I. INTRODUCTION

1. Brought with reluctance, this Motion is the necessary result of the undeniable animus that the Presiding Judge (hereinafter, the "Court") has developed against James Dondero ("Mr. Dondero") and the resulting prejudicial effect of that animus on Mr. Dondero, The Dugaboy Trust, The Get Good Trust (collectively, the "Trusts") and any entity the Court deems connected to him or under his control (collectively, the "Affected Entities").[2] While the Court has presided over many issues in this bankruptcy, numerous adversary proceedings and contested matters involving Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities remain, in which, for the reasons described herein, the Court's impartiality can be reasonably questioned.

2. Importantly, the Court has essentially acknowledged the foundation of this Motion already—that: the Court formed negative opinions of Mr. Dondero in a prior bankruptcy; those opinions have carried into this bankruptcy; and, despite best efforts, the Court has been unable to extricate those opinions from its mind. Moreover, the record in this bankruptcy reflects that the Court's negative opinions of Mr. Dondero have resulted in, if not actual bias against Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities, the undeniable perception of bias against Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities that impair the ability of Mr. Dondero (and the Affected Entities) to preserve their legal rights. Specifically, among other things, the record reflects that the Court has:

[2] The definition of the Affected Entities includes the entities defined as "the Advisors" and "the Retail Funds" below.

(a) repeatedly made statements demonstrating the Court's unfavorable opinions about Mr. Dondero;

(b) declared that Mr. Dondero (and, by implication, the Affected Entities and each of their licensed attorneys) are vexatious litigants based on actions taken by Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities to: (i) defend lawsuits and motions filed against them; (ii) assert valid legal positions; and/or (iii) preserve legal rights, including on appeal;

(c) concluded that any entity the Court deems connected to or controlled by Mr. Dondero (i.e., the Affected Entities) is essentially no more than a tool of Mr. Dondero, without evidence being introduced that the corporate status of these entities should be disregarded or that they constitute a single business enterprise;[3]

(d) summarily and/or preemptively disregarded the testimony of any witness who would testify in favor of Mr. Dondero or any of the Affected Entities, without evidentiary support, as "under [Mr. Dondero's] control" and, if the witness has any connection to Mr. Dondero, per se not credible.

3. At the end of the day, even assuming, arguendo, that the Court's animus toward Mr. Dondero were justified based upon the Court's experience in the Acis Bankruptcy, this Motion would be no less necessary to safeguard the impartiality that Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities are entitled to receive as litigants in these bankruptcy and adversary proceedings—regardless of Mr. Dondero's history with the Court.[4] Consequently, based on the facts stated herein and the trajectory they suggest, the only way to ensure that this required impartiality (and, of equal importance, the public perception of same) exists going forward is through recusal of this Court.

[3] Specifically, the evidentiary record does not reflect, e.g., that: (a) the corporate formalities have been ignored for the entities; (b) their corporate property has not been kept separate and apart; or (c) Mr. Dondero uses the companies for personal purposes.

[4] Notably, the Affected Entities' investment base includes public investors beyond Mr. Dondero.

II. BACKGROUND

A. The risk of prejudice to Mr. Dondero in this Court has been apparent since this Bankruptcy's inception in Delaware, including by Debtor itself.

4. On October 16, 2019, the Debtor in this proceeding, Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or "Debtor"), filed bankruptcy in Delaware (the "Highland Bankruptcy"). Debtor's counsel, Jeff Pomerantz, admitted that the bankruptcy was filed in Delaware in order to give Debtor, including its management, a "fresh start."[5] Shortly thereafter, however, the unsecured creditor's committee (the "UCC") moved to transfer the matter to the Northern District of Texas (the "Motion to Transfer").

5. During the December 2, 2019 hearing on the Motion to Transfer, while the UCC argued that transfer to this Court was appropriate because this Court was further along in the "learning curve" than the Delaware Bankruptcy Court due to this Courts prior presiding over the bankruptcy of Acis Capital Management, L.P. ("Acis") (the "Acis Bankruptcy"),[6] Mr. Pomerantz expressly acknowledged that the UCC's actual motive in seeking transfer to this Court was this Court's pre-existing negative views of Debtor's management, including Mr. Dondero:

> However -- Your Honor pointed to this at the beginning, in mentioning comments about forum-shopping -- the committee and Acis are really being disingenuous, and they have not told you the real reason that they want the case before Judge Jernigan.[7] … And it's not because she's familiar with this debtor's business, this > debtor's assets, or this debtor's liabilities, because she generally is not. It is because she formed negative views regarding certain members of the debtor's management that the committee and Acis hope will carry over to this case.[8]

6. At that time, Debtor effectively acknowledged the risk that this Court's prior opinions of Mr. Dondero would improperly impact this separate, new bankruptcy and the Court would be unable to set aside the negative views of Mr. Dondero it developed in the Acis Bankruptcy; thus, objectively questioning the Court's impartiality. In fact, Mr. Pomerantz specifically referred to the opinions the Court developed in the Acis Bankruptcy as "baggage":

> The debtor filed the case in this district because it wanted a judge to preside over this case that would look at what's going on with this debtor, with this debtor's management, this debtor's post-petition conduct, without the baggage of what happened in a previous case, which contrary to what Acis and the committee says [sic], has very little to do with this debtor.[9]

7. The Delaware Bankruptcy Court also acknowledged that it would be improper for this Court to substitute its prior knowledge, experience, or opinions from the Acis Bankruptcy for evidence (or, equally, as a basis to ignore contradictory evidence in the record) in this proceeding:

> Yeah, I was going to say that's kind of an interesting argument, because actually it assumes Judge Jernigan's going to ignore the rules of evidence in making factual findings, because you're limited to the record before you on a specific motion. And what fact you may have learned with regard to something a person has done, maybe that goes into questions of credibility on cross-examination or direct testimony, but to actually base your decision on a fact that's not in the record for the specific proceeding would be improper.[10]

8. Ultimately, the Delaware Bankruptcy Court granted the Motion to Transfer and, thus, this bankruptcy was assigned to this Court.

B. The Court has acknowledged that its opinions of Mr. Dondero from the Acis Bankruptcy have remained cemented in the mind of the Court in this proceeding.

9. Following the transfer, Debtor and the UCC entered into a compromise as to the management of Debtor (the "Compromise"), under which, among other things, Mr. Dondero, voluntarily surrendered all control of Debtor to an independent, three-person board appointed per the Compromise (the "Board").[11]

10. During the January 9, 2020 hearing on the Compromise, the Court acknowledged that it: possessed opinions regarding Mr. Dondero from the Acis Bankruptcy; was unable to extract those opinions from its brain; and was relying on those opinions as bases for certain rulings (e.g., requiring certain language be included in its order, shown below):

> Now, there is one specific thing I want to say about the role of Mr. Dondero. When Ms. Patel got up and talked about the newest language that has been added to the term sheet, she highlighted in particular the very last sentence on Page 2 of the term sheet, the sentence reading, 'Mr. Dondero shall not cause any related entity to terminate any agreements with the Debtor.' Her statement that that was important, it really resonated with me, because, you know, as I said earlier, I can't extract what I learned during the Acis case, it's in my brain, and we did have many moments during the Acis case where the Chapter 11 trustee came in and credibly testified that, whether it was Mr. Dondero personally or others at Highland, they were surreptitiously liquidating funds, they were changing agreements, assigning agreements to others. They were doing things behind the scenes that were impacting the value of the Debtor in a bad way. So not only do I think that language is very important, but I am going to require that language to be put in the order.[12]

[11] January 9, 2020 Transcript at 14:4-11 [App. 0151], a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Ex. 2 [APP. 0138] and incorporated herein by reference. Mr. Dondero, however, remained a portfolio manager and an unpaid employee of Debtor. Id. See also Ex. 30.

[12] Ex. 2 at 78:23-79:16 [App. 0215-0216] (emphasis added).

11. Later, the Court also indicated that it relied on knowledge of purported actions taken by Mr. Dondero in the Acis Bankruptcy as "evidence" of a presumed propensity of Mr. Dondero to engage in actions (that were allegedly taken in the Acis Bankruptcy) to support the required language and threat of contempt:

> And I'm sure most of you can read my mind why, but I want it crystal clear that if [Mr. Dondero] violates these terms, he's violated a federal court order, and contempt will be one of the tools available to the Court.[13]

12. Notably, at this time, this bankruptcy had only been in front of this Court for approximately a month. Consequently, there was nothing in the record in front of Court to justify its specific rulings and comments related to Mr. Dondero. The Court sustained the United States Trustee's ("U.S. Trustee") attempt to use the Acis Bankruptcy as evidence to support the U.S. Trustee's objection to the Compromise:

> "I have to look at what's presented, and is this reflective of sound business judgment? Is this fair and equitable? Is it in the best interest? So, assuming there are tons of bad facts here reflected in the arbitration award, reflected in other evidence, bad facts that might justify a trustee, a Chapter 11 trustee, is this nevertheless, what's proposed today, a reasonable compromise of, you know, the trustee arguments from the Committee could make or, you know, is this a reasonable framework for going forward? … I can assume there are terrible facts out there that might justify a trustee, but I'm looking at what's proposed."[14]

13. Nonetheless, just a short time later, the Court confirmed that, based on its knowledge from the Acis Bankruptcy, it would require confirmed that it would require the above-referenced language directed at Mr. Dondero in its order based.

C. The Court's (and Debtor's) actions in this proceeding have demonstrated the Court has a perceptible bias against Mr. Dondero.

1. The February 19, 2020 Application to Employ Hearing

14. The Court has demonstrated a predisposition against Mr. Dondero, including, for example, through its rulings discounting the testimony of demonstrably independent witnesses who testified in support of outcomes that could possibly benefit Mr. Dondero as testimony that is engineered by Mr. Dondero.

15. For example, on February 19, 2020, the Court held a hearing on Debtor's application to retain the law firm Foley Gardere to pursue appeals of the Acis involuntary petition and the Acis confirmation order (the "Application to Employ") on behalf of Neutra Ltd. (which is a company owned by Mr. Dondero and which succeeded to the ownership of Acis). Importantly, during this hearing, former Bankruptcy Judge Russell Nelms, one of the three independent directors appointed to Debtor's Board, testified that, in the Board's business judgment, the Application to Employ was considered by the independent directors, and they concluded that it was in the Debtor's best interest.[15]

16. Despite this testimony, the Court displayed a predisposition to contest positions that could possibly benefit Mr. Dondero on the pre-determined basis that any person sharing an opinion with Mr. Dondero (including, apparently, a member of the independent Board) was somehow being unduly influenced by him:

[15] See February 19, 2020 Transcript at 62:6-17 [App. 0290] (emphasis added), a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Ex. 3 [APP. 0229] and incorporated herein by reference; see also Ex. 30.

> … But I'm concerned that Dondero or certain in-house counsel has -- you know, they're smart, they're persuasive -- that -- what are the words I want to look for -- they have exercised their powers of persuasion or whatever to make the Board and the professionals think that there is some valid prospect of benefit to Highland with these appeals, when it's really all about Neutra, HCLOF, and Mr. Dondero. That's what I believe.
> I mean, this is awkward, right, because you want to defer to the debtor-in-possession, but I have this long history, and I can think through the scenarios. …And I know, you know, there are multiple ways it might play out, but I cannot believe there is a chance in the world there is economic benefit to Highland if these things get reversed. Economic benefit to Neutra: Yeah, maybe. Economic benefit to HCLOF: Well, they'll get what they want. You know, whether it's an economic benefit, I don't know. But benefit to Highland? I just don't think the evidence has been there to convince me it's reasonable business judgment for Highland to pay the legal fees associated with the appeal.[16]

17. From here, unsurprisingly, Debtor began to leverage the Court's predisposition against Mr. Dondero (i.e., what Debtor had previously described as the Court's "baggage") for Debtor's own benefit. This played out in a variety of ways.[17]

2. The December 2020 Restriction Motion

18. As the Court is aware, Debtor on the one hand, and Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. (the "Advisors"),[18] on the other hand, previously shared office space, and the Advisors each paid for resources and services, including in-house legal services, pursuant to shared services agreements that each of the Advisors separately entered into with Debtor.

[18] Each Advisor is registered with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") as an investment advisor under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, as amended. Each of the Advisors advises several funds, including the Retail Funds. Each of the Retail Funds is a registered investment company or business development company under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (as amended, the "1940 Act"). Each Retail Fund is overseen by a majority independent board of trustees subject to 1940 Act requirements. Those respective boards reviewed and approved, among other things, major contracts including the advisory agreement with the applicable Advisor for the respective Retail Fund. The Retail Funds do not have employees and rely on their respective Advisors, acting pursuant to an advisory agreement, to provide the services necessary for their operations.

19. As the Court is also aware, Debtor manages more than $1 billion in assets owned by collateralized loan obligation investment vehicles ("CLOs") pursuant to certain Portfolio Management Agreements. Approximately $140 million of that amount is owned by Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, and NexPoint Capital, Inc. (collectively, the "Retail Funds"). Although the Portfolio Management Agreements vary, they generally impose a duty on Debtor, when acting as portfolio manager, to maximize the value of the CLOs' assets for the benefit of the CLOs' noteholders and preference shareholders, such as the Retail Funds.

20. For most of 2020, Debtor's plan with respect to the CLOs was to reject the Portfolio Management Agreements. However, in approximately October 2020, Debtor's plan changed, and Debtor wanted to assume the Portfolio Management Agreements (i.e., continue managing the assets). However, Debtor's new plan also contemplated releasing all Debtor's employees and liquidating all of Debtor's assets over a two-year period. In the Advisors' and the Retail Funds' opinion, this was incompatible with the CLOs' needs (which required an investment staff) and the belief that the CLOs had more upside. Moreover, Debtor began to liquidate certain assets of the CLOs.

21. Mr. Dondero, who, as stated above, continued to be a portfolio manager and unpaid employee of Debtor, and James Seery ("Mr. Seery"), one member Debtor's independent Board, disagreed on whether or not to liquidate the CLOs assets. Importantly, the CLOs were not assets of Debtor's estate but debt and preference equity is owned by third parties (e.g., the Retail Funds, which indirectly own $140 million of same).

22. The Advisors (on behalf of the Retail Funds and pursuant to their obligations under their respective advisory agreements) and the Retail Funds believed that Debtor's decision to liquidate underlying assets held by the CLOs did not maximize the value of the investments for the investors to whom the Advisors and the Retail Funds owed a fiduciary duty. As a result, the Advisors and the Retail Funds raised these concerns with Mr. Seery (Debtor's interim CEO) and requested that Debtor not liquidate the CLOs until the Plan confirmation (which, at that time, was scheduled for early January 2021). Debtor, a/k/a portfolio manager, declined.

23. Consequently, on December 8, 2020, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§105, 363, and 1107, the Advisors and the Retail Funds (not Mr. Dondero) raised these concerns in a motion that requested the Court exercise its equitable discretion to maintain the status quo and stop Debtor from liquidating the CLOs for 30 days (the "Restriction Motion").[19] The Restriction Motion was necessary to legally preserve the legal issue arising from the Advisors' and the Retail Funds' belief that this action by Debtor was contrary to the best interest of their investors.

24. On December 16, 2020, the Court held a hearing on the Restriction Motion and denied same.[20] Rather than simply denying the motion, the Court chastised counsel for the Advisors and the Retail Funds for filing the Restriction Motion (i.e., for advocating a position in good faith that their clients firmly believed in).

[19] Dkt. 1522, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Ex. 4 [APP. 0417] and incorporated herein by reference; see also Ex. 30.

[20] See the December 16, 2020 Transcript, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Ex. 5 [APP. 0443] and incorporated herein by reference. Id. at 63:5-13 [App. 0505]. See also Ex. 30.

25. Going further, the Court stated that it was "dumbfounded" by the Restriction Motion and that it agreed with Debtor's accusation that Mr. Dondero was behind the Restriction Motion, despite the fact that the Restriction Motion was filed by separate and distinct legal entities. The Court focused on Mr. Dondero's role with the Advisors to conclude that the Restriction Motion was brought for an improper purpose, despite the fact that the only evidence before the court was that the decision was made by senior management in consultation with the board of trustees and counsel.[21] Thus, the Court implicitly concluded that the Retail Funds (some of which are publicly-traded, highly-regulated entities) cannot independently decide to pursue action they deem in their best interest.

26. The Court further declared the Restriction Motion frivolous, "almost Rule 11 frivolous," and as having no statutory or contractual basis.[22] As stated above, these comments were made by the Court regarding a motion that: (a) was filed in good faith by fiduciaries seeking to protect the investments of investors; and (b) cited statutory authority which indisputably provided the Court with the discretion to grant the requested relief therein. While the Court had every right to deny the Restriction Motion, the Court additionally condemned Mr. Dondero, demonstrating that it could not set aside its animus towards Mr. Dondero to consider the separate entities involved and the actual issues being raised.

27. In December of 2020, due to the Court's denial of the Restriction Motion, K&L Gates, as

[22] Id. at 64:1-7 [App. 0506]. The statutory basis for the relief requested was section 363(c)(1) or 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code, which generally provides that a debtor-in-possession may engage in its ordinary course of business, "unless the court orders otherwise." That was all that was being asked.

counsel for the Advisors and the Retail Funds, exchanged correspondence with counsel for Debtor (the "K&L Gates Letters").[23] The K&L Gates Letters were sent for the following reasons: to reiterate the Advisors' and the Retail Funds' objection to the Debtor's handing of the Retail Funds' investments; to request, again, that Debtor not liquidate the CLOs; to reserve any rights that the Advisors and the Retail Funds might have against Debtor for failure to maximize the value of the investment as required under the Portfolio Management Agreements; and to notify Debtor that the Retail Funds, subject to applicable bankruptcy law (which would include the stay existing by reason of section 362(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and the Compromise) and the underlying agreements, intended to initiate the procedure to remove Debtor as fund manager of the CLOs.

28. On January 6, 2021, Debtor filed a complaint for declaratory and injunctive relief against the Advisors and the Retail Funds,[24] claiming that: (a) the Advisors' purported refusal to book certain trades, which Debtor had, in actuality, already executed outside of the Advisors' process, interfered with Debtor's business and, thus, tortiously interfered with the prior sales; and (b) the K&L Gates Letters (i.e., correspondence between counsel) violated the automatic stay.[25] Debtor's overall theme in the complaint was, because Mr. Dondero allegedly controlled the Retail Funds

(he does not), the Court should presume that Mr. Dondero (rather than the independent board and its independent counsel for the Retail Funds) caused the acts complained of by Debtor (thus enabling the Court to extend the prohibitions it imposed on Mr. Dondero to the Advisors and the Retail Funds). As a result, Debtor sought to enjoin the Advisors and the Retail Funds from, among other things, exercising any contractual rights that they may have had to remove Debtor as portfolio manager (which Debtor was then seeking to assume, and ultimately did assume, under its plan) if the injunction were not granted.

29. On January 26, 2021, the Court commenced the preliminary injunction hearing on the matter (the "Injunction Hearing").[26] The issue in the Injunction Hearing was whether the Advisors and the Retail Funds tortiously interfered with the Portfolio Management Agreements by: (1) hindering the Debtor's ability to sell certain CLO assets, (2) threatening to initiate the process for removing the Debtor as the portfolio manager of the CLOs, and (3) otherwise attempting to influence and interfere with the Debtor's decisions concerning the purchase or sale of any assets on behalf of the CLOs.[27]

30. To obtain such an injunction, Debtor was required to, among other things, prove a substantial likelihood of success on the merits of its tortious interference claim and irreparable harm. However, during the Injunction Hearing, it should have become abundantly clear that there was no need or basis for an injunction, due, in large part, to the Debtor's concession that it did not have a substantial likelihood of success on the merits via its acknowledgment that the alleged acts of interference did not actually interfere with any contract. In addition:

31. First, Mr. Seery admitted that none of the alleged actions caused Debtor to breach any contract with a third party.[28] Moreover, Debtor could not assert a direct breach of contract claim because: (a) there is no claim for contemplating a prospective breach; and (b) the Advisors and the Retail Funds had no contractual obligation to settle the trade.

32. Second, with respect to "hindering Debtor's ability to sell certain CLO assets," Mr. Seery admitted that every trade that he attempted to initiate in December closed.[29] In fact, the trades at issue were executed before Debtor even approached the Advisors, and the only thing that the Advisors did not do in connection with the trades was make a ledger entry booking the sale (which was due to the fact that Debtor had executed the trades outside of the historically-used system).[30] Moreover, Debtor itself had numerous authorized traders whose job was to settle Debtor's trades. Importantly, the Advisors had no obligation, contractual or otherwise, to perform any service for Debtor.

33. Third, with respect to K&L Gates Letters' contemplation of future action "to initiate the process for removing the Debtor as portfolio manager:" (a) Debtor admitted that the K&L Gates Letters merely stated that the Advisors and the Retail Funds were "contemplating taking steps to terminate the CLO Agreements;"[31] (b) no steps would be taken without seeking relief from the stay;[32] (c) no action was taken to lift the stay;[33] and (d) no action was taken to remove Debtor as the portfolio manager.[34] Moreover, while the Debtor disputed whether the Advisors' and the Retail Funds' right to terminate Debtor had been triggered, it never undisputed that the Advisors and the Retail Funds, as preferred shareholders, were third party beneficiaries under the Portfolio Management Agreements that, in certain instances, expressly provided them with a right to terminate the Portfolio Manager.[35] Generally, one cannot tortiously interfere by exercising one's own contractual rights.[36]

34. Fourth, while Debtor (no doubt in response to the Court's comments in the January 9, 2020 hearing regarding contempt) claimed that Mr. Dondero caused these issues, the Retail Funds have an independent board of trustees (Mr. Dondero is not a board member).[37] The evidence in the record showed that the decision to send the K&L Gates Letters was made by and in consultation with two national law firms, K&L Gates and Blank Rome.[38] Consequently, Debtor's motion was unnecessary and unwarranted.

35. Nonetheless, during the Injunction Hearing, the Court again turned its focus to Mr. Dondero (rather than the impropriety and groundlessness of Debtor's motion), warning him that the January 9, 2020 order (described above) prohibited him from causing any related entity to terminate an agreement with Debtor. Importantly, the Court made the implied finding that Mr. Dondero caused the Retail Funds to send the K&L Gates Letters despite the fact that it had, in a hearing just a week earlier, sustained Debtor's objections to Mr. Dondero being asked about why the K&L Gates Letters were sent on the grounds that: (a) Mr. Dondero lacked personal knowledge; (b) any answer would be hearsay; and (c) because the K&L Gates Letters (executed by K&L Gates, not Mr. Dondero) speak for themselves.[39] In other words, the Court had to "go behind the letter" (which was sent by K&L Gates) in order to threaten Mr. Dondero with sanctions after the Court's ruling sustaining the objection that the letters speak for themselves. Going further, the Court concluded that it was "leaning" toward finding Mr. Dondero in contempt and shifting the "whole bundle of attorney's fees" to Mr. Dondero as a result of this unwarranted motion filed by Debtor.[40]

3. The January 2021 Examiner Motion

36. Separately, on January 14, 2021, two trusts settled by Mr. Dondero, The Dugaboy Investment Trust and The Get Good Trust (collectively, the "Trusts"), requested the Court exercise its discretion to direct the appointment of a neutral third-party examiner pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 1104(c) as a less costly means to resolve various issues that had arisen in this bankruptcy (the "Examiner Motion").[41] Notably, The Dugaboy Investment Trust also has significant holdings in the CLOs.

