holloway, 955 F.2d 1008, 1011 (5th Cir. 1992) (in evaluating whether insider status existed for purposes of evaluating alleged fraudulent conveyance court considered (1) the closeness of the relationship between the transferee and the debtor; and (2) whether the transactions between the transferee and the debtor were conducted at arm’s length). Because there was no evidence suggesting abuse or control by these law firm creditors, nor was there any evidence that would suggest that their dealings with the Alleged Debtors were anything but arm’s length, the court finds that these law firm creditors should not be excluded from the creditor list as “insiders” pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code.

seemed to show only a small number of creditors of Acis LP—Mr. Terry credibly testified that he thought there were less than 12 creditors based on his review of such information, as well as his understanding of the Alleged Debtors’ business. Yet, only a few days later, the Alleged Debtors filed their Original Notice of Creditors, which showed 18 creditors, which was amended twice to add another creditor and then yet another. This simply does not jive in the court’s mind and supports this court’s belief that the Alleged Debtors were scurrying to determine which Highland creditors might cogently be painted as Acis LP creditors—so as to preclude Mr. Terry from being able to file the Involuntary Petitions as the single, petitioning creditor.

F. Evidence Regarding Whether the Alleged Debtors are Generally Not Paying Debts as They Become Due (Unless Such Debts are the Subject of a Bona Fide Dispute as to Liability or Amount).

44. The evidence submitted reflects that, for the 11 creditors identified above, 9 out of 11 have unpaid invoices that were more than 90 days old. The remaining 2 of the 11 were McKool Smith, P.C. (current counsel for the Alleged Debtors) and the Petitioning Creditor.<sup>76</sup> The court makes findings with regard to each of the 11 creditors below—focusing specifically on whether the Alleged Debtors have been paying these creditors as their debts have become due.

45. First, with regard to Andrews Kurth & Kenyon (“AKK”), the evidence reflected that out of the $211,088.13 allegedly owed by Acis LP to AKK, the great majority of it—$173,448.42—was invoiced on November 16, 2016<sup>77</sup> (more than 14 months before the Petition Date). Other, smaller amounts were invoiced on a monthly basis in each of the months August 2017, September 2017, October 2017, November 2017, and December 2017. Although requested in discovery, no engagement letter for AKK was produced and AKK represented in written discovery that, to its knowledge, none existed.<sup>78</sup> The court notes anecdotally that AKK's invoices (although allegedly related to Acis LP legal matters) were addressed to Highland.<sup>79</sup> In any event, AKK represented that both the Alleged Debtors and Highland are jointly and severally liable for the fees owed to it.<sup>80</sup> AKK also represented that, to its knowledge, the amounts owing to it by Acis LP and Highland are not disputed.<sup>81</sup> AKK also represented that it has not provided legal work on a contingency basis for the Alleged Debtors or Highland.<sup>82</sup> The court makes a logical inference that AKK expected timely payment of its invoices—the largest of which was dated more than 14 months prior to the Petition Date—and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

46. Next, with regard to Drexel Limited, the Petitioning Creditor concedes that its $6,359.96 indebtedness (which is a fee rebate owing to it) is not past-due.

47. Next, with regard to Highfield Equities, Inc., the Petitioning Creditor concedes that its $2,510.04 indebtedness (which is also a fee rebate owing to it) is not past-due.

48. Next, with regard to the Jones Day law firm, the $368.75 indebtedness owed to it is well more than 90 days old. Specifically, there is a six-and-a-half-month old invoice dated July 19, 2017 invoice in the amount of $118.75, and two five-month old invoices dated August 30, 2017 (both in the amount of $150).<sup>83</sup> The court makes a logical inference that Jones Day expected timely payment of its invoices prior to the Petition Date and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

49. Next with regard to the Petitioning Creditor, Mr. Terry, the court notes that his liquidated claim in the amount of $8,060,827.84 first arose with the final Arbitration Award on October 20, 2017 (although such award was not confirmed by State Court 2 until December 18, 2017). The judgment was unstayed as of the January 30, 2018 Petition Date, although the Alleged Debtors state that they still desire to appeal it—as difficult as that is in the situation of an arbitration award. The court makes a logical inference that the Alleged Debtors had, on the Petition Date, no intention of paying this claim any time soon based on their conduct after the Arbitration Award—although the Arbitration Award had only been in existence for three-and-a-half months as of the Petition Date. The cash in the Alleged Debtors’ bank accounts is wholly insufficient to cover the Arbitration Award and, meanwhile, corporate transactions have been ongoing to ensure that no cash streams will be coming into Acis LP in the future in the same way that they have in the past. Thus, this court finds that this large claim, as of the Petition Date, was not being paid timely.

50. Next with regard to KPMG LLP, the $34,000 indebtedness owed to it was for the service of auditing Acis LP’s financial statements, pursuant to an engagement letter with it dated March 1, 2017.<sup>84</sup> KPMG’s engagement letter reflected a $40,000 flat fee was agreed to by Acis LP for the service, of which 40% was due October 2017 (i.e., $16,000), with another 45% was due in January 2018 ($18,000), and the remaining 15% would be due at the time that a final bill was sent. Acis LP has only paid $6,000 of the agreed upon amount—meaning $28,000 was overdue as of the January 30, 2018 Petition Date (with $10,000 of that being four months past due). The court makes a logical inference that KPMG LLP expected payment of its audit fees in accordance with its engagement letter and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

51. Next with regard to Lackey Hershman LLP, the $236,977.54 indebtedness owed to it was for legal services provided to the Alleged Debtors and Highland in connection with the arbitration and litigation with Mr. Terry. No engagement letter was provided, but the invoices for their services are all directed to Highland.<sup>85</sup> The evidence reflected that three invoices had not been paid as of the Petition Date: an October 31, 2017 invoice in the amount of $56,909.53; a November 30, 2017 invoice setting forth new fees in the amount of $84,789.83; and a December 31, 2017 invoice setting forth new fees in the amount of $95,278.18.<sup>86</sup> The court makes a logical inference that Lackey Hershman LLP expected prompt payment on its invoices (if nothing else, the statement on its invoice indicating “Total now due”)<sup>87</sup> and, thus, it has generally not been paid timely.

52. Next with regard to Reid Collins & Tsai LLP, the $17,383.75 indebtedness owed to it was billed in an invoice dated August 31, 2017, indicating an August 31, 2017 “Due Date” (five months before the Petition Date).<sup>88</sup> Although requested in discovery, no engagement letter for this firm was produced and Reid Collins & Tsai LLP in fact represented in written discovery that none existed.<sup>89</sup> Moreover, written discovery propounded on the law firm indicated that, while Acis LP was liable on this debt, other parties including Acis GP/LLC, Highland, Mr.

Dondero, the Dugaboy Trust, and Mr. Akada might also be liable for the full amount of the debt—subject to Highland’s allocation determinations.<sup>90</sup> Based on this evidence, the court makes a logical inference that Reid Collins & Tsai LLP generally has not been paid timely.

53. Next with regard to CT Corporation and the $517.12 indebtedness that the Alleged Debtors represent is owed, CT Corporation asserts that $4,074.84 is, in fact, owed to it by Acis LP and Acis GP/LLC.<sup>91</sup> CT Corporation also believes Highland has liability for the Alleged Debtors’ indebtedness.<sup>92</sup> CT Corporation also believes the amount owed to it is undisputed.<sup>93</sup> CT Corporation further represents that its invoices are due upon receipt.<sup>94</sup> CT Corporation produced several invoices in discovery, all showing due upon receipt, and one was dated as far back as December 31, 2016 (in the amount of $932).<sup>95</sup> Based on this evidence, the court makes a logical inference that CT Corporation expected prompt payment on its invoices and, thus, has not been paid timely.

54. Next with regard to David Simek, the Petitioning Creditor concedes that his $1,233.19 indebtedness (which is apparently an expense reimbursement relating to some consulting) is not past-due.

55. In summary, the evidence reflects that the creditors of the Alleged Debtors are generally not being paid timely (except for perhaps four that are relatively insignificant and which may also be able to look to Highland for payment).<sup>96</sup>

56. Further on the topic of timeliness, Mr. Leventon (Highland's in-house Assistant General Counsel) testified that 96% of bills submitted get paid more than 90 days after they are submitted, that approximately 70% of bills are later than 120 days after they are submitted, and some are even later than 150 days. Mr. Leventon testified that this was a result of Acis LP receiving cash on a quarterly basis from the CLOs. He further elaborated and testified that, for example, if Acis LP got cash on say February 1st, and it received a legal bill on that same day, that he would probably not approve it and allocate it until say February 8th. By that time, Acis LP would have already used up all its cash, and that particular creditor would need to wait until the next quarterly payment was received in order to be paid. He further testified that he explained this to law firms before their engagements and that, if they wanted the business, they would need to understand the process. There are several things the court finds problematic about this testimony. First, no testimony was offered showing that this was, in fact, the understanding of the law firms or other creditors, and, moreover, none of the engagement letters or invoices submitted into evidence reflect such payment terms. Without this additional evidence, the court believes that the Alleged Debtors' testimony regarding how it paid invoices was mostly self-serving and did not support a finding that the Alleged Debtors were generally paying their debts as they became due.<sup>97</sup> Second, to the extent Mr. Leventon's testimony demonstrates that creditors of the Alleged Debtors expected to be paid on a quarterly basis (at the latest), certain of the remaining 11 creditors have debts that are significantly older than four months (i.e., CT Corporation, Jones Day, AKK, and possibly even Reid Collins & Tsai LLP). Third, the Financial Statements of Acis LP submitted into evidence do not support the notion that the cash balances at Acis LP were only sufficient enough to pay vendors once every quarter.<sup>98</sup> For example, the balance sheet for January 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $1,061,663.19; the balance sheet for February 28, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $905,212.36; the balance sheet for March 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $525,626.59; the balance sheet for April 30, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $117,885.96; the balance sheet for May 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $62,733.31; the balance sheet for June 30, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $10,329.15; the balance sheet for July 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $701,904.39; the balance sheet for August 31, 2017 shows a cash balance in Acis LP bank accounts of $332,847.05.<sup>99</sup> In summary, while there may be cash fluctuations with Acis LP, there is not a clear pattern of Acis LP being only able to pay vendors once every quarter.

<sup>97</sup> See In re Trans-High Corp., 3 B.R. 1, 2-3 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1980) (bankruptcy court found that evidence showing that the petitioning creditor gave the debtor generous terms of payment (90 days) which were substantially better than the terms set forth in the actual writings between the parties supported finding that the alleged debtors were generally paying debts as they became due and that the involuntary petition must be dismissed).

II. Conclusions of Law

Section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code sets forth the various requirements for initiating an involuntary bankruptcy case. First, pursuant to section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, an involuntary case may be filed against a person by the filing with the bankruptcy court of a petition under Chapter 7—

(1) by three or more entities, each of which is either a holder of a claim against such person that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount ... [that] aggregate at least $15,775 more than the value of any lien on property of the debtor securing such claims held by the holders of such claims;

(2) if there are fewer than 12 such holders, excluding any employee or insider of such person and any transferee of a transfer that is voidable under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724(a) of this title, by one or more of such holders that hold in the aggregate at least $15,775 of such claims . . .<sup>100</sup>

Thus, if there are twelve or more eligible creditors holding qualified claims on the Petition Date, three or more entities must participate in the involuntary filing and must hold unsecured claims aggregating $15,775.00. If there are less than twelve creditors, a single creditor with an unsecured claim of $15,775.00 may file the involuntary petition. To the extent a bankruptcy court finds that the requisite number of petitioning creditors have commenced the involuntary case, the court shall order relief against the debtor under the chapter under which the petition was filed only if “the debtor is generally not paying such debtor’s debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount.”<sup>101</sup>

Here, as noted earlier, the Alleged Debtors have made four arguments as to why an order for relief should not be entered against the Alleged Debtors: (1) the Alleged Debtors have 12 or more creditors, and, thus, with Mr. Terry being the sole petitioning creditor, the Involuntary Petitions were not commenced by the requisite number of creditors; (2) the Alleged Debtors are generally paying their debts as they become due; (3) the Involuntary Petitions were filed in bad faith by Mr. Terry; (4) the interests of creditors and the debtors would be better served by dismissal and the court should abstain pursuant to section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code.

A. *Have the Requisite Number of Creditors Commenced the Involuntary Proceedings?

Pursuant to section 303(b)(2) of the Bankruptcy Code, a sole petitioning creditor holding at least $15,775 in claims can initiate an involuntary bankruptcy case so long as the alleged debtors have fewer than 12 creditors. After the Second Amended List of Creditors was filed, Mr. Terry had the burden, by a preponderance of the evidence, of showing that the Alleged Debtors actually had less than 12 qualified creditors.<sup>102</sup> Here, the court has found that the Alleged Debtors have, at most, 11 qualified creditors.<sup>103</sup> Accordingly, Mr. Terry has met his burden of showing that the Alleged Debtors have less than 12 creditors for section 303(b) purposes, and that he, as the sole petitioning creditor, was permitted to file the Involuntary Petitions. While Mr. Terry has made additional arguments as to why certain of these 11 creditors should not be counted as creditors for purposes of section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, the court does not believe it necessary to address these arguments at this time.<sup>104</sup>

<sup>103</sup> To be clear, the court believes that even on these 11, there are likely bona fide disputes as to the liability or amount that Acis LP has—as opposed to the liability or amount that Highland or other insiders bear responsibility.

<sup>104</sup> Moreover, as previously stated, since the court has determined there are fewer than 12 creditors, the court need not address whether there is a “special circumstances” exception to the statutory requirements of section 303, in situations where an alleged debtor may have engaged in fraud, schemes, or artifice to thwart a creditor or creditors. See, e.g., In re Norriss Bros. Lumber Co., 133 B.R. 599 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 1991); In re Moss, 249 B.R. 411 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2000); In re Smith, 415 B.R. 222 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009).

B. Are the Alleged Debtors Generally Paying Their Debts as They Become Due?

Section 303(h) of the Bankruptcy Code requires that a court shall enter order for relief in an involuntary case “if ... (1) the debtor is generally not paying such debtor's debts as such debts become due unless such debts are the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount . . . .”<sup>105</sup> Again, the burden is on the Petitioning Creditor to prove this element by a preponderance of the evidence.<sup>106</sup> The determination is made as of the filing date of the Involuntary Petitions.<sup>107</sup> In determining whether an alleged debtor is generally paying its debts as they come due, courts typically look to four factors: (i) the number of unpaid claims; (ii) the amount of such claims; (iii) the materiality of the non-payments; and (iv) the nature of the debtor's overall conduct in its financial affairs.<sup>108</sup> No one factor is more meritorious than another; what is most relevant depends on the facts of each case.<sup>109</sup> Courts typically hold that “generally not paying debts” includes regularly missing a significant number of payments or regularly missing payments which are significant in amount in relation to the size of the debtor's operation.<sup>110</sup>

Furthermore, any debt which the alleged debtor is not current on as of the petition date should be considered as a debt not being paid as it became due.<sup>111</sup>

Here, the court concludes that the creditors of the Alleged Debtors—what few there are—are generally not being paid as their debts have become due (except for perhaps four<sup>112</sup> that are relatively insignificant and which may also be able to look to Highland for payment). Mr. Terry has met his burden by a preponderance of the evidence as to section 303(h) of the Bankruptcy Code.

C. With the Section 303 Statutory Requirements Being Met by the Petitioning Creditor, Should the Court, Nonetheless, Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions Because They Were Filed in Bad Faith?

Despite Mr. Terry meeting the necessary statutory requirements for this court to enter orders for relief as to the Alleged Debtors pursuant to section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code, the Alleged Debtors have argued that the Involuntary Petitions must, nonetheless, be dismissed because they were filed in “bad faith” by Mr. Terry. As support for this argument, the Alleged Debtors rely primarily on the Third Circuit’s decision in In re Forever Green Athletic Fields, Inc., 804 F.3d 328 (3d Cir. 2015). While the court certainly acknowledges that authority exists in other circuits that suggests that dismissal of an involuntary bankruptcy case may be appropriate—even when section 303’s statutory requirements have been met—based upon an independent finding of “bad faith,” the court need not ultimately decide the efficacy or applicability of such authority, because the court does not believe that the evidence demonstrated any “bad faith” on the part of Mr. Terry (or his counsel) in filing the Involuntary Petitions. Indeed, the evidence suggested that Mr. Terry and his counsel filed the Involuntary Petitions out of a legitimate concern that Highland was dismantling and denuding Acis LP of all of its assets and value and that a bankruptcy filing was the most effective and efficient way to preserve value for the Acis LP creditors. The court concludes that Mr. Terry was wholly justified in pursuing the Involuntary Petitions.

N.D. Tex. 2009) (while the debtor was paying small recurring debts, he was not paying 99 percent of his debts in the aggregate amount and thus was not generally paying his debts as they became due).

D. Should This Court, Nonetheless, Abstain and Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions Pursuant to Section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code?

Section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that:

- (a) The court, after notice and a hearing, may dismiss a case under this title, or may suspend all proceedings in a case under this title, at any time if—
- (1) the interests of creditors and the debtor would be better served by such dismissal or suspension; . . .<sup>113</sup>

Courts construing section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code have found that abstention in a properly filed bankruptcy case is an extraordinary remedy.<sup>114</sup> Moreover, granting an abstention motion pursuant to section 305(a)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code requires more than a simple balancing of harm to the debtor and creditors; rather, the interests of both the debtor and its creditors must be served by granting the request to abstain.<sup>115</sup> The moving party bears the burden to demonstrate that dismissal benefits the debtor and its creditors.<sup>116</sup> Courts must look to the individual facts of each case to determine whether abstention is appropriate.<sup>117</sup>

Case law has set forth a litany of factors to be considered by the court to gauge the overall best interests of the creditors and the debtor for section 305(a)(1) purposes:

- (1) the economy and efficiency of administration;
- (2) whether another forum is available to protect the interests of both parties or there is already a pending proceeding in state court;
- (3) whether federal proceedings are necessary to reach a just and equitable solution;
- (4) whether there is an alternative means of achieving an equitable distribution of assets;
- (5) whether the debtor and the creditors are able to work out a less expensive out-of-court arrangement which better serves all interests in the case;
- (6) whether a non-federal insolvency has proceeded so far in those proceedings that it would be costly and time consuming to start afresh with the federal bankruptcy process; and
- (7) the purpose for which bankruptcy jurisdiction has been sought.<sup>118</sup>

While all factors are considered, not all are given equal weight in every case and the court should not conduct a strict balancing.<sup>119</sup>

i. Factor 1: The Economy and Efficiency of Administration.

S.D.N.Y. 2007); but see Spade, 258 B.R. at 231-32 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2001) (applied a four criteria test in evaluating section 305 abstention which included: (1) the motivation of the parties who sought bankruptcy jurisdiction; (2) whether another forum was available to protect the interests of both parties or there was already a pending proceeding in state court; (3) the economy and efficiency of administration; and (4) the prejudice to the parties). The Alleged Debtors cite to the case of In re Murray, 543 B.R. 484 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2016), in particular, as support for why this court should abstain under section 305(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and dismiss the Involuntary Petitions. However, in Murray, Judge Gerber was analyzing dismissal of an involuntary proceeding pursuant to section 707 of the Bankruptcy Code, more specifically for “cause,” and not based upon abstention under section 305(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. Thus, the court is not convinced Murray is relevant to this court’s section 305 abstention analysis.

The economy and efficiency of administering a case in the bankruptcy court is routinely evaluated in considering abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code. Here, the evidence suggests that the most economical and efficient forum for these parties to resolve their disputes is the bankruptcy court. The court heard ample evidence that the Alleged Debtors are already, essentially, in the process of being liquidated by Highland. This is not a situation where an ably-functioning, going-concern business is being foisted in disruptive fashion into a bankruptcy.<sup>120</sup> Because of the fact that the Alleged Debtors are already in the process of being liquidated, the bankruptcy court (and not a state court) is the most efficient and economical forum to complete this liquidation and distribute whatever assets remain to creditors in accordance with the distribution scheme set forth in the Bankruptcy Code and with the oversight of a neutral third-party trustee. Thus, with the bankruptcy court being the more economic and efficient forum for administering this case, this factor goes against abstention.

- ii. Factors 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6: Whether Another Forum is Available to Protect the Interests of Both Parties or There is Already a Pending Proceeding in State Court; Whether Federal Proceedings are Necessary to Reach a Just and Equitable Solution; Whether There is an Alternative Means of Achieving an Equitable Distribution of Assets; Whether the Debtor and the Creditors are Able to Work Out a Less Expensive Out-of-Court Arrangement Which Better Serves All Interests in the Case; and Whether a Non-Federal Insolvency Has Proceeded so Far in Those Proceedings That it Would Be Costly and Time Consuming to Start Afresh With the Federal Bankruptcy Process.

<sup>120</sup> See, e.g., In re The Ceiling Fan Distrib., Inc., 37 B.R. 701 (Bankr. M.D. La. 1983) (noting that while the dissection of a living business may not properly be the business of a bankruptcy court, the division of a “carcass” and the reclamation of pre-petition gouging may well be); In re Bos, 561 B.R. 868, 898-99 (Bankr. N.D. Fla. 2016) (citing as one of the reasons to abstain under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code the fact that entities and subsidiaries under the alleged debtor’s umbrella were still operating successful businesses and had employed more than 500 people); but see Remex Elecs. Ltd. v. Axl Indus., Inc. (In re Axl Indus., Inc.), 127 B.R. 482, 484-86 (S.D. Fla. 1991) (in affirming the bankruptcy court’s decision to dismiss an involuntary bankruptcy case, the district court also found that “the interests of a defunct business enterprise would be little affected by the pendency of a bankruptcy proceeding,” which the district court believed favored abstention).

The court believes that factors 2-6 should be grouped together for purposes of its abstention analysis, since all of these factors specifically touch on the availability of an alternative forum to achieve an equitable distribution.<sup>121</sup> By way of example, where bringing a case into the bankruptcy court would simply add an additional layer of expense to the resolution of a two-party dispute and another forum already provides a suitable place to resolve the dispute, some courts have found that abstention is the more appropriate choice since keeping the case would transform the bankruptcy process into a collection device.<sup>122</sup> Here, the Alleged Debtors have repeatedly argued that, because there is already pending state court litigation involving Mr. Terry, Highland, and the Alleged Debtors, these cases should be dismissed and the parties should go back to state court to resolve their issues. The court does not agree for several reasons.

First, it is worth noting that this court has already heard multiple days of evidence in this case (including almost five days just for the Trial) and would certainly not be “starting afresh” by any means if things go forward in the bankruptcy court. Additionally, while the Alleged Debtors have argued that a significant amount of attorney’s fees have already been spent litigating this case in state court (which they believe supports abstention), the court surmises that these fees have not been wasted dollars, as the money expended by the parties developed discovery of facts that could assist a bankruptcy trustee in pursuing avoidance actions that may be viable and might lead to value that could pay creditors’ claims.<sup>123</sup>

Second, this court heard considerable evidence involving potentially voidable transfers that may have occurred involving the Alleged Debtors and Highland/Highland-affiliates and, while the state court certainly provides a forum for eventually bringing fraudulent transfer claims, the court also heard evidence that none of these claims have actually been brought in the state court.<sup>124</sup> Moreover, to the extent fraudulent transfer claims were to be pursued in state court and were successful, the state court would still need the ability to reach the assets of alleged fraudulent transfer recipients (which, in this situation, include certain Highland-affiliates located in the Cayman Islands). The bankruptcy court has concerns whether a state court process could efficiently accomplish this task.<sup>125</sup> Similarly, it is worth noting that, while a request for a receiver was filed in the state court by Mr. Terry, such request had not yet been heard and decided by the state court. Thus, at the present time, it does not appear that there is an alternative forum to address the pertinent issues in this case, without the necessity of significant, additional steps being taken by the parties in the state court.

Third, this court believes that a federal bankruptcy proceeding is necessary in order to achieve an equitable result in this case. Specifically, the court heard evidence from the Alleged Debtors that, if this court chose to abstain and dismiss the Involuntary Petitions, the Alleged Debtors would ultimately pay all of their creditors in full, except for Mr. Terry. This clearly demonstrates how keeping the case in the bankruptcy court is necessary to allow an equitable distribution to all creditors, including Mr. Terry. Additionally, a federal bankruptcy court has certain tools available to it that are not available to a state court such as the ability to invalidate potential ipso facto clauses in contracts pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, sell assets free and clear of liens, claims and encumbrances pursuant to section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, and impose the automatic stay pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code. These are all useful tools available to the Alleged Debtors in a bankruptcy case that would be lost if this court were to ultimately abstain.

Finally, there was more than enough evidence showing the acrimonious and bitter relationship that exists between Mr. Terry and Mr. Dondero. Thus, the availability of an out-of-court arrangement being obtained in this case is, in this court's mind, slim to none.

In summation, the court finds that all of the factors above support this case staying with the bankruptcy court.

iii. Factor 7: The Purpose for Which Bankruptcy Jurisdiction Has Been Sought.

The Alleged Debtors have repeatedly argued that Mr. Terry filed this case in bad faith and as a litigation tactic to gain some sort of advantage in the state court proceedings. The court has already found above that these cases were not filed in bad faith and that Mr. Terry has met the necessary statutory requirements of section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code. Moreover, it is worth noting that at least one court has stated that the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition is always a "litigation tactic," but whether the filing is inappropriate for abstention purposes is a fact-dependent determination.<sup>126</sup> Here, the facts show that there was no inappropriateness behind Mr. Terry's decision to file the Involuntary Petitions. Specifically, Mr. Terry repeatedly and credibly testified that the purpose for filing the Involuntary Petitions was to ensure that creditors (including him) were treated fairly and received an equal distribution from the Alleged Debtors' assets, not to gain some sort of advantage in the state court. This testimony was absolutely consistent with additional evidence showing that, since the entry of the arbitration award, there has been a calculated effort (largely by Highland) to effectively liquidate the Alleged Debtors. Unlike the bankruptcy court in In re Selectron Mgmt. Corp.,<sup>127</sup> which had no evidence or "smoking gun" showing that steps were being taken by the alleged debtor to evade payment on the petitioning creditor's judgment, thereby necessitating abstention, this court has heard ample evidence showing that the Alleged Debtors, with the aid of Highland, were transferring assets away from the Alleged Debtors, so that Mr. Terry would have nowhere to look at the end of the day.

In light of the court's analysis of all the seven factors above, the Alleged Debtors have not credibly shown how both the Alleged Debtors and the creditors are better served outside of bankruptcy. If this matter were to remain outside of bankruptcy, there seems to be a legitimate prospect that the Alleged Debtors and Highland will continue dismantling the Alleged Debtors, to the detriment of Acis LP creditors. Abstention would fly in the face of fundamental fairness and the principles underlying the Bankruptcy Code.

Beyond just addressing the factors above, the Alleged Debtors have also argued that, if this court were to not abstain under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code, there would be Sept. 16, 2008) (finding that where the filing of a voluntary chapter 11 did not appear to be about insuring a distribution to creditors or winding down or giving a soft landing to a business or avoiding dismantling and dissipation of valuable assets or preserving avoidance actions, but rather was about changing the forum of ongoing litigation between the parties, abstention under section 305 was proper).

significant harm to the “equity” of the Alleged Debtors. Specifically, the Alleged Debtors have argued that, if this court were to enter orders for relief, the equity would be forced to “call” and ultimately liquidate CLO 2014-3 (and perhaps all of the CLOs Acis LP manages), resulting in substantial losses to the equity on their investments. First, to be clear, the current equity of the Alleged Debtors is being held by a Highland-affiliate called Neutra, Ltd., which actually only became the equity of the Alleged Debtors on December 19, 2017. But this is not the “equity” being referred to by the Alleged Debtors in its argument. Rather, the so-called “equity,” about which the Alleged Debtors seemed so concerned, is actually certain parties that own the equity of the entity that owns the equity in the CLOs—which includes (a) an unnamed third-party investor out of Boston (49%),<sup>128</sup> (b) a charitable foundation managed by a Highland-affiliate (49%), and (c) Highland employees (2%). However, abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code does not require this court to look at what is in the best interests of these third-parties (who are not current creditors or interest holders of the Alleged Debtors), but rather what is in the best interests of the Alleged Debtors and the creditors. Accordingly, the Alleged Debtors’ effort to argue potential harm to these parties is misplaced for purposes of evaluating abstention under section 305 of the Bankruptcy Code, and, if anything, further highlights who the Alleged Debtors are really out to protect—Highland and Highland-affiliates. Moreover, the court would note that, even if there were to be a “call” and liquidation of CLO 2014-3, thereby ending the Alleged Debtors’ right to receive future management fees, there would still be potential assets for a chapter 7 trustee to administer such as chapter 5 causes of action (which include fraudulent transfers) as well as the Alleged Debtors’ contingent claim for approximately

$3 million in expense reimbursement owing by Highland CLO Management Ltd., as part of the November 3, 2017 transfer of the Acis LP Note Receivable from Highland. Thus, even if the so-called doomsday scenario of an equity call on CLO 2014-3 (or other CLOs) were to happen, there is still a potential benefit to creditors if this court chooses not to abstain.

III. CONCLUSION

In conclusion, these involuntary proceedings were appropriately filed under section 303, and orders for relief will be issued forthwith. This court declines to exercise its discretion to abstain, because a chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to halt the post-Arbitration Award transactions and transfers of value out of Acis LP, as discussed above. A chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to resolve the inherent conflicts of interest between the Alleged Debtors and Highland. A chapter 7 trustee will have tools available to preserve value that a state court receiver will not have. The bankruptcy court is single handedly the most efficient place to administer property of the estate for creditors. This is not just a two party dispute between Mr. Terry and the Alleged Debtors, and even if it were, dismissal or abstention is clearly not warranted.

Joint Plan of Reorganization,<sup>1</sup> as amended, modified or supplemented (the “Plan”), for the two above-referenced debtors: (1) Acis Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor-Acis”), a Delaware limited partnership, and (2) Acis Capital Management GP, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company (the general partner of the Debtor-Acis; collectively, the “Debtors”). The two chapter 11 cases have been administratively consolidated.<sup>2</sup>

The hearing on these matters transpired over multiple days in December 2018, and the court considered the testimony of more than a dozen witnesses, more than 700 exhibits, and hundreds of pages of legal briefing. Based on the foregoing, the court overrules all objections and will confirm the Plan, including all proposed modifications to it. The Chapter 11 Trustee has demonstrated, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the Plan, as modified, satisfies the applicable provisions of the Bankruptcy Code including but not limited to Sections 1122, 1123, 1127, and 1129 of the Bankruptcy Code.<sup>3</sup> The court also approves on a final basis the adequacy of the accompanying disclosure statement to the Plan, determining that it meets the requirements set forth in Section 1125 of the Bankruptcy Code. Plan is determined to have complied with the applicable Bankruptcy Rules and due process. The court provides reasoning for its ruling below. The court directs the Chapter 11 Trustee to submit to the court for signing the proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law and Order that were filed at DE # 814. This Bench Ruling supplements those Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law and Order and, where appropriate, should be considered additional findings and conclusions as contemplated by Fed. R. I. Background.<sup>4</sup>

The above-referenced bankruptcy cases (the “Bankruptcy Cases”) have been pending since January 30, 2018 and have been astonishingly contentious. The Chapter 11 Trustee has been in place since on or about May 14, 2018. The Plan (which is the fourth one proposed by the Chapter 11 Trustee) has been objected to by three related entities: (a) Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”), (b) Highland CLO Funding Ltd. (“HCLOF Guernsey”), and (c) Neutra, Ltd. (“Neutra Cayman”). The Chapter 11 Trustee loosely refers to these three objectors (the “Objectors”) as “the Highlands” because they are not only related to each other (i.e., they are all, directly or indirectly, part of the Highland 2,000-member corporate organizational structure), but they also have been in “lockstep” with one another in objecting to virtually every position taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases.<sup>5</sup> These Objectors’ parties-in-interest status will be explained below.

<sup>4</sup> For a complete set of background facts, the court incorporates herein by reference its Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Petitions, entered April 13, 2018. DE # 118. Exh. 243.

<sup>5</sup> It is also undisputed that, prior to the appointment of the Chapter 11 Trustee, the Debtors and Highland were affiliated and had a close relationship. Exhs. 17, 18, 22-27, 251, 619 & 649.

In simplest terms, the Debtor-Acis, which was formed in the year 2011, is primarily a CLO portfolio manager.<sup>6</sup> It manages hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of CLOs (which is an acronym for "collateralized loan obligations"). Specifically, it provides fund management services to various special purpose entities that hold CLOs. The Debtor-Acis was providing management services for five such special purpose entities (the "Acis CLOs") as of the time that it and its general partner were put into the involuntary Bankruptcy Cases. The parties have informally referred to the special purpose entities themselves as the "CLO Issuers" or "CLO Co-Issuers" but, to be clear, these special purpose entities (hereinafter, the "CLO SPEs") are structured as follows: (a) on the asset side of their balance sheets, the entities own pieces of senior debt owed by large corporations and, therefore, earn revenue from the variable interest payments made by those corporations on such senior debt; and (b) on the liability side of their balance sheets, the entities have obligations in the form of notes (i.e., tranches of fixed interest rate notes) on which the CLO SPEs themselves are obligated—the holders of which notes are mostly institutions and pension funds (these tranches of notes are usually rated anywhere from Triple A to Single B, depending upon things such as their interest rate and perceived risk). The CLO SPEs make a profit, based on the spread or "delta" between: (a) the variable rates of interest paid on the assets that the CLO SPEs own (i.e., the basket of senior notes); and (b) the fixed rates of interest that the CLO SPEs must pay on their own tranches of debt. At the bottom of the CLO SPEs' capital structure is their equity (sometimes referred to as "subordinated notes," but these "notes" are genuinely equity). As portfolio manager, the Debtor-Acis manages the CLO SPEs' pools of assets (by buying and selling senior loans to hold in the CLO SPEs' portfolios) and communicates with investors in the CLO SPEs. The CLO SPEs' tranches of notes are traded on the Over-the-Counter market.

To be perfectly clear, none of the CLO SPEs themselves are in bankruptcy. This has never been threatened or a concern. Only the Debtor-Acis which manages the CLO business is in bankruptcy. For the most part, the CLO SPEs have continued somewhat “business as usual” during the Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Cases (i.e., they have continued to receive interest payments on their baskets of loans; the usual interest payments on their tranches of debt have been paid;<sup>7</sup> and baskets of loans have been bought and sold from time to time). The CLO SPEs have retained their own separate counsel during the Chapter 11 cases, have appeared from time-to-time on matters, and are not currently objecting to the Plan. There is also an indenture trustee (U.S. Bank National Association) for the CLO SPEs' debt, that has seemingly faithfully carried on its role during the Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Cases without many objections to the bankruptcy process—only making occasional statements aimed at ensuring that the indentures for the CLOs are not interfered with or disrespected. The indenture trustee has retained and appeared through its own separate counsel during the Chapter 11 Bankruptcy Cases and is not currently objecting to the Plan.

Historically, the Debtor-Acis has had four main sets of contracts that were at the heart of its business and allowed it to function. The Chapter 11 Trustee has from time-to-time credibly testified that these agreements essentially created an “eco-system” that allowed the Acis CLOs to be effectively and efficiently managed by the Debtor-Acis.

<sup>7</sup> The evidence reflected that there have been a couple of occasions recently when there were insufficient funds to make distributions to the equity. E.g., Transcript 12/11/18 (PM) [DE # 790], at p. 15 (line 2) through p. 16 (line 18). But it appears to this court that these missed distributions were due to actions of Highland—as later explained herein—in improperly, surreptitiously attempting to liquidate the Acis CLOs, from the time period after the Chapter 11 Trustee was appointed, until the bankruptcy court issued an injunction to temporarily halt Highland's actions. E.g., Transcript 12/11/18 (AM) [DE # 789], p. 67 (line 14) through p. 68 (line 6).

1. The PMAs with the CLO SPEs.<sup>8</sup>

First, the Debtor-Acis has various portfolio management agreements (the “PMAs”) with the CLO SPEs, pursuant to which the Debtor-Acis earns management fees. The PMAs have been the primary “assets” (loosely speaking) of the Debtor-Acis (to be more precise, the PMAs are executory contracts pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code). They are what generate revenue for the Debtor-Acis.

2. The Sub-Advisory Agreement with Highland.<sup>9</sup>

Second, the Debtor-Acis had a Sub-Advisory Agreement (herein so called) with an insider, Highland (i.e., one of the Objectors). Highland’s “insider” status will be further explained below. Pursuant to this agreement, the Debtor-Acis essentially sub-contracted for the use of Highland front-office personnel/advisors to perform management services for the Debtor-Acis (i.e., so that the Debtor-Acis could fulfill its obligations to the CLO SPEs under the PMAs). The Debtor-Acis paid handsome fees to Highland pursuant to this agreement. This, too, was an executory contract pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code. As explained below, this agreement was rejected (with bankruptcy court approval)<sup>10</sup> by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, when the Chapter 11 Trustee credibly represented that he had not only found resources to provide these services at a much lower cost to the estate, but he also had begun to believe that Highland was engaging in stealth efforts to liquidate the Acis CLOs, to the detriment of the Debtor-Acis's creditors.<sup>11</sup>

3. The Shared Services Agreement with Highland.<sup>12</sup>

Third, the Debtor-Acis also had a Shared Services Agreement (herein so called) with Highland, pursuant to which the Debtor-Acis essentially sub-contracted for the use of Highland's back-office services (again, so that the Debtor-Acis could fulfill its obligations to the CLO SPEs under the PMAs). To be clear, the Debtor-Acis had no employees of its own—only a couple of officers and members. The Debtor-Acis paid handsome fees to Highland for the personnel and back-office services that Highland provided to the Debtor-Acis. This, too, was an executory contract pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code. As explained below, this agreement was also rejected by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases (with bankruptcy court approval) for the same reasons that the Sub-Advisory Agreement with Highland was rejected.

4. The Equity PMA.<sup>13</sup>

Fourth, until a few weeks before the Bankruptcy Cases were filed, the Debtor-Acis also had yet another portfolio management agreement (distinct from its PMAs with the CLO SPEs) whereby the Debtor-Acis provided services not just to the CLO SPEs themselves, but separately to the equity holder in the CLO SPEs. This portfolio management agreement with the equity holder in the CLO SPEs is sometimes referred to by the parties as the "ALF PMA," but it would probably be easier to refer to it as the "Equity PMA" (for ease of reference, the court will refer to it as the “Equity/ALF PMA”).<sup>14</sup> The Debtor-Acis did not earn a specific fee pursuant to the Equity/ALF PMA, but the Chapter 11 Trustee and certain of his witnesses credibly testified that the Debtor-Acis considered the agreement valuable and very important, because it essentially gave the Debtor-Acis the ability to control the whole Acis CLO eco-system—in other words, gave the Debtor-Acis the ability to make substantial decisions on behalf of the CLO SPEs’ equity—distinct from making decisions for the CLO SPEs themselves pursuant to the PMAs. The more credible evidence before the court suggests that the Equity/ALF PMA delegated to the portfolio manager (i.e., the Debtor-Acis) the right to control the terms of any liquidation of collateral in an optional redemption under the terms of the CLO indentures.<sup>15</sup> In any event, shortly before the Bankruptcy Cases were filed, agents of Highland and/or others controlling the Debtor-Acis (including but not limited to Mr. James Dondero—the chief executive officer of both the Debtor-Acis and of Highland): (a) caused the Debtor-Acis to terminate this Equity/ALF PMA (notably, the counter-party to this agreement, the equity owner, would have only been able to terminate it “for cause”<sup>16</sup>); and (b) then caused the equity owner to enter into a new Equity PMA with a newly formed offshore entity called Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. (“Highland HCF”).<sup>17</sup> Mr. Dondero, in addition to being the chief executive of Highland and the Debtor-Acis, also became the president of the newly formed Highland HCF.<sup>18</sup> The Equity/ALF PMA would have been an executory contract of the Debtor-Acis, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, if it had not been terminated shortly before the Bankruptcy Cases. The court has heard credible testimony that leads it to conclude that the Equity/ALF PMA would have been assumed by the Debtor-Acis, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, if not terminated by agents of Highland on the eve of bankruptcy. The court has heard credible testimony that it is important for a portfolio manager to have not only the PMAs with the CLO SPEs themselves, but also with the equity owners of the CLO SPEs.

II. A Few More Basics About CLOs.

In the world of CLOs (like other public debt instruments) there are occasionally redemptions, refinancings, and resets. A redemption is essentially when the equity in the CLO, before maturity, calls for the liquidation of the collateral in the CLO and the repayment of the tranches of notes, so that the CLO comes to an end. A refinancing is when a lower interest rate can be accomplished in the market place on the tranches of debt of the CLO, but the maturity date and other terms remain in place (similar to a refinancing on a home mortgage). This can happen typically after a two-year non-call period. A reset is when the maturity date, the reinvestment period, or other changes in the terms of a CLO (beyond simply interest rate) are accomplished.<sup>19</sup>

It should be noted that the top tranche of notes in the CLO SPEs (AAA-rated) is considered the “controlling” class, and a majority of holders in this class can terminate the CLO manager (i.e., the Debtor-Acis LP) for cause on 45 days’ notice, but these folks have apparently been content to ignore the Bankruptcy Cases and the fighting between the Debtor-Acis and

Highland (as further described below)—no doubt because they are earning their fixed income stream without a hitch. And the bottom tranche of “notes” in the CLO SPEs (the equity) has voting rights and is a capital provider and, in certain ways, controls the CLO SPEs, by virtue of having the ability to make a redemption call after a certain “no-call” period—which would force a liquidation of the basket of loans in the CLO, with the proceeds paying down the tranches of notes, starting at the top with the Triple A’s. But, by virtue of the Equity/ALF PMA, the Debtor-Acis was really acting for the equity. It seems substantially likely to the court that this is why Highland and its agents caused the Debtor-Acis to terminate the Equity/ALF PMA (which, as mentioned above, was an agreement that the equity could have only terminated “for cause”—and it appears there would have been no “cause”).

III. The Non-Insider Creditors.

The Debtor-Acis does not have many creditors. The non-insider creditors are, for the most part, Joshua Terry (“Mr. Terry”) and a few vendors (most of which are law firms).

Mr. Terry commenced the Bankruptcy Cases with the filing of involuntary bankruptcy petitions. Mr. Terry was the human being who formerly, quite successfully served as the portfolio manager for the Debtor-Acis for many years. Mr. Terry was terminated under contentious circumstances on June 9, 2016, after getting into disagreements with Mr. Dondero. Mr. Terry was technically an employee of Highland itself (like all employees are, in the Highland family of companies—no matter which subsidiary or affiliate they work for). After his employment termination, Highland sued Mr. Terry in September 2016. Mr. Terry asserted claims back against Highland and both of the above-referenced Debtors. The litigation was referred to arbitration, and, after a ten-day arbitration trial in September 2017 before “JAMS,” Mr. Terry obtained an Arbitration Award (herein so called), on October 20, 2017, jointly and severally, against both of the Debtors in the amount of $7,949,749.15, plus post-award interest at the legal rate. A Final Judgment (the “Terry Judgment”) confirming the Arbitration Award was entered on December 18, 2017, in the same amount as that contained in the Arbitration Award—$7,949,749.15.

Mr. Terry commenced the Bankruptcy Cases when he became concerned that the Debtor-Acis was being rendered insolvent and unable to pay creditors including himself, due to actions undertaken by Highland and its agents immediately after entry of the Arbitration Award (e.g., transfers of assets, contracts, and business away from the Debtor-Acis).

The Debtor-Acis also is obligated on large administrative expense claims, since: (a) a Chapter 11 Trustee was appointed very early—due to what the bankruptcy court perceived to be massive conflicts of interest with regard to the Debtors’ management; and (b) the Objectors have opposed virtually every action taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, resulting in many long hearings.

IV. The Objectors (all of which are “Insiders”).

There are no non-insider creditors objecting to the Plan. Mr. Terry supports the Plan. The CLO SPEs and Indenture Trustee do not oppose the Plan. None of the vendors oppose the Plan. The U.S. Trustee is not opposing the Plan. As a technical matter, two impaired classes of creditors voted to accept the Plan.<sup>20</sup> So who are the Objectors to the Plan (which Plan will be further described below) and what is their party-in-interest status here?

As earlier mentioned, the Objectors are: (a) Highland, (b) HCLOF Guernsey, and (c) Neutra Cayman. As noted earlier, the Chapter 11 Trustee frequently refers to them collectively as “The Highlands”—but the Objectors do not like this conflation. At one time Highland and

HCLOF Guernsey had the same lawyers. They do not anymore. However, they frequently file joint pleadings and take the same positions. Highland and Neutra Cayman do still have the same lawyers.

1. Highland.

Highland is a Dallas, Texas-based company that is a Registered Investment Advisor. Highland was founded in 1993 by Mr. Dondero, originally with a 75% ownership interest, and Mark K. Akada (“Mr. Akada”), originally with a 25% ownership interest. As mentioned earlier, Mr. Dondero is the chief executive of Highland. Highland, through its organizational structure of approximately 2,000 separate business entities, manages approximately $14-$15 billion of investor capital in vehicles including CLOs, private equity funds, and mutual funds. Highland provides employees to entities in the organizational structure, such as it did with the Debtor-Acis, through the mechanism of shared services agreements and sub-advisory agreements (as mentioned above). Notably, Highland’s chief executive, Mr. Dondero, served as the President of the Debtor-Acis at all relevant times prepetition.<sup>21</sup> Highland claims to be a large creditor of the Debtor-Acis for services provided to the Debtor-Acis under the Shared Services Agreement and the Sub-Advisory Agreement. The Chapter 11 Trustee disputes these claims and has asserted numerous claims back against Highland in an adversary proceeding (the “Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding”).

In any event, Highland is a disputed insider creditor. It is an “insider,” as contemplated by Bankruptcy Code section 101(31)(C), because it, beyond any shadow of a doubt, controlled the Debtor-Acis until these Bankruptcy Cases developed to the point of having a Chapter 11

Trustee take charge of the Debtor-Acis. Highland does not seem to dispute that it is an insider.<sup>22</sup> But, for the avoidance of doubt, Highland should be considered an insider of the Debtor-Acis for at least the following reasons: (a) the same human being (Mr. Dondero) was president of the Debtor-Acis and was the chief executive of Highland; (b) Highland's General Counsel, Scott Ellington, testified that Mr. Dondero controlled them both;<sup>23</sup> and (c) Highland provided the Debtor-Acis with employees and management services pursuant to the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement.<sup>24</sup>

Additionally, the court believes that the Chapter 11 Trustee made a convincing argument in connection with Plan confirmation (and his justification for the separate classification of Highland's claim in the Plan from other general unsecured creditors) that Highland should also be regarded as a "competitor" of the Debtor-Acis at this juncture, since they are both in the fund management business and Highland's control over the Debtor-Acis has now been divested. Highland's competitor status, in addition to its insider status, warrants additional scrutiny of its

<sup>22</sup> Under section 101(31) of the Bankruptcy Code, an insider includes certain enumerated parties, such as an officer of the debtor, affiliate, etc. Further, the list of enumerated "insiders" is not exclusive or exhaustive. See Wilson v. Huffman (In re Missionary Baptist Foundation of Am., Inc.), 712 F.2d 206, 210 (5th Cir. 1983). Recently, the United States Supreme Court stated: "Courts have additionally recognized as insiders some persons not on that [101(31)] list—commonly known as 'nonstatutory insiders.' The conferral of that status often turns on whether the person's transactions with the debtor (or another of its insiders) were at arm's length." U.S. Bank N.A. v. Vill. at Lakeridge, LLC, 138 S. Ct. 960, 963 (2018). The Fifth Circuit has noted that "cases which have considered whether insider status exists generally have focused on two factors in making that determination: (1) the closeness of the relationship between the parties and (2) whether the transaction . . . [was] conducted at arm's length." Browning Interests v. Allison (In re Holloway), 955 F.2d 1008, 1011 (5th Cir. 1992).

motivations in objecting to the Plan. More importantly, it provides a sound legal and business justification for separately classifying its claim in the Plan.

2. HCLOF Guernsey.

The second Objector, HCLOF Guernsey, is an entity formed in the island nation of Guernsey. It has two allegedly independent Directors from Guernsey who have provided testimony in connection with confirmation of the Plan. It was enormously clear to the court (as will be elaborated upon below) that the two Directors of HCLOF Guernsey are—stated in the kindest way possible—mere “figureheads” for HCLOF Guernsey and they defer to Highland entirely to tell them what to do, what to say, and when. In any event, HCLOF Guernsey is the owner of the equity in the CLO SPEs (as earlier mentioned, this equity is sometimes referred to as the “subordinated notes” in the CLO SPEs). According to HCLOF Guernsey's 2017 Annual Report and Audited Financials, all of its subordinated notes issued by the Acis CLOs are physically held at and are pledged to HCLOF Guernsey's lender, NexBank, which happens to be a Dallas bank that is an affiliate of Highland.<sup>25</sup> HCLOF Guernsey was created in the year 2015 and was formerly known as “ALF.”<sup>26</sup> Its name was changed on October 30, 2017 (ten days after Mr. Terry's Arbitration Award was entered), to allegedly distance itself from the Debtor-Acis. The equity owner HCLOF Guernsey, in turn, has three equity owners: (i) a 49% equity owner that is a charitable fund (i.e., a donor advised fund or “DAF”) that was seeded with contributions from Highland, is managed/advised by Highland, and whose independent trustee is a long-time friend of Highland's chief executive officer, Mr. Dondero; (ii) 2% is owned by Highland employees; and (iii) a 49% equity owner that is a third-party institutional investor based in

Boston, Massachusetts that only recently invested in HCLOF Guernsey (i.e., in November 2017, just after the Terry Arbitration Award was issued), and desires to remain passive and anonymous (hereinafter, the “Passive Investor”).<sup>27</sup> Notably, the Debtor-Acis itself owned a small percentage of HCLOF Guernsey, in addition to providing management services to it, until October 24, 2017 (four days after the Terry Arbitration Award was issued).

The court has allowed HCLOF Guernsey to vigorously participate in the confirmation hearing (and other hearings during the Bankruptcy Cases), although its party-in-interest status has been questionable. So how is HCLOF Guernsey a party-in-interest? The answer is a bit of a stretch—but the court has decided it is impacted by the Plan, so it should have the right to object. Its party-in-interest status has evolved during the Bankruptcy Cases.

First, early on in these Bankruptcy Cases, HCLOF Guernsey (together with Highland) sued the Chapter 11 Trustee in the above-mentioned “Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding”—mostly, if not entirely, seeking injunctive relief. At that point, the Chapter 11 Trustee treated HCLOF Guernsey as a disputed creditor,<sup>28</sup> since it was seeking equitable relief that could arguably be monetized.<sup>29</sup> However, HCLOF Guernsey subsequently withdrew its requests for relief in that Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. But then, the Chapter 11 Trustee subsequently filed claims against HCLOF Guernsey in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding (along with his claims against Highland and a couple of other Highland entities) asserting avoidance actions and other causes of action against HCLOF Guernsey (among other <sup>27</sup> The testimony was that the Passive Investor committed to a $150 million investment ($75 million immediately and $75 million callable over the next several years).

things, the Chapter 11 Trustee alleged that HCLOF Guernsey schemed with Highland to terminate the Equity/ALF PMA, in a step toward systematically dismantling the Debtor-Acis of its value). Thus, HCLOF Guernsey may ultimately owe money to this estate. But most importantly, HCLOF Guernsey should be deemed a party-in-interest because of a proposed temporary injunction in the Plan that essentially would enjoin (for a finite, defined period) HCLOF Guernsey from exercising certain of its rights with regard to its equity in the CLO SPEs, pending resolution of the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. This temporary injunction in the Plan, directed towards HCLOF Guernsey and affiliates, will be further described below.

3. Neutra Cayman.

Neutra Cayman is a Cayman island exempted company that is the equity owner of the Debtor-Acis itself (in contrast to HCLOF Guernsey, which only owns equity in the CLO SPEs). Neutra Cayman only acquired its equity interest in the Debtor-Acis the day after the Terry Judgment was entered (on December 18, 2017), and for no consideration, from the Dugaboy Investment Trust (a family trust on which Mr. Dondero’s sister is named trustee, that previously owned 74.9% of the Debtor-Acis) and from Mr. Akada (who previously owned 25% of the Debtor-Acis).<sup>30</sup> The court concludes that Neutra Cayman has standing to object to the Plan,

<sup>30</sup> The court is repeatedly referring to the Debtor-Acis but, to be clear, there are two consolidated Debtors: Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (“Acis GP/LLC”). See note 2, supra. When Acis LP was first formed, it was owned by one general partner (Acis GP/LLC, with a .1% interest) and it had three limited partners: (a) the Dugaboy Investment Trust (a Dondero family trust of which either Mr. Dondero or his sister, Nancy Dondero, have been the trustee at all relevant times) with a 59.9% interest; (b) Mr. Terry with a 25% interest; and (c) Mr. Akada with a 15% interest. When Acis GP/LLC was formed (i.e., the .1% owner of Acis LP), its sole member was the Dugaboy Investment Trust. After Mr. Terry was terminated by Highland, his 25% limited partnership interest in Acis LP was forfeited and divided among the two remaining limited partners: Mr. Akada (increasing his interest by 10% up to 25%), and the Dugaboy Investment Trust (increasing its interest by 15% up to 74.9%). But, most importantly, on the day after entry of Mr. Terry’s Final Judgment (i.e., on December 18, 2017), both Mr. Akada and the Dugaboy Investment Trust conveyed their entire limited partnership interests in Acis LP—25% and 74.9%, respectively—to Neutra Cayman. The Dugaboy Investment Trust also conveyed its 100% membership interest in Acis GP/LLC to Neutra Cayman.

since it is an equity owner of the Debtors (albeit only having acquired its equity about a month before the bankruptcy). As with HCLOF Guernsey, the court also concludes that Neutra-Cayman is absolutely, beyond any reasonable doubt, controlled by Highland, as explained further below.

V. The Plan.

The Plan is fairly simple, considering the complexity of the business and the relationships, and the contentiousness of the Bankruptcy Cases. Again, there aren't many creditors.

The Plan proposes<sup>31</sup> that the Debtor-Acis, as a "Reorganized Debtor," will continue with the business operations of the Debtors after the Effective Date<sup>32</sup> of the Plan. Specifically, the Debtor-Acis will assume, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code, its CLO PMAs and continue to serve as the portfolio manager to the CLO SPEs (and as to any resets of the CLOs therein). The Reorganized Debtor will continue to earn fees and will pay claims from post-Effective Date income as provided in the Plan. The Reorganized Acis will actively pursue additional fund management contracts. Again, there is no objection by the CLO SPEs to the Plan, and the indenture trustee on the tranches of CLO notes has no objection.

Mr. Terry (again, the former human manager of the Debtor-Acis and also the largest creditor) shall receive 100% of the equity interests in the Reorganized Debtor, in exchange for a negotiated $1 million reduction in his partially secured claim.<sup>33</sup> The remainder of his claim will

<sup>32</sup> The "Effective Date" is defined, essentially, as the first business day which is fourteen (14) days after entry of an order confirming the Plan, if the confirmation order is not stayed.