[39] Ex. 8 at 119:6-122:25 [App. 0903-0906]. Otherwise, Mr. Dondero should have been given the opportunity to answer the question, which the Court denied.

37. The Examiner Motion was made in connection with the issues raised by the Advisors and the Retail Funds in the Restriction Motion, various objections to the proposed Plan raised by the Advisors and the Retail Funds and the U.S. Trustee (discussed below), and concerns expressed by the Court about costs and expenses. Moreover, when the Trusts made the Examiner Motion, they believed that the motion would cause delay or a continuance of the confirmation hearing on the Plan (defined below).[42] Notably, despite the Trusts' request, the Court elected not to set that motion for hearing on an "emergency" basis and, instead, set it for hearing long after the date for confirmation, rendering it moot.

4. The February 2021 Confirmation Hearing

38. On February 2 and 3, 2021, the Court held a hearing on Debtor's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [docket no. 1808], as further modified (the "Plan"). At that hearing, the Advisors and the Retail Funds, pursuant to their rights under the Portfolio Management Agreements, objected to provisions in the Plan that would eliminate or alter their legal and contractual claims against Debtor (the "Objections").

[41] See the January 14, 2021 Motion to Appoint Examiner, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Ex. 22 [APP. 2057] and incorporated herein by reference. See also Ex. 30.
[42] See ECF 1752.

Additionally, Dondero, the Advisors, and the Retail Funds objected to, among other things, the Plan's significant release and exculpation provisions for the management of Debtor—including the Independent Directors, Debtor's professionals, the Committee, professionals retained by the Committee, etc.—and the Plan's "gatekeeper" provision that prohibited lawsuits against any exculpated party without prior permission from the Court.

39. On February 8, 2021, the Court announced its oral ruling regarding the Plan,[43] in which the Court did not rely solely on evidence in the record in front of it but also referred extensively to proceedings in the Acis Bankruptcy.[44] In its ruling, the Court summarily rejected all of the Objections, decreeing them as bad faith: "[T]he Court questions the good faith of the [the Advisors and the Retail Funds]. In fact, the Court has good reason to believe that these parties are not objecting to protect economic interests they have in the Debtor, but to be disruptors."[45]

40. The Court stated no basis for its "belief," but concluded that the other entities objecting to the Plan were "controlled by" Mr. Dondero:[46]

> To be clear, the Court has allowed all of these objectors to fully present arguments and evidence in opposition to confirmation, even though their economic interests in the Debtor appear to be extremely remote and the Court questions their good faith. Specifically on that latter point, the Court considers them all to be marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero.[47]

41. To support its conclusion, the Court disregarded witness testimony on the grounds that the witness had previously been engaged with Debtor:

> …While the evidence presented was that they have independent board members that run these companies, the Court was not convinced of their independence from Mr. Dondero.[48] None of the so-called independent board members of these entities have ever testified before the Court. Moreover, they have all been engaged with the Highland complex for many years.
> The witness who testified on these Objectors' behalves at confirmation, Mr. Jason Post, their chief compliance officer, resigned from Highland after more than twelve years in October 2020, at the same time that Mr. Dondero resigned or was terminated by Highland. And a prior witness recently for these entities whose testimony was made part of the record at the confirmation hearing essentially testified that Mr. Dondero controlled these entities. [49]
> Finally, various NexBank entities objected to the Plan. The Court does not believe they have liquidated claims. Mr. Dondero appears to be in control of these entities as well. [50]

42. The Court then went on to question the good faith basis for the Objections based upon the perceived limited economic interest, despite the fact that each Objector had standing to object, irrespective of the size of their economic interest.[51] Indisputably, a Court must presume that anything filed by a licensed attorney, who is bound by ethical obligations, is filed in good faith unless proved otherwise. Therefore, insinuating a lack of good faith in light of this presumption suggests bias, especially when bad faith was not alleged by another party.

43. Next, even though it had "not been asked to declare Mr. Dondero and his affiliated entities as vexatious litigants per se,"[52] the Court summarily decreed that Mr. Dondero and other Affected Entities were "vexatious litigants"[53] in its ruling and held that objected to "gatekeeper provision "appears necessary and reasonable in light of the litigiousness of Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities that has been described at length herein."[54]

44. In addition to not tied to evidence in the record from this bankruptcy, this finding of vexatious litigation does not meet the requirements set forth by the Court itself. To enjoin future filings due to vexatious litigation, the bankruptcy court must consider the circumstances of the case, including four factors: (a) the party's history of litigation; in particular, whether he has filed vexatious, harassing, or duplicative lawsuits; (b) whether the party had a good faith basis for pursuing the litigation, or perhaps intended to harass; (c) the extent of the burden on the courts and other parties resulting from the party's filings; and (d) the adequacy of alternatives.[55] Here, the factors did not weigh in favor of a vexatious litigation finding, much less even being considered.

45. First, the "litigiousness" described in the Court's ruling were: (a) efforts taken by Mr. Dondero and other entities in the bankruptcy to defend against injunctions filed against them; (b) legitimate objections or responses to certain provisions in the Plan and other motions, made to preserve rights on appeal; and/or (c) lawsuits in which Mr. Dondero or other entities had been sued and were defending themselves (which, notably, Debtor—after Mr. Dondero relinquished control of same—asserted were not frivolous or vexatious in various disclosures):

(a) Acis Action, in which Debtor filed a 65-page objection that it described as having "numerous basis" and in which USB filed an objection;[56]

(b) UBS Action, in which Debtor filed an objection to the claim and stated that it had, "meritorious defenses to most, if not all, of the UBS Claim …", [ECF 928] and in which the Redeemer Committee of the Crusader Funds also objected;[57]

(c) Daugherty Action, in which Debtor asserted that the Daugherty Claim lacked merit;[58] and

(d) HarbourVest Action, in which Debtor "vigorously defen[ded]" the HarbourVest Claims on numerous grounds.[59]

Notably, neither Mr. Dondero nor any of the Affected Entities were parties to these lawsuits.

46. Second, the record actually reflects little, if any, litigation and motion practice initiated by Mr. Dondero, individually, as referenced in the charts attached to this Motion as Exhibits 28 and 29.[60]

47. Third, the Objections were made in good faith.[61] In fact, the U.S. Trustee, whose "good faith basis" was not questioned and who was not labeled a "disruptor," asserted the some of the same objections to the exact same provisions. This demonstrates that, in fact, the record actually shows that the independent boards of the Advisors and the Retail Funds appropriately exercised their right to object to the Plan to preserve various contractual, due process, and appellate rights.

48. Fourth, the Court failed to address the fourth prong of the test to support a vexatious litigant finding and conducted no analysis or consideration of the burden on the Courts or any purported plaintiff or the adequacy of any alternative to the pre-suit injunction.

49. Consequently, nothing in this the record supports a finding that Mr. Dondero is a vexatious litigant or that any of the Advisors' or the Retail Funds' independent board members would disregard their fiduciary duties simply to benefit Mr. Dondero.

50. Fifth, as demonstrated herein, the record reflects that the parties are being judged by two different sets of rules that disadvantage Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities while favoring others. While, for example, as stated above, the Court referred to the Restriction Motion as "almost Rule 11 frivolous," it has not applied the same level of scrutiny to the pleadings filed and positions taken by Debtor or other parties. This is illustrated by the mandatory injunction filed by Debtor in February 2021 seeking the limited relief of mandating the Advisors and the Retail Funds to express a transition plan after Debtor indisputably terminated the shared services agreements (indicating that it would not be providing services going forward).[62] Despite the fact that the Advisors and the Retails Funds did not contest the termination and had no obligation to share their transition plan with Debtor following its termination of the shared services agreement, and Debtor's termination of the shared services agreement posed no harm to Debtor. As a result, there was no need for the filing the mandatory injunction—much less a seven-hour evidentiary hearing on the issue.[63]

[62] See the Mandatory Injunction, a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Ex. 19 [APP. 1792] and incorporated herein by reference; see also Ex. 30.

Nevertheless, the Court, who ruled Debtor's mandatory injunction moot, went beyond the pleadings and relief requested by Debtor to issue findings of fact adverse to Mr. Dondero[64] and, the again, specifically blamed Mr. Dondero.[65]

5. Other Issues Demonstrating Bias.

51. In addition to the examples above, the Court's inability to rule impartially as a result of its preconceived opinion of Mr. Dondero has manifested itself in other ways throughout this case.

52. First, the Court has admitted to relying upon extrajudicial information from an article that referenced "Mr. Dondero or Highland affiliates" receiving PPP loans as a basis for the Court to direct Debtor's counsel in this bankruptcy to investigate the loans and report back to it.[66] Neither Mr. Dondero nor the so-called "Highland affiliates" referred to in the article were the property of or governed by Debtor. In fact, the PPP loans had nothing to do with the Debtor.[67]

53. Second, the Court's bias against Mr. Dondero has prejudiced the legal rights of separate and distinct legal entities simply because such entities have a connection to Mr. Dondero. Specifically, with respect to the Retail Funds, regardless of whether Mr. Dondero purportedly controlled the entities at issue, the record does not reflect that any decision at issue was made other than by a vote of the independent board of trustees (which does not include Mr. Dondero).

54. Likewise, CLO Holdco, which is a wholly owned subsidiary of a charitable Doner Advised Fund ("DAF") established by Mr. Dondero, has an independent trustee who is a licensed attorney, Grant Scott. CLO Holdco moved to have $2.5 million in funds that indisputably belonged to CLO Holdco released from the registry of the Court. There were no objections to the liquidation at issue. There were no objections that bona fide investors, like CLO Holdco, should not receive their portion of the funds received from the liquidation. The Court admitted that CLO Holdco's lawyer made "perfect arguments" regarding the potential legal issues and whether "holding the money in the registry of the Court that a non-debtor asserts is its property, is that tantamount to a prejudgment remedy?"[68] Despite these "perfect" arguments and the lack of objection, the Court, again concluded that Mr. Dondero was behind the CLO Holdco filing and, therefore, questioned the "good faith" basis,[69] even though the Court had, prior to that time, expressly stated that the parties reserved all rights to file motions requesting the funds be disbursed to them.[70]

55. The Court gave the UCC 90 days to file a complaint asserting a legal basis to the funds,[71] but held that, it could not continue to withhold the funds from CLO Holdco unless the UCC proved an injunction was required to permit the Court to keep the funds (which would be unlikely because the UCC would be seeking quantifiable, monetary damages). After multiple extensions, the UCC ultimately filed an adversary, but never sought injunctive relief. Still, the Court has not released the funds to CLO Holdco and has relieved the UCC of its burden to establish the elements for injunctive relief.[72]

56. Third, and possibly most concerning, the Court has admitted to forming conclusions about Mr. Dondero prior to even seeing evidence. Specifically, in a September 2020 hearing in the Acis Bankruptcy, an issue arose regarding a lawsuit that certain DAFs and other entities filed against Acis (and other non-Acis or Debtor entities) concerning a post-confirmation dispute. That lawsuit was not pending in this Court or anywhere in the Northern District of Texas; nevertheless, the Court, after admitting to having not seen the lawsuit, declared it vexatious:

> It's just ridiculous, for lack of a better term, that Dondero and his entities would be doing some of the things it sounds like they're doing: Suing Moody's, for crying out loud, for not downgrading the Acis CLOs. If Mr. Dondero doesn't think that is so transparently vexatious litigation, yeah, I'm going out there and saying that. I haven't seen it, but, come on.[73]

57. It is the Court's admission that, "I haven't seen it," paired with the finding of the Court that the suit was "transparently vexatious litigation" that illustrates, perhaps most clearly, the increasing need for this Motion.[74]

[72] Needless to say, the Affected Entities and every entity that the Court believes has any affiliation with Mr. Dondero is gun-shy about filing any pleading out of fear of "sanctions" or accusations of "bad faith." Conversely, the UCC, which has not alleged any basis for the Court retaining the $2.5 million, has not been chastised or otherwise threatened.

[74] Notably, the claims against Moody's relating to its ratings concerning the CLOs were the same issues raised in various lawsuits against Moody's following the 2008 crash. The action asserting the claims was initiated by DAF, an independent charity originally funded by Highland Capital. As a primary investor in the ACIS Collateralized Loan Obligations (CLO), the DAF lost almost 80% of its investment in ACIS CLOs as Josh Terry and sub-advisor Bridage circumvented CLO indenture covenants and materially increased the risk in the portfolio. D. Recusal is necessary in light of the pending and future issues and proceedings.

58. Importantly, there are numerous adversary proceedings currently pending before this Court that involve Mr. Dondero, individually, or one or more of the Affected Entities (collectively, the "Adversary Proceedings").[75]

59. The claims in the Adversary Proceedings include various tort and breach of contract claims, claw-back claims, and alter ego claims seeking to hold Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities liable for any recovery ordered as to other entities. In addition, the UCC has indicated that there are more suits to come, and Debtor specifically reserved claims against over five-hundred "Dondero related-entities and current or former employees who will be branded with the "Dondero disciple" moniker. Naturally, each of the Adversary Proceedings will require Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities to take legal positions and defend themselves—actions that this Court has indicated that is predisposed to considering vexatious (and has already threatened large fee shifting awards on preliminary injunction matters, even where a defendant has technically prevailed), even, as stated above, in a situation where the Court had never seen the facts, the claims or the legal highlighted ACIS 3-6 as the worst performing 1094 deals outstanding in 2019 through 2020. This action sought relief from the trustee (US Bank) for failing to properly administer the indenture and from Moody's for failing to update or suspend ratings given the breaches described above.

theories; or where the Court has not admonished another party for the same position or a similar assertion of its rights.

60. For the reasons stated above, the Court has demonstrated what appears to be a high degree of antagonism toward Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities that has grown to such a point that a reasonable question as to the Court's impartiality has arisen and must be resolved. As a result, Movants respectfully request the Court recuse itself from the Adversary Proceedings.

III. ARGUMENTS & AUTHORITY

61. Section 28 U.S.C. § 455 requires a judge to be recused if the judge "has a personal bias or prejudice concerning a party, or personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts concerning the proceeding,"[76] and when the court's "impartiality might reasonably be questioned."[77] These provisions afford separate, though overlapping, grounds for recusal.[78]

62. Under section 455(a), recusal is required whenever a judge's partiality might reasonably be questioned, even if the judge does not have actual personal bias or prejudice.[79] The test under § 455(a) is not whether the judge believes he or she is capable of impartiality[80] and not whether the judge actually has a bias (or actually knows of grounds requiring recusal).[81] Instead, the test is whether the "'average person on the street who knows all the relevant facts of a case'" might reasonably question the judge's impartiality.[82] As Congress recognized when enacting section 455, litigants "ought not have to face a judge where there is a reasonable question of impartiality."[83] At its core, this statutory provision is "designed to promote public confidence in the impartiality of the judicial process."[84]

63. The words "prejudice" and "bias" mean a favorable or unfavorable disposition or opinion that is somehow wrongful or inappropriate, either because: (a) it is undeserved; (b) it rests upon knowledge that the holder of the opinion ought not to possess; or (c) it is excessive in degree.[85]

64. Despite holding that "judicial rulings alone almost never constitute a valid basis for a bias or partiality motion," the Supreme Court has also recognized that predispositions developed during the course of a trial will sometimes suffice.[86]

65. Moreover, while the presence of an extrajudicial source is a factor in favor of finding either an appearance of partiality under section 455(a) or bias or prejudice under section 455(b)(1),[87] an extrajudicial source for a judge's opinion about a case or a party is not necessary for recusal.[88] In addition, while, ordinarily, "opinions formed by the judge on the basis of facts introduced or events occurring in the course of the current proceedings, or of prior proceedings, do not constitute a basis for a bias or partiality motion," they "may do so if they reveal an opinion that derives from an extrajudicial source; and they will do so if they reveal such a high degree of favoritism or antagonism as to make fair judgment impossible."[89]

66. Mr. Dondero and all other non-debtors, like every litigant, are entitled to a full and fair opportunity to make their case in an impartial forum—regardless of their history with that forum.[90] Beyond that, "fundamental to the judiciary is the public's confidence in the impartiality of our judges and the proceedings over which they preside."[91] "[J]ustice must satisfy the appearance of justice."[92] Notably, the Fifth Circuit has held that "[i]f the question of whether § 455(a) requires disqualification is a close one, the balance tips in favor of recusal."[93]

67. Here, the facts detailed above, and incorporated herein, including but not limited to specifically paragraphs 1-60, show that the Court's conduct in this bankruptcy would lead an objective observer to reasonably question the Court's impartiality. By way of summary, the Court has:

(a) admitted that the negative opinions about Mr. Dondero formed during the Acis case cannot be excised from the Court's mind;

(b) made repeated reference to proceedings in the Acis case to justify findings made in this case that are not otherwise supported by this record and repeated negative statements about Mr. Dondero in connection with the Court's rulings;

(c) repeatedly threatened sanctions on and questioned the good-faith basis Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities, for (i) defending lawsuits and motions; (ii) asserting valid legal positions; and/or (iii) preserving their rights, including in the exact same manner in which others are permitted to do so (e.g., the U.S. Trustee's objections to the Plan), even declaring Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities as behind "vexatious" litigation the Court admits it has not actually seen; and

(d) Disregarded the presumption that related corporations of separation have institutional independence and concluded, without supporting evidence from this proceeding, that any entity the Court deems connected to or controlled by Mr. Dondero (i.e., including the highly regulated Affected Entities, which are governed by independent boards) is essentially no more than a tool of Mr. Dondero and that Mr. Dondero is the ultimate decision-maker behind all the motions they file and actions they take in this proceeding; [94] and

(e) disregarded the testimony of any witness with a connection to Mr. Dondero as per se less credible, which includes attorneys and persons who owe fiduciary duties and ethical obligations.[95]

68. This Motion is not being filed because of prior adverse rulings; or because of any predispositions formed by the Court based upon facts or evidence introduced in the course of the current proceeding; or because of ordinary admonishments from a court to a litigant. Instead, this Motion is being filed because the facts and circumstances, including the non-exhaustive examples described above, reveal a deep-seeded antagonism toward Mr. Dondero and the Affected Entities that goes enough beyond "normal" admonishment as to render fair judgment and impartiality toward Mr. Dondero (and the required perception of same) impossible.

69. Importantly, this Court will sit as both judge and jury in the various Adversary Proceedings

[95] See, e.g., ECF 1943 at p. 19 ("At the Confirmation Hearing, Mr. Post testified on behalf of the Highland Advisors and Funds that the Funds have independent board members that run the Funds, but the Bankruptcy Court was not convinced of their independence from Mr. Dondero because none of the so-called independent board members have ever testified before the Bankruptcy Court and all have been engaged with the Highland complex for many years. Notably, the Court questions Mr. Post's credibility because, after more than 12 years of service, he abruptly resigned from the Debtor in October 2020 at the exact same time that Mr. Dondero resigned at the Board of Directors' request, and he is currently employed by Mr. Dondero."); see also, Ex. 8, The January 8, 2021 Transcript, at 175:8-176:25 [App. 0959-0960].

(and any additional ones that are filed) and contested matters in the future, and the Court has demonstrated a willingness to retain jurisdiction whenever possible.[96] In doing so, the Court must, but appears unable to despite best efforts, set aside any prejudice or bias against Mr. Dondero in those proceedings. As demonstrated above, the Court is predisposed against Mr. Dondero (on issues that have not yet been tried and evidence that has never been entered in any proceeding in this bankruptcy) and has already disregarded the corporate separateness between Mr. Dondero and entities—which Mr. Dondero does not control—that are defendants in the Adversary Proceedings.

70. Practically and importantly, the Court's predisposition against Mr. Dondero (and the Affected Entities), including its prior declarations of vexatiousness (and threats of sanctions) and its questioning of counsels' good faith in taking legally-supported positions, indisputably threaten the ability of counsel for Mr. Dondero (and the Affected Entities or any entity or person that is perceived to be associated or aligned with Mr. Dondero) to put forward any claim or defense or seek certain relief. In effect, counsel is now forced to choose between: (a) raising an issue to preserve it for appeal and risk sanctions; (b) waiving raising a valid issue to avoid sanctions and, thereby, committing malpractice; or (c) withdrawing from its representation.

71. "It is axiomatic that a fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process."[97] As described herein, the cumulative weight of both prejudicial comments and peremptory rulings by the Court demonstrate that the Court appears to have developed a personal bias or prejudice concerning Mr. Dondero (and various entities that the Court has deemed "under his control") that now render the Court unable to be impartial and render fair judgment related to Mr. Dondero. At a minimum, that is the perception that has been created.[98]

72. As a result, the Court should recuse itself from the Adversary Proceedings, any contested matter involving Mr. Dondero or any of the Affected Entities from acting as the "gatekeeper" in determining whether any future claim by Mr. Dondero (or any of the Affected Entities) is valid.

IV. PRAYER

FOR THE FOREGOING REASONS, Movants respectfully request that the Court recuse itself from the Adversary Proceedings and any future contested matters involving Movants or any entity connected to Mr. Dondero; and grant Movants all other further relief, at law or equity, to which they are justly entitled.

DEBTOR'S MOTION TO DISQUALIFY WICK PHILLIPS GOULD & MARTIN, LLP AS COUNSEL TO HCRE PARTNERS, LLC AND FOR RELATED RELIEF

Highland Capital Management, L.P., the debtor and debtor-in-possession (the "Debtor" or "Highland") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"), by and through its undersigned counsel, files this motion (the "Motion") seeking entry of an order: (i) directing the disqualification of Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP ("Wick Phillips") as counsel to HCRE

[1] The Debtor's last four digits of its taxpayer identification number are (6725). The headquarters and service address for the above-captioned Debtor is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, TX 75201.

Partners, LLC ("HCRE") in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim;[2] (ii) directing Wick Phillips to immediately turnover to the Debtor all files and records relating to the LLC Agreement, the Loan Agreement, and the Restated LLC Agreement; and (iii) directing HCRE to (a) reimburse the Debtor all costs and fees incurred in making this Motion, including reasonable attorneys' fees; (b) engage substitute counsel in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim within fourteen (14) days of the entry of this Order; and (c) disclose all communications it (or anyone purporting to act on its behalf, including Wick Phillips) has had with Mark Patrick and Paul Broaddus concerning HCRE's Claim. In support of the Motion, the Debtor respectfully states the following:

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. This Court has jurisdiction over the Motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334(b). The Motion is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(A) and (O).

2. Venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409.

3. The predicate for the relief requested in the Motion is section 105(a) of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code").

RELIEF REQUESTED

4. The Debtor requests that this Court enter the proposed form of order attached hereto as Exhibit A (the "Proposed Order") pursuant to section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code.

5. For the reasons set forth more fully in the Debtor's Memorandum of Law filed contemporaneously with this Motion, the Debtor seeks (i) disqualification of Wick Phillips as counsel to HCRE in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim and (ii) related relief.

[2] Capitalized terms not otherwise defined in this Motion have the meanings ascribed to them in the Debtor's Memorandum of Law in Support of Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief (the "Memorandum of Law") being filed contemporaneously herewith.

6. Wick Phillips' continued representation of HCRE constitutes a direct conflict of interest. While the full scope of Wick Phillips' prior representation is unclear, there can be no credible dispute that a substantial relationship exists between Wick Phillips' current representation of HCRE in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's claim and its prior representation of the Debtor. Wick Phillips' representation of HCRE thus threatens its duty of loyalty and confidentiality to the Debtor. Applicable ethical rules proscribed by (i) the American Bar Association's Model Rules of Professional Conduct (the "ABA Model Rules"), (ii) the Texas Disciplinary Rules of Professional Conduct (the "Texas Rules"), and (iii) the local rules of the deciding court require disqualification of Wick Phillips.