<sup>33</sup> Mr. Terry has asserted partial secured status as to his claim in the proofs of claim he has filed in these cases. The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that there was no other logical party to take the equity of be treated as an unsecured claim. Each unsecured creditor will receive on the Plan Effective Date an unsecured cash flow note in the full amount of its claim, which notes will mature three years after the Effective Date of the Plan, with equal quarterly payments of principal and interest, at 5% interest per annum. These cash flow notes are expected to yield payment in full (actually 102%) to the unsecured creditors.<sup>34</sup>

As for the sub-advisory and shared services agreements with Highland, as noted earlier, the Chapter 11 Trustee, with bankruptcy court approval, has already (as of August 2018) rejected these during the Bankruptcy Cases, pursuant to section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code. The Chapter 11 Trustee caused the Debtor-Acis to subsequently contract, with bankruptcy court approval, with a different entity, Brigade Capital Management, L.P. (“Brigade”), to provide the sub-advisory and shared services going forward, for a minimum two-year term (unless the Reorganized Debtor and Brigade otherwise agree), at a much cheaper cost than Highland.<sup>35</sup> Thus, Brigade will provide sub-servicing and sub-advisory services to the Reorganized Debtor.

the Reorganized Debtor, at this juncture, and that he had negotiated this reduction to Mr. Terry’s secured claim, and he thought it was justified by the circumstances of this case. While the Objectors have argued that the secured status of Mr. Terry’s claim may be subject to challenge under section 547(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, section 547(b) is discretionary (e.g., a “trustee may avoid any transfer” that might be avoidable as a preference). The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly emphasized that this was negotiated treatment of an asserted secured claim, and he had no “exclusivity” on proposing a plan if someone else had wanted to propose something different. Transcript 12/11/18 (AM) [DE # 789], at p. 70 (line 3) through p. 71 (line 2).

<sup>34</sup> Insider claims—namely Highland—are separately classified from general unsecured claims under the Plan. To the extent such claims are ultimately allowed (after any allowed defenses and offsets), and to the extent such claims are not equitably subordinated by Bankruptcy Court adjudication, these claims will receive the same treatment as other general unsecured claims (cash flow notes). To the extent any of these claims are ultimately allowed but equitably subordinated, they will receive subordinated promissory notes, accruing interest at 5% per annum, that will not be payable until all non-subordinated claims have been paid in full (they will have maturity dates to occur on the earlier of: (i) the date that is two years after the date all Unsecured Cash Flow Notes have been paid in full, or (ii) five years after the Effective Date). The expected recovery under the Plan for the insider claims is from 65% to 100%.

As for the Equity/ALF PMA, it is not an agreement with the Debtor-Acis anymore to either be assumed or rejected, pursuant to section 365. However, in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding, the Chapter 11 Trustee seeks to avoid the termination of the Equity/ALF PMA. Pursuant to the Plan, the Reorganized Debtor will be vested with certain Assets of the Debtors, including Estate Claims and Estate Defenses, to be administered and liquidated by the Reorganized Debtor.

1. The Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding (Adv. Proc. No. 18-03212).

Suffice it to say that the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding is a somewhat significant part of the Plan; it is what justifies the temporary injunction that is a critical part of the Plan. With regard to the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding, the Defendants in it (there are five of them) are: (i) Highland; (ii) HCLOF Guernsey; (iii) Highland HCF (i.e., the Cayman Island entity that was recently formed to essentially replace the Debtor-Acis under the Equity/ALF PMA); (iv) Highland CLO Management, Ltd. (“Highland Management”) (an entity registered in the Cayman Islands on October 27, 2017—seven days after Mr. Terry’s Arbitration Award); and (v) Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd. (yet another entity incorporated in the Cayman Island on October 27, 2017). The Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding is essentially a multi-faceted fraudulent transfer action. The statutory predicates for the relief sought are sections 502, 542, 544, 547, 548, and 550 of the Bankruptcy Code and Texas Business & Commerce Code § 24.001 et seq. (“TUFTA”).

Distilled to its essence, the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding argues that Highland, along with its related Co-Defendants, orchestrated a systematic transfer of value away from the Debtor-Acis to other Highland entities (all of those transferee-entities are offshore entities—whereas the Debtor-Acis is a Delaware entity), beginning almost immediately after Mr. Terry was terminated in June 2016, and continuing on during Mr. Terry’s litigation/arbitration with the Debtor-Acis, and then rapidly unfolding after the Arbitration Award. This was allegedly done to denude the Debtor-Acis of value and make the Debtors “judgment proof.” This was allegedly also done to ensure that the Debtor-Acis's very valuable business as portfolio manager would be taken over by other Highland entities and remain under Highland’s and Mr. Dondero's control.<sup>36</sup>

The evidence is rather startling on this point. Among other things, pursuant to amendments made to the Debtor-Acis’s Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreements with Highland, starting soon after Mr. Terry was terminated, the fees owed by the Debtor-Acis to Highland under these agreements shot up to an enormously higher level. Then, in April 2017, a new CLO was issued (or actually a former Acis CLO was reset) and a new Highland-affiliated Cayman Island entity was ultimately put in place to manage it instead of the Debtor-Acis (even though the Debtor-Acis managed all other CLOs in the Highland corporate empire). Numerous other transactions were undertaken through the Fall of 2017, removing assets and agreements away from the Debtor-Acis. For example, a multi-million dollar note receivable owed to the Debtor-Acis by Highland<sup>37</sup> was transferred out of the Debtor-Acis,<sup>37</sup> and

shares in HCLOF Guernsey held by the Debtor-Acis were sold back to HCLOF Guernsey (four days after the Arbitration Award). And then the Equity/ALF PMA was terminated so that the Debtor-Acis would no longer have management-control over HCLOF Guernsey as its portfolio manager—arguably putting Highland in a position to liquidate the Acis CLOs and put the Debtor-Acis out of business. Specifically, on October 27, 2017, just seven days after Mr. Terry's Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis ostensibly terminated its own portfolio management rights under the Equity/ALF PMA<sup>38</sup> and transferred its authority and its valuable portfolio management rights—for no value—to Highland HCF, an affiliate of Highland. It appears that the only alleged consideration for these transfers, to the extent there was any, was the satisfaction of purported debts owed to other Highland entities or their representatives.

Acis appears to have received no or insufficient consideration for the Note Transfer. The primary consideration for the Note Transfer was an alleged payable due from the Debtor-Acis to Highland in the approximate amount of $7.5 million for participation fees, which was transferred to Highland Management shortly before the Note Assignment and Transfer Agreement was entered. The validity of the alleged “participation fees” is unknown. The remainder of the consideration for the Note Transfer is a promise to pay certain expenses of the Debtor-Acis, which has apparently never occurred. In any event, it appears highly likely that the Note Transfer took away the Note as an asset from which Mr. Terry could collect his judgment.

<sup>38</sup> As mentioned earlier, the Equity/ALF PMA provided that the Debtor-Acis could only be removed as portfolio manager by the equity owner (now known as HCLOF Guernsey) “for cause” at § 14(a)-(e). Exh. 11. Meanwhile, the Debtor-Acis could terminate the Equity/ALF PMA without cause upon at least ninety (90) days’ notice, pursuant to § 13(a)-(c). Exh. 11. It would appear that these terms were wholly ignored by the persons orchestrating the Equity/ALF PMA termination. It appears that the Debtor-Acis was simply manipulated to consent and agree to its removal and replacement as portfolio manager of HCLOF Guernsey. This transfer of the Debtor-Acis's portfolio management rights to the offshore entity Highland HCF was accomplished by way of a new portfolio management agreement entered into by the equity owner (now known as HCLOF Guernsey) and Highland HCF on October 27, 2017, which empowered Highland HCF with the same broad authority to direct the management of HCLOF Guernsey as was previously held by the Debtor-Acis LP under the Equity/ALF PMA. See Exh. 19, October 27, 2017 PMA §§ 1 & 5(a)-(q). This agreement appears to have been further solidified in a second portfolio management agreement dated November 15, 2017. Exh. 215. The Debtor-Acis received no consideration for this transfer.

The Highland Defendants argue that the Equity/ALF PMA (its termination being arguably the most significant transfer referenced in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding) did not have value. But the evidence convinces the court that it absolutely did. A witness, Mr. Zachary Alpern, credibly testified that the portfolio manager (under the Equity/ALF PMA) made decisions regarding the underlying financial instruments including seeking an optional redemption and negotiating a reset. Mr. Alpern also credibly testified about the importance, in the CLO industry, of the portfolio manager having control of a CLO's equity to ensure an "evergreen fee stream."<sup>39</sup> Additionally, Mr. Terry also credibly testified that the portfolio manager (not the CLO equity interest holder) has the right to control the terms of the liquidation of collateral in an optional redemption under the terms of the indentures.<sup>40</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee also credibly testified that the Equity/ALF PMA allowed the Debtor-Acis to have control of an optional redemption.<sup>41</sup> Finally, a witness, Mr. Klein, credibly testified about the value of the Equity/ALF PMA and the negative impact of its transfer on the Debtor-Acis LP.<sup>42</sup>

To be clear, Highland and HCLOF Guernsey have argued in opposition to the Chapter 11 Trustee's position that it is HCLOF Guernsey—the actual equity holder of the CLO SPEs—that had/has the absolute power and authority to control the CLO SPEs' destinies and it is ludicrous to suggest otherwise. However, not only does the Equity/ALF PMA appear to this court to have delegated the relevant power and authority to the Debtor-Acis, but Highland's own expert on this topic, Mr. Castro, testified that the “actual humans” who would make the decision for HCLOF Guernsey as to whether to request an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs were not the HCLOF Guernsey directors but, rather, Highland executives Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, and Highland employee Mr. Covitz (acting for Highland HCF).<sup>43</sup> Moreover, Mr. Alpern credibly testified that, before the Terry Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis, as the portfolio manager under the Equity/ALF PMA, rather than the HCLOF Guernsey’s directors, issued the notices of optional redemption for HCLOF Guernsey.<sup>44</sup>

The court concludes that the Chapter 11 Trustee has demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits with regard to his claims set forth in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. Therefore, the Temporary Injunction that is part of the Plan is supportable (as further explained below). Of course, the nature and extent of the rights ultimately recovered by the Debtor-Acis will either be determined in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding or, as HCLOF Guernsey’s own Guernsey expert conceded, in a binding arbitration in Dallas, Texas under the terms of the Equity/ALF PMA.<sup>45</sup>

2. The Plan Injunction.

The most controversial aspect of the Plan—the aspect of it that seems to be the primary focus of the Objectors—is a portion of an injunction in the Plan (the “Temporary Injunction”). The Temporary Injunction would temporarily enjoin the following parties from effectuating an optional redemption or liquidating the Acis CLOs and related actions: (i) Highland; (ii) HCLOF

Guernsey; (iii) CLO Holdco, Ltd. (the donor advised fund, seeded with Highland contributions and managed by Highland that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey); (iv) Neutra Cayman; (v) Highland HCF (the Cayman Island entity created shortly before the Bankruptcy Cases to replace the Debtor-Acis under the Equity/ALF PMA); (vi) Highland Management (the Highland-created entity that entered into a portfolio management agreement with a new Acis-CLO that was established in 2017); and (vii) any affiliates of Highland and their respective employees, agents, representatives, transferees, assigns, and successors.<sup>46</sup> This Temporary Injunction is proposed to only last until the earlier of when: (a) the creditors of the Debtors are paid in full; (b) resolution of the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding; (c) a material breach in the Plan; or (d) the bankruptcy court terminates the Temporary Injunction upon request of a party-in-interest. Fully consensual resets of the Acis CLOs are permissible if HCLOF Guernsey, as the equity owner in the CLO SPEs, chooses to agree to resets. The basis for the Temporary Injunction is as follows: The Chapter 11 Trustee has asserted numerous claims in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding against Highland, HCLOF Guernsey, and affiliates, including claims to recover the Debtor-Acis's rights under the Equity/ALF PMA.<sup>47</sup> The Temporary Plan Injunction essentially provides for the continuation, after the Effective Date, of injunctive relief that the bankruptcy court previously granted in its Preliminary Injunction Order (the "Preliminary Injunction") [DE # 21 in Adversary No. 18-03212-sgj] entered on July 10, 2018 in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. The Preliminary Injunction was originally set to expire by its own terms upon confirmation of the Plan but would be extended pursuant to an order confirming the Plan, through the Effective Date of the Plan.

<sup>46</sup> There is another portion of this Plan injunction that is more of a general plan injunction (i.e., very typical) that would prohibit actions against the Debtors, Reorganized Debtor and the Estate Assets, based on acts occurring before the Effective Date, which would be permanent and would not expire upon the occurrence of any event that causes the Temporary Plan Injunction to expire.

As the Fifth Circuit has stated, the four elements to justify a preliminary injunction are (a) substantial likelihood of success on the merits; (b) substantial threat that the plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury; (c) the threatened injury outweighs any harm the injunction might cause the defendant; and (d) the injunction is in the public interest.<sup>48</sup> Each element is present in these cases.

Immediate and Irreparable Harm. The court finds and concludes that the Temporary Injunction is legally permissible, necessary, and appropriate to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to the Reorganized Debtor (i.e., evisceration of the Acis CLOs, by parties with unclean hands, that would have no authority to effectuate a liquidation of the CLOs, absent the prepetition wrongful termination of the Equity/ALF PMA). Mr. Scott, a director of HCLOF Guernsey, testified that, absent the Temporary Plan Injunction, HCLOF Guernsey would call for an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs.<sup>49</sup> The testimony of Ms. Bestwick, the other director of HCLOF Guernsey, also implied that, when the injunction expires, HCLOF Guernsey would redeem the Acis CLOs so that they could once again be managed by Highland.<sup>50</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that if the Acis CLOs are liquidated, there is nothing for the Debtor-Acis to manage.<sup>51</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is very important because it protects the revenues under the Acis PMAs, which is a source of potential recovery to creditors under the Plan.<sup>52</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is a critical component of the Plan and that the Debtor-Acis would have no going concern value without it. In fact, without the Plan Injunction, Mr. Terry will be precluded from reorganizing the business and paying creditors.<sup>53</sup>

The Objectors have argued that the Chapter 11 Trustee cannot suffer irreparable harm because he has an adequate remedy at law. This argument misses the mark. The destruction of the Debtors' ongoing business, which has the potential to repay creditors under the Plan in two years, constitutes irreparable harm. The fact that the estate possesses a number of avoidance claims for damages against Highland and its affiliates, and could potentially obtain damages on such claims, does not render the destruction of the Debtor-Acis's ongoing business any less harmful. Indeed, according to the Fifth Circuit:

[T]he mere fact that economic damages may be available does not always mean that a remedy at law is 'adequate.' For example, some courts have found that a remedy at law is inadequate if legal redress may be obtained only by pursuing a multiplicity of actions.<sup>54</sup>

Likelihood of Success on the Merits. The Chapter 11 Trustee has also demonstrated a likelihood of succeeding on the merits in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding.

The record contains substantial evidence of both intentional and constructive fraudulent transfers with regard to the Equity/ALF PMA and other assets.<sup>55</sup> The numerous prepetition transfers that occurred around the time of and after the Terry Arbitration Award appear more likely than not to have been made to deprive the Debtor-Acis of value and with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Debtors' creditors. Highland's only purported business justifications for the prepetition transfers were that the Passive Investor demanded it and that the Debtor-Acis's brand was toxic in the market place.<sup>56</sup> However, these business justifications were not supported (and, in fact, were contradicted) by the evidence.

Indeed, while representatives of Highland and its affiliates said that the Passive Investor's demands were the reason for the termination (i.e., essentially a "transfer") of the Equity/ALF PMA, the Passive Investor's representative testified that this was untrue and that these alleged demands were never made by the Passive Investor.<sup>57</sup> In fact, the Passive Investor was just that—a passive, minority investor in HCLOF Guernsey with no ability to influence or control any of the actual investment decisions.<sup>58</sup> The only other business justification Highland and HCLOF Guernsey have suggested for the prepetition transfers was that the Debtor-Acis “was a shell” and not capable of being risk retention compliant.<sup>59</sup> However, Highland portfolio manager Hunter Covitz testified that in October 2017, prior to the Terry Arbitration Award, there was a structure in place that would comply with risk retention.<sup>60</sup> Mr. Covitz could not convincingly distinguish why the “shell” status of the Debtor-Acis was distinguishable from the “shell” status of other Highland-related entities that were the recipients of various fraudulent transfers.<sup>61</sup> Mr. Covitz also subsequently admitted that the Passive Investor did not request that the Debtor-Acis end its involvement with HCLOF Guernsey through the Equity/ALF PMA fraudulent transfer or request that ALF change its name to HCLOF [Guernsey].<sup>62</sup> Mr. Covitz’s testimony contradicted the testimony provided by Scott Ellington, General Counsel<sup>63</sup> and Mr. Dondero.<sup>64</sup> And, at bottom, if the Debtor-Acis was a thinly capitalized “shell,” it appears to be only because Highland systematically made it that way after the Terry Arbitration Award.

<sup>56</sup> Highland General Counsel Scott Ellington testified that the Passive Investor said it had no interest in doing business with the Debtor-Acis because the Debtor-Acis brand was purportedly toxic and, consequently, nothing associated with the Debtor-Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO. Exh. 23, Transcript 2/7/18 at pp. 55-58. Mr. Ellington further testified that the Passive Investor demanded that the Equity/ALF PMA be transferred. Exh. 23, Transcript 2/7/18 at pp. 203-204. Mr. Ellington also testified that, because the Passive Investor would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, it had the ability to "start calling the shots" and dictate the terms of any reset transactions. Exh. 23, Transcript 2/7/18 at p. 226. Additionally, Highland executive Mark Okada testified that a reset transaction could not be performed by the Debtor-Acis because the market would not accept the Debtor-Acis as a portfolio manager and the Debtor-Acis was no longer risk-retention compliant. Exh. 25, Transcript 3/23/18 at p. 53. Additionally, Mr. Dondero testified that the "Boston investor" deal was contingent on getting away from the Debtor-Acis and getting a new collateral manager. Exh. 25, Transcript 3/23/18 at pp. 143-144.

The evidence established overwhelmingly that there is a substantial likelihood that the transfers were part of an intentional scheme to keep assets away from Mr. Terry as a creditor. Highland put on an expert, Mr. Greenspan, who testified that he did not consider whether the Equity/ALF PMA transfer was an “actual” fraudulent transfer, but only considered whether the transfer was “constructively” fraudulent.<sup>65</sup> While Highland has taken the position that termination of the Equity/ALF PMA was not a transfer, Mr. Greenspan testified that the termination of a contract can constitute a transfer and acknowledged that the definition of a transfer in the Bankruptcy Code does not include a value component.<sup>66</sup>

Balance of Harms. The Chapter 11 Trustee has also shown the balance of harms weighs in his and the estates’ favor in granting the Plan’s Temporary Injunction. The Chapter 11 Trustee is entitled to the Temporary Injunction pending resolution of the claims asserted in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding. The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is important to the Plan, because it allows the cash flow from the CLO management to be collected by the Reorganized Debtor, and that is the source of revenue available at this time to pay creditors.<sup>67</sup> Mr. Terry also credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction is a critical component of the Plan necessary to preserve the Debtors’ going concern value and allow the Reorganized Debtor to generate new business and repay creditors.<sup>68</sup> Conversely, in this court’s view, there is no real harm to Highland or the Co-Defendants because they can ask for a reset under the Plan.<sup>69</sup> Mr. Scott, a director of HCLOF Guernsey, testified that Section 548(a)(1)(A) of the Bankruptcy Code only requires that a transfer be made with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud creditors. In the context of an intentionally fraudulent transfer claim, questions of value are immaterial. 11 U.S.C. § 548(a)(1)(A). The definition of “transfer” under the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (“TUFTA”) also does not include a value component. Tex. Bus. & Comm. Code Ann. § 24.002(12) (West, Westlaw through 2017).

HCLOF Guernsey can sell its interest in the subordinated notes in the market.<sup>70</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that the Temporary Plan Injunction would not impair the value of the subordinated notes because a rational investor would not want to liquidate the Acis CLOs, but rather would acquire them to do a reset under the Plan.<sup>71</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that even if the Acis CLOs are not reset, it still does not make sense to redeem the Acis CLOs.<sup>72</sup>

Public Interest. Finally, issuance of the Plan Injunction is consistent with public policy. Public policy favors the equitable collecting of a debtor's assets, maximizing the value of those assets, and distributing the proceeds in an orderly fashion in accordance with the priorities and safeguards set forth in the Bankruptcy Code, rather than in an uncontrolled, piecemeal, and potentially wasteful way. Public policy also supports successful reorganizations.<sup>73</sup> The public interest is furthered by confirming a plan that saves the Debtor-Acis's business operations and allows it to pay its creditors under a successful plan of reorganization. The public interest is also furthered by maintaining the status quo through the Temporary Plan Injunction so that the avoidance action relating to the Equity ALF PMA can be determined on its merits. The public interest is not furthered by allowing potential wrongdoers to complete the last step in what appears likely to have been a scheme to strip the Debtor-Acis of its assets, steal its business, and leave it unable to pay creditors. The public interest is not furthered by leaving the Debtors without sufficient resources to pursue and effectively litigate potentially valuable causes of action.

In sum, the court finds and concludes that the proposed Plan injunction (including the Temporary Injunction) is legally permissible and justified under all the circumstances. It is narrowly tailored to address the specific harm to which it is directed and comports with governing case and statutory authority and applicable rules of bankruptcy and civil procedure. The Plan Injunction is consistent with Fifth Circuit precedent.<sup>74</sup> Such an injunction would not violate section 524(e) of the Bankruptcy Code. That subsection provides that “discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt.”<sup>75</sup> The Plan Injunction would not affect the liability of any entity, or the liability of any property. The injunction would only temporarily prohibit Highland and its Co-Defendants from exercising one form of economic recourse, thereby preserving the status quo while the Chapter 11 Trustee and/or Reorganized Debtor has a fair opportunity to prosecute the

3. Feasibility of the Plan—Specific Findings and Conclusions Regarding Mr. Terry and Brigade.

The Objectors have challenged the feasibility of the Plan.<sup>79</sup> The court finds and concludes that the preponderance of the evidence supported the feasibility of the Plan. Among other things, the Chapter 11 Trustee credibly testified that Mr. Terry has an excellent track record as a portfolio manager, and that there is no reason why Mr. Terry will not be able to obtain new business—that is, new portfolios to manage which will provide additional revenue streams for the Reorganized Debtor.<sup>80</sup> The evidence was credible and compelling that Mr. Terry will be capable of fulfilling the equity owner position in the Reorganized Debtor (stepping in to essentially run the Reorganized Debtor) and will be able to ensure the feasibility of the Plan. He is well qualified to reorganize the Debtor-Acis. Mr. Terry testified that his role with the Reorganized Debtor will be similar to the role he very successfully performed for the Debtor-Acis.<sup>81</sup> The Debtor-Acis received numerous awards during Mr. Terry's service as the portfolio manager of the Acis CLOs.<sup>82</sup> The arbitration panel that issued the Arbitration Award found that Mr. Terry was terminated for essentially doing the right thing for investors.<sup>83</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that numerous market participants have expressed an interest in working with the Reorganized Debtor if the Plan is confirmed.<sup>84</sup>

Moreover, the court finds and concludes that Brigade (who stepped in as sub-advisor in place of Highland during the Bankruptcy Cases and is a registered investment advisor) is qualified to serve as a sub-advisor to the Reorganized Acis. Mr. Jared Worman, a portfolio manager for Brigade,<sup>85</sup> credibly testified that Brigade, founded in the year 2007, currently has $20 billion of total assets under management, $5 billion of which consists of six U.S. CLOs, two U.S. CDOs, and three European CLOs.<sup>86</sup> Mr. Worman credibly testified that Brigade has issued 17 CLOs and has reset or refinanced several of them.<sup>87</sup> Mr. Worman and Mr. Terry credibly testified that Brigade is willing to serve as sub-advisor to the Reorganized Acis for fifteen basis points.<sup>88</sup> Highland attempted to show with evidence and argument that Brigade had made some failed trades since stepping in as sub-advisor to the Acis CLOs and that this perhaps made them unfit to serve in this role. But Mr. Terry credibly testified that the fact that a few failed trades were made by Brigade does not make them unfit to serve as sub-advisor to Reorganized Acis, and that trades out of compliance with the applicable CLO tests occasionally happen, and Brigade has handled them appropriately.<sup>89</sup> In fact, the evidence suggested that at least ten failed trades occurred while Highland was acting as sub-advisor to the Debtor-Acis.<sup>90</sup>

Highland's suggestions that Brigade is not up to the task to manage the Reorganized Debtor are specious. Likewise, HCLOF Guernsey's insistence that it will not be getting the benefit of its bargain if the Acis CLOs are not managed by Highland personnel going forward appears to be a manufactured position aimed at thwarting Mr. Terry at all costs. Not only is there no credible evidence of Brigade mismanagement but, to the contrary, it appears that Highland (prior to the Debtor-Acis's rejection of the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shared Services Agreement), intentionally liquidated assets of the CLO SPEs and built up cash without reasonable justification. Specifically, Mr. Terry credibly testified that there were $85 million in purchases in the Acis CLOs in the hours leading up to the entry of the orders for relief, but virtually no purchases of loans in the CLOs afterwards—only sales.<sup>91</sup> And Mr. Worman further credibly testified that Highland, while acting as sub-advisor, allowed approximately $380 million in cash to build up in the Acis CLOs. Meanwhile, Brigade has subsequently reduced that cash balance by $280 million to approximately $100 million.<sup>92</sup> Mr. Worman also credibly testified that Brigade has purchased approximately $300 million in loans for the Acis CLOs.<sup>93</sup> The Chapter 11 Trustee and Mr. Terry both credibly testified that the build-up of cash in the Acis CLOs while Highland was sub-advisor, rather than the loans acquired by Brigade, left the Acis CLOs without sufficient interest income to make a distribution to the equity holders.<sup>94</sup> Certain contradictory testimony of Hunter Covitz was not convincing that: (a) there were very few conforming loans available to be purchased for the Acis CLOs in the approximately four months that elapsed between the entry of the Order for Relief and the time when Highland was terminated as sub-advisor;<sup>95</sup> and (b) it made more sense to accumulate cash to pay down the AAA notes rather than invest in new loans.<sup>96</sup> The court found more convincing the testimony of Mr. Terry: (a) that there was $310 billion of performing loans rated above CCC in the S&P loan index in May of 2018 available for purchase in CLO-6 that would have satisfied the weighted average life test;<sup>97</sup> (b) that Highland purchased loans for CLO-7 that would have satisfied the weighted average life constraints in the Debtor-Acis's CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6;<sup>98</sup> and (c)

4. Resets—Non-impairment of Anyone’s Rights.

The Plan only contemplates consensual resets of the Acis CLOs—in other words, only if HCLOF Guernsey requests resets.<sup>101</sup> Messrs. Worman and Terry both credibly testified that they believed the Reorganized Acis and Brigade could perform a consensual reset of the Acis CLOs.<sup>102</sup> Mr. Terry credibly testified that other asset managers have been able to issue or reset CLOs after a bankruptcy proceeding.<sup>103</sup> Mr. Terry also credibly testified that he wants to come to a resolution with HCLOF Guernsey and consensually reset the Acis CLOs.<sup>104</sup>

HCLOF Guernsey has taken the position that it and its new Passive Investor (new as of mid-November 2017—just before the Bankruptcy Cases) only want to be involved with CLOs that are managed by Highland or Highland affiliates. Is the Plan impairing their rights—to the extent the Plan (and any subsequent re-sets) brings in Brigade as the sub-advisor to the Reorganized Debtor (whereas Highland was in that sub-advisor role before)? It appears no. The <sup>100</sup> Highland has also argued that the Plan is not feasible because the administrative expense claims are extremely high (to which the Chapter 11 Trustee responds, it is of Highland’s making, since Highland has objected to literally every action proposed by the Chapter 11 Trustee). The court does not believe there is a legitimate feasibility problem here. Not only has the court not ruled yet on final professional fee applications, but the Chapter 11 Trustee represented that certain professionals have agreed to defer their fees (beyond payment in full on the Effective Date) as necessary.

Mr. Terry credibly testified that a reset of the Acis CLOs can occur after the expiration of the reinvestment periods of the Acis CLOs.<sup>110</sup> The Plan is feasible regardless of whether a reset of the Acis CLOs is requested by HCLOF Guernsey. Messrs. Phelan and Terry both credibly

VI. General Credibility Assessments.

In ruling in a contested matter such as confirmation, and weighing the preponderance of the evidence, the credibility of witnesses and contradictions in their testimony naturally can be significant. Here, there were some noteworthy problems and contradictions with some of the testimony provided by the Objectors' witnesses. They are summarized below.

1. Scott Ellington: A Seemingly Manufactured Narrative to Justify Prior Actions.

Scott Ellington testified on February 7, 2018 at the trial on the involuntary petitions, and the court was asked to consider his testimony again in connection with confirmation (he did not attend the confirmation hearing). He is the General Counsel, Chief Legal Officer, and a Partner at Highland. Mr. Ellington testified that the Debtor-Acis's name is "toxic" in the market place and that, due to the litigation with Mr. Terry and allegations in that litigation, "nothing can be associated with the Acis brand and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO."<sup>112</sup> Mr. Ellington elaborated that it had been determined in late 2016 or 2017 that re-sets or re-financings of the Acis CLOs were a prudent thing to pursue (in fact, there was indeed a trend of refinancings and resets for this vintage of CLOs in the market place) and, in connection with that, the Debtor-Acis's contracts and assets needed to be diverted to different, newly created entities because: (a) the "Acis" name was toxic and underwriters and investors were not going to be interested in re-financings or resets for CLOs managed by the Debtor-Acis;<sup>113</sup> and (b) the new Passive Investor wanted the Debtor-Acis out of the picture.<sup>114</sup> Mr. Ellington further elaborated: “The equity, you know, calls the tune, so to speak, in terms of the CLO . . .”<sup>115</sup> In summary, an overarching theme of Mr. Ellington’s testimony was that the Debtor-Acis was tainted or toxic in the marketplace and the Passive Investor wanted the Debtor-Acis out of the picture—thus, this was the motivation for the prepetition transactions orchestrated by Highland prior to the Bankruptcy Cases. The problems with the Scott Ellington testimony were at least two-fold. First, there is no credible evidence that the Debtor-Acis is/was toxic in the market place. In fact, in April 2017 (well after the litigation with Mr. Terry commenced), the Debtor-Acis issued a new CLO (CLO-7). And in market publications as recently as August 21, 2017, Highland was touting the Acis structure stating “our vehicle will allow us to issue between six and 12 CLOs over the next few years.”<sup>116</sup> Second, the Passive Investor denies demanding that the Debtor-Acis be removed as the CLO manager. Term sheets as recent as August 21, 2017 contemplated the Debtor-Acis as the continuing portfolio manager of CLOs, with apparently no protestations by the Passive Investor.<sup>117</sup>

2. Michael Pugatch: The Passive Investor Made Into a Scapegoat.

The reality is that Highland, indeed, started working on the concept of doing resets of some of the older vintage Acis CLOs in at least early 2017 (and perhaps late 2016). Highland, in fact, completed a reset of one Acis CLO in April 2017 (with the Debtor-Acis still in place as the portfolio manager for that reset in April 2017). As part of that process of implementing resets for the Acis CLOs, Highland worked on bringing in a new investor or investors to have a share of the equity tranche of the Acis CLOs. Highland finally obtained the commitment of the Passive Investor in November 2017, after starting initial discussions with them in the second quarter of 2017.<sup>118</sup> A representative for the Passive Investor referred to itself as “passive” in a deposition.<sup>119</sup> Concepts and documentation for the Passive Investor’s investment in the Acis CLOs were discussed for a while during 2017. As recently as August 2017, the negotiations with the Passive Investor appeared to contemplate the Debtor-Acis still as the portfolio manager for the CLOs.<sup>120</sup> Then the arbitration trial with Mr. Terry began in September 2017 and the Terry Arbitration Award was issued on October 20, 2017. Suddenly, it appears that the dismantling of the Debtor-Acis began with all deliberate speed. The court believes, based on the totality of the evidence, that it was Highland who did not want the Debtor-Acis as CLO manager going forward, so that Highland could keep reaping the benefits of the reset CLOs. Specifically, when deposed on the topic, a representative for the Passive Investor, Mr. Pugatch, denied the accuracy of Mr. Ellington’s testimony, stating that the Passive Investor “viewed Acis and Highland as interchangeable from the perspective of the—you know, the actual investment opportunity.”<sup>121</sup> When asked, “Are you aware that Scott Ellington, general counsel for HCM, testified that [the Passive Investor] said with absolute certainty that they had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was purportedly toxic and, consequently, nothing associated with Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO?” Mr. Pugatch testified that he had read that testimony and that the statement was not true.<sup>122</sup> He further stated that “the ultimate sort of name change did not come from [the Passive Investor].”<sup>123</sup> In fact, when further asked whether the Passive Investor knew why Acis CLO Funding Limited changed its name to Highland CLO Funding Limited (i.e., HCLOF Guernsey), Mr. Pugatch testified, “We were told that it was a change in the brand or the name, as requested by Highland.”<sup>124</sup> And when asked “Did [the Passive Investor] request that the name be changed?” he answered “No.”<sup>125</sup> When asked whether the Passive Investor considered “Acis toxic in the industry?” Mr. Pugatch answered: “No. What I would say is, when the suggested name change did occur, there were commercial reasons given to us as to why that would be beneficial in terms of the ongoing management of those CLOs and the intended investment thesis around the investment that we had made, which seemed to make commercial sense.”<sup>126</sup> When Mr. Pugatch was asked, “Those reasons were given by Highland, correct?” he replied “Correct” and confirmed that they were not demanded by the Passive Investor.<sup>127</sup> Mr. Pugatch was emphatic that the Passive Investor was just that—a passive investor—that did not have the ability to “start calling the shots” and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.<sup>128</sup> When asked if the Passive Investor was concerned about the Terry Arbitration Award, Mr. Pugatch replied: “The award itself, no. I think the only thing we were concerned about or focused on was that vis-à-vis our equity investment in Highland CLO Funding Limited and, in turn, the equity that that vehicle held in the various CLOs was appropriately, you know, ring-fenced or not exposed to any potential damages or economic loss in value as a result of that arbitration award.”<sup>129</sup>

The Passive Investor further testified that Brigade has “a fine reputation in the market” but that it had no interaction with them historically.<sup>130</sup> The Passive Investor also testified that it was concerned about the cash buildups that had happened recently due to actions while Highland had still been the sub-advisor on the Acis CLOs.<sup>131</sup>

3. The Seemingly Rehearsed Testimony of the Two HCLOF Guernsey Witnesses.

The court was presented with video depositions of HCLOF Guernsey’s two non-executive directors (i.e., its only directors): Mr. William Scott<sup>132</sup> and Ms. Heather Bestwick.<sup>133</sup> It was very apparent to the court that HCLOF Guernsey is controlled by Highland in every way. Putting things in the kindest way possible, Mr. Scott and Ms. Bestwick appear to be nominal figureheads who are paid to act like they are in charge, while they are not. They are both basically professional directors-for-hire, for companies that choose to form/organize in the nation of Guernsey.

Ms. Bestwick testified that she is a nonexecutive director for six companies in Guernsey (none of the others are in the CLO business).<sup>134</sup> She testified that she earned £35,000 per year to serve as a director of HCLOF Guernsey.<sup>135</sup> She testified that she was selected by Highland<sup>136</sup> and that Highland also made the decision to hire HCLOF Guernsey's law firm in the Bankruptcy Cases.<sup>137</sup> Ms. Bestwick, when questioned as to why the Equity/ALF PMA it had with the Debtor-Acis was terminated shortly after the Terry Arbitration Award was issued, testified that she was told it was "a condition precedent to the new Passive Investor" coming in and that she was told this by Highland.<sup>138</sup> She also testified that she had never talked to the Passive Investor (who, of course, is a 49% owner of HCLOF Guernsey)<sup>139</sup> or Grant Scott (the trustee of the charitable organization that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey).<sup>140</sup> She reiterated that she only talks to Highland employees. She also was under the impression that terminating the Equity/ALF PMA would improve marketability of the CLOs going forward but that it was the same people and "business as usual for us."<sup>141</sup> She testified that she learned of the Terry Arbitration Award in mid-April 2018 (some six months after the fact)<sup>142</sup> and “[y]ou’d have to ask Highland”<sup>143</sup> why it did not inform her sooner. Her testimony was clear that she defers to Highland on everything, stating that as directors they were “heavily reliant on our service providers, and that means Highland.”<sup>144</sup> With regard to a lawsuit that HCLOF Guernsey filed against Mr. Terry in Guernsey during the Bankruptcy Cases, she testified that it was neither her nor the other director, William Scott’s, idea.

Mr. Scott, the other HCLOF Guernsey director, is a “professional director” for 10-15 Guernsey companies<sup>145</sup>—all of which are “paying assignments.”<sup>146</sup> He became rather incensed when testifying, at the suggestion that he and Ms. Bestwick were not in control of HCLOF Guernsey, stating that board minutes and other documents would show that they took a great level of interest in running the company.<sup>147</sup> He testified that he earned £40,000 per year to serve as a director of HCLOF Guernsey and that, due to the extra work of the Bankruptcy Cases, he also was charging another £350 per hour, after the first 35 hours<sup>148</sup> (the court notes, anecdotally, that it required participation in court hearings by a director of HCLOF Guernsey each time that HCLOF Guernsey took a position in court). Mr. Scott confirmed that he was not aware of the litigation with Mr. Terry nor the Acis Bankruptcy Cases until April 2018.<sup>149</sup> He also testified that Highland had proposed the legal counsel HCLOF Guernsey used in the Bankruptcy Cases and that he had never disagreed with Highland’s advice.<sup>150</sup> He confirmed that all investment decisions were made by Highland and that he and Ms. Bestwick’s role was to “police” service providers.<sup>151</sup> Like Ms. Bestwick, Mr. Scott testified that they were told that the Passive Investor had made it a condition precedent to their investment in HCLOF Guernsey that “Acis depart.”<sup>152</sup> But he had not talked to the Passive Investor.<sup>153</sup> As if all this deference to Highland were not enough, HCLOF Guernsey’s lender is NexBank (an affiliate of Highland—which is based in Dallas, not Guernsey) and HCLOF Guernsey has given its actual equity notes to NexBank as security for its loans from NexBank.<sup>154</sup> Also, interestingly, when asked about the adversary proceeding that HCLOF Guernsey filed against the Chapter 11 Trustee a few months ago in the Bankruptcy Cases (i.e., the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding—it was originally commenced by Highland and HCLOF Guernsey as Plaintiffs), Mr. Scott testified that “we haven’t sued the trustee, he has sued us” but later acknowledged his mistake when corrected by counsel.

This court is not naïve—it realizes that so-called “fiduciary services firms” are apparently a typical thing in the world of off-shore jurisdictions that are large financial centers.<sup>155</sup> Maybe the system works, for the most part and in many business contexts. But not when trying to convince a bankruptcy court of the bona fides of transactions that look like attempts to denude another party of value and/or to thwart creditors. And not when accusations are made that you are the alter ego of the party (Highland) who orchestrated the company's creation. The evidence was overwhelming that: (a) the HCLOF Guernsey Directors do whatever they are told to do by Highland; (b) they do not talk to anyone else but Highland; (c) they have never challenged Highland; (d) they let Highland pick and consult with their lawyers; and (e) they were not made aware by Highland of the Terry Arbitration Award, the Terry Judgment, the involuntary bankruptcy petitions, or pleadings that lawyers filed in the Bankruptcy Cases on HCLOF Guernsey's behalf.

<sup>155</sup> During the testimony of both Ms. Bestwick and Mr. Scott, the court was reminded of an old TV commercial in which an actor states, “I am not a doctor, but I play one on TV.” The court could not help but conclude that these were not real directors but were playing them (when legally necessary).

In summary, the testimony of these two HCLOF Guernsey Directors was of little or no value in convincing the court that the Objector, HCLOF Guernsey, has valid concerns of its own (separate from Highland's) with regard to the bona fides of the Plan.

VII. Conclusion.

This Bench Ruling and Memorandum Opinion is intended to address some of the most pertinent facts and issues raised in connection with confirmation of the Plan. Among other things, the court believed it was necessary to stress, in a separate ruling: (a) the unique status of the Objectors (they are "insiders" as defined in the Bankruptcy Code whose prepetition actions suggest unclean hands—this seems highly relevant to consider, when there are no non-insider creditors or other relevant parties objecting to the Plan); (b) the appropriateness and legality of the proposed Plan Injunction that would temporarily prevent nonconsensual redemptions/liquidations (it is in all ways justified given the allegations in the Highland Entities Adversary Proceeding and under the traditional four-prong test for preliminary injunctions); and

(c) the feasibility of the Plan (Mr. Terry and Brigade are well qualified to perform their contemplated roles).

The court will separately sign the Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Order Confirming Plan submitted by the Chapter 11 Trustee to address all other relevant issues.

Impose, inter alia, 11 U.S.C. 363 [Case No. 18-30264-SGJ7, Docket No. 3; Case No. 18-30265-SGJ7, Docket No. 3] (the “303(f) Motion”) filed by Joshua Terry (“Terry”). In support of this Objection, Acis respectfully states as follows:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. Terry holds a state-court judgment against Acis and is one of 18 creditors of Acis. Terry initiated these involuntary chapter 7 cases—acting alone as opposed to in concert with other creditors as required by Section 303(b)(1) of Title 11 of the United States Code (the “Bankruptcy Code”) - as a bad-faith litigation tactic and attempt at forum shopping in the context of his longstanding dispute with Acis. Terry filed his involuntary petition against Acis LP at 11:57 p.m. on January 30 and against Acis GP on January 31 at 12:00 a.m. (the “Involuntary Petitions”). On January 31, Acis filed a Joint Motion to Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions (the “Motion to Dismiss”) and a Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(d) (the “Creditor List”). Acis’s Motion to Dismiss establishes that the Involuntary Petitions are fatally defective because Acis has more than 12 creditors, thereby requiring a minimum of 3 creditors to join in the filing of the Involuntary Petitions. Yet, Terry was the sole creditor to file.

2. The filing of the Involuntary Petitions filings was a transparent attempt to derail two imminent events. The first was a temporary injunction hearing that was scheduled to be heard in Dallas state court on January 31 (the “Temporary Injunction Hearing”). The second was the closing of a $420 million transaction involving the reissuance of CLO-3 (as detailed and defined below) (the “$420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction” or “Transaction”) that has been in the making since May 2017 and that was scheduled to close on February 1.

3. Terry sought a state-court injunction to prevent Acis from transferring a management contract (the “Collateral Management Agreement” or “CMA”) from Acis to a Highland entity as part of the Transaction. As will be explained, this CMA is central to Terry’s 303(f) Motion. The transfer of the CMA is a ministerial task that Acis is contractually required to perform and is the last remaining condition to close the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction. Terry has falsely and without any basis claimed that this CMA is worth multiple millions of dollars and that Acis is attempting to fraudulently transfer the CMA in order to avoid paying an $8 million judgment (that will be appealed) that Terry recently obtained against Acis. But, as set forth below, the facts are the opposite.

4. First, contrary to Terry’s unsupported assertions, the CMA has no value. Acis has no employees, and has never had any employees. Acis has always performed the management services required of it by the CMA by subcontracting those obligations to certain Highland entities (“Highland Servicers”). Thus, Acis receives management fees (the “cash inflows”) but then pays fees to the Highland Servicers (the “cash outflows”) under contracts that have been in place for years. Presently, the cash outflows under the CMA exceed the cash inflows that results in negative cash flow, and thereby rendering the CMA worthless.

5. Second, and a point that cannot be overstated, the very relief that Terry previously sought in state court, and now seeks in this Court, would cause the CMA to be terminated pursuant to its terms and thereby also render the CMA worthless. On January 29, Terry filed an application with the state court seeking the appointment of a receiver over Acis. In this Court, Terry has filed Involuntary Petitions against Acis. However, under paragraph 15 of the CMA, [1] the appointment of a receiver and [2] an involuntary bankruptcy petition that “remain[s] undismissed for 60 days and result[s] in an adjudication of bankruptcy or insolvency” are grounds for the CMA to be terminated and for Acis to be removed “for cause” as the collateral manager upon 30 days’ notice. On the one hand, Terry argues that the CMA is worth millions of dollars and asks this Court to preserve its value by preventing the CMA from being transferred as part of the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction. On the other hand, if Terry succeeds in his effort to throw Acis into bankruptcy, the CMA will be terminated and will cease to have any value. These undisputed facts expose Terry’s bad faith motive behind his state-court and bankruptcy-court filings. Ironically, the very relief requested by Terry in state court and in Bankruptcy Court regarding the CMA would itself destroy any value associated with the CMA by causing the CMA to be terminated.

6. So, why is Terry engaging in this act of self-immolation that will guarantee the CMA will be terminated and any value associated with it to be extinguished? The answer: to try to hold hostage the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction and extort a settlement. Terry’s motive is not to preserve the CMA as part of Acis’s assets that would be available to satisfy his judgment. As discussed herein, the CMA has no value and is going away regardless of whether or not the Transaction closes.

7. To fully understand the context of the 303(f) Motion, it is important to understand what transpired in the underlying litigation that resulted in the judgment that Terry obtained against Acis, which judgment Terry is now using as a pretext to throw Acis into bankruptcy and block the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction. Terry was an employee of Highland who was integrally involved in the formation and management of Highland’s CLO business, including CLO-3. In 2016, Highland fired Terry for cause for various acts of misconduct. Terry is persona non grata in the CLO industry because he secretly tape recorded his Highland colleagues, and no one in the CLO industry wants anything to do with Terry or Acis, and the Acis name is now toxic as a result of Terry's actions.

8. Upon being terminated by Highland, Terry filed arbitration claims against six parties: Acis LP; Acis GP; Highland; Highland's two founders (James Dondero and Mark Okada); and Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy"). Terry asserted a claim for more than $200 million and received an $8 million award against Acis. Terry's claims against Highland, Dondero, Okada, and Dugaboy were all dismissed. Also, Terry's claim that the promissory note transaction between Highland and Acis (the "Promissory Note") (the same note referenced at paragraphs 2 and 6 of the 303(f) Motion) was a fraudulent transfer, but the arbitration panel likewise rejected this claim.

9. As a result of losing on all his claims against the deep-pocketed defendants in the arbitration and losing on his fraudulent transfer claim, Terry is left with a pyrrhic victory—a largely uncollectible judgment against Acis. If that fact was not already apparent to Terry, it became so on January 29 when, pursuant to Texas state law, Acis filed a motion to post a supersedeas bond in the amount of $495,070.50, which is equal to 50 percent of Acis's net worth as of January 29. Terry thus realized that even if he ultimately prevailed on Acis's appeal of the $8 million judgment, Terry was never going to recover more than the approximately $500,000 bond amount.

10. Thus, Terry has been flailing about trying to create as much mayhem as possible to see if he can succeed in a shakedown by attempting to block the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction from closing. Terry's filings are made in complete disregard of Terry's own self-interest (the request for a receiver and the Involuntary Petitions) and in complete disregard for the investors in the $420 Million CLO-3 Transaction who stand to lose tens of millions of dollars if the Transaction does not close.

11. According to Terry’s fanciful allegations, the Transaction is itself a fraudulent transfer that Highland and Acis allegedly orchestrated to deprive him of the ability to satisfy his judgment against Acis. But, as will be explained, there are numerous reissues or refinances that have taken place, and are scheduled to take place, throughout the CLO industry as a result of changing market forces—specifically, declining interest rates from the time the CLOs were first issued.

12. In fact, Highland has been engaged in efforts to restructure the Acis CLOs long before the arbitration award was issued in October 2017. Highland closed on a restructure of CLO-2 on April 10, 2017 and it began work on the restructure of CLO-3 (the CLO at issue) as far back as May 2017. Thus, contrary to Terry’s wild assertions, the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction is being driven by legitimate business purposes in the ordinary course of business and not by some Machiavellian scheme by Acis to “dismantle their business to the great detriment of their single largest creditor, Mr. Terry” as Terry falsely claims.

13. Another important point for the Court to consider is that Terry’s 303(f) Motion is long on hyperbole and name-calling but short on facts regarding alleged past fraudulent transfers and future fraudulent transfers. But, here are the facts. To date, there has been a single fraudulent-transfer claim that has been litigated and that is Terry’s claim in the arbitration involving the October 2016 transaction giving rise to the Promissory Note in which Highland agreed to pay $12.6 million to Acis in return for Acis transferring to Highland the right to certain future cash flows was a fraudulent transfer.<sup>1</sup> The arbitration panel roundly rejected Terry’s fraudulent-transfer claims, holding that “[t]he transactional documents recite business purpose and reasonable consideration for the sale.” Final Award, at 17, Exhibit No. 1, hereto.<sup>2</sup> Moreover, “Terry offer[ed] no evidence that ACIS did not receive reasonable equivalent value in the transaction or that ACIS made the transfer with ‘actual intent to hinder delay or defraud.’” Id. With respect to the fraudulent-transfer allegations that are littered throughout the 303(f) Motion, this Court should take such allegations with a heavy dose of salt given Terry’s prior, unsuccessful claims of fraudulent transfers.

14. To bring things full circle, given that the same relief that Terry now seeks in his 303(f) Motion—blocking the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissuance Transaction—was scheduled to be heard by the state court judge at the Temporary Injunction Hearing on January 31, that begs the following question: Why did Terry simply not go forward with the January 31 Temporary Injunction Hearing in state court and instead file the Involuntary Petitions against Acis and file an emergency 303(f) Motion? The answer is clear: Terry knew that the handwriting was on the wall and that the state court was not going to enjoin the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissuance Transaction from closing the next day and then Terry would lose all leverage to try to block the Transaction. Terry’s machinations did succeed in causing the closing of the Transaction to be rescheduled from February 1 to February 13. However, as the evidence will show, if this for the Note Transfer.” This assertion is in sharp contrast to a sworn declaration that Terry signed on January 23 in support of a temporary restraining order in which he falsely claimed based upon his “personal knowledge” that the November 2017 Note Transfer was for “no consideration.” Terry Decl. ¶11, Exhibit No.2. At a TRO hearing in state court on January 24, Acis’s counsel pointed out that this statement in Terry’s declaration was false because, among other consideration, the Note Transfer reflected a commitment by a Highland entity to pay Acis upon demand up to $2 million in legal expenses and an additional $1 million in administrative expenses. Thus, in his 303(f) Motion, Terry has been forced to change his tune that the Note Transfer was a fraudulent transfer based upon his “personal knowledge” that Acis received “no consideration” for the transfer to a statement that “upon information and belief” Acis did not receive “sufficient consideration” for the transfer. The sworn statement in Terry’s January 23 declaration is just one of many misleading and false statements that Terry has made and Acis intends to bring to light in its cross-examination of him at the hearing on his 303(f) Motion.

Transaction does not close on February 13, it will never close and will cause innocent third party investors to lose tens of millions of dollars.

15. As is detailed herein, Acis's interest in the Transaction is limited to the ministerial assignment of the CMA and not a transfer of millions of dollars of assets of Acis—as Terry suggests is happening. Moreover, Terry's requested relief is an exercise in futility because whether or not the Transaction closes Terry will be in same position. Either the Transaction goes forward or CLO-3 will liquidate. In either case, Acis no longer will manager CLO-3 and the CMA will have no value. However, if CLO-3 liquidates, the third-party investors to whom Acis owes a fiduciary duty stand to lose tens of millions of dollars. Preventing the Transaction therefore would create no additional value for Acis, while creating substantial damages for the investors and risk of claims by them against Acis (and Terry).

16. Because Section 303(f) of the Bankruptcy Code would have allowed Acis to complete the closing of the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction, notwithstanding the Involuntary Petitions, Terry compounded his ill-conceived litigation strategy in filing the Involuntary Petitions by filing the 303(f) Motion, which seeks to impose (before an order for relief is entered and on the strength of Involuntary Petitions which are deficient on their face) the requirements of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code. For the reasons set forth below, the 303(f) Motion should be denied.

II. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND<sup>3</sup>

A. Acis, Highland, and the CLO Structure

17. Highland is in the business of putting together and managing collateralized loan obligations (“CLOs”). It is one of the primary players in the CLO industry. A CLO is a legal entity that owns a basket of loans, which are managed by a collateral manager (the “Collateral Manager”). The Collateral Manager buys loans into, or sells them out of, the basket. The CLO has its own bondholders (lenders to the CLO) (“Bondholders”), and its own equity holders (“Equity Holders”).

18. Acis LP is the Collateral Manager for CLO-3 as well as four other distinct CLOs. Acis has absolutely no economic interest in any of the CLOs, which includes CLO-3 and the $420 million in loans that CLO-3 holds. Rather, Acis, as Collateral Manager, provides services to the CLO and is compensated for its services in accordance with the Collateral Management Agreement or CMA. Exhibit No. 3, hereto. The duties and obligations Acis owes CLO-3, in its capacity as Collateral Manager, are governed by the CMA. Among other things, Acis’s duties as Collateral Manager include: supervising and directing the investment and reinvestment of CLO assets; monitoring the CLO assets and providing to the Issuer (the CLO) certain reports, schedules, and other data; and directing an optional redemption under the Indenture on behalf of the Issuer. CMA § 3. Additionally, Acis is obligated to “use commercially reasonable efforts to ensure that no action is taken by it” that would materially and adversely affect the Issuer.” CMA § 8.

19. Because Acis has no employees it does not and cannot provide any services directly to the CLOs as required by the CMAs. However, the CMA allows Acis to contract with third parties to provide these services, which Acis has done. Specifically, Acis has entered into several agreements with other Highland affiliates to provide the required services. In one such agreement, a Highland affiliate provides “front-office” services that include the buying and selling of the loans that comprise the CLO (the “Sub-Advisory Agreement”). Pursuant to the Sub-Advisory Agreement, Highland provides to Acis, among other things, the following services: “mak[ing] recommendations to [Acis] . . . as to the general composition and allocation of the Portfolio . . . including recommendations as to the specific loans and other assets to be purchased, retained or sold”; “plac[ing] orders with respect to, and arrang[ing] for, any investment by or on behalf of [an] Account”; “identify[ing], evaluat[ing], recommend[ing] to [Acis] . . . the structure and/or terms of investment opportunities within the specific investment strategy of [Acis]”; “provid[ing] information to [Acis] . . . regarding any investments to facilitate the monitoring and servicing of such investments”; and “assist[ing] and advis[ing] [Acis] . . . with respect to credit functions including, but not limited to, credit analysis and market research and analysis.” Sub-Advisory Agreement § 1(b). Exhibit No. 4, hereto. The Sub-Advisory Agreement “shall terminate automatically with respect to any Management Agreement on the date on which (i) such Management Agreement has been terminated . . . or (ii) [Acis] is no longer acting as portfolio manager . . . whether due to removal, resignation or assignment.” Id. § 6(b).

20. In another agreement, a Highland affiliate provides “back-office” services that include the accounting, legal, and other administrative functions necessary in servicing the loans (the “Shared Services Agreement”). Under the Shared Services Agreement, Highland provides to Acis essential services, including: “[a]ssistance and advice with respect to back- and middle-office functions including, but not limited to, accounting, payments, operations, technology and finance”; “[a]ssistance and advice with respect to legal issues, compliance support and implementation and general risk analysis”; “access to marketing team representatives to assist with the marketing of [Acis]”; “[a]ssistance relating to any reporting [Acis] is required to make”; and “[t]he provision of office space, information technology services and equipment, infrastructure and other related services requested or utilized by [Acis].” Shared Services Agreement § 2.02. Exhibit No. 5. Though these services are essential to Acis’s capacity to serve as Collateral Manager, “[e]ither party may terminate [the Shared Services] Agreement at any time upon at least thirty (30) days’ written notice to the other.” Id. § 7.01 (emphasis added).

21. The Highland affiliates have notified Acis that they no longer intend to provide services to Acis pursuant either to the Sub-Advisory Agreement or Shared Services Agreement for CLO-3. Thus, even if the Transaction did not close, that would leave Acis unable to provide the services it is required to provide as Collateral Manager, which failure constitutes a basis for removing Acis as collateral manager and terminating the CMA on 30 days’ notice. See CMA § 15(g) (CMA may be terminated and Acis may be removed as Collateral Manager upon 30 days’ notice due to “the inability of [Acis] to perform its duties hereunder in accordance with the standard of care specified herein due to the termination of the Service Agreements [defined as the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement].” Exhibit No. 3.

22. Terry was an employee of Highland from 2005 until June 2016 when Highland terminated Terry for cause. Terry was integrally involved in the Acis CLOs, having launched the CLOs, set up their structure, and serving as portfolio manager for several years.