7. In accordance with Rule 7007-1 of the Local Bankruptcy Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Local Rules"), contemporaneously herewith and in support of this Motion, the Debtor is filing its: (i) Memorandum of Law, and (ii) Declaration of John A. Morris Submitted in Support of the Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief (the "Morris Declaration").

8. Based on (i) the facts and arguments set forth in the Memorandum of Law and (ii) the exhibits attached to the Morris Declaration, the Debtor is entitled to the relief requested herein as set forth in the Proposed Order.

9. Notice of this Motion has been provided to Wick Phillips, individually and in its capacity as counsel to HCRE. The Debtor submits that no other or further notice need be provided.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests that the Court (i) enter the Proposed Order substantially in the form annexed hereto as Exhibit A granting the relief requested herein, and (ii) grant the Debtor such other and further relief as the Court may deem proper.

DECLARATION OF ROBERT J. FEINSTEIN IN SUPPORT OF DEBTOR'S MOTION FOR ENTRY OF AN ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT WITH UBS SECURITIES LLC AND UBS AG, LONDON BRANCH AND AUTHORIZING ACTIONS CONSISTENT THEREWITH

[1] The last four digits of the Debtor's taxpayer identification number are 6725. The headquarters and service address for the Debtor is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, TX 75201.

I, Robert J. Feinstein, declare as follows:

1. I am an attorney with the law firm of Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones LLP, counsel to Highland Capital Management, L.P., the debtor and debtor-in-possession (the "Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"). I submit this declaration in support of the Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith, filed concurrently herewith. This declaration is based on my personal knowledge of the facts set forth herein and my review of the documents identified below.

2. Attached as Exhibit 1 is a true and correct copy of the Settlement Agreement executed as of March 30, 2021, by the Debtor, Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (n/k/a Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.), Strand Advisors, Inc., and UBS Securities LLC, and UBS AG, London Branch.

3. Attached as Exhibit 2 is a true and correct copy, without exhibits, of Claim No. 190 filed by UBS Securities LLC in the Bankruptcy Case.

4. Attached as Exhibit 3 is a true and correct copy, without exhibits, of Claim No. 191 filed by UBS AG, London Branch in the Bankruptcy Case.

5. Attached as Exhibit 4 is a true and correct excerpt from the transcript of the November 20, 2020 hearing in the Bankruptcy Case [Dkt. 1482] setting forth the Court's ruling on UBS's Motion for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Voting Purposes Pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3018 [Dkt. No. 1338].

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

Settlement Agreement

EXECUTION VERSION

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement (the "Agreement") is entered into as of March 30, 2021, by and among (i) Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or the "Debtor"), (ii) Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (n/k/a Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) ("Multi-Strat," and together with its general partner and its direct and indirect wholly-owned subsidiaries, the "MSCF Parties"), (iii) Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand"), and (iv) UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (collectively, "UBS").

Each of HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, and UBS are sometimes referred to herein collectively as the "Parties" and individually as a "Party."

R E C I T A L S

WHEREAS, in 2007, UBS entered into certain contracts with HCMLP and two funds managed by HCMLP—Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC," and together with CDO Fund, the "Funds") related to a securitization transaction (the "Knox Agreement");

WHEREAS, in 2008, the parties to the Knox Agreement restructured the Knox Agreement;

WHEREAS, UBS terminated the Knox Agreement and, on February 24, 2009, UBS filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of New York (the "State Court") against HCMLP and the Funds seeking to recover damages related to the Knox Agreement, in an action captioned UBS Securities LLC, et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., et al., Index No. 650097/2009 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.) (the "2009 Action");

WHEREAS, UBS's lone claim against HCMLP in the 2009 Action for indemnification was dismissed in early 2010, and thereafter UBS amended its complaint in the 2009 Action to add five new defendants, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"), Highland Credit Strategies Master Funds, L.P. ("Credit-Strat"), Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P. ("Crusader"), Multi-Strat, and Strand, and to add new claims for fraudulent inducement, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference with contract, alter ego, and general partner liability;

WHEREAS, UBS filed a new, separate action against HCMLP on June 28, 2010, for, inter alia, fraudulent conveyance and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, captioned UBS Securities LLC, et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., Index No. 650752/2010 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.) (the "2010 Action");

WHEREAS, in November 2010, the State Court consolidated the 2009 Action and the 2010 Action (hereafter referred to as the "State Court Action"), and on May 11, 2011, UBS filed a Second Amended Complaint in the 2009 Action;

WHEREAS, in 2015, UBS entered into settlement agreements with Crusader and Credit-Strat, and thereafter UBS filed notices with the State Court in the State Court Action dismissing its claims against Crusader and Credit-Strat;

WHEREAS, the State Court bifurcated claims asserted in the State Court Action for purposes of trial, with the Phase I bench trial deciding UBS's breach of contract claims against the Funds and HCMLP's counterclaims against UBS;

WHEREAS, on August 7, 2017, the Funds, along with Highland CDO Opportunity Fund, Ltd., Highland CDO Holding Company, Highland Financial Corp., and HFP, purportedly sold assets with a purported collective fair market value of $105,647,679 (the "Transferred Assets") and purported face value of over $300,000,000 to Sentinel Reinsurance, Ltd. ("Sentinel") pursuant to a purported asset purchase agreement (the "Purchase Agreement");

WHEREAS, Sentinel treated the Transferred Assets as payment for a $25,000,000 premium on a document entitled "Legal Liability Insurance Policy" (the "Insurance Policy");

WHEREAS, the Insurance Policy purports to provide coverage to the Funds for up to $100,000,000 for any legal liability resulting from the State Court Action (the "Insurance Proceeds");

WHEREAS, one of the Transferred Assets CDO Fund transferred to Sentinel was CDO Fund's limited partnership interests in Multi-Strat (the "CDOF Interests");

WHEREAS, Sentinel had also received from HCMLP limited partnership interests in Multi-Strat for certain cash consideration (together with the CDOF Interests, the "MSCF Interests");

WHEREAS, the existence of the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy were unknown to Strand's independent directors and the Debtor's bankruptcy advisors prior to late January 2021;

WHEREAS, in early February 2021, the Debtor disclosed the existence of the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy to UBS;

WHEREAS, prior to such disclosure, the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy were unknown to UBS;

WHEREAS, on November 14, 2019, following the Phase I trial, the State Court issued its decision determining that the Funds breached the Knox Agreement on December 5, 2008 and dismissing HCMLP's counterclaims;

WHEREAS, Sentinel purportedly redeemed the MSCF Interests in November 2019 and the redeemed MSCF Interests are currently valued at approximately $32,823,423.50 (the "Sentinel Redemption");

WHEREAS, on February 10, 2020, the State Court entered a Phase I trial judgment against the Funds in the amount of $1,039,957,799.44 as of January 22, 2020 (the "Phase I Judgment");

WHEREAS, Phase II of the trial of the State Court Action, includes, inter alia, UBS's claim for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing against HCMLP, UBS's

fraudulent transfer claims against HCMLP, HFP, and Multi-Strat, and UBS's general partner claim against Strand;

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2019, HCMLP filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The Bankruptcy Case was transferred to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Bankruptcy Court") on December 4, 2019;

WHEREAS, Phase II of the trial of the State Court Action was automatically stayed as to HCMLP by HCMLP's bankruptcy filing;

WHEREAS, on May 11, 2020, UBS, Multi-Strat, Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, Ltd., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO Asset Holdings, L.P. (collectively, the "May Settlement Parties"), entered into a Settlement Agreement (the "May Settlement") pursuant to which the May Settlement Parties agreed to the allocation of the proceeds of certain sales of assets held by Multi-Strat, including escrowing a portion of such funds, and restrictions on Multi-Strat's actions;

WHEREAS, on June 26, 2020, UBS timely filed two substantively identical claims in the Bankruptcy Case: (i) Claim No. 190 filed by UBS Securities LLC; and (ii) Claim No. 191 filed by UBS AG London Branch (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "UBS Claim"). The UBS Claim asserts a general unsecured claim against HCMLP for $1,039,957,799.40;

WHEREAS, on August 3, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court entered an Order Directing Mediation [Docket No. 912] pursuant to which HCMLP, UBS, and several other parties were directed to mediate their Bankruptcy Case disputes before two experienced third-party mediators, Retired Judge Allan Gropper and Sylvia Mayer (together, the "Mediators"). HCMLP and UBS formally met with the Mediators together and separately on numerous occasions, including on August 27, September 2, 3, and 4, and December 17, 2020, and had numerous other informal discussions outside of the presence of the Mediators, in an attempt to resolve the UBS Claim;

WHEREAS, on August 7, 2020, HCMLP filed an objection to the UBS Claim [Docket No. 928]. Also on August 7, 2020, the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, and Crusader, Highland Crusader Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Fund, Ltd., and Highland Crusader Fund II, Ltd. (collectively, the "Redeemer Committee"), objected to the UBS Claim [Docket No. 933]. On September 25, 2020, UBS filed its response to these objections [Docket No. 1105];

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2020, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee each moved for partial summary judgment on the UBS Claim [Docket Nos. 1180 and 1183, respectively], and on November 6, 2020, UBS opposed these motions [Docket No. 1337];

WHEREAS, by Order dated December 9, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court granted, as set forth therein, the motions for partial summary judgment filed by HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee and denied UBS's request for leave to file an amended proof of claim [Docket No. 1526];

WHEREAS, on November 6, 2020, UBS filed UBS's Motion for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Voting Purposes Pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3018 [Docket No. 1338] (the "3018 Motion"), and on November 16, 2020, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee each opposed the 3018 Motion [Docket Nos. 1404 and 1409, respectively];

WHEREAS, by Order dated December 8, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court granted the 3018 Motion and allowed the UBS Claim, on a temporary basis and for voting purposes only, in the amount of $94,761,076 [Docket No. 1518];

WHEREAS, on January 22, 2021, the Debtor filed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization for Highland Capital Management, L.P. (As Modified) [Docket No. 1808] (as amended, and as may be further amended, supplemented, or otherwise modified, the "Plan");

WHEREAS, on March 29, 2021, the Debtor caused CDO Fund to make a claim on the Insurance Policy to collect the Insurance Proceeds pursuant to the Phase I Judgment;

WHEREAS, on March 29, 2021, UBS filed an adversary proceeding seeking injunctive relief and a motion for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction to, among other things, enjoin the Debtor from allowing Multi-Strat to distribute the Sentinel Redemption to Sentinel or any transferee of Sentinel (the "Multi-Strat Proceeding"), which relief the Debtor, in its capacity as Multi-Strat's investment manager and general partner, does not oppose;

WHEREAS, the Parties wish to enter into this Agreement to settle all claims and disputes between and among them, to the extent and on the terms and conditions set forth herein, and to exchange the mutual releases set forth herein, without any admission of fault, liability, or wrongdoing on the part of any Party; and

WHEREAS, this Agreement will be presented to the Bankruptcy Court for approval pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9019 ("Rule 9019") and section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code;

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the above recitals, the covenants, conditions, and promises made herein, and other good and valuable consideration, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties agree as follows:

A G R E E M E N T

1. Settlement of Claims. In full and complete satisfaction of the UBS Released Claims (as defined below):

(a) The UBS Claim will be allowed as (i) a single, general unsecured claim in the amount of $65,000,000 against HCMLP, which shall be treated as a Class 8 General Unsecured Claim under the Plan;[1] and (ii) a single, subordinated unsecured claim in the amount of $60,000,000 against HCMLP, which shall be treated as a Class 9 Subordinated General Unsecured Claim under the Plan.

[1] Capitalized terms used but not defined herein shall have the meanings attributed to them in the Plan.

(b) Multi-Strat will pay UBS the sum of $18,500,000 (the "Multi-Strat Payment") as follows: (i) within two (2) business days after the Order Date, the May Settlement Parties will submit a Joint Release Instruction (as defined in the May Settlement) for the release of the amounts held in the Escrow Account (as defined in the May Settlement) to be paid to UBS in partial satisfaction of the Multi-Strat Payment on the date that is ten (10) business days following the Order Date; and (ii) Multi-Strat will pay UBS the remainder of the Multi-Strat Payment in immediately available funds on the date that is ten (10) business days following the Order Date, provided that, for the avoidance of doubt, the amounts held in the Escrow Account will not be paid to UBS until and unless the remainder of the Multi-Strat Payment is made.

(c) Subject to applicable law, HCMLP will use reasonable efforts to (i) cause CDO Fund to pay the Insurance Proceeds in full to UBS as soon as practicable, but no later than within 5 business days of CDO Fund actually receiving the Insurance Proceeds from or on behalf of Sentinel; (ii) if Sentinel refuses to pay the Insurance Proceeds, take legal action reasonably designed to recover the Insurance Proceeds or the MSCF Interests or to return the Transferred Assets to the Funds to satisfy the Phase I Judgment and in addition shall provide reasonable assistance to UBS in connection with any legal action UBS takes to recover the Insurance Proceeds or to return the Transferred Assets to the Funds to satisfy the Phase I Judgment or obtain rights to the MSCF interests, including but not limited to the redemption payments in connection with the MSCF Interests; (iii) cooperate with UBS and participate (as applicable) in the investigation or prosecution of claims or requests for injunctive relief against the Funds, Multi-Strat, Sentinel, James Dondero, Isaac Leventon, Scott Ellington, Andrew Dean, Christopher Walter, Jean Paul Sevilla, Matthew DiOrio, Katie Irving, and/or any other current or former employee or director of the Funds or Sentinel and/or any other former employee or former director of any of the HCMLP Parties that is believed to be involved with the Purchase Agreement, Insurance Policy, Transferred Assets, the transfer of the MSCF Interests, or any potentially fraudulent transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel, excluding the individuals listed on the schedule provided to UBS on March 25, 2021 (the "HCMLP Excluded Employees"); (iv) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide UBS with all business and trustee contacts at the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd, if any, that are actually known by the Debtor after reasonable inquiry; (v) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide UBS with a copy of the governing documents, prospectuses, and indenture agreements for the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd, as applicable, that are in the Debtor's actual possession, custody, or control, (vi) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide, to the extent possible, any CUSIP numbers of the securities of the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd., as applicable, including information regarding the location and amount of any cash related to those entities' holdings, in each case only to the extent actually known by the Debtor after reasonable inquiry; (vii) cooperate with UBS to assign or convey any such assets described in Section 1(c)(vi) or any other assets owned or controlled by the Funds and/or HFP, including for avoidance of doubt any additional assets currently unknown to the Debtor that the Debtor discovers in the future after the Agreement Effective Date; (viii) respond as promptly as reasonably possible to requests by UBS for access to relevant documents and approve as promptly as reasonably possible requests for access to relevant documents from third parties as needed with respect to the Transferred Assets, the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the

MSCF Interests and any other assets currently or formerly held by the Funds or HFP, including without limitation the requests listed in Appendix A (provided, however, that the provision of any such documents or access will be subject to the common interest privilege and will not constitute a waiver of any attorney-client or other privilege in favor of HCMLP) that are in the Debtor's actual possession, custody, or control; (ix) preserve all documents in HCMLP's possession, custody, or control regarding or relating to the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the MSCF Interests, or any transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel, including but not limited to the documents requested in Appendix A, from 2016 to present, and issue a litigation hold to all individuals deemed reasonably necessary regarding the same; and (x) otherwise use reasonable efforts to assist UBS to collect its Phase I Judgment against the Funds and HFP and assets the Funds and/or HFP may own, or have a claim to under applicable law ahead of all other creditors of the Funds and HFP; provided, however, that, from and after the date hereof, HCMLP shall not be required to incur any out-of-pocket fees or expenses, including, but not limited to, those fees and expenses for outside consultants and professionals (the "Reimbursable Expenses"), in connection with any provision of this Section 1(c) in excess of $3,000,000 (the "Expense Cap"), and provided further that, for every dollar UBS recovers from the Funds (other than the assets related to Greenbriar CLO Ltd. or Greenbriar CLO Corp.), Sentinel, Multi-Strat (other than the amounts set forth in Section 1(b) hereof), or any other person or entity described in Section 1(c)(iii) in connection with any claims UBS has that arise out of or relate to the Phase I Judgment, the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the Transferred Assets, the MSCF Interests, or the Insurance Proceeds (the "UBS Recovery"), UBS will reimburse HCMLP ten percent of the UBS Recovery for the Reimbursable Expenses incurred by HCMLP, subject to: (1) the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date and (2) UBS's receipt and review of invoices and time records (which may be redacted as reasonably necessary) for outside consultants and professionals in connection with such efforts described in this Section 1(c), up to but not exceeding the Expense Cap after any disputes regarding the Reimbursable Expenses have been resolved pursuant to procedures to be agreed upon, or absent an agreement, in a manner directed by the Bankruptcy Court; and provided further that in any proceeding over the reasonableness of the Reimbursable Expenses, the losing party shall be obligated to pay the reasonable fees and expenses of the prevailing party; and provided further that any litigation in which HCMLP is a co-plaintiff with UBS or a plaintiff pursuing claims on behalf of or for UBS's benefit pursuant to this Section 1(c) shall be conducted in consultation with UBS, including but not limited to the selection of necessary outside consultants and professionals to assist in such litigation; and provided further that UBS shall have the right to approve HCMLP's selection of outside consultants and professionals to assist in any litigation in which HCMLP is a co-plaintiff with UBS or a plaintiff pursuing claims on behalf of or for UBS's benefit pursuant to this Section 1(c).

(d) Redeemer Appeal.

(i) On the Agreement Effective Date, provided that neither the Redeemer Committee nor any entities acting on its behalf or with any assistance from or coordination with the Redeemer Committee have objected to this Agreement or the 9019 Motion (as defined below), UBS shall withdraw with prejudice its appeal of the Order Approving Debtor's Settlement with (A) the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund (Claim No. 72) and (B) the Highland Crusader Funds (Claim No. 81), and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith [Docket No. 1273] (the "Redeemer Appeal"); and

(ii) The Parties have stipulated to extend the deadline for the filing of any briefs in the Redeemer Appeal to June 30, 2021 and will agree to such further extensions as necessary to facilitate this Settlement Agreement.

(e) As of the Agreement Effective Date, the restrictions and obligations set forth in the May Settlement, other than those in Section 7 thereof, shall be extinguished in their entirety and be of no further force or effect.

(f) On the Agreement Effective Date, the Debtor shall instruct the claims agent in the Bankruptcy Case to adjust the claims register in accordance with this Agreement.

(g) On the Agreement Effective Date, any claim the Debtor may have against Sentinel or any other party, and any recovery related thereto, with respect to the MSCF Interests shall be automatically transferred to UBS, without any further action required by the Debtor. For the avoidance of doubt, the Debtor shall retain any and all other claims it may have against Sentinel or any other party, and the recovery related thereto, unrelated to the MSCF Interests.

2. Definitions.

(a) "Agreement Effective Date" shall mean the date the full amount of the Multi-Strat Payment defined in Section 1(b) above, including without limitation the amounts held in the Escrow Account (as defined in the May Settlement), is actually paid to UBS.

(b) "HCMLP Parties" shall mean (a) HCMLP, in its individual capacity; (b) HCMLP, as manager of Multi-Strat; and (c) Strand.

(c) "Order Date" shall mean the date of an order entered by the Bankruptcy Court approving this Agreement pursuant to a motion filed under Rule 9019 and section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code.

(d) "UBS Parties" shall mean UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch.

3. Releases.

or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "UBS Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to (1) the obligations of the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties under this Agreement, including without limitation the allowance of or distributions on account of the UBS Claim or the settlement terms described in Sections 1(a)-(g) above; (2) the Funds or HFP, including for any liability with respect to the prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, and/or Insurance Policy, or such prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, and/or Insurance Policy by UBS; (3) James Dondero or Mark Okada, or any entities, including without limitation Hunter Mountain Investment Trust, Dugaboy Investment Trust, and NexBank, SSB, owned or controlled by either of them, other than the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties (but for the avoidance of doubt, such releases of the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties shall be solely with respect to such entities and shall not extend in any way to James Dondero or Mark Okada in their individual capacity or in any other capacity, including but not limited to as an investor, officer, trustee, or director in the HCMLP Parties or MSCF Parties); (4) Sentinel or its subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, assigns, employees, or directors, including James Dondero, Isaac Leventon, Scott Ellington, Andrew Dean, Christopher Walter, Jean Paul Sevilla, Matthew DiOrio, Katie Irving, and/or any other current or former employee or director of the Funds or Sentinel and/or any other former employee or former director of any of the HCMLP Parties that is believed to be involved with the Purchase Agreement, Insurance Policy, MSCF Interests, or Transferred Assets, including for any liability with respect to the prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, the MSCF Interests, any potentially fraudulent transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel and/or Insurance Policy, excluding the HCMLP Excluded Employees; (5) the economic rights or interests of UBS in its capacity as an investor, directly or indirectly (including in its capacity as an investment manager and/or investment advisor), in any HCMLP-affiliated entity, including without limitation in the Redeemer Committee and Credit Strat, and/or in such entities' past, present or future subsidiaries and feeders funds (the "UBS Unrelated Investments"); and (6) any actions taken by UBS against any person or entity, including any HCMLP Party or MSCF Party, to enjoin a distribution on the Sentinel Redemption or the transfer of any assets currently held by or within the control of CDO Fund to Sentinel or a subsequent transferee or to seek to compel any action that only such person or entity has standing to pursue or authorize in order to permit UBS to recover the Insurance Proceeds, Transferred Assets, the Phase I Judgment or any recovery against HFP; provided, however, that, from and after the date hereof, any out-of-pocket fees or expenses incurred by HCMLP in connection with this Section 3(a)(6) will be considered Reimbursable Expenses and shall be subject to, and applied against, the Expense Cap as if they were incurred by HCMLP pursuant to Section 1(c) subject to the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date and after any disputes regarding such Reimbursable Expenses have been resolved in the manner described in Section 1(c).

(b) HCMLP Release. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the HCMLP Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue any of the UBS Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "HCMLP Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to the obligations of the UBS Parties under this Agreement or Section 7 of the May Settlement; and (b) the obligations of the UBS Parties in connection with the UBS Unrelated Investments.

(c) Multi-Strat Release. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the MSCF Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue any of the UBS Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "Multi-Strat Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to the obligations of the UBS Parties under this Agreement or Section 7 of the May Settlement.

4. No Third Party Beneficiaries. Except for the parties released by this Agreement, no other person or entity shall be deemed a third-party beneficiary of this Agreement.

5. UBS Covenant Not to Sue. Subject to the occurrence of the Agreement Effective date, if UBS ever controls any HCMLP-affiliated defendant in the State Court Action by virtue of the prosecution, enforcement, or collection of the Phase I Judgment (collectively, the "Controlled State Court Defendants"), UBS covenants on behalf of itself and the Controlled State Court Defendants, if any, that neither UBS nor the Controlled State Court Defendants will assert or pursue any claims that any Controlled State Court Defendant has or may have against any of the HCMLP Parties; provided, however, that nothing shall prohibit UBS or a Controlled State Court Defendant from taking any of the actions set forth in Section 3(a)(1)-(6); provided further, however, if and to the extent UBS receives any distribution from any Controlled State Court Defendant that is derived from a claim by a Controlled State Court Defendant against the Debtor, subject to the exceptions set forth in Section 3(a), which distribution is directly attributable to any property the Controlled State Court Defendant receives from the Debtor and separate and distinct from property owned or controlled by CDO Fund, SOHC, or Multi-Strat, then such recovery shall be credited against all amounts due from the Debtor's estate on account of the UBS Claim allowed pursuant to Section 1(a) of this Agreement, or if such claim has been paid in full, shall be promptly turned over to the Debtor or its successors or assigns.