23. Highland helped put together six CLOs bearing the Acis name from 2013 until 2015. These are named Acis CLO-I through Acis CLO-6. These CLOs had loan portfolios ranging in value from around $300 million to $550 million at the time they were initiated.

B. CLO Reissuances Prompted by Falling Interest Rates

24. The loans held by the CLO pay cash when the borrowers from the CLO pay interest and principal on the loans. The borrowers send their payments to the CLO Trustee's<sup>4</sup> collections account. Each quarter, the Trustee pays out the cash in the collections account. The quarterly payments, also called the "waterfall," are made according to the priority set out in the CLO's indenture (the CLO's governing document). First, the CLO's Collateral Manager receives a fee. Second, the Bondholders are paid in order of priority: the AAA bondholders are paid first, the AA bondholders are paid, etc., until the most-junior bondholders are paid. Third, the Equity Holders—the last group to be paid in a CLO structure—receive what is left from the collections account after all the management expenses and Bondholders are paid. If there is enough cash left at the bottom of the waterfall, the Equity Holders receive a good return. If there is not enough cash, the Equity Holders may get no money for that quarter.

25. The amount of money paid to the Equity Holders in a given quarter will depend on the amount of cash paid into the CLO by the borrowers, less the amount that has to be paid out to the CLO's Bondholders for that quarter. When loan interest rates are high in the market, the borrowers pay more cash into the CLO and the Equity Holders receive a good return each quarter. CLOs created in calendar year 2014, including CLO-3, were issued when interest rates were higher than they are today. Given these lower interest rates Borrowers have refinanced their loans to lower interest rates. (This is no different than a homeowner taking advantage of lower interest rates to refinance their home, which would result in the lender receiving reduced principal and interest payments). As a result, the borrowers pay less cash into the CLO each quarter than the prior quarter. This is what is currently happening with CLO-3.

26. However, the amount owed to the Bondholders does not change with interest rates. Rather, it is fixed by the indenture (the agreement under which the Bondholders loan money to the CLO), so that amount paid to the Bondholders remains constant. Therefore, as interest rates fall, there is less, and potentially no money left for the Equity Holders at the end of each quarter. The CLO industry has solved this problem by restructuring currently-existing CLOs, called a “reissue.” The reissued CLO will pay lower interest rates to the CLO’s Bondholders. This reduces the cash the CLO must pay out each quarter to the Bondholders, leaving more cash available to pay to the Equity Holders. As loan interest rates fall, a CLO must reissue or its Equity Holders will get no more return on their CLO equity-holdings. Last year, 125 CLOs reissued for a total of $62 billion.<sup>5</sup> One such transaction involved Acis CLO-2 refinancing $192 million of its loans in April 2017. This reissue or refinancing trend has continued in 2018 with 19 CLOs reissuing for a total of $10 billion in transactions. Id.

27. In addition to doing a reissuance of the CLO, another option available to Equity Holders who are dissatisfied with reduced payments that they are receiving in an era of lower interest rates is to shut down the CLO. Pursuant to the CLO’s indenture, the Equity Holders have the right to “call” the CLO, which means to demand that the CLO sell its basket of loans into the market, distribute the remaining proceeds in one, final waterfall, and then cease operations. When a CLO is called, the loans must be liquidated on the open market within a set period of time, usually between one and four weeks. Though the Equity Holders often realize a substantial loss in this process, it is better than leaving their money in an investment that pays little or no returns for years to come. (Each CLO has a finite life after which it automatically terminates. In the case of CLO-3, it terminates in 2026). Acis CLO-2014-C Indenture at §1.1, Def. 28. A Collateral Manager only receives management fees for as long as the CLO operates. The Collateral Manager has no control over when a CLO is reissued or called. Instead, the Collateral Manager must follow the directions of the Bondholders and the Equity Holders to whom it owes a fiduciary duty. Once the decision to either reissue or call a CLO has been made, the Collateral Manager is duty-bound to undertake all necessary actions to effectuate the directed outcome. After a CLO is called, the Collateral Manager no longer will get any management fees. Moreover, regardless of whether a CLO is reissued or called, the Collateral Manager does not receive any compensation relating to the reissuance.

C. The Planned Reissuance of CLO-3

29. CLO-3 (Acis CLO 2014-3, Ltd.) was created on February 1, 2014 and terminates on February 1, 2026. CLO-3 owns a basket of loans valued at $420 million, including loans to Delta Airlines, Dunkin Donuts, and Tribune Media. CLO-3's Bondholders and Equity Holders own the economic interest in this $420 million basket of loans. CLO-3's Bondholders include public pension funds, insurance companies, and banks. The Equity Holder of CLO-3 is Acis

Loan Funding, Ltd. (“ALF”),<sup>6</sup> which in turn is owned by two entities: a charitable foundation and a third-party private firm (collectively, the “CLO-3 Equity Holders”).

30. When CLO-3 was created, its basket of loans had an average interest rate of 4.59%, resulting in a quarterly waterfall payment of approximately $2 million to the CLO-3 Equity Holders. However, in recent years, the borrowers on these loans have been refinancing to a lower average interest rate (3.21%). This has resulted in falling distributions to the CLO-3 Equity Holders for each quarter. The returns to the CLO-3 Equity Holders have been as follows: $1.4 million in the first quarter of 2017, $1.36 million in the second quarter, $875,000 in the third quarter, and $1.1 million in the last quarter of 2017. The quarterly payment for the first quarter of 2018 is $470,000, and the CLO-3 Equity Holders are expected to receive no distributions by the next waterfall, scheduled for May 2018. Like other similarly-situated CLOs, CLO-3 either needed to be reissued or called to protect the CLO-3 Equity Holders’ interests.<sup>7</sup>

31. Starting in May 2017, CLO-3 started the reissuance process on behalf of its Equity Holders. Typically, the most difficult investors to sign up are the equity holders. As previously explained, the equity is the riskiest investment because it is last in line for payment under the CLO waterfall and faces the prospect of receiving reduced or no payments (which is expected to happen with the May 2018 quarterly payment). In May 2017, a private equity firm

expressed an interest in making a $150 million investment in ALF (the “$150 Million Equity Investor”). ALF was the investment vehicle used for the various Acis CLOs, including CLO-3. However, one of the conditions demanded by the $150 Million Equity Investor in making its investment was that ALF would instruct the reissuance of certain CLOs, including CLO-3 and would sever any continuing connection that Acis had with the CLOs, including removing it as Collateral Manager. ALF issued this instruction requested by the $150 Million Equity Investor on October 6, 2017 (two weeks prior to the arbitration award).<sup>8</sup>

32. An investment bank was required to be engaged in connection with the contemplated reissuance transaction. The investment bank’s responsibilities included securing new equity investors and new bondholders. Goldman Sachs was the first investment bank that was approached in connection with the reissue of CLO-3. Goldman Sachs recommended that all the CLOs be “called” and that the CLOs start with a fresh slate. Goldman Sachs also unambiguously communicated that Acis could not be the Collateral Manager following the reissuance of the CLOs because of Acis’ now toxic public image after the Terry dispute had so damaged the Acis brand. CLO-3’s Equity Holders agreed. As part of the reissuance, the CMA for CLO-3 would have to be assigned to a new Collateral Manager, in this instance, Highland CLO Management, LLC (the “New Collateral Manager”), another Highland affiliate.

33. Goldman Sachs ultimately dropped out due to the “noise” associated with Terry and the Acis brand. Thereafter, in November 2017, CLO-3 engaged a new investment bank, Mizuho, to undertake the efforts to reissue CLO-3. Mizuho worked to find new Bondholders to invest in the reissued CLO-3. It completed that process on January 26, 2018. On or about January 29, the Bondholders of the reissued CLO-3 agreed to purchase approximately $375 million of new bonds issued by the reissued CLO-3. The $375 million from the purchase of the new bonds would in turn be used to pay-off the old Bondholders in the original CLO-3. Collectively the foregoing process is referred to as the “Reissuance of CLO-3”.

34. At this point in time, the transfer of the CMA from ACIS, LP to the New Collateral Manager, is the sole remaining formality before closing of the Reissuance of CLO-3 can occur.<sup>9</sup> This is the transaction that Terry argues should require compliance with Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, and not be completed by Acis LP in accordance with Section 303(f) of the Bankruptcy Code.

35. But, based on Acis’ fiduciary duty to CLO-3’s Equity Holders, it must execute the transfer.<sup>10</sup> To do otherwise would be to put its interests before those of the CLO-3 Equity Holders. Acis has been instructed to execute the transfer of the CLO-3 Management Agreement to the New Collateral Manager. Holding-up the assignment of the CLO-3 Management Agreement will not result in Acis receiving any more value or funds. Rather, failing to act in the best interest of the CLO subjects Acis to liability to CLO-3, its Bondholders, and its Equity Holders.

<sup>9</sup> The CMA may be assigned by either Acis or CLO-3 if certain requirements are met. Specifically, Acis may not assign any of the management agreements “without the written consent of the Issuer, at least a Majority of the Subordinated Notes . . . and at least a Majority of the Controlling Class.” CMA § 14(a). Likewise, the Issuer may not assign a management agreement “without the prior written consent of [Acis].” Id. § 14(c).

<sup>10</sup> As a registered investment advisor, Acis is bound to act in accordance with the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 (the “IAA”). Under the IAA, it is “unlawful for any investment advisor . . . to engage in any act, practice, or course of business which is fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative.” IAA § 206. Section 206 has since been interpreted as establishing “a statutory fiduciary duty for investment advisers to act for the benefit of their clients, requiring advisers to exercise the utmost good faith in dealing with clients, to disclose all material facts, and to employ reasonable care to avoid misleading clients.” S.E.C. v. Treadway, 430 F. Supp. 2d 293, 338 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (internal quotations omitted).

36. Terry completely understands the foregoing reissue process, why it is necessary, and the devastating consequences of the reissuance not closing. Terry launched CLO-3, set up its structure, and managed its portfolio for several years. Moreover, never in the history of the CLO industry has a CLO reissuance progressed to the point of funding, and then not closed. The new Bondholders already have committed to buy $375 million in bonds, the old Bondholders already have been assured they will be paid off, and the CLO-3 Equity Holders already have been assured that their investment will not face liquidation.

37. Knowing this, Terry sought to leverage the situation. On January 24, he filed an application for a TRO to, among other things, prevent Acis from assigning the CMA. The TRO was supported by a declaration from Terry that contained materially misleading statements and omissions, and outright falsehoods. The state court conducted a hearing that resulted in Acis and Terry reaching a short-term agreement that would remain in place until the temporary injunction that was scheduled to be heard within the week. Specifically, Acis agreed in the state court to not transfer the CMAs or remove Acis as manager until the temporary injunction hearing. Acis also informed the state court that the Reissuance of CLO-3 was in progress and, therefore, it was important to have the temporary injunction heard as soon as possible. The temporary injunction hearing was originally scheduled for February 1.

38. On January 29, Terry filed a supplemental TRO, also supported by a declaration from Terry, that Acis "had transferred" management of CLO-3 to a Highland entity. The TRO and Terry's supporting declaration, once again, were false. Acis had not transferred management of CLO-3 to a Highland entity as Acis had agreed not to transfer such rights until the temporary injunction hearing and had honored that agreement.

39. Also, on January 29, Terry filed an application for a turnover order and for appointment of a receiver (the “Application for Receiver”). In the Application for Receiver, Terry made false and unsubstantiated allegations that Acis had fraudulently transferred more than $16 million in assets to affiliated entities after entry of the arbitration award in October 2016. As noted in the Introduction, under paragraph 15 of the CMA, the appointment of a receiver would cause the CMA to be terminated and Acis to be removed as the Collateral Manager, thereby rendering the CMA worthless. Yet, Terry inexplicably asked for the appointment of a receiver as just another litigation tactic designed to sow confusion regardless of the fatal consequences to Terry’s claims, i.e. his supposed attempts to preserve the value of the CMA.

40. At the January 29 hearing, the Court did not make any substantive rulings. Rather, at the request of Acis’s counsel and in light of the scheduled closing of the Reissuance of CLO-3 on February 1, the state court moved the temporary injunction hearing up from February 1 to January 31 to ensure that the hearing would take place prior to the scheduled February 1 closing. Also, the Court reconfirmed its prior orders that Terry would supply an expert report by noon on January 30 and that both Terry and his expert would appear for deposition for up to two hours’ each prior to the temporary injunction hearing that had been rescheduled for January 31 at 2:00 p.m.

41. On January 30, Terry provided his expert report as ordered. Later that day, Terry withdrew his expert, which resulted in the expert deposition being called off. However, Terry’s deposition remained scheduled to take place at 10:00 a.m. on January 31, the day of the temporary injunction hearing. Then, out of the blue and with no advance notice, Terry filed his Involuntary Petitions against Acis at midnight on January 30 and filed a “suggestion of bankruptcy” with the state court. Terry’s counsel advised that in light of the bankruptcy filings that Terry would not appear for his court-ordered deposition on January 31 and would not appear at the temporary injunction hearing. In response, on January 31, Acis filed a motion to vacate the agreed order that the parties had entered on January 24 and advised Terry that Acis intended to present the motion to vacate to the state court at the 2:00 p.m. hearing.

42. The parties appeared at the 2:00 p.m. hearing on January 31. During the middle of argument, Judge Goldstein announced that Judge Jernigan was on the phone, which resulted in a recess of about one hour as Judge Goldstein took Judge Jernigan’s call. When Judge Goldstein returned to the bench after that call, she announced her view that the filing of the Involuntary Petitions deprived her of jurisdiction to make any further rulings pending action by the Bankruptcy Court.

E. Closing of the Transaction is rescheduled from February 1 to February 13

43. CLO-3 has been able to move the closing date for the Transaction from February 1 to February 13. However, this is a short-term fix that demands a permanent solution. The very pendency of these involuntary cases severely impacts CLO-3’s ability to ensure that all of the constituent parties remain committed to the transaction. Each day that passes creates greater risk for this $420 million transaction. The new Bondholders will grow nervous about the unprecedented delay. The ratings agencies, law firms offering opinion letters, and various trustees have refused to act in the shadow of a potential bankruptcy stay. Indeed, for the Transaction to go forward on February 13, it must “price” five business days in advance, on February 8; and the pendency of these Involuntary cases likely will prevent pricing – which will likely quash the Transaction before the February 13th closing date. And the longer the Transaction waits, the more likely that changing market conditions, such last Friday's precipitous stock market fall, will cause parties to reconsider if they want to enter into the Transaction at the previously negotiated prices. Absent the denial of the 303(f) Motion and the granting of the Motions to Dismiss,<sup>11</sup> the Reissuance of CLO-3 may never close,<sup>12</sup> to the detriment of the CLO-3 Equity Holders and Bondholders to whom Acis owes a fiduciary duty.<sup>13</sup> However, it is beyond question if the assignment of the CMA is not executed prior to February 13, CLO-3 will be called, its basket of loans liquidated, and the CLO-3 Equity Holders and other parties will incur tens of millions of dollars in losses.

44. The CLO-3 Indenture provides that the Equity Holders may "call"—i.e., force the liquidation of—CLO-3 through an optional redemption of the outstanding notes. Specifically, a majority of the Equity Holders may initiate an optional redemption "on any Business Day after the Non-Call Period." CLO-3 Indenture § 9.2(a). Exhibit No. 7. The Non-Call Period for CLO-3 ended in February 2016. CLO-3 Indenture § 1.1. Exhibit No. 7. After being notified of an optional redemption, "the Portfolio Manager [Acis] in its sole discretion shall direct the sale (and the manner thereof) of all or part of the Collateral Obligations and other Assets." Id. § 9.2(b).

45. Even if Acis subsequently escapes bankruptcy and the appointment of a receiver, the Equity Holders in CLO-3 will nonetheless issue an optional redemption, thereby liquidating

<sup>11</sup> In connection with the Motions to Expedite the Hearing on the Motions to Dismiss (which will be considered by the Court current with the 303(f) Motion), Acis is filing a Supplemental Brief, in support of the expedited consideration. As noted therein, it is not enough to simply deny the 303(f) Motion, thus permitting Acis to continue operations, unrestricted by Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, until an Order for Relief is entered or the Involuntary Cases are dismissed, as, and most important, the mere existence of the Involuntary Petitions against Acis is interfering with and causing damage to all of the CLO's managed by Acis.

all CLO-3 assets. Under such a scenario, the CMA will automatically terminate upon “the liquidation of the Assets and the final distribution of the proceeds of such liquidation to the Holders.” CMA § 13(a)(ii).

46. What appears to be lost on Terry is that regardless of whether the Reissuance of CLO-3 occurs, Acis’s fate is sealed. In short order, Acis will no longer be the Collateral Manager for CLO-3. Either the Collateral Management Agreement will be transferred pursuant to a reissuance or it will expire when CLO-3 is called and liquidated.

47. Furthermore, and as previously discussed, even if Acis is prohibited from transferring the Collateral Management Agreement, Acis will nonetheless be terminated as Collateral Manager due to (1) the bankruptcy filing, (2) a receivership requested by Terry in state court, or (3) Acis’s inability to provide management services as a result of the Highland Servicers exercising their contractual right to refuse to continue to provide services to Acis under the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shares Services Agreement. The delay or even prevention of the assignment of the CMA to the New Collateral Manager will not result in more assets owned by Acis, and, in fact, will increase the claims against Acis (not to mention the forthcoming claims against Terry) for its breach of fiduciary duties owed to CLO-3, its Bondholders and the CLO-3 Equity Holders.

III. OBJECTIONS TO THE 303(f) MOTION

48. The relief Terry seeks in the 303(f) Motion has no basis in law or fact and is nothing more than the latest maneuver in his scheme to exert pressure on Acis (and Highland) by jeopardizing the closing of the Reissuance of CLO-3.

49. As set forth in the Motions to Dismiss, Terry has improperly invoked the jurisdiction of this Court and did so in bad faith. Allowing Terry to compound those abuses by imposing on Acis the requirements of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code would not only be inequitable, but also has the potential to cause millions of dollars of damage to multiple parties, including creditors of Acis or affiliates thereof. Moreover, it would be inappropriate for this Court to condone such abuses by modifying Section 303(f) before this Court has considered the propriety of Acis being subject to Title 11 cases.

50. Section 303(f) provides:

“Notwithstanding Section 363 of [the Bankruptcy Code,] except to the extent that the court orders otherwise, and until an order for relief in the case, any business of the debtor may continue to operate, and the debtor may continue to use, acquire, or dispose of property as if an involuntary case concerning the debtor had not been commenced.”

51. In the Texas Rangers case the Court confirmed the scope and rationale of Section 303(f) by quoting from Consolidated Partners Inv. Co. v. Lake, 152 B.R. 485, 490 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1993):

By virtue of § 303(f), during the gap period, the Debtor was authorized to continue such operations until an order for relief was entered as though no involuntary petition had been filed. The rationale for allowing the debtor to operate during the involuntary gap period is that prior to the entry of an order for relief, the subject of an involuntary petition should not be adversely affected by the case.”

In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 434 B.R. 393 ( Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2010).

52. In the 303(f) Motion, Terry cites two cases for the proposition that “courts have imposed restrictions on an involuntary gap debtor’s operations to preserve and protect assets;

especially where there is a concern that a debtor may dispose of assets for less than fair value or dismantle a business for the private gain of its principals.” 303(f) Motion, at ¶¶ 18-19; In re Tex. Rangers Baseball Partners, 434 B.R. 393 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2010); Wilson v. Davis (In re Wilson), 62 B.R. 42 (E.D. Tenn. 1985).

53. Terry’s characterization and attempts to analogize the facts of those cases is unavailing. First, in the Wilson case, the court did not modify Section 303(f), but simply observed that because Section 303 permits an involuntary debtor to use, acquire, or dispose of property through the time the order for relief is entered (as opposed to through the date of the involuntary filing, which the appellee had argued), that the proper date for determining the scope of an involuntary debtor’s exempt property was the date on which an order for relief was entered. Id. at 45-46.

54. In Texas Rangers the Court abrogated Section 303(f), but, the main reason for doing so was that the alleged debtors’ sole asset was itself a debtor in a voluntary chapter 11 case and that it was appropriate to impose on the involuntary debtors the same fiduciary duties as a debtor in possession because of such ownership structure. 434 B.R. at 404-405. Indeed, the Court acknowledged that section 303(f) generally permits an involuntary debtor to “proceed without court oversight[,] . . . so long as [its] conduct can be justified under the business judgment rule.” Id. at 405. Moreover, as acknowledged by Terry, the Court’s conclusion was very much “based on the facts and circumstances of the case.” 303(f) Motion, at ¶ 19.

55. The Texas Rangers Court was further concerned that the alleged debtors were not operating consistent with the fiduciary duties of a debtor-in-possession in the gap period. Thus, the Court imposed the obligations of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code on the alleged debtors.

Terry makes no comparison of the facts of that case to the facts of this matter in support of his 303(f) Motion – and he cannot.

56. Here, Acis is operating consistent with both Acis’s fiduciary duties and the industry trend of almost 140 CLO reissuances. As noted above, blocking the Transaction benefits neither Acis nor its creditors. In fact, the liabilities undertaken from a failure to comply will surely injure Acis, and its creditors. Further, to cause the assertion of claims against Acis is contrary to its fiduciary duties to its creditors and third parties.

57. In connection with the assignment of the CMA as part and parcel of the Reissuance of CLO-3, there is no evidence to suggest that Acis is not acting in a fashion consistent with the fiduciary responsibilities of a debtor-in-possession (were Acis to become debtors-in-possession at a later date). Rather, the unsupported allegations by Terry of pre-petition transactions undertaken by Acis fail to demonstrate in any regard that the assignment of the CMA to complete the Reissuance of CLO-3 is inappropriate.

58. As demonstrated above, Acis is, by assigning the CMA to the New Collateral Manager, performing exactly as is required of it and is complying with its fiduciary duties to CLO-3. To do otherwise would be a breach of its fiduciary duties as well as cause significant damage to innocent third parties, all of which may assert claims against Acis. Thus, by complying with its fiduciary duties to CLO-3, Acis is also complying with its fiduciary duties to its creditors (if Acis were to become debtors-in-possession).

59. The drastic remedy of imposing upon Acis obligations to comply with Section 363 during the gap period makes no sense when what is being undertaken by Acis is exactly what is in the best interests of all interested parties.

B. Terry’s “Fraudulent Transfer” Argument is Based on an Incorrect Understanding of the CMA and the Law

60. Boiled down to its essence, Terry’s “fraudulent transfer” argument asserts the following positions: (i) the CMA (the management agreement by which Acis manages CLO-3) is a valuable asset of Acis; (ii) Acis proposes to transfer that valuable asset to the New Collateral Manager; and (iii) the New Collateral Manager is not providing anything to Acis in exchange for the transfer of the CMA. Thus, Terry argues, the transfer of the CMA eliminates a valuable asset of Acis for no consideration.

61. The flaws in Terry’s “fraudulent transfer” argument, however, are fatal. First, the CMA has no value, as Acis’s operation thereunder results in a loss to Acis (see ¶ 4, infra). Second, the contractual arrangement between Acis and CLO-3 (i.e., the CMA), which has been in place since 2014, provides, among other things, that Acis will perform various services, be compensated for those services, and, most relevant here, undertake actions as instructed by CLO-3, including, in this instance, assign the contract (the CMA). Simply put, the provisions of the CMA requiring the Collateral Manager (Acis) to perform as instructed – in this instance to transfer the CMA, is a negotiated contractual obligation among Acis and CLO-3 that has nothing to do with the transferee (i.e., the New Collateral Manager). From the outset of the relationship among Acis and CLO-3, Acis has performed in accordance with its fiduciary duties to the CLO, its Equity Holders and its Bondholders; and has been compensated all along by CLO-3 for such performance. It is not being instructed to make the assignment – which it must do consistent with its fiduciary duties.

62. The four year long relationship among Acis and CLO-3 has included performance of the back and forth obligations of the parties, which has resulted in consideration flowing to and among the parties. Thus, Acis has already been compensated in anticipation of performing its instructed obligations including assigning the CMA in further of the Transactions. There is no consideration or value flowing from Acis to the New Collateral Manager. Rather, Acis continues to perform under the terms of its existing contract (i.e., the CMA) by making the assignment as instructed CLO-3.

63. Accordingly, Terry's suggestion that the New Collateral Manager is receiving a fraudulent transfer, and that Acis is making a fraudulent transfer, is not correct. Rather, Acis simply is performing in accordance with a contractual obligation, long-ago entered into, and for which it has been, and continues to be, compensated. The transfer is not anything more than Acis's compliance with the terms of a contract – the CMA. The foregoing analysis debunks any assertion that the assignment of the CMA, a ministerial act to be performed by Acis as part and of the Reissuance of CLO-3, is a fraudulent transfer.

C. The Involuntary Petitions are Factually Defective

64. As described in detail in the Motions to Dismiss, the Involuntary Petitions are subject to dismissal because they are not supported by the requisite number of creditors needed to commence an involuntary chapter 7 case under Section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code. Section 303(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code states, in relevant part:

An involuntary case against a person is commenced by the filing with the bankruptcy court of a petition under chapter 7 or 11 of this title—

(1) by three or more entities, each of which is either a holder of a claim against such person that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount, or an indenture trustee representing such a holder, if such noncontingent, undisputed claims aggregate at least $15,775 more than the value of any lien on property of the debtor securing such claims held by the holders of such claims;

(2) if there are fewer than 12 such holders, excluding any employee or insider of such person and any transferee of a transfer that is voidable under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724 (a) of this title, by one or more of such holders that hold in the aggregate at least $15,775 of such claims . . . .

65. Section 303(b) contains “very specific requirements concerning the number of entities that are necessary to commence an involuntary filing.” 2 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 303.14 (16th rev. ed. 2013). Those requirements are based on the policy of preventing one or more “recalcitrant creditors” from filing an involuntary case to harass a debtor. Id.

66. Perhaps the most basic of all requirements is that section 303(b)(1) requires that when a debtor has twelve or more creditors, an involuntary case may be commenced only by three or more entities. See In re Tichy Elec. Co., Inc., 332 B.R. 364, 372-73 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2005) (citations omitted); Sipple v. Atwood (In re Atwood), 124 B.R. 402, 406 (S.D. Ga. 1991) (“If there are twelve or more qualifying claims, excluding voidable claims, the debtor cannot be forced into involuntary bankruptcy by fewer than three of the qualifying creditors.”). Where a debtor has twelve or more creditors and there are less than three petitioning creditors, the case must be dismissed—section 303(b)(1) leaves no room for Court discretion.

67. Terry has the burden of demonstrating that he has satisfied the numerosity requirement under section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. Pleas Doyle & Assocs. v. James Plaza Joint Venture (In re James Plaza Joint Venture), 67 B.R. 445, 448 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1986) (“It is plaintiffs’ burden to demonstrate the number of creditors of [the] debtor’s estate.”); In re Charon, 94 B.R. 403, 405-06 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) (petitioner has “burden of proving that it satisfied the jurisdictional requirements of § 303(b)”; 2 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 303.15, at 76 (15th ed. 1988) (“When fewer than three creditors file an involuntary petition, the alleged debtor has the burden to raise the issue that it has 12 or more creditors by filing a list pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 1003(b). The petitioning creditor then has the burden to show that the alleged debtor actually has fewer than 12.”). Terry cannot do so.

68. Here, it is beyond dispute that Acis has twelve or more creditors. Ironically, substantially all of Acis’s creditors became creditors because of the pending state court action between Terry and Acis. Specifically, Acis’s creditors include numerous law firms, professionals, and experts, which are creditors of Acis LP and also creditors of Acis GP due to its role as the general partner. Acis has filed with this Court a statement pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 1003(b) listing such creditors. See Case No. 18-30264-SGJ7, Docket No. 7; Case No. 18-30265-SGJ7, Docket No. 7. Exhibit No. 13. Thus, Acis has more than twelve creditors, making clear that three creditors are required to force Acis into bankruptcy pursuant to section 303(b)(1).<sup>14</sup>

69. Based on the foregoing, the Involuntary Petitions lack the statutorily required number of petitioning creditors and therefore are subject to dismissal because they are factually defective.

70. The significance of the Motion to Dismiss cannot be over emphasized. As the fatal flaw in the Involuntary Petitions – only one creditor filed the Involuntary Petitions – is so obvious, this Court should not consider the 303(f) Motion, until and unless consideration has been given to the Dismissal Motion.<sup>15</sup>

<sup>14</sup> In addition to filing the 1003(b) Notice, Acis has provided to Terry copies of the invoices, statements and other documents evidencing and supporting each of the creditors’ asserted claims. In addition, Acis also offered to present a witness to provide a deposition (including the offer of a deposition to be conducted over the just-concluded weekend) to testify to the creditors and their claims. Terry failed to respond to this offer.

<sup>15</sup> While the Motion to Expedite the Court’s consideration of the Motions to Dismiss is being considered concurrently with the Court’s consideration of the 303(f) Motion, Acis asserts that Dismissal of the Involuntary Petitions should be heard in advance of the 303(f) Motion. Were the blatant disagreed and failure to comply with Section 303(b) not as obvious as it is, this Court might consider the 303(f) Motion in advance of the Motions to

D. The 303(f) Motion is a Blatant Attempt to Pressure Acis by Threatening the Reissuance of CLO-3, in Contravention of the Intent Underlying the Bankruptcy Code’s Involuntary Provisions.

71. Terry’s bad faith litigation strategy is clear—he intends to exert pressure on Acis (and Highland) by jeopardizing the Reissuance of CLO-3. In furtherance of that ill-conceived objective, Terry filed the 303(f) Motion, which seeks to impose the requirements of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code before there has been an adjudication on the merits of the propriety or validity of the Involuntary Petitions. Granting the relief requested would run completely counter to the balance Congress attempted to strike in the Bankruptcy Code’s involuntary bankruptcy provisions.

Yorke (In re Reid), 773 F.2d 945, 946 (7th Cir. 1985) (the filing of an involuntary petition is “an extreme remedy with serious consequences to the alleged debtor”) (citations omitted).

73. Balancing the harshness of the possibility of an entity being put into bankruptcy against its will is the protection afforded by Section 303(f) of the Bankruptcy Code. Recognizing that an alleged debtor should be afforded due process and its day in Court before being required to abide the restrictions the Bankruptcy Code imposes on its operations, Section 303(f) allows an alleged debtor to operate free of those restrictions pending an adjudication of the involuntary petition. The presumption that an alleged debtor should be free to operate its business without restriction pending adjudication of an order for relief is even more critical when the petitioning creditor, like Terry here, has acted alone in an attempt to gain an improper tactical advantage in a longstanding two-party dispute in state court.

74. As set forth in the Motion to Dismiss, the Involuntary Petitions are blatant examples of forum shopping. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions literally on the eve on an evidentiary hearing in the state court that Terry knew would have resulted in Acis being free to close the Reissuance of CLO-3. Rather than participate in that hearing (and sit for the deposition that was to precede that hearing), Terry attempted a “Hail Mary pass” and precipitously attempted to transfer the venue of his dispute with Acis to this Court. Having done so, Terry should be forced to await the adjudication of the merits of the Involuntary Petitions (already the subject of the Motions to Dismiss, filed less than 24 hours after the Involuntary Petitions themselves) before being granted relief that is akin to a pre-determination that the Acis entities should be adjudicated debtors. To hold otherwise would offend the balancing Congress built into Section 303 and would offend notions of equity and due process.<sup>16</sup>

IV.
CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, Acis respectfully requests that the Court enter an Order denying the Motion and granting such other relief as the Court deems just and proper.

bad faith. At a minimum, the relief Terry seeks in the 303(f) Motion should await this Court's adjudication of the Motions to Dismiss. At most, the 303(f) Motion should be denied, without prejudice to Terry's right to seek the same relief if these involuntary cases proceed beyond Acis' Motions to Dismiss.

Colloquy

1 MS. PATEL: -- I haven't put on --

2 THE COURT: You may have a witness on that if it --

3 MS. PATEL: I don't know what their evidence --

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MS. PATEL: -- is going to be, so I may very well,
6 yes.

7 THE COURT: All right. Well, then let's go to the
8 other side. To expedite things, I think I made clear but
9 maybe I didn't make clear, Mr. Cruciani, your witness can be 10 combined testimony in response to the 303(f) as well in
11 support of your motion to expedite. And so --

12 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor. So Mr.
13 Ellington will testify to both.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. CRUCIANI: As relates to the motion to expedite,
16 the actual substantive testimony on our motion to dismiss will
17 be primarily Mr. Leventon; I understand that was kind of the 18 next step, but that's not something we'll be doing for this
19 particular motion, right?

20 THE COURT: Correct.

21 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

22 THE COURT: Um-hum.

23 MR. CRUCIANI: Yes, ma'am.

24 THE COURT: All right. So it's Mr. Ellington? Okay,
25 welcome. If you could approach the witness stand.

Scott Ellington - Direct

1 All right, please raise your right hand.

2 (Witness sworn)

3 THE COURT: All right, please take a seat.

4 THE WITNESS: Thank you.

5 THE CLERK: I will get them and come back here.

6 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

7 THE CLERK: It's very directional.

8 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay. Thank you, ma'am.

9 DIRECT EXAMINATION

10 BY MR. CRUCIANI:

11 Q. Please state your name for the record.

12 A. Scott Ellington.

13 Q. What is your position, Mr. Ellington?

14 A. I am the general counsel, chief legal officer, and
15 partner at Highland Capital Management, L.P.

16 Q. Okay. I'd like to start with just a few things we just 17 heard from Mr. Terry.

18 A. Okay.

19 MR. CRUCIANI: Let's put up, Omar, slide 4, please.

20 Q. Recall Mr. Terry just testified that the reason Acis is 21 in this structure was due to the toxic brand name of Highland
22 back in the 2012 time period?

23 A. Yes, I do.

24 Q. Now, fast-forward; today. What is, based on your 25 dealings with the marketplace, the nature of the Acis brand

1 today --

2 MR. SHAW: Your Honor, I'm going to object on
3 foundation. If he's going to testify that his knowledge
4 regarding the perception is based upon hearsay, people are
5 telling him what the perception of Acis is, it's rank hearsay.
6 So if the basis is what others are telling him, it's hearsay
7 and it's not admissible; there's no exception to that. So --

8 MR. CRUCIANI: It's not offered to prove the truth of
9 the matter asserted. Doesn't matter whether they in their
10 heart of hearts believe it. It's just what's been
11 communicated and how they respond to that.

12 THE COURT: Okay --

13 MR. SHAW: It's --

14 THE COURT: -- overruled.

15 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

16 THE COURT: I'll allow it.

17 Q. Do you deal with market participants in the CLO industry?

18 A. Yes.

19 Q. Give us a general overview of the nature of those
20 dealings

21 A. Especially around these transactions, I've dealt directly
22 with two investment banks and with the equity holders.

23 Q. Okay. And has the subject of the Acis brand name come up
24 in those discussions?

25 A. Countless times.

1 Q. What has been communicated to you?

2 A. That it is so toxic that it's impossible to sell the
3 bonds with Acis as the manager, that you would not be able to
4 raise the equity and, due to this litigation and allegations
5 that've been in the litigations and the press, by Mr. Terry's
6 actions, that nothing can be associated with the Acis brand
7 and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO.

8 Q. Who has communicated that to you?

9 A. Goldman Sachs, equity holders, large law firms that do
10 structured products, CLO work for a living, and Mizuho.

11 Q. What role was Goldman Sachs slated to have in this case?

12 A. They were the investment banker that was going to
13 refinance these CLOs.

14 Q. Who is the current investment banker?

15 A. Mizuho.

16 Q. Why is Goldman Sachs not the investment banker?

17 A. They dropped out because of the Acis name and dealing
18 with these Acis transactions.

19 Q. How did what you were hearing about the Acis name impact
20 the decision of whether or not Acis would continue as the
21 collateral manager in these ventures?

22 A. The bondholders, the -- and -- existing and purchasing,
23 and the equity holders, existing and new equity holders, said
24 categorically, with absolute certainty, if there's any 25 relation to Acis, the Acis brand, the Acis structure, we have

1 no interest in doing business with you at all.

2 Q. How were these -- how was this new reissue transaction
3 marketed? What was the document that was sent to the
4 investors?

5 A. Was called a circular, and it lays out -- it's
6 essentially a term sheet of how the deal will look.

7 Q. Was there any discussion in the circular about who the
8 collateral manager would be in the new deal?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. Who was it?

11 A. Highland Capital Loan -- it's that HCLOM -- sorry,
12 there's just so many names; I'd have to look at the chart.

13 Q. A Highland entity?

14 A. A Highland affiliate, correct, yes.

15 Q. Not Acis?

16 A. Correct.

17 Q. Is it important that these offering circulars be
18 accurate?

19 A. They have to be.

20 Q. What are the penalties if they're not?

21 A. Securities fraud, negligent misrep., fraud in the 22 inducement. I mean, it's severe.

23 Q. Okay. And so the information that the investors had --
24 what information did they have at the time they're making
25 their investment? What were they told as to who that

1 investment manager would be?

2 A. It would be a new entity per their request.

3 Q. What would be -- would it be of any concern to you -- and
4 if so, how -- if they changed that after the investment
5 decision was made in part (indiscernible)?

6 A. We'd have to go and redo the circular, go out and
7 resolicit the bond and equity tranches. It -- it would
8 essentially be a recasting of the entire deal, and then it
9 looks like you don't have your ducks in a row. They're more
10 likely to not fix.

11 Q. And then what rights would the new investors have to say,
12 well -- say, now you're telling me there's a new -- Acis is 13 back in the play, what rights would they have in terms of 14 going forward or not?

15 A. Rescission, various breaches, you know, lost
16 relationship, goodwill, brand again. I mean, it's -- it's a
17 whole host of things, probably a lot that I couldn't even
18 think of at the top of my head.

19 Q. Okay. Another thing -- let's go to Exhibit 7, the 20 indenture, paragraph 8.3(e), which is page 164. This is what 21 Mr. Terry and I just got done discussing. He pointed me to 22 this in response to my question whether there was anything in
23 the documents that gave the collateral manager effectively a 24 veto right over the (indiscernible) transaction. Recall that
25 discussion?

1 A. Correct.

2 Q. Bloomberg issued some media publications as well, right?

3 A. Correct.

4 Q. There was a Dealbreaker internet post about the dispute,
5 right?

6 A. I remember that, yes.

7 Q. Right. And this issue with Mr. Terry having recorded
8 while he was an employee of Highland was well known to the
9 market, right?

10 A. I would assume so.

11 Q. So despite the fact that this is common knowledge that 12 Mr. Terry did this, you have Mr. Covitz, who's running Acis in 13 August of 2017, well after all this stuff comes out, saying
14 that Acis still intends to issue new CLOs, right?

15 A. Yes, that was the plan.

16 Q. And Acis is risk-retention-compliant, right?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. And Acis has been risk-retention-compliant?

19 A. As far as I understand, yes.

20 Q. Yet now, fast forward to October or November of 2017 into 21 the new year in 2018, all of a sudden, this noise about Mr.
22 Terry recording is what creates the toxic nature of the Acis
23 brand; is that right?

24 A. No, I don't think that's -- the timing is right. I think
25 the toxicity was there, but I think the effectuation was

1 actually around this mechanism.

2 Q. You're familiar with the news article that came out in
3 The Wall Street Journal after the award was made public, when
4 Mr. Terry went to confirm that award, right?

5 A. Yes, I do.

6 Q. But one of the things that's changed since Mr. Covitz
7 makes this representation in this document that's posted on
8 Highland's website about Acis' intent to issue new CLOs as 9 Acis and now, is that we've got an arbitration award and we've
10 got a judgment, right?

11 A. And we have third-party investors that said we don't want
12 to be involved in this brand; and their equity is one of the 13 reasons that new CLOs can be launched.

14 Q. I want to follow up on that. Those third-party
15 investors, they never told Highland or Mr. Dondero or you or 16 Mr. Covitz that in order for them to invest that they were 17 going to bar this new entity -- this Highland Cayman entity or 18 the Delaware new Highland CLO entity -- from paying for the
19 transfer of these CMAs, right?

20 A. What do you mean by "paying for the transfers"?

21 Q. Paying some amount of consideration for Acis to transfer
22 the management contract?

23 A. No, they just said we want things to be structured in 24 this way or we're not investing.

25 Q. Right. They didn't say hey, we'll do the deal, but as a

1 condition of doing the deal, we want you to transfer these
2 assets -- this collateral-management agreement from Acis to
3 Acis Cayman; and we don't want you to pay -- we don't want
4 Acis Cayman to pay a dollar for the transfer of that CMA?

5 A. Well, I think there's two questions. I'll try to address
6 them both.

7 It was call the deal and terminate the CMAs or transfer
8 the CMAs. That's question one. So yes, they not only
9 necessitated, they demanded it.

10 How we paid consideration for those transfers to Acis,
11 they didn't have any involvement in it.

12 Q. Right. I mean, again, I may be belaboring the point, but
13 I think it's an important one. These investors' involvement
14 is not an impediment to Acis receiving value in exchange for 15 the transfer of the CMAs?

16 A. I disagree.

17 Q. Tell me why?

18 A. If they do not become investors or you cannot reset or 19 refi, the deals will be called and therefore Acis' CMAs don't 20 have any value.

21 Q. No, no, no. What I'm saying is, everything is the same, 22 right? The transaction that's going forward on the 13th is 23 the same. Everything. Right?

24 A. Wrong.

25 Q. No, no. This is -- a hypothetical, what I'm saying.

1 A. Oh, I'm sorry. Okay, I misunderstood.

2 Q. All right. Everything is going forward as is, right?

3 It's going to close on the 13th. There's going to be a 4 transfer of the collateral-management agreement. There's 5 going to be a reset. All these things are going to happen,
6 right, just like you planned. The one variable that's changed
7 is that instead of Acis receiving nothing for the transfer of 8 the collateral-management agreement, is that Acis receives
9 something for the transfer of the collateral-management
10 agreement to a Highland affiliate.

11 A. Correct. But they weren't going to receive anything from 12 a refi or a reset or a call anyway.

13 Q. I understand that.

14 A. Okay.

15 Q. But there's nothing that the investors are saying that 16 stops Highland Cayman or Highland or anybody else giving Acis
17 value for the CMAs.

18 A. As a directive from the investors; is that what you're 19 asking me?

20 Q. Right.

21 A. No, they have not given that directive. Their only 22 directive was call and get rid of Acis or get rid of Acis or 23 we're not doing the deal through a reset.

24 Q. All right, so you said that when Acis was set up that -- 25 in 2011, that that was directly analogous to what this new

1 transaction that you're doing or that Highland and its
2 affiliates are doing with regard to the reset and the 3 transfers of the collateral-management agreement. Do you
4 remember that?

5 A. Yeah, the idea of Acis and -- yes.

6 Q. Right.

7 A. Correct.

8 Q. Now, when --

9 A. A new brand.

10 Q. Right. Now, when Acis was set up, Highland had existing 11 CLOs that it managed, right?

12 A. Correct.

13 Q. None of those existing collateral-management agreements 14 from Highland were transferred as a part of the formation of 15 Acis to Acis, right?

16 A. I don't recall, but I think Mr. Terry earlier said one
17 CLO was taken over and managed by Acis. I just don't remember 18 how it was effectuated, and I didn't remember that till he 19 said it.

20 Q. But you don't know if that CLO was originally managed by 21 Highland or if it was managed by some other third party?

22 A. I believe he said it was managed by Highland. But 23 again --

24 Q. I --

25 A. -- Mr. Terry would know more than me. I just can't

1 bankers didn't want to be involved with the name.

2 THE COURT: All right, late '16 or early 2017. All
3 right. Well, how then, were you all able to do the refi on 4 CLO 2?

5 THE WITNESS: Well, because I think CLO 2 was before 6 things got to the point where people would say no, because 7 there was successive articles as things developed in the 8 litigation.

9 THE COURT: Okay. When was CLO 2, the refi closed?

10 THE WITNESS: I believe it was closed on April, but 11 they usually take several months to effectuate. So that 12 was -- call it -- and these are just generalizations. But 13 let's say you start on January 2017, you'll close March or 14 April of '17. And that process is already ongoing, just like 15 in these resets, things were ongoing.

16 THE COURT: Well, the name got toxic late 2016 or 17 early 2017.

18 THE WITNESS: Correct. So you had a bank willing to 19 do it, and then it got to the point to where they didn't want 20 to be involved in ongoing litigation. The snowball just got 21 larger.

22 THE COURT: Well, but April 2017, there was a refi
23 with Acis as the portfolio manager on CLO 2.

24 THE WITNESS: Correct.

25 THE COURT: I'm trying to understand why was

1 everything fine and rosy in April 2002 (sic) to have Acis in 2 there, even though its name had gotten toxic in late 2016 or 3 early 2017, and now just no go, no one will touch it?

4 THE WITNESS: I don't think it was rosy. I think it
5 was tolerable. And then as things got worse and there was 6 more mud that was slung, it became intolerable.

7 And you also have the addition of the third-party
8 investor coming in who gets to start calling the shots.

9 THE COURT: Okay. When was the decision made to do
10 this refi on CLO 3?

11 THE WITNESS: That began back in the May/June time
12 frame on that particular CLO, because that's when I got 13 involved on the due diligence calls with the third-party
14 investor. And it wasn't just about 3; it was about resetting 15 them all.

16 THE COURT: All. All the others.

17 THE WITNESS: And then the actual structure, Your 18 Honor, is what dictates why they were taken out of order, just 19 the way they economically worked.

20 THE COURT: Okay. Um-hum. Um-hum.

21 So May/June of 2017, discussion of doing a refi on 22 all of the five remaining?

23 THE WITNESS: Yes, with the new equity investor.
24 Then they were able to dictate this is what we want the world
25 to look like that we'll be sticking our 150 million dollars.

1 THE COURT: Okay. When did the offering circular go
2 out for the one you want to close February 13th?

3 THE WITNESS: I don't know the exact date, but it was 4 sometime last fall-ish. It may have been after that. I just 5 don't recall. Because they would be drafted; they would be 6 changed; you had Goldman doing some; then it got changed. If 7 anyone knows the date -- I simply don't know the date.

8 THE COURT: Okay. This is a really big deal.

9 THE WITNESS: No, I know.

10 THE COURT: And you don't know the date?

11 THE WITNESS: That's -- I know. I just don't have 12 this memorized. Does anybody know when the offer circular 13 went out on 3?

14 THE COURT: You don't know?

15 THE WITNESS: I can't remember now.

16 THE COURT: It wasn't -- you don't know if it was 17 before or after October 20th, 2017?

18 THE WITNESS: Oh, I think it was after. The circular 19 goes out when everything else is finished in terms of this is 20 what we're going to do; this is what the terms are going to 21 look like; this is what the structure's going to look like.

22 THE COURT: Well, it had to be after this Exhibit 22,
23 when Goldman is saying --

24 THE WITNESS: Oh, yes, it was after --

25 THE COURT: -- we're not going to do it.

1 November 3, 2017. And you'll see at the beginning paragraph
2 the parties are Acis, Highland, and then an entity called
3 Highland CLO Management, Ltd. with a acronym "HCLOM". Do you
4 know the function or purpose of HCLOM?

5 A. Not -- not specifically.

6 Q. And there are a lot of acronyms here, so let me maybe 7 help you out on this one if I may. I believe this was the 8 entity designed to be the successor portfolio manager to Acis.
9 Does that perhaps refresh your memory on it?

10 (Sneeze)

11 A. Bless you. Yes, okay.

12 Q. Okay, and let's go back to the signature page here. And 13 there's your signature on behalf of Highland and on behalf of 14 Acis. And then there's actually another signature here on 15 behalf of Highland CLO Management, Ltd. I'm not sure if you 16 can make out that signature or not. Do you know who's 17 actually signing that? Can you tell?

18 A. No. I imagine it's one of the board members of that 19 entity.

20 Q. And why is it that this Cayman entity has a -- is a -- is 21 signing this agreement; do you know?

22 A. I believe -- I would -- I'm guessing it's a -- a 23 requisite for a Cayman Island entity to have approval of the 24 board member -- or a board member.

25 Q. Okay, and I see this is on behalf of the director, this

1 signature you see there at the bottom?

2 A. Yes.

3 Q. All right, now, this timing wise was entered about two
4 weeks after the arbitration award. So first question is did
5 you have any role in negotiating Exhibit 16?

6 A. No.

7 Q. What role, if any, did you play in connection with 8 Exhibit 16?

9 A. Just final approval.

10 Q. Do you know -- do you have any understanding about what 11 group of people would have been responsible for putting 12 together the document -- for putting together the document?

13 A. Sure. Yeah, I mean, the general context is we'd been
14 negotiating for months with a large institutional investor out 15 of Boston to come in for approximately fifty percent of the 16 ALF. And the investor came into fifty percent of the ALF
17 based on a schedule of refining -- refining and redoing of the 18 various different Acis transactions.

19 The refi -- the refining the whole operation of the ALF
20 post the investor coming in from Boston was all dependent upon 21 getting as far away from Acis and a new collateral manager as 22 possible. And so this was part of that as far as I
23 understand.

24 Q. To your understanding, was that institutional investor
25 willing to invest if Acis remained as collateral manager?

1 A. No, the way it was described to me, which I believe and
2 have no reason to disbelieve even at this point, is no
3 investor or no underwriter wanted to have any legacy or 4 reputational exposure to Acis, period.

5 Q. And again, this is sort of coming full circle. Highland
6 had this problem '08, '09 period and now it's Acis having this
7 brand period.

8 A. Yeah, I would describe it as different. I mean, Highland 9 back in the day was performance related to real estate. You
10 know, the Acis problem is terrorism around a former employee 11 trying to reputationally tarnish in the press as much as 12 possible a brand.

13 Q. Okay. Let's look at a couple of the whereas clauses here
14 if we may, on the first page. The third whereas clause says, 15 "Highland has notified Acis that Highland is unwilling to 16 continue to provide support personnel and other critical 17 services to Acis with respect to the CLOs." Did Highland have 18 that right to do that?

19 A. Yes.

20 Q. And why was that Highland's position?

21 A. It -- it's under no obli -- it's under no obligation. As 22 a matter of fact, the -- the only reason why it was at this 23 point was to just facilitate the refinancings, you know, but 24 it -- but it's under no obligation to provide services to a 25 shell.

MOTION FOR 2004 EXAMINATION OF INVESTOR IN HIGHLAND CLO FUNDING, LTD. AND CERTAIN AFFILIATES THEREOF

TO THE HONORABLE STACEY G.C. JERNIGAN, UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE:

Robin Phelan (the "Trustee"), the Chapter 11 Trustee of Acis Capital Management, L.P. ("Acis LP") and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC ("Acis GP," together with Acis LP, the "Debtors" or "Acis"), the Debtors in the above-styled and numbered bankruptcy cases (the "Cases"), files this Motion for 2004 Examination of Investor in Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. and Certain Affiliates Thereof (the "2004 Motion"), and respectfully states the following:

BACKGROUND

1. Acis LP is portfolio manager for certain collateralized loan obligations (“CLOs”) including: (i) Acis CLO 2013-1 LTD. (“CLO-1”), (ii) Acis CLO 2014-3 (“CLO-3”), (iii) Acis CLO 2014-4 LTD. (“CLO-4”), (iv) Acis CLO 2014-5 LTD. (“CLO-5”), and (v) Acis CLO 2015-6 LTD. (“CLO-6”). CLO-1, CLO-3, CLO-4, CLO-5, and CLO-6 are collectively referred to herein as the “Acis CLOs.”

2. Acis LP manages the Acis CLOs through: (i) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-1, dated March 18, 2013 (the “CLO-1 PMA”); (ii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-3, dated February 25, 2014 (the “CLO-3 PMA”); (iii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-4, dated June 5, 2014 (the “CLO-4 PMA”); (iv) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-5, dated November 18, 2014 (the “CLO-5 PMA”); and that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-6, dated April 16, 2015 (the “CLO-6 PMA”). The CLO-1 PMA, CLO-3 PMA, CLO-4 PMA, CLO-5 PMA, and CLO-6 PMA are collectively referred to herein as the “PMAs.” Acis LP generates revenue primarily through the management of the Acis CLOs via the PMAs.<sup>1</sup>

3. Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”), formerly known as Acis Loan Funding (“ALF”), is the holder of either all or the majority of the subordinated notes in each of the Acis CLOs, except for CLO-1, in which it possesses a blocking position.

4. HCLOF has taken many positions throughout the course of this case that appear to be economically irrational, contrary to the best interests of HCLOF and its investors, and instead designed to ensure the destruction of the Acis CLOs so that creditors of Acis, and Joshua Terry in particular, receive nothing or as little as possible from the Acis bankruptcy estate. Recently,<sup>2</sup> William Scott, the director of HCLOF, testified that he wants to “reset” the Acis CLOs to bring them in line with current market interest rates and that the inability to do the reset is causing damage to HCLOF in the amount of approximately $295,000 per week.<sup>3</sup> Likewise, J.P. Sevilla, in-house counsel for Highland Capital Management, LP (“HCM,” and together with its affiliates, including HCLOF, the “Highlands”), recently swore in an affidavit filed in Guernsey that a reset transaction, which involves changing the interest rate, reinvestment terms and non-call period in the Acis CLOs, would be extremely beneficial to HCLOF because it would “create greater cash at the end of the payment waterfall for the holder of the sub-notes,” and was cheaper and easier to accomplish than creating a new CLO or doing a refinancing transaction because the existing collateral pool stays the same, a new issuer is not required, and the legal expenses are much lower.<sup>4</sup> Mark Okada, a principal and 25% owner of HCM, testified that not doing a reset was “a bad thing” and that “we don’t want that.”<sup>5</sup> Finally, counsel for Acis (while it was receiving shared services and sub-advisory services from HCM) likewise concurred that it “makes no sense” for an equity investor to just sit back and watch its dividend diminish without requesting a reset transaction.<sup>6</sup>

5. To address HCLOF’s request, the Trustee’s Second Amended Joint Plan (the “Plan”) [Docket No. 612] provides for such a reset to be performed by the Reorganized Acis and its sub-advisor, Brigade Capital Management, LP (“Brigade”). Although Mr. Scott, Mr. Sevilla, and all of the experts in this case have testified that pursuing a reset transaction would make the Acis CLOs more profitable to HCLOF, HCLOF has indicated that it will not reset the Acis CLOs with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade under the Plan. Instead, despite the substantial potential losses to HCLOF and its investors, it appears that HCLOF will wind-down the Acis CLOs by declining to reset them prior to the expiration of their respective reinvestment periods which, at least for Acis CLO-3, will expire in a few short months, on February 1, 2019.

<sup>2</sup> As the Court will recall, HCLOF previously requested a liquidation of the Acis CLOs after the entry of the order for relief, which the Court enjoined, but then vigorously contested the Trustee’s original plan which would have resulted in HCLOF receiving mid-NAV plus 25 basis points, an amount well in excess of the liquidation value of the subordinated notes.

6. Such a decision by HCLOF would “make no sense” and be contrary to its own best interests. Although HCLOF/ALF was at one time wholly-owned by an affiliate of Highland, it did an offering memorandum in November 2017 and, as a result, is now owned 49.985% by certain affiliates of a large investor and manager of private equity funds (“Investor”),<sup>7</sup> and 50.015% by affiliates (49.0153%) and employees (0.9997%) of Highland. Despite its large ownership percentage in HCLOF and the alleged millions in losses that will result if the Acis CLOs are not reset to make them consistent with prevailing market conditions, the Investor has not yet appeared in this case or taken any position in this bankruptcy case. Further, the Trustee does not have any information as to whether the Investor would be amenable to pursuing a reset with Reorganized Acis and Brigade following confirmation of the Plan. Because time is short if CLO-3 is to be reset before the end of its reinvestment period, the Trustee needs to obtain information from the Investor immediately.

7. During the involuntary trial, a number of representations were made to the Court by counsel for Acis (while HCM was its shared services provider and sub-advisor) that the Investor only invested in HCLOF on the condition that Acis would not have anything to do with the Acis CLOs going forward, and that the Investor would demand its money back if a reset transaction was done with Acis.<sup>8</sup> Likewise, Scott Ellington, general counsel for HCM, testified that the new equity holders (Investor) said, with absolute certainty, that they had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was purportedly toxic and, consequently, nothing associated with Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO.<sup>9</sup> Mr. Ellington also testified that, because it would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, the Investor had the ability to “start calling the shots” and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.<sup>10</sup> Finally, Mr. Okada testified that a reset transaction could not be performed by Acis because the market would not accept Acis as a portfolio manager and Acis was no longer risk-retention compliant.<sup>11</sup>

8. However, circumstances have changed dramatically in the six months since the conclusion of the involuntary trial, and the harbingers of doom predicted by the Highlands have not come to fruition. For example, the Court found that the Highlands’ self-serving allegations regarding the Acis brand being toxic were not credible or convincing because Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. closed in April 2017 with Acis as the portfolio manager.<sup>12</sup> Further, the operations of Acis LP have stabilized in bankruptcy and Acis LP, with the assistance of Brigade, has not only continued to perform its duties under the PMAs, but improved the condition of the CLOs through the acquisition of additional loans. In addition, although the Highlands took actions that rendered Acis non-complaint with certain risk-retention requirements,<sup>13</sup> such requirements were determined to be inapplicable to CLO managers and such decision was not appealed by regulators to the Supreme Court.<sup>14</sup> As a result, there are neither reputational issues nor any other impediments to the ability of the Reorganized Acis, with the assistance of Brigade, to both perform the resets and continue to serve as the portfolio manager of any reset Acis CLOs. Finally, Brigade has explored the market and believes that the Reorganized Acis and Brigade will be able to reset the Acis CLOs on terms that improve the economics of the Acis CLOs if a reset is requested by HCLOF in a timely fashion.

9. The Trustee needs information from the Investor regarding whether its purported refusal to doing a reset with Acis was based on the erroneous assumptions articulated during the involuntary trial that Acis would not be able to perform the resets due to risk-retention issues, unsubstantiated reputational issues, or an alleged inability to accomplish the resets without the assistance of the Highlands. None of these purported concerns exist to impair the ability of the Reorganized Acis and Brigade to perform a reset. Further, although these matters were alleged by the Highlands, no one from the Investor ever testified during the involuntary trial. As a result, the Trustee needs to examine the Investor to determine whether the Investor ever actually had such concerns regarding proceeding with Acis. The Trustee also needs information regarding whether the Investor presently has any concerns about pursuing reset transactions with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade under the Plan now that Acis has been able to successfully serve as the portfolio manager for the Acis CLOs on a post-petition basis and there are no impediments to the ability of the Reorganized Acis and Brigade to pursue a reset on the Acis CLOs. This is particularly necessary given Mr. Ellington's previous sworn testimony that the Investor is the party calling the shots for HCLOF with respect to any reset transactions. Time is also of the essence as the reinvestment period for Acis CLO-3 will expire on February 1, 2019.

10. Finally, although the Highlands have represented to the Court that the Investor is an unrelated and independent third party, a decision by an unrelated and independent third party to refuse the opportunity to reset the Acis CLOs with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade “makes no sense” and would appear to be economically irrational given that Brigade has at least as good of a track record (if not a better track record) than does Highland in relation to its CLO business. As a result, the Trustee seeks information regarding the relationship, if any, between the Investor and the Highlands.

RELIEF SOUGHT AND GROUNDS THEREFOR

11. The Trustee requests entry of an Order, pursuant to Section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and Rule 2004, authorizing and directing (i) the production of documents by the Investor in response to the document requests attached as Exhibit A; and (ii) testimony by one or more corporate representatives of the Investor through depositions, including testimony relating to the matters set forth in Exhibit B attached hereto. A copy of the Trustee’s proposed order granting the relief requested herein is attached as Exhibit C hereto.<sup>15</sup>

12. The Rule 2004 information requested in this 2004 Motion will provide Debtor with information it needs to understand (i) the Investor’s intentions at the time it invested in HCLOF, (ii) the Investor’s position regarding doing the reset transactions with Acis prior to the entry of the order for relief on April 13, 2018, (iii) the Investor’s current position regarding whether HCLOF should do a reset with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade, (iv) whether and to what extent the Investor is “calling the shots” for HCLOF, and (v) the relationship, if any, between the Investor and the Highlands.

<sup>15</sup> Again, out of an abundance of caution, the identity of the Investor is not disclosed in the proposed order. At the hearing on the Motion, the Trustee will ask the Court to determine whether any order on the Motion should either identify the Investor, identify but redact the name of the Investor, or be entered under seal.

13. Bankruptcy Rule 2004 allows a party in interest, including the Trustee, to examine any entity regarding matters that may affect the administration of the Debtors' estate. See, e.g., In re Summit Corp., 891 F. 2d 1, 5 (1st Cir. 1989). Bankruptcy Rule 2004 also allows the Court to order parties-in-interest to produce documents. See In re Correra, No. 16-30728-SGJ-7, 2018 Bankr. LEXIS 2498, *14 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2018).

14. It is well settled that a Rule 2004 examination is broad in scope. See, e.g., In re Washington Mutual, Inc., 408 B.R. 45, 49 (Bankr. D. Del. 2009) ("[t]he scope of a Rule 2004 examination is unfettered and broad.") (internal quotation marks omitted). "Third parties are subject to examination pursuant to Rule 2004 if they have knowledge of the debtor's affairs." Correra, 2018 Bankr. LEXIS 2498 at *60 (citing In re GHR Energy Corp., 33 B.R. 451, 453-54 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1983)). "Courts tend to be reluctant to allow 'escape from a Rule 2004 examination unless the party can show that the examination' would be 'oppressive or burdensome.'" Id. at *60 (citing 9 Collier On Bankruptcy ¶ 2004.01[8] (Richard Levin et al. eds. 16th ed.)).

15. The Trustee does not propose to use the examination for any improper purpose, such as to annoy, embarrass or oppress the party being examined. See In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., 123 B.R. 702, 712 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991).

16. The requested information in Exhibit A, and the deposition topics reflected on the attached Exhibit B, relates to, among other things, the Investor's intentions at the time it invested in HCLOF, the Investor's prior position regarding pursuing a reset of the Acis CLOs with Acis as the portfolio manager, the Investor's current position regarding pursuing a reset transaction with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade under the Plan, whether the Investor is actually calling the shots for HCLOF, and the relationship between the Investor and the Highlands. The requested information is within the scope of Bankruptcy Rule 2004 because it relates to the Plan and the administration of this bankruptcy case.

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, the Trustee respectfully requests that the Court: (i) grant the 2004 Motion; (ii) enter the proposed order attached hereto as Exhibit C, (iii) order the requested examination under oath of one or more corporate representatives of the Investor under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2004; (iv) order Investor, within thirty (30) days of entry of an order approving the 2004 Motion, to produce the records requested in Exhibit A; (v) order the attorneys for the Trustee be authorized to execute and serve any and all subpoenas that are necessary for the requested production of documents; and (vi) grant the Trustee such further relief, whether in law or in equity, to which he may be justly entitled.

SEC Financial Crisis Matter

As discussed, the SEC has undertaken an unprecedented level of audits and field office referrals to enforcement following the financial crisis. In connection therewith, on September 25, 2014, Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland") entered into a settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") resulting in the SEC issuing an order. This order involves certain principal and cross transactions that occurred between 2007 and 2009 that were generally executed in an effort to generate or maintain liquidity for the advised accounts during the financial crisis. Highland did ultimately receive client consent for many of the transactions; however, this consent was received after the transactions had settled, and therefore did not comply with the requirements of Advisers Act Section 206(3). In addition, the order also cited Highland for a books and records violation and required Highland to pay a civil monetary penalty of $225,000.

In connection with the settlement, we engaged a third party compliance consultant to review our policies and procedures and a full year of recent trading activity. While no violations were identified, as one would expect for an engagement of this nature the consultant did recommend some minor procedural enhancements, all of which we promptly implemented. The consultant issued its final report in March 2016 in which it acknowledged all recommendations were implemented and no further recommendations were required. In June 2016, Highland submitted its final certification and written narrative demonstrating compliance with all undertakings of the settlement to the SEC. No further undertakings are required under the settlement.

For additional context, this matter spanned over 5 years, involved over one million pages of document production, and resulted in only the modest findings and $225k financial settlement set forth in the order. Some summary points of note include:

- There are no fraud-based violations, disgorgement, or findings against any individuals.
- The cross transactions referenced in the order primarily occurred during the height of the financial crisis in 2008 and 2009. Most of the Trades were executed in an effort to generate or maintain liquidity for advised accounts.
- Most of the Trades took place during September and October 2008 when, with the onset of the financial crisis, asset values were dropping across the market, the market for credit products was essentially frozen, and margin calls were being made on Highland's accounts.
- Highland did ultimately receive client consent for many of the Trades; however, this consent was received after the trade had occurred.
- The matter also involves a books and records charge, which we believe was substantially related to records issues with our former institutional administrator, which we have since replaced.
- We have since implemented numerous policy and procedure enhancements, and believe we maintain a world class compliance program.

Crusader

In July 2016, the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund filed a lawsuit against Highland Capital Management, L.P. related to the liquidation of the Crusader Fund. The Committee's allegations stem from a contract dispute over a plan of liquidation related to the fund that has been in wind-down since 2008.

Rather than liquidating the fund in the midst of the financial crisis for pennies on the dollar, through Highland's unwavering efforts it was able to develop a liquidation plan to maximize investor recoveries. Notably, a super-majority of investors of all classes approved the plan. Through July 2016, Highland had distributed to Crusader Fund investors $1.55 billion of the target distribution amount of $1.70 billion, as per the liquidation plan approved by the majority of the Fund's investors. Cash distributions to date are more than $600 million above the Crusader Fund's net asset value of $900 million at the 2009 market trough.

What should otherwise be hailed as a remarkable success story of Highland navigating a levered hedge fund liquidation through the financial crisis has unfortunately taken a skewed narrative due to the impact of a separate court order that halted the fund's liquidation and distribution activities for 36 months. In addition to resuming those activities once the court order was lifted, Highland received its previously earned, fully vested and unforfeitable fees following consultation with outside counsel. While the Crusader Fund Redeemer Committee's attorneys disagree with this determination, Highland continues to believe that its actions were legally permissible and disputes the allegations in the complaint.

In conjunction with the lawsuit, the Crusader Fund Redeemer Committee elected to replace Highland as investment manager for the remainder of the liquidation—a right Highland voluntarily provided to the Redeemer Committee in 2011 under the original liquidation plan. As such, we cooperated in transitioning management and, as investors ourselves, have a shared interest in the subsequent manager's success.

Terry

Mr. Terry was a senior member of Highland's structured products team. In June 2016, Mr. Terry was terminated for cause for various misconduct, including with respect to certain violations of Highland's internal compliance policies. Mr. Terry filed a counterclaim for calculation of his separation compensation. When Highland refused to meet Mr. Terry's demand for separation compensation to which he was not entitled, Mr. Terry made numerous allegations against Highland unrelated to the circumstances of his termination or the calculation of his alleged compensation. Among these, Mr. Terry alleged that Highland violated its duties in connection with the purchase of an asset in Brazil. However, the facts of the transaction are as follows:

- Highland's legal and compliance team was involved with the transaction from inception to ensure that it was handled appropriately.
- Accordingly, the completion of the transaction was made subject to prior receipt of all necessary approvals after full disclosure of all material facts.
- The narrative of material facts disclosure was prepared by Highland's legal and compliance department with involvement by all relevant personnel.
- Prior approval of such transaction was received by the independent directors of the portfolio company involved, together with the independent directors of each of the client accounts with an interest in such company.
- The transaction was also unanimously approved in advance by Highland's internal Conflicts Committee, of which Josh Terry himself was a member and affirmatively approved the transaction.
- Outside legal counsel was consulted with respect to such transaction and provided written legal advice as to the appropriateness of the transaction.

- The transaction was separately reviewed by Highland's independent auditors following Mr. Terry's allegations, which auditors identified no misconduct in connection with such transaction.

All further proceedings on this matter has been referred to arbitration subject to confidentiality.

Daugherty

A Court ruled in 2012 that Mr. Daugherty, a former employee, breached his fiduciary duty to Highland, owed damages to Highland, and ordered Mr. Daugherty to cease using or disclosing Highland's confidential information. Additionally, an award was entered in favor of Mr. Daugherty against a separate incentive compensation entity for an interest that was already escrowed in his name prior to trial and in which he was already vested. The dispute over the amount of his vested interest is on-going. Additionally, Highland from time to time must take action to enforce the permanent injunction against Mr. Daugherty's continuing improper disclosures of Highland's confidential information.

UBS

Highland and certain affiliated investment vehicles are defendants in a complaint filed on February 24, 2009 New York state court by UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch relating to a CLO warehouse facility with respect to which UBS is attempting to extend liability beyond the two entities that bore sole risk of loss under the governing documents. On February 19, 2010, the court dismissed all claims against Highland Capital Management. UBS since has filed additional claims against Highland Capital Management and certain additional investment vehicles. On July 21, 2011, the First Appellate Division again dismissed two of UBS's four claims against Highland Capital, severely limiting the remaining two claims. Certain of UBS's remaining claims currently are being reviewed by the Appellate Division.

Dustin/Mike/Nick,

We write to provide an additional update and more extensive response to the recent Wall Street Journal article and the inaccuracies it contained. The article is the result of a reporter with an agenda, fueled by a lack of oversight and intervention on behalf of the Journal that enabled that agenda to make its way into print to the detriment of Highland and, in turn, our investors.

We hope you can understand that we cannot let this agenda-driven reporting be what defines our firm in the public realm, especially when the reporting challenges the quality of our people, the strength of our culture and the regard we have toward our fundamental responsibility to our clients. For the sake of our employees and our investors, which together are what truly defines Highland, we feel we must correct these inaccuracies and refute the accusations against us. To do so we have contacted Wall Street Journal editor-in-chief Gerard Baker to make him aware of the situation and provide him with the facts that the reporter responsible and his editors received from Highland in advance of the article, yet deemed irrelevant. Attached is the letter we shared last night.

We also will be making public a response that addresses the inaccuracies of the article and the situation we encountered at the Journal. While our response is substantial, we believe a full account of the background here was required given the severity of the claims made in the article. Our brand and reputation as strong investors and fiduciaries for our clients' capital is sacrosanct. Therefore, as unfortunate as it is to have to publicly defend ourselves and create more noise for our firm and our investors, we felt it was acutely necessary to stand up for ourselves and what is right under these circumstances.

As always, please let us know if you have any questions or there is anything additional we can provide.

Thank you,
Hunter

Subject: Wall Street Journal Article

Hello, as you may be aware, the Wall Street Journal published an article (attached) which ran online yesterday and in print this morning on the ongoing compensation dispute between Highland and a former employee, Josh Terry, who was terminated in 2016. Specifically, the article addresses the recently completed arbitration, which resulted in additional compensation awarded to Mr. Terry related to his position in Acis, the structured products affiliate.

Despite our willingness to provide the Wall Street Journal with the relevant facts, the article that was published severely mischaracterizes the situation and provides a misleading account of this and other activities.

Case 19-34054-sqj11 Doc 1735 Filed 01/13/21 Entered 01/13/21 16:53:00 Page 356 of 359
Outside of the compensation award, there were no findings by the arbitrators against Acis. Further, Mr. Terry lost all of his claims against Highland. The firm did not ask Mr. Terry to breach his fiduciary duty, nor did it breach any duty to its investors, and these facts were confirmed by the arbitrators' findings.

Highland has a number of outstanding claims against Mr. Terry, including contract and fiduciary breaches, the malicious taping of co-workers and counter parties for over a year, and other misconduct that contributed to Mr. Terry's termination from Highland. Since Highland's claims were not subject to the arbitration and were stayed pending the completion of the arbitration, they were not addressed by the arbitrators. Now, Highland will have the opportunity to adjudicate these claims in court, which are likely to be substantially larger than the arbitration award.

This situation, while contentious, highlights the strength of our compliance process and culture of accountability, both areas of the firm in which we take great pride. Mr. Terry was found in violation of our compliance standards and Highland took swift action to address that and other misconduct that was uncovered. Thanks to this response, Mr. Terry's misconduct did not affect investors, and Highland took every step to ensure clients' interests were first and foremost protected.

While the dispute has no impact on our investment activities, as always, we welcome any questions you may have. In the meantime, we are so extremely excited about the opportunity to work together with Harbourvest and we are fully committed to managing our clients' money with the highest standards of ethics and execution.

Thank you,
Hunter

equitable powers and empowers it to “issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title.” 11 U.S.C. § 105(a).

15. Bankruptcy Rule 9018 defines the procedures by which a party may move for relief under 11 U.S.C. § 107(b), providing that:

On motion or on its own initiative, with or without notice, the court may make any order which justice requires (1) to protect the estate or any entity in respect of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information . . . .

FED. R. BANKR. P. 9018. Furthermore, Local Rule 9077-1(a) provides, in relevant part, that “[a] party may file under seal any document that a statute or rule requires or permits to be so filed.”

LOCAL BANKR. R. N.D. TEX. 9077-1(a).

16. Based on the foregoing authority, and consistent with the terms of the Protective Order, the Debtor requests that the Court enter the Proposed Order permitting the Debtor to file the Confidential Exhibits under seal to protect the confidentiality of the information contained therein.

NOTICE

17. WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, the Debtor respectfully requests that the Court (i) grant the relief requested in this Motion to Seal, (ii) enter an order, substantially in the form of the Proposed Order, authorizing the filing of the Confidential Exhibits under seal, and

(iii) grant the Debtor such further and additional relief as the Court deems just and proper.

"HCMLP continues to advance the reorganization process toward with the objective of reaching a consensual reorganization with creditors. Given that goal, we are pleased to reach the stage of the process where, after assessing all potential claims, we can identify those that are legitimate and incorporate them accordingly into a final plan.

"While we dispute the allegations made in the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid, our focus is on assessing the claims—along with any others outstanding—in a transparent, orderly manner that helps move HCMLP's reorganization process forward toward a resolution."

BACKGROUND/CLARIFICATION (NOT FOR ATTRIBUTION)

Given the complex history and background here (which is likely challenging to capture concisely in this format), we want to ensure that the various parties involved are characterized accurately. In particular, it's important to note the scale and sophistication of HarbourVest in any summary of their position here. (It's a $70B global investment firm that operates across asset classes and fund/investment structures. And it serves a client base largely comprised of institutional investors, which often means structuring complex, customized investment solutions.) Then it's important to note the background of HarbourVest's involvement here, in that it not only invested in HCLOF, but was an active participant throughout the Acis bankruptcy proceedings, and played a material role in various outcomes related to that case.

We believe that neither the facts nor the law support HarbourVest's "we were too lazy to know" allegations.

Hi Sayed, See below for a statement you can use on the record regarding the filings from Friday that you mentioned. (You can attribute the statement to "a spokesperson for Highland Capital Management, L.P.")

Then I also included some additional information that is not for any kind of attribution. I'm including that to help avoid confusion and prevent any misleading characterization of the parties here, given the complexity of the relationships and involvement in prior legal situations. (I know you've covered those, but they may not be as easy to follow for someone who hasn't been closely involved.)

Please let me know if you have any questions or need any additional information here. And since the filing you referenced is extensive, please let me know if there's anything you plan to include in the story that we may want to address. I tried to make the statement and background broadly applicable, but can revisit if there's anything significant that this doesn't cover.

And thank you again for the flexibility on the timing here.

STATEMENT ON THE FILING

(NOTE: This can be used on the record and attributed to "a spokesperson for Highland Capital Management, L.P. or something similar)

"We dispute the allegations made in the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid and will be found to be without merit. Our focus continues to be on treating all valid claims in a transparent, orderly, and equitable manner, while disputing those that are meritless through the appropriate channels in the court. That focus will assure that HCMLP's reorganization progresses toward an efficient and equitable resolution."

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION FOR BACKGROUND/CLARIFICATION

(NOTE: This is intended for informational purposes only to ensure accuracy; it is not intended for any kind of attribution)

Given the complex history and background here—which is likely difficult to capture concisely in any news story—we want to make sure the various parties involved are characterized accurately.

Two key points on this:

1. It's important to note the scale and sophistication of HarbourVest in any summary of their position on these matters.
  - o It's a $70B global investment firm that operates across asset classes and fund/investment structures.
  - o Its client base is largely comprised of institutional investors, and in descriptions of its service offerings for this audience, the firm highlights its capabilities and experience structuring complex, customized investment solutions.
2. It's also important to note the background of HarbourVest's active and deep involvement in the investment at the center of its complaints.
  - o HarbourVest was not invested in HCLOF as an uninformed, unsophisticated passive investor; it was an active and informed participant from the inception of its investment through all of the Acis bankruptcy proceedings, and HarbourVest played a material role in various outcomes related to that case and its impact on HCLOF.

It's important that readers are aware of these points, as it is impossible to gain a clear understanding of this matter and accurately evaluate the allegations without them. We believe that neither the facts nor the law supports HarbourVest's allegations, but it would be misleading to include that view in any coverage of the allegations without an objective account of those facts.

A spokesperson for Highland told Creditflux: "We dispute the allegations made in the filing and believe the underlying claims are invalid and will be found to be without merit. Our focus continues to be on treating all valid claims in a transparent, orderly, and equitable manner, while disputing those that are meritless through the appropriate channels in the court. That focus will assure that HCMLP's [Highland Capital Management LP] reorganisation progresses toward an efficient and equitable resolution."

A spokesperson for HarbourVest declined to comment on the matter. But in filings the firm says Highland claimed HarbourVest had the ability to control CLO resets, which was one of the reasons the Acis trustee (when that entity went through its own reorganisation) had investigated HarbourVest, on the basis that it was directing the transfer of assets from Acis to Highland.

It further claims in filings that with Highland and its affiliates objecting to and slowing the Acis's chapter 11 proceedings, some of the legal bills were funded by Highland CLO Funding. It estimates the CLO fund has incurred more than $15 million in legal fees, which it should not have been charged.

HarbourVest's investment in Highland CLO funding is believed to be about $150 million, with earlier court filings stating Highland was in talks with a private equity firm about an investment of that size (HarbourVest is a private equity firm, with about $71 billion in assets under management). In November 2017, Creditflux had reported the fund had reached $153 million. HarbourVest states in filings the value of its investment has declined sharply and lays the blame on Highland for conducting the transfers and subsequent actions.

The Acis CLOs that were previously under the Highland umbrella became a separate independent entity as part of Acis's reorganisation, with Terry taking over that business in February 2019. But in an offshoot from Highland's bankruptcy, Acis is at loggerheads with risk retention financier Nearwater Capital over an agreement signed by Highland in 2018.

Thanks for checking in, Sayed. Could you send me the filings when you have a minute? Checking on this now, but that should help expedite the turnaround here given the timing.

HarbourVest fights back over CLO fund investment after Highland's objection

By Sayed Kadiri

Thursday, September 17, 2020

HarbourVest Partners, which was the key investor in Highland CLO Funding, a risk retention vehicle, has shot back at Highland Capital Management LP's claim objection as part of its chapter 11 bankruptcy.

Highland filed the omnibus objection against 92 claims. But HarbourVest, in court filings, maintains that "Highland's actions preceding and following the investment caused serious injury to HarbourVest, leading to damages well in excess of $100 million". Highland filed for bankruptcy protection in October and HarbourVest filed its proof of claim in April.

HarbourVest argues it had not insisted on changing the manager on its CLO fund from Acis to Highland, as Highland had claimed. It adds that Highland had sought to take assets away from Acis following an arbitration award in favour of former Highland employee Josh Terry, which had detrimentally impacted HarbourVest's investment.

HarbourVest invested in Highland CLO Funding (previously known as Acis CLO funding) in November 2017, taking a 49% interest in the fund. It claims that Highland had originally pitched the fund as being managed by Acis Capital Management, which at that point was a Highland affiliate. But over the course of negotiations it changed all references from Acis to Highland, which HarbourVest claims in its filing was done under false pretenses.

Specifically, HarbourVest pinpoints Terry's near-$8 million arbitration award, which he won against his former employer Highland in October 2017, as a turning point. It claims that after this, "Highland orchestrated several transfers that siphoned assets away from Acis".

In 2016, Acis had sold Highland a participation interest based on cashflows deriving from its CLO collateral management agreements for $666,655 plus a $12.6 million note payable from Highland to Acis. In filings, HarbourVest says the note was transferred from Acis to an entity known as Highland CLO Management, but with Acis receiving no consideration for the transfer, when the balance on the note was over $9 million.

HarbourVest claims in its filing that during its due diligence phase on the Highland investment, Highland did not disclose its efforts to strip assets from Acis. When the name of the fund was changed to adopt Highland branding, Highland's reason for doing so was the was "reputational harm" to Acis from Terry's arbitration award, says HarbourVest.

But HarbourVest states in its argument that Highland falsely claimed in court the reason behind the change in manager from Acis to Highland was at HarbourVest's insistence.

CONNECTION INSTRUCTIONS FOR PARTICIPATING IN A WEBEX VIRTUAL HEARING

The court will allow participation in a virtual hearing using either of the following two methods. Please connect at least 10 minutes prior to the hearing time. It is recommended that attorneys discuss the logistics of the WebEx appearance with their clients/witnesses at least 48 hours before the hearing.

Option 1: Using the WebEx app on your smartphone, tablet, laptop, or desktop.

It is strongly preferred that participants who may speak during a hearing use the WebEx application rather than using the "call-in" option described in Option 2.

Witnesses and attorneys who anticipate giving extensive legal argument or conducting examination are required to utilize the video function. The court may consider special requests for other appearance options on a case by case basis.

Please connect using only one device. Using two or more devices may cause audio feedback issues.

If using a phone or tablet for video, it should be set in a stationary position. Holding a phone or tablet in your hand while speaking does not yield a good video for the court.

NOTE: If you are experiencing audio issues when using the WebEx application, you may use the "Call Me At" selection under "Audio Connection" to move just the audio portion of the WebEx conference to your telephone.

Option 2: Call-in via phone (audio only).

The meeting number/access code changes with each meeting and will be made available, along with the dial-in number on the WebEx link and instructions sheet found on the judge's webpage and/or on the ECF docket for the case.

HELPFUL HINTS AND ETIQUETTE

- A. Please use the mute function when you are not speaking. Please be aware that sometimes the court mutes everyone when there is background noise. When you want to speak, make sure you are not on mute. Call-in users should dial *6 to unmute your line.
- B. Remember to state your name for the record each time before speaking and speak slowly and clearly so the court can get a good record.
- C. Use headphones whenever possible, especially if using a desktop PC with external speakers. We have found that newer iPhones provide the best visual and audio feed – better than most desktop computers. If you are on a personal computer, headphones or earbuds are required for those who need to speak during the hearing.
- D. During examination, attorneys and witnesses should use a separate camera and microphone when possible. To avoid feedback, parties using separate devices must not be in the same room. The court may consider special requests on a case by case basis.
- E. WebEx participants may use the "share" button to easily share their screen or document with the court or other WebEx participants. Press "stop sharing" to remove the presentation from the meeting.
- F. When making an appearance from a vehicle, please park in a safe location with windows rolled up (to minimize background distraction and noise) and use a headset that is ear-to-phone (not the vehicle's hands-free speaker-phone option).
- G. Suggestions for those participating in a WebEx hearing from home: If you are having connectivity problems, turn off devices that may be using bandwidth on your home network. Devices or applications such as Facetime, Roku, streaming media players, video games, or large downloads can negatively impact the audio and video quality of the WebEx meeting.
- H. Participants are reminded that they should wear attire suitable for court.
- I. Participants who wish to test their WebEx connection or the share screen functionality in advance of the hearing may arrange a "practice run" by contacting the courtroom deputy.

EXHIBITS AND DEMONSTRATIVE AIDS

Exhibits should be filed ahead of time by the date that they would normally be exchanged pursuant to our local rules using the "notice" or "list (witness/exhibit/generic)" event in ECF. For voluminous exhibits, please contact the courtroom deputy, as it may be necessary for you to provide the court with an exhibit notebook or zip file in advance of the hearing.

Demonstrative aids and Power Points should also be filed prior to the hearing, if possible. If not, WebEx has the ability to allow you to share your screen, or a particular document, with everyone in the hearing. If these documents are admitted as exhibits, they would then have to be filed after the hearing.

During the hearing, lawyers can refer to (and offer) their exhibits by referencing the exhibit's docket number for the court and all to access. After the hearing, the court will create a Minute Entry

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Partners L.P. on behalf of funds and accounts under management (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant manages investment funds that are limited partners in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third

Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor’s employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HV International VIII Secondary L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

DALLAS DIVISION

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings

in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”), by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this omnibus objection (the “Objection”), seeking entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A (the “Order”), (i) disallowing certain duplicate claims listed on Schedule 1 to the Order (the “Duplicate Claims”), (ii) reducing and allowing certain overstated claims listed on Schedule 2 (the “Overstated Claims”) in amounts which comport with the Debtor’s books and records, (iii) disallowing certain claims that were filed after the applicable bar date listed on Schedule 3 to the Order (the “Late-Filed Claims”), (iv) disallowing certain claims that have already been satisfied listed on Schedule 4 to the Order (the “Satisfied Claims”), (v) disallowing certain claims for which the Debtor’s books and records show no liability listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order (the “No-Liability Claims”), and (vi) disallowing claims which contain insufficient documentation listed on Schedule 7 to the Order (the “Insufficient-Documentation Claims,” and together with the Duplicate Claims, the Overstated Claims, the Late-Filed Claims, the Satisfied Claims, and the No-Liability Claims, the “Disputed Claims”). In support of this Objection, the Debtor respectfully represents as follows:

I. JURISDICTION

1. The Court has jurisdiction to consider and determine this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334. This is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(1) and (b)(2)(A), (B) and (O). Venue is proper before this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

2. The statutory bases for the relief requested herein are sections 105(a) and 502(b) of title 11 of the United States Code (the “Bankruptcy Code”), Rules 3007 and 9014 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the “Bankruptcy Rules”), and Rules 3007-1 and 3007-2 of the Local Bankruptcy Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Local Rules”).

II. BACKGROUND

3. On October 16, 2019 (the “Petition Date”), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the “Delaware Court”).

4. On October 29, 2019, the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the “Committee”) was appointed by the United States Trustee in the Delaware Court.

5. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor’s bankruptcy case to this Court [Docket No. 186].<sup>2</sup>

6. The Debtor has continued in the possession of its property and has continued to operate and manage its business as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code. No trustee or examiner has been appointed in this chapter 11 case.

7. On March 2, 2020, the Court entered its Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488] (the “Bar Date Order”). The Bar Date Order fixed April 8, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time) as the deadline for any person or entity, other than Governmental Units (as such term is defined in section 101(27) of the Bankruptcy Code), to file proofs of claim against the Debtor (the “General Bar Date”). For Governmental Units, the Bar Date Order fixed the deadline to file proofs of claim as April 13, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time). The Bar Date Order also set April 23, 2020 as the deadline to file claims for investors in funds managed by the Debtor (the “Fund Investor Bar Date”). The Debtor also sought and obtained the extended employee bar date of May 26, 2020 per the Order Granting Debtor's Emergency Motion and Extending Bar Date Deadline for Employees to File Claims [Docket No. 560].

8. On March 3, 2020, the Debtor filed the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims [Docket No. 498] (the “Bar Date Notice”). The Bar Date Notice was mailed to all known creditors and equity holders on March 5, 2020. See Certificate of Service [Docket No. 530].

9. The Debtor caused the Bar Date Notice to be published on two occasions each in The New York Times and The Dallas Morning News—once on March 12, 2020, and once on March 13, 2020. See Debtor's Notice of Affidavit of Publication of the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims in The New York Times [Docket No. 533] and Debtor's Notice of Affidavit of Publication of the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims in The Dallas Morning News [Docket No. 534].

The Claims Resolution Process

10. In the ordinary course of business, the Debtor maintains books and records (the “Books and Records”) that reflect, inter alia, the Debtor’s liabilities and the amounts owed to its creditors.

11. The Debtor’s register of claims (the “Claims Register”), prepared and maintained by Kurtzman Carson Consultants LLC (“KCC”)—the court-appointed notice and claims agent in this case—reflects that, as of the date of this Objection, 194 proofs of claim have been filed in the Debtor’s chapter 11 case.

12. The Debtor and its professionals have been reviewing and analyzing claims. This process includes identifying categories of claims that may be targeted for disallowance and expungement, reduction, and/or reclassification.

III. RELIEF REQUESTED

13. The Debtor seeks entry of an order, pursuant to section 502 of the Bankruptcy Code and Bankruptcy Rule 3007, (i) disallowing the Duplicate Claims listed on Schedule 1 to the Order, (ii) reducing and allowing the Overstated Claims listed on Schedule 2 to the Order in amounts which comport with the Books and Records; (iii) disallowing the Late-Filed Claims listed on Schedule 3 to the Order, (iv) disallowing the Satisfied Claims listed on Schedule 4 to the Order, (v) disallowing the No-Liability Claims listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order, and (vi) disallowing the Insufficient-Documentation Claims listed on Schedule 7 to the Order.

IV. OBJECTIONS

14. Section 502(a) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that “[a] claim or interest, proof of which is filed under section 501 of this title, is deemed allowed, unless a party in interest . . . objects.” 11 U.S.C. § 502(a). A chapter 11 debtor has the duty to object to the allowance of any claim that is improper. 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(5), 1106(a)(1), 1107(a); see also Int'l Yacht & Tennis, Inc. v. Wasserman Tennis, Inc. (In re Int'l Yacht & Tennis, Inc.), 922 F.2d 659, 661-62 (11th Cir. 1991).

15. As set forth in Bankruptcy Rule 3001(f), a properly executed and filed proof of claim constitutes prima facie evidence of the validity and amount of the claim under section 502(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. See In re O'Connor, 153 F.3d 258, 260 (5th Cir. 1998); In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 10-43400 (DML), 2012 WL 4464550, at *2 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Sept. 25, 2012). To receive the benefit of prima facie validity, however, “[i]t is elemental that a proof of claim must assert facts or allegations . . . which would entitle the claimant to a recovery.” In re Heritage Org., L.L.C., 04-35574 (BJH), 2006 WL 6508477, at *8 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 27, 2006), aff’d sub nom., Wilferth v. Faulkner, 3:06 CV 510 K, 2006 WL 2913456 (N.D. Tex. Oct 11, 2006). Additionally, a claimant’s proof of claim is entitled to the presumption of prima facie validity under Bankruptcy Rule 3001(f) only until an objecting party refutes “at least one of the allegations that is essential to the claim’s legal sufficiency.” In re Am. Reit, Inc., 07-40308, 2008 WL 1771914, at *3 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. Apr. 15, 2008); In re Starnes, 231 B.R. 903, 912 (N.D. Tex. May 14, 2008). “The ultimate burden of proof always lies with the claimant.” In re Armstrong, 347 B.R. 581, 583 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2006).

16. Section 502(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code requires disallowance of a claim if “such claim is unenforceable against the debtor and property of the debtor, under any agreement or applicable law . . . .” 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(1).

The Disputed Claims Should Be Disallowed and Expunged or Reduced

17. For the reasons set forth below, the Disputed Claims are not enforceable and should be disallowed, expunged, or reduced as set forth herein.

A. Duplicate Claims

18. The Debtor has identified 3 proofs of claim—listed on Schedule 1 to the Order—where each claimant filed multiple proofs of claim representing a single obligation of the Debtor. The Debtor is requesting that the listed Duplicate Claims be disallowed such that only the surviving claims listed on Schedule 1 remain, subject to any other objection the Debtor may bring in the future. Disallowing and expunging these claims will prevent the claimants from receiving multiple recoveries for a single claim.

B. Claims to be Reduced and Allowed

19. The Debtor has examined the 4 proofs of claim listed on Schedule 2 to the Order and has determined that the amounts listed on the claims exceed the liability listed for each claimant on the Debtor's Books and Records. The Debtor is requesting that the amount of each claim be reduced so that it correctly reflects the amount of the Debtor's books and records.

C. Late-Filed Claims

20. The Debtor has identified 1 proof of claim listed on Schedule 3 to the Order that was filed after the passage of the applicable Bar Date.

D. Satisfied Claims

21. The Debtor has identified 11 proofs of claim listed on Schedule 4 to the Order that, according to the Debtor's books and records, were fully satisfied in the ordinary course of business. Disallowing and expunging such claims, therefore, will prevent the claimants from obtaining double-recovery on account of their claims.

E. No-Liability Claims

22. The Debtor has identified 63 proofs of claim listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order that can be characterized as "No-Liability Claims"—i.e., claims that erroneously assert a liability that is not reflected in the Debtor's books and records. Certain claims listed on Schedule 5 to the Order appear to be protective claims for claimants asserting claims related to agreements with the Debtor. No amount is asserted on these claims and, although the claimants have indicated they would supplement the claims within ninety (90) days, that time has passed and no amendment or supplement has been filed and no additional documentation has been provided to support the claims. Each claim listed on Schedule 6 to the Order erroneously asserts a claim against the Debtor which has no basis in the Books and Records and is not an obligation of the Debtor. The Debtor has reviewed each No-Liability Claim listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order and all supporting information and documentation provided therewith, made reasonable efforts to research each No-Liability Claim, and determined that the Debtor is not liable for such No-Liability Claims. Accordingly, the Debtor requests that each No-Liability Claim be disallowed and expunged.

F. Insufficient-Documentation Claims

23. The Debtor was not able to determine the validity of the 10 claims listed on Schedule 7 to the Order because such claims were not filed with sufficient accompanying documentation and provided no explanation for the bases of the claims. Additionally, no liability for these claims appears on the Debtor's books and records. Accordingly, the Debtor requests that the Insufficient-Documentation Claims be disallowed and expunged because the claimants have failed to carry their burden to support their claims.

V. RESPONSES TO OBJECTIONS

24. To contest an objection, a claimant must file and serve a written response to this Objection (each, a "Response") so that it is received no later than September 1, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (Central Time) (the "Response Deadline"). Every Response must be filed with the Office of the Clerk of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (Dallas Division), Earle Cabell Federal Building, 1100 Commerce Street, Room 1254, Dallas, TX 75242-1496 and served upon the following entities, so that the Response is received no later than the Response Deadline, at the following addresses:

25. Every Response to this Objection must contain, at a minimum, the following information:

- i. a caption setting forth the name of the Court, the name of the Debtor, the case number, and the title of the objection to which the Response is directed;
- ii. the name of the claimant, his/her/its claim number, and a description of the basis for the amount of the claim;
- iii. the specific factual basis and supporting legal argument upon which the party will rely in opposing this Objection;
- iv. any supporting documentation (to the extent it was not included with the proof of claim previously filed with the clerk of the Court or KCC) upon which the party will rely to support the basis for and amounts asserted in the proof of claim; and

- v. the name, address, telephone number, email address, and fax number of the person(s) (which may be the claimant or the claimant's legal representative) with whom counsel for the Debtor should communicate with respect to the claim or the Objection and who possesses authority to reconcile, settle, or otherwise resolve the objection to the disputed claim on behalf of the claimant.

26. If a claimant fails to file and serve a timely Response by the Response Deadline, the Debtor will present to the Court an appropriate order disallowing such claimant's claim, as set forth in Exhibit A, without further notice to the claimant.

VI. REPLIES TO RESPONSES

27. Consistent with Local Rules, the Debtor may, at its option, file and serve a reply to a Response by no later than 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time) three (3) days prior to the hearing to consider the Objection.

VII. SEPARATE CONTESTED MATTERS

28. To the extent that a Response is filed regarding any claim listed in this Objection and the Debtor is unable to resolve the Response, the objection by the Debtor to each such claim asserted herein shall constitute a separate contested matter as contemplated by Bankruptcy Rule 9014. Any order entered by the Court regarding an objection asserted in the Objection shall be deemed a separate order with respect to each claim.

VIII. RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

29. The Debtor hereby reserves the right to object in the future to any of the claims that are the subject of this Objection on any ground, including, but not limited to, 11 U.S.C. § 502(d), and to amend, modify, and/or supplement this Objection, including, without limitation, to object to amended or newly filed claims.

30. Notwithstanding anything contained in this Objection or the attached exhibits, nothing herein shall be construed as a waiver of any rights that the Debtor may have to exercise rights of setoff against the holders of such claims.

IX. NOTICE

31. Notice of this Objection shall be provided to (i) the Office of the United States Trustee for the Northern District of Texas; (ii) each of the claimants whose claim is subject to this Objection; and (iii) all entities requesting notice pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2002. In light of the nature of the relief requested, the Debtor submits that no further notice is required.

X. COMPLIANCE WITH LOCAL RULES

32. This Objection includes citations to the applicable rules and statutory authorities upon which the relief requested herein is predicated and a discussion of their application to this Objection. The Debtor objects to no more than 100 proofs of claim herein. The Debtor has served notice of this Objection on those persons whose names appear in the signature blocks on the proofs of claim and in accordance with Bankruptcy Rule 7004. Moreover, the Debtor has notified claimants that a copy of their claim may be obtained from the Debtor upon request. Accordingly, the Debtor submits that this Objection satisfies Local Rule 3007-2.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests the entry of the proposed Order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, granting the relief requested and granting such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Overview

1. HarbourVest’s claims against Highland arise out of its November 15, 2017 investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”) to acquire a 49% interest as a minority, passive investor (the “Investment”). Highland’s actions preceding and following the Investment caused serious injury to HarbourVest, leading to damages well in excess of $100 million. On April 8, 2020, HarbourVest timely filed its proofs of claim, which are listed in the Debtor’s claims register as claims number 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154 (the “Proofs of Claim”), describing its claims (the “HarbourVest Claims”).

2. After HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim, Highland filed the Claim Objection—an omnibus objection to 92 claims. Despite being a bare-bones, omnibus objection, the Claim Objection ostensibly contains substantive (though paper-thin) objections to dozens of claims, including HarbourVest’s, tucked in among procedural and technical objections to other claims.

3. The Claim Objection states that “each claim listed on Schedule 6 to the Order [including the HarbourVest Claims] erroneously asserts a claim against the Debtor which has no basis in the Books and Records and is not an obligation of the Debtor.” Claim Obj. ¶ 22.<sup>2</sup> Schedule 6 further lists the HarbourVest Claims as purportedly having “[n]o liability on the Debtor’s books and records.” Claim Obj. Sched. 6. That is the entirety of Highland’s objection with respect to the HarbourVest Claims. Highland makes no attempt to rebut any of the factual or legal bases of the well-founded HarbourVest Claims, and indeed filed the Claim Objection before even meaningfully engaging with HarbourVest regarding the HarbourVest Claims.<sup>3</sup>

4. In addition to being deficient on its face and procedurally improper, the Claim Objection is simply inaccurate. As described below, the HarbourVest Claims are indeed obligations of Highland, and Highland is well aware of the factual bases for them—namely, the misrepresentations, omissions, and other misconduct of Highland both prior to and during HarbourVest’s Investment. Highland’s failure to book a liability associated with the damages its fraud and misconduct caused is no defense to the liability itself.

5. The Claim Objection does not rebut HarbourVest’s prima facie case for its Claims and fails on its face. For the avoidance of doubt, however, this Response provides additional details regarding the HarbourVest Claims<sup>4</sup>—details of which Highland is well aware, clearly establishing HarbourVest’s right to significant damages from Highland’s misconduct and fraudulent inducement of HarbourVest’s Investment in a fund that has merely served as a pawn in Highland's feud with a former employee (who Highland also defrauded). The Claim Objection should be overruled, and the HarbourVest Claims should be allowed.

Factual Background

6. The events giving rise to HarbourVest's claims begin in June 2016, when Highland terminated the employment of Joshua Terry ("Terry"), the employee who managed Highland's CLO business and served as CLO manager for Acis Capital Management L.P. ("Acis LP").<sup>5</sup> Litigation ensued between Terry and Highland in or around September 2016, with Terry claiming his termination was unlawful. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling at 4.

7. Around that time, on October 7, 2016, Acis LP sold Highland a participation interest in its expected future cash flow in CLO Collateral Management Agreements for $666,655 plus a $12,666,446 note payable from Highland to Acis LP (the "Highland Note"). Id. at 17. On May 31, 2017, a $3,370,694 payment was made on the Highland Note. Id.

8. By summer 2017, HarbourVest was engaged in preliminary discussions with Highland regarding the Investment. On September 8, 2017, Highland sent HarbourVest a draft term sheet, which identified the target fund as "Acis Loan Funding, Ltd." and the fund's portfolio manager as Acis LP. As described below, during the course of negotiations, Highland unilaterally changed the name of the target fund (referred to herein as HCLOF) from "Acis Loan Funding, Ltd." to "Highland CLO Funding, Ltd." and swapped out Acis LP for Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. ("Highland HCF") as portfolio manager, under false pretenses.

9. On October 20, 2017, Terry won an arbitration award of $7,949,749.15 plus post-award interest against Acis (the "Arbitration Award"). 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 4.

HarbourVest did not become aware of many of the facts described herein until long after their occurrence. HarbourVest's investigation of its claims and the surrounding factual circumstances is continuing.

Shortly thereafter, Highland orchestrated several transfers (the “Transfers”) that siphoned assets away from Acis.

10. On October 24, 2017, HCLOF acquired HCLOF shares owned by Acis LP for $991,180.13. Id. at 17–18. As this Court previously described: “[n]o credible business justification was offered for this transaction, other than mostly uncorroborated (and self-serving) statements from Highland witnesses that Acis LP was ‘toxic’ in the market place (due to the litigation with Mr. Terry) and this was a step in the process of extricating Acis LP from the CLO business.” Id. at 18.

11. Thereafter, on October 27, 2017, Acis’s portfolio management rights for HCLOF were transferred to Highland HCF. Id. at 19. Highland HCF entered into a Portfolio Management Agreement with HCLOF that superseded and replaced the HCLOF portfolio management agreements with Acis. Id. at 19. On November 3, 2017, Acis LP transferred its interest in the Highland Note to Highland CLO Management, Ltd. Id. at 19–20. The balance owing on the Note was over $9 million, but Acis received no consideration for the transfer. 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 20–21, n.37.

12. During diligence and negotiations preceding HarbourVest’s Investment, Highland hid from HarbourVest its effort to strip Acis of assets. When Highland changed HCLOF’s portfolio manager from an Acis-branded entity to a Highland-branded entity, in addition to other structural changes, Highland stated that its reason for doing so was “reputational harm” to Acis LP from the Terry Arbitration Award.

13. Further concealing its true motive—denuding Acis of value—Highland informed HarbourVest that, in lieu of redemptions, resetting the CLOs was necessary and that it would be easier to reset under the “Highland” CLO brand than the Acis CLO brand. Through November

2017, Highland continued its misrepresentations and omissions regarding the Arbitration Award and structural changes to the HCLOF investment to conceal the true purpose of these maneuvers and their implications for the Investment. In reliance on these misrepresentations, HarbourVest finalized the Investment on November 15, 2017.

14. Highland’s misrepresentations continued after the initial Investment was made. On November 27, 2017, in an email to HarbourVest attaching a Wall Street Journal article regarding the Terry Arbitration Award, Highland again assuaged HarbourVest’s concerns regarding the dispute with Terry, claiming it “has no impact on our investment activities.”

15. On December 18, 2017, a final judgment confirming the Terry Arbitration Award was entered in state court. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 4. On the same day, Mark Okada (a Highland founder) and Dugaboy Investment Trust (a family trust of Highland founder Jim Dondero) conveyed their limited partnership interests in Acis LP, 25% and 74.9%, respectively, to Neutra, Ltd. (“Neutra”), a company controlled by Highland.<sup>6</sup>

16. On December 19, 2017, Acis LP and Highland CLO Holdings Ltd. (“Highland Holdings”) entered into 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement, which transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP’s interest in the Master Sub-Advisory Agreement and Staff and Services Agreement to manage Acis CLO 2017-7’s portfolio to Highland Holdings. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 21. The agreement also transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP’s indirect equity interests in Acis CLO Management, allegedly for forgiveness of $2.8 million owed by Acis LP to Highland under the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7. Id.

17. On January 24, 2018, after Mr. Terry became aware of the Transfers involving Acis LP and HCLOF, he requested a temporary restraining order from the Texas state court that confirmed his arbitration award. Plaintiff’s Application for TRO, Terry v. Acis Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 17-15244 (Dist. Ct. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018), A156. The state court ordered, with the agreement of Acis, that no CLO management contracts or money would be transferred away from Acis for a period of time. Transcript of Hearing held on January 24, 2018 at 42-43, Terry v. Acis Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 17-15244 (Dist. Ct. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018), A225–26.

18. On January 30, 2018, Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions (together, the “Acis Bankruptcy”) against Acis LP and its general partner, Acis Capital Management G.P. LLC (“Acis GP”), stating that the ongoing transfers and restructuring efforts were part of an “orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value.” 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 23. On April 13, 2018, this Court issued a ruling in the Acis Bankruptcy concluding that the involuntary bankruptcy case was appropriately filed and that a “chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to halt the post-Arbitration Award transactions and transfers of value out of Acis LP” Id., at 53. On May 14, 2018, Robin Phelan was appointed as trustee (the “Acis Trustee”) to oversee the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>7</sup>

19. Finally called to account for the Transfers, Highland again defaulted to its modus operandi: deception. Highland made numerous fraudulent statements, including to this Court, accusing HarbourVest of causing the Transfers that denuded Acis LP, including the following:

- Prior to the appointment of the Acis Trustee, Highland-controlled Acis falsely claimed that HarbourVest invested in HCLOF only on the condition that Acis would not have anything to do with the CLOs going forward, and that HarbourVest would demand its money back if a reset transaction was done with Acis:

- “In May 2017, a private equity firm expressed an interest in making a $150 million investment in [HCLOF]. [HCLOF] was the investment vehicle used for the various Acis CLOs, including CLO-3. However, one of the conditions demanded by [HarbourVest] in making its investment was that [HCLOF] would instruct the reissuance of certain CLOs, including CLO-3 and would sever any continuing connection that Acis had with the CLOs, including removing it as Collateral Manager. [HCLOF] issued this instruction requested by [HarbourVest] on October 6, 2017 (two weeks prior to the arbitration award).”<sup>8</sup>
- Highland witnesses claimed that HarbourVest said, with absolute certainty, that it had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was toxic, including:
  - Highland General Counsel Scott Ellington testified that HarbourVest had communicated to Highland that the Acis brand was “so toxic that it’s impossible to sell the bonds with Acis as the manager,” that “nothing can be associated with the Acis brand and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO” and that they said “categorically, with absolute certainty, if there’s any relation to Acis, the Acis brand, the Acis structure, we have no interest in doing business with you at all.”<sup>9</sup>
  - Mr. Ellington further testified that HarbourVest had “demanded” that Highland “call the deal and terminate the [collateral management agreements] or transfer the [collateral management agreements]” and that “their only directive was call and get rid of Acis or get rid of Acis or we’re not doing the deal through a reset.”<sup>10</sup>
  - Highland CEO Jim Dondero claimed that the “Boston investor” deal was “all dependent upon getting as far away from Acis as possible and a new collateral manager.”<sup>11</sup>
- Highland witnesses claimed that HarbourVest had the ability to control and dictate the terms of any reset transactions, including:

- Mr. Ellington testified that because HarbourVest “would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, it had the ability to ‘start calling the shots’ and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.” 2/7/2018 Acis Bankruptcy Transcript at 226, A281.

20. These and other statements led the Acis Trustee to investigate HarbourVest as the alleged perpetrator of the Transfers. Ultimately, the Acis Trustee served HarbourVest with broad Rule 2004 discovery requests seeking extensive information related to the Investment and a deposition of a corporate representative. HarbourVest complied with the Acis Trustee’s requests, producing significant documentation and sitting for a deposition in the Acis Bankruptcy.

21. The HarbourVest investigation was not the only expensive sideshow that Highland’s litigious behavior caused in the Acis Bankruptcy. At each step of the case, Highland and a veritable parade of its affiliates (Neutra, HCLOF, Highland HCF, CLO Holdco) filed objections and motions impeding the orderly progress of Acis’s chapter 11 proceedings. To make matters worse, HarbourVest was effectively forced to foot the bill: many of the legal fees incurred by Highland and its affiliates were funded from the coffers of HCLOF, depleting the value of HarbourVest’s Investment.

22. Despite Highland’s assurance that the Terry Arbitration Award and related restructuring efforts would have no impact on Highland’s investment activities or HarbourVest’s Investment, Highland’s misconduct and fraudulent Transfers necessitated a variety of injunctions that significantly impaired both the ability of HCLOF to operate as expected and the value of HarbourVest’s investment. The below timeline details some of the constraints on HCLOF caused by Highland’s misconduct and the additional litigation generated by it:

- a. On April 30, 2018, HCLOF sent five notices requesting optional redemption, ordering a liquidation of the CLOs.<sup>12</sup>
- b. On May 22, 2018, the Acis Trustee warned that HCLOF's attempted optional redemption notices violated the automatic stay.<sup>13</sup>
- c. On May 30, 2018, Highland and HCLOF initiated adversary proceedings alleging that the Acis Trustee breached the applicable portfolio management agreements by failing to effectuate optional redemptions pursuant to the notices.<sup>14</sup>
- d. On May 31, 2018, this Court issued a sue sponte temporary restraining order in the Acis Bankruptcy preventing any action in furtherance of the optional redemptions or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.<sup>15</sup>
- e. On June 14, 2018, HCLOF withdrew the optional redemption notices.<sup>16</sup>
- f. On June 15, 2018, the TRO expired and HCLOF gave notice to the Acis Trustee that it was requesting an optional redemption. Id. at 3-4. However, the request was ultimately withdrawn on July 6, 2018.<sup>17</sup>
- g. On June 21, 2018, the Acis Trustee filed an adversary proceeding against Highland seeking an injunction preventing Highland/HCLOF from taking steps towards a redemption.<sup>18</sup>
- h. On July 10, 2018, this Court issued an injunction preventing optional redemptions while the Acis Trustee attempted to confirm a plan or otherwise resolve the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>19</sup>
- i. On August 30, 2018, this Court denied confirmation of the First Amended Joint Plan for the Debtors and ruled that the preliminary injunction must stay in place.

- j. On March 20, 2019, following confirmation, HCLOF sent a letter to Acis LP stating that it is “neither interested in pursuing, nor able to pursue, a reset transaction.”<sup>20</sup>

Highland’s fraudulent scheme resulted in severe constraints on the HCLOF investment, including on its ability to redeem, refinance or reset the applicable CLOs, which is and was a critical element of maintaining and growing the value of the Investment. Rather than attempt to mitigate losses, Highland doubled down, further entrenching itself in its litigation positions.

23. Highland concealed its Transfer scheme from HarbourVest before the Investment through a series of fraudulent actions, omissions, and misrepresentations, concealing the truth to lock HarbourVest into a long-term, illiquid investment that was—as a result of Highland’s improper behavior—destined to fail. Had HarbourVest been properly informed of the full extent of behind-the-scenes transfers occurring involving Acis and HCLOF, and the true reasons they were made, it would never have made the Investment, and therefore would have avoided the severe price of being tangled up in Highland’s web.