6. Agreement Subject to Bankruptcy Court Approval.

(a) The force and effect of this Agreement and the Parties' obligations hereunder are conditioned in all respects on the approval of this Agreement and the releases herein by the Bankruptcy Court. The Parties agree to use reasonable efforts to have this Agreement expeditiously approved by the Bankruptcy Court by cooperating in the preparation and prosecution of a mutually agreeable motion and proposed order (the "9019 Motion") to be filed by the Debtor no later than five business days after execution of this Agreement by all Parties unless an extension is agreed to by both parties.

7. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each UBS Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the UBS Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any UBS Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such UBS Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any UBS Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such UBS Party.

(b) Each HCMLP Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the HCMLP Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any HCMLP Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such HCMLP Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any HCMLP Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such HCMLP Party.

(c) Each MSCF Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the Multi-Strat Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any Multi-Strat Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such MSCF Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any Multi-Strat Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such MSCF Party.

8. No Admission of Liability. The Parties acknowledge that there is a bona fide dispute with respect to the UBS Claim. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed, expressly or by implication, as an admission of liability, fault, or wrongdoing by HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, UBS, or any other person, and the execution of this Agreement does not constitute an admission of liability, fault, or wrongdoing on the part of HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, UBS, or any other person.

9. Successors-in-Interest. This Agreement shall be binding upon and shall inure to the benefit of each of the Parties and their representatives, successors, and assigns.

10. Notice. Each notice and other communication hereunder shall be in writing and will, unless otherwise subsequently directed in writing, be delivered by email and overnight delivery, as set forth below, and will be deemed to have been given on the date following such mailing.

11. Advice of Counsel. Each of the Parties represents that such Party has: (a) been adequately represented by independent legal counsel of its own choice, throughout all of the negotiations that preceded the execution of this Agreement; (b) executed this Agreement upon the advice of such counsel; (c) read this Agreement, and understands and assents to all the terms and conditions contained herein without any reservations; and (d) had the opportunity to have this Agreement and all the terms and conditions contained herein explained by independent counsel, who has answered any and all questions asked of such counsel, or which could have been asked of such counsel, including, but not limited to, with regard to the meaning and effect of any of the provisions of this Agreement.

12. Entire Agreement. This Agreement contains the entire agreement and understanding concerning the subject matter of this Agreement, and supersedes and replaces all prior negotiations and agreements, written or oral and executed or unexecuted, concerning such subject matter. Each of the Parties acknowledges that no other Party, nor any agent of or attorney for any such Party, has made any promise, representation, or warranty, express or implied, written or oral, not otherwise contained in this Agreement to induce any Party to execute this Agreement. The Parties further acknowledge that they are not executing this Agreement in reliance on any promise, representation, or warranty not contained in this Agreement, and that any such reliance would be unreasonable. This Agreement will not be waived or modified except by an agreement in writing signed by each Party or duly authorized representative of each Party.

13. No Party Deemed Drafter. The Parties acknowledge that the terms of this Agreement are contractual and are the result of arm's-length negotiations between the Parties and their chosen counsel. Each Party and its counsel cooperated in the drafting and preparation of this Agreement. In any construction to be made of this Agreement, the Agreement will not be construed against any Party.

14. Future Cooperation. The Parties agree to cooperate and execute such further documentation as is reasonably necessary to effectuate the intent of this Agreement.

15. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts with the same force and effect as if executed in one complete document. Each Party's signature hereto will signify acceptance of, and agreement to, the terms and provisions contained in this Agreement.

Photographic, electronic, and facsimile copies of signed counterparts may be used in lieu of the originals of this Agreement for any purpose.

16. Governing Law; Venue; Attorneys' Fees and Costs. The Parties agree that this Agreement will be governed by and will be construed according to the laws of the State of New York without regard to conflict-of-law principles. Each of the Parties hereby submits to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court during the pendency of the Bankruptcy Case and thereafter to the exclusive jurisdiction of the state and federal courts located in the Borough of Manhattan, New York, with respect to any disputes arising from or out of this Agreement. In any action to enforce this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover its reasonable and necessary attorneys' fees and costs (including experts).

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:	)	Chapter 11
HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,[1]	)	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (SGJ)
Debtor.	)

ADDENDUM TO PROOF OF CLAIM FILED BY
UBS AG, LONDON BRANCH

1. UBS Securities LLC hereby submits this addendum to its proof of claim (together, the "Proof of Claim") against Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Chapter 11 Case").

2. UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG, London Branch (together, the "Claimant" or "UBS") each have claims against the Debtor and each is filing a proof of claim in this Chapter 11 Case. Because their claims arise from the same set of factual events, including the same failed transaction, misconduct involving the Debtor and its affiliates, and subsequent litigation, the UBS claims overlap and their proof of claim forms and addendums are substantially the same.

3. This addendum is attached to, incorporated into, and constitutes an integral part of Claimant's Proof of Claim against the Debtor. Claimant files this Proof of Claim under compulsion of the Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488], as extended by the Joint Stipulation and Order Extending Bar Date [Docket No. 547] and modified by the Order Denying UBS's Motion for Relief from the Automatic Stay to Proceed with State Court Action [Docket No. 765], solely for the purpose of asserting Claimant's claims against the Debtor, as more particularly described and subject to any limitations set forth below.

Factual Background

A. The Knox Transaction

2. Claimant's claims arise out of a failed transaction dating back thirteen years ago and the state court action (the "State Court Action") that followed between Claimant, the Debtor, Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC") (together with CDO Fund, the "Fund Counterparties," and the Fund Parties and the Debtor collectively, "Highland"), among other parties.[2]

3. In early 2007, Claimant and Highland agreed to pursue a complex form of securitization transaction known as a "CLO Squared" (the "Knox Transaction"). (Ex. B, Decision at 2.) The purpose of the Knox Transaction was to acquire and securitize a series of collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") securities and credit default swap ("CDS") assets (the "Knox Assets"). To that end, the Debtor agreed to be the "Servicer" of the Knox Transaction, and as such was responsible for identifying the specific CLO and CDS assets to be securitized. Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets identified by Highland. Claimant would then hold, or "warehouse," the assets until the securitization was completed (the "Knox Warehouse"). Under this arrangement, Claimant financed the acquisition of $818 million in Knox Assets. (Id.)

4. The parties' first attempt at the Knox Transaction was not completed successfully and the relevant agreements expired in August 2007 without the contemplated securitization having occurred. (Id. at 3.) Rather than end their relationship, however, Highland and Claimant continued to consider the possibility of pursuing the contemplated securitization in 2008 under restructured versions of the prior agreements. Highland and Claimant always understood that—if the securitization were not successful—the Fund Counterparties would be obligated to pay Claimant for 100% of the losses on any CLO or CDS assets that been acquired and warehoused for the securitization. In order to convince Claimant to agree to enter restructured versions of those agreements and to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets, Highland assured Claimant that the Fund Counterparties had sufficient assets to cover any losses. It did so by providing Claimant with false, incomplete, and otherwise misleading information concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 47-61.)

5. In addition, Claimant specifically conditioned its agreement to enter the restructured agreements on the Fund Counterparties' ability to post an additional $70 million in cash and securities as collateral (the "Initial Restructuring Collateral"), in which Claimant would hold a security interest. (Id. ¶¶ 56-59; Ex. B, Decision at 3.) Highland assembled $70 million in such Initial Restructuring Collateral. But what Highland did not tell Claimant—and what is now clear was omitted on purpose—was that the Fund Counterparties did not own all of the Initial Restructuring Collateral they were expected to post. Instead, to meet this obligation, the Debtor exercised its control over other Highland affiliates, transferring and redirecting assets from such other entities that it controlled to assemble the Initial Restructuring Collateral. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 56-59.)

6. Similarly, while negotiating the restructured transaction, Highland provided Claimant with financial reports and statements that contained materially false and misleading information and omissions concerning the financial condition of the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 47-52.) The Debtor itself had prepared these financial statements and knew they contained material misstatements. (Id. ¶¶ 48-50, 54.) Among other things, Highland misrepresented the amount of cash held by CDO Fund. (Id. ¶ 52.) Highland also failed to disclose that many of the assets on the Fund Counterparties' financial statements already had been encumbered. (Id. ¶¶ 51, 53.) These misrepresentations not only evince a specific intent by Highland to induce Claimant into entering the restructured agreements, but a longstanding willingness to prevent Claimant from ever recovering the amounts owed under the parties' proposed agreements in the event the Knox Assets suffered any losses. In addition, these events show the Debtor's singular control over—and ability to move—assets from one Highland affiliate to another at will.

7. Based on Highland's material misstatements and omissions, Claimant agreed to pursue the restructured transaction and once more attempt the securitization, and the parties executed three new written agreements: an Engagement Letter, a Cash Warehouse Agreement, and a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (collectively, the "Warehouse Agreements"). (See Ex. B, Decision at 3.) The Engagement Letter was executed by Claimant and the Debtor; the Fund Counterparties were not parties to the Engagement Letter. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 62.) The Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements were executed by Claimant and the Debtor, along with the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 64-65.)

8. As described above, Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets that the parties planned to securitize. In so doing, the key risk Claimant faced was the possibility that the Knox Assets would lose value while securitization was pending. To address this risk, Claimant and the Debtor agreed in the Engagement Letter that the Fund Counterparties would bear this risk. Notably, at the time, the Debtor was the Investment Manager to the Fund Counterparties under agreements that gave the Debtor total control over those entities. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 24, 26.)

9. The Warehouse Agreements reiterated that the Fund Counterparties (as controlled by the Debtor) would bear the risk, specifying that if the Knox Assets lost value while securitization was pending, the Fund Counterparties "will in aggregate bear 100% of the risk" for the Knox Assets—with CDO Fund bearing 51% of any losses and SOHC bearing the remaining 49%.

10. To further protect Claimant in the event that the Knox Assets lost value, the Warehouse Agreements provided for recurring measurements of mark-to-market losses on all assets in the Knox Warehouse and required the Fund Counterparties to post collateral in the event the Knox Assets lost a set amount of value. Specifically, the parties agreed that the Fund Counterparties would post an additional $10 million in collateral for each $100 million in losses to the overall value of the Knox Assets. (Ex. B, Decision at 4.)

11. In September and October 2008, amid the global economic recession, the value of the Knox Assets dropped by $100 million, twice. Thus, Claimant twice exercised its contractual right to demand additional collateral. And twice Highland posted the required collateral. (Id.) Although the Warehouse Agreements specified that it was the Fund Counterparties who would post collateral, the Debtor moved assets around from other entities it controlled to make the first two collateral calls (without disclosing this practice to Claimant). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 79.) On or about November 7, 2008, Claimant issued a third margin call, because the value of the Knox Assets suffered additional losses of $200 million (bringing the aggregate losses to over $400 million).

(Ex. B, Decision at 4.) This time, Highland refused to provide the additional collateral required under the Warehouse Agreements.

12. Highland's default on Claimant's third margin call triggered a termination event under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.) On December 5, 2008, Claimant gave Highland formal notice of default and demanded the Fund Counterparties pay Claimant for 100% of the losses incurred on the Knox Assets—which had, by then, grown to over $520 million.

13. There is no question that the Debtor knew the Fund Counterparties were liable for the losses under the Warehouse Agreements. Indeed, the Highland officer who executed the Warehouse Agreements admitted under oath that, "as of the end of the year 2008," Highland knew that the Fund Counterparties owed Claimant "hundreds of millions of dollars in connection with the Knox Warehouse Agreements." (Travers Dep. at 261:8-20).) But rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, the Debtor, with Mr. Dondero at the helm, "devised a strategy to delay the resolution of that obligation [to pay Claimant] for as long as possible." (Id.) To that end, Highland devised and subsequently deployed a multifaceted strategy—one that would last for many years thereafter—to intentionally frustrate and prevent Claimant from recovering any of the amounts that both the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties knew were rightfully owed to Claimant under the Warehouse Agreements.

14. First, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold any payment to Claimant—a position that the Fund Counterparties maintained (again, under the specific direction of the Debtor) for more than a decade. (See id.) The Debtor did so not only with the specific knowledge that the Fund Counterparties owed hundreds of millions of dollars to Claimant for the losses on the Knox Assets, but with the knowledge that Claimant would come seeking payment for such losses and, in particular, to look toward any and all collateral owned by the Fund Counterparties as one source of payment. As one of Highland's officers stated an internal email to Mr. Dondero in an internal email dated January 16, 2009: "[UBS] is going to be calling [] today asking for all additional collateral that cdo and sohc have left to cover the obligation left by the knox transaction." But rather than turning over the collateral in question to Claimant or, at the very least, securing such assets so that they could be used to pay Claimant, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold such assets and payments from Claimant: "[T]hey can see us in court for their additional collateral." True to that promise, even after Claimant filed suit and laid out the amounts due under the contracts, the Debtor forced the Fund Counterparties to launch an affirmative, multi-year campaign—one which would consume much of the cash and assets belonging to the Fund Counterparties themselves—to stave off any payment from the Fund Counterparties to force Claimant to try to recover such claims through litigation and, once in litigation, devising knowingly baseless defenses and arguments for the Fund Counterparties to assert in such litigation.

15. On top of directing the Fund Counterparties to withhold payment and force Claimant to litigate for amounts the Debtor already knew they rightfully owed to Claimant, the Debtor undertook a litany of other actions to ensure that, even if Claimant were successful in the litigation it had been forced to initiate against the Fund Counterparties, it would not be able to collect any judgment arising out of the litigation. Such actions included, but were not limited to, a series of fraudulent transfers out of, and away from, an alter ego of SOHC, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 109.) These internal transfers of funds—all overseen by James Dondero, the Debtor's founder and president—were designed to prevent Claimant from ever collecting the millions of dollars it was owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

16. In addition to such fraudulent transfers, the Debtor also took steps after the lawsuit was filed to ensure that no additional value would be transferred to the Fund Counterparties—deliberately taking steps to keep both SOHC and CDO Fund undercapitalized. Not only did the Debtor prevent additional value from being transferred to the Fund Counterparties, it is clear that the Debtor also failed to ensure that the Fund Counterparties retained assets that could be used to pay any such judgment. Quite to the contrary, it is now clear that any and all assets of any value that once belonged to the Fund Counterparties have, in one way or another, been transferred away, drained, or otherwise wasted by the Fund Counterparties, the Debtor itself, or the Debtor's affiliates—all at the Debtor's direction. Indeed, in a recent filing before this Court, the Debtor recently disclosed that both of the Fund Counterparties are completely "insolvent." (Docket No. 687 at 1.) This means that—separate and apart from the transfers of assets out of, and away from, HFP that occurred in 2009—the Debtor has directed, or otherwise permitted, the Fund Counterparties to engage in acts that have left these once marque investment funds with literally no assets that can be used to pay Claimant. All such actions and omissions by the Debtor were performed with either the specific intent to prevent or frustrate Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements, or a wanton and reckless disregard of Claimant's rights to those amounts. Such actions and omissions constitute breaches of the Debtor's duty of good faith and fair dealing under the Warehouse Agreements.

B. The State Court Action and the Debtor's Efforts to Avoid Paying Claimant

17. On February 24, 2009, Claimant filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York (the "State Court") against the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties. With knowledge of Claimant's lawsuit, the Debtor exercised its control over the Fund Counterparties to ensure they would not meet their obligations and to impede Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed by those entities. (Id. ¶¶ 112, 114.) Rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, and as discussed above, the Debtor orchestrated an extensive multi-part strategy to delay resolution of Claimant's claims for as long as possible. As a result, the Debtor further interfered with Claimant's contractual rights, thereby breaching the covenants of good faith and fair dealing inherent in the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.)

18. By this time, the Fund Counterparties and SOHC's alter ego, HFP, had become insolvent, although they still owned significant assets. (Id. ¶ 108.) Nonetheless, the Debtor failed to act in good faith to cause HFP to satisfy the debts, as much as possible, then owed to Claimant. Instead, the Debtor caused HFP to make additional improper and fraudulent asset transfers, deliberately kept the Fund Counterparties undercapitalized, and allowed all assets of any value to be drained from the Fund Counterparties—acts which not only impaired Claimant's ability to recover anything from the Fund Counterparties, but precluded it altogether. (Id. ¶ 111.) In March 2009, conscious that Claimant had commenced an action against Highland a few weeks earlier, and in breach of their continuing duty of good faith and fair dealing, and with actual fraudulent intent, the Debtor and HFP caused asset transfers of millions of dollars of assets to the Debtor, Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (now Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) (collectively, the "Affiliated Transferee Defendants"), among others, thereby further reducing Highland's abilities to meet their obligations to Claimant. (Id. ¶¶ 111, 113.) The Debtor and its principals exercised domination over the Fund Counterparties to improperly transfer substantial assets from the Fund Counterparties and HFP for their own personal gain, i.e., solely and improperly to protect and enhance the value of the Debtor and its principals by wrongful and improper means. In the process, the Debtor and its principals made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to pay Claimant the losses that they and the Debtor had agreed they would pay under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id. ¶¶ 112-114.)

19. As Claimant learned about Highland's conduct through discovery, Claimant amended its complaint to assert additional claims and name additional Highland entities, including HFP, the Affiliated Transferee Defendants, and Strand Advisors, Inc. As amended and stated in its Second Amended Complaint (attached hereto as Exhibit A) in the State Court Action, filed on May 11, 2011, Claimant's claims include breach of contract claims directly against the Fund Counterparties, as well as claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference, and declaratory judgments for alter ego liability against HFP and general partner liability against Strand Advisors, Inc. The Debtor subsequently brought counterclaims against Claimant for breach of contract and unjust enrichment. (See Ex. B, Decision at 35-37.)

20. The procedural history of the State Court Action is complex. The Debtor and its affiliates and Claimant filed, and the State Court ruled on, four sets of motions to dismiss. The Debtor and its affiliates then filed two sets of summary judgment motions, which led to a series of complex rulings by the State Court in 2017. The parties filed various interlocutory appeals of the State Court's rulings on the motions to dismiss and for summary judgment. Those appeals were heard by the Appellate Division for the First Judicial Department in the County of New York, with the Appellate Division issuing five decisions over this suit's protracted history (some of which are still subject to further appellate rights).

21. Also included in the Appellate Division's decisions was an order arising from an appeal of the State Court's ruling on Claimant's motion to restrain Defendants Highland Credit

Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P. from disposing of property received through the fraudulent transfers orchestrated by the Debtor. Claimant showed it had a likelihood of success on the merits of its fraudulent transfer claims, and the Appellate Division enjoined both Highland entities from disposing of their assets. Ultimately, these injunctions resulted in partial settlements between Claimant and Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P.

22. By early 2018, more than nine years after Claimant first filed suit, the parties were finally ready to proceed to trial. Due to a jury waiver clause in the Warehouse Agreements, however, and after related pre-trial briefing, the State Court bifurcated Claimant's claims into two distinct phases for trial: Phase I, consisting of a bench trial on Claimant's claims against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, as well as the Debtor's counterclaims; and Phase II, consisting of a jury trial on Claimant's remaining claims against all remaining Highland entities, including the Debtor.[3] (Ex. B, Decision at 2 n.1, 38.)

23. The State Court presided over a thirteen-day bench trial for Phase I from July 9 through July 27, 2018. (Id. at 1.) On November 14, 2019, the State Court entered a Decision and Order on Phase I (attached hereto as Exhibit B), ruling in favor of Claimant on almost every issue presented in Phase I. In particular, the court found the Fund Counterparties liable to Claimant for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, found no liability on the part of Claimant for either of the Debtor's counterclaims, and rejected almost every one of the Debtor's offset arguments with the only remaining issue (affecting approximately $70,500,000) to be determined after Phase II. (Id. at 39.) An Entry of Judgment on Phase I was entered on February 10, 2020. Under that Phase I final judgment, Claimant is entitled to $1,039,957,799.44, consisting of $519,374,149.00 in damages and $520,583,650.44 in pre-judgment interest as of January 22, 2020, with additional interest of $128,065 having accrued daily until the Entry of Judgment.

24. The next step in the State Court Action is Phase II of the trial, where Claimant's remaining claims against not only the Debtor, but also against other Highland affiliates are to be tried to a jury, with the court deciding liability as to the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim and the jury deciding all remaining claims. (Id. at 2 n.1, 38.) The claims to be tried in Phase II include claims for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyances, and alter-ego liability. The specific amounts the two non-Debtor affiliates owe to Claimant for their breach of the Warehouse Agreements are now set forth and embodied in the final $1 billion judgment from Phase I. And Claimant has stated claims against the Debtor—which was also a party to the same contract and exercised complete control over the two liable affiliates—under which Claimant is entitled to damages that are at least as much as the Phase I judgment amount. Claimant will seek damages for the Debtor's various breaches of the implied covenant as well as its specific role in the fraudulent transfer scheme, and pre-judgment interest and attorneys' fees where available. In addition, Claimant will seek punitive damages against the Debtor for its role in orchestrating the extended efforts to prevent Claimant from collecting the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

25. Currently, Phase II of the State Court Action is stayed against the Debtor by the automatic stay imposed pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code when the Debtor commenced this Chapter 11 Case.

26. Claimant hereby asserts a claim, pending litigation of Phase II, for damages arising from the Debtor's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, its specific role in directing the fraudulent transfers of assets involving HFP, additional interest, further damages (including punitive damages), and attorneys' fees that may be awarded by any court at the conclusion of Phase II.

Reservation of Rights

27. Claimant does not waive or release, and expressly reserves, all rights and remedies at law or in equity that it has or may have against the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, Strand Advisors, Inc., other non-Debtor Highland Defendants, or any other Debtor affiliate, subsidiary, person, or entity.

28. Claimant expressly reserves all of its rights to assert any additional claims, defenses, remedies, and causes of action, including without limitation, claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of contract, tortious interference with contractual relations, fraudulent conveyances, or alter ego recovery. Claimant further reserves all rights to amend, modify, supplement, reclassify, or otherwise revise its Proof of Claim at any time and in any respect, including, without limitation, as necessary or appropriate to amend, quantify or correct amounts, to provide additional detail regarding the claims set forth herein, to assert additional grounds for any of the claims, to seek reconsideration under section 502(j) of the Bankruptcy Code or otherwise of any disallowance of any amounts claimed hereunder, or to reflect any and all additional claims of whatever kind or nature that Claimant has or may have against the Debtor.

29. To the extent any payment to Claimant based on this Proof of Claim, or any portion thereof, is clawed back from Claimant, avoided, or set aside, for any reason whatsoever, or Claimant is required to disgorge any such payment, or any portion thereof, Claimant hereby reserves its rights to amend this Proof of Claim accordingly.