24. One need look no farther than the rulings and filings in the Acis Bankruptcy to reach the conclusion that Highland’s behavior was improper, illegal, and indeed, fraudulent:

- April 13, 2018: The Court ruled that Joshua Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions against Acis LP and Acis GP due to a good faith belief that these transfers were part of an “orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value.” 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 23.
- July 2, 2018: The Acis Trustee filed counterclaims against Highland, HCLOF, Highland HCF, Highland CLO Management, Ltd., and Highland Holdings alleging they orchestrated a systematic transfer of value away from Acis to other Highland entities after Terry’s termination in 2016 through the period when the Terry Arbitration Award was issued to make Acis judgment-proof.<sup>21</sup>

- Aug. 30, 2018: Judge Jernigan ruled that preliminary injunction must stay in place because the “evidence thus far has been compelling that numerous transfers after the Josh Terry judgment denuded Acis of value.” 8/30/2018 Plan Ruling at 6.
- January 31, 2019: This Court confirmed Acis’s Third Amended Plan and concluded that: “The record contains substantial evidence of both intentional and constructive fraudulent transfers with regard to the Equity/ALF PMA and other assets. The numerous prepetition transfers that occurred around the time of and after the Terry Arbitration Award appear more likely than not to have been made to deprive the Debtor-Acis of value and with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Debtors’ creditors. Highland’s only purported business justifications for the prepetition transfers were that the Passive Investor demanded it and that the Debtor-Acis’s brand was toxic in the market place. However, these business justifications were not supported (and, in fact, were contradicted) by the evidence.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 27.
- June 20, 2019: The Acis Trustee filed an amended complaint asserting among other things, claims for intentional and constructive fraudulent transfer based on the prepetition transfers involving Acis.<sup>22</sup>

25. On October 16, 2019, Highland itself filed for bankruptcy in Delaware, In Re Highland Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 19-12239-css (Bankr. D. Del.), and on December 4, 2019, on motion of the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, its case was transferred to this Court.<sup>23</sup>

26. On April 8, 2020, due to its damages sustained from the misconduct described above, HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim against Highland.

Basis for Relief

The Claim Objection Is Improper and Should Be Denied

27. HarbourVest’s Proofs of Claim have prima facie validity, and the Debtor must produce evidence sufficient to overcome this presumption. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 501, 502 (2020); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3001(f) (2020) (“A proof of claim executed and filed in accordance with these rules shall constitute prima facie evidence of the validity and amount of the claim”); see also

Nov. 26, 2008). Instead, the objecting party must put forth “evidence at least equal in probative force to that offered by the proof of claim.” Id. (citations omitted).

28. Highland’s Claim Objection fails to put forward any evidence regarding the HarbourVest Claims. It is a mere denial of the validity of the HarbourVest Claims, based on Highland’s own say-so. It fails to refute—or even address—the legal sufficiency of the HarbourVest Claims. Highland cannot evade substantial claims by one of its largest creditors based on its illegal conduct with a one-sentence, unsupported, and blanket denial. The Claim Objection should be overruled as to HarbourVest’s Proofs of Claim as failing to satisfy even the most minimal legal requirements to object to a claim.

29. The Claim Objection is also procedurally improper. While styled as an “omnibus” objection pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3007(d), Highland’s “no liability” objection has no basis at all in the rule.<sup>24</sup> This is not just a procedural nicety. Highland’s attempt to style its conclusory-but-substantive denial of liability as a procedural objection buried in an omnibus objection underscores Highland’s lack of substantive defenses on the merits of the claims in addition to its disregard for the bankruptcy process.

<sup>24</sup> Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3007(d) provides that “objections to more than one claim may be joined in an omnibus objection if all the claims were filed by the same entity, or the objections are based solely on the grounds that the claims should be disallowed, in whole or in part, because: (1) they duplicate other claims; (2) they have been filed in the wrong case; (3) they have been amended by subsequently filed proofs of claim; (4) they were not timely filed; (5) they have been satisfied or released during the case in accordance with the Code, applicable rules, or a court order; (6) they were presented in a form that does not comply with applicable rules, and the objection states that the objector is unable to determine the validity of the claim because of the noncompliance; (7) they are interests, rather than claims; or (8) they assert priority in an amount that exceeds the maximum amount under §507 of the Code.”

The HarbourVest Claims Are Valid and Should Be Allowed

30. Highland has failed to carry its burden to rebut the prima facie case for the HarbourVest Claims. Accordingly, the HarbourVest Claims should be allowed in full. For clarity of the record, the HarbourVest Claims are described in detail below.

31. In general, the HarbourVest Claims result from (i) Highland's material misrepresentations and omissions relating to the Investment, including the existence and purpose of Highland's scheme to denude Acis and avoid payment of the Arbitration Award; (ii) Highland's gross mismanagement of the HCLOF Investment; (iii) Highland's misuse of fund assets and improper charges to HCLOF; and (iv) Highland's continued fraudulent conduct and misrepresentations during the Acis bankruptcy. Specifically, based on the above-described facts, HarbourVest has claims for, among other things: Fraud, Fraudulent Concealment, Fraudulent Inducement, Fraudulent Misrepresentation, Negligent Misrepresentation; Breach of Fiduciary Duties; Misuse of Fund Assets; U.S. State and Federal Securities Law Claims; Violations of the Federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"); and Unfair Prejudice under the Guernsey Companies Law.

A. Fraud, Fraudulent Inducement, Fraudulent Concealment, Fraudulent Misrepresentation, and Negligent Misrepresentation

32. A plaintiff pleading common law fraud must show (1) a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 8 (Aug. 2020); see also JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. v. Orca Assets G.P., L.L.C., 546 S.W.3d 648, 653 (Tex. 2018). Fraudulent inducement occurs when, through fraud, a defendant induces another to enter into a contract through the use of fraudulent misrepresentations. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 8; Anderson v. Durant, 550 S.W.3d 605, 614 (Tex. 2018).

33. Similarly, claims for fraudulent concealment or fraud by omission will lie where (1) the defendant concealed from or failed to disclose material facts to the plaintiff that the defendant had a duty to disclose; (2) the defendant knew the plaintiff was ignorant of the facts and the plaintiff did not have an equal opportunity to discover the facts; (3) the defendant was deliberately silent when the defendant had a duty to speak; (4) by failing to disclose the facts, the defendant intended to induce the plaintiff to take some action or refrain from acting; (5) the plaintiff relied on the defendant's nondisclosure; and (6) the plaintiff was injured as a result of acting without the undisclosed facts. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 16.

34. Similarly, under Guernsey law, a plaintiff may have a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation against a defendant that makes statements that he knows to be (or is reckless as to whether they are) false with the intent that they shall be acted on by another, who suffers damages as a result of reliance on those statements. Derry v. Peek (1889) 14 AC (HL) 337 (appeal taken from Eng.), A14. Damages extend to the loss actually suffered by the person as a result of the misrepresentation. Doyle v. Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd. (1969) 2 W.L.R. 673, A59.

35. Negligent misrepresentation is established when (1) the defendant made a representation in the course of the defendant's business; (2) the defendant supplied false information for the guidance of others in their business; (3) the defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information; and (4) the plaintiff suffered pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 10. Liability for negligent misstatements may also be asserted under Guernsey law where shareholders suffer financial loss as a result of acquiring shares in reliance on any misstatements made carelessly, if the defendant owes the shareholder a duty of care.<sup>25</sup> Hall v. Cable & Wireless Plc (2009) EWHC 1793 (Comm), A75.

36. Highland's conduct prior to the Investment presents a textbook case of fraud, fraudulent inducement, and fraudulent concealment and fraud by omission. As Highland and HarbourVest were negotiating the terms of the Investment, Highland both concealed and misrepresented the nature of the Transfers undertaken to deprive Acis of assets and Highland's true intentions with respect to the Terry dispute and Arbitration Award. These facts were material: indeed, HarbourVest expressed concern and requested further information regarding the Transfers, the Arbitration Award, and their implications for HCLOF and the Investment's closing date was delayed. The nature and intent behind the Transfers, and Highland's plan to use HCLOF to fund its feud with Terry, were material facts misrepresented and concealed from HarbourVest in order to induce HarbourVest to invest with HCLOF.

37. Highland's multiple, purposeful, knowing, reckless, and/or negligent misrepresentations and omissions include:

- Highland never informed HarbourVest that Highland had no intention of paying the Arbitration Award and was undertaking steps to ensure that Mr. Terry could not collect on his judgment;
- Highland did not inform HarbourVest that it undertook the Transfers to siphon assets away from Acis LP and that such transfers would prevent Mr. Terry from collecting on the Arbitration Award. Instead, Highland simply did not inform HarbourVest and represented to HarbourVest that the reason for changing the portfolio manager for HCLOF was because Acis was "toxic" in the industry and alleged reputational issues relating to Acis would detrimentally affect the HCLOF investment;

- Highland indicated to HarbourVest that the dispute with Mr. Terry (which appeared on a litigation schedule presented to HarbourVest during diligence) would have no impact on investment activities;
- Highland expressed confidence in the ability of HCLOF to reset or redeem the CLOs, notwithstanding that Highland was using HCLOF as part of its scheme to avoid paying the Arbitration Award.

38. Even assuming Highland's statements did not rise to the level of fraud (though they do), such statements were at minimum made negligently by Highland.

39. In reliance on Highland's misrepresentations and omissions, HarbourVest invested in HCLOF. Had these misrepresentations and omissions not occurred, HarbourVest would not have made the Investment.

40. HarbourVest has been injured from the Investment: not only has the Investment failed to accrue value, its value plummeted. The Investment's current value is far less than HarbourVest's initial contribution. This enormous decline can be traced directly back to the fraudulent Transfer scheme that Highland hid from HarbourVest behind a smokescreen of misstatements and omissions, and Highland's subsequent conduct in connection therewith. The situation has been further compounded by HCLOF's use to fund Highland's litigation and HarbourVest incurring its own out-of-pocket fees and expenses from the fallout.

B. Breach of Fiduciary Duties and Misuse of Fund Assets

41. Under Guernsey law, Highland constituted both a "shadow director" and a de facto director of HCLOF. A shadow director is a person in accordance with whose directions or instructions the directors of the company are accustomed to act. Companies (Guernsey) Law 2008 § 132(1). A "de facto" director is a person or entity that similarly has practical decision-making control over a company under Guernsey law. Carlyle Capital Corporation Ltd. v. Conway & Others, Royal Court of Guernsey, 4 September 2017, Judgment 38/2017, A2. As a shadow director and/or de facto director, Highland owed fiduciary duties to HarbourVest, which it breached by the conduct described herein.

42. At all times, Highland exercised complete control over HCLOF and over its Guernsey directors. Highland directed HCLOF's nominal directors, who acted in accordance with Highland's instructions, and Highland itself acted on behalf of HCLOF. Indeed, this Court has previously recognized evidence demonstrating that HCLOF operated at the behest of Highland, not its nominal directors:

- “It was enormously clear to the court. . . that the two Directors of HCLOF Guernsey are—stated in the kindest way possible—mere ‘figureheads’ for HCLOF Guernsey and they defer to Highland entirely to tell them what to do, what to say, and when.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 14.
- HCLOF Guernsey was “absolutely, beyond any reasonable doubt, controlled by Highland.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 17.
- The evidence was overwhelming that “(a) the HCLOF Guernsey Directors do whatever they are told to do by Highland; (b) they do not talk to anyone else but Highland; (c) they have never challenged Highland; (d) they let Highland pick and consult with their lawyers; and (e) they were not made aware by Highland of the Terry Arbitration Award, the Terry Judgment, the involuntary bankruptcy petitions, or pleadings that lawyers filed in the Bankruptcy Cases on HCLOF Guernsey’s behalf...[Bill Scott] confirmed that all investment decisions were made by Highland.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 46.
- Ms. Bestwick “testified that she had never talked to the Passive Investor (who, of course, is a 49% owner of HCLOF Guernsey) or Grant Scott (the trustee of the charitable organization that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey). She reiterated that she only talks to Highland employees. . . . She testified that she learned of the Terry Arbitration Award in mid-April 2018 (some six months after the fact) and ‘[y]ou’d have to ask Highland’ why it did not inform her sooner. Her testimony was clear that she defers to Highland on everything, stating that as directors they were ‘heavily reliant on our service providers, and that means Highland.’ With regard to a lawsuit that HCLOF Guernsey filed against Mr. Terry in Guernsey during the Bankruptcy Cases, she testified that it was neither her nor the other director, William Scott’s, idea.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 43–44.
- Highland’s expert, “Mr. Castro, testified that the ‘actual humans’ who would make the decision for HCLOF Guernsey as to whether to request an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs were not the HCLOF Guernsey directors but, rather, Highland executives Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, and Highland employee Mr. Covitz (acting for Highland HCF). Moreover, Mr. Alpern credibly testified that, before the Terry Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis, as the portfolio manager under the Equity/ALF PMA, rather than the

43. Highland’s complete control of HCLOF is further confirmed by the deposition testimony of HCLOF’s nominal directors. In a deposition in the Acis Bankruptcy, HCLOF’s then-Director Heather Bestwick testified that:

- She first learned about the Terry arbitration award from Highland in April 2018 and did not need to do any further independent verification because the directors relied on Highland to keep them updated.<sup>26</sup>
- She was unable to remember a time she disagreed with Mr. Scott or Highland. Id. at 48:10–49:12, A539.
- Highland is involved in any substantive conversation about HCLOF, and Bestwick relied on Highland’s advice and judgment as to what was in the best interest of investors. Id. 50:10–24, 58:12–59:20, 67:13–68:7, 138:4–21 & 172:9–173:6, A540, 542, 544, 552 & 560.
- She lacked a command of the fees that Acis and Highland were receiving from HCLOF, and did not know whether Highland Capital might have differing interests from Highland HCF. Id. at 99:10–100:11 & 155:13–20, A547, 556.
- Conversations with Highland were the extent of the due diligence done with respect to a new portfolio manager. Id. 200:14–201:20, A562.

44. Similarly, HCLOF then-Director William Scott testified that:

- The directors had “no knowledge” of litigation with Terry or the arbitration award until 2018; the litigation did not cause him to second-guess his relationship with Highland.<sup>27</sup>
- The directors went with the counsel selected by Highland to represent HCLOF. Id. at 91:25–94:25, A566–67.
- Investment decisions for HCLOF are formulated by Highland; the role of the directors is just to “police” the performance of the service providers, and he has never disagreed with Ms. Bestwick or Highland on HCLOF matters. Id. at 102:16–104:1, 105:22–107:17, A570–71.

- He did not take any steps to investigate the Terry situation; he got all information he knows about it from Highland. Id. at 140:13–145:5, A575–76.
- Highland has not made key information available to the directors of HCLOF. Id. at 263:20–265:23, A584. Scott himself lacked information about the various Transfers in 2017 that were conducted by Highland. Id. at 214:19–216:14, 220:6–221:11, A579–80.

45. As a “shadow director” or “de facto” director of HCLOF, Highland breached several duties, including its duty of care, its duty to exercise powers for a proper purpose, its duty to avoid/mitigate conflicts of interest, and its duty to act in good faith and in the best interests of the company. Highland breached its fiduciary duties as a shadow/ de facto director as set out below.

46. Highland is liable for breach of fiduciary duty for its continued misrepresentations and omissions relating to the Arbitration Award and the Transfers, including following HarbourVest’s Investment, its conduct of litigation relating to Mr. Terry and the Acis Bankruptcy, and its mismanagement of HCLOF following the Investment.

47. This includes the massive legal fees that were charged to HCLOF by Highland and Highland-related entities in furtherance of Highland’s scheme. Since at least 2018, immense and unwarranted legal fees were borne by HCLOF’s investors for Highland’s scorched-earth litigation relating to Terry and the Acis Bankruptcy, including significant litigation costs that were not in the interests of HCLOF.

48. As this Court noted, the Acis Bankruptcy proceedings “have been astonishingly contentious,” with Highland, HCLOF, and Neutra “in ‘lockstep’ with one another in objecting to virtually every position taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee,” and the Highland entities “have opposed virtually every action taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, resulting in many long hearings.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 3, 11. This extensive litigation has spanned multiple jurisdictions (United States and Guernsey) and venues (state court, federal bankruptcy court, federal district and appellate courts), and included appeals of nearly every substantive ruling during the Acis Bankruptcy. HCLOF's investors—including HarbourVest—bore millions of dollars of legal fees incurred by numerous parties, including attorneys' fees for (i) HCLOF, (ii) Highland, (iii) Acis, (iv) Highland HCF and (v) various affiliated persons, entities and experts.

49. No justifiable basis existed for Highland to cause HCLOF to pay Highland-related parties' expenses and fees arising from the Acis Bankruptcy. Those fees were grossly inappropriate, excessive, and unreasonable, caused by Highland's own malfeasance, and they are not covered under the HCLOF governing documents.

50. On this point, it is worth underscoring that, to HarbourVest's knowledge, HCLOF has, to date, incurred more than $15 million in legal fees since 2018, much of which appears to be related to fighting an $8 million Arbitration Award. Even if such fees could appropriately be charged to HCLOF (and they cannot), the amount of legal fees incurred is grossly unreasonable. Highland's use of HCLOF assets to pay these astounding legal fees creates liability for its misuse of fund assets in gross breach of its duties as a sub-advisor and as a shadow / de facto director.

51. In addition to the improper legal expenses, Highland's gross mismanagement of HCLOF includes Highland (i) directing the Trustee to sell numerous loans during the Acis Bankruptcy and (ii) failing to reset the CLOs and or consider alternatives in light of the court-ordered injunction on resets.<sup>28</sup>

<sup>28</sup> See, e.g., Acis Trustee Complaint at 29, n. 46 (“Defendants have options available that immediately mitigate any purported damage. Namely, Defendants could (1) authorize a ‘refinance’ or ‘reset’ transaction or (2) sell their equity to a third party in an amount that exceeds what they would receive in an Optional Redemption.”), A319; Second Am. Compl. at 24–28, Acis Capital Mgmt GP, L.L.C. v. Highland Capital Mgmt, L.P., Adv. No. 18-03078-sgj (Bankr. N.D. Tex. June 20, 2019), ECF No. 157 (Highland Capital “grossly mismanaged the CLOs” when it “failed to purchase a single loan for the CLOs . . . [and] in an apparent tactical move to accumulate cash in the CLOs . . . ordered that the Trustee sell numerous loans.” When the Trustee found new parties to perform services under the Sub Agreements, Highland Capital “offered to provide the same services it was providing Acis for 17.5 basis points less than it previously charged, a tacit acknowledgement that

C. Securities Claims

52. HarbourVest also has state and federal securities fraud claims against Highland.

53. Under the Texas Securities Act (the “TSA”), “[a] person who offers or sells a security . . . by means of an untrue statement of a material fact or an omission to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading, is liable to the person buying the security from him, who may sue either at law or in equity for rescission, or for damages if the buyer no longer owns the security.” Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-33(A)(2) (West). Hence, “to recover under the TSA, a buyer of a security must prove that the security was sold by means of (1) an untrue statement of material fact or (2) an omission to state a material fact that is necessary in order to make the statements made not misleading.” Kubbernus v. ECAL Partners, Ltd., 574 S.W.3d 444, 480 (Tex. App. 2018). A plaintiff need not show reliance, loss causation, or damages under the TSA. See id.; In re Skyport Glob. Commc'ns, Inc., No. 08-36737, 2011 WL 111427, at *47 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 13, 2011). In addition to primary violators, “[a] person who directly or indirectly controls a seller, buyer, or issuer of a security” or “who directly or indirectly with intent to deceive or defraud or with reckless disregard for the truth or the law materially aids a seller, buyer, or issuer of a security,” is liable under the TSA “jointly and severally with the seller, buyer, or issuer and to the same extent as if he were the seller, buyer, or issuer.” Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-33 (F) (West).

54. Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act makes it unlawful for any person “[t]o use or employ, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security . . . any manipulative Highland had grossly overcharged Acis.”), A448–52; 1/31/19 Confirmation Ruling at 29–30 (“[I]n this court’s view, there is no real harm to Highland or the Co-Defendants because they can ask for a reset under the Plan. Mr. Scott, a director of HCLOF Guernsey, testified that HCLOF Guernsey can sell its interest in the subordinated notes in the market.”); 1/31/19 Confirmation Ruling at 20 (“[A]fter Mr. Terry was terminated, the fees owed by the Debtor-Acis to Highland under these agreements shot up to an enormously higher level.”).

or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe.” 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b). And Rule 10b-5, promulgated by the SEC under the authority of Section 10(b), makes it unlawful for “any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce, or of the mails or of any facility of any national securities exchange,” to “employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud”; “make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading”; or “engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security.” 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

55. The Supreme Court has recognized an implied private cause of action to enforce Section 10(b) and its implementing regulation, Rule 10b-5. Matrixx Initiatives, Inc. v. Siracusano, 563 U.S. 27, 37 (2011). To state a claim under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 based on an alleged misrepresentation or omission, a plaintiff must show “(1) a material misrepresentation or omission by the defendant; (2) scienter; (3) a connection between the misrepresentation or omission and the purchase or sale of a security; (4) reliance upon the misrepresentation or omission; (5) economic loss; and (6) loss causation.” Id. (citations omitted). Joint and several liability for violations of Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 extends to “[e]very person who, directly or indirectly, controls any person liable under” Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 “to the same extent as such controlled person.” 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a).

56. Here, Highland, in connection with its sale of HCLOF shares to HarbourVest, made material misrepresentations and omitted material facts, as detailed above. That is sufficient to state a claim under the TSA. Those material misrepresentations and omitted material facts likewise state a claim under federal law for the recovery of damages caused by Highland's fraud, because they were made with the intent to deceive HarbourVest, were relied upon by HarbourVest, and caused substantial losses to HarbourVest's investment.

57. RICO makes it unlawful, among other things, for a person associated with an enterprise to conduct or participate in the conduct of the enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity. See 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). Under RICO, any person injured in his business or property by reason of such a violation may recover treble damages and reasonable attorney's fees. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

58. Here, Highland engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity involving numerous predicate acts over multiple years, including mail, wire, and bankruptcy fraud, as part of a scheme to defraud Terry, obstruct the enforcement of his judgment, and obtain investor funding to further finance the scheme. Highland committed these violations through its control of and conduct of the affairs of multiple enterprises, including Acis.

59. In furtherance of that scheme, Highland committed further predicate acts of fraud and bankruptcy fraud as described at length herein, including when, prior to the appointment of the Acis Trustee, Highland caused Acis to make false statements with respect to HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy proceedings. See 18 U.S.C. § 152(2), (3). Highland's statements were made with knowledge of their falsity and caused HarbourVest significant damages as detailed above, including significant and unwarranted fees and expenses from the Acis Trustee's investigation, and Highland is liable for its pattern of deceptive and fraudulent behavior.

E. Unfair Prejudice

60. HarbourVest also has claims against Highland for unfair prejudice under Guernsey law. Under Section 349 of the Companies (Guernsey) Law 2008, shareholders may apply for relief where the affairs of a company have been conducted in a manner that is unfairly prejudicial to the applicant. § 349(1)(a). To succeed on such an application, the applicant need show only that: (1) the acts or omissions of which he complains of were acts of the Company, including acts taken by the board or a shadow director; (2) the conduct of those affairs has caused prejudice to the applicant's interests as a member of the Company, and (3) the prejudice is unfair. Prodefin Trading Ltd. v. Midland Res. Holding Ltd., Royal Court of Guernsey, 14 February 2017, Judgment 7/2017, A91.

61. The court's remedial powers for an unfair prejudice claim are broad. Section 350 of the Guernsey Companies Law provides: "[i]f the Court is satisfied that an application under section 349 is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of." Such relief may include ordering a buyout of the applicant's interests as a member of the Company at a price adjusted to reflect what the value of such interests would have been had the prejudicial conduct not taken place. Id.; see also Re Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. (1985) 3 All ER 523, A117. Relief is commonly granted against those who have caused the unfairly prejudicial conduct, including non-members of the company, where it is just to do so. Re Little Olympian Each-Ways Ltd. (1994) 2 BCLC 420, A140.

62. HarbourVest has been unfairly prejudiced by the full range of Highland's actions and behavior described above, including (i) the fraudulent Transfers immediately preceding and following the Investment, as well as misrepresentations and omissions regarding those Transfers and the Arbitration Award; (ii) breaches of fiduciary duty by Highland as shadow or de facto director of the Company; (iii) misuse of fund assets and legal fee charges to HCLOF; (iv) mismanagement of the HCLOF investment by Highland; and (v) Highland's false statements about HarbourVest, including to this Court, accusing HarbourVest of perpetrating the Transfers.

Such actions warrant relief based upon what the value of HarbourVest's interests in HCLOF would have been had Highland not engaged in such misconduct—a value that far exceeds the Investment's current value.

Prayer for Relief

63. HarbourVest respectfully requests: (i) this Court deny and overrule the Claim Objection with respect to HarbourVest's Proof of Claim, (ii) sustain and allow HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim, and (iii) grant HarbourVest such other and further relief to which it may be justly entitled, both at law and in equity.

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Partners L.P. on behalf of funds and accounts under management (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant manages investment funds that are limited partners in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third

Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor’s employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

(the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings

in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

Dondero Ex. E

BACKGROUND

1. Acis LP is portfolio manager for certain collateralized loan obligations (“CLOs”) including: (i) Acis CLO 2013-1 LTD. (“CLO-1”), (ii) Acis CLO 2014-3 (“CLO-3”), (iii) Acis CLO 2014-4 LTD. 2. Acis LP manages the Acis CLOs through: (i) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-1, dated March 18, 2013 (the “CLO-1 PMA”); (ii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-3, dated February 25, 2014 (the “CLO-3 PMA”); (iii) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-4, dated June 5, 2014 (the “CLO-4 PMA”); (iv) that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-5, dated November 18, 2014 (the “CLO-5 PMA”); and that certain Portfolio Management Agreement by and between Acis LP and CLO-6, dated April 16, 2015 (the “CLO-6 PMA”). The CLO-1 PMA, CLO-3 PMA, CLO-4 PMA, CLO-5 PMA, and CLO-6 PMA are collectively referred to herein as the “PMAs.” Acis LP generates revenue primarily through the management of the Acis CLOs via the PMA<sup>s</sup>.<sup>1</sup>

3. Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”), formerly known as Acis Loan Funding (“ALF”), is the holder of either all or the majority of the subordinated notes in each of the Acis CLOs, except for CLO-1, in which it possesses a blocking position.

4. HCLOF has taken many positions throughout the course of this case that appear to be economically irrational, contrary to the best interests of HCLOF and its investors, and

instead designed to ensure the destruction of the Acis CLOs so that creditors of Acis, and Joshua Terry in particular, receive nothing or as little as possible from the Acis bankruptcy estate. Recently,<sup>2</sup> William Scott, the director of HCLOF, testified that he wants to “reset” the Acis CLOs to bring them in line with current market interest rates and that the inability to do the reset is causing damage to HCLOF in the amount of approximately $295,000 per week.<sup>3</sup> Likewise, J.P. Sevilla, in-house counsel for Highland Capital Management, LP (“HCM,” and together with its affiliates, including HCLOF, the “Highlands”), recently swore in an affidavit filed in Guernsey that a reset transaction, which involves changing the interest rate, reinvestment terms and non-call period in the Acis CLOs, would be extremely beneficial to HCLOF because it would “create greater cash at the end of the payment waterfall for the holder of the sub-notes,” and was cheaper and easier to accomplish than creating a new CLO or doing a refinancing transaction because the existing collateral pool stays the same, a new issuer is not required, and the legal expenses are much lower.<sup>4</sup> Mark Okada, a principal and 25% owner of HCM, testified that not doing a reset was “a bad thing” and that “we don’t want that.”<sup>5</sup> Finally, counsel for Acis (while it was receiving shared services and sub-advisory services from HCM) likewise concurred that it “makes no sense” for an equity investor to just sit back and watch its dividend diminish without requesting a reset transaction.<sup>6</sup>

5. To address HCLOF’s request, the Trustee’s Second Amended Joint Plan (the “Plan”) [Docket No. 612] provides for such a reset to be performed by the Reorganized Acis and its sub-advisor, Brigade Capital Management, LP (“Brigade”). Although Mr. Scott, Mr. Sevilla, and all of the experts in this case have testified that pursuing a reset transaction would make the Acis CLOs more profitable to HCLOF, HCLOF has indicated that it will not reset the Acis CLOs with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade under the Plan. Instead, despite the substantial potential losses to HCLOF and its investors, it appears that HCLOF will wind-down the Acis CLOs by declining to reset them prior to the expiration of their respective reinvestment periods which, at least for Acis CLO-3, will expire in a few short months, on February 1, 2019.

<sup>2</sup> As the Court will recall, HCLOF previously requested a liquidation of the Acis CLOs after the entry of the order for relief, which the Court enjoined, but then vigorously contested the Trustee’s original plan which would have resulted in HCLOF receiving mid-NAV plus 25 basis points, an amount well in excess of the liquidation value of the subordinated notes.

6. Such a decision by HCLOF would “make no sense” and be contrary to its own best interests. Although HCLOF/ALF was at one time wholly-owned by an affiliate of Highland, it did an offering memorandum in November 2017 and, as a result, is now owned 49.985% by certain affiliates of a large investor and manager of private equity funds (“Investor”),<sup>7</sup> and 50.015% by affiliates (49.0153%) and employees (0.9997%) of Highland. Despite its large ownership percentage in HCLOF and the alleged millions in losses that will result if the Acis CLOs are not reset to make them consistent with prevailing market conditions, the Investor has not yet appeared in this case or taken any position in this bankruptcy case. Further, the Trustee does not have any information as to whether the Investor would be amenable to pursuing a reset with Reorganized Acis and Brigade following confirmation of the Plan. Because time is short if CLO-3 is to be reset before the end of its reinvestment period, the Trustee needs to obtain information from the Investor immediately.

7. During the involuntary trial, a number of representations were made to the Court by counsel for Acis (while HCM was its shared services provider and sub-advisor) that the Investor only invested in HCLOF on the condition that Acis would not have anything to do with the Acis CLOs going forward, and that the Investor would demand its money back if a reset transaction was done with Acis.<sup>8</sup> Likewise, Scott Ellington, general counsel for HCM, testified that the new equity holders (Investor) said, with absolute certainty, that they had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was purportedly toxic and, consequently, nothing associated with Acis could be managed or marketed as a CLO.<sup>9</sup> Mr. Ellington also testified that, because it would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, the Investor had the ability to “start calling the shots” and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.<sup>10</sup> Finally, Mr. Okada testified that a reset transaction could not be performed by Acis because the market would not accept Acis as a portfolio manager and Acis was no longer risk-retention compliant.<sup>11</sup>

8. However, circumstances have changed dramatically in the six months since the conclusion of the involuntary trial, and the harbingers of doom predicted by the Highlands have not come to fruition. For example, the Court found that the Highlands’ self-serving allegations regarding the Acis brand being toxic were not credible or convincing because Acis CLO 2017-7, Ltd. closed in April 2017 with Acis as the portfolio manager.<sup>12</sup> Further, the operations of Acis LP have stabilized in bankruptcy and Acis LP, with the assistance of Brigade, has not only continued to perform its duties under the PMAs, but improved the condition of the CLOs through the acquisition of additional loans. In addition, although the Highlands took actions that rendered Acis non-complaint with certain risk-retention requirements,<sup>13</sup> such requirements were determined to be inapplicable to CLO managers and such decision was not appealed by regulators to the Supreme Court.<sup>14</sup> As a result, there are neither reputational issues nor any other impediments to the ability of the Reorganized Acis, with the assistance of Brigade, to both perform the resets and continue to serve as the portfolio manager of any reset Acis CLOs. Finally, Brigade has explored the market and believes that the Reorganized Acis and Brigade will be able to reset the Acis CLOs on terms that improve the economics of the Acis CLOs if a reset is requested by HCLOF in a timely fashion.

9. The Trustee needs information from the Investor regarding whether its purported refusal to doing a reset with Acis was based on the erroneous assumptions articulated during the involuntary trial that Acis would not be able to perform the resets due to risk-retention issues, unsubstantiated reputational issues, or an alleged inability to accomplish the resets without the assistance of the Highlands. None of these purported concerns exist to impair the ability of the Reorganized Acis and Brigade to perform a reset. Further, although these matters were alleged by the Highlands, no one from the Investor ever testified during the involuntary trial. As a result, the Trustee needs to examine the Investor to determine whether the Investor ever actually had such concerns regarding proceeding with Acis. The Trustee also needs information regarding whether the Investor presently has any concerns about pursuing reset transactions with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade under the Plan now that Acis has been able to successfully serve as the portfolio manager for the Acis CLOs on a post-petition basis and there are no impediments to the ability of the Reorganized Acis and Brigade to pursue a reset on the Acis CLOs. This is particularly necessary given Mr. Ellington's previous sworn testimony that the Investor is the party calling the shots for HCLOF with respect to any reset transactions. Time is also of the essence as the reinvestment period for Acis CLO-3 will expire on February 1, 2019.

10. Finally, although the Highlands have represented to the Court that the Investor is an unrelated and independent third party, a decision by an unrelated and independent third party to refuse the opportunity to reset the Acis CLOs with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade “makes no sense” and would appear to be economically irrational given that Brigade has at least as good of a track record (if not a better track record) than does Highland in relation to its CLO business. As a result, the Trustee seeks information regarding the relationship, if any, between the Investor and the Highlands.

RELIEF SOUGHT AND GROUNDS THEREFOR

11. The Trustee requests entry of an Order, pursuant to Section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and Rule 2004, authorizing and directing (i) the production of documents by the Investor in response to the document requests attached as Exhibit A; and (ii) testimony by one or more corporate representatives of the Investor through depositions, including testimony relating to the matters set forth in Exhibit B attached hereto. A copy of the Trustee’s proposed order granting the relief requested herein is attached as Exhibit C hereto.<sup>15</sup>

12. The Rule 2004 information requested in this 2004 Motion will provide Debtor with information it needs to understand (i) the Investor’s intentions at the time it invested in HCLOF, (ii) the Investor’s position regarding doing the reset transactions with Acis prior to the entry of the order for relief on April 13, 2018, (iii) the Investor’s current position regarding whether HCLOF should do a reset with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade, (iv) whether and to what extent the Investor is “calling the shots” for HCLOF, and (v) the relationship, if any, between the Investor and the Highlands.

<sup>15</sup> Again, out of an abundance of caution, the identity of the Investor is not disclosed in the proposed order. At the hearing on the Motion, the Trustee will ask the Court to determine whether any order on the Motion should either identify the Investor, identify but redact the name of the Investor, or be entered under seal.

13. Bankruptcy Rule 2004 allows a party in interest, including the Trustee, to examine any entity regarding matters that may affect the administration of the Debtors' estate. See, e.g., In re Summit Corp., 891 F. 2d 1, 5 (1st Cir. 1989). Bankruptcy Rule 2004 also allows the Court to order parties-in-interest to produce documents. See In re Correra, No. 16-30728-SGJ-7, 2018 Bankr. LEXIS 2498, *14 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2018).

14. It is well settled that a Rule 2004 examination is broad in scope. See, e.g., In re Washington Mutual, Inc., 408 B.R. 45, 49 (Bankr. D. Del. 2009) ("[t]he scope of a Rule 2004 examination is unfettered and broad.") (internal quotation marks omitted). "Third parties are subject to examination pursuant to Rule 2004 if they have knowledge of the debtor's affairs." Correra, 2018 Bankr. LEXIS 2498 at *60 (citing In re GHR Energy Corp., 33 B.R. 451, 453-54 (Bankr. D. Mass. 1983)). "Courts tend to be reluctant to allow 'escape from a Rule 2004 examination unless the party can show that the examination' would be 'oppressive or burdensome.'" Id. at *60 (citing 9 Collier On Bankruptcy ¶ 2004.01[8] (Richard Levin et al. eds. 16th ed.)).

15. The Trustee does not propose to use the examination for any improper purpose, such as to annoy, embarrass or oppress the party being examined. See In re Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., 123 B.R. 702, 712 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1991).

16. The requested information in Exhibit A, and the deposition topics reflected on the attached Exhibit B, relates to, among other things, the Investor's intentions at the time it invested in HCLOF, the Investor's prior position regarding pursuing a reset of the Acis CLOs with Acis as the portfolio manager, the Investor's current position regarding pursuing a reset transaction with the Reorganized Acis and Brigade under the Plan, whether the Investor is actually calling the shots for HCLOF, and the relationship between the Investor and the

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, the Trustee respectfully requests that the Court: (i) grant the 2004 Motion; (ii) enter the proposed order attached hereto as Exhibit C, (iii) order the requested examination under oath of one or more corporate representatives of the Investor under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2004; (iv) order Investor, within thirty (30) days of entry of an order approving the 2004 Motion, to produce the records requested in Exhibit A; (v) order the attorneys for the Trustee be authorized to execute and serve any and all subpoenas that are necessary for the requested production of documents; and (vi) grant the Trustee such further relief, whether in law or in equity, to which he may be justly entitled.

Pursuant to Local Bankruptcy Rule 2004-1(a), I hereby certify that the undersigned counsel for the Trustee has conferred with Craig A. Bruens, counsel for the Investor, regarding the relief requested by the 2004 Motion. A conference was held but, at the time of such conference, Mr. Buens advised that the Investor had not yet had an opportunity to review and form an opinion about the relief requested in the 2004 Motion. As a result, the 2004 Motion is presumed to be opposed and is presented to the Bankruptcy Court for determination. In the event the undersigned subsequently learns that the Investor does not oppose the 2004 Motion, an amended certificate of conference will be filed.

INTRODUCTION

1. In its Solicitation Motion, the Debtor proposes to disallow for voting purposes all claims to which it has objected for any reason. The Debtor objected to the HarbourVest Claims (as defined below) on a perfunctory and unfounded basis, by tucking them in among the 92 claims in the Debtor’s First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 906] (the “Claim Objection” or “Objection”), which was an omnibus objection simply claiming, with no substance or explanation, that there was “no liability” for HarbourVest’s Claims. More than a month ago, HarbourVest filed the HarbourVest Response to Debtor’s First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 1057] (the “Response”), which amply detailed the legal and factual predicates for its claims. To date, that Response remains entirely un rebutted.

2. If the Solicitation Motion is granted, HarbourVest—one of Highland’s most significant creditors—would be disenfranchised in this Chapter 11 Case on the basis of a meritless, one-sentence “no liability” objection that is wholly insufficient to rebut HarbourVest’s prima facie case for its Claims. To avoid this unjust result, HarbourVest has filed this Motion pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3018, and seeks that the HarbourVest Claims be temporarily allowed for purposes of voting in full recognition of HarbourVest’s over $100 million in damages, $300 million post-trebling.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

3. The United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court” or “Bankruptcy Court”) has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1334.

4. This matter is a core proceeding within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b).

5. Venue is proper before this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

6. The statutory and legal predicates for the relief requested herein are sections 502 and 1126 of the Bankruptcy Code (“Bankruptcy Code”) and Bankruptcy Rules 3001 and 3018(a).

BACKGROUND

A. Case Background

7. On October 16, 2019 (“Petition Date”), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code.

8. Since filing the petition, the Debtor has been operating as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code.

9. On September 21, 2020, the Debtor filed the First Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. [Docket No. 1079] (the “Plan”) and related Disclosure Statement for the First Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. [Docket No. 1080] (the “Disclosure Statement”).

10. On September 28, 2020, the Debtor submitted the Debtor’s Motion for Entry of an Order (A) Approving the Adequacy of the Disclosure Statement; (B) Scheduling a Hearing to Confirm the First Amended Plan of Reorganization; (C) Establishing Deadline for Filing Objections to Confirmation of Plan; (D) Approving Form of Ballots, Voting Deadline and Solicitation Procedures; and (E) Approving Form and Manner of Notice [Docket No. 1108] (“Solicitation Motion”). The Solicitation Motion requests that the confirmation hearing for the Plan be held on December 3, 2020 at 9:30 a.m. (prevailing Central Time), or such other date as may be scheduled by the Court, and requests a Voting Deadline (as defined in the Solicitation Motion) of November 20, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time).

B. HarbourVest Claims

11. HarbourVest’s claims against Highland arise out of its November 15, 2017, investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”) to acquire a 49% interest as a minority, passive investor (the “Investment”). Highland’s pattern of fraudulent behavior preceding and following the Investment, including its scheme to drain Acis Capital Management L.P. of assets and its many lies and omissions regarding this scheme to (and, in this Court, about) HarbourVest, and the subsequent fallout, caused serious injury to HarbourVest. This caused HarbourVest damages in excess of $100 million, as detailed below. As a consequence of those damages, on April 8, 2020, HarbourVest timely filed its proofs of claim, which are listed in the Debtor’s claims register as claims number 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154 (the “Proofs of Claim”), describing its claims (the “HarbourVest Claims”). In addition, in its still-unrebutted response to Highland’s Claim Objection filed on September 11, 2020, HarbourVest described the HarbourVest Claims, and the supporting facts and law, in significant detail.<sup>2</sup>

12. As described in the Response, HarbourVest has strong claims against Highland under a number of legal theories, including but not limited to claims for fraud, fraudulent concealment, fraudulent inducement, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, breach of fiduciary duties, misuse of fund assets, U.S. state and federal securities law claims, violations of the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (“RICO”), and unfair prejudice under the Guernsey Companies Law.

13. These claims entitle HarbourVest to recovery of the significant damages it has experienced following Highland’s fraudulent inducement of HarbourVest into the HCLOF investment, which include:

- Investment-related losses as of August 31, 2020 of more than $100 million, taking into account the original expected proceeds<sup>3</sup> from HarbourVest’s $78,521,429 of contributions to HCLOF<sup>4</sup> plus 5% interest per year<sup>5</sup>;

<sup>3</sup> 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud and Deceit § 105; Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768 (Tex. 2009). As discussed further in the Response, separate from the remedies available to HarbourVest for its claims under U.S. federal and state law, the court’s remedial powers for a Guernsey unfair prejudice claim, see Response at 23–25, are broad. Section 350 of the Guernsey Companies Law provides: “[i]f the Court is satisfied that an application under section 349 is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of.” Such relief may include ordering a buyout of the applicant’s interests as a member of the Company at a price adjusted to reflect what the value of such interests would have been had the prejudicial conduct not taken place. Id.; see also Re Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. (1985) 3 All ER 523. Relief is commonly granted against those who have caused the unfairly prejudicial conduct, including non-members of the company, where it is just to do so. Re Little Olympian Each-Ways Ltd. (1994) 2 BCLC 420.

- HarbourVest’s share of years of staggering legal fees inappropriately charged to HCLOF: more than $7.5 million to date<sup>6</sup>;
- Exemplary or punitive damages for Highland’s fraudulent behavior<sup>7</sup>;
- HarbourVest’s own legal fees incurred as a result of the Acis Trustee’s investigation of HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy and HarbourVest’s protection of its own rights: more than $1 million to date.<sup>8</sup>

C. Highland Objection and Subsequent Discussions

14. After HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim, Highland filed its Claim Objection.

While styled as a procedural and technical objection to claims which are facially deficient (such

For reference, the unaudited net asset value of HCLOF as of August 31, 2020 was $44,587,820. HarbourVest’s share of HCLOF is thus valued at a mere $22,287,228.

Ann. art. 581-33(D)(1) (“On rescission, a buyer shall recover (a) the consideration he paid for the security plus interest thereon at the legal rate from the date of payment by him, less (b) the amount of any income he received on the security, upon tender of the security (or a security of the same class and series).”); see also *Duperier v. Such remedies are available to HarbourVest for its securities fraud claims, among others.

Ann. art. 581–33D(7); Lane Hartman Ltd. v. P.R.O. Missions, Inc., No. 3:95-CV-0869, 1997 WL 457512, at *9 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 5, 1997).

as late-filed claims and duplicate claims), it also included conclusory assertions of “no liability” regarding a number of claims, including the HarbourVest Claims. The Claim Objection—which makes no attempt to rebut any of the factual or legal bases of the well-founded HarbourVest Claims—fails for all the reasons set forth at length in the Response.

15. The Debtor advised HarbourVest that its objection to the Highland Claims was scheduled to be heard on October 6, 2020. However, after the Response was filed, recognizing that the HarbourVest Claims could not be easily disposed of, the Debtor sought to adjourn the hearing on its objection to the HarbourVest Claims. In an effort to be accommodating, and in light of the competing demands on the Court’s time and docket, HarbourVest agreed to temporarily adjourn the hearing.<sup>9</sup> Counsel to the respective parties continue to discuss an appropriate discovery and trial schedule.

RELIEF REQUESTED

16. By this Motion, HarbourVest seeks entry of an order temporarily allowing the Claims for voting purposes, pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a), in an amount that recognizes HarbourVest’s over $100 million in damages, $300 million post-trebling.

A. Legal Authority

17. Holders of allowed claims or interests are permitted to vote to accept or reject a chapter 11 plan. 11 U.S.C. § 1126. A claim represented by a timely and properly filed proof of claim “is deemed allowed, unless a party in interest . . . objects.” 11 U.S.C. § 502(a). Once a party in interest objects to a filed claim, the holder of that claim may not (absent other relief) be entitled to vote on a chapter 11 plan while the objection is pending. See 11 U.S.C. § 1126. The proposed Solicitation Procedures, which provide that holders of claims that are subject to a pending objection are not entitled to vote on account of the disputed portion of their claims, reflects this statutory structure. See Solicitation Motion ¶ 43(d).

18. However, where a claim is not yet allowed (due to a pending objection or otherwise), bankruptcy courts “may temporarily allow the claim or interest in an amount which the court deems proper for the purpose of accepting or rejecting a plan.” Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3018. The policy behind Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a) is “to prevent possible abuse by plan proponents” who attempt to ensure acceptance of a plan by strategically objecting to the claims of dissenting creditors. In re Armstrong, 292 B.R. 678, 686 (10th Cir. B.A.P. 2003). Unless HarbourVest is permitted to vote the estimated amount of its claim, exactly this sort of abuse will be at play in this Chapter 11 Case.

19. Bankruptcy courts are given significant discretion and flexibility in estimating claims, with the goal that the process “must be accomplished quickly and efficiently.” In re Adelpia Bus. Sols., Inc., 341 B.R. 415, 422 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2003); see also In re Ralph Lauren Womenswear, Inc., 197 B.R. 771, 774 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1996). Bankruptcy courts also have flexibility to “employ whatever method is best suited to the circumstances of the case” when determining whether and in what amount to allow a claim for voting purposes. In re Ralph Lauren Womenswear, Inc., 197 B.R. at 775; see also In re Frascella Enters., Inc., 360 B.R. 435, 458 (Bankr. E.D. Pa. 2007). Rule 3018(a) contemplates only a summary estimation proceeding, not a full trial on the merits of the claim. See, e.g., In re Windsor Plumbing Supply Co., 170 B.R. 503, 521 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. 1994); In re Zolner, 173 B.R. 629, 633 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1994).

20. Although the Bankruptcy Code and the Bankruptcy Rules do not dictate a formal procedure for calculating a claim for voting purposes, courts have held that the calculation

“should ensure that the voting power is commensurate with the creditor’s economic interests in the case.” In re Quigley Co., 346 B.R. 647, 654 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006). When determining whether to temporarily allow a claim, courts may look to (1) the debtor’s scheduling of the claim, (2) the details of the claim itself, and (3) the debtor’s objection to determine parties’ expectations regarding the amount and nature of the claim to be voted. In re Stone Hedge Props., 191 B.R. 59, 65 (Bankr. M.D. Pa. 1995). Calculation of a claim under Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a), however, is not determinative or preclusive of the ultimate validity or amount of the claim or any causes of action before a non-bankruptcy court. See In re Quigley, 346 B.R. at 654.

B. Argument

21. The Debtor is well aware that the HarbourVest Claims cannot be disposed of through any rote objection—or even through briefing. Indeed, this is why the Debtor has sought to adjourn the hearing on the HarbourVest Claims. In three steps, the Debtor seeks to avoid having to litigate the HarbourVest Claims on a timely basis, while simultaneously denying HarbourVest a voice on the Plan and the ultimate treatment of its substantial claims in this Chapter 11 Case:

Step 1: File a one-line, baseless, procedurally improper, and facially insufficient objection to the HarbourVest Claims to render them technically “disputed” (without actually providing any facts or even argument to refute their validity).

Step 2: Refuse to withdraw the frivolous objection when HarbourVest provides a detailed basis for the HarbourVest Claims and emphasizes the impropriety of including the HarbourVest Claims in an unsupported omnibus objection.

Step 3: When publicly challenged in the Response—a pleading demonstrating the strength of the HarbourVest Claims, the extent of the Debtor’s deception and misconduct, and the vacuity of the Debtor’s objection—adjourn the hearing on that objection.

The result, if successful? The Debtor would have handily disenfranchised one of its largest creditors—located in what is likely to be a key class for its Plan—on the eve of confirmation.

22. Bankruptcy Rule 3018 is precisely the mechanism designed to avoid this sort of mischief. The Debtor contends that it cannot resolve the HarbourVest Claims prior to the confirmation hearing. While HarbourVest reserves its rights to seek formal allowance of its claims prior to confirmation, it acknowledges that a Rule 3018 valuation of its claims in full for voting purposes would allow the Debtor and the Court to focus time and resources on the Plan process while avoiding prejudice to HarbourVest.

23. Nonetheless, it is worth underscoring that the time pressure here was manufactured by the Debtor—it did not have to file a baseless objection it was unprepared to defend. It could instead have deferred litigation on the HarbourVest Claims and filed an objection later in the case (but for its desire to wrongfully strip HarbourVest, a major economic stakeholder, of its rightful say in the Plan process without a hearing). Or, the Debtor could have timely engaged with and provided a substantive response to HarbourVest’s detailed support of its claim filed weeks ago. The Debtor has done neither, however, and it would be unfair to permit the Debtor to strip HarbourVest of its voting rights based on an entirely unsupported objection that it is not timely pressing forward. Bankruptcy Rule 3018(a) “was designed to give all creditors, even those holding disputed claims, the opportunity to vote.” In re Century Glove, Inc., 88 B.R. 45, 46 (Bankr. D. Del. 1988) (emphasis added).

24. HarbourVest has presented substantial and credible evidence and arguments in support of the validity and amount of its more than $100 million damages directly caused by Highland's behavior. These damages are appropriately recoverable for the HarbourVest Claims.<sup>10</sup> In addition, HarbourVest's RICO claim entitles it to treble damages, which are properly considered in the claims estimation process. See In re Hydrox Chem. Co., 194 B.R. 617 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1996) (estimating value of claim for Rule 3018 purposes based off of trebled RICO damages). Thus, for purposes of this Rule 3018 motion and without prejudice to its right to adduce additional evidence in the future regarding its damages, HarbourVest respectfully requests that its claims be estimated at $300 million for voting purposes.

25. To date, the Debtor has provided no evidence, no factual assertions, and no analysis of the HarbourVest Claims under the applicable standard, to rebut the prima facie case that HarbourVest has put forward on its claims. To the contrary, Highland has unjustly attempted to disenfranchise HarbourVest on the eve of confirmation of the Plan by filing an objection to the HarbourVest Claims that does not satisfy the Debtor's minimal burden to provide sufficient evidence that an actual dispute exists as to the validity or amount of HarbourVest's Claims. Under the circumstances present here, the Court should exercise its discretion to temporarily allow the HarbourVest Claims in their full face amount for purposes of voting on the Plan. Allowing HarbourVest to vote the full face value of its claims comports with the spirit of the Bankruptcy Code, which encourages creditor voting and participation in the reorganization process. In re Amarex Inc., 61 B.R. 301, 303 (Bankr. W.D. Okla. 1985) (“[T]o allow [the disputed claims] to vote on the plans, even though some may be eventually disallowed for purposes of distribution, is more in keeping with the spirit of Chapter 11 which encourages creditor vote [sic] and participation in the reorganization process”).

26. In sum, the HarbourVest Claims should be entitled to temporary allowance for purposes of voting on the Plan because: (i) HarbourVest’s filing of proofs of claim constitutes prima facie evidence of the validity of the Claims and HarbourVest’s Response—now filed more than a month ago—provides credible and detailed descriptions of the HarbourVest Claims and remains unrebutted; (ii) the Debtor’s Objection is procedurally and substantively deficient, and (iii) even if the Debtor’s Objection were not flawed, it would have been filed with insufficient time and insufficient specificity to be addressed prior to the deadline for voting on the Plan. Allowing the full amount of the HarbourVest Claims for voting purposes simply restores the status quo that would have obtained if Highland had not engaged in yet another scheme—this time to deprive a major creditor of its voting rights—and had instead only filed objections it was prepared to defend, when it was prepared to do so. This is the precise circumstance for which temporary allowance of claims was created.

RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

27. The liquidation of the HarbourVest Claims is only for voting on the Plan and shall not constitute or be construed as an admission by HarbourVest of any limitation on the ultimate allowed amount of the HarbourVest Claims or the classification of such claims. HarbourVest does not waive, and expressly reserves, all rights, arguments, counterarguments, and defenses, including, without limitation, the right to contest in any court of competent jurisdiction any objection to the basis and/or validity of the ultimate amounts of the HarbourVest Claims.

NOTICE

28. HarbourVest will provide notice of this Motion to: (a) the Debtor; (b) counsel to the Debtor; (c) the United States Trustee; and (d) all parties that have filed a notice of appearance and request for service of papers pursuant to Local Bankruptcy Rule 2002. In light of the nature of the relief requested herein, HarbourVest respectfully submits that such notice is sufficient and that no other or further notice is necessary.

NO PRIOR WRITTEN REQUEST

29. No prior written request for the relief sought herein has been made to this Court or any other court.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for the reasons set forth herein, HarbourVest respectfully requests that this Court enter an order granting the relief requested in the Motion and temporarily allowing the HarbourVest Claims for voting on the Plan and granting such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

DECLARATION OF MICHAEL PUGATCH IN SUPPORT OF MOTION OF HARBOURVEST PURSUANT TO RULE 3018(A) OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURE FOR TEMPORARY ALLOWANCE OF CLAIMS FOR PURPOSES OF VOTING TO ACCEPT OR REJECT THE PLAN

Dondero Ex. G

I, Michael J. Pugatch, declare as follows:

1. I am a managing director of HarbourVest Partners, LLC. I submit this Declaration in support of the Motion Pursuant to Rule 3018(A) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Purposes of Voting to Accept or Reject the Plan filed on behalf of HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P., HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P., HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P., HV International VIII Secondary L.P., HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P., and HarbourVest Partners L.P., on behalf of funds and accounts under management (collectively, “HarbourVest”) being filed concurrently with this Declaration. I submit this Declaration based on my personal knowledge.

2. HarbourVest is a passive minority investor in Highland CLO Funds (“HCLOF”), a vehicle managed by Highland Capital Management LP (“Highland”). HarbourVest initially invested $73,522,928 for a roughly 49% interest in HCLOF, on November 15, 2017. On February 9, 2018, HarbourVest contributed an additional $4,998,501 following a capital call. To date, HarbourVest has received three dividends from HCLOF, each totaling $1,570,429.

3. The unaudited net asset value of HCLOF as of August 31, 2020 was $44,587,820. HarbourVest’s share of HCLOF is thus valued at a mere $22,287,228. HarbourVest’s expected proceeds from the original HCLOF investment were projected to exceed $135 million.

4. Highland has charged over $15 million in attorneys’ fees for HCLOF, Highland, Acis, Highland HCF, and others, to HCLOF. We, as shareholders, were made to pay these entities’ legal fees. HarbourVest’s share of these fees stands at more than $7.5 million (as of June 30, 2020).

5. HarbourVest’s own legal fees spent protecting its interests have reached more than $1 million to date, which include legal fees associated with HarbourVest responding to Rule 2004 discovery requests seeking documents and a deposition from HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy, monitoring the Acis bankruptcy for false statements regarding HarbourVest, assessment of legal claims and damages to HarbourVest attributable to Highland's conduct, as well as protecting HarbourVest's rights in the Highland bankruptcy, including through filing proofs of claim regarding HarbourVest's claims. These fees continue to accrue.

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1746, I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

No. 118].* As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Partners L.P. on behalf of funds and accounts under management (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant manages investment funds that are limited partners in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third

Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor’s employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HV International VIII Secondary L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

DALLAS DIVISION

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Partners L.P. on behalf of funds and accounts under management (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant manages investment funds that are limited partners in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third

Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor’s employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

4. Claimant hereby files this Claim to assert any and all of its rights to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the foregoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with HCLOF (including, but not limited to, the Subscription and Transfer Agreement for Ordinary Shares Highland CLO Funding, Ltd., dated as of November 15, 2017, the Members Agreement Relating to the Company, dated as of November 15, 2017, the Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. Offering Memorandum dated November 15, 2017), and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the foregoing harm.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

14. Payments on account of this Proof of Claim should be sent to the Claimant at the address specified for notices to the Claimant in Part 1.3 of the Proof of Claim.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HV International VIII Secondary L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings in the Acis

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

In re:

Highland Capital Management, L.P.