30. The execution and filing of this Proof of Claim is not intended as, nor should it be construed as or deemed to be any of the following: (i) a waiver of the right to seek withdrawal of the reference, or to otherwise challenge the jurisdiction of this Court, with respect to the subject matter of the claims asserted herein, any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect thereto, or any other action or proceeding commenced in this Chapter 11 Case against or otherwise involving Claimant; (ii) an admission that any matter is a core matter for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b) or is a matter as to which this Court can enter a final order or judgment consistent with Article III of the United States Constitution; (iii) a waiver of the right to de novo review by the district court of any order or judgment for which this Court, absent Claimant's consent, lacks authority to enter a final order or judgment; (iv) a consent to the entry by this Court of a final order or judgment with respect to the claims asserted herein or any other matter; (v) a waiver of Claimant's right to a jury trial against the Debtor, as applicable, or waiver of Claimant's right to a jury trial against any of the non-Debtor Defendants; (vi) a waiver or release of the claims or rights of Claimant against any other entity or person that may be liable for all or any part of the claims or any matters related to the claims asserted herein; (vii) a waiver of any rights and remedies Claimant has or may have under the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, Engagement Letter, or any other contract, whether mentioned in this Proof of Claim or not; (viii) a waiver of Claimant's contractual right to seek to have these or any other claims settled by binding arbitration; (ix) a waiver of any right related to the confirmation of any plan of reorganization proposed in this Chapter 11 Case, or any other insolvency-related proceeding that may be commenced, either in the United States or abroad, by or against the Debtor, or any non-Debtor affiliate; (x) a waiver or agreement granting any party relief; or (xi) an election of remedies.

31. Neither this Proof of Claim nor any of its contents shall be deemed or construed as an acknowledgment or admission of any liability or obligation on the part of Claimant. Claimant specifically reserves all of its defenses and rights, procedural and substantive, including, without limitation, its rights with respect to any claim that may be asserted against Claimant by the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, or any affiliate of the Debtor, and its rights to enforce the Cash Warehouse or Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, Engagement Letter, or any other contract.

Right of Setoff and Recoupment

32. Claimant reserves all rights of setoff and recoupment that it may have. To the extent the Debtor or any non-Debtor affiliate asserts any claim against Claimant, Claimant shall have a secured claim to the extent of its right of setoff under section 553 of the Bankruptcy Code or right of recoupment against such claim with respect to the claims asserted herein and any amendments thereto.

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:	)	Chapter 11
HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,[1]	)	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (SGJ)
Debtor.	)

ADDENDUM TO PROOF OF CLAIM FILED BY
UBS AG, LONDON BRANCH

1. UBS AG, London Branch hereby submits this addendum to its proof of claim (together, the "Proof of Claim") against Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Chapter 11 Case").

2. UBS AG, London Branch and UBS Securities LLC (together, the "Claimant" or "UBS") each have claims against the Debtor and each is filing a proof of claim in this Chapter 11 Case. Because their claims arise from the same set of factual events, including the same failed transaction, misconduct involving the Debtor and its affiliates, and subsequent litigation, the UBS claims overlap and their proof of claim forms and addendums are substantially the same.

3. This addendum is attached to, incorporated into, and constitutes an integral part of Claimant's Proof of Claim against the Debtor. Claimant files this Proof of Claim under compulsion of the Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488], as extended by the Joint Stipulation and Order Extending Bar Date [Docket No. 547] and modified by the Order Denying UBS's Motion for Relief from the Automatic Stay to Proceed with State Court Action [Docket No. 765], solely for the purpose of asserting Claimant's claims against the Debtor, as more particularly described and subject to any limitations set forth below.

Factual Background

A. The Knox Transaction

2. Claimant's claims arise out of a failed transaction dating back thirteen years ago and the state court action (the "State Court Action") that followed between Claimant, the Debtor, Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC") (together with CDO Fund, the "Fund Counterparties," and the Fund Parties and the Debtor collectively, "Highland"), among other parties.[2]

3. In early 2007, Claimant and Highland agreed to pursue a complex form of securitization transaction known as a "CLO Squared" (the "Knox Transaction"). (Ex. B, Decision at 2.) The purpose of the Knox Transaction was to acquire and securitize a series of collateralized loan obligation ("CLO") securities and credit default swap ("CDS") assets (the "Knox Assets"). To that end, the Debtor agreed to be the "Servicer" of the Knox Transaction, and as such was responsible for identifying the specific CLO and CDS assets to be securitized. Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets identified by Highland. Claimant would then hold, or "warehouse," the assets until the securitization was completed (the "Knox Warehouse"). Under this arrangement, Claimant financed the acquisition of $818 million in Knox Assets. (Id.)

4. The parties' first attempt at the Knox Transaction was not completed successfully and the relevant agreements expired in August 2007 without the contemplated securitization having occurred. (Id. at 3.) Rather than end their relationship, however, Highland and Claimant continued to consider the possibility of pursuing the contemplated securitization in 2008 under restructured versions of the prior agreements. Highland and Claimant always understood that—if the securitization were not successful—the Fund Counterparties would be obligated to pay Claimant for 100% of the losses on any CLO or CDS assets that been acquired and warehoused for the securitization. In order to convince Claimant to agree to enter restructured versions of those agreements and to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets, Highland assured Claimant that the Fund Counterparties had sufficient assets to cover any losses. It did so by providing Claimant with false, incomplete, and otherwise misleading information concerning the Fund Counterparties' finances and assets. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 47-61.)

5. In addition, Claimant specifically conditioned its agreement to enter the restructured agreements on the Fund Counterparties' ability to post an additional $70 million in cash and securities as collateral (the "Initial Restructuring Collateral"), in which Claimant would hold a security interest. (Id. ¶¶ 56-59; Ex. B, Decision at 3.) Highland assembled $70 million in such Initial Restructuring Collateral. But what Highland did not tell Claimant—and what is now clear was omitted on purpose—was that the Fund Counterparties did not own all of the Initial Restructuring Collateral they were expected to post. Instead, to meet this obligation, the Debtor exercised its control over other Highland affiliates, transferring and redirecting assets from such other entities that it controlled to assemble the Initial Restructuring Collateral. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 56-59.)

6. Similarly, while negotiating the restructured transaction, Highland provided Claimant with financial reports and statements that contained materially false and misleading information and omissions concerning the financial condition of the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 47-52.) The Debtor itself had prepared these financial statements and knew they contained material misstatements. (Id. ¶¶ 48-50, 54.) Among other things, Highland misrepresented the amount of cash held by CDO Fund. (Id. ¶ 52.) Highland also failed to disclose that many of the assets on the Fund Counterparties' financial statements already had been encumbered. (Id. ¶¶ 51, 53.) These misrepresentations not only evince a specific intent by Highland to induce Claimant into entering the restructured agreements, but a longstanding willingness to prevent Claimant from ever recovering the amounts owed under the parties' proposed agreements in the event the Knox Assets suffered any losses. In addition, these events show the Debtor's singular control over—and ability to move—assets from one Highland affiliate to another at will.

7. Based on Highland's material misstatements and omissions, Claimant agreed to pursue the restructured transaction and once more attempt the securitization, and the parties executed three new written agreements: an Engagement Letter, a Cash Warehouse Agreement, and a Synthetic Warehouse Agreement (collectively, the "Warehouse Agreements"). (See Ex. B, Decision at 3.) The Engagement Letter was executed by Claimant and the Debtor; the Fund Counterparties were not parties to the Engagement Letter. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 62.) The Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements were executed by Claimant and the Debtor, along with the Fund Counterparties. (Id. ¶¶ 64-65.)

8. As described above, Claimant agreed to finance the acquisition of the CLO and CDS assets that the parties planned to securitize. In so doing, the key risk Claimant faced was the possibility that the Knox Assets would lose value while securitization was pending. To address

this risk, Claimant and the Debtor agreed in the Engagement Letter that the Fund Counterparties would bear this risk. Notably, at the time, the Debtor was the Investment Manager to the Fund Counterparties under agreements that gave the Debtor total control over those entities. (Ex. A, Compl. ¶¶ 24, 26.)

9. The Warehouse Agreements reiterated that the Fund Counterparties (as controlled by the Debtor) would bear the risk, specifying that if the Knox Assets lost value while securitization was pending, the Fund Counterparties "will in aggregate bear 100% of the risk" for the Knox Assets—with CDO Fund bearing 51% of any losses and SOHC bearing the remaining 49%.

10. To further protect Claimant in the event that the Knox Assets lost value, the Warehouse Agreements provided for recurring measurements of mark-to-market losses on all assets in the Knox Warehouse and required the Fund Counterparties to post collateral in the event the Knox Assets lost a set amount of value. Specifically, the parties agreed that the Fund Counterparties would post an additional $10 million in collateral for each $100 million in losses to the overall value of the Knox Assets. (Ex. B, Decision at 4.)

11. In September and October 2008, amid the global economic recession, the value of the Knox Assets dropped by $100 million, twice. Thus, Claimant twice exercised its contractual right to demand additional collateral. And twice Highland posted the required collateral. (Id.) Although the Warehouse Agreements specified that it was the Fund Counterparties who would post collateral, the Debtor moved assets around from other entities it controlled to make the first two collateral calls (without disclosing this practice to Claimant). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 79.) On or about November 7, 2008, Claimant issued a third margin call, because the value of the Knox Assets suffered additional losses of $200 million (bringing the aggregate losses to over $400 million).

(Ex. B, Decision at 4.) This time, Highland refused to provide the additional collateral required under the Warehouse Agreements.

12. Highland's default on Claimant's third margin call triggered a termination event under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.) On December 5, 2008, Claimant gave Highland formal notice of default and demanded the Fund Counterparties pay Claimant for 100% of the losses incurred on the Knox Assets—which had, by then, grown to over $520 million.

13. There is no question that the Debtor knew the Fund Counterparties were liable for the losses under the Warehouse Agreements. Indeed, the Highland officer who executed the Warehouse Agreements admitted under oath that, "as of the end of the year 2008," Highland knew that the Fund Counterparties owed Claimant "hundreds of millions of dollars in connection with the Knox Warehouse Agreements." (Travers Dep. at 261:8-20).) But rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, the Debtor, with Mr. Dondero at the helm, "devised a strategy to delay the resolution of that obligation [to pay Claimant] for as long as possible." (Id.) To that end, Highland devised and subsequently deployed a multifaceted strategy—one that would last for many years thereafter—to intentionally frustrate and prevent Claimant from recovering any of the amounts that both the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties knew were rightfully owed to Claimant under the Warehouse Agreements.

14. First, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold any payment to Claimant—a position that the Fund Counterparties maintained (again, under the specific direction of the Debtor) for more than a decade. (See id.) The Debtor did so not only with the specific knowledge that the Fund Counterparties owed hundreds of millions of dollars to Claimant for the losses on the Knox Assets, but with the knowledge that Claimant would come seeking payment for such losses and, in particular, to look toward any and all collateral owned by the Fund Counterparties as one source of payment. As one of Highland's officers stated an internal email to Mr. Dondero in an internal email dated January 16, 2009: "[UBS] is going to be calling [] today asking for all additional collateral that cdo and sohc have left to cover the obligation left by the knox transaction." But rather than turning over the collateral in question to Claimant or, at the very least, securing such assets so that they could be used to pay Claimant, the Debtor directed the Fund Counterparties to withhold such assets and payments from Claimant: "[T]hey can see us in court for their additional collateral." True to that promise, even after Claimant filed suit and laid out the amounts due under the contracts, the Debtor forced the Fund Counterparties to launch an affirmative, multi-year campaign—one which would consume much of the cash and assets belonging to the Fund Counterparties themselves—to stave off any payment from the Fund Counterparties to force Claimant to try to recover such claims through litigation and, once in litigation, devising knowingly baseless defenses and arguments for the Fund Counterparties to assert in such litigation.

15. On top of directing the Fund Counterparties to withhold payment and force Claimant to litigate for amounts the Debtor already knew they rightfully owed to Claimant, the Debtor undertook a litany of other actions to ensure that, even if Claimant were successful in the litigation it had been forced to initiate against the Fund Counterparties, it would not be able to collect any judgment arising out of the litigation. Such actions included, but were not limited to, a series of fraudulent transfers out of, and away from, an alter ego of SOHC, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"). (Ex. A, Compl. ¶ 109.) These internal transfers of funds—all overseen by James Dondero, the Debtor's founder and president—were designed to prevent Claimant from ever collecting the millions of dollars it was owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

16. In addition to such fraudulent transfers, the Debtor also took steps after the lawsuit was filed to ensure that no additional value would be transferred to the Fund Counterparties—deliberately taking steps to keep both SOHC and CDO Fund undercapitalized. Not only did the Debtor prevent additional value from being transferred to the Fund Counterparties, it is clear that the Debtor also failed to ensure that the Fund Counterparties retained assets that could be used to pay any such judgment. Quite to the contrary, it is now clear that any and all assets of any value that once belonged to the Fund Counterparties have, in one way or another, been transferred away, drained, or otherwise wasted by the Fund Counterparties, the Debtor itself, or the Debtor's affiliates—all at the Debtor's direction. Indeed, in a recent filing before this Court, the Debtor recently disclosed that both of the Fund Counterparties are completely "insolvent." (Docket No. 687 at 1.) This means that—separate and apart from the transfers of assets out of, and away from, HFP that occurred in 2009—the Debtor has directed, or otherwise permitted, the Fund Counterparties to engage in acts that have left these once marque investment funds with literally no assets that can be used to pay Claimant. All such actions and omissions by the Debtor were performed with either the specific intent to prevent or frustrate Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements, or a wanton and reckless disregard of Claimant's rights to those amounts. Such actions and omissions constitute breaches of the Debtor's duty of good faith and fair dealing under the Warehouse Agreements.

B. The State Court Action and the Debtor's Efforts to Avoid Paying Claimant

17. On February 24, 2009, Claimant filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York (the "State Court") against the Debtor and the Fund Counterparties. With knowledge of Claimant's lawsuit, the Debtor exercised its control over the Fund Counterparties to ensure they would not meet their obligations and to impede Claimant's ability to recover the amounts owed by those entities. (Id. ¶¶ 112, 114.) Rather than paying Claimant what it was owed, and as discussed above, the Debtor orchestrated an extensive multi-part strategy to delay resolution of Claimant's claims for as long as possible. As a result, the Debtor further interfered with Claimant's contractual rights, thereby breaching the covenants of good faith and fair dealing inherent in the Warehouse Agreements. (Id.)

18. By this time, the Fund Counterparties and SOHC's alter ego, HFP, had become insolvent, although they still owned significant assets. (Id. ¶ 108.) Nonetheless, the Debtor failed to act in good faith to cause HFP to satisfy the debts, as much as possible, then owed to Claimant. Instead, the Debtor caused HFP to make additional improper and fraudulent asset transfers, deliberately kept the Fund Counterparties undercapitalized, and allowed all assets of any value to be drained from the Fund Counterparties—acts which not only impaired Claimant's ability to recover anything from the Fund Counterparties, but precluded it altogether. (Id. ¶ 111.) In March 2009, conscious that Claimant had commenced an action against Highland a few weeks earlier, and in breach of their continuing duty of good faith and fair dealing, and with actual fraudulent intent, the Debtor and HFP caused asset transfers of millions of dollars of assets to the Debtor, Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (now Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) (collectively, the "Affiliated Transferee Defendants"), among others, thereby further reducing Highland's abilities to meet their obligations to Claimant. (Id. ¶¶ 111, 113.) The Debtor and its principals exercised domination over the Fund Counterparties to improperly transfer substantial assets from the Fund Counterparties and HFP for their own personal gain, i.e., solely and improperly to protect and enhance the value of the Debtor and its principals by wrongful and improper means. In the process, the Debtor and its principals made it impossible for the Fund Counterparties to pay Claimant the losses that they and the Debtor had agreed they would pay under the Warehouse Agreements. (Id. ¶¶ 112-114.)

19. As Claimant learned about Highland's conduct through discovery, Claimant amended its complaint to assert additional claims and name additional Highland entities, including HFP, the Affiliated Transferee Defendants, and Strand Advisors, Inc. As amended and stated in its Second Amended Complaint (attached hereto as Exhibit A) in the State Court Action, filed on May 11, 2011, Claimant's claims include breach of contract claims directly against the Fund Counterparties, as well as claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference, and declaratory judgments for alter ego liability against HFP and general partner liability against Strand Advisors, Inc. The Debtor subsequently brought counterclaims against Claimant for breach of contract and unjust enrichment. (See Ex. B, Decision at 35-37.)

20. The procedural history of the State Court Action is complex. The Debtor and its affiliates and Claimant filed, and the State Court ruled on, four sets of motions to dismiss. The Debtor and its affiliates then filed two sets of summary judgment motions, which led to a series of complex rulings by the State Court in 2017. The parties filed various interlocutory appeals of the State Court's rulings on the motions to dismiss and for summary judgment. Those appeals were heard by the Appellate Division for the First Judicial Department in the County of New York, with the Appellate Division issuing five decisions over this suit's protracted history (some of which are still subject to further appellate rights).

21. Also included in the Appellate Division's decisions was an order arising from an appeal of the State Court's ruling on Claimant's motion to restrain Defendants Highland Credit

Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P. from disposing of property received through the fraudulent transfers orchestrated by the Debtor. Claimant showed it had a likelihood of success on the merits of its fraudulent transfer claims, and the Appellate Division enjoined both Highland entities from disposing of their assets. Ultimately, these injunctions resulted in partial settlements between Claimant and Highland Credit Strategies Master Fund, L.P. and Highland Crusader Partners, L.P.

22. By early 2018, more than nine years after Claimant first filed suit, the parties were finally ready to proceed to trial. Due to a jury waiver clause in the Warehouse Agreements, however, and after related pre-trial briefing, the State Court bifurcated Claimant's claims into two distinct phases for trial: Phase I, consisting of a bench trial on Claimant's claims against the Fund Counterparties for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, as well as the Debtor's counterclaims; and Phase II, consisting of a jury trial on Claimant's remaining claims against all remaining Highland entities, including the Debtor.[3] (Ex. B, Decision at 2 n.1, 38.)

23. The State Court presided over a thirteen-day bench trial for Phase I from July 9 through July 27, 2018. (Id. at 1.) On November 14, 2019, the State Court entered a Decision and Order on Phase I (attached hereto as Exhibit B), ruling in favor of Claimant on almost every issue presented in Phase I. In particular, the court found the Fund Counterparties liable to Claimant for breach of the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, found no liability on the part of Claimant for either of the Debtor's counterclaims, and rejected almost every one of the Debtor's offset arguments with the only remaining issue (affecting approximately $70,500,000) to be determined after Phase II. (Id. at 39.) An Entry of Judgment on Phase I was entered on February 10, 2020. Under that Phase I final judgment, Claimant is entitled to $1,039,957,799.44, consisting of $519,374,149.00 in damages and $520,583,650.44 in pre-judgment interest as of January 22, 2020, with additional interest of $128,065 having accrued daily until the Entry of Judgment.

24. The next step in the State Court Action is Phase II of the trial, where Claimant's remaining claims against not only the Debtor, but also against other Highland affiliates are to be tried to a jury, with the court deciding liability as to the breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing claim and the jury deciding all remaining claims. (Id. at 2 n.1, 38.) The claims to be tried in Phase II include claims for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, fraudulent conveyances, and alter-ego liability. The specific amounts the two non-Debtor affiliates owe to Claimant for their breach of the Warehouse Agreements are now set forth and embodied in the final $1 billion judgment from Phase I. And Claimant has stated claims against the Debtor—which was also a party to the same contract and exercised complete control over the two liable affiliates—under which Claimant is entitled to damages that are at least as much as the Phase I judgment amount. Claimant will seek damages for the Debtor's various breaches of the implied covenant as well as its specific role in the fraudulent transfer scheme, and pre-judgment interest and attorneys' fees where available. In addition, Claimant will seek punitive damages against the Debtor for its role in orchestrating the extended efforts to prevent Claimant from collecting the amounts owed under the Warehouse Agreements.

25. Currently, Phase II of the State Court Action is stayed against the Debtor by the automatic stay imposed pursuant to section 362 of the Bankruptcy Code when the Debtor commenced this Chapter 11 Case.

26. Claimant hereby asserts a claim, pending litigation of Phase II, for damages arising from the Debtor's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, its specific role in directing the fraudulent transfers of assets involving HFP, additional interest, further damages (including punitive damages), and attorneys' fees that may be awarded by any court at the conclusion of Phase II.

27. Claimant does not waive or release, and expressly reserves, all rights and remedies at law or in equity that it has or may have against the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, Strand Advisors, Inc., other non-Debtor Highland Defendants, or any other Debtor affiliate, subsidiary, person, or entity.

28. Claimant expressly reserves all of its rights to assert any additional claims, defenses, remedies, and causes of action, including without limitation, claims for fraudulent inducement, breach of contract, tortious interference with contractual relations, fraudulent conveyances, or alter ego recovery. Claimant further reserves all rights to amend, modify, supplement, reclassify, or otherwise revise its Proof of Claim at any time and in any respect, including, without limitation, as necessary or appropriate to amend, quantify or correct amounts, to provide additional detail regarding the claims set forth herein, to assert additional grounds for any of the claims, to seek reconsideration under section 502(j) of the Bankruptcy Code or otherwise of any disallowance of any amounts claimed hereunder, or to reflect any and all additional claims of whatever kind or nature that Claimant has or may have against the Debtor.

29. To the extent any payment to Claimant based on this Proof of Claim, or any portion thereof, is clawed back from Claimant, avoided, or set aside, for any reason whatsoever, or Claimant is required to disgorge any such payment, or any portion thereof, Claimant hereby reserves its rights to amend this Proof of Claim accordingly.

30. The execution and filing of this Proof of Claim is not intended as, nor should it be construed as or deemed to be any of the following: (i) a waiver of the right to seek withdrawal of the reference, or to otherwise challenge the jurisdiction of this Court, with respect to the subject matter of the claims asserted herein, any objection or other proceeding commenced with respect thereto, or any other action or proceeding commenced in this Chapter 11 Case against or otherwise involving Claimant; (ii) an admission that any matter is a core matter for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b) or is a matter as to which this Court can enter a final order or judgment consistent with Article III of the United States Constitution; (iii) a waiver of the right to de novo review by the district court of any order or judgment for which this Court, absent Claimant's consent, lacks authority to enter a final order or judgment; (iv) a consent to the entry by this Court of a final order or judgment with respect to the claims asserted herein or any other matter; (v) a waiver of Claimant's right to a jury trial against the Debtor, as applicable, or waiver of Claimant's right to a jury trial against any of the non-Debtor Defendants; (vi) a waiver or release of the claims or rights of Claimant against any other entity or person that may be liable for all or any part of the claims or any matters related to the claims asserted herein; (vii) a waiver of any rights and remedies Claimant has or may have under the Cash Warehouse and Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, Engagement Letter, or any other contract, whether mentioned in this Proof of Claim or not; (viii) a waiver of Claimant's contractual right to seek to have these or any other claims settled by binding arbitration; (ix) a waiver of any right related to the confirmation of any plan of reorganization proposed in this Chapter 11 Case, or any other insolvency-related proceeding that may be commenced, either in the United States or abroad, by or against the Debtor, or any non-Debtor affiliate; (x) a waiver or agreement granting any party relief; or (xi) an election of remedies.

31. Neither this Proof of Claim nor any of its contents shall be deemed or construed as an acknowledgment or admission of any liability or obligation on the part of Claimant. Claimant specifically reserves all of its defenses and rights, procedural and substantive, including, without limitation, its rights with respect to any claim that may be asserted against Claimant by the Debtor, the Fund Counterparties, or any affiliate of the Debtor, and its rights to enforce the Cash Warehouse or Synthetic Warehouse Agreements, Engagement Letter, or any other contract.

example, precluding damages relating to the $45 million that HFP had in March 2009 or the $20-plus million that the CDO Fund had in December 2009.