Debtor.

Chapter 11

Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ)

ANNEX TO PROOF OF CLAIM

1. This annex (the “Annex”) is part of and is incorporated by reference into the attached proof of claim (together with the Annex, the “Proof of Claim”) and describes in more detail the claims of HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P. (the “Claimant”) against the debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”).

2. The Claimant is a limited partner in one of the Debtor’s managed vehicles, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”). Acis Capital Management GP, L.L.C. and Acis Capital Management L.P. (together, “Acis”), the portfolio manager for HCLOF, filed for chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Court”) on January 30, 2018. The Acis bankruptcy filing resulted from a dispute between Debtor and its former employee, Joshua Terry, who served as portfolio manager for Debtor’s collateral loan obligations funds (“CLO”) business. See, e.g., Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law in Support of Orders for Relief Issued After Trial on Contested Involuntary Bankruptcy Petition (“Involuntary Petition Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No. 118]. As noted in more detail in the Court’s Bench Ruling and Memorandum of Law in Support of: (A) Final Approval of Disclosure Statement; and (B) Confirmation of Chapter 11 Trustee’s Third Amended Joint Plan (“Confirmation Ruling”) [Case No. 18-30264 (SGJ), Dkt. No 827] and related filings

in the Acis bankruptcy cases, there has been extensive litigation regarding alleged improper conduct associated with the management of, and transactions relating to, Acis, including transactions with and related to HCLOF. See, e.g., id.; Second Amended Complaint [Case No. 18-03078(SGJ), Dkt. No. 157].

3. Due to the Acis bankruptcy and certain conduct alleged to have been undertaken by the Debtor (to whom Acis subcontracted its functions) and Debtor's employees (who were officers, employees, and agents of Acis), the Claimant has suffered significant harm. Such harm includes, but is not limited to, financial harm resulting from, among other things (i) court orders in the Acis bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise regulated the activity of HCLOF; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF. See, e.g., Involuntary Petition Ruling ¶ 27; see also Confirmation Ruling.

6. This Proof of Claim is filed with a full reservation of rights, including the right to amend, update, modify, supplement or otherwise revise this Proof of Claim in any respect at any time. The filing of this Proof of Claim is not and should not be construed to be: (a) a waiver or release of any of the Claimant's rights against any person, entity or property accruing to it against the Debtor and its estate; (b) a waiver of the Claimant's rights to assert that 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(C) is unconstitutional; (c) a consent or submission by the Claimant, or waiver of the Claimant's rights to object, to the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to the subject matter of any of the claims described herein, or any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect to any of the claims described herein, or any other proceeding commenced in the Debtor's chapter 11 case against or otherwise involving the Claimant; (d) a waiver or release of any right of the Claimant, or consent by the Claimant, to a trial by jury in this or any other court or proceeding; (e) a waiver or release of, or any limitation on, any right of the Claimant to have orders entered only after de novo review by a United States District Judge; (f) an election of remedies; or (g) a waiver of, or any other limitation on, any right of the Claimant to request withdrawal of the reference with respect to any matter, including, without limitation, any matter relating to this Proof of Claim.

8. Furthermore, the Claimant expressly reserves its rights to (a) file additional proofs of claim for additional claims that may be based on the same or additional documents or facts or other liability or indebtedness of the Debtor to the Claimant under contract or otherwise; (b) assert claims for cure of defaults in any agreement that the Debtor or any trustee appointed in this chapter 11 case may seek to assume; (c) assert any and all other claims, causes of action, defenses, offsets or counterclaims against the Debtor or any other parties; (d) file a request for payment of an administrative expense under 11 U.S.C. §§ 503 and 507 for any or all of the claims or rights of payment described above and any additional amounts; and (e) seek recovery through any relevant third parties, including any of the Debtor's insurance coverage providers.

9. This Proof of Claim does not encompass all claims that the Claimant or its affiliates may have that arise after the Petition Date and are entitled to administrative priority, and the Claimant expressly reserves its right to file such claim or any similar claim at the appropriate time, including any such post-petition claims arising under these service contracts.

10. This Proof of Claim is filed without prejudice to the filing by the Claimant of additional proofs of claim or requests for payment with respect to any other indebtedness, liability or obligation of the Debtor. The Claimant does not, by this Proof of Claim or any amendment or other action, waive any rights with respect to any scheduled claim.

other relationships between the Claimant and the Debtor), as well as the right to file any separate or additional proofs of claim with respect to the claims set forth herein or otherwise, including for the purpose of fixing and liquidating any contingent or unliquidated claim set forth herein, or to file additional proofs of claim in respect of additional amounts or for any other reason.

12. In executing and filing this Proof of Claim, the Claimant does not submit to the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas for any purpose other than with respect to this Proof of Claim against the Debtor, and does not waive or release any rights or remedies against any other person or entity that may be liable for all or part of this Proof of Claim.

13. The Claimant otherwise reserves its rights, and nothing herein shall prejudice the Claimant's rights, under any order of the Court previously entered in this chapter 11 case.

Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the “Debtor”), by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this omnibus objection (the “Objection”), seeking entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A (the “Order”), (i) disallowing certain duplicate claims listed on Schedule 1 to the Order (the “Duplicate Claims”), (ii) reducing and allowing certain overstated claims listed on Schedule 2 (the “Overstated Claims”) in amounts which comport with the Debtor’s books and records, (iii) disallowing certain claims that were filed after the applicable bar date listed on Schedule 3 to the Order (the “Late-Filed Claims”), (iv) disallowing certain claims that have already been satisfied listed on Schedule 4 to the Order (the “Satisfied Claims”), (v) disallowing certain claims for which the Debtor’s books and records show no liability listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order (the “No-Liability Claims”), and (vi) disallowing claims which contain insufficient documentation listed on Schedule 7 to the Order (the “Insufficient-Documentation Claims,” and together with the Duplicate Claims, the Overstated Claims, the Late-Filed Claims, the Satisfied Claims, and the No-Liability Claims, the “Disputed Claims”). In support of this Objection, the Debtor respectfully represents as follows:

I. JURISDICTION

1. The Court has jurisdiction to consider and determine this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334. This is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157(b)(1) and (b)(2)(A), (B) and (O). Venue is proper before this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

2. The statutory bases for the relief requested herein are sections 105(a) and 502(b) of title 11 of the United States Code (the “Bankruptcy Code”), Rules 3007 and 9014 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the “Bankruptcy Rules”), and Rules 3007-1 and 3007-2 of the Local Bankruptcy Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the “Local Rules”).

II. BACKGROUND

3. On October 16, 2019 (the “Petition Date”), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the “Delaware Court”).

4. On October 29, 2019, the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the “Committee”) was appointed by the United States Trustee in the Delaware Court.

5. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor’s bankruptcy case to this Court [Docket No. 186].<sup>2</sup>

6. The Debtor has continued in the possession of its property and has continued to operate and manage its business as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code. No trustee or examiner has been appointed in this chapter 11 case.

7. On March 2, 2020, the Court entered its Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488] (the “Bar Date Order”). The Bar Date Order fixed April 8, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time) as the deadline for any person or entity, other than Governmental Units (as such term is defined in section 101(27) of the Bankruptcy Code), to file proofs of claim against the Debtor (the “General Bar Date”). For Governmental Units, the Bar Date Order fixed the deadline to file proofs of claim as April 13, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time). The Bar Date Order also set April 23, 2020 as the deadline to file claims for investors in funds managed by the Debtor (the “Fund Investor Bar Date”). The Debtor also sought and obtained the extended employee bar date of May 26, 2020 per the Order Granting Debtor's Emergency Motion and Extending Bar Date Deadline for Employees to File Claims [Docket No. 560].

8. On March 3, 2020, the Debtor filed the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims [Docket No. 498] (the “Bar Date Notice”). The Bar Date Notice was mailed to all known creditors and equity holders on March 5, 2020. See Certificate of Service [Docket No. 530].

9. The Debtor caused the Bar Date Notice to be published on two occasions each in The New York Times and The Dallas Morning News—once on March 12, 2020, and once on March 13, 2020. See Debtor's Notice of Affidavit of Publication of the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims in The New York Times [Docket No. 533] and Debtor's Notice of Affidavit of Publication of the Notice of Bar Dates for Filing Claims in The Dallas Morning News [Docket No. 534].

The Claims Resolution Process

10. In the ordinary course of business, the Debtor maintains books and records (the “Books and Records”) that reflect, inter alia, the Debtor’s liabilities and the amounts owed to its creditors.

11. The Debtor’s register of claims (the “Claims Register”), prepared and maintained by Kurtzman Carson Consultants LLC (“KCC”)—the court-appointed notice and claims agent in this case—reflects that, as of the date of this Objection, 194 proofs of claim have been filed in the Debtor’s chapter 11 case.

12. The Debtor and its professionals have been reviewing and analyzing claims. This process includes identifying categories of claims that may be targeted for disallowance and expungement, reduction, and/or reclassification.

III. RELIEF REQUESTED

13. The Debtor seeks entry of an order, pursuant to section 502 of the Bankruptcy Code and Bankruptcy Rule 3007, (i) disallowing the Duplicate Claims listed on Schedule 1 to the Order, (ii) reducing and allowing the Overstated Claims listed on Schedule 2 to the Order in amounts which comport with the Books and Records; (iii) disallowing the Late-Filed Claims listed on Schedule 3 to the Order, (iv) disallowing the Satisfied Claims listed on Schedule 4 to the Order, (v) disallowing the No-Liability Claims listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order, and (vi) disallowing the Insufficient-Documentation Claims listed on Schedule 7 to the Order.

IV. OBJECTIONS

14. Section 502(a) of the Bankruptcy Code provides that “[a] claim or interest, proof of which is filed under section 501 of this title, is deemed allowed, unless a party in interest . . . objects.” 11 U.S.C. § 502(a). A chapter 11 debtor has the duty to object to the allowance of any claim that is improper. 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(5), 1106(a)(1), 1107(a); see also Int'l Yacht & Tennis, Inc. v. Wasserman Tennis, Inc. (In re Int'l Yacht & Tennis, Inc.), 922 F.2d 659, 661-62 (11th Cir. 1991).

15. As set forth in Bankruptcy Rule 3001(f), a properly executed and filed proof of claim constitutes prima facie evidence of the validity and amount of the claim under section 502(a) of the Bankruptcy Code. See In re O'Connor, 153 F.3d 258, 260 (5th Cir. 1998); In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 10-43400 (DML), 2012 WL 4464550, at *2 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Sept. 25, 2012). To receive the benefit of prima facie validity, however, “[i]t is elemental that a proof of claim must assert facts or allegations . . . which would entitle the claimant to a recovery.” In re Heritage Org., L.L.C., 04-35574 (BJH), 2006 WL 6508477, at *8 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 27, 2006), aff'd sub nom., Wilferth v. Faulkner, 3:06 CV 510 K, 2006 WL 2913456 (N.D. Tex. Oct 11, 2006). Additionally, a claimant’s proof of claim is entitled to the presumption of prima facie validity under Bankruptcy Rule 3001(f) only until an objecting party refutes “at least one of the allegations that is essential to the claim’s legal sufficiency.” In re Am. Reit, Inc., 07-40308, 2008 WL 1771914, at *3 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. Apr. 15, 2008); In re Starnes, 231 B.R. 903, 912 (N.D. Tex. May 14, 2008). “The ultimate burden of proof always lies with the claimant.” In re Armstrong, 347 B.R. 581, 583 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2006).

16. Section 502(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code requires disallowance of a claim if “such claim is unenforceable against the debtor and property of the debtor, under any agreement or applicable law . . . .” 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(1).

The Disputed Claims Should Be Disallowed and Expunged or Reduced

17. For the reasons set forth below, the Disputed Claims are not enforceable and should be disallowed, expunged, or reduced as set forth herein.

A. Duplicate Claims

18. The Debtor has identified 3 proofs of claim—listed on Schedule 1 to the Order—where each claimant filed multiple proofs of claim representing a single obligation of the Debtor. The Debtor is requesting that the listed Duplicate Claims be disallowed such that only the surviving claims listed on Schedule 1 remain, subject to any other objection the Debtor may bring in the future. Disallowing and expunging these claims will prevent the claimants from receiving multiple recoveries for a single claim.

B. Claims to be Reduced and Allowed

19. The Debtor has examined the 4 proofs of claim listed on Schedule 2 to the Order and has determined that the amounts listed on the claims exceed the liability listed for each claimant on the Debtor's Books and Records. The Debtor is requesting that the amount of each claim be reduced so that it correctly reflects the amount of the Debtor's books and records.

C. Late-Filed Claims

20. The Debtor has identified 1 proof of claim listed on Schedule 3 to the Order that was filed after the passage of the applicable Bar Date.

D. Satisfied Claims

21. The Debtor has identified 11 proofs of claim listed on Schedule 4 to the Order that, according to the Debtor's books and records, were fully satisfied in the ordinary course of business. Disallowing and expunging such claims, therefore, will prevent the claimants from obtaining double-recovery on account of their claims.

E. No-Liability Claims

22. The Debtor has identified 63 proofs of claim listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order that can be characterized as "No-Liability Claims"—i.e., claims that erroneously assert a liability that is not reflected in the Debtor's books and records. Certain claims listed on Schedule 5 to the Order appear to be protective claims for claimants asserting claims related to agreements with the Debtor. No amount is asserted on these claims and, although the claimants have indicated they would supplement the claims within ninety (90) days, that time has passed and no amendment or supplement has been filed and no additional documentation has been provided to support the claims. Each claim listed on Schedule 6 to the Order erroneously asserts a claim against the Debtor which has no basis in the Books and Records and is not an obligation of the Debtor. The Debtor has reviewed each No-Liability Claim listed on Schedules 5 and 6 to the Order and all supporting information and documentation provided therewith, made reasonable efforts to research each No-Liability Claim, and determined that the Debtor is not liable for such No-Liability Claims. Accordingly, the Debtor requests that each No-Liability Claim be disallowed and expunged.

F. Insufficient-Documentation Claims

23. The Debtor was not able to determine the validity of the 10 claims listed on Schedule 7 to the Order because such claims were not filed with sufficient accompanying documentation and provided no explanation for the bases of the claims. Additionally, no liability for these claims appears on the Debtor's books and records. Accordingly, the Debtor requests that the Insufficient-Documentation Claims be disallowed and expunged because the claimants have failed to carry their burden to support their claims.

V. RESPONSES TO OBJECTIONS

24. To contest an objection, a claimant must file and serve a written response to this Objection (each, a "Response") so that it is received no later than September 1, 2020 at 5:00 p.m. (Central Time) (the "Response Deadline"). Every Response must be filed with the Office of the Clerk of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (Dallas Division), Earle Cabell Federal Building, 1100 Commerce Street, Room 1254, Dallas, TX 75242-1496 and served upon the following entities, so that the Response is received no later than the Response Deadline, at the following addresses:

25. Every Response to this Objection must contain, at a minimum, the following information:

- i. a caption setting forth the name of the Court, the name of the Debtor, the case number, and the title of the objection to which the Response is directed;
- ii. the name of the claimant, his/her/its claim number, and a description of the basis for the amount of the claim;
- iii. the specific factual basis and supporting legal argument upon which the party will rely in opposing this Objection;
- iv. any supporting documentation (to the extent it was not included with the proof of claim previously filed with the clerk of the Court or KCC) upon which the party will rely to support the basis for and amounts asserted in the proof of claim; and

- v. the name, address, telephone number, email address, and fax number of the person(s) (which may be the claimant or the claimant's legal representative) with whom counsel for the Debtor should communicate with respect to the claim or the Objection and who possesses authority to reconcile, settle, or otherwise resolve the objection to the disputed claim on behalf of the claimant.

26. If a claimant fails to file and serve a timely Response by the Response Deadline, the Debtor will present to the Court an appropriate order disallowing such claimant's claim, as set forth in Exhibit A, without further notice to the claimant.

VI. REPLIES TO RESPONSES

27. Consistent with Local Rules, the Debtor may, at its option, file and serve a reply to a Response by no later than 5:00 p.m. (prevailing Central Time) three (3) days prior to the hearing to consider the Objection.

VII. SEPARATE CONTESTED MATTERS

28. To the extent that a Response is filed regarding any claim listed in this Objection and the Debtor is unable to resolve the Response, the objection by the Debtor to each such claim asserted herein shall constitute a separate contested matter as contemplated by Bankruptcy Rule 9014. Any order entered by the Court regarding an objection asserted in the Objection shall be deemed a separate order with respect to each claim.

VIII. RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

29. The Debtor hereby reserves the right to object in the future to any of the claims that are the subject of this Objection on any ground, including, but not limited to, 11 U.S.C. § 502(d), and to amend, modify, and/or supplement this Objection, including, without limitation, to object to amended or newly filed claims.

30. Notwithstanding anything contained in this Objection or the attached exhibits, nothing herein shall be construed as a waiver of any rights that the Debtor may have to exercise rights of setoff against the holders of such claims.

IX. NOTICE

31. Notice of this Objection shall be provided to (i) the Office of the United States Trustee for the Northern District of Texas; (ii) each of the claimants whose claim is subject to this Objection; and (iii) all entities requesting notice pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2002. In light of the nature of the relief requested, the Debtor submits that no further notice is required.

X. COMPLIANCE WITH LOCAL RULES

32. This Objection includes citations to the applicable rules and statutory authorities upon which the relief requested herein is predicated and a discussion of their application to this Objection. The Debtor objects to no more than 100 proofs of claim herein. The Debtor has served notice of this Objection on those persons whose names appear in the signature blocks on the proofs of claim and in accordance with Bankruptcy Rule 7004. Moreover, the Debtor has notified claimants that a copy of their claim may be obtained from the Debtor upon request. Accordingly, the Debtor submits that this Objection satisfies Local Rule 3007-2.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests the entry of the proposed Order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, granting the relief requested and granting such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Overview

1. HarbourVest’s claims against Highland arise out of its November 15, 2017 investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. (“HCLOF”) to acquire a 49% interest as a minority, passive investor (the “Investment”). Highland’s actions preceding and following the Investment caused serious injury to HarbourVest, leading to damages well in excess of $100 million. On April 8, 2020, HarbourVest timely filed its proofs of claim, which are listed in the Debtor’s claims register as claims number 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154 (the “Proofs of Claim”), describing its claims (the “HarbourVest Claims”).

2. After HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim, Highland filed the Claim Objection—an omnibus objection to 92 claims. Despite being a bare-bones, omnibus objection, the Claim Objection ostensibly contains substantive (though paper-thin) objections to dozens of claims, including HarbourVest’s, tucked in among procedural and technical objections to other claims.

3. The Claim Objection states that “each claim listed on Schedule 6 to the Order [including the HarbourVest Claims] erroneously asserts a claim against the Debtor which has no basis in the Books and Records and is not an obligation of the Debtor.” Claim Obj. ¶ 22.<sup>2</sup> Schedule 6 further lists the HarbourVest Claims as purportedly having “[n]o liability on the Debtor’s books and records.” Claim Obj. Sched. 6. That is the entirety of Highland’s objection with respect to the HarbourVest Claims. Highland makes no attempt to rebut any of the factual or legal bases of the well-founded HarbourVest Claims, and indeed filed the Claim Objection before even meaningfully engaging with HarbourVest regarding the HarbourVest Claims.<sup>3</sup>

4. In addition to being deficient on its face and procedurally improper, the Claim Objection is simply inaccurate. As described below, the HarbourVest Claims are indeed obligations of Highland, and Highland is well aware of the factual bases for them—namely, the misrepresentations, omissions, and other misconduct of Highland both prior to and during HarbourVest’s Investment. Highland’s failure to book a liability associated with the damages its fraud and misconduct caused is no defense to the liability itself.

5. The Claim Objection does not rebut HarbourVest’s prima facie case for its Claims and fails on its face. For the avoidance of doubt, however, this Response provides additional details regarding the HarbourVest Claims<sup>4</sup>—details of which Highland is well aware, clearly establishing HarbourVest’s right to significant damages from Highland’s misconduct and fraudulent inducement of HarbourVest’s Investment in a fund that has merely served as a pawn

<sup>3</sup> To the extent that Highland raises any substantive objections in a reply to this Response, HarbourVest expressly reserves its rights to move to strike and/or submit additional briefing as appropriate.

in Highland's feud with a former employee (who Highland also defrauded). The Claim Objection should be overruled, and the HarbourVest Claims should be allowed.

Factual Background

6. The events giving rise to HarbourVest's claims begin in June 2016, when Highland terminated the employment of Joshua Terry ("Terry"), the employee who managed Highland's CLO business and served as CLO manager for Acis Capital Management L.P. ("Acis LP").<sup>5</sup> Litigation ensued between Terry and Highland in or around September 2016, with Terry claiming his termination was unlawful. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling at 4.

7. Around that time, on October 7, 2016, Acis LP sold Highland a participation interest in its expected future cash flow in CLO Collateral Management Agreements for $666,655 plus a $12,666,446 note payable from Highland to Acis LP (the "Highland Note"). Id. at 17. On May 31, 2017, a $3,370,694 payment was made on the Highland Note. Id.

8. By summer 2017, HarbourVest was engaged in preliminary discussions with Highland regarding the Investment. On September 8, 2017, Highland sent HarbourVest a draft term sheet, which identified the target fund as "Acis Loan Funding, Ltd." and the fund's portfolio manager as Acis LP. As described below, during the course of negotiations, Highland unilaterally changed the name of the target fund (referred to herein as HCLOF) from "Acis Loan Funding, Ltd." to "Highland CLO Funding, Ltd." and swapped out Acis LP for Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. ("Highland HCF") as portfolio manager, under false pretenses.

9. On October 20, 2017, Terry won an arbitration award of $7,949,749.15 plus post-award interest against Acis (the "Arbitration Award"). 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 4.

HarbourVest did not become aware of many of the facts described herein until long after their occurrence. HarbourVest's investigation of its claims and the surrounding factual circumstances is continuing.

Shortly thereafter, Highland orchestrated several transfers (the “Transfers”) that siphoned assets away from Acis.

10. On October 24, 2017, HCLOF acquired HCLOF shares owned by Acis LP for $991,180.13. Id. at 17–18. As this Court previously described: “[n]o credible business justification was offered for this transaction, other than mostly uncorroborated (and self-serving) statements from Highland witnesses that Acis LP was ‘toxic’ in the market place (due to the litigation with Mr. Terry) and this was a step in the process of extricating Acis LP from the CLO business.” Id. at 18.

11. Thereafter, on October 27, 2017, Acis’s portfolio management rights for HCLOF were transferred to Highland HCF. Id. at 19. Highland HCF entered into a Portfolio Management Agreement with HCLOF that superseded and replaced the HCLOF portfolio management agreements with Acis. Id. at 19. On November 3, 2017, Acis LP transferred its interest in the Highland Note to Highland CLO Management, Ltd. Id. at 19–20. The balance owing on the Note was over $9 million, but Acis received no consideration for the transfer. 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 20–21, n.37.

12. During diligence and negotiations preceding HarbourVest’s Investment, Highland hid from HarbourVest its effort to strip Acis of assets. When Highland changed HCLOF’s portfolio manager from an Acis-branded entity to a Highland-branded entity, in addition to other structural changes, Highland stated that its reason for doing so was “reputational harm” to Acis LP from the Terry Arbitration Award.

13. Further concealing its true motive—denuding Acis of value—Highland informed HarbourVest that, in lieu of redemptions, resetting the CLOs was necessary and that it would be easier to reset under the “Highland” CLO brand than the Acis CLO brand. Through November

2017, Highland continued its misrepresentations and omissions regarding the Arbitration Award and structural changes to the HCLOF investment to conceal the true purpose of these maneuvers and their implications for the Investment. In reliance on these misrepresentations, HarbourVest finalized the Investment on November 15, 2017.

14. Highland’s misrepresentations continued after the initial Investment was made. On November 27, 2017, in an email to HarbourVest attaching a Wall Street Journal article regarding the Terry Arbitration Award, Highland again assuaged HarbourVest’s concerns regarding the dispute with Terry, claiming it “has no impact on our investment activities.”

15. On December 18, 2017, a final judgment confirming the Terry Arbitration Award was entered in state court. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 4. On the same day, Mark Okada (a Highland founder) and Dugaboy Investment Trust (a family trust of Highland founder Jim Dondero) conveyed their limited partnership interests in Acis LP, 25% and 74.9%, respectively, to Neutra, Ltd. (“Neutra”), a company controlled by Highland.<sup>6</sup>

16. On December 19, 2017, Acis LP and Highland CLO Holdings Ltd. (“Highland Holdings”) entered into 2017-7 Assignment and Transfer Agreement, which transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP’s interest in the Master Sub-Advisory Agreement and Staff and Services Agreement to manage Acis CLO 2017-7’s portfolio to Highland Holdings. 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 21. The agreement also transferred to Highland Holdings all of Acis LP’s indirect equity interests in Acis CLO Management, allegedly for forgiveness of $2.8 million owed by Acis LP to Highland under the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement for CLO-7. Id.

17. On January 24, 2018, after Mr. Terry became aware of the Transfers involving Acis LP and HCLOF, he requested a temporary restraining order from the Texas state court that confirmed his arbitration award. Plaintiff's Application for TRO, Terry v. Acis Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 17-15244 (Dist. Ct. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018), A156. The state court ordered, with the agreement of Acis, that no CLO management contracts or money would be transferred away from Acis for a period of time. Transcript of Hearing held on January 24, 2018 at 42-43, Terry v. Acis Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 17-15244 (Dist. Ct. Tex. Jan. 24, 2018), A225–26.

18. On January 30, 2018, Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions (together, the "Acis Bankruptcy") against Acis LP and its general partner, Acis Capital Management G.P. LLC ("Acis GP") , stating that the ongoing transfers and restructuring efforts were part of an "orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value." 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 23. On April 13, 2018, this Court issued a ruling in the Acis Bankruptcy concluding that the involuntary bankruptcy case was appropriately filed and that a "chapter 7 trustee appears necessary to halt the post-Arbitration Award transactions and transfers of value out of Acis LP" Id., at 53. On May 14, 2018, Robin Phelan was appointed as trustee (the "Acis Trustee") to oversee the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>7</sup>

19. Finally called to account for the Transfers, Highland again defaulted to its modus operandi: deception. Highland made numerous fraudulent statements, including to this Court, accusing HarbourVest of causing the Transfers that denuded Acis LP, including the following:

- Prior to the appointment of the Acis Trustee, Highland-controlled Acis falsely claimed that HarbourVest invested in HCLOF only on the condition that Acis would not have anything to do with the CLOs going forward, and that HarbourVest would demand its money back if a reset transaction was done with Acis:

<sup>7</sup> Chapter 11 Notice of Appointment of Tr. and of Amount of Bond, In re Acis Capital Mgmt., No. 18-30264-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. May 14, 2018), ECF No. 213, A230.

- “In May 2017, a private equity firm expressed an interest in making a $150 million investment in [HCLOF]. [HCLOF] was the investment vehicle used for the various Acis CLOs, including CLO-3. However, one of the conditions demanded by [HarbourVest] in making its investment was that [HCLOF] would instruct the reissuance of certain CLOs, including CLO-3 and would sever any continuing connection that Acis had with the CLOs, including removing it as Collateral Manager. [HCLOF] issued this instruction requested by [HarbourVest] on October 6, 2017 (two weeks prior to the arbitration award).”<sup>8</sup>
- Highland witnesses claimed that HarbourVest said, with absolute certainty, that it had no interest in doing business with Acis because the Acis brand was toxic, including:
  - Highland General Counsel Scott Ellington testified that HarbourVest had communicated to Highland that the Acis brand was “so toxic that it’s impossible to sell the bonds with Acis as the manager,” that “nothing can be associated with the Acis brand and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO” and that they said “categorically, with absolute certainty, if there’s any relation to Acis, the Acis brand, the Acis structure, we have no interest in doing business with you at all.”<sup>9</sup>
  - Mr. Ellington further testified that HarbourVest had “demanded” that Highland “call the deal and terminate the [collateral management agreements] or transfer the [collateral management agreements]” and that “their only directive was call and get rid of Acis or get rid of Acis or we’re not doing the deal through a reset.”<sup>10</sup>
  - Highland CEO Jim Dondero claimed that the “Boston investor” deal was “all dependent upon getting as far away from Acis as possible and a new collateral manager.”<sup>11</sup>
- Highland witnesses claimed that HarbourVest had the ability to control and dictate the terms of any reset transactions, including:

- Mr. Ellington testified that because HarbourVest “would be putting in additional capital in connection with any reset CLOs, it had the ability to ‘start calling the shots’ and dictate the terms of any reset transactions.” 2/7/2018 Acis Bankruptcy Transcript at 226, A281.

20. These and other statements led the Acis Trustee to investigate HarbourVest as the alleged perpetrator of the Transfers. Ultimately, the Acis Trustee served HarbourVest with broad Rule 2004 discovery requests seeking extensive information related to the Investment and a deposition of a corporate representative. HarbourVest complied with the Acis Trustee’s requests, producing significant documentation and sitting for a deposition in the Acis Bankruptcy.

21. The HarbourVest investigation was not the only expensive sideshow that Highland’s litigious behavior caused in the Acis Bankruptcy. At each step of the case, Highland and a veritable parade of its affiliates (Neutra, HCLOF, Highland HCF, CLO Holdco) filed objections and motions impeding the orderly progress of Acis’s chapter 11 proceedings. To make matters worse, HarbourVest was effectively forced to foot the bill: many of the legal fees incurred by Highland and its affiliates were funded from the coffers of HCLOF, depleting the value of HarbourVest’s Investment.

22. Despite Highland’s assurance that the Terry Arbitration Award and related restructuring efforts would have no impact on Highland’s investment activities or HarbourVest’s Investment, Highland’s misconduct and fraudulent Transfers necessitated a variety of injunctions that significantly impaired both the ability of HCLOF to operate as expected and the value of HarbourVest’s investment. The below timeline details some of the constraints on HCLOF caused by Highland’s misconduct and the additional litigation generated by it:

- a. On April 30, 2018, HCLOF sent five notices requesting optional redemption, ordering a liquidation of the CLOs.<sup>12</sup>
- b. On May 22, 2018, the Acis Trustee warned that HCLOF's attempted optional redemption notices violated the automatic stay.<sup>13</sup>
- c. On May 30, 2018, Highland and HCLOF initiated adversary proceedings alleging that the Acis Trustee breached the applicable portfolio management agreements by failing to effectuate optional redemptions pursuant to the notices.<sup>14</sup>
- d. On May 31, 2018, this Court issued a sue sponte temporary restraining order in the Acis Bankruptcy preventing any action in furtherance of the optional redemptions or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.<sup>15</sup>
- e. On June 14, 2018, HCLOF withdrew the optional redemption notices.<sup>16</sup>
- f. On June 15, 2018, the TRO expired and HCLOF gave notice to the Acis Trustee that it was requesting an optional redemption. Id. at 3-4. However, the request was ultimately withdrawn on July 6, 2018.<sup>17</sup>
- g. On June 21, 2018, the Acis Trustee filed an adversary proceeding against Highland seeking an injunction preventing Highland/HCLOF from taking steps towards a redemption.<sup>18</sup>
- h. On July 10, 2018, this Court issued an injunction preventing optional redemptions while the Acis Trustee attempted to confirm a plan or otherwise resolve the Acis Bankruptcy.<sup>19</sup>
- i. On August 30, 2018, this Court denied confirmation of the First Amended Joint Plan for the Debtors and ruled that the preliminary injunction must stay in place.

- j. On March 20, 2019, following confirmation, HCLOF sent a letter to Acis LP stating that it is “neither interested in pursuing, nor able to pursue, a reset transaction.”<sup>20</sup>

Highland’s fraudulent scheme resulted in severe constraints on the HCLOF investment, including on its ability to redeem, refinance or reset the applicable CLOs, which is and was a critical element of maintaining and growing the value of the Investment. Rather than attempt to mitigate losses, Highland doubled down, further entrenching itself in its litigation positions.

23. Highland concealed its Transfer scheme from HarbourVest before the Investment through a series of fraudulent actions, omissions, and misrepresentations, concealing the truth to lock HarbourVest into a long-term, illiquid investment that was—as a result of Highland’s improper behavior—destined to fail. Had HarbourVest been properly informed of the full extent of behind-the-scenes transfers occurring involving Acis and HCLOF, and the true reasons they were made, it would never have made the Investment, and therefore would have avoided the severe price of being tangled up in Highland’s web.

24. One need look no farther than the rulings and filings in the Acis Bankruptcy to reach the conclusion that Highland’s behavior was improper, illegal, and indeed, fraudulent:

- April 13, 2018: The Court ruled that Joshua Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions against Acis LP and Acis GP due to a good faith belief that these transfers were part of an “orchestrated, sophisticated effort to denude the Alleged Debtors of their assets and value.” 4/13/2018 Involuntary Ruling, at 23.
- July 2, 2018: The Acis Trustee filed counterclaims against Highland, HCLOF, Highland HCF, Highland CLO Management, Ltd., and Highland Holdings alleging they orchestrated a systematic transfer of value away from Acis to other Highland entities after Terry’s termination in 2016 through the period when the Terry Arbitration Award was issued to make Acis judgment-proof.<sup>21</sup>

- Aug. 30, 2018: Judge Jernigan ruled that preliminary injunction must stay in place because the “evidence thus far has been compelling that numerous transfers after the Josh Terry judgment denuded Acis of value.” 8/30/2018 Plan Ruling at 6.
- January 31, 2019: This Court confirmed Acis’s Third Amended Plan and concluded that: “The record contains substantial evidence of both intentional and constructive fraudulent transfers with regard to the Equity/ALF PMA and other assets. The numerous prepetition transfers that occurred around the time of and after the Terry Arbitration Award appear more likely than not to have been made to deprive the Debtor-Acis of value and with actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud the Debtors’ creditors. Highland’s only purported business justifications for the prepetition transfers were that the Passive Investor demanded it and that the Debtor-Acis’s brand was toxic in the market place. However, these business justifications were not supported (and, in fact, were contradicted) by the evidence.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 27.
- June 20, 2019: The Acis Trustee filed an amended complaint asserting among other things, claims for intentional and constructive fraudulent transfer based on the prepetition transfers involving Acis.<sup>22</sup>

25. On October 16, 2019, Highland itself filed for bankruptcy in Delaware, In Re Highland Capital Mgmt, L.P., No. 19-12239-css (Bankr. D. Del.), and on December 4, 2019, on motion of the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors, its case was transferred to this Court.<sup>23</sup>

26. On April 8, 2020, due to its damages sustained from the misconduct described above, HarbourVest filed its Proofs of Claim against Highland.

Basis for Relief

The Claim Objection Is Improper and Should Be Denied

27. HarbourVest’s Proofs of Claim have prima facie validity, and the Debtor must produce evidence sufficient to overcome this presumption. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 501, 502 (2020); Fed. R. Bankr. 28. Highland’s Claim Objection fails to put forward any evidence regarding the HarbourVest Claims. It is a mere denial of the validity of the HarbourVest Claims, based on Highland’s own say-so. It fails to refute—or even address—the legal sufficiency of the HarbourVest Claims. Highland cannot evade substantial claims by one of its largest creditors based on its illegal conduct with a one-sentence, unsupported, and blanket denial. The Claim Objection should be overruled as to HarbourVest’s Proofs of Claim as failing to satisfy even the most minimal legal requirements to object to a claim.

29. The Claim Objection is also procedurally improper. While styled as an “omnibus” objection pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3007(d), Highland’s “no liability” objection has no basis at all in the rule.<sup>24</sup> This is not just a procedural nicety. Highland’s attempt to style its conclusory-but-substantive denial of liability as a procedural objection buried in an omnibus objection underscores Highland’s lack of substantive defenses on the merits of the claims in addition to its disregard for the bankruptcy process.

<sup>24</sup> Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3007(d) provides that “objections to more than one claim may be joined in an omnibus objection if all the claims were filed by the same entity, or the objections are based solely on the grounds that the claims should be disallowed, in whole or in part, because: (1) they duplicate other claims; (2) they have been filed in the wrong case; (3) they have been amended by subsequently filed proofs of claim; (4) they were not timely filed; (5) they have been satisfied or released during the case in accordance with the Code, applicable rules, or a court order; (6) they were presented in a form that does not comply with applicable rules, and the objection states that the objector is unable to determine the validity of the claim because of the noncompliance; (7) they are interests, rather than claims; or (8) they assert priority in an amount that exceeds the maximum amount under §507 of the Code.”

The HarbourVest Claims Are Valid and Should Be Allowed

30. Highland has failed to carry its burden to rebut the prima facie case for the HarbourVest Claims. Accordingly, the HarbourVest Claims should be allowed in full. For clarity of the record, the HarbourVest Claims are described in detail below.

31. In general, the HarbourVest Claims result from (i) Highland's material misrepresentations and omissions relating to the Investment, including the existence and purpose of Highland's scheme to denude Acis and avoid payment of the Arbitration Award; (ii) Highland's gross mismanagement of the HCLOF Investment; (iii) Highland's misuse of fund assets and improper charges to HCLOF; and (iv) Highland's continued fraudulent conduct and misrepresentations during the Acis bankruptcy. Specifically, based on the above-described facts, HarbourVest has claims for, among other things: Fraud, Fraudulent Concealment, Fraudulent Inducement, Fraudulent Misrepresentation, Negligent Misrepresentation; Breach of Fiduciary Duties; Misuse of Fund Assets; U.S. State and Federal Securities Law Claims; Violations of the Federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"); and Unfair Prejudice under the Guernsey Companies Law.

32. A plaintiff pleading common law fraud must show (1) a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 8 (Aug. 2020); see also JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. v. Orca Assets G.P., L.L.C., 546 S.W.3d 648, 653 (Tex. 2018). Fraudulent inducement occurs

when, through fraud, a defendant induces another to enter into a contract through the use of fraudulent misrepresentations. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 8; Anderson v. Durant, 550 S.W.3d 605, 614 (Tex. 2018).

33. Similarly, claims for fraudulent concealment or fraud by omission will lie where (1) the defendant concealed from or failed to disclose material facts to the plaintiff that the defendant had a duty to disclose; (2) the defendant knew the plaintiff was ignorant of the facts and the plaintiff did not have an equal opportunity to discover the facts; (3) the defendant was deliberately silent when the defendant had a duty to speak; (4) by failing to disclose the facts, the defendant intended to induce the plaintiff to take some action or refrain from acting; (5) the plaintiff relied on the defendant's nondisclosure; and (6) the plaintiff was injured as a result of acting without the undisclosed facts. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 16.

34. Similarly, under Guernsey law, a plaintiff may have a claim for fraudulent misrepresentation against a defendant that makes statements that he knows to be (or is reckless as to whether they are) false with the intent that they shall be acted on by another, who suffers damages as a result of reliance on those statements. Derry v. Peek (1889) 14 AC (HL) 337 (appeal taken from Eng.), A14. Damages extend to the loss actually suffered by the person as a result of the misrepresentation. Doyle v. Olby (Ironmongers) Ltd. (1969) 2 W.L.R. 673, A59.

35. Negligent misrepresentation is established when (1) the defendant made a representation in the course of the defendant's business; (2) the defendant supplied false information for the guidance of others in their business; (3) the defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information; and (4) the plaintiff suffered pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation. 41 Tex. Jur. 3d Fraud & Deceit § 10. Liability for negligent misstatements may also be asserted under Guernsey

law where shareholders suffer financial loss as a result of acquiring shares in reliance on any misstatements made carelessly, if the defendant owes the shareholder a duty of care.<sup>25</sup> Hall v. Cable & Wireless Plc (2009) EWHC 1793 (Comm), A75.

36. Highland's conduct prior to the Investment presents a textbook case of fraud, fraudulent inducement, and fraudulent concealment and fraud by omission. As Highland and HarbourVest were negotiating the terms of the Investment, Highland both concealed and misrepresented the nature of the Transfers undertaken to deprive Acis of assets and Highland's true intentions with respect to the Terry dispute and Arbitration Award. These facts were material: indeed, HarbourVest expressed concern and requested further information regarding the Transfers, the Arbitration Award, and their implications for HCLOF and the Investment's closing date was delayed. The nature and intent behind the Transfers, and Highland's plan to use HCLOF to fund its feud with Terry, were material facts misrepresented and concealed from HarbourVest in order to induce HarbourVest to invest with HCLOF.

37. Highland's multiple, purposeful, knowing, reckless, and/or negligent misrepresentations and omissions include:

- Highland never informed HarbourVest that Highland had no intention of paying the Arbitration Award and was undertaking steps to ensure that Mr. Terry could not collect on his judgment;
- Highland did not inform HarbourVest that it undertook the Transfers to siphon assets away from Acis LP and that such transfers would prevent Mr. Terry from collecting on the Arbitration Award. Instead, Highland simply did not inform HarbourVest and represented to HarbourVest that the reason for changing the portfolio manager for HCLOF was because Acis was "toxic" in the industry and alleged reputational issues relating to Acis would detrimentally affect the HCLOF investment;

- Highland indicated to HarbourVest that the dispute with Mr. Terry (which appeared on a litigation schedule presented to HarbourVest during diligence) would have no impact on investment activities;
- Highland expressed confidence in the ability of HCLOF to reset or redeem the CLOs, notwithstanding that Highland was using HCLOF as part of its scheme to avoid paying the Arbitration Award.

38. Even assuming Highland's statements did not rise to the level of fraud (though they do), such statements were at minimum made negligently by Highland.

39. In reliance on Highland's misrepresentations and omissions, HarbourVest invested in HCLOF. Had these misrepresentations and omissions not occurred, HarbourVest would not have made the Investment.

40. HarbourVest has been injured from the Investment: not only has the Investment failed to accrue value, its value plummeted. The Investment's current value is far less than HarbourVest's initial contribution. This enormous decline can be traced directly back to the fraudulent Transfer scheme that Highland hid from HarbourVest behind a smokescreen of misstatements and omissions, and Highland's subsequent conduct in connection therewith. The situation has been further compounded by HCLOF's use to fund Highland's litigation and HarbourVest incurring its own out-of-pocket fees and expenses from the fallout.

B. Breach of Fiduciary Duties and Misuse of Fund Assets

41. Under Guernsey law, Highland constituted both a "shadow director" and a de facto director of HCLOF. A shadow director is a person in accordance with whose directions or instructions the directors of the company are accustomed to act. Companies (Guernsey) Law 2008 § 132(1). A "de facto" director is a person or entity that similarly has practical decision-making control over a company under Guernsey law. Carlyle Capital Corporation Ltd. v. Conway & Others, Royal Court of Guernsey, 4 September 2017, Judgment 38/2017, A2. As a shadow director and/or de facto director, Highland owed fiduciary duties to HarbourVest, which it breached by the conduct described herein.

42. At all times, Highland exercised complete control over HCLOF and over its Guernsey directors. Highland directed HCLOF's nominal directors, who acted in accordance with Highland's instructions, and Highland itself acted on behalf of HCLOF. Indeed, this Court has previously recognized evidence demonstrating that HCLOF operated at the behest of Highland, not its nominal directors:

- “It was enormously clear to the court. . . that the two Directors of HCLOF Guernsey are—stated in the kindest way possible—mere ‘figureheads’ for HCLOF Guernsey and they defer to Highland entirely to tell them what to do, what to say, and when.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 14.
- HCLOF Guernsey was “absolutely, beyond any reasonable doubt, controlled by Highland.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 17.
- The evidence was overwhelming that “(a) the HCLOF Guernsey Directors do whatever they are told to do by Highland; (b) they do not talk to anyone else but Highland; (c) they have never challenged Highland; (d) they let Highland pick and consult with their lawyers; and (e) they were not made aware by Highland of the Terry Arbitration Award, the Terry Judgment, the involuntary bankruptcy petitions, or pleadings that lawyers filed in the Bankruptcy Cases on HCLOF Guernsey’s behalf...[Bill Scott] confirmed that all investment decisions were made by Highland.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 46.
- Ms. Bestwick “testified that she had never talked to the Passive Investor (who, of course, is a 49% owner of HCLOF Guernsey) or Grant Scott (the trustee of the charitable organization that owns 49% of HCLOF Guernsey). She reiterated that she only talks to Highland employees. . . . She testified that she learned of the Terry Arbitration Award in mid-April 2018 (some six months after the fact) and ‘[y]ou’d have to ask Highland’ why it did not inform her sooner. Her testimony was clear that she defers to Highland on everything, stating that as directors they were ‘heavily reliant on our service providers, and that means Highland.’ With regard to a lawsuit that HCLOF Guernsey filed against Mr. Terry in Guernsey during the Bankruptcy Cases, she testified that it was neither her nor the other director, William Scott’s, idea.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 43–44.
- Highland’s expert, “Mr. Castro, testified that the ‘actual humans’ who would make the decision for HCLOF Guernsey as to whether to request an optional redemption of the Acis CLOs were not the HCLOF Guernsey directors but, rather, Highland executives Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, and Highland employee Mr. Covitz (acting for Highland HCF). Moreover, Mr. Alpern credibly testified that, before the Terry Arbitration Award, the Debtor-Acis, as the portfolio manager under the Equity/ALF PMA, rather than the

43. Highland’s complete control of HCLOF is further confirmed by the deposition testimony of HCLOF’s nominal directors. In a deposition in the Acis Bankruptcy, HCLOF’s then-Director Heather Bestwick testified that:

- She first learned about the Terry arbitration award from Highland in April 2018 and did not need to do any further independent verification because the directors relied on Highland to keep them updated.<sup>26</sup>
- She was unable to remember a time she disagreed with Mr. Scott or Highland. Id. at 48:10–49:12, A539.
- Highland is involved in any substantive conversation about HCLOF, and Bestwick relied on Highland’s advice and judgment as to what was in the best interest of investors. Id. 50:10–24, 58:12–59:20, 67:13–68:7, 138:4–21 & 172:9–173:6, A540, 542, 544, 552 & 560.
- She lacked a command of the fees that Acis and Highland were receiving from HCLOF, and did not know whether Highland Capital might have differing interests from Highland HCF. Id. at 99:10–100:11 & 155:13–20, A547, 556.
- Conversations with Highland were the extent of the due diligence done with respect to a new portfolio manager. Id. 200:14–201:20, A562.

44. Similarly, HCLOF then-Director William Scott testified that:

- The directors had “no knowledge” of litigation with Terry or the arbitration award until 2018; the litigation did not cause him to second-guess his relationship with Highland.<sup>27</sup>
- The directors went with the counsel selected by Highland to represent HCLOF. Id. at 91:25–94:25, A566–67.
- Investment decisions for HCLOF are formulated by Highland; the role of the directors is just to “police” the performance of the service providers, and he has never disagreed with Ms. Bestwick or Highland on HCLOF matters. Id. at 102:16–104:1, 105:22–107:17, A570–71.

- He did not take any steps to investigate the Terry situation; he got all information he knows about it from Highland. Id. at 140:13–145:5, A575–76.
- Highland has not made key information available to the directors of HCLOF. Id. at 263:20–265:23, A584. Scott himself lacked information about the various Transfers in 2017 that were conducted by Highland. Id. at 214:19–216:14, 220:6–221:11, A579–80.

45. As a “shadow director” or “de facto” director of HCLOF, Highland breached several duties, including its duty of care, its duty to exercise powers for a proper purpose, its duty to avoid/mitigate conflicts of interest, and its duty to act in good faith and in the best interests of the company. Highland breached its fiduciary duties as a shadow/ de facto director as set out below.

46. Highland is liable for breach of fiduciary duty for its continued misrepresentations and omissions relating to the Arbitration Award and the Transfers, including following HarbourVest’s Investment, its conduct of litigation relating to Mr. Terry and the Acis Bankruptcy, and its mismanagement of HCLOF following the Investment.

47. This includes the massive legal fees that were charged to HCLOF by Highland and Highland-related entities in furtherance of Highland’s scheme. Since at least 2018, immense and unwarranted legal fees were borne by HCLOF’s investors for Highland’s scorched-earth litigation relating to Terry and the Acis Bankruptcy, including significant litigation costs that were not in the interests of HCLOF.

48. As this Court noted, the Acis Bankruptcy proceedings “have been astonishingly contentious,” with Highland, HCLOF, and Neutra “in ‘lockstep’ with one another in objecting to virtually every position taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee,” and the Highland entities “have opposed virtually every action taken by the Chapter 11 Trustee during the Bankruptcy Cases, resulting in many long hearings.” 1/31/2019 Confirmation Ruling, at 3, 11. This extensive litigation has spanned multiple jurisdictions (United States and Guernsey) and venues (state court, federal bankruptcy court, federal district and appellate courts), and included appeals of nearly every substantive ruling during the Acis Bankruptcy. HCLOF's investors—including HarbourVest—bore millions of dollars of legal fees incurred by numerous parties, including attorneys' fees for (i) HCLOF, (ii) Highland, (iii) Acis, (iv) Highland HCF and (v) various affiliated persons, entities and experts.

49. No justifiable basis existed for Highland to cause HCLOF to pay Highland-related parties' expenses and fees arising from the Acis Bankruptcy. Those fees were grossly inappropriate, excessive, and unreasonable, caused by Highland's own malfeasance, and they are not covered under the HCLOF governing documents.

50. On this point, it is worth underscoring that, to HarbourVest's knowledge, HCLOF has, to date, incurred more than $15 million in legal fees since 2018, much of which appears to be related to fighting an $8 million Arbitration Award. Even if such fees could appropriately be charged to HCLOF (and they cannot), the amount of legal fees incurred is grossly unreasonable. Highland's use of HCLOF assets to pay these astounding legal fees creates liability for its misuse of fund assets in gross breach of its duties as a sub-advisor and as a shadow / de facto director.

51. In addition to the improper legal expenses, Highland's gross mismanagement of HCLOF includes Highland (i) directing the Trustee to sell numerous loans during the Acis Bankruptcy and (ii) failing to reset the CLOs and or consider alternatives in light of the court-ordered injunction on resets.<sup>28</sup>

<sup>28</sup> See, e.g., Acis Trustee Complaint at 29, n. 46 (“Defendants have options available that immediately mitigate any purported damage. Namely, Defendants could (1) authorize a ‘refinance’ or ‘reset’ transaction or (2) sell their equity to a third party in an amount that exceeds what they would receive in an Optional Redemption.”), A319; Second Am. C. Securities Claims

52. HarbourVest also has state and federal securities fraud claims against Highland.

53. Under the Texas Securities Act (the “TSA”), “[a] person who offers or sells a security . . . by means of an untrue statement of a material fact or an omission to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in the light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading, is liable to the person buying the security from him, who may sue either at law or in equity for rescission, or for damages if the buyer no longer owns the security.” Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-33(A)(2) (West). Hence, “to recover under the TSA, a buyer of a security must prove that the security was sold by means of (1) an untrue statement of material fact or (2) an omission to state a material fact that is necessary in order to make the statements made not misleading.” Kubbernus v. ECAL Partners, Ltd., 574 S.W.3d 444, 480 (Tex. App. 2018). A plaintiff need not show reliance, loss causation, or damages under the TSA. See id.; In re Skyport Glob. Commc'ns, Inc., No. 08-36737, 2011 WL 111427, at *47 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 13, 2011). In addition to primary violators, “[a] person who directly or indirectly controls a seller, buyer, or issuer of a security” or “who directly or indirectly with intent to deceive or defraud or with reckless disregard for the truth or the law materially aids a seller, buyer, or issuer of a security,” is liable under the TSA “jointly and severally with the seller, buyer, or issuer and to the same extent as if he were the seller, buyer, or issuer.” Tex. Rev. Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 581-33 (F) (West).

or deceptive device or contrivance in contravention of such rules and regulations as the Commission may prescribe.” 15 U.S.C. § 78j(b). And Rule 10b-5, promulgated by the SEC under the authority of Section 10(b), makes it unlawful for “any person, directly or indirectly, by the use of any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce, or of the mails or of any facility of any national securities exchange,” to “employ any device, scheme, or artifice to defraud”; “make any untrue statement of a material fact or to omit to state a material fact necessary in order to make the statements made, in light of the circumstances under which they are made, not misleading”; or “engage in any act, practice, or course of business which operates or would operate as a fraud or deceit upon any person, in connection with the purchase or sale of any security.” 17 C.F.R. § 240.10b-5.

55. The Supreme Court has recognized an implied private cause of action to enforce Section 10(b) and its implementing regulation, Rule 10b-5. Matrixx Initiatives, Inc. v. Siracusano, 563 U.S. 27, 37 (2011). To state a claim under Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 based on an alleged misrepresentation or omission, a plaintiff must show “(1) a material misrepresentation or omission by the defendant; (2) scienter; (3) a connection between the misrepresentation or omission and the purchase or sale of a security; (4) reliance upon the misrepresentation or omission; (5) economic loss; and (6) loss causation.” Id. (citations omitted). Joint and several liability for violations of Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 extends to “[e]very person who, directly or indirectly, controls any person liable under” Section 10(b) and Rule 10b-5 “to the same extent as such controlled person.” 15 U.S.C. § 78t(a).

56. Here, Highland, in connection with its sale of HCLOF shares to HarbourVest, made material misrepresentations and omitted material facts, as detailed above. That is sufficient to state a claim under the TSA. Those material misrepresentations and omitted material facts likewise state a claim under federal law for the recovery of damages caused by Highland's fraud, because they were made with the intent to deceive HarbourVest, were relied upon by HarbourVest, and caused substantial losses to HarbourVest's investment.

57. RICO makes it unlawful, among other things, for a person associated with an enterprise to conduct or participate in the conduct of the enterprise's affairs through a pattern of racketeering activity. See 18 U.S.C. § 1962(c). Under RICO, any person injured in his business or property by reason of such a violation may recover treble damages and reasonable attorney's fees. See 18 U.S.C. § 1964(c).

58. Here, Highland engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity involving numerous predicate acts over multiple years, including mail, wire, and bankruptcy fraud, as part of a scheme to defraud Terry, obstruct the enforcement of his judgment, and obtain investor funding to further finance the scheme. Highland committed these violations through its control of and conduct of the affairs of multiple enterprises, including Acis.

59. In furtherance of that scheme, Highland committed further predicate acts of fraud and bankruptcy fraud as described at length herein, including when, prior to the appointment of the Acis Trustee, Highland caused Acis to make false statements with respect to HarbourVest in the Acis bankruptcy proceedings. See 18 U.S.C. § 152(2), (3). Highland's statements were made with knowledge of their falsity and caused HarbourVest significant damages as detailed above, including significant and unwarranted fees and expenses from the Acis Trustee's investigation, and Highland is liable for its pattern of deceptive and fraudulent behavior.

E. Unfair Prejudice

60. HarbourVest also has claims against Highland for unfair prejudice under Guernsey law. Under Section 349 of the Companies (Guernsey) Law 2008, shareholders may apply for relief where the affairs of a company have been conducted in a manner that is unfairly prejudicial to the applicant. § 349(1)(a). To succeed on such an application, the applicant need show only that: (1) the acts or omissions of which he complains of were acts of the Company, including acts taken by the board or a shadow director; (2) the conduct of those affairs has caused prejudice to the applicant's interests as a member of the Company, and (3) the prejudice is unfair. Prodefin Trading Ltd. v. Midland Res. Holding Ltd., Royal Court of Guernsey, 14 February 2017, Judgment 7/2017, A91.

61. The court's remedial powers for an unfair prejudice claim are broad. Section 350 of the Guernsey Companies Law provides: "[i]f the Court is satisfied that an application under section 349 is well founded it may make such order as it thinks fit for giving relief in respect of the matters complained of." Such relief may include ordering a buyout of the applicant's interests as a member of the Company at a price adjusted to reflect what the value of such interests would have been had the prejudicial conduct not taken place. Id.; see also Re Bird Precision Bellows Ltd. (1985) 3 All ER 523, A117. Relief is commonly granted against those who have caused the unfairly prejudicial conduct, including non-members of the company, where it is just to do so. Re Little Olympian Each-Ways Ltd. (1994) 2 BCLC 420, A140.