So I think that's the answer I got from Mr. Feinstein at the end of oral argument. But even if the Debtor was making the request that the Court rule that, as a matter of law, UBS cannot assert any claim against the Debtor except the claims relating to the $61 million of transfers, I think that UBS has shown, has put summary judgment evidence in the record that there may be a fact issue here with regard to these funds. They may be able to prove, have a potential theory here that Highland breached the covenant of good faith and fair dealing by somehow exercising control over the CDO Fund and HFP and causing them to dissipate those assets and not pay them to UBS. There might be a theory there.

So I hope that is clear, that I'm not granting summary judgment declaring that UBS is barred from asserting something more than the $61 million of March 2009 transfers.

So that is my ruling on the motions for partial summary judgment. I'll turn now to the UBS Rule 3018(a) estimation motion. Once again, given the late hour, I'm going to dispense with the flowery legal standards that apply to this motion. I reserve the right in my order to supplement with more fulsome statements.

But I have decided that I should estimate UBS's claim for voting purposes at the following number: $94,761,076. Okay. So here is my math for how I get there. Let's start with the three transfers in March 2009 that have been alleged to be fraudulent transfers or, you know, Highland caused to be made in breach of its duty of good faith and fair dealing. And I'm talking about, obviously, the Multi-Strat entities, you know, the $25,782,988 that HFP transferred in March 2009, then there was $17,778,566 transferred to the Debtor, and then Citibank received $17,481,808.

So, as we've talked about, we've talked about $61,043,362. Okay. So, obviously, I've ruled summary judgment that Crusader -- transfers to Crusader and the transfer to Credit Strategies are gone. They're off the table. So, but focusing in on that $61 million, I start with the $25-plus million to Multi-Strat. I am estimating a high chance of UBS winning on that, a 90-percent chance. So, 90 percent of $25,783,300 -- what is the number? $25 million. I may have done my math wrong. I've computed it equals $23,205,008, but I think I -- no, no, no, no. No, no, no. Let me back up. Just a minute. Hang on. (Pause.) All right. I think what I meant to do is calculate 90 percent of $25,782,988, and my math may be wrong. I've got that equals $23,205,008, but I feel like I did something wrong there. Someone can double-check my math there. Can someone -- I've left my calculator back in chambers. What's 90 percent of $25,783,343? Hello. You've got a calculator over there?

THE CLERK: Yeah. What was the number?

THE COURT: Okay.

THE CLERK: You said $25,783,4 --

THE COURT: No, no, no. I'm sorry. That's where I went wrong, I think. The number is should have -- not -- that's where I went wrong. I should have been using $25,782,988. And I have no idea where I got that $25,783,000 number. So, 90 percent of $25,782,988.

MR. FEINSTEIN: My calculator says that $23.2 million, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, I guess I was right. Okay.

MR. FEINSTEIN: You were right.

THE COURT: Okay. So I'm putting a 90 percent chance of winning on that, so $23.2 million.

And then on the transfer to the Debtor, I'm using the expert report, if you will, of I think his name is Mr. Dudney, UBS's own expert, where he used $8 million. He said you should adjust that number to $8 million, if I was understanding correctly, because of HFP, the transferor, having some percentage ownership in that. So if I use $8 million, that gets us up to $31.2 million.

Then, with regard to Citibank, the transfer to Citibank of $17,481,808, I'm giving a 20 percent chance of success on that one. I just, again, feel in my gut, you know, in my discretion, looking at the summary judgment evidence, I just feel in my gut there's going to be defenses to that. So, 20 percent of that would be $3,555,713.

So that gets us up to roughly 31 -- excuse me, $34.76 million. So, if you assume interest, pre-judgment interest, I used $30 million there. Again, that's imprecise. But that gets us up to $64.76 million.

Then what I did beyond that is, with regard to the summary judgment evidence thrown out that maybe there was 40 -- $45 million on hand at HFP in March of 2009 -- I think we're talking about UBS Exhibit 25 -- and then another $23 million may have been on hand at the CDO Fund, at least in December 2009, that's about $68 million. And I am just assuming that there might be a credible argument made as to $10 million of that. And then I'll add $10 million of interest for all of these years, of pre-judgment interest.

And then I've plugged in another $10 million for attorneys' fees, because I believe there is the ability to get attorneys' fees for actual fraudulent transfers. And I'm assuming that some of these, the ones to Highland and Multi-Strat, there might be credible arguments of actual fraudulent transfers. And then I have been told, I think, by Mr. Clubok that you might even get attorneys' fees for breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

So, $64.761 million plus $10 million plus another $10 million plus $10 million is $94.761 million.

Any questions? I know that was probably hard to follow, but any questions about that estimation?

MR. CLUBOK: Your Honor, the only question, and maybe it's too late and that's fine, I understand your analysis, but the calculation of the amount that was transferred to Highland, I think even Highland had agreed in their -- that the number is higher. I think that's out of context, and if that's -- if there's no chance for us to clear that up, I understand. You've made your decision. But I do want to say that I think even Highland would agree that they received more than $8 million. The footnote from (inaudible) is a little bit out of context, and, you know, there was -- if you look at Highland's papers in terms of their response on 3018, I think they have accepted our 17, roughly $17 million number. I think that is a -- it's complicated. But anyway, I just raise that, and maybe because you've done all this math, that won't affect your view, Your Honor. Totally understand that. But I do want to say that I think that Highland even acknowledges that the amount received was $17 million. That was (inaudible) by Redeemer. I think it's misunderstood. You know, our -- a footnote from our expert report that takes the full expert report out of context.

THE COURT: Well, that's going to be my ruling. And, again, you know, estimation --

MR. CLUBOK: Understood.

THE COURT: -- is just that. It's imprecise. And I may have cut you some slack in other areas where I'm sure Highland and the Crusader Fund would vehemently contest what I did. You know, the 90-percent chance of winning I gave you on Multi-Strat, you know, they said it should be a much lower number, 30 percent or whatever.

So that is going to be the ruling.

Okay. Here is what I would like to do. I'm going to push off work, is what I'm going to do. I know that on the motions for partial summary judgment Highland submitted a proposed form of order that was pretty short and to the point. I can't remember seeing one for Redeemer.

Bankruptcy Rule 7056, Rule 56, they don't require, obviously, findings of facts and conclusions of law. They just require some reasoning to support the Court's ruling. So I feel like I need something more fulsome than what was uploaded by the Debtor, but it doesn't have to be extremely beyond what the Court ruled. I would, though, ask -- you know, I don't know if a combined order granting both motions with -- you all talk offline, Mr. Feinstein and Ms. Mascherin, whether you want separate orders and judgments or you feel like a combined one suffices.

MS. MASCHERIN: Your Honor, I can say with respect to the motions for summary judgment I think they could be dealt undersigned counsel, files this motion (the "Motion") seeking entry of an order requiring The Charitable DAF Fund, L.P. ("The DAF"), CLO Holdco, Ltd. ("CLO Holdco"), the persons who authorized The DAF and CLO Holdco, respectively (together, the "Authorizing Persons") to file the Seery Motion (as defined below) in the DAF Action (as defined below), and Sbaiti & Company PLLC ("Sbaiti & Co." and together with The DAF, CLO Holdco, and the Authorizing Persons, the "Violators"), counsel to The DAF and CLO Holdco in the DAF Action, to show cause why each of them should not be held in civil contempt for violating the Court's: (a) Order Approving Settlement with Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course [Docket No. 339], and (b) Order Approving Debtor's Motion Under Bankruptcy Code Sections 105(a) and 363(b) Authorizing Retention of James P. Seery, Jr., as Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer, and Foreign Representative Nunc Pro Tunc to March 15, 2020 [Docket No. 854] (together, the "Orders"). In support of its Motion, the Debtor states as follows:

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. This Court has jurisdiction over the Motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334(b). The Motion is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(A) and (O).

2. Venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409.

3. The predicates for the relief requested in the Motion are sections 105(a) and 362(a) of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") and Rules 7065 and 7001 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the "Bankruptcy Rules").

RELIEF REQUESTED

4. The Debtor requests that this Court issue the proposed form of order attached as Exhibit A (the "Proposed Order"), pursuant to sections 105(a) and 362(a) of the Bankruptcy Code and Rules 7001 and 7065 of the Bankruptcy Rules.

5. For the reasons set forth more fully in the Debtor's Memorandum of Law in Support of Motion for an Order Requiring the Violators to Show Cause Why They Should Not Be Held in Civil Contempt for Violating Two Court Orders (the "Memorandum of Law"), filed contemporaneously with this Motion, the Debtor requests that the Court: (a) find and hold each of the Violators in contempt of court; (b) direct the Violators, jointly and severally, to pay the Debtor's estate an amount of money equal to two (2) times the Debtor's actual expenses incurred in bringing this Motion, payable within three (3) calendar days of presentment of an itemized list of expenses; (c) impose a penalty of three (3) times the Debtor's actual expenses incurred in connection with any future violation of any order of this Court (including filing any motion in the District Court to name Mr. Seery as a defendant without seeking and obtaining this Court's prior approval, as required under the Orders), and (d) grant the Debtor such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper under the circumstances.

6. In accordance with Rule 7007-1 of the Local Bankruptcy Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Local Rules"), contemporaneously herewith and in support of this Motion, the Debtor is filing: (a) its Memorandum of Law, and (b) the Declaration of John A. Morris in Support of the Debtor's Motion for an Order Requiring the Violators to Show Cause Why They Should Not Be Held in Civil Contempt for Violating Two Court Orders (the "Morris Declaration") together with the exhibits annexed thereto.

7. Based on the exhibits annexed to the Morris Declaration, and the arguments contained in the Memorandum of Law, the Debtor is entitled to the relief requested herein as set forth in the Proposed Order.

8. Notice of this Motion has been provided to all parties. The Debtor submits that no other or further notice need be provided.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests that the Court (i) enter the Proposed Order substantially in the formed annexed hereto as Exhibit A granting the relief requested herein, and (ii) grant the Debtor such other and further relief as the Court may deem proper.

MOTION TO COMPEL COMPLIANCE WITH BANKRUPTCY RULE 2015.3

NO HEARING WILL BE CONDUCTED HEREON UNLESS A WRITTEN RESPONSE IS FILED WITH THE CLERK OF THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT AT THE EARLE CABELL FEDERAL BUILDING, 1100 COMMERCE STREET, RM. 1254, DALLAS, TEXAS 75242-1496 BEFORE CLOSE OF BUSINESS ON MAY 20, 2021, WHICH IS AT LEAST 21 DAYS FROM THE DATE OF SERVICE HEREOF.
ANY RESPONSE SHALL BE IN WRITING AND FILED WITH THE CLERK, AND A COPY SHALL BE SERVED UPON COUNSEL FOR THE MOVING PARTY PRIOR TO THE DATE AND TIME SET FORTH HEREIN. IF A RESPONSE IS FILED A HEARING MAY BE HELD WITH NOTICE ONLY TO THE OBJECTING PARTY.
IF NO HEARING ON SUCH NOTICE OR MOTION IS TIMELY REQUESTED, THE RELIEF REQUESTED SHALL BE DEEMED TO BE UNOPPOSED, AND THE COURT MAY ENTER AN ORDER GRANTING THE RELIEF SOUGHT OR THE NOTICED ACTION MAY BE TAKEN.

Now into Court, through undersigned counsel, come The Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get Good Trust ("Movers"), who file this motion to compel Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Debtor") to comply with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 ("Motion"). In support of the Motion, Movers aver as follows:

CASE BACKGROUND

1. The Debtor filed for relief under Chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code on October 16, 2019 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware.
2. The case was subsequently transferred to this Court on the 4th day of December, 2019 [Dkt. #1].
3. On November 24, 2020, the Debtor filed its Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization") [Dkt. #1472].
4. The Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization was confirmed by this Court's Order (I) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) and (II) Granting Related Relief ("Order") on the 22nd day of February, 2021 [Dkt. #1943].
5. The Court's Order confirming the Debtor's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization has been appealed by Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. [Dkt. #1957].
6. In connection with the appeal, Motions for Stay Pending Appeal have been filed by (i) Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. [Dkt. #1955] (the "Advisors"); (ii) Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, Highland Global Allocation Fund, and NexPoint Capital, Inc. [Dkt. #1967] (the "Funds"); (iii) The Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get Good Trust [Dkt. 1971] (the "Movers"); and (iv) James Dondero [Dkt. 1973] ("Dondero").

7. This Court entered an Order on Motions for Stay Pending Appeal on March 23, 2021, denying the requests for a stay pending appeal ("Order Denying Requests") [Dkt. #2084].
8. Advisors, Funds, Movers and Dondero have appealed this Court's Order Denying Requests for a stay pending appeal.
9. The appeal of this Court's Order Denying Requests for stay pending appeal is presently before Judge Godbey, United States District Judge for the Northern District of Texas.
10. The Debtor has not filed any reports required by Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 over the approximately thirty (30) months in which this case has been pending.
11. The Effective Date for the Fifth Amended Plan confirmed by this Court has yet to occur.

OVERVIEW OF BANKRUPTCY RULE 2015.3

Rule 2015.3 requires "periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability of each entity that is not a publicly traded corporation or debtor . . . in which the estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2015.3(a). The purpose of Rule 2015.3 is "to assist parties in interest taking steps to ensure that the debtor's interest in any entity . . . is used for payment of allowed claims against the debtor." Pub. L. No. 109-8 § 419(b) (2005).

The term "substantial or controlling interest" is not defined, nor does it appear elsewhere in the Bankruptcy Code or Bankruptcy Rules. 9 Collier on Bankruptcy § 2015.3.07 (16th ed. 2020). In the absence of other guidance, Collier suggests that a court may turn to the definition of an "affiliate"[1] or "insider"[2] in the Bankruptcy Code, or even state law on the definition of a

[1] Bankruptcy Code § 102(2) defines an affiliate:
(2) The term "affiliate" means—
(A) entity that directly or indirectly owns, controls, or holds with power to vote, 20 percent or more of the outstanding voting securities of the debtor, other than an entity that holds such securities—controlling or substantial interest. See 9 Collier on Bankruptcy § 2015.3.07 (16th ed. 2020) ("case law regarding the definition of 'insider' or 'affiliate' may be helpful. Additionally, there is a substantial body of corporate case law regarding controlling interests that could be consulted.")

When questioned at the confirmation hearing in connection with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3, James Seery, on behalf of the Debtor, testified as to the following:

a) He was familiar with BR 2015.3 [Dkt. #1905, pg. 48, lines 12-15];

b) No report in compliance with BR 2015.3 has been filed by the Debtor [Dkt. #1905, pg. 48, lines 15-17]; and

c) "There was no reason for it (failure to file the 2015.3) other than we did not get it done initially and it fell through the cracks" [Dkt. #1905, pg. 49, lines 18-21].

EXISTING CASE LAW ON BANKRUPTCY RULE 2015.3

Little case law exists on the requirements of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3. In general, cases where parties have sought and received a waiver fall into two categories: (1) cases where the subsidiary is in the process of being sold; and (2) prepacked bankruptcies if the plan is not confirmed by a certain date. See e.g., In re RCS Capital Corp., Case No. 16-102233 (Bankr. D. Del. Mar. 4, 2016) [Dkt. 714 ¶17] ("The Purchase Agreement has already been approved by the Court . . . . Therefore, within a relatively short period of time . . . , the Debtor will no longer have a substantial or controlling interest in [the subsidiary"); In re HCR Manorcare, Case No. 18-10467 (Bankr. D. Del. Oct. 3, 2018) [Dkt. 8 ¶ 47] (Seeking waiver of reporting requirements if a pre-packed bankruptcy plan is not confirmed within a set period of time).

The case law as it exists does not support a waiver of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 and especially for the "it slipped through the cracks excuse." It has been three (3) months since the issue of Debtor's failure to comply with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 was raised to the Debtor and Debtor has not sought to remedy the failure and file the requisite 2015.3 reports for the applicable periods or seek leave of Court. The Debtor must believe the issue will simply go away and not be brought to the attention of the Court and, therefore, the Debtor will not have to disclose the financial condition of the assets in which it possesses a controlling or substantial interest. The Debtor's typical excuse in this case is the creditors committee has seen the information, however, Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 requires a public filing and not a disclosure limited to a select few.

The Seery attempted excuse that "we were told we didn't have separate consolidating statements for every entity and it would be difficult" [Seery testimony Dkt. #1905, page 49, lines 14-20] is not credible in light of the fact that the majority of entities in which Debtor has a controlling or substantial interest are investment funds. Most of the entities listed below in which the Debtor has a substantial or controlling interest are either regulated or have third party investors and, as such, separate accounting and statements on an entity by entity basis are required. In addition, the fact that the Debtor lacked a "consolidated statement" on one entity is not a legitimate excuse for not filing a 2015.3 report for the other entities in which the Debtor has a controlling or substantial interest.

ENTITIES IN WHICH THE DEBTOR OWNS OR MAY OWN A CONTROLLING INTEREST

There is no complete listing in any one place that identifies the entities in which the Debtor possesses a substantial or controlling interest. To assemble the list, Mover has had to parse through various documents and filings. The entities include, but are not limited, to the following:

a) Highland Select Equity Fund [See ftn. 8, Debtor's Motion for Exit Loan Dkt. #2229]. The Exit Loan Motion identifies Highland Select Entity Fund, L.P., Highland

b) The Exit Financing Motion [Dkt. #2229, pg. 7, ftn. 9] indicates that the Debtor owns additional assets that, by the literal reading of ftn. 9, are not listed in the section of the motion that identifies the collateral for the loan. These entities should be specifically identified and reports should be filed for these entities that are not listed in the collateral section of the motion.

c) In the Deposition of James Seery taken on January 29, 2021, in addition to the entities listed above, James Seery generically identifies CCS Medical Inc., Targa International, PetroCap and JHT as entities controlled by Debtor or controlled through funds that are controlled by Debtor. It is believed the corporate names are PetroCap LLC, PetroCap Partners II LP, PetroCap Incentive Partners II LP , Targa Resources Partners LP, Targa S.A and JHT Holding Inc.

d) SSP Holdings Inc. and Omni Max, which were sold by the Debtor without Court approval based upon the Debtor's belief that Court approval was not required, should also have been the subject of a 2015.3 report for the period between the filing and the date of the sale.

CONCLUSION

Throughout this case the Debtor has taken the position that it does not have to seek court approval for sales of assets or report to anyone relative to assets owned by entities in which it has either control or a substantial interest. See Dondero Motion for Entry of an Order Requiring Notice and Hearing for Future Estate Transactions Occurring Outside the Ordinary Course of Business [Dkt. #1439] and the Debtor's Objection thereto [Dkt. #1546]. In its Objection, the Debtor states in PP 9 that the sales at issue (Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund L.P, Highland Restoration Capital Partners L.P and SSI Holdings Inc.) were not subject to Court approval and 11 USC §363. It appears, however, that this restricted view of Bankruptcy Court jurisdiction no longer suits the Debtor's new narrative and now it is seeking court authority to secure an exit loan and to use the assets of a controlled non-debtor entity (See Debtor's Motion for an Exit Loan, Dkt. # 2229) in order that the Debtor can pay its professionals and, in a second Motion, settle the UBS claim using the assets of a different non-debtor controlled entity [Dkt. #2199].

Had the Debtor followed Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3, both this Court and the creditors, large and small, of the Estate along with the creditors and minority owners of the controlled entities would have had some insight over the Debtor's actions with respect to these entities over the course of the Chapter 11. Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 was designed to provide transparency and it should be enforced as a matter of public policy.

LIMITED PRELIMINARY OBJECTION TO THE DEBTOR'S MOTION FOR ENTRY OF AN ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT WITH UBS SECURITIES LLC AND UBS AG LONDON BRANCH AND AUTHORIZING ACTIONS CONSISTENT THEREWITH

Now into Court, through undersigned counsel, comes The Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get Good Trust ("Objectors"), who file this limited preliminary opposition to the Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith ("Motion") [Dkt. #2199]. The limited preliminary objection is being filed so that a contested matter will exist between Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor") and the Objectors, thus allowing the Objectors to conduct discovery to ascertain facts and obtain documents in support of the Objectors' limited objection and determine if additional grounds exist for an amended objection.

Objectors and other entities own interests in Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (n/k/a Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P. ("Multi-Strat") and, on information and belief, the interests of Objectors and third parties is in excess of any interest owned by the Debtor in Multi-Strat.

Objectors' issues with the settlement do not revolve around the Debtor settling its claims with UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (collectively, "UBS") but, rather, go to the following issues:

1) That the Bankruptcy Court has no jurisdiction to rule on the settlement of litigation between UBS and Multi-Strat. The Debtor's sole position with the Multi-Strat entities appears to be as an investment advisor and possibly a general partner. The position taken by the Debtor in seeking Court approval for the Multi-Strat portion of the settlement is inconsistent with its previously articulated position taken in its Debtor's Response to Mr. James Dondero's Motion to Entry of an Order Requiring Notice and Hearing for Future Estate Transactions Occurring Outside the Ordinary Course of Business ("Response") (Dkt. #1546) to James Dondero's Motion for Entry of an Order Requiring Notice and Hearing for Future Estate Transactions Occurring Outside the Ordinary Course of Business ("Motion for Future Estate Transactions") (Dkt. #1439). In the Motion for Future Estate Transactions filed by James Dondero seeking notice and hearing, one of the sales mentioned in the Motion for Future Estate Transactions was the sale of an asset owned by Multi-Strat (See Dkt. #1439). In its Response, the Debtor stated:

> However, the assets of a debtor's non-debtor subsidiaries are not property of a debtor's estate. See, e.g., In re Guyana Dev. Corp., 168 B.R. 892, 905 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1994) ("As a general rule, property of the estate includes the debtor's stock in a subsidiary but not the assets of the subsidiary."); see also > Parkview-Gem, Inc., 516 F.2d 807, 809 (8th Cir. 1975) ("Ownership of all of the outstanding stock of a corporation, however, is not the equivalent of ownership of the subsidiary's property or assets. . . Even though the value of the subsidiary's outstanding shares owned by the debtor may be directly affected by the subsidiary's disputes with third parties,' Congress did not give the bankruptcy court exclusive jurisdiction over all controversies that in some way affect the debtor's estate.'") (citing In re Beck Indus., Inc., 479 F.2d 410 (2d Cir. 1973)).

> Further, while the Debtor has certain control rights over RCP, MSCF, and SSPI, those rights do not make the assets of RCP, MSCF, and SSPI property of the Debtor's estate. See In re Thomas, 2020 Bankr. LEXIS 1364 at *31 (Bankr. W.D. Tenn. 2020) (a debtor's membership interest in an LLC, including both its economic rights and governance rights, became property of the estate on the petition date, but the assets of the LLC remain separate and the debtor must manage them consistent with the terms of the operating agreement and applicable law); In re Cardinal Indus., 105 B.R. 834, 849 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio 1989) (a debtor's ownership interests and control rights in non-debtor partnerships were property of the estate; but those rights did not make the assets of the partnership property of the estate or implicate the automatic stay so as to prevent secured creditors of the non-debtor partnerships from foreclosing on properties of the partnerships).

The law has not changed since the Response filed by the Debtor and this Court has no jurisdiction to approve the transfer of assets by a non-debtor "affiliated entity" to a third party in settlement of the claims of the third party against the non-debtor.

This position that the Court has jurisdiction over the UBS/Multi-Strat portion of the Settlement Agreement and Motion is also inconsistent with the fact that the Debtor did not seek Court approval for a May 2020 settlement between UBS and Multi-Strat, Highland Credit Opportunities CDO and Highland CDO Asset Holding L.P. Clearly, Highland, as both the Investment Advisor and either General Partner or Managing Member of the entities other than UBS, did not believe the Bankruptcy Court had jurisdiction over the May 2020 settlement identified in the Settlement Agreement attached to the Motion. The status of Debtor, with respect to the Multi-Strat portion of the Motion before this Court, has not changed from its status at the time of the May 2020 Settlement Agreement that was not brought before this Court. It is also apparent that UBS did not believe that Bankruptcy Court approval was necessary for the May 2020 settlement.

2) Whether the Debtor, under the organizational documents of Multi-Strat and its Investment Advisor Agreement with Multi-Strat, possesses the requisite authority to bind Multi-Strat under the terms of the proposed settlement. The Motion fails to identify the authority possessed by the Debtor to bind Multi-Strat and fails to attach the documents giving the Debtor requisite authority to bind Multi-Strat to the proposed settlement. The Motion does not attach exhibits that evidence such authority or even quote portions of such documents giving rise to the Debtor's authority to bind the entity.

3) While the Debtor's bankruptcy counsel can advise the Debtor as to the wisdom of the settlement, the Motion fails to state whether a third party other than the Debtor or its counsel rendered an opinion to Multi-Strat and its owners that the settlement between the UBS entities was in the best interests of Multi-Strat. In fact, it is unknown as to whether anyone on behalf of Multi-Strat other than Highland or its counsel was apprised of the Multi-Strat/UBS settlement. Clearly, counsel for the Debtor cannot render such an opinion inasmuch as they do not represent Multi-Strat. While the case against Multi-Strat appears to be based upon transfers made to it, issues between Multi-Strat and the Debtor exist as to whether a portion of the Debtor's payments to the UBS entities reduces the claims by UBS against Multi-Strat under the single recovery rule. For example, if the case against Multi-Strat was brought by the Debtor and the property subject to the unlawful transfer had been transferred by another Highland Fund to Multi-Strat under 11 U.S.C. § 550(d), the Debtor could obtain only a single satisfaction of the claim. Objectors believe that the interests of Debtor with respect to its own liability to UBS and its bargained for settlement and release for itself, Strand Advisors, Inc. and the list of released third parties place Debtor and its counsel in a conflict of interest position in evaluating the wisdom of the settlement between Multi-Strat and the various UBS entities.

4) The portion of the Settlement Agreement that confers exclusive jurisdiction of any dispute between Multi-Strat and UBS is void. It is well settled law that the parties cannot confer jurisdiction where no jurisdiction exists.

Objectors recognize that this Court has jurisdiction under Bankruptcy Rule 9019 of the settlement between the Debtor and UBS. The Court, however, does not have jurisdiction to give res judicata or collateral estoppel effect to a settlement of a dispute between three (3) non-debtors. The Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get Good Trust reserve the right to amend and supplement this objection upon obtaining documents and discovery from the Debtor and possibly UBS.

DEBTOR'S OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO COMPEL COMPLIANCE WITH BANKRUPTCY RULE 2015.3 FILED BY DUGABOY INVESTMENT TRUST AND GET GOOD TRUST

Highland Capital Management, L.P., the debtor and debtor-in-possession ("Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case, submits this opposition to the Motion to Compel

Compliance With Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 [D.I. 2256] ("Motion") filed by Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get Good Trust (collectively, the "Movant").

Preliminary Statement

1. The request by the Movant—who are two of James Dondero's family trusts—that the Court order the Debtor to comply with Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2015.3 is not a legitimate request by a creditor for information. Neither the Movant nor Mr. Dondero have any bona fide claims against the Debtor and the Motion has nothing to do with transparency to creditors. Rather, it is a pretext for Mr. Dondero's latest attempt to (1) improperly obtain information about assets owned by non-debtors in order to interfere with the Debtor's monetization of its assets for the benefit of the estate's legitimate creditors; and (2) gain insight and access to information which will presumably form the basis of the litigation to be brought against Mr. Dondero and his related entities by the Litigation Trustee and/or the Reorganized Debtor. Mr. Dondero and his related entities would not otherwise be entitled to this information under applicable discovery rules. Importantly, the Debtor's reluctance to publicly disclose this information is also due to the fact that much of the information on the Debtor's controlling interests in its non-debtor subsidiaries was prepared by the Debtor's former legal team, who now are employed either by Mr. Dondero or by entities controlled by him and certain of whom were terminated for cause. The Debtor has substantial concerns whether the existing information in the Debtor's records prepared by these individuals is accurate.

2. The Debtor's non-compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 was first raised at the hearing on confirmation of the Debtor's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [Docket No. 1808] (the "Plan")[1] in a desperate—but futile—attempt to defeat confirmation. Now, eighteen months after commencement of this chapter 11 case, two months after confirmation of the Plan, and shortly before the Debtor anticipates that the Plan will become effective, the Movant seeks the Debtor's compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3.

3. The Debtor has determined, in the exercise of its business judgment, that providing Mr. Dondero—either directly or through one of the many entities that have appeared in this case representing his interests—with detailed information regarding affiliate assets, will frustrate the Debtor's ability to maximize value of the assets of the estate and potentially compromise the Debtor's litigation position against Mr. Dondero and his related entities. The Debtor's position, which is supported by the Committee, is based upon, among other things, the mischief Mr. Dondero has already caused in this case and his documented attempts to interfere with the Debtor's operations and asset sales. Conversely, the Debtor has provided the Committee—the fiduciary for the Debtor's general unsecured creditors—information to enable it to adequately monitor and evaluate management of assets of entities that would be covered by Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3.

4. The Debtor currently expects that the Plan will become effective on or about July 1, 2021, provided the Court approves the Debtor's motion to obtain exit financing.[2] Once the Plan becomes effective, Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 will no longer apply, and the Motion will be moot. If the Plan does not become effective by such time, the Debtor requests that the Court enter an order waiving the reporting requirements provided under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 to avoid aiding Mr. Dondero, and his related entities in obtaining information that they will improperly use to handicap the Debtor's monetization of its assets and initiate vexatious litigation against the Debtor.

Background

5. On October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the "Delaware Bankruptcy Court").

6. On October 29, 2019, the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the "Committee") was appointed by the U.S. Trustee in the Delaware Bankruptcy Court. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Bankruptcy Court entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor's chapter 11 case to this Court [Docket No. 186].[3]

7. On February 22, 2021, after a two-day hearing, the Bankruptcy Court entered the Order (i) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (as Modified) and (ii) Granting Related Relief [Docket No. 1943] (the "Confirmation Order") with respect to the Plan. The Plan was accepted by 99.8% of the amount of creditors that voted to accept or reject the Plan. See Confirmation Order ¶ 3.

8. The Effective Date of the Plan has not yet occurred. The Debtor currently expects that the Effective Date to occur on or after July 1, 2021, provided the Court approves the Exit Financing Motion.

9. On May 14, 2021, the Committee filed its Application for Order Pursuant to Section 1103 of the Bankruptcy Code Authorizing the Employment and Retention of Teneo

[3] All docket numbers refer to the docket maintained by this Court.

Capital, LLC as Litigation Advisor to the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Effective April 15, 2021 [Docket No. 2306] (the "Teneo Retention Application").

10. Upon the effective date of the Plan, a Litigation Sub-Trust created for the benefit of the holders of claims and interests in the Debtor, will be vested with certain claims and causes of action of the Debtor (the "Causes of Action"). Pursuant to the Plan, Marc S. Kirschner, Senior Managing Director of Teneo Capital, LLC ("Teneo"), will be appointed as Litigation Trustee and will be tasked with, among other things, the investigation and monetization of the Causes of Action.

11. To ensure that the Causes of Action are investigated and pursued in a vigorous and timely manner, the Committee believed it was essential to require Mr. Kirschner and Teneo to commence work effective April 15, 2021 on an interim basis under the direction of the Committee. The Committee has noted that if the Plan becomes effective before the return date of the Teneo Retention Application, such application will be withdrawn, and the Litigation Trust will succeed to the Kirschner and Teneo work product as provided for in the Plan.

The Court Should Defer Debtor's Compliance
With Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 Pending the Effective Date of the Plan

12. Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3(a) provides in pertinent part as follows:

> In a chapter 11 case, the . . . debtor in possession shall file periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability of each entity that is not a publicly traded corporation or a debtor in a case under title 11, and in which the estate holds a substantial or controlling interest. The reports shall be prepared as prescribed by the appropriate Official Form, and shall be based upon the most recent information reasonably available to the . . . debtor in possession.

Fed. R. Bankr. 2015.3(a). The reporting requirements of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 run until "the effective date of a plan or the case is dismissed or converted." Id. 2015.3(b).

13. Upon the occurrence of the Effective Date—anticipated to be on or about July 1, 2021—the reporting requirements of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 are no longer applicable and the Reorganized Debtor will implement and carry out the provisions of the Plan that was overwhelmingly supported by the Committee and 99.8% of the dollar amount of creditors. As the Motion acknowledges, courts have approved similar waivers in connection with plans that were on the eve of becoming effective. See In re Hornbeck Offshore Servs., No. 20-32679 (DRJ) (Bankr. S.D. Tex. May 20, 2020) (excusing requirement to file Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 Reports if plan confirmed within 50 days from petition date); In re Jason Indus., No. 20-22766 (RDD) (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. July 2, 2020) (granting 14-day extension to file Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 reports in connection with debtor's prepackaged plan); HRC ManorCare, No. 18-10467 (KG) (Bankr. D. Del. March 6, 2018) (extending time to file Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 report for approximately 50 days and waiving requirement to file report if plan is confirmed within such time); see also In re RCS Capital Corp., No. 16-10223 (MFW) (Bankr. D. Del. May 23, 2016) (waiving requirement to file 2015.3 report for entity that was in the process of being sold and to avoid prejudicial impact). Given the relatively short time until the anticipated Plan Effective Date, the Debtor's requested waiver of the reporting requirements imposed under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 is appropriate and justified, especially in light of the improper purpose by which the Movant and Mr. Dondero would exploit any information obtained on the Debtor's assets to the detriment of the estate.

14. Movant waited fourteen months after the Petition Date to raise the Debtor's non-compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3. And it did so after an aborted effort to require the Debtor to seek Court approval of sales of non-debtor assets.[4] Movant ambushed the Debtor at the Plan confirmation hearing and unsuccessfully tried to leverage the Debtor's non-compliance to defeat confirmation of the Plan.[5] Movant then waited two months after Plan confirmation to file this Motion. The foregoing demonstrates that the Motion is about leverage and gamesmanship and not about transparency.

If the Expected Plan Effective Date Does Not Occur, the Court Should Waive the Reporting Requirements Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3(d)

15. Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3(d) permits a court to modify a debtor's obligations under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3(a) for cause shown. See Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2015.3(d). In addition to this subsection, Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3(e) provides that "the entity in which the estate has substantial or controlling interest, or a person holding an interest in that entity, may request protection of the information under section 107 of the Code." See id. 2015.3(e).

16. Bankruptcy Rule 9018 defines the procedures by which a party may move for relief under section 107(b) of the Bankruptcy Code, providing that:

> On motion or on its own initiative, with or without notice, the court may make any order which justice requires (1) to protect the estate or any entity in respect of a trade secret or other confidential research, development, or commercial information . . .

Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9018.

[5] See Transcript of Transcript of Proceedings Before Honorable Stacey J.C. Jernigan, United States Bankruptcy Judge, March 19, 2021 Regarding Motion to Stay Pending Appeals, at 69-70:

> "There were, of course, three primary legal issues raised as errors by this Court in the confirmation order. The first two arguments were not pressed too much in legal argument today although they were stressed in the briefing. One, the absolute priority rule violation argument; and then, two, the Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3/Bankruptcy Code Section 1129(a)(2) violation argument. The Court considered these arguments to wholly lack merit, and are borderline frivolous, frankly. They do not raise a serious legal question."

17. Section 107(b) requires courts to protect confidential commercial information. In re Frontier Group, 256 B.R. 771, 773 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2000). This Court has defined commercial information as "information which would result in 'an unfair advantage to competitors by providing them information as to the commercial operations of the debtor,'" the disclosure of which "[must] reasonably be expected to cause the entity commercial injury," and "'is so critical to the operation of the entity seeking the protective order that its disclosure will unfairly benefit that entity's competitors.'" In re Alterra Healthcare Corp., 353 B.R. 66, 75 (Bankr. D. Del 2006) (MFW) (internal citations omitted).

18. The Debtor submits that the unique facts and circumstances of this case provide ample cause to waive the reporting requirements of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3. The Debtor has determined, in the exercise of its business judgment that the reporting requirements under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 would force the Debtor to disclose confidential propriety information to Movant and Mr. Dondero that would undermine the Debtor's ability to monetize its assets for fair value. First, the obvious purpose behind the Motion is enable Mr. Dondero to obtain confidential information on the Debtor's assets that he otherwise would not be entitled to and which will be used in future litigation with the Debtor or used to interfere in asset sales. The Court should not permit Mr. Dondero to gain access and insight on the Debtor's assets, claims and the Causes of Action that will be managed by the Litigation Trust once the Plan becomes effective and provide him with materials that he could not otherwise obtain in the normal course of discovery. Moreover, providing the information required by Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 may also inhibit the ability of the Debtor to monetize these assets because other potential buyers would obtain information and insights on the value of these assets to which they otherwise would not be privy. If such information were made available for public consumption, potential purchasers would be able to learn potentially valuable information about these entities' operations.

19. Finally, as discussed above, the Debtor has serious concerns about the accuracy and completeness of the information created by its former legal team, who are now employed by Mr. Dondero and his related entities, and are working under his direction and control. As the Court is aware, the many entities in Mr. Dondero's byzantine business enterprise have been the subject of misinformation. For example, the Debtor recently discovered misrepresentations made to it by certain former employees falsely claiming that the redeemed limited partners of one of the Debtor's managed funds (a fund in which the Debtor is also a limited partner) were third party investors unaffiliated by the Debtor.[6] However, the Debtor recently discovered that this was false and that the largest redeemer is Sentinel Reinsurance – an entity owned by Mr. Dondero and the Debtor's former general counsel, Scott Ellington. Sentinel Reinsurance claims to be owed approximately $33 million on account of its redeemed interest. In light of these facts and in the event that the Plan Effective Date is delayed beyond July 1, 2021, the Court should waive the requirements of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 to avoid the harm that would befall the Debtor if such information were obtained by Mr. Dondero and his related entities for the improper purposes described herein.

Conclusion

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests that the Court defer the reporting requirements of Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 until September 1, 2021. If the Effective Date of the Plan occurs by such date, the Motion will be moot. If the Effective Date of the Plan does not occur by

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11
Debtor.

OBJECTION TO DEBTOR'S MOTION FOR ENTRY OF AN ORDER (I) AUTHORIZING THE SALE OF CERTAIN PROPERTY AND (II) GRANTING RELATED RELIEF

NexPoint Advisors, L.P. ("NPA") files this objection to the Motion of the Debtor for Entry of an Order (I) Authorizing the Sale of Certain Property and (II) Granting Related Relief (the "Motion") [Dkt. # 2535] filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Debtor") and would show the Court as follows:

1. NPA objects to the Motion because the Debtor intentionally created a sale process specifically designed to exclude NPA without articulating a sound business justification for doing so. In addition, the Debtor has exhibited bad faith and abused its discretion by disallowing competitive bidding for the Property (defined below), thereby reducing recoveries for the estate and harming creditors.

2. The Motion seeks authority to sell the real property bearing the common address of 2817 Maple Ave., Dallas, Texas 75201 (the "Property") to Stonelake Capital Holdings, LP ("Stonelake") in accordance with the Purchase and Sale Agreement attached to the Motion as Exhibit "C" (the "Stonelake APA"). The purchase price under the Stonelake APA was $9.75 million, subject to certain prorations.

3. On July 26, 2021, NPA submitted an increased offer of $10.1 million for the Property, in accordance with the Purchase and Sale Agreement attached hereto as Exhibit "A" (the "NPA PSA"). The NPA PSA is substantially identical to the Stonelake PSA[1]. As such, the offers submitted by NPA and Stonelake are "apples to apples," other than the fact that NPA's offer provides for an additional $350,000 recovery for the estate and its creditors. The Debtor summarily rejected the NPA PSA on July 27, 2021 without considering its benefits to the estate.

4. The Debtor proclaims in the Motion that it simply "will not entertain any offers" from NPA, a decision it has applied to the sale process without considering the benefits of the NPA PSA itself. While the Debtor asserts that disqualifying NPA from the sale process is within its business judgment, the Debtor's own arguments in the Motion blatantly shows an unjustified prejudice toward NPA supported by conclusory statements and incomplete facts.

5. As one of its primary reasons to disqualify NPA from the sale process, the Debtor argues that "allowing [NPA] into the sale process would chill bidding and depress the value of the Property …". Motion, ¶ 32. The facts of the case prove otherwise. According to the Motion, the two early offers received for the Property were $5.8 million from Stonelake and $7.5 million from another bidder. At some point in the sale process, Stonelake increased its existing offer to $9.75 million[2]. Motion, ¶¶ 17-20. Subsequently, NPA submitted a substantially higher bid of $9.82 million. Id. In light of the Motion, NPA increased its offer to $10.1 million. Accordingly, rather than "chill bidding," NPA's participation in the sale process has resulted in incremental estate recoveries.

6. The Debtor's abuse of discretion during the sale process is further evidenced by the "bid and offer" narrative articulated by the Motion. See Motion, ¶ 21 (suggesting that accepting NPA's bid would violate the Debtor's agreement with Stonelake). To be sure, the Debtor admits NPA's initial $9.82 million offer was received on May 18, 2021, but the Debtor admits that it did not enter into a binding agreement with Stonelake until June 22, 2021 (which offer was then later amended on July 8, 2021). The Debtor thus rejected NPA's initial offer before it had a binding offer from Stonelake. See Motion, ¶ 21. This timeline illustrates that the Debtor purposefully did not create a process for competitive bidding or establish a bid deadline for this sale, which belies any suggestion that the NPA offer is too late.

7. In addition, the original financial justifications provided by the Debtor have materially changed since the filing of the Motion, further calling into question the Debtor's decision to hold a private sale without competitive bidding. At the time the Motion was filed, the Debtor concluded that the NPA offer for the Property was only "slightly above Stonelake's offer" by $70,000. Motion, ¶ 20. Since that time, however, NPA has increased its offer by another $280,000, an offer the Debtor refuses to consider on its merits. An arbitrary denial of the NPA PSA without considering its actual terms does not satisfy the Debtor's obligations to the estate and creditors. Indeed, the terms of the NPA PSA and the Stonelake PSA are substantively identical, but a a side-by-side comparison of the economics plainly reveals that NPA's is materially superior:

	Stonelake	NPA
Purchase Price:	$9,975,000	$10,100,000
Earnest Money:	$500,000	$1,000,000
Inspection Period:	15 days	10 days
Closing Conditions:	Identical	Identical

The Debtor should not be afforded deference to its business judgment when it fails to consider the material elements of competing bids, as it has done with this sale.

8. Moreover, the Debtor also attempts to characterize NPA as a litigation risk as an alternative reason to disqualify it from participating in the sale process. However, the existence of unrelated litigation in and of itself is not grounds for disqualification. Importantly, the Debtor has failed to articulate any specific litigation risk related to this sale transaction – nor can it:

- The terms of the agreements are the same, so there is no greater litigation or closing risk with NPA than with Stonelake.
- The Debtor mentions the risk of post-closing litigation, however, the only post-closing issues or adjustments that need to be finalized are simple prorations. The provisions of the NPA PSA and Stonelake PSA are, again, identical on this point, so the risk is identical.[3]
- There is no allegation that NPA lacks the financial wherewithal to close. To the contrary, NPA is proposing to double the Stonelake earnest money deposit from $500,000 to $1 million. NPA thus has twice as much invested in the deal, twice the risk and twice the incentive to make sure the sale closes.

NPA's unquestioned ability to close the transaction, coupled with its identical form of agreement to that proposed by Stonelake, disprove the Debtor's characterization of NPA as a litigation risk with this specific Property-related transaction.

9. The Debtor simply does not want to sell the Property to NPA, and has gone out of this way to convince the Court that its issues with Mr. Dondero (and, by inapt proxy, NPA) outweigh its obligations to maximize recoveries for the estate. However, the "paramount goal in any proposed sale of property of the estate is to maximize the proceeds received by the estate." In re Dura Automotive Sys., Inc., 06-11202 KJC, 2007 WL 7728109, at *90 (Bankr. D. Del. Aug. 15, 2007) (citing In re Mushroom Transp. Co., Inc., 382 F.3d 325, 339 (3rd Cir. 2004); In re Food Barn Stores, Inc., 107 F.3d 558, 564–65 (8th Cir. 1997)).

10. The Debtor has taken an opposite approach, unabashedly seeking to exclude NPA as a way to further punish Mr. Dondero. The Debtor's actions, however, are directly contrary to the recent ruling by the Fifth Circuit in Walker County Hosp., which noted that the best way to maximize estate recoveries is to promote competitive bidding. Matter of Walker County Hosp. Corp., 3 F.4th 229, 2021 WL 2910595 at *3 (5th Cir. 2021) ("The purpose of § 363 is to promote the finality of bankruptcy sales, thereby maximizing the purchase price of estate assets…. And ultimately, maximizing bidding on and the purchase price for a debtor's assets benefits a debtor's creditors.") (internal citations and quotation marks omitted").

11. Such conduct should not be sanctioned by the Court. In light of the foregoing, the Debtor has abused its discretion and acted in bad faith by summarily disqualifying NPA from the sale process for the Property. As such, the Debtor is not entitled to deference with respect to its unjustified decision to hold a private sale and exclude qualified bidders at the expense of the estate.

12. NPA is ready, willing and able to close a sale of the Property—a property it already knows well. The current NPA PSA eliminates risk and maximizes creditor recoveries. The Debtor should not be allowed to foster a private sale and eliminate competitive bidding to the detriment of creditors simply because the Debtor has an issue with Mr. Dondero. As this Court previously noted, money provided by corporate insiders like NPA "is as green as the money" provided by non-insiders. In re Equip. Equity Holdings, Inc., 491 B.R. 792, 840 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2013). There is no basis to hold otherwise here.

Based upon the foregoing, NPA requests that the Court deny the Motion and direct the Debtor to consider the NPA PSA as a qualified bid for the Property.

OBJECTION TO MOTION OF THE DEBTOR FOR ENTRY OF AN ORDER (I) AUTHORIZING THE SALE AND/OR FORFEITURE OF CERTAIN LIMITED PARTNERSHIP INTERESTS AND OTHER RIGHTS AND (II) GRANTING RELATED RELIEF

NexPoint Advisors, LP ("NPA") files this objection to the Motion of the Debtor for Entry of an Order (I) Authorizing the Sale and/or Forfeiture of Certain Limited Partnership Interests and Other Rights and (II) Granting Related Relief (the "Motion") [Dkt. # 2537] filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Debtor") and would show the Court as follows:

1. The Motion seeks authority to sell certain partnership and limited partnership interests (the "Interests") pursuant to that certain Partnership Interest Purchase and Sale Agreement by and among the Debtor, PetroCap, the PetroCap III GP, SLP, and the SLP GP (the "PetroCap Purchase Agreement").[1] The purchase price under the PetroCap Purchase Agreement is $2,684,886, and certain other related considerations.