62. HarbourVest has been unfairly prejudiced by the full range of Highland's actions and behavior described above, including (i) the fraudulent Transfers immediately preceding and following the Investment, as well as misrepresentations and omissions regarding those Transfers and the Arbitration Award; (ii) breaches of fiduciary duty by Highland as shadow or de facto director of the Company; (iii) misuse of fund assets and legal fee charges to HCLOF; (iv) mismanagement of the HCLOF investment by Highland; and (v) Highland's false statements about HarbourVest, including to this Court, accusing HarbourVest of perpetrating the Transfers.

Such actions warrant relief based upon what the value of HarbourVest's interests in HCLOF would have been had Highland not engaged in such misconduct—a value that far exceeds the Investment's current value.

Prayer for Relief

63. HarbourVest respectfully requests: (i) this Court deny and overrule the Claim Objection with respect to HarbourVest's Proof of Claim, (ii) sustain and allow HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim, and (iii) grant HarbourVest such other and further relief to which it may be justly entitled, both at law and in equity.

JOSHUA N. TERRY,	§	IN THE DISTRICT COURT

v.	§	OF DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS
	§
ACIS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P. and	§
ACIS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT GP, LLC,	§
	§
Defendants.	§	44 th JUDICIAL DISTRICT

PLAINTIFF’S APPLICATION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER

Plaintiff Joshua N. Terry (“Mr. Terry”) files this Application for Temporary Restraining Order against Defendants Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (“Acis GP”) (collectively “Acis”), and shows the Court as follows:

SUMMARY OF APPLICATION

Acis is in the midst of an audacious scheme to transfer all of its assets to Cayman affiliates to avoid satisfaction of Mr. Terry’s judgment. Acis fought hard to avoid post-judgment discovery because it had something big and bad to hide. Starting shortly after the $8 million arbitration award was entered against it, Acis has fraudulently transferred assets in excess of $16.6 million to several affiliated entities in the Cayman Islands, including:

- A $10 million promissory note from an affiliate, Highland Capital Management, L.P. (“Highland”), to a Cayman affiliate (14 days after the Final Award);
- An interest in several entities worth in excess of $6.6 million (the day after the Court entered the Judgment).

Based on documents produced two days ago by Acis pursuant to Court order, it is clear that Acis is poised to fraudulently transfer its most significant assets: management contracts worth well in excess of $30 million, again to another Cayman affiliate. If that transfer occurs, Acis will have few, if any, assets. Mr. Terry requests the Court enter a temporary restraining order restraining Acis from taking any further action to transfer the management contracts, or any of Acis' other assets.

RELEVANT FACTS

1. From September 6-15, 2017, an arbitration panel consisting of Hon. Harlan Martin (former), Hon. Glen M. Ashworth (Ret.), and Hon. Mark Whittington (Ret.) (the "Arbitration Panel") held a final hearing in Dallas County.

2. On October 20, 2017, the Arbitration Panel issued its Final Award in the Arbitration (the "Final Award") against Acis.

3. On October 24, 2017 (4 days after the Panel issued the Final Award), an employee of Highland and representative of Acis, Frank Waterhouse, executed an agreement for Acis which reflects a sale of Acis' interest in its risk retention vehicle, Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("Acis Loan Funding"). A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

4. On October 27, 2017 (7 days after the Panel issued the Final Award), James Dondero signed an agreement transferring management of Acis Loan Funding from Acis to Highland HCF Advisor Ltd., a Cayman entity ("Highland Cayman 1") for no consideration. That transfer deprived Acis of the value to which it was entitled. A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 2. When Mr. Terry was a partner in Acis, Acis was the portfolio manager of Acis Loan Funding. That contractual arrangement between Acis and Acis Loan Funding was a valuable asset of Acis, as was Acis' ownership interest in Acis Loan Funding.

5. On October 31, 2017, counsel for Acis, Jamie Welton, called Rogge Dunn on the telephone. See Declaration of Rogge Dunn attached hereto as Exhibit 3. In that call, Mr. Welton stated that Acis is "judgment proof."

6. On the same day, October 31, 2017 (11 days after the Panel issued the Final Award), Dondero caused a filing in the Registry of the island nation of Guernsey (one of the Channel Islands in the English Channel). In that filing, Acis Loan Funding was renamed “Highland CLO Funding, Ltd.”

7. On November 3, 2017, Acis, Highland, and Highland CLO Management Ltd., another Cayman entity (“Highland Cayman 2”), entered into an Agreement for Assignment and Transfer of Promissory Note (the “Note Transfer”), a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit 4. The Note Transfer affected a $10 million promissory note by Highland in favor of Acis, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit 5 (the “Highland Note”). Among other things, the Note Transfer transferred the Highland Note, for no consideration, from Acis to Highland Cayman 2.

8. Significantly, the Note Transfer also purports to initiate the transfer of management contracts to Highland Cayman 2 for the CLOs listed on Schedule A to a prior agreement, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit 6 (the “Management Contracts”). Acis is to receive no consideration for transferring its most significant assets, the Management Contracts.

9. On November 6, 2017, Terry filed this action to confirm the Final Award.

10. When Terry was a partner in Acis a year and a half ago, Acis had assets in excess of $40 million, and no liabilities or liens against its property.

11. On November 22, 2017, Mr. Terry filed his Motion for Expedited Discovery.

12. On December 18, 2017, the Court entered its (i) Order Confirming Arbitration Award, (ii) Final Judgment, and (iii) Order Granting Expedited Discovery.

13. On December 19, 2017, Acis transferred $6.6 million of additional assets to Highland CLO Holdings, Ltd., another Cayman entity (“Highland Cayman 3”), purportedly in exchange for forgiveness of a receivable. A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 7.

14. Also on December 19, 2017, the partners of Acis transferred their partnership interest to yet another Cayman entity, Neutra, Ltd. (“Highland Cayman 4”). A true and correct copy of that agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit 8.

15. On January 22, 2018, Acis produced documents and answered discovery that revealed much of the foregoing.

ARGUMENT & AUTHORITY

Post-judgment injunctive relief is provided for in the Texas Civil Practices and Remedies Code and the Texas Rules of Appellate Procedure. TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 52.006(e); TEX. R. APP. P. 24.2(d).

The standard for post-judgment injunctive relief is simple: a determination of “whether the judgment debtor is likely to dissipate or transfer its assets to avoid satisfaction of the judgment.” Emeritus Corp. v. Ofczarzak, 198 S.W.3d 222, 227 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2006, no pet.); Sargeant v. Al Saleh, 512 S.W.3d 399, 409 (Tex. App.—Corpus Christi 2016, no pet.) (“In the post-judgment context, the question is only whether the judgment debtor is likely to dissipate or transfer its assets to avoid satisfaction of the judgment.”) (internal quotations omitted). “Evidence of the actual dissipation or transfer of assets is not necessary to meet this standard.” Sargeant, 512 S.W.3d at 409 (emphasis added); Miga v. Jensen, 02-11-00074-CV, 2012 WL 745329, at *11 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth Mar. 8, 2012, no pet.).

Attached as Exhibit 9 is the Declaration of Joshua N. Terry, which details the following, among other things:

- Mr. Terry ran Acis’ day-to-day operations from 2011 until he was wrongfully terminated in June 2016;
- Mr. Terry is well-versed in the CLO industry, where he worked since 2005. Mr. Terry has earned the right to use the Chartered Financial Analyst designation. From my experience, education, and training, I became familiar with the common and legitimate business practices of CLO managers in the industry, as well as the value of CLO management contracts.

- In 2015, Mr. Terry valued Acis in excess of $70 million, a conclusion that was accepted by David Klos, a Highland employee;
- On February 28, 2012, Highland sold four European CLO management contracts to The Carlyle Group for $43.6 million in an arms-length transaction. Those four CLO management contracts are less valuable than the five Management Contracts Acis owns and which it now seeks to transfer for no consideration;
- The Management Contracts are the most substantial asset of Acis and are valued in excess of $30 million;
- There is no legitimate business purpose for Acis to transfer the Management Contracts for no consideration;
- There is no legitimate business purpose for Acis to transfer the Highland Note for no consideration;
- It is not in the normal course of Acis' business to transfer all of its Management Contracts for no consideration, or to transfer the Highland Note for no consideration;
- If Acis transfers the Management Contracts, Acis will not have assets adequate to satisfy the Judgment.<sup>1</sup>

The standard for post-judgment injunctive relief is not only met in this case, but is far exceeded. Indeed, there is direct and compelling evidence that Acis actually transferred and dissipated assets, and intends to transfer more. Consequently, Mr. Terry clearly met his burden to show transfers or dissipation is “likely.” The Court should enter a temporary restraining order pending a hearing on a temporary injunction.

CONCLUSION

Counsel for Acis represented to the Court and to counsel for Mr. Terry that Acis had not, and was not, transferring assets. The documents Acis produced two days ago—which they fought so hard to withhold—tell a very different story. This Court has the “inherent power to enforce its judgments.” Harleaux v. Harleaux, 154 S.W.3d 925, 928 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2005, no pet.). One means by which a Court can enforce its judgment is through injunctive relief, and injunctive relief is certainly appropriate under the circumstances. Mr. Terry requests the Court enter a temporary restraining order prohibiting Acis from taking any further action to transfer the Management Contracts and any other assets, set a hearing on a preliminary injunction, and for such other relief to which Mr. Terry is entitled.

The Portfolio Manager shall not be responsible for any loss incurred by reason of any act or omission of the Custodian.

5. Authority of the Portfolio Manager. Subject at all times to (i) provisions of applicable law, and (ii) the Investment Policy, the Portfolio Manager shall have the authority for and in the name of the Company to:

(a) invest, directly or indirectly, on margin or otherwise, in all types of securities and other financial instruments of United States and non-U.S. entities, including, without limitation, capital stock; all manner of equity securities (whether registered or unregistered, traded or privately offered, American Depository Receipts, common or preferred); physical commodities; shares of beneficial interest; partnership interests, limited liability company interests and similar financial instruments; secured and unsecured debt (both corporate and sovereign, bank debt, vendor claims and/or other contractual claims); bonds, notes and debentures (whether subordinated, convertible or otherwise); currencies; interest rate, currency, equity and other derivative products, including, without limitation, (i) senior secured loans, (ii) notes representing tranches of debt ("CLO Notes") issued by a special purpose vehicle which issues notes backed by a pool of collateral consisting primarily of loans (which may be represented by a debt or equity security) (a "CLO"), (iii) preference shares, income notes or other equity instruments issued by CLO issuers, (iv) equity interests or loans in asset management companies, (v) future contracts (and options thereon) relating to stock indices, currencies, United States Government securities, securities of non-U.S. governments, other financial instruments and all other commodities, (vi) swaps and contracts for difference, options, swaptions, rights, warrants, when-issued securities, caps, collars, floors, forward rate agreements, and repurchase and reverse repurchase agreements and other cash equivalents, (vii) spot and forward currency transactions and (viii) agreements relating to or securing such transactions; leases, including, without limitation, equipment lease certificates; equipment trust certificates; mortgage-backed securities and other similar instruments (including, without limitation, fixed-rate, pass-throughs, adjustable rate mortgages, collateralized mortgage obligations, stripped mortgage-backed securities and REMICs); loans; credit paper; accounts and notes receivable and payable held by trade or other creditors; trade acceptances and claims; contract and other claims; executory contracts; participations; mutual funds, exchange traded funds and similar financial instruments; money market funds and instruments; obligations of the United States, any state thereof, non-U.S. governments and instrumentalities of any of them; commercial paper; certificates of deposit; bankers' acceptances; trust receipts; letters of credit; choses in action; puts; calls; other obligations and instruments or evidences of indebtedness of whatever kind or nature; and real estate and any kind of interests in real estate; in each case, of any person, corporation, government or other entity whatsoever, whether or not publicly traded or readily marketable (each of such items, "Financial Instruments"), and the sale of Financial Instruments short and covering such sales;

(b) engage in such other lawful Financial Instruments transactions as the Portfolio Manager may from time to time determine;

(c) provide credit and market research and analysis in connection with the investments and ongoing management of the Company and direct the formulation of investment policies and strategies for the Company;

(d) purchase Financial Instruments and hold them for investment;

(e) enter into contracts for or in connection with investments in Financial Instruments;

(f) invest in other pooled investment vehicles, which investments shall be subject in each case to the terms and conditions of the respective governing document for each such vehicle;

(g) possess, transfer, mortgage, pledge or otherwise deal in, and exercise all rights, powers, privileges and other incidents of ownership or possession with respect to Financial Instruments and other property and funds held or owned by the Company and/or its subsidiaries;

(h) lend, either with or without security, any Financial Instruments, funds or other properties of the Company, including by entering into reverse repurchase agreements, and, from time to time, undertaking leverage on behalf of the Company;

(i) open, maintain and close accounts, including margin and custodial accounts, with brokers and dealers, including brokers and dealers located outside the United States;

(j) open, maintain and close accounts, including custodial accounts, with banks, including banks located outside the United States, and drawing checks or other orders for the payment of monies;

(k) combine purchase or sale orders on behalf of the Company with orders for other accounts to which the Portfolio Manager or any of its affiliates provides investment services ("Other Accounts") and allocate the Financial Instruments or other assets so purchased or sold, on an average-price basis or in any other manner deemed fair and equitable to the Portfolio Manager in its sole discretion, among such accounts:

(l) enter into arrangements with brokers to open "average price" accounts wherein orders placed during a trading day are placed on behalf of the Company and Other Accounts and are allocated among such accounts using an average price;

(m) organize one or more corporations and other entities formed to hold record title, as nominee for the Company (whether alone or together with the Other Accounts), to Financial Instruments or funds of the Company;

(n) cause the Company to engage in (i) agency, agency cross, related party principal transactions with affiliates of the Portfolio Manager and (ii) cross transactions with Other Accounts, in each case, to the extent permitted by applicable laws;

(o) engage and/or provide personnel, whether part-time or full-time, and attorneys, independent accountants or such other persons (including, without limitation, finders, consultants, investment bankers and any human resources as may be necessary for the Company to conduct any matters related to its portfolio of assets on behalf of or for the Company);

(p) provide certain support and assistance (including back office and middle office functions) to the Company; and

(q) vote Financial Instruments, participate in arrangements with creditors, the institution and settlement or compromise of suits and administrative proceedings and other like or similar matters.

6. Policies of the Company. The activities engaged in by the Portfolio Manager shall be subject to the policies and control of the Company, including (without limitation) the Investment Policy.

The Portfolio Manager shall submit such periodic reports, recommendations, research and analytic material to the Company regarding the Investment Policy, the Company's investment portfolio and the Portfolio Manager's activities hereunder as the Company may reasonably request and a representative of the Portfolio Manager shall be available to meet with the Company (whether in person or by telephone) as reasonably requested by the Company.

In furtherance of the foregoing, the Company hereby appoints the Portfolio Manager as the Company's attorney-in-fact, with full power of authority to act in the Company's name and on its behalf with respect to the matters set forth in Section 5 above.

7. Status of the Portfolio Manager. The Portfolio Manager shall, for all purposes, be an independent contractor and not an employee of the Company, and nothing herein shall be construed as making the Company a partner, member or co-venturer with the Portfolio Manager or any of its affiliates or clients. The Portfolio Manager shall have no authority to act for, represent, bind or obligate the Company except as specifically provided herein.

8. Reimbursement by the Company. The Portfolio Manager may retain, in connection with its responsibilities hereunder, the services of others to assist in the investment advice to be given to the Company with respect to the Company and/or its subsidiaries (any such appointee, a "Sub-Services Provider"), including, but not limited to, any affiliate of the Portfolio Manager, but payment for any such services shall be assumed by the Portfolio Manager, and the Company shall not have any liability therefor, provided, however, that the Portfolio Manager, in its sole discretion, may retain the services of independent third party professionals, including, without limitation, attorneys, accountants and consultants, to advise and assist it in connection with the performance of its activities on behalf of the Company, and the Company shall bear full responsibility therefor and the expense of any fees and disbursements arising therefrom, including any irrecoverable VAT arising on such costs and expenses.

9. Expenses.

(a) The Company shall pay or reimburse the Portfolio Manager and its affiliates for all expenses related to the services hereunder, including, but not limited to, investment-related expenses, brokerage commissions and other transaction costs, expenses related to clearing and settlement charges, professional fees relating to legal, auditing or valuation services, any governmental, regulatory, licensing, filing or registration fees incurred in compliance with the rules of any self-regulatory organization or any federal, state or local laws, research-related expenses (including, without limitation, news and quotation equipment and services, investment and trading-related software, including, without limitation, trade order management software (i.e., software used to route trade orders)), accounting (including accounting software), tax preparation expenses, costs and expenses associated with reporting and providing information to the Company, any taxes imposed upon the Company (including, but not limited to, any irrecoverable VAT arising on such costs and expenses), fees relating to valuing the Financial Instruments, and extraordinary expenses. In no event shall any of the foregoing costs or expenses include any salaries, occupational expense or general overhead of the Portfolio Manager. For the avoidance of doubt, (i) the cost of all third party expenses incurred in connection with this Agreement shall not exceed standard market rates (which may include standard soft dollar arrangements) and (ii) to the extent any of the foregoing expenses were incurred on behalf of, or benefit of a number of Portfolio Manager's advised accounts, such expenses shall be allocated pro rata among such accounts.

(b) To the extent that expenses to be borne by the Company are paid by the Portfolio Manager or by any Sub-Services Provider, the Company shall reimburse the Portfolio Manager (or the relevant Sub-Services Provider, as applicable) for such expenses so long as such expenses are determined on an arm's length basis.

10. Exculpation; Indemnification.

(a) Whether or not herein expressly so provided, every provision of this Agreement relating to the conduct or affecting the liability of or affording protection to the Portfolio Manager, its managers, directors, officers, partners, shareholders, agents and employees, or any of their respective affiliates and their respective managers, directors, officers, partners, shareholders, agents and employees (including parties acting as agents for the execution of transactions) (each, a "Covered Person" and collectively, "Covered Persons") shall be subject to the provisions of this Section.

(b) To the fullest extent permitted by law, no Covered Person shall be liable (whether directly or indirectly, in contract or in tort or otherwise) to the Company or any of its subsidiaries or anyone for liabilities incurred by the Company as a result of or arising out of or in connection with the performance by the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement, or for any losses or damages resulting from any failure to satisfy the Standard of Care (including but not limited to (i) any act or omission by any Covered Person in connection with the conduct of the business of the Company, that is determined by such Covered Person in good faith to be in or not opposed to the best interests of the Company, (ii) any act or omission by any Covered Person based on the suggestions of any professional advisor of the Company or any of its subsidiaries whom such Covered Person believes is authorized to make such suggestions on behalf of the Company, (iii) any act or omission by the Company, or (iv) any mistake, negligence, misconduct or bad faith of any broker or other agent of the Company selected by Covered Person with reasonable care), unless any such liabilities were incurred by reasons of acts or omissions constituting bad faith, fraud, willful misconduct or gross negligence (with such term given its meaning under New York law) or reckless disregard of the duties and obligations of the Portfolio Manager (as determined by a non-appealable judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction), (a "Portfolio Manager Breach").

(c) Covered Persons may consult with legal counsel or accountants selected by such Covered Person and any act or omission by such Covered Person on behalf of the Company or in furtherance of the business of the Company in good faith in reliance on and in accordance with the advice of such counsel or accountants shall be full justification for the act or omission, and such Covered Person shall be fully protected in so acting or omitting to act if the counsel or accountants were selected with reasonable care.

(d) To the fullest extent permitted by law, the Company shall indemnify and hold harmless Covered Persons, from and against any and all claims, liabilities, damages, losses, costs and expenses ("Losses"), including amounts paid in satisfaction of judgments, in compromises and settlements, as fines and penalties and legal or other costs and expenses of investigating or defending against any claim or alleged claim, of any nature whatsoever, known or unknown, liquidated or unliquidated, that are incurred by any Covered Person and arise out of or in connection with the business of the Company, any investment made under or in connection with this Agreement, or the performance by the Covered Person of Covered Person's responsibilities hereunder and against all taxes, charges, duties or levies incurred by such Covered Person in connection with the Company, provided that a Covered Person shall not be entitled to indemnification hereunder to the extent the Covered Person's conduct constitutes a Portfolio

Manager Breach. The termination of any proceeding by settlement, judgment, order or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the Covered Person's conduct constituted a Portfolio Manager Breach.

(c) Expenses incurred by an Covered Person in defense or settlement of any claim that shall be subject to a right of indemnification hereunder, shall be advanced by the Company prior to the final disposition thereof upon receipt of an undertaking by or on behalf of the Covered Person to repay the amount advanced to the extent that it shall be determined ultimately that the Covered Person is not entitled to be indemnified hereunder.

(f) The right of any Covered Person to the indemnification provided herein shall be cumulative of, and in addition to, any and all rights to which the Covered Person may otherwise be entitled by contract or as a matter of law or equity and shall be extended to the Covered Person's successors, assigns and legal representatives.

(g) The provisions of this Section are expressly intended to confer benefits upon Covered Persons and such provisions shall remain operative and in full force and effect regardless of the expiration or any termination of this Agreement.

(h) In no event shall any Covered Person be liable for special, exemplary, punitive, indirect, or consequential loss, or damage of any kind whatsoever, including without limitation lost profits.

(i) No Covered Person shall be liable hereunder for any settlement of any action or claim effected without its written consent thereto.

(j) Pursuant to the exculpation and indemnification provisions described above, the Portfolio Manager and each Covered Person will generally not be liable to the Company for any act or omission (or alleged act or omission), absent a Portfolio Manager Breach, and the Company will generally be required to indemnify such persons against any Losses they may incur by reason of any act or omission (or alleged act or omission) related to the Company, absent a Portfolio Manager Breach. As a result of these provisions, the Company (not the Portfolio Manager or any other Covered Person) will be responsible for any Losses resulting from trading errors and similar human errors, absent a Portfolio Manager Breach or the inability to waive or limit such Losses under applicable law. Trading errors might include, for example, keystroke errors that occur when entering trades into an electronic trading system or typographical or drafting errors related to derivatives contracts or similar agreements. Given the volume of transactions executed by the Portfolio Manager and its affiliates on behalf of the Company, the Company acknowledges that trading errors (and similar errors) will occur and that the Company will be responsible for any resulting Losses, even if such Losses result from the negligence (but not gross negligence) of the Portfolio Manager or its affiliates.

11. Activities of the Portfolio Manager and Others. The Portfolio Manager, and its affiliates may engage, simultaneously with their portfolio servicing and management activities on behalf of the Company, in other businesses, and may render services similar to those described in this Agreement to other individuals, companies, trusts or persons, and shall not by reason of such engaging in other businesses or rendering of services for others be deemed to be acting in conflict with the interests of the Company. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Portfolio Manager and its affiliates shall devote as much time and resources to the performance of its obligations hereunder as the Portfolio Manager deems necessary and appropriate. In addition, the Portfolio Manager or any of its affiliates, in their individual capacities, may engage in securities transactions which may be different than, and contrary to, any guidance provided by the Portfolio Manager to the Company. The Portfolio Manager may give advice and recommend securities to, or buy securities for, accounts and other clients, which advice or securities may differ from guidance given to, or securities recommended for, the Company, even though their investment objectives may be the same or similar. The Portfolio Manager may recommend transactions in securities and other assets in which the Portfolio Manager has an interest, including securities or other assets issued by affiliates of the Portfolio Manager. The Company acknowledges that it has received a copy of Part 2 of the Portfolio Manager's Form ADV, which further describes conflicts of interest, including the Portfolio Manager, its affiliates and their respective advised accounts.

12. Standard of Care. Under this Agreement, the Portfolio Manager agrees to perform its obligations hereunder, with reasonable care (a) using a degree of skill and attention no less than that which the Portfolio Manager exercises with respect to comparable assets that it manages for itself and others having similar investment objectives and restrictions, and (b) to the extent not inconsistent with the foregoing, in a manner consistent with the Portfolio Manager's customary standards, policies and procedures (the "Standard of Care"); provided that the Portfolio Manager shall not be liable for any loss or damages resulting from any failure to satisfy the Standard of Care except to the extent any act or omission of the Portfolio Manager constitutes a Portfolio Manager Breach. The Standard of Care may change from time to time to reflect changes by the Portfolio Manager to its customary standards, policies and procedures provided that such customary standards, policies and procedures are at least as rigorous as the foregoing.

13. Term; Termination.

(a) This Agreement shall remain in effect through an initial term concluding August 10, 2018 and shall be automatically extended for additional three-year terms thereafter, provided, however, this Agreement may be terminated in the event of: (A) the Company determining in good faith that the Company or the portfolio has become required to register as an investment company under the provisions of the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "Investment Company Act") (where there is no available exemption), and the Company has given prior notice to the Portfolio Manager of such requirement, (B) the date on which the portfolio has been liquidated in full and the Company's financing arrangements have been terminated or redeemed in full, (C) such other date as agreed between the Company and the Portfolio Manager and (D) under subsection (b) of this Section 13 or Section 14 of this Agreement.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision hereof to the contrary but subject to the provisions of clause (d) below, this Agreement may be terminated without cause by the Portfolio Manager, and the Portfolio Manager may resign, upon at least ninety (90) days' (or such shorter notice as is acceptable to the Company) written notice to the Company. The resignation shall not be effective until the date as of which a successor adviser has been appointed. The Portfolio Manager may immediately resign by providing written notice to the Company upon the failure of the Company to comply in any material respect with any investment policy or investment objective to which it is bound to comply, a willful breach or knowing violation by the Company of a material provision of this Agreement or the occurrence of insolvency proceedings in respect of the Company.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of clause (b) above, no resignation or removal of the Portfolio Manager or termination of this Agreement pursuant to such clause shall be effective until the date as of which a successor Portfolio Manager shall have been appointed and approved in accordance with Section 13(d) and has accepted all of the Portfolio Manager's duties and obligations pursuant to this Agreement in writing and has assumed such duties and obligations.

(d) Any termination, removal or resignation of the Portfolio Manager shall be effective only upon (a) the appointment by the Company of a successor Portfolio Manager that is an established institution which (i) has demonstrated an ability to professionally and competently perform duties reasonably comparable to those imposed upon the Portfolio Manager hereunder, (ii) is legally qualified and has the capacity to act as successor to the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement in the assumption of all of the responsibilities, duties and obligations of the Portfolio Manager hereunder and under the terms of the offering memorandum dated August 10, 2015 (as amended from time to time, the "Offering Memorandum") applicable to the Portfolio Manager, (iii) shall not cause the Company to become required to register under the provisions of the Investment Company Act and (iv) shall not result in the imposition of any entity-level or withholding tax on the Company or cause any other material adverse tax consequences to the Company and (b) written acceptance of appointment by such successor Portfolio Manager. The Company shall use its commercially reasonable efforts to appoint a successor Portfolio Manager to assume the duties and obligations of the removed or resigning Portfolio Manager. The Company, the Custodians and the successor Portfolio Manager shall take such action (or cause the outgoing Portfolio Manager to take such action) consistent with this Agreement and the terms of the Offering Memorandum applicable to the Portfolio Manager, as shall be necessary to effectuate any such succession. In the event that a successor has not been appointed or has not assumed the duties of the Portfolio Manager in writing within a 60-day period the Portfolio Manager or the Company may petition a court of competent jurisdiction for the appointment of a successor Portfolio Manager, which appointment will not require the consent of, or be subject to the approval or disapproval of, the Company (so long as such court appointed successor meets the requirements of clauses (a)(i) through (iv) above).

(e) In the event of removal of the Portfolio Manager pursuant to this Agreement, the Company shall have all of the rights and remedies available with respect thereto at law or equity, and, without limiting the foregoing, the Company may by notice in writing to the Portfolio Manager as provided under this Agreement terminate all the rights and obligations of the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement (except those that survive termination pursuant to Section 13(d) above). Upon resignation or removal of the Portfolio Manager in accordance with this Section 13 or Section 14 of this Agreement, as applicable, and upon acceptance by a successor Portfolio Manager of appointment, all authority and power of the Portfolio Manager under this Agreement and the Offering Memorandum, shall automatically and without further action pass to and be vested in the successor Portfolio Manager.

(f) For so long as Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. or an Affiliate thereof is the Portfolio Manager, the Company shall be permitted to use the "Highland" name; provided that, if the Portfolio Manager ceases to be Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. or an Affiliate thereof, the Company shall use commercially reasonable efforts to change its name to remove all reference to the name "Highland" therefrom. In addition, the Portfolio Manager, without the consent of the Company, may change the name of the Portfolio Manager.

14. Termination by the Company for Cause. This Agreement may be terminated, and the Portfolio Manager may be removed for Cause (as defined below) by the Company upon ten (10) days' prior written notice to the Portfolio Manager. No such termination or removal shall be effective until the date as of which a successor Portfolio Manager shall have agreed in writing to assume all of the Portfolio Manager's duties and obligations pursuant to this Agreement and as specified in the Offering Memorandum. "Cause" shall mean any one of the following events:

(a) the Portfolio Manager willfully violates, or takes any action that it knows breaches any material provision of this Agreement or the Offering Memorandum applicable to it in bad faith (not including a willful and intentional breach that results from a good faith dispute regarding reasonable alternative courses of action or interpretation of instructions);

(b) the Portfolio Manager breaches in any respect any provision of this Agreement or any terms of the Offering Memorandum applicable to it (other than as covered by clause (a) and except for any such violations or breaches that have not had, or could not, either individually or in the aggregate, reasonably be expected to have, a material adverse effect on the Company) and fails to cure such breach within 30 days of the Company receiving notice of such breach, unless, if such breach is remediable, the Portfolio Manager has taken action that the Portfolio Manager believes in good faith will remedy such breach, and such action does remedy such breach, within sixty (60) days after the Company receives notice thereof;

(c) the Portfolio Manager is wound up or dissolved or there is appointed over it or a substantial portion of its assets a receiver, administrator, administrative receiver, trustee or similar officer; or the Portfolio Manager (i) ceases to be able to, or admits in writing its inability to, pay its debts as they become due and payable, or makes a general assignment for the benefit of, or enters into any composition or arrangement with, its creditors generally, (ii) applies for or consents (by admission of material allegations of a petition or otherwise) to the appointment of a receiver, trustee, assignee, custodian, liquidator or sequestrator (or other similar official) of the Portfolio Manager or of any substantial part of its properties or assets, or authorizes such an application or consent, or proceedings seeking such appointment are commenced without such authorization, consent or application against the Portfolio Manager and continue undismissed for sixty (60) days; (iii) authorizes or files a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, or applies for or consents (by admission of material allegations of a petition or otherwise) to the application of any bankruptcy, reorganization, arrangement, readjustment of debt, insolvency or dissolution, or authorizes such application or consent, or proceedings to such end are instituted against the Portfolio Manager without such authorization, application or consent and are approved as properly instituted and remain undismissed for sixty (60) days or result in adjudication of bankruptcy or insolvency; or (iv) permits or suffers all or any substantial part of its properties or assets to be sequestered or attached by court order and the order remains undismissed for sixty (60) days;

(d) the occurrence of an act by the Portfolio Manager that constitutes fraud or criminal activity in the performance of its obligations under this Agreement (as determined pursuant to a final adjudication by a court of competent jurisdiction), or the Portfolio Manager being indicted for a criminal offense materially related to its business of providing asset management services; or

(e) any senior executive officer of the Portfolio Manager (in the performance of his or her investment management duties) is convicted for a criminal offense materially related to the business of the Portfolio Manager providing asset management services and continues to have responsibility for the performance by the Portfolio Manager hereunder for a period of ten (10) days after such conviction.

If any of the events specified in the definition of "Cause" in this Section 14 shall occur, the Portfolio Manager shall give prompt written notice thereof to the Company upon the Portfolio Manager's becoming aware of the occurrence of such event. The Company may waive any event described in (a), (b), (d), or (e) above as a basis for termination of this Agreement and removal of the Portfolio Manager under this Section 14.

Whereas, HCM has notified Acis that HCM is unwilling to continue to provide support personnel and other critical services to Acis with respect to the CLOs (the "Notification");

Whereas, Acis has determined that the effect of the Notification is that it cannot fulfill its duties as portfolio manager of the CLOs, and in order to ensure the continued operation of such CLOs and protection for its stakeholders, it must assign its rights as portfolio manager in the CLOs to a qualified successor portfolio manager pursuant to the CLO Documents (a "Successor Manager");

2. Successor Manager. Subsequent to the Notices, each of Acis and HCLOM shall promptly pursue Successor Manager appointment of HCLOM in respect of each CLO, including but not limited to achieving all conditions precedent required by the CLO Documents in such respect (consummation of HCLOM's appointment as Portfolio Manager of a given CLO, an "Appointment").
3. Assignment and Transfer of the Promissory Note; Stabilization Payments.
  - a. Effective immediately upon execution of this Agreement by the Parties, all right, title and interest of Acis under the Note, including the right to any and all Stabilization Payments not yet paid to Acis, are hereby irrevocably assigned and transferred by Acis to HCLOM, it being understood that from the date of such assignment, HCLOM shall become the "Payee" thereunder.
  - b. For so long as Acis shall receive Servicer Fees following the date hereof, Acis shall remit to HCM the HCM Stabilization Fees pursuant to the Note Purchase Agreement.
  - c. For so long as HCLOM receives any Servicer Fees following any Appointment, then HCLOM shall remit to HCM any portion of such fees that would otherwise have constituted HCM Stabilization Fees pursuant to the Note Purchase Agreement if Acis was the recipient of such fees.
  - d. HCLOM shall sign a joinder to Note Purchase Agreement upon HCM's written notice thereof.
4. Expense Support. In the event Acis delivers written notice to HCLOM that Acis is unable to pay when due any Acis Expenses, then HCLOM shall promptly pay to Acis, or at Acis' written request, to Acis' creditors, the amount of such shortfall, provided that in no event shall HCLOM's obligations under this paragraph exceed greater than $2 million of Acis Legal Expenses in the aggregate, or greater than $1 million of Acis Administrative Expenses in the aggregate.
5. Indemnity. Acis shall and hereby does, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law, advance, indemnify and hold harmless any Covered Person from and against any and all claims, demands, liabilities, costs, expenses, damages, losses, suits, proceedings, judgments, assessments, actions and other liabilities, whether judicial, administrative, investigative or otherwise, of whatever nature, known or unknown, liquidated or

The termination of any Proceeding by settlement, judgment, order, conviction or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that any Damages relating to such settlement, judgment, order, conviction or plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent or otherwise relating to such Proceeding arose primarily from fraud, bad faith or willful misconduct of any Covered Persons. “Covered Person” means each of HCLOM and HCM, as well as each and every one of their affiliates (other than Acis), and all of HCLOM’s and HCM’s respective managers, members, principals, partners, directors, officers, shareholders, employees and agents.

PROMISSORY NOTE

October __, 2016

FOR VALUE RECEIVED, the undersigned, Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("Maker"), hereby promises to pay to the order of Acis Capital Management, L.P., a Delaware limited partnership ("Payee"), at its office at 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201 in lawful money of the United States of America, the principal sum of TWELVE MILLION SIX HUNDRED SIXTY-SIX THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED FORTY-SIX DOLLARS ($12,666,446), together with interest on the outstanding principal balance thereof from day to day remaining at the rate of three percent (3%) per annum, as provided herein.

Payments

THE UNPAID PRINCIPAL HEREOF, TOGETHER WITH ALL ACCRUED AND UNPAID INTEREST THEREON, SHALL AUTOMATICALLY BE DUE AND PAYABLE IN FULL, WITHOUT NECESSITY OF DEMAND OR NOTICE, ACCORDING TO THE AMORTIZATION TABLE ATTACHED HERETO AS EXHIBIT A.

All past due principal and interest shall bear interest from and after the date when due at a rate equal to the rate equal to the lesser of (a) eighteen percent (18.0%) per annum or (b) the Maximum Rate (as defined herein).

Interest on the indebtedness evidenced by this Note shall be computed on the basis of a year of 360 days and the actual number of days elapsed (including the first day but excluding the last day) unless such calculation would result in a rate that exceeds the maximum rate allowed by applicable law (such rate, the "Maximum Rate") in which case interest shall be calculated on the basis of a year of 365 or 366 days, as the case may be. If the regularly scheduled due date for any payment under this Note is not a Business Day, the due date for such payment shall be the next succeeding Business Day, and payment made on such succeeding Business Day shall have the same force and effect as if made on the regularly scheduled due date. "Business Day" means a day, other than a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday, on which a bank in Dallas, Texas is open for business.

Maker shall have the right to prepay this Note, in whole or in part, at any time and from time to time without premium or penalty. Amounts borrowed and repaid hereunder may not be reborrowed.

Conditions Precedent

This Note shall not become effective and Payee shall have no obligation to make the advance hereunder until Payee has received each of the following in form and substance acceptable to Payee:

- (a) this Note executed by Maker;
- (b) the Agreement for Purchase and Sale of CLO Participation Interests dated of even date herewith (the "Purchase Agreement"), by and between Maker and Payee, and copies of all agreements, documents and instruments executed or delivered in connection therewith and evidence that all conditions to the effectiveness of the Purchase Agreement have been or will be fulfilled contemporaneously with the initial advance under this Note;
- (c) evidence that the execution, delivery and performance by Maker of this Note and all other documents and instruments related to this Note have been duly authorized by, or on behalf of, Maker; and

(d) such other agreements, documents, information, and other assurances as Payee may reasonably request.

Events of Default

Maker shall be in default under this Note upon the occurrence of any of the following events or conditions (each, an "Event of Default"):

(a) the failure of Maker to make any payment required to be made under this Note when such payment becomes due;

(b) Maker defaults in the performance of any obligation, covenant, or agreement now or hereafter made or owed by Maker to Payee, whether under this Note or any related document;

(c) any representation or warranty made by Maker to Payee in connection with this Note or any document executed or delivered in connection therewith, is false or misleading in any material respect when made;

(d) Maker shall commence a voluntary proceeding seeking liquidation, reorganization, or other relief with respect to itself or its debts under any bankruptcy, insolvency, or other similar law now or hereafter in effect, or seeking the appointment of a trustee, receiver, liquidator, custodian, or other similar official for it or a substantial part of its property or shall consent to any such relief or to the appointment of or taking possession by any such official in an involuntary case or other proceeding commenced against it or shall make a general assignment for the benefit of creditors or shall generally fail to pay its debts as they become due or shall take any corporate action to authorize any of the foregoing;

(e) any involuntary proceeding shall be commenced against Maker seeking liquidation, reorganization, or other relief with respect to it or its debts under any bankruptcy, insolvency, or other similar law now or hereafter in effect, or seeking the appointment of a trustee, receiver, liquidator, custodian, or other similar official for it or a substantial part of its property, in each case, that results in the entry of an order for any such relief or appointment that has not been vacated, discharged or stayed or bonded pending appeal within 60 days from the entry thereof;

(f) any lien, attachment, sequestration or similar proceeding against any of Maker's assets or properties other than liens in favor of Payee;

(g) any event or condition occurs that results in any indebtedness of Maker becoming due prior to its scheduled maturity or that enables or permits (with or without the giving of notice, the lapse of time, or both) the holder of such indebtedness to cause any of such indebtedness to become due, or to require the prepayment, repurchase, redemption or defeasance thereof, prior to its scheduled maturity; or

(h) the validity or enforceability of this Note shall be contested or challenged by Maker.

Remedies

Should an Event of Default exist, Payee may but without any obligation to do so, at its option and at any time, and without presentment, demand, or protest, notice of default, dishonor, demand, non-payment, or protest, notice of intent to accelerate all or any part of the advances hereunder, notice of acceleration of all or any part of the indebtedness evidenced by this Note, or notice of any other kind, all of which Maker hereby expressly waives, except for any notice required by applicable statute which cannot be waived: (a) terminate Payee's commitment to make any advances under this Note; (b) declare the indebtedness evidenced by this Note, or any part thereof, immediately due and payable, whereupon the same shall be due and payable (provided, however, that upon the occurrence of any event described in clause (e) of the definition of "Event of Default", such indebtedness shall become immediately due and payable in full without demand or acceleration); (c) reduce any claim to judgment; (d) to the maximum extent permitted under applicable laws, set-off and apply any and all deposits, funds, or assets at any time held and any and all other indebtedness at any time owing by Payee to or for the credit or the account of Maker against any and all obligations, whether or not Payee exercises any other right or remedy hereunder and whether or not such obligations are then matured; (e) may cure any Event of Default, or event of nonperformance under this Note and/or (f) exercise any and all rights and remedies afforded by this Note, or by law or equity or otherwise, as Payee deems appropriate. No failure or delay of the holder hereof to exercise any of its rights or remedies shall not constitute a waiver thereof.

If the holder hereof incurs any costs or expenses in any attempt to enforce payment of all or any part of this Note, or if this Note is placed in the hands of an attorney for collection, Maker agrees to pay all such costs fees and expenses incurred, including without limitation, reasonable attorneys' fees.

Miscellaneous

It is expressly stipulated and agreed to be the intent of Maker and Payee at all times to comply with the applicable law of the State of Texas governing the maximum rate or amount of interest payable on or in connection with the indebtedness under this Note (or applicable United States federal law to the extent that it permits Payee to contract for, charge, take, reserve or receive a greater amount of interest than under Texas law). If such law is ever judicially interpreted so as to render usurious any amount contracted for, charged, taken, reserved or received with respect to this Note, or if any payment by Maker results in Maker having paid any interest in excess of the amount that is permitted by such law, then it is Maker's and Payee's express intent that all excess amounts theretofore collected by Payee be credited on the principal balance hereof (or, if the principal balance has been or would thereby be paid in full, refunded to Maker), and the provisions of this Note shall immediately be deemed reformed and the amounts thereafter collectible thereunder reduced, without the necessity of the execution of any new documents, so as to comply with all such applicable laws, but so as to permit the recovery of the fullest amount otherwise called for thereunder. All sums paid or agreed to be paid to Payee for the use, forbearance or detention of money and other indebtedness evidenced by this Note shall, to the extent permitted by applicable law, be amortized, prorated, allocated and spread throughout the full term of such indebtedness until payment in full so that the rate or amount of interest on account of such indebtedness does not exceed the applicable usury ceiling provided by such applicable law. Notwithstanding any provision contained herein to the contrary, the total amount of interest that Maker is obligated to pay and Payee is entitled to receive with respect to this Note shall not exceed the amount calculated on a simple (i.e., non-compounded) interest basis at the maximum rate allowed by applicable law on principal amounts actually advanced hereunder to or for the account of Maker.

MAKER AND EACH SURETY, GUARANTOR, ENDORSER, AND OTHER PARTY EVER LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF ANY SUMS OF MONEY PAYABLE ON THIS NOTE JOINTLY AND SEVERALLY WAIVE NOTICE, PRESENTMENT, DEMAND FOR PAYMENT, PROTEST, NOTICE OF PROTEST AND NON-PAYMENT OR DISHONOR, NOTICE OF ACCELERATION, NOTICE OF INTENT TO ACCELERATE, NOTICE OF INTENT TO DEMAND, DILIGENCE IN COLLECTING, GRACE, AND ALL OTHER FORMALITIES OF ANY KIND, AND CONSENT TO ALL EXTENSIONS WITHOUT NOTICE FOR ANY PERIOD OR PERIODS OF TIME AND PARTIAL PAYMENTS,

BEFORE OR AFTER MATURITY, AND ANY IMPAIRMENT OF ANY COLLATERAL SECURING THIS NOTE, ALL WITHOUT PREJUDICE TO THE HOLDER. Without limiting the foregoing, any notice or demand upon Maker in connection with this Note shall be in writing and shall become effective (a) upon personal delivery, (b) three (3) days after it shall have been mailed by United States mail, first class, certified or registered, with postage prepaid or (c) when properly transmitted by telecopy, in each case addressed to Maker's address for notice specified in connection with its signature below.

THIS NOTE SHALL BE GOVERNED BY AND CONSTRUED IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE LAWS OF THE STATE OF TEXAS AND THE APPLICABLE LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. THIS NOTE IS PERFORMABLE IN DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS. ANY ACTION OR PROCEEDING UNDER OR IN CONNECTION WITH THIS NOTE AGAINST MAKER OR ANY OTHER PARTY EVER LIABLE FOR PAYMENT OF ANY SUMS OF MONEY PAYABLE ON THIS NOTE MAY BE BROUGHT IN ANY STATE OR FEDERAL COURT IN DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS. MAKER AND EACH SUCH OTHER PARTY HEREBY IRREVOCABLY (I) SUBMITS TO THE NONEXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION OF SUCH COURTS AND (II) WAIVES ANY OBJECTION IT MAY NOW OR HEREAFTER HAVE AS TO THE VENUE OF ANY SUCH ACTION OR PROCEEDING BROUGHT IN SUCH COURT OR THAT SUCH COURT IS AN INCONVENIENT FORUM. NOTHING HEREIN SHALL AFFECT THE RIGHT OF PAYEE TO BRING ANY ACTION OR PROCEEDING AGAINST MAKER OR ANY OTHER PARTY LIABLE HEREUNDER OR WITH RESPECT TO ANY COLLATERAL IN ANY STATE OR FEDERAL COURT IN ANY OTHER JURISDICTION. ANY ACTION OR PROCEEDING BY MAKER OR ANY OTHER PARTY LIABLE HEREUNDER AGAINST PAYEE SHALL BE BROUGHT ONLY IN A COURT LOCATED IN DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS.

MAKER AND PAYEE EACH IRREVOCABLY WAIVES ITS RIGHT TO A TRIAL BY JURY OF ANY CLAIM OR CAUSE OF ACTION BASED UPON OR ARISING OUT OF OR RELATED TO THIS NOTE OR THE TRANSACTIONS CONTEMPLATED HEREBY OR THEREBY, IN ANY ACTION, PROCEEDING OR OTHER LITIGATION OF ANY KIND BROUGHT BY EITHER AGAINST THE OTHER, WHETHER WITH RESPECT TO CONTRACT CLAIMS, TORT CLAIMS, OR OTHERWISE. MAKER AND PAYEE EACH AGREES THAT ANY SUCH CLAIM OR CAUSE OF ACTION SHALL BE TRIED BY A COURT WITHOUT A JURY. WITHOUT LIMITING THE FOREGOING, THE PARTIES FURTHER AGREE THAT ITS RIGHT TO A TRIAL BY JURY IS WAIVED AS TO ANY ACTION, COUNTERCLAIM OR OTHER PROCEEDING WHICH SEEKS, IN WHOLE OR IN PART, TO CHALLENGE THE VALIDITY OR ENFORCEABILITY OF THIS NOTE OR ANY PROVISION HEREOF. THIS WAIVER SHALL APPLY TO ANY SUBSEQUENT AMENDMENTS, RENEWALS, SUPPLEMENTS OR MODIFICATIONS TO THIS NOTE, WHETHER OR NOT SPECIFICALLY SET FORTH THEREIN.

This Note embodies the final, entire agreement of Maker and Payee with respect to the indebtedness evidenced hereby and supersedes any and all prior commitments, agreements, representations and understandings, whether written or oral, relating thereto and may not be contradicted or varied by evidence of prior, contemporaneous or subsequent oral agreements or discussions of Maker and Payee. There are no oral agreements between Maker and Payee.

DECLARATION OF JOSHUA N. TERRY

STATE OF TEXAS

COUNTY OF DALLAS

§

1. My name is Joshua N. Terry.
2. I am both qualified and competent to give this declaration, and I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein based upon my extensive experience as a partner in Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis”), as well as my personal involvement in the matters discussed herein. I have never been convicted of a felony or crime of moral turpitude.
3. I give this declaration in conjunction with the filing of Plaintiff’s Application for Temporary Restraining Order (the “Application”), and all defined terms in the Application are incorporated herein.
4. Attached as Exhibits 1-2 and 4-8 are true and correct copies of documents produced by Acis pursuant to Court order or in the underlying arbitration proceeding.
5. I ran Acis’ day-to-day operations from 2011 until I was wrongfully terminated in June 2016. In my capacity as portfolio manager of Acis, I had involvement in all facets of Acis’ business operations, strategy, and finances.
6. I am well-versed in the CLO industry, where I have worked since 2005. I have earned the right to use the Chartered Financial Analyst designation. From my experience, education, and training, I became very familiar with the common and legitimate business practices of CLO managers in the industry, as well as the value of CLO management contracts.
7. In 2015, I valued Acis in excess of $70 million, a conclusion that was accepted by David Klos, a Highland employee.
8. On February 28, 2012, Highland sold four European CLO management contracts to The Carlyle Group for $43.6 million in an arms-length transaction. Those four CLO management contracts are less valuable than the five Management Contracts Acis owns and which it now seeks to transfer for no consideration;

9. The Management Contracts are the most substantial asset of Acis and are valued in excess of $30 million.

10. There is no legitimate business purpose for Acis to transfer the Management Contracts for no consideration. This transaction makes no business sense. Typically, CLO management contracts like these in the CLO industry would be transferred only for a significant amount of cash or other valuable consideration.

11. There is no legitimate business purpose for Acis to transfer the Highland Note for no consideration.

12. It is not in the normal course of Acis' business to transfer all of its Management Contracts for no consideration, or to transfer the Highland Note for no consideration.

13. If Acis transfers the Management Contracts, Acis will not have assets adequate to satisfy the Judgment.

JURAT

My name is Joshua N. Terry. My date of birth is 1/16/81, and my address is 25 Highland Park Village, Suite 100-848, Dallas Texas 75205. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct. This declaration is being executed pursuant to Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 132.001, and any other applicable law authorizing use of an unsworn declaration.

Executed in Dallas County, State of Texas, on the 23rd day of January 2018.

1 of these agreements.

2 THE COURT: All right. I tell you what.
3 You all need to confer. I need to go get ahold of 4 Jonathan, my court coordinator.

5 MR. SHAW: Thank you, Judge.

6 THE COURT: You're welcome. Off the
7 record.

8

9 (There was a discussion off the record.)

10

11 THE COURT: Let's put this on the record,
12 and then we will give you a date. Go ahead.

13 MR. SHAW: Judge, Brian Shaw on behalf of 14 the plaintiff. The parties have agreed to an order for 15 the Court.

16 The first agreement, which is -- when 17 it comes to the order, is Acis agrees that it shall 18 not make any change from Acis to another manager on 19 any CLOs between now and a hearing on plaintiff's
20 Application for Temporary Injunction, defined TI
21 hearing.

22 Number two, Acis agrees that:

23 A. Any money received by Acis between 24 now and the TI hearing will be preserved in an Acis
25 bank account;

1 B. There shall be no changes to Acis'
2 right to receive servicing fees between now and the 3 TI hearing; and

4 C. Acis shall not divert any moneys owed
5 to it between now and the TI hearing:

6 Plaintiff submits that is the Agreed
7 Order that the plaintiff is submitting to the Court.

8 THE COURT: Okay. Are you going to get
9 that to me in a document that I can actually sign?

10 MR. SHAW: We can do that. Do you have 11 any problem with that?

12 MR. CRUCIANI: I would prefer it just 13 be an order of the Court, as opposed to a contractual 14 Rule 11 agreement. I agree that that is the agreement
15 of the parties.

16 And if the Court would give its 17 imprimatur of the agreement, that would be our 18 preference.

19 MR. SHAW: And if we have an issue, then
20 we will just go back and get the record.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. SHAW: So that's fine with us.

23 THE COURT: It will be so ordered. Let's 24 go off the record for a second.

25 (There was a discussion off the record.)

1 THE COURT: All right. This is what I'm
2 going to allow. February 1st, you all are not coming 3 in until 1:00. You have the morning to take the 4 deposition briefly, two hours each side.

5 If the plaintiff chooses to retain an
6 expert, you will have two hours with that retained
7 expert. And then you can also have two hours with 8 Mr. Terry so that we can go forward.

9 And you are not committed to the time at 10 the court-ordered deposition. As soon as you can give 11 him notification, as soon as you know you are going to 12 have a retained expert.

13 The 29th is five days from now. Do you
14 think you will have that by the 29th, do you believe?

15 MR. SHAW: I should. I will do
16 everything I can to get that done by them.

17 THE COURT: All right. So if you can 18 give them notice by the 29th, with the CV and 19 everything that they would be entitled to.

20 MR. CRUCIANI: With the report. Right?

21 THE COURT: With the report.

22 MR. CRUCIANI: All right.

23 THE COURT: Okay. And we will set this
24 for February 1st at 1:00 p.m., acknowledging that that 25 gives you at least two hours and hopefully maybe a

1 little bit more than that.

2 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

3 MR. SHAW: Thank you for getting us in,
4 Judge. I appreciate your time.

5 MR. CRUCIANI: We really do.

6 THE COURT: You're welcome. Thank you.
7 We are off the record.

Acis Capital Management, L.P. (“Acis LP”) and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (“Acis GP” and together with Acis LP, “Acis”), the alleged debtors in the above-captioned cases, hereby submit this Joint Objection (the “Objection”) to the Emergency Motion of Petitioning Creditor to Abrogate or Modify 11 U.S.C. § 303(f), Prohibit Transfer of Assets, and

Impose, inter alia, 11 U.S.C. 363 [Case No. 18-30264-SGJ7, Docket No. 3; Case No. 18-30265-SGJ7, Docket No. 3] (the “303(f) Motion”) filed by Joshua Terry (“Terry”). In support of this Objection, Acis respectfully states as follows:

I.
INTRODUCTION

1. Terry holds a state-court judgment against Acis and is one of 18 creditors of Acis. Terry initiated these involuntary chapter 7 cases—acting alone as opposed to in concert with other creditors as required by Section 303(b)(1) of Title 11 of the United States Code (the “Bankruptcy Code”) - as a bad-faith litigation tactic and attempt at forum shopping in the context of his longstanding dispute with Acis. Terry filed his involuntary petition against Acis LP at 11:57 p.m. on January 30 and against Acis GP on January 31 at 12:00 a.m. (the “Involuntary Petitions”). On January 31, Acis filed a Joint Motion to Dismiss the Involuntary Petitions (the “Motion to Dismiss”) and a Notice of List of Creditors Pursuant to Fed. R. Bankr. P. 1003(d) (the “Creditor List”). Acis’s Motion to Dismiss establishes that the Involuntary Petitions are fatally defective because Acis has more than 12 creditors, thereby requiring a minimum of 3 creditors to join in the filing of the Involuntary Petitions. Yet, Terry was the sole creditor to file.

2. The filing of the Involuntary Petitions filings was a transparent attempt to derail two imminent events. The first was a temporary injunction hearing that was scheduled to be heard in Dallas state court on January 31 (the “Temporary Injunction Hearing”). The second was the closing of a $420 million transaction involving the reissuance of CLO-3 (as detailed and defined below) (the “$420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction” or “Transaction”) that has been in the making since May 2017 and that was scheduled to close on February 1.

3. Terry sought a state-court injunction to prevent Acis from transferring a management contract (the “Collateral Management Agreement” or “CMA”) from Acis to a Highland entity as part of the Transaction. As will be explained, this CMA is central to Terry’s 303(f) Motion. The transfer of the CMA is a ministerial task that Acis is contractually required to perform and is the last remaining condition to close the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction. Terry has falsely and without any basis claimed that this CMA is worth multiple millions of dollars and that Acis is attempting to fraudulently transfer the CMA in order to avoid paying an $8 million judgment (that will be appealed) that Terry recently obtained against Acis. But, as set forth below, the facts are the opposite.

4. First, contrary to Terry’s unsupported assertions, the CMA has no value. Acis has no employees, and has never had any employees. Acis has always performed the management services required of it by the CMA by subcontracting those obligations to certain Highland entities (“Highland Servicers”). Thus, Acis receives management fees (the “cash inflows”) but then pays fees to the Highland Servicers (the “cash outflows”) under contracts that have been in place for years. Presently, the cash outflows under the CMA exceed the cash inflows that results in negative cash flow, and thereby rendering the CMA worthless.

5. Second, and a point that cannot be overstated, the very relief that Terry previously sought in state court, and now seeks in this Court, would cause the CMA to be terminated pursuant to its terms and thereby also render the CMA worthless. On January 29, Terry filed an application with the state court seeking the appointment of a receiver over Acis. In this Court, Terry has filed Involuntary Petitions against Acis. However, under paragraph 15 of the CMA, [1] the appointment of a receiver and [2] an involuntary bankruptcy petition that “remain[s] undismissed for 60 days and result[s] in an adjudication of bankruptcy or insolvency” are grounds for the CMA to be terminated and for Acis to be removed “for cause” as the collateral manager upon 30 days’ notice. On the one hand, Terry argues that the CMA is worth millions of dollars and asks this Court to preserve its value by preventing the CMA from being transferred as part of the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction. On the other hand, if Terry succeeds in his effort to throw Acis into bankruptcy, the CMA will be terminated and will cease to have any value. These undisputed facts expose Terry’s bad faith motive behind his state-court and bankruptcy-court filings. Ironically, the very relief requested by Terry in state court and in Bankruptcy Court regarding the CMA would itself destroy any value associated with the CMA by causing the CMA to be terminated.

6. So, why is Terry engaging in this act of self-immolation that will guarantee the CMA will be terminated and any value associated with it to be extinguished? The answer: to try to hold hostage the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction and extort a settlement. Terry’s motive is not to preserve the CMA as part of Acis’s assets that would be available to satisfy his judgment. As discussed herein, the CMA has no value and is going away regardless of whether or not the Transaction closes.

7. To fully understand the context of the 303(f) Motion, it is important to understand what transpired in the underlying litigation that resulted in the judgment that Terry obtained against Acis, which judgment Terry is now using as a pretext to throw Acis into bankruptcy and block the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction. Terry was an employee of Highland who was integrally involved in the formation and management of Highland’s CLO business, including CLO-3. In 2016, Highland fired Terry for cause for various acts of misconduct. Terry is persona non grata in the CLO industry because he secretly tape recorded his Highland colleagues, and no one in the CLO industry wants anything to do with Terry or Acis, and the Acis name is now toxic as a result of Terry's actions.

8. Upon being terminated by Highland, Terry filed arbitration claims against six parties: Acis LP; Acis GP; Highland; Highland's two founders (James Dondero and Mark Okada); and Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy"). Terry asserted a claim for more than $200 million and received an $8 million award against Acis. Terry's claims against Highland, Dondero, Okada, and Dugaboy were all dismissed. Also, Terry's claim that the promissory note transaction between Highland and Acis (the "Promissory Note") (the same note referenced at paragraphs 2 and 6 of the 303(f) Motion) was a fraudulent transfer, but the arbitration panel likewise rejected this claim.

9. As a result of losing on all his claims against the deep-pocketed defendants in the arbitration and losing on his fraudulent transfer claim, Terry is left with a pyrrhic victory—a largely uncollectible judgment against Acis. If that fact was not already apparent to Terry, it became so on January 29 when, pursuant to Texas state law, Acis filed a motion to post a supersedeas bond in the amount of $495,070.50, which is equal to 50 percent of Acis's net worth as of January 29. Terry thus realized that even if he ultimately prevailed on Acis's appeal of the $8 million judgment, Terry was never going to recover more than the approximately $500,000 bond amount.

10. Thus, Terry has been flailing about trying to create as much mayhem as possible to see if he can succeed in a shakedown by attempting to block the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction from closing. Terry's filings are made in complete disregard of Terry's own self-interest (the request for a receiver and the Involuntary Petitions) and in complete disregard for the investors in the $420 Million CLO-3 Transaction who stand to lose tens of millions of dollars if the Transaction does not close.

11. According to Terry’s fanciful allegations, the Transaction is itself a fraudulent transfer that Highland and Acis allegedly orchestrated to deprive him of the ability to satisfy his judgment against Acis. But, as will be explained, there are numerous reissues or refinances that have taken place, and are scheduled to take place, throughout the CLO industry as a result of changing market forces—specifically, declining interest rates from the time the CLOs were first issued.

12. In fact, Highland has been engaged in efforts to restructure the Acis CLOs long before the arbitration award was issued in October 2017. Highland closed on a restructure of CLO-2 on April 10, 2017 and it began work on the restructure of CLO-3 (the CLO at issue) as far back as May 2017. Thus, contrary to Terry’s wild assertions, the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction is being driven by legitimate business purposes in the ordinary course of business and not by some Machiavellian scheme by Acis to “dismantle their business to the great detriment of their single largest creditor, Mr. Terry” as Terry falsely claims.

13. Another important point for the Court to consider is that Terry’s 303(f) Motion is long on hyperbole and name-calling but short on facts regarding alleged past fraudulent transfers and future fraudulent transfers. But, here are the facts. To date, there has been a single fraudulent-transfer claim that has been litigated and that is Terry’s claim in the arbitration involving the October 2016 transaction giving rise to the Promissory Note in which Highland agreed to pay $12.6 million to Acis in return for Acis transferring to Highland the right to certain future cash flows was a fraudulent transfer.<sup>1</sup> The arbitration panel roundly rejected Terry’s fraudulent-transfer claims, holding that “[t]he transactional documents recite business purpose and reasonable consideration for the sale.” Final Award, at 17, Exhibit No. 1, hereto.<sup>2</sup> Moreover, “Terry offer[ed] no evidence that ACIS did not receive reasonable equivalent value in the transaction or that ACIS made the transfer with ‘actual intent to hinder delay or defraud.’” Id. With respect to the fraudulent-transfer allegations that are littered throughout the 303(f) Motion, this Court should take such allegations with a heavy dose of salt given Terry’s prior, unsuccessful claims of fraudulent transfers.

14. To bring things full circle, given that the same relief that Terry now seeks in his 303(f) Motion—blocking the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissuance Transaction—was scheduled to be heard by the state court judge at the Temporary Injunction Hearing on January 31, that begs the following question: Why did Terry simply not go forward with the January 31 Temporary Injunction Hearing in state court and instead file the Involuntary Petitions against Acis and file an emergency 303(f) Motion? The answer is clear: Terry knew that the handwriting was on the wall and that the state court was not going to enjoin the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissuance Transaction from closing the next day and then Terry would lose all leverage to try to block the Transaction. Terry’s machinations did succeed in causing the closing of the Transaction to be rescheduled from February 1 to February 13. However, as the evidence will show, if this for the Note Transfer.” This assertion is in sharp contrast to a sworn declaration that Terry signed on January 23 in support of a temporary restraining order in which he falsely claimed based upon his “personal knowledge” that the November 2017 Note Transfer was for “no consideration.” Terry Decl. ¶11, Exhibit No.2. At a TRO hearing in state court on January 24, Acis’s counsel pointed out that this statement in Terry’s declaration was false because, among other consideration, the Note Transfer reflected a commitment by a Highland entity to pay Acis upon demand up to $2 million in legal expenses and an additional $1 million in administrative expenses. Thus, in his 303(f) Motion, Terry has been forced to change his tune that the Note Transfer was a fraudulent transfer based upon his “personal knowledge” that Acis received “no consideration” for the transfer to a statement that “upon information and belief” Acis did not receive “sufficient consideration” for the transfer. The sworn statement in Terry’s January 23 declaration is just one of many misleading and false statements that Terry has made and Acis intends to bring to light in its cross-examination of him at the hearing on his 303(f) Motion.

Transaction does not close on February 13, it will never close and will cause innocent third party investors to lose tens of millions of dollars.

15. As is detailed herein, Acis's interest in the Transaction is limited to the ministerial assignment of the CMA and not a transfer of millions of dollars of assets of Acis—as Terry suggests is happening. Moreover, Terry's requested relief is an exercise in futility because whether or not the Transaction closes Terry will be in same position. Either the Transaction goes forward or CLO-3 will liquidate. In either case, Acis no longer will manager CLO-3 and the CMA will have no value. However, if CLO-3 liquidates, the third-party investors to whom Acis owes a fiduciary duty stand to lose tens of millions of dollars. Preventing the Transaction therefore would create no additional value for Acis, while creating substantial damages for the investors and risk of claims by them against Acis (and Terry).

16. Because Section 303(f) of the Bankruptcy Code would have allowed Acis to complete the closing of the $420 Million CLO-3 Reissue Transaction, notwithstanding the Involuntary Petitions, Terry compounded his ill-conceived litigation strategy in filing the Involuntary Petitions by filing the 303(f) Motion, which seeks to impose (before an order for relief is entered and on the strength of Involuntary Petitions which are deficient on their face) the requirements of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code. For the reasons set forth below, the 303(f) Motion should be denied.

II. HISTORICAL BACKGROUND<sup>3</sup>

A. Acis, Highland, and the CLO Structure

17. Highland is in the business of putting together and managing collateralized loan obligations (“CLOs”). It is one of the primary players in the CLO industry. A CLO is a legal entity that owns a basket of loans, which are managed by a collateral manager (the “Collateral Manager”). The Collateral Manager buys loans into, or sells them out of, the basket. The CLO has its own bondholders (lenders to the CLO) (“Bondholders”), and its own equity holders (“Equity Holders”).

18. Acis LP is the Collateral Manager for CLO-3 as well as four other distinct CLOs. Acis has absolutely no economic interest in any of the CLOs, which includes CLO-3 and the $420 million in loans that CLO-3 holds. Rather, Acis, as Collateral Manager, provides services to the CLO and is compensated for its services in accordance with the Collateral Management Agreement or CMA. Exhibit No. 3, hereto. The duties and obligations Acis owes CLO-3, in its capacity as Collateral Manager, are governed by the CMA. Among other things, Acis’s duties as Collateral Manager include: supervising and directing the investment and reinvestment of CLO assets; monitoring the CLO assets and providing to the Issuer (the CLO) certain reports, schedules, and other data; and directing an optional redemption under the Indenture on behalf of the Issuer. CMA § 3. Additionally, Acis is obligated to “use commercially reasonable efforts to ensure that no action is taken by it” that would materially and adversely affect the Issuer.” CMA § 8.

<sup>3</sup> The facts and statements herein will be supported by testimony and evidence presented at the hearing on the 303(f) Motion.

19. Because Acis has no employees it does not and cannot provide any services directly to the CLOs as required by the CMAs. However, the CMA allows Acis to contract with third parties to provide these services, which Acis has done. Specifically, Acis has entered into several agreements with other Highland affiliates to provide the required services. In one such agreement, a Highland affiliate provides “front-office” services that include the buying and selling of the loans that comprise the CLO (the “Sub-Advisory Agreement”). Pursuant to the Sub-Advisory Agreement, Highland provides to Acis, among other things, the following services: “mak[ing] recommendations to [Acis] . . . as to the general composition and allocation of the Portfolio . . . including recommendations as to the specific loans and other assets to be purchased, retained or sold”; “plac[ing] orders with respect to, and arrang[ing] for, any investment by or on behalf of [an] Account”; “identify[ing], evaluat[ing], recommend[ing] to [Acis] . . . the structure and/or terms of investment opportunities within the specific investment strategy of [Acis]”; “provid[ing] information to [Acis] . . . regarding any investments to facilitate the monitoring and servicing of such investments”; and “assist[ing] and advis[ing] [Acis] . . . with respect to credit functions including, but not limited to, credit analysis and market research and analysis.” Sub-Advisory Agreement § 1(b). Exhibit No. 4, hereto. The Sub-Advisory Agreement “shall terminate automatically with respect to any Management Agreement on the date on which (i) such Management Agreement has been terminated . . . or (ii) [Acis] is no longer acting as portfolio manager . . . whether due to removal, resignation or assignment.” Id. § 6(b).

20. In another agreement, a Highland affiliate provides “back-office” services that include the accounting, legal, and other administrative functions necessary in servicing the loans (the “Shared Services Agreement”). Under the Shared Services Agreement, Highland provides to Acis essential services, including: “[a]ssistance and advice with respect to back- and middle-office functions including, but not limited to, accounting, payments, operations, technology and finance”; “[a]ssistance and advice with respect to legal issues, compliance support and implementation and general risk analysis”; “access to marketing team representatives to assist with the marketing of [Acis]”; “[a]ssistance relating to any reporting [Acis] is required to make”; and “[t]he provision of office space, information technology services and equipment, infrastructure and other related services requested or utilized by [Acis].” Shared Services Agreement § 2.02. Exhibit No. 5. Though these services are essential to Acis’s capacity to serve as Collateral Manager, “[e]ither party may terminate [the Shared Services] Agreement at any time upon at least thirty (30) days’ written notice to the other.” Id. § 7.01 (emphasis added).

21. The Highland affiliates have notified Acis that they no longer intend to provide services to Acis pursuant either to the Sub-Advisory Agreement or Shared Services Agreement for CLO-3. Thus, even if the Transaction did not close, that would leave Acis unable to provide the services it is required to provide as Collateral Manager, which failure constitutes a basis for removing Acis as collateral manager and terminating the CMA on 30 days’ notice. See CMA § 15(g) (CMA may be terminated and Acis may be removed as Collateral Manager upon 30 days’ notice due to “the inability of [Acis] to perform its duties hereunder in accordance with the standard of care specified herein due to the termination of the Service Agreements [defined as the Shared Services Agreement and Sub-Advisory Agreement].” Exhibit No. 3.

22. Terry was an employee of Highland from 2005 until June 2016 when Highland terminated Terry for cause. Terry was integrally involved in the Acis CLOs, having launched the CLOs, set up their structure, and serving as portfolio manager for several years.

23. Highland helped put together six CLOs bearing the Acis name from 2013 until 2015. These are named Acis CLO-I through Acis CLO-6. These CLOs had loan portfolios ranging in value from around $300 million to $550 million at the time they were initiated.

B. CLO Reissuances Prompted by Falling Interest Rates

24. The loans held by the CLO pay cash when the borrowers from the CLO pay interest and principal on the loans. The borrowers send their payments to the CLO Trustee's<sup>4</sup> collections account. Each quarter, the Trustee pays out the cash in the collections account. The quarterly payments, also called the "waterfall," are made according to the priority set out in the CLO's indenture (the CLO's governing document). First, the CLO's Collateral Manager receives a fee. Second, the Bondholders are paid in order of priority: the AAA bondholders are paid first, the AA bondholders are paid, etc., until the most-junior bondholders are paid. Third, the Equity Holders—the last group to be paid in a CLO structure—receive what is left from the collections account after all the management expenses and Bondholders are paid. If there is enough cash left at the bottom of the waterfall, the Equity Holders receive a good return. If there is not enough cash, the Equity Holders may get no money for that quarter.

25. The amount of money paid to the Equity Holders in a given quarter will depend on the amount of cash paid into the CLO by the borrowers, less the amount that has to be paid out to the CLO's Bondholders for that quarter. When loan interest rates are high in the market, the borrowers pay more cash into the CLO and the Equity Holders receive a good return each quarter. CLOs created in calendar year 2014, including CLO-3, were issued when interest rates were higher than they are today. Given these lower interest rates Borrowers have refinanced their loans to lower interest rates. (This is no different than a homeowner taking advantage of lower interest rates to refinance their home, which would result in the lender receiving reduced principal and interest payments). As a result, the borrowers pay less cash into the CLO each quarter than the prior quarter. This is what is currently happening with CLO-3.

26. However, the amount owed to the Bondholders does not change with interest rates. Rather, it is fixed by the indenture (the agreement under which the Bondholders loan money to the CLO), so that amount paid to the Bondholders remains constant. Therefore, as interest rates fall, there is less, and potentially no money left for the Equity Holders at the end of each quarter. The CLO industry has solved this problem by restructuring currently-existing CLOs, called a “reissue.” The reissued CLO will pay lower interest rates to the CLO’s Bondholders. This reduces the cash the CLO must pay out each quarter to the Bondholders, leaving more cash available to pay to the Equity Holders. As loan interest rates fall, a CLO must reissue or its Equity Holders will get no more return on their CLO equity-holdings. Last year, 125 CLOs reissued for a total of $62 billion.<sup>5</sup> One such transaction involved Acis CLO-2 refinancing $192 million of its loans in April 2017. This reissue or refinancing trend has continued in 2018 with 19 CLOs reissuing for a total of $10 billion in transactions. Id.

27. In addition to doing a reissuance of the CLO, another option available to Equity Holders who are dissatisfied with reduced payments that they are receiving in an era of lower interest rates is to shut down the CLO. Pursuant to the CLO’s indenture, the Equity Holders have the right to “call” the CLO, which means to demand that the CLO sell its basket of loans into the market, distribute the remaining proceeds in one, final waterfall, and then cease operations. When a CLO is called, the loans must be liquidated on the open market within a set period of time, usually between one and four weeks. Though the Equity Holders often realize a substantial loss in this process, it is better than leaving their money in an investment that pays little or no returns for years to come. (Each CLO has a finite life after which it automatically terminates. In the case of CLO-3, it terminates in 2026). Acis CLO-2014-C Indenture at §1.1, Def. Payment Date, p44, and §2.7(e) re: Final Payment Date, and §9.5, re: surrender of Notes. Exhibit 7.

28. A Collateral Manager only receives management fees for as long as the CLO operates. The Collateral Manager has no control over when a CLO is reissued or called. Instead, the Collateral Manager must follow the directions of the Bondholders and the Equity Holders to whom it owes a fiduciary duty. Once the decision to either reissue or call a CLO has been made, the Collateral Manager is duty-bound to undertake all necessary actions to effectuate the directed outcome. After a CLO is called, the Collateral Manager no longer will get any management fees. Moreover, regardless of whether a CLO is reissued or called, the Collateral Manager does not receive any compensation relating to the reissuance.

C. The Planned Reissuance of CLO-3

29. CLO-3 (Acis CLO 2014-3, Ltd.) was created on February 1, 2014 and terminates on February 1, 2026. CLO-3 owns a basket of loans valued at $420 million, including loans to Delta Airlines, Dunkin Donuts, and Tribune Media. CLO-3's Bondholders and Equity Holders own the economic interest in this $420 million basket of loans. CLO-3's Bondholders include public pension funds, insurance companies, and banks. The Equity Holder of CLO-3 is Acis

Loan Funding, Ltd. (“ALF”),<sup>6</sup> which in turn is owned by two entities: a charitable foundation and a third-party private firm (collectively, the “CLO-3 Equity Holders”).

30. When CLO-3 was created, its basket of loans had an average interest rate of 4.59%, resulting in a quarterly waterfall payment of approximately $2 million to the CLO-3 Equity Holders. However, in recent years, the borrowers on these loans have been refinancing to a lower average interest rate (3.21%). This has resulted in falling distributions to the CLO-3 Equity Holders for each quarter. The returns to the CLO-3 Equity Holders have been as follows: $1.4 million in the first quarter of 2017, $1.36 million in the second quarter, $875,000 in the third quarter, and $1.1 million in the last quarter of 2017. The quarterly payment for the first quarter of 2018 is $470,000, and the CLO-3 Equity Holders are expected to receive no distributions by the next waterfall, scheduled for May 2018. Like other similarly-situated CLOs, CLO-3 either needed to be reissued or called to protect the CLO-3 Equity Holders’ interests.<sup>7</sup>

31. Starting in May 2017, CLO-3 started the reissuance process on behalf of its Equity Holders. Typically, the most difficult investors to sign up are the equity holders. As previously explained, the equity is the riskiest investment because it is last in line for payment under the CLO waterfall and faces the prospect of receiving reduced or no payments (which is expected to happen with the May 2018 quarterly payment). In May 2017, a private equity firm

expressed an interest in making a $150 million investment in ALF (the “$150 Million Equity Investor”). ALF was the investment vehicle used for the various Acis CLOs, including CLO-3. However, one of the conditions demanded by the $150 Million Equity Investor in making its investment was that ALF would instruct the reissuance of certain CLOs, including CLO-3 and would sever any continuing connection that Acis had with the CLOs, including removing it as Collateral Manager. ALF issued this instruction requested by the $150 Million Equity Investor on October 6, 2017 (two weeks prior to the arbitration award).<sup>8</sup>

32. An investment bank was required to be engaged in connection with the contemplated reissuance transaction. The investment bank’s responsibilities included securing new equity investors and new bondholders. Goldman Sachs was the first investment bank that was approached in connection with the reissue of CLO-3. Goldman Sachs recommended that all the CLOs be “called” and that the CLOs start with a fresh slate. Goldman Sachs also unambiguously communicated that Acis could not be the Collateral Manager following the reissuance of the CLOs because of Acis’ now toxic public image after the Terry dispute had so damaged the Acis brand. CLO-3’s Equity Holders agreed. As part of the reissuance, the CMA for CLO-3 would have to be assigned to a new Collateral Manager, in this instance, Highland CLO Management, LLC (the “New Collateral Manager”), another Highland affiliate.

33. Goldman Sachs ultimately dropped out due to the “noise” associated with Terry and the Acis brand. Thereafter, in November 2017, CLO-3 engaged a new investment bank, Mizuho, to undertake the efforts to reissue CLO-3. Mizuho worked to find new Bondholders to invest in the reissued CLO-3. It completed that process on January 26, 2018. On or about January 29, the Bondholders of the reissued CLO-3 agreed to purchase approximately $375 million of new bonds issued by the reissued CLO-3. The $375 million from the purchase of the new bonds would in turn be used to pay-off the old Bondholders in the original CLO-3. Collectively the foregoing process is referred to as the “Reissuance of CLO-3”.

34. At this point in time, the transfer of the CMA from ACIS, LP to the New Collateral Manager, is the sole remaining formality before closing of the Reissuance of CLO-3 can occur.<sup>9</sup> This is the transaction that Terry argues should require compliance with Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, and not be completed by Acis LP in accordance with Section 303(f) of the Bankruptcy Code.

35. But, based on Acis’ fiduciary duty to CLO-3’s Equity Holders, it must execute the transfer.<sup>10</sup> To do otherwise would be to put its interests before those of the CLO-3 Equity Holders. Acis has been instructed to execute the transfer of the CLO-3 Management Agreement to the New Collateral Manager. Holding-up the assignment of the CLO-3 Management Agreement will not result in Acis receiving any more value or funds. Rather, failing to act in the best interest of the CLO subjects Acis to liability to CLO-3, its Bondholders, and its Equity Holders.

<sup>9</sup> The CMA may be assigned by either Acis or CLO-3 if certain requirements are met. Specifically, Acis may not assign any of the management agreements “without the written consent of the Issuer, at least a Majority of the Subordinated Notes . . . and at least a Majority of the Controlling Class.” CMA § 14(a). Likewise, the Issuer may not assign a management agreement “without the prior written consent of [Acis].” Id. § 14(c).

<sup>10</sup> As a registered investment advisor, Acis is bound to act in accordance with the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 (the “IAA”). Under the IAA, it is “unlawful for any investment advisor . . . to engage in any act, practice, or course of business which is fraudulent, deceptive, or manipulative.” IAA § 206. Section 206 has since been interpreted as establishing “a statutory fiduciary duty for investment advisers to act for the benefit of their clients, requiring advisers to exercise the utmost good faith in dealing with clients, to disclose all material facts, and to employ reasonable care to avoid misleading clients.” S.E.C. v. Treadway, 430 F. Supp. 2d 293, 338 (S.D.N.Y. 2006) (internal quotations omitted).

36. Terry completely understands the foregoing reissue process, why it is necessary, and the devastating consequences of the reissuance not closing. Terry launched CLO-3, set up its structure, and managed its portfolio for several years. Moreover, never in the history of the CLO industry has a CLO reissuance progressed to the point of funding, and then not closed. The new Bondholders already have committed to buy $375 million in bonds, the old Bondholders already have been assured they will be paid off, and the CLO-3 Equity Holders already have been assured that their investment will not face liquidation.

37. Knowing this, Terry sought to leverage the situation. On January 24, he filed an application for a TRO to, among other things, prevent Acis from assigning the CMA. The TRO was supported by a declaration from Terry that contained materially misleading statements and omissions, and outright falsehoods. The state court conducted a hearing that resulted in Acis and Terry reaching a short-term agreement that would remain in place until the temporary injunction that was scheduled to be heard within the week. Specifically, Acis agreed in the state court to not transfer the CMAs or remove Acis as manager until the temporary injunction hearing. Acis also informed the state court that the Reissuance of CLO-3 was in progress and, therefore, it was important to have the temporary injunction heard as soon as possible. The temporary injunction hearing was originally scheduled for February 1.

38. On January 29, Terry filed a supplemental TRO, also supported by a declaration from Terry, that Acis "had transferred" management of CLO-3 to a Highland entity. The TRO and Terry's supporting declaration, once again, were false. Acis had not transferred management of CLO-3 to a Highland entity as Acis had agreed not to transfer such rights until the temporary injunction hearing and had honored that agreement.

39. Also, on January 29, Terry filed an application for a turnover order and for appointment of a receiver (the “Application for Receiver”). In the Application for Receiver, Terry made false and unsubstantiated allegations that Acis had fraudulently transferred more than $16 million in assets to affiliated entities after entry of the arbitration award in October 2016. As noted in the Introduction, under paragraph 15 of the CMA, the appointment of a receiver would cause the CMA to be terminated and Acis to be removed as the Collateral Manager, thereby rendering the CMA worthless. Yet, Terry inexplicably asked for the appointment of a receiver as just another litigation tactic designed to sow confusion regardless of the fatal consequences to Terry’s claims, i.e. his supposed attempts to preserve the value of the CMA.

40. At the January 29 hearing, the Court did not make any substantive rulings. Rather, at the request of Acis’s counsel and in light of the scheduled closing of the Reissuance of CLO-3 on February 1, the state court moved the temporary injunction hearing up from February 1 to January 31 to ensure that the hearing would take place prior to the scheduled February 1 closing. Also, the Court reconfirmed its prior orders that Terry would supply an expert report by noon on January 30 and that both Terry and his expert would appear for deposition for up to two hours’ each prior to the temporary injunction hearing that had been rescheduled for January 31 at 2:00 p.m.

41. On January 30, Terry provided his expert report as ordered. Later that day, Terry withdrew his expert, which resulted in the expert deposition being called off. However, Terry’s deposition remained scheduled to take place at 10:00 a.m. on January 31, the day of the temporary injunction hearing. Then, out of the blue and with no advance notice, Terry filed his Involuntary Petitions against Acis at midnight on January 30 and filed a “suggestion of bankruptcy” with the state court. Terry’s counsel advised that in light of the bankruptcy filings that Terry would not appear for his court-ordered deposition on January 31 and would not appear at the temporary injunction hearing. In response, on January 31, Acis filed a motion to vacate the agreed order that the parties had entered on January 24 and advised Terry that Acis intended to present the motion to vacate to the state court at the 2:00 p.m. hearing.

42. The parties appeared at the 2:00 p.m. hearing on January 31. During the middle of argument, Judge Goldstein announced that Judge Jernigan was on the phone, which resulted in a recess of about one hour as Judge Goldstein took Judge Jernigan’s call. When Judge Goldstein returned to the bench after that call, she announced her view that the filing of the Involuntary Petitions deprived her of jurisdiction to make any further rulings pending action by the Bankruptcy Court.

E. Closing of the Transaction is rescheduled from February 1 to February 13

43. CLO-3 has been able to move the closing date for the Transaction from February 1 to February 13. However, this is a short-term fix that demands a permanent solution. The very pendency of these involuntary cases severely impacts CLO-3’s ability to ensure that all of the constituent parties remain committed to the transaction. Each day that passes creates greater risk for this $420 million transaction. The new Bondholders will grow nervous about the unprecedented delay. The ratings agencies, law firms offering opinion letters, and various trustees have refused to act in the shadow of a potential bankruptcy stay. Indeed, for the Transaction to go forward on February 13, it must “price” five business days in advance, on February 8; and the pendency of these Involuntary cases likely will prevent pricing – which will likely quash the Transaction before the February 13th closing date. And the longer the Transaction waits, the more likely that changing market conditions, such last Friday's precipitous stock market fall, will cause parties to reconsider if they want to enter into the Transaction at the previously negotiated prices. Absent the denial of the 303(f) Motion and the granting of the Motions to Dismiss,<sup>11</sup> the Reissuance of CLO-3 may never close,<sup>12</sup> to the detriment of the CLO-3 Equity Holders and Bondholders to whom Acis owes a fiduciary duty.<sup>13</sup> However, it is beyond question if the assignment of the CMA is not executed prior to February 13, CLO-3 will be called, its basket of loans liquidated, and the CLO-3 Equity Holders and other parties will incur tens of millions of dollars in losses.

44. The CLO-3 Indenture provides that the Equity Holders may "call"—i.e., force the liquidation of—CLO-3 through an optional redemption of the outstanding notes. Specifically, a majority of the Equity Holders may initiate an optional redemption "on any Business Day after the Non-Call Period." CLO-3 Indenture § 9.2(a). Exhibit No. 7. The Non-Call Period for CLO-3 ended in February 2016. CLO-3 Indenture § 1.1. Exhibit No. 7. After being notified of an optional redemption, "the Portfolio Manager [Acis] in its sole discretion shall direct the sale (and the manner thereof) of all or part of the Collateral Obligations and other Assets." Id. § 9.2(b).

45. Even if Acis subsequently escapes bankruptcy and the appointment of a receiver, the Equity Holders in CLO-3 will nonetheless issue an optional redemption, thereby liquidating

<sup>11</sup> In connection with the Motions to Expedite the Hearing on the Motions to Dismiss (which will be considered by the Court current with the 303(f) Motion), Acis is filing a Supplemental Brief, in support of the expedited consideration. As noted therein, it is not enough to simply deny the 303(f) Motion, thus permitting Acis to continue operations, unrestricted by Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code, until an Order for Relief is entered or the Involuntary Cases are dismissed, as, and most important, the mere existence of the Involuntary Petitions against Acis is interfering with and causing damage to all of the CLO's managed by Acis.

all CLO-3 assets. Under such a scenario, the CMA will automatically terminate upon “the liquidation of the Assets and the final distribution of the proceeds of such liquidation to the Holders.” CMA § 13(a)(ii).

46. What appears to be lost on Terry is that regardless of whether the Reissuance of CLO-3 occurs, Acis’s fate is sealed. In short order, Acis will no longer be the Collateral Manager for CLO-3. Either the Collateral Management Agreement will be transferred pursuant to a reissuance or it will expire when CLO-3 is called and liquidated.

47. Furthermore, and as previously discussed, even if Acis is prohibited from transferring the Collateral Management Agreement, Acis will nonetheless be terminated as Collateral Manager due to (1) the bankruptcy filing, (2) a receivership requested by Terry in state court, or (3) Acis’s inability to provide management services as a result of the Highland Servicers exercising their contractual right to refuse to continue to provide services to Acis under the Sub-Advisory Agreement and Shares Services Agreement. The delay or even prevention of the assignment of the CMA to the New Collateral Manager will not result in more assets owned by Acis, and, in fact, will increase the claims against Acis (not to mention the forthcoming claims against Terry) for its breach of fiduciary duties owed to CLO-3, its Bondholders and the CLO-3 Equity Holders.

III. OBJECTIONS TO THE 303(f) MOTION

48. The relief Terry seeks in the 303(f) Motion has no basis in law or fact and is nothing more than the latest maneuver in his scheme to exert pressure on Acis (and Highland) by jeopardizing the closing of the Reissuance of CLO-3.

49. As set forth in the Motions to Dismiss, Terry has improperly invoked the jurisdiction of this Court and did so in bad faith. Allowing Terry to compound those abuses by imposing on Acis the requirements of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code would not only be inequitable, but also has the potential to cause millions of dollars of damage to multiple parties, including creditors of Acis or affiliates thereof. Moreover, it would be inappropriate for this Court to condone such abuses by modifying Section 303(f) before this Court has considered the propriety of Acis being subject to Title 11 cases.

50. Section 303(f) provides:

“Notwithstanding Section 363 of [the Bankruptcy Code,] except to the extent that the court orders otherwise, and until an order for relief in the case, any business of the debtor may continue to operate, and the debtor may continue to use, acquire, or dispose of property as if an involuntary case concerning the debtor had not been commenced.”

51. In the Texas Rangers case the Court confirmed the scope and rationale of Section 303(f) by quoting from Consolidated Partners Inv. Co. v. Lake, 152 B.R. 485, 490 (Bankr. N.D. Ohio 1993):

By virtue of § 303(f), during the gap period, the Debtor was authorized to continue such operations until an order for relief was entered as though no involuntary petition had been filed. The rationale for allowing the debtor to operate during the involuntary gap period is that prior to the entry of an order for relief, the subject of an involuntary petition should not be adversely affected by the case.”

In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 434 B.R. 393 ( Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2010).

52. In the 303(f) Motion, Terry cites two cases for the proposition that “courts have imposed restrictions on an involuntary gap debtor’s operations to preserve and protect assets;

especially where there is a concern that a debtor may dispose of assets for less than fair value or dismantle a business for the private gain of its principals.” 303(f) Motion, at ¶¶ 18-19; In re Texas Rangers Baseball Partners, 434 B.R. 393 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2010); Wilson v. Davis (In re Wilson), 62 B.R. 42 (E.D. Tenn. 1985).

53. Terry’s characterization and attempts to analogize the facts of those cases is unavailing. First, in the Wilson case, the court did not modify Section 303(f), but simply observed that because Section 303 permits an involuntary debtor to use, acquire, or dispose of property through the time the order for relief is entered (as opposed to through the date of the involuntary filing, which the appellee had argued), that the proper date for determining the scope of an involuntary debtor’s exempt property was the date on which an order for relief was entered. Id. at 45-46.

54. In Texas Rangers the Court abrogated Section 303(f), but, the main reason for doing so was that the alleged debtors’ sole asset was itself a debtor in a voluntary chapter 11 case and that it was appropriate to impose on the involuntary debtors the same fiduciary duties as a debtor in possession because of such ownership structure. 434 B.R. at 404-405. Indeed, the Court acknowledged that section 303(f) generally permits an involuntary debtor to “proceed without court oversight[,] . . . so long as [its] conduct can be justified under the business judgment rule.” Id. at 405. Moreover, as acknowledged by Terry, the Court’s conclusion was very much “based on the facts and circumstances of the case.” 303(f) Motion, at ¶ 19.

55. The Texas Rangers Court was further concerned that the alleged debtors were not operating consistent with the fiduciary duties of a debtor-in-possession in the gap period. Thus, the Court imposed the obligations of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code on the alleged debtors.

Terry makes no comparison of the facts of that case to the facts of this matter in support of his 303(f) Motion – and he cannot.

56. Here, Acis is operating consistent with both Acis’s fiduciary duties and the industry trend of almost 140 CLO reissuances. As noted above, blocking the Transaction benefits neither Acis nor its creditors. In fact, the liabilities undertaken from a failure to comply will surely injure Acis, and its creditors. Further, to cause the assertion of claims against Acis is contrary to its fiduciary duties to its creditors and third parties.

57. In connection with the assignment of the CMA as part and parcel of the Reissuance of CLO-3, there is no evidence to suggest that Acis is not acting in a fashion consistent with the fiduciary responsibilities of a debtor-in-possession (were Acis to become debtors-in-possession at a later date). Rather, the unsupported allegations by Terry of pre-petition transactions undertaken by Acis fail to demonstrate in any regard that the assignment of the CMA to complete the Reissuance of CLO-3 is inappropriate.

58. As demonstrated above, Acis is, by assigning the CMA to the New Collateral Manager, performing exactly as is required of it and is complying with its fiduciary duties to CLO-3. To do otherwise would be a breach of its fiduciary duties as well as cause significant damage to innocent third parties, all of which may assert claims against Acis. Thus, by complying with its fiduciary duties to CLO-3, Acis is also complying with its fiduciary duties to its creditors (if Acis were to become debtors-in-possession).

59. The drastic remedy of imposing upon Acis obligations to comply with Section 363 during the gap period makes no sense when what is being undertaken by Acis is exactly what is in the best interests of all interested parties.

B. Terry’s “Fraudulent Transfer” Argument is Based on an Incorrect Understanding of the CMA and the Law

60. Boiled down to its essence, Terry’s “fraudulent transfer” argument asserts the following positions: (i) the CMA (the management agreement by which Acis manages CLO-3) is a valuable asset of Acis; (ii) Acis proposes to transfer that valuable asset to the New Collateral Manager; and (iii) the New Collateral Manager is not providing anything to Acis in exchange for the transfer of the CMA. Thus, Terry argues, the transfer of the CMA eliminates a valuable asset of Acis for no consideration.

61. The flaws in Terry’s “fraudulent transfer” argument, however, are fatal. First, the CMA has no value, as Acis’s operation thereunder results in a loss to Acis (see ¶ 4, infra). Second, the contractual arrangement between Acis and CLO-3 (i.e., the CMA), which has been in place since 2014, provides, among other things, that Acis will perform various services, be compensated for those services, and, most relevant here, undertake actions as instructed by CLO-3, including, in this instance, assign the contract (the CMA). Simply put, the provisions of the CMA requiring the Collateral Manager (Acis) to perform as instructed – in this instance to transfer the CMA, is a negotiated contractual obligation among Acis and CLO-3 that has nothing to do with the transferee (i.e., the New Collateral Manager). From the outset of the relationship among Acis and CLO-3, Acis has performed in accordance with its fiduciary duties to the CLO, its Equity Holders and its Bondholders; and has been compensated all along by CLO-3 for such performance. It is not being instructed to make the assignment – which it must do consistent with its fiduciary duties.

62. The four year long relationship among Acis and CLO-3 has included performance of the back and forth obligations of the parties, which has resulted in consideration flowing to and among the parties. Thus, Acis has already been compensated in anticipation of performing its instructed obligations including assigning the CMA in further of the Transactions. There is no consideration or value flowing from Acis to the New Collateral Manager. Rather, Acis continues to perform under the terms of its existing contract (i.e., the CMA) by making the assignment as instructed CLO-3.

63. Accordingly, Terry's suggestion that the New Collateral Manager is receiving a fraudulent transfer, and that Acis is making a fraudulent transfer, is not correct. Rather, Acis simply is performing in accordance with a contractual obligation, long-ago entered into, and for which it has been, and continues to be, compensated. The transfer is not anything more than Acis's compliance with the terms of a contract – the CMA. The foregoing analysis debunks any assertion that the assignment of the CMA, a ministerial act to be performed by Acis as part and of the Reissuance of CLO-3, is a fraudulent transfer.

C. The Involuntary Petitions are Factually Defective

64. As described in detail in the Motions to Dismiss, the Involuntary Petitions are subject to dismissal because they are not supported by the requisite number of creditors needed to commence an involuntary chapter 7 case under Section 303 of the Bankruptcy Code. Section 303(b)(1) of the Bankruptcy Code states, in relevant part:

An involuntary case against a person is commenced by the filing with the bankruptcy court of a petition under chapter 7 or 11 of this title—

(1) by three or more entities, each of which is either a holder of a claim against such person that is not contingent as to liability or the subject of a bona fide dispute as to liability or amount, or an indenture trustee representing such a holder, if such noncontingent, undisputed claims aggregate at least $15,775 more than the value of any lien on property of the debtor securing such claims held by the holders of such claims;

(2) if there are fewer than 12 such holders, excluding any employee or insider of such person and any transferee of a transfer that is voidable under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, or 724 (a) of this title, by one or more of such holders that hold in the aggregate at least $15,775 of such claims . . . .

11 U.S.C. § 303(b).

65. Section 303(b) contains “very specific requirements concerning the number of entities that are necessary to commence an involuntary filing.” 2 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 303.14 (16th rev. ed. 2013). Those requirements are based on the policy of preventing one or more “recalcitrant creditors” from filing an involuntary case to harass a debtor. Id.

66. Perhaps the most basic of all requirements is that section 303(b)(1) requires that when a debtor has twelve or more creditors, an involuntary case may be commenced only by three or more entities. See In re Tichy Elec. Co., Inc., 332 B.R. 364, 372-73 (Bankr. N.D. Iowa 2005) (citations omitted); Sipple v. Atwood (In re Atwood), 124 B.R. 402, 406 (S.D. Ga. 1991) (“If there are twelve or more qualifying claims, excluding voidable claims, the debtor cannot be forced into involuntary bankruptcy by fewer than three of the qualifying creditors.”). Where a debtor has twelve or more creditors and there are less than three petitioning creditors, the case must be dismissed—section 303(b)(1) leaves no room for Court discretion.

67. Terry has the burden of demonstrating that he has satisfied the numerosity requirement under section 303(b) of the Bankruptcy Code. Pleas Doyle & Assocs. v. James Plaza Joint Venture (In re James Plaza Joint Venture), 67 B.R. 445, 448 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1986) (“It is plaintiffs’ burden to demonstrate the number of creditors of [the] debtor’s estate.”); In re Charon, 94 B.R. 403, 405-06 (Bankr. E.D. Va. 1988) (petitioner has “burden of proving that it satisfied the jurisdictional requirements of § 303(b)"); 2 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 303.15, at 76 (15th ed. 1988) (“When fewer than three creditors file an involuntary petition, the alleged debtor has the burden to raise the issue that it has 12 or more creditors by filing a list pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 1003(b). The petitioning creditor then has the burden to show that the alleged debtor actually has fewer than 12.”). Terry cannot do so.

68. Here, it is beyond dispute that Acis has twelve or more creditors. Ironically, substantially all of Acis’s creditors became creditors because of the pending state court action between Terry and Acis. Specifically, Acis’s creditors include numerous law firms, professionals, and experts, which are creditors of Acis LP and also creditors of Acis GP due to its role as the general partner. Acis has filed with this Court a statement pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 1003(b) listing such creditors. See Case No. 18-30264-SGJ7, Docket No. 7; Case No. 18-30265-SGJ7, Docket No. 7. Exhibit No. 13. Thus, Acis has more than twelve creditors, making clear that three creditors are required to force Acis into bankruptcy pursuant to section 303(b)(1).<sup>14</sup>

69. Based on the foregoing, the Involuntary Petitions lack the statutorily required number of petitioning creditors and therefore are subject to dismissal because they are factually defective.

70. The significance of the Motion to Dismiss cannot be over emphasized. As the fatal flaw in the Involuntary Petitions – only one creditor filed the Involuntary Petitions – is so obvious, this Court should not consider the 303(f) Motion, until and unless consideration has been given to the Dismissal Motion.<sup>15</sup>

<sup>14</sup> In addition to filing the 1003(b) Notice, Acis has provided to Terry copies of the invoices, statements and other documents evidencing and supporting each of the creditors’ asserted claims. In addition, Acis also offered to present a witness to provide a deposition (including the offer of a deposition to be conducted over the just-concluded weekend) to testify to the creditors and their claims. Terry failed to respond to this offer.

<sup>15</sup> While the Motion to Expedite the Court’s consideration of the Motions to Dismiss is being considered concurrently with the Court’s consideration of the 303(f) Motion, Acis asserts that Dismissal of the Involuntary Petitions should be heard in advance of the 303(f) Motion. Were the blatant disagreement and failure to comply with Section 303(b) not as obvious as it is, this Court might consider the 303(f) Motion in advance of the Motions to

D. The 303(f) Motion is a Blatant Attempt to Pressure Acis by Threatening the Reissuance of CLO-3, in Contravention of the Intent Underlying the Bankruptcy Code’s Involuntary Provisions.

71. Terry’s bad faith litigation strategy is clear—he intends to exert pressure on Acis (and Highland) by jeopardizing the Reissuance of CLO-3. In furtherance of that ill-conceived objective, Terry filed the 303(f) Motion, which seeks to impose the requirements of Section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code before there has been an adjudication on the merits of the propriety or validity of the Involuntary Petitions. Granting the relief requested would run completely counter to the balance Congress attempted to strike in the Bankruptcy Code’s involuntary bankruptcy provisions.

72. The filing of an involuntary petition is a drastic remedy. See Credit Union Liquidity Servs., L.L.C. v. Green Hills Dev. Co., L.L.C. (In re Green Hills Dev. Co., L.L.C.), 741 F.3d 651, 655 (5th Cir. 2014). In recognition of this fact, “Congress limited the circumstances in which creditors may force a debtor into such a proceeding.” Id. (citing, inter alia, 30 Cong. Rec. S7618 (daily ed. June 19, 1984)); see In re Landmark Distribs., Inc., 189 B.R. 290, 306 (Bankr. D.N.J. 1995) (“The filing of an involuntary petition by a creditor must be carefully scrutinized by the Court because such an action is extreme in nature and carries with it serious consequences to the alleged debtor, examples of which include loss of credit standing, interference with general business affairs and public embarrassment.”) (citations omitted). Congress created the Bankruptcy Code to serve “as a shield for debtors, not a sword for creditors,” In re R.N. Salem Corp., 29 B.R. 424, 429 (S.D. Ohio 1983), and even the good-faith filing of an involuntary petition creates onerous circumstances for an alleged debtor. Schmid v.

Yorke (In re Reid), 773 F.2d 945, 946 (7th Cir. 1985) (the filing of an involuntary petition is “an extreme remedy with serious consequences to the alleged debtor”) (citations omitted).

73. Balancing the harshness of the possibility of an entity being put into bankruptcy against its will is the protection afforded by Section 303(f) of the Bankruptcy Code. Recognizing that an alleged debtor should be afforded due process and its day in Court before being required to abide the restrictions the Bankruptcy Code imposes on its operations, Section 303(f) allows an alleged debtor to operate free of those restrictions pending an adjudication of the involuntary petition. The presumption that an alleged debtor should be free to operate its business without restriction pending adjudication of an order for relief is even more critical when the petitioning creditor, like Terry here, has acted alone in an attempt to gain an improper tactical advantage in a longstanding two-party dispute in state court.

74. As set forth in the Motion to Dismiss, the Involuntary Petitions are blatant examples of forum shopping. Terry filed the Involuntary Petitions literally on the eve on an evidentiary hearing in the state court that Terry knew would have resulted in Acis being free to close the Reissuance of CLO-3. Rather than participate in that hearing (and sit for the deposition that was to precede that hearing), Terry attempted a “Hail Mary pass” and precipitously attempted to transfer the venue of his dispute with Acis to this Court. Having done so, Terry should be forced to await the adjudication of the merits of the Involuntary Petitions (already the subject of the Motions to Dismiss, filed less than 24 hours after the Involuntary Petitions themselves) before being granted relief that is akin to a pre-determination that the Acis entities should be adjudicated debtors. To hold otherwise would offend the balancing Congress built into Section 303 and would offend notions of equity and due process.<sup>16</sup>

<sup>16</sup> As the Motions to Dismiss demonstrate, Acis asserts that the Involuntary Petitions suffer from fatal flaws, both because the numerosity requirement of Section 303(b)(1) is not met and because the filings were made in bad faith. At a minimum, the relief Terry seeks in the 303(f) Motion should await this Court’s adjudication of the Motions to Dismiss. At most, the 303(f) Motion should be denied, without prejudice to Terry’s right to seek the same relief if these involuntary cases proceed beyond Acis’ Motions to Dismiss.

Colloquy

1 MS. PATEL: -- I haven't put on --

2 THE COURT: You may have a witness on that if it --

3 MS. PATEL: I don't know what their evidence --

4 THE COURT: Okay.

5 MS. PATEL: -- is going to be, so I may very well,
6 yes.

7 THE COURT: All right. Well, then let's go to the
8 other side. To expedite things, I think I made clear but
9 maybe I didn't make clear, Mr. Cruciani, your witness can be 10 combined testimony in response to the 303(f) as well in
11 support of your motion to expedite. And so --

12 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor. So Mr.
13 Ellington will testify to both.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. CRUCIANI: As relates to the motion to expedite,
16 the actual substantive testimony on our motion to dismiss will
17 be primarily Mr. Leventon; I understand that was kind of the 18 next step, but that's not something we'll be doing for this
19 particular motion, right?

20 THE COURT: Correct.

21 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

22 THE COURT: Um-hum.

23 MR. CRUCIANI: Yes, ma'am.

24 THE COURT: All right. So it's Mr. Ellington? Okay,
25 welcome. If you could approach the witness stand.

Scott Ellington - Direct

54

1 All right, please raise your right hand.

2 (Witness sworn)

3 THE COURT: All right, please take a seat.

4 THE WITNESS: Thank you.

5 THE CLERK: I will get them and come back here.

6 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

7 THE CLERK: It's very directional.

8 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay. Thank you, ma'am.

9 DIRECT EXAMINATION

10 BY MR. CRUCIANI:

11 Q. Please state your name for the record.

12 A. Scott Ellington.

13 Q. What is your position, Mr. Ellington?

14 A. I am the general counsel, chief legal officer, and
15 partner at Highland Capital Management, L.P.

16 Q. Okay. I'd like to start with just a few things we just 17 heard from Mr. Terry.

18 A. Okay.

19 MR. CRUCIANI: Let's put up, Omar, slide 4, please.

20 Q. Recall Mr. Terry just testified that the reason Acis is 21 in this structure was due to the toxic brand name of Highland
22 back in the 2012 time period?

23 A. Yes, I do.

24 Q. Now, fast-forward; today. What is, based on your
25 dealings with the marketplace, the nature of the Acis brand

1 today --

2 MR. SHAW: Your Honor, I'm going to object on
3 foundation. If he's going to testify that his knowledge
4 regarding the perception is based upon hearsay, people are
5 telling him what the perception of Acis is, it's rank hearsay.
6 So if the basis is what others are telling him, it's hearsay
7 and it's not admissible; there's no exception to that. So --

8 MR. CRUCIANI: It's not offered to prove the truth of
9 the matter asserted. Doesn't matter whether they in their
10 heart of hearts believe it. It's just what's been
11 communicated and how they respond to that.

12 THE COURT: Okay --

13 MR. SHAW: It's --

14 THE COURT: -- overruled.

15 MR. CRUCIANI: Okay.

16 THE COURT: I'll allow it.

17 Q. Do you deal with market participants in the CLO industry?

18 A. Yes.

19 Q. Give us a general overview of the nature of those
20 dealings

21 A. Especially around these transactions, I've dealt directly
22 with two investment banks and with the equity holders.

23 Q. Okay. And has the subject of the Acis brand name come up
24 in those discussions?

25 A. Countless times.

1 Q. What has been communicated to you?

2 A. That it is so toxic that it's impossible to sell the
3 bonds with Acis as the manager, that you would not be able to
4 raise the equity and, due to this litigation and allegations
5 that've been in the litigations and the press, by Mr. Terry's
6 actions, that nothing can be associated with the Acis brand
7 and be managed as a CLO or marketed as a CLO.

8 Q. Who has communicated that to you?

9 A. Goldman Sachs, equity holders, large law firms that do
10 structured products, CLO work for a living, and Mizuho.

11 Q. What role was Goldman Sachs slated to have in this case?

12 A. They were the investment banker that was going to
13 refinance these CLOs.

14 Q. Who is the current investment banker?

15 A. Mizuho.

16 Q. Why is Goldman Sachs not the investment banker?

17 A. They dropped out because of the Acis name and dealing
18 with these Acis transactions.

19 Q. How did what you were hearing about the Acis name impact
20 the decision of whether or not Acis would continue as the
21 collateral manager in these ventures?

22 A. The bondholders, the -- and -- existing and purchasing,
23 and the equity holders, existing and new equity holders, said
24 categorically, with absolute certainty, if there's any 25 relation to Acis, the Acis brand, the Acis structure, we have

Scott Ellington - Direct

1 no interest in doing business with you at all.

2 Q. How were these -- how was this new reissue transaction
3 marketed? What was the document that was sent to the
4 investors?

5 A. Was called a circular, and it lays out -- it's
6 essentially a term sheet of how the deal will look.

7 Q. Was there any discussion in the circular about who the
8 collateral manager would be in the new deal?

9 A. Yes.

10 Q. Who was it?

11 A. Highland Capital Loan -- it's that HCLOM -- sorry,
12 there's just so many names; I'd have to look at the chart.

13 Q. A Highland entity?

14 A. A Highland affiliate, correct, yes.

15 Q. Not Acis?

16 A. Correct.

17 Q. Is it important that these offering circulars be
18 accurate?

19 A. They have to be.

20 Q. What are the penalties if they're not?

21 A. Securities fraud, negligent misrep., fraud in the 22 inducement. I mean, it's severe.

23 Q. Okay. And so the information that the investors had --
24 what information did they have at the time they're making
25 their investment? What were they told as to who that

1 investment manager would be?

2 A. It would be a new entity per their request.

3 Q. What would be -- would it be of any concern to you -- and
4 if so, how -- if they changed that after the investment
5 decision was made in part (indiscernible)?

6 A. We'd have to go and redo the circular, go out and
7 resolicit the bond and equity tranches. It -- it would
8 essentially be a recasting of the entire deal, and then it
9 looks like you don't have your ducks in a row. They're more
10 likely to not fix.

11 Q. And then what rights would the new investors have to say,
12 well -- say, now you're telling me there's a new -- Acis is 13 back in the play, what rights would they have in terms of 14 going forward or not?

15 A. Rescission, various breaches, you know, lost
16 relationship, goodwill, brand again. I mean, it's -- it's a
17 whole host of things, probably a lot that I couldn't even
18 think of at the top of my head.

19 Q. Okay. Another thing -- let's go to Exhibit 7, the 20 indenture, paragraph 8.3(e), which is page 164. This is what 21 Mr. Terry and I just got done discussing. He pointed me to
22 this in response to my question whether there was anything in
23 the documents that gave the collateral manager effectively a 24 veto right over the (indiscernible) transaction. Recall that
25 discussion?

1 A. Correct.

2 Q. Bloomberg issued some media publications as well, right?

3 A. Correct.

4 Q. There was a Dealbreaker internet post about the dispute,
5 right?

6 A. I remember that, yes.

7 Q. Right. And this issue with Mr. Terry having recorded
8 while he was an employee of Highland was well known to the
9 market, right?

10 A. I would assume so.

11 Q. So despite the fact that this is common knowledge that 12 Mr. Terry did this, you have Mr. Covitz, who's running Acis in 13 August of 2017, well after all this stuff comes out, saying
14 that Acis still intends to issue new CLOs, right?

15 A. Yes, that was the plan.

16 Q. And Acis is risk-retention-compliant, right?

17 A. Yes.

18 Q. And Acis has been risk-retention-compliant?

19 A. As far as I understand, yes.

20 Q. Yet now, fast forward to October or November of 2017 into 21 the new year in 2018, all of a sudden, this noise about Mr.
22 Terry recording is what creates the toxic nature of the Acis
23 brand; is that right?

24 A. No, I don't think that's -- the timing is right. I think
25 the toxicity was there, but I think the effectuation was

1 actually around this mechanism.

2 Q. You're familiar with the news article that came out in
3 The Wall Street Journal after the award was made public, when
4 Mr. Terry went to confirm that award, right?

5 A. Yes, I do.

6 Q. But one of the things that's changed since Mr. Covitz
7 makes this representation in this document that's posted on
8 Highland's website about Acis' intent to issue new CLOs as 9 Acis and now, is that we've got an arbitration award and we've
10 got a judgment, right?

11 A. And we have third-party investors that said we don't want
12 to be involved in this brand; and their equity is one of the 13 reasons that new CLOs can be launched.

14 Q. I want to follow up on that. Those third-party
15 investors, they never told Highland or Mr. Dondero or you or 16 Mr. Covitz that in order for them to invest that they were
17 going to bar this new entity -- this Highland Cayman entity or 18 the Delaware new Highland CLO entity -- from paying for the
19 transfer of these CMAs, right?

20 A. What do you mean by "paying for the transfers"?

21 Q. Paying some amount of consideration for Acis to transfer
22 the management contract?

23 A. No, they just said we want things to be structured in 24 this way or we're not investing.

25 Q. Right. They didn't say hey, we'll do the deal, but as a

1 condition of doing the deal, we want you to transfer these
2 assets -- this collateral-management agreement from Acis to
3 Acis Cayman; and we don't want you to pay -- we don't want
4 Acis Cayman to pay a dollar for the transfer of that CMA?

5 A. Well, I think there's two questions. I'll try to address
6 them both.

7 It was call the deal and terminate the CMAs or transfer
8 the CMAs. That's question one. So yes, they not only
9 necessitated, they demanded it.

10 How we paid consideration for those transfers to Acis,
11 they didn't have any involvement in it.

12 Q. Right. I mean, again, I may be belaboring the point, but
13 I think it's an important one. These investors' involvement
14 is not an impediment to Acis receiving value in exchange for 15 the transfer of the CMAs?