2. On July 29, 2021, The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("DPI") submitted an offer of $2,953,374.60 for the Interests in accordance with the Partnership Interest Purchase and Sale Agreement attached hereto as Exhibit A (the "DPI Purchase Agreement"). The DPI Purchase Agreement provides for materially higher estate recoveries on identical terms.

3. Upon information and belief, the Debtor has not yet responded to the DPI Purchase Agreement. NPA therefore files this objection out of an abundance of caution to insure that a competitive bidding process designed to maximize estate recoveries is employed by the Debtor.

4. The DPI Purchase Agreement is substantially identical to the PetroCap Purchase Agreement.[2] As such, the offers submitted by DPI and PetroCap are "apples to apples," other than the fact that DPI's offer provides for an additional $268,488.60 recovery for the estate and its creditors.

5. Consistent with the Debtor's past practice, NPA expects that the Debtor may summarily reject the DPI Purchase Agreement without considering its benefits to the estate. If this occurs, the Debtor will have continued to allow its issues with Mr. Dondero (and, by inapt proxy, DPI) to outweigh its obligations to maximize recoveries for the estate. However, the "paramount goal in any proposed sale of property of the estate is to maximize the proceeds received by the estate." In re Dura Automotive Sys., Inc., 06-11202 KJC, 2007 WL 7728109, at *90 (Bankr.

6. Any failure by the Debtor to consider the DPI Purchase Agreement would be directly contrary to the recent ruling by the Fifth Circuit in Walker County Hosp., which noted that the best way to maximize estate recoveries is to promote competitive bidding. Matter of Walker County Hosp. Corp., 3 F.4th 229, 2021 WL 2910595 at *3 (5th Cir. 2021) ("The purpose of § 363 is to promote the finality of bankruptcy sales, thereby maximizing the purchase price of estate assets…. And ultimately, maximizing bidding on and the purchase price for a debtor's assets benefits a debtor's creditors.") (internal citations and quotation marks omitted"). The Court should not sanction a sale process that fails to do so

7. DPI is ready, willing and able to close a sale of the Interests, and the DPI Purchase Agreement eliminates risk and maximizes creditor recoveries.

Based upon the foregoing, NPA requests that the Court deny the Motion and direct the Debtor to consider the DPI Purchase Agreement as a qualified bid for the Interests.

HIGHLAND'S SUPPLEMENTAL MOTION TO DISQUALIFY WICK PHILLIPS GOULD & MARTIN, LLP AS COUNSEL TO HCRE PARTNERS, LLC AND FOR RELATED RELIEF

Highland Capital Management, L.P., the reorganized debtor[1] ("Highland" or "HCMLP" as may temporally be required) in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"), by and through its undersigned counsel, files this Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips

[1] On February 22, 2021, the Bankruptcy Court entered the Order (i) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (as Modified) and (ii) Granting Related Relief [Docket No. 1943] (the "Confirmation Order") which confirmed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P., as Modified [Docket No. 1808] (the "Plan"). The Plan went Effective (as defined in the Plan) on August 11, 2021, and Highland is the Reorganized Debtor (as defined in the Plan) since the Effective Date. See Notice of Occurrence of Effective Date of Confirmed Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. [Docket No. 2700].

Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief (the "Supplemental Motion") seeking entry of an order: (i) directing the disqualification of Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP ("Wick Phillips") as counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC ("HCRE") in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim;[2] (ii) directing Wick Phillips to immediately turnover to the Debtor all files and records relating to the LLC Agreement, the Loan Agreement, and the Restated LLC Agreement; and (iii) directing HCRE to (a) reimburse the Debtor all costs and fees incurred in making the Motion and this Supplemental Motion, including reasonable attorneys' fees; and (b) engage substitute counsel in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim within fourteen (14) days of the entry of this Order. In support of its Supplemental Motion, Highland states as follows:

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. This Court has jurisdiction over the Supplemental Motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334(b). The Supplemental Motion is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(A) and (O). Venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409. The predicate for the relief requested in the Supplemental Motion is section 105(a) of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code").

RELIEF REQUESTED

2. Highland requests that this Court grant the relief requested in the proposed Order Granting Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2196-1] (the "Proposed Order").[3]

3. For the reasons set forth more fully in Highland's Memorandum of Law, Highland seeks (i) disqualification of Wick Phillips as counsel to HCRE in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim and (ii) related relief.

[2] Capitalized terms not otherwise defined in this Supplemental Motion have the meanings ascribed to them in Highland's Memorandum of Law in Support of Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief (the "Memorandum of Law") being filed contemporaneously herewith.

[3] The Proposed Order is annexed as Exhibit A to the Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2196] (the "Motion").

4. Wick Phillips' continued representation of HCRE constitutes a direct conflict of interest. The undisputed facts demonstrate that Wick Phillips' Prior Representation of HCRE and Prior Representation of Highland involve the same matter and, at a very minimum, are clearly "substantially related." Wick Phillips' Current Representation of HCRE in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim violates its duty of loyalty and confidentiality to its former client, Highland, under applicable ethical standards.

5. In accordance with Rule 7007-1 of the Local Bankruptcy Rules of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Local Rules"), contemporaneously herewith and in support of this Supplemental Motion the Debtor is filing its: (i) Memorandum of Law, and (ii) the Declaration of Kenneth Brown in Support of Highland's Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief (the "Brown Declaration").

6. Based on (i) the facts and arguments set forth in the Memorandum of Law and (ii) the exhibits attached to the Brown Declaration, Highland is entitled to the relief requested herein as set forth in the Proposed Order.

7. Notice of this Supplemental Motion has been provided to Wick Phillips, individually and in its capacity as counsel to HCRE. Highland submits that no other or further notice need be provided.

WHEREFORE, Highland respectfully requests that the Court (i) enter the Proposed Order substantially in the form annexed as Exhibit A to the Motion, granting the relief requested herein, and (ii) grant the Debtor such other and further relief as the Court may deem proper.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART HIGHLAND'S SUPPLEMENTAL MOTION TO DISQUALIFY WICK PHILLIPS GOULD & MARTIN, LLP AS COUNSEL TO HCRE PARTNERS, LLC AND FOR RELATED RELIEF

The Court conducted a hearing on November 30, 2021 (the "Hearing") to consider Highland's Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2893] (the "Supplemental Motion") which supplemented the Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2196] (the "Original Motion", and together with the Supplemental Motion, the "Motion") filed by Highland Capital Management,

L.P. ("Highland" or the "Reorganized Debtor") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"). In the Motion, Highland sought entry of an order (i) directing the disqualification of Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP ("Wick Phillips") as counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC ("HCRE") in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim;[2] (ii) directing Wick Phillips to immediately turnover to Highland all files and records relating to the LLC Agreement, the Loan Agreement, and the Restated LLC Agreement; and (iii) directing HCRE to (a) reimburse Highland for all costs and fees incurred in making the Motion, including reasonable attorneys' fees; (b) engage substitute counsel in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim within fourteen (14) days of the entry of an order of the Court; and (c) disclose all communications it (or anyone purporting to act on its behalf, including Wick Phillips) has had with Mark Patrick and Paul Broaddus concerning HCRE's Claim. In considering the Motion, the Court has reviewed the (i) Original Motion; (ii) Debtor's Memorandum of Law in Support of Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2197]; (iii) the Declaration of John A. Morris in Support of the Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2198] and the exhibits attached thereto; (iv) the Supplemental Motion; (v) Highland's Memorandum of Law in Support of Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2894]; (vi) the Declaration of Kenneth H. Brown in Support of Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief

[2] Capitalized terms not otherwise defined in this Order have the meanings ascribed to them in Debtor's Memorandum of Law in Support of Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2197] and Highland's Memorandum of Law in Support of Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2894].

[Docket No. 2895] and the exhibits attached thereto; (vii) the Response to Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC [Docket No. 2278]; (viii) the Brief in Opposition to Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC [Docket No. 2279]; (ix) the sealed Appendix in Support of HCRE Partners, LLC Brief in Opposition to Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP [Docket No. 2926]; (x) the Response and Brief in Opposition to Highland's Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2927]; (xi) the Supplemental Appendix in Support of NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC's Response and Brief in Opposition to Debtor's Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP [Docket No. 2928]; (xii) Highland's Reply in Support of Supplemental Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP as Counsel to HCRE Partners, LLC and for Related Relief [Docket No. 2952]; (xiii) the exhibits admitted at the Hearing on the Motion [Docket No. 3065]; and (xiv) the arguments of counsel at the Hearing. After considering the foregoing, the Court finds that (a) the Court has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334; (b) this matter constitutes a core proceeding under 28 U.S.C. § 157; (c) venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409; (d) notice of the Motion and the Hearing were appropriate and adequate; and (e) all persons with standing have been afforded the opportunity to be heard on the Motion. As a result of the findings of fact and conclusions of law set forth on the record at the Hearing, the Court finds good cause to grant in part, and deny in part, the relief requested in the Motion. Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

1. The Motion is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part as set forth herein.

2. Wick Phillips is DISQUALIFIED from serving as counsel to HCRE in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim.

3. Wick Phillips is directed to immediately turnover to Highland all files and records relating to the LLC Agreement, the Loan Agreement, and the Restated LLC Agreement.

4. HCRE is directed to engage substitute counsel in connection with the prosecution of HCRE's Claim within thirty (30) days of the entry of this Order.

5. Highland's request that HCRE disclose all communications it (or anyone purporting to act on its behalf, including Wick Phillips) has had with Mark Patrick and Paul Broaddus concerning HCRE's Claim is DENIED.

6. Highland's request that HCRE reimburse it all costs and fees incurred in making and prosecuting the Motion, including reasonable attorneys' fees, is DENIED.

7. The Court shall retain jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters arising from the implementation of this Order.

APPELLANTS' RESPONSE TO APPELLEE'S MOTION TO DISMISS APPEAL AS MOOT

Appellants, Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy") and the Get Good Trust ("Get Good", in accordance with Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 8013 and Local Rule 7.1, respectfully file this Response to Appellee's Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot. Although Appellants may have dismissed their direct prepetition claims against the Debtor, Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor" or "Highland"), Dugaboy still owns a significant interest in some of the very entities that would have been involved in the Rule 2015.3 Reports, had they been filed. Because one of the purposes of the Rule 2015.3 Reports, in addition to assisting prepetition creditors, is to provide a complete accounting of all transactions involving non-debtor affiliates of the Debtor to determine any post-petition claims that may exist, Dugaboy still has both a substantive and pecuniary interest in the production of the 2015.3 Reports.[1]

Appellee seems to take the stance that no one (not even the Bankruptcy Court) needs to see what happened behind the scenes during the bankruptcy case and that the Bankruptcy Court, the United States Trustee, and all interest holders in the non-debtor affiliates (including Dugaboy) need to just zip it and stay quiet. Although the majority of the unsecured creditors may have accepted the Plan of Reorganization, that does not mean that the Bankruptcy Court's Order denying the Motion to Compel as moot did not harm the interest holders in the non-debtor affiliates—who are also affected by the Rule 2015.3 Reports. At the very least, amount of Dugaboy's pecuniary interest in the bankruptcy estate cannot be known because the Debtor has refused to provide the Rule 2015.3 Reports as required under the Bankruptcy Code and the Bankruptcy Court has denied Dugaboy the right to examine those reports. That is the point of this appeal: to determine what claims against the estate exist which arose from transactions with the non-debtor affiliates—a determination that was foreclosed because of the Bankruptcy Court's Order rendering production of the 2015.3 Reports moot.

[1] The Appellants concede that due to the dismissal of Get Good's claim and the lack of an ownership interest in any of the non-debtor affiliates or the Debtor, it has lost standing and consents to the dismissal of Get Good only.

Dugaboy has a Direct Pecuniary Interest in the Production of the Rule 2015.3 Reports

As outlined in the Appellants' Brief, at the confirmation hearing before the Bankruptcy Court, the Appellants raised the fact that the Debtor, after over a year, had not filed a single report as required under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2015.3. The explanation provided by the Debtor's Chief Restructuring Officer, James Seery, was that the reports simply slipped through the cracks and seemed to imply that once brought to the Debtor's attention, it would provide them. Needless to say, that did not occur, which prompted the subject Motion to Compel Compliance with Rule 2015.3, the Bankruptcy Court's final Order rendering the issue moot, and the instant appeal.

The Debtor's Motion to Dismiss is nothing more than an attempt to muddy the water and confuse the issues that are actually before this Court. While the amount of Dugaboy's claim against the estate is contingent upon the contents of the Rule 2015.3 Reports that were never produced, the issue here is the fact that Dugaboy was denied the right to even assert a claim in the first place due to the Bankruptcy Court's ruling that the Debtor would not be required to produce the Rule 2015.3 Reports at all. The Bankruptcy Court's Order caused actual and direct harm to Dugaboy by taking away that right to assert a claim based on the transactions that would be disclosed in the Rule 2015.3 Reports.

The Debtor correctly points out that in bankruptcy matters, a more exacting standard is applied to determine standing. That is, in order to have standing, a party must meet the "person aggrieved" test, which requires that the appellant show that it is directly and adversely affected pecuniarily by the order of the bankruptcy court.[2] The Debtor relies, primarily, on Matter of Technicool Sys., Inc., 896 F.3d 382 (5th Cir. 2018), which denied standing to the debtor's owner, Robert Furlough, who's complained grievance was that the same firm who represented one of the estate's creditors was also representing the estate's chapter 7 trustee in its effort to consolidate claims and pierce the corporate veil against several of the owner's other non-debtor companies. The principal argument asserted by Furlough was that the firm may fail to disclose problems with the creditor's claims against the estate on account of its dual representation, which could harm the overall recovery to the unsecured creditors, which, in turn, would harm any potential recovery to him, as an equity holder.[3] The Fifth Circuit found this too tenuous and stated that while that scenario was a possibility, "it would not be a direct result of this appeal."[4]

The same cannot be said in the instant matter. The harm visited upon Dugaboy (as an owner of the non-debtor affiliates) is that it has actually been denied an opportunity to determine whether or not a claim against the estate exists. In other words, the Bankruptcy Court's Order denying the Motion to Compel as moot directly affected Dugaboy's rights. The extent of the pecuniary effect on Dugaboy's pocket is unknown because the Bankruptcy Court never bothered to allow proper examination through the production of the Rule 2015.3 Reports.

Other cases cited in the Debtor's Motion to Dismiss are also easily distinguished from the instant case. In Harriman v. Vactronic Sci, Inc. (In re Palmaz Sci., Inc.), 262 F.Supp 3d 428 (W.D. Tex. 2017), the appellant in that case was found to have lacked standing because she never even filed a proof of claim in the case much less made an objection to the confirmed plan.

"If a party fails to appear at a hearing or object to a motion or proceeding, it cannot expect or implore the bankruptcy court to address the issues raised by the motion or proceeding for a second time," and will lack standing to appeal that decision." Id. at 435 quoting In re Ray, 597 F.3d 871, 874 (7th Cir. 2010). The Appellants, as the Debtor points out, have been active participants in the bankruptcy case and, in fact, did object to the Plan of Reorganization and raised the issue that the Rule 2015.3 Reports were not filed with the Bankruptcy Court at the confirmation hearing and in its Motion to Compel. It simply cannot be said that Dugaboy failed to make its concerns known to the Bankruptcy Court.

Similarly, in Coho Energy, the appellant claimed injury based on a settlement that the debtor reached in a contract dispute in which dispute the appellant had previously represented the debtor and was subsequently replaced by other counsel. The dispute at the heart of the appeal was over the fees awarded to both the appellant and subsequent counsel from the settlement. The original counsel complained that the amount of the attorneys fees awarded to the subsequent counsel was excessive and that the excessive award diminished the amount that would be available for its own fees. The settlement awarded $8.5 million to the estate.[5] Of that, $1.7 million was awarded to the former shareholders and $2.3 million was awarded to the subsequent firm, leaving approximately $4.5 million left for the appellant/original counsel's fees.[6] By the appellant's own admission, the high-end estimate of its fees was $3.4 million (substantially less than the $4.5 million left of the settlement funds). As such, the Fifth Circuit found that

"Thomas's conjectural injury as a claimant to the fund … is too tenuous to support 'aggrieved person' standing."[7]

As stated above, Dugaboy's injury in this appeal is far from conjectural. The harm is actual in that Dugaboy (and all other interest holders in the non-debtor affiliates) was denied the opportunity to even examine whether a claim exists. Nor can the possibility of post-petition claims be considered conjectural. In fact, the United States Supreme Court considered the possibility of claims arising from transactions with non-debtor affiliates plausible enough to create a rule that requires certain disclosures that would reveal such transactions: Rule 2015.3.

A case that was distinguished by the Coho Energy court is Ergo Science, Inc. v. Martin, 73 F.3d 595 (5th Cir. 1996), which is more applicable to the instant case. In Ergo, the appellant, ETI, was a claimant to a fund. The district court held that ETI had waived all claims against the fund in oral argument at the bankruptcy court. ETI appealed that order. At the Fifth Circuit, the standing of ETI was challenged on the grounds that its interest in the fund was too speculative. However, as the Fifth Circuit noted, the issue was not the contingent nature of the claimant's interest in the fund, rather, the issue was whether the claimant was denied its right to assert an interest in the first place.

> This dispute involves a potential claimant to the fund, not the stakeholder, and the very issue on appeal is whether ETI has waived its interest in the interpleaded funds or not. The district court's judgment decrees that ETI has no interest or right to the interpleaded funds. ETI, therefore, has standing to challenge this order because it is not faced with a hypothetical or indirect injury as in Rohm, but a real and immediate injury.[8]

[8] Ergo Sci., Inc. v. Martin, 73 F.3d 595, 597 (5th Cir. 1996).

That is the precise scenario at issue in this appeal. By not requiring the Debtor to make the Rule 2015.3 disclosures, the Bankruptcy Court denied Dugaboy (and the non-debtor affiliates in which it owns an interest) the right to assert post-petition claims against the estate. Just as in Ergo, this is not a hypothetical or indirect injury. Rather, this is a real and immediate injury to Dugaboy.

Dugaboy's Standing Has Not Gone Away

In the Motion to Dismiss, the Debtor makes much over the fact that the Appellants' claims against the estate were dismissed, but it failed to address the statement in the Appellants' Brief that Dugaboy holds an ownership interest in several of the entities for which Rule 2015.3 Reports should have been filed. As an owner of those entities, any causes of action that arose during the bankruptcy case between the Debtor and those entities would have a direct effect on Dugaboy's pocketbook. While Dugaboy's claims against the Debtor may have been dismissed, its ownership interest in the non-debtor affiliates still exists and its pecuniary interest in those entities and any claims against the estate also exists.

Furthermore, Dugaboy is a contingent beneficiary under the terms of the Plan. As a former equity interest holder in the Debtor, Dugaboy is entitled to payment after all creditors are paid in full. How can the Debtor credibly argue that a contingent beneficiary under the Plan of Reorganization has no standing to appeal an order directly affecting the implementation of the Plan?

Conclusion

The Bankruptcy Court's Order denying the Motion to Compel as moot directly harmed Dugaboy by taking away their right to even examine whether there exists a post-petition claim against the estate by the non-debtor affiliates. The propriety of that order is what is on appeal to this Court. This is an actual and direct harm to Dugaboy as an interest holder in the non-debtor affiliates. The potential amount of those claims is not at issue as that was never decided. The harm complained of is the deprivation to examine the disclosures that would have been provided by the Rule 2015.3 Reports had they been filed.

As such, Dugaboy respectfully requests that this Court deny the Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot as to Dugaboy and move forward with a determination of whether the Bankruptcy Court's Order was proper in the first place.

PLAINTIFF'S OMNIBUS MOTION
(A) TO STRIKE CERTAIN DOCUMENTS AND ARGUMENTS FROM THE RECORD, (B) FOR SANCTIONS, AND (C) FOR AN ORDER OF CONTEMPT

Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or "Plaintiff"), the reorganized debtor in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case") and plaintiff in the above-referenced adversary proceedings (collectively, the "Notes Actions"), hereby files this Omnibus Motion (A) to Strike Certain Documents and Arguments from the Record, (B) for Sanctions, and (C) for an Order of Contempt (the "Motion").[1] In support of the Motion, Plaintiff respectfully represents as follows:

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. This Court has jurisdiction over the Motion pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334(b).

2. Venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409.

3. The predicates for the relief requested in the Motion are section 105(a) of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") and Rules 12 and 37 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, made applicable herein pursuant to Rules 7012 and 7037 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the "Bankruptcy Rules").

RELIEF REQUESTED

4. Plaintiff requests that this Court enter an order substantially in the form annexed hereto as Exhibit A (the "Proposed Order") (a) striking (i) the Pully Report and (ii) all references to, and all arguments derived from, the Pully Report and the Barred Defense, as highlighted on Morris Exhibits 1 and 2,[2] respectively; (b) imposing sanctions on the Alleged Violators[3] for

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S OMNIBUS MOTION (A) TO STRIKE CERTAIN DOCUMENTS AND ARGUMENTS FROM THE RECORD, (B) FOR SANCTIONS, AND (C) FOR AN ORDER OF CONTEMPT

Having considered (a) the Omnibus Motion (A) to Strike Certain Documents and Arguments from the Record, (B) for Sanctions, and (C) for an Order of Contempt (the "Motion") filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or "Plaintiff"), the reorganized debtor in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case") and plaintiff in the above-referenced adversary proceedings (collectively, the "Notes Actions"); (b) the Brief in Support of Plaintiff's Omnibus Motion (A) to Strike Certain Documents and Arguments from the Record, (B) for Sanctions, and (C) for an Order of Contempt (the "Brief");[1] (c) the exhibits annexed to the Declaration of John A. Morris in Support of Plaintiff's Omnibus Motion (A) to Strike Certain Documents and Arguments from the Record, (B) for Sanctions, and (C) for an Order of Contempt (the "Morris Declaration"); and (d) all prior proceedings relating to this matter; and this Court having jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334; and this Court having found that venue of this proceeding and the Motion in this District is proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409; and this Court having found that Plaintiff's notice of the Motion and opportunity for a hearing on the Motion were appropriate under the circumstances and that no other notice need be provided; and this Court having determined that the legal and factual bases set forth in the Motion establish good cause for the relief granted herein; and upon all of the proceedings had before this Court; and after due deliberation and sufficient cause appearing therefor and for the reasons set forth in the record on this Motion, it is HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

1. The Motion is GRANTED as set forth herein.

[1] Capitalized terms not otherwise defined in this Order have the meanings ascribed to them in the Brief.

2. The Barred Defense is hereby STRICKEN, and HCMFA is directed to refile its Brief in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment [Adv. Proc. No. 21-3004, Dkt. 127] (the "HCMFA Brief") with all language highlighted in Morris Declaration Exhibit 2 redacted from the HCMFA Brief.

3. The Pully Report is hereby STRICKEN from the summary judgment record, and the Term Note Defendants are directed to refile their Appendix without the Pully Report.

4. HCMFA, the Term Note Defendants, and their counsel shall show cause before this Court on _____, _____, 2022 at _____ __.m. (Central Time) why an order should not be granted (i) finding and holding HCMFA, the Term Note Defendants, and their counsel in civil contempt of the (x) Second Motion for Leave Order, (y) the Scheduling Order, and (z) the Expert Order; (ii) directing HCMFA, the Term Note Defendants, and their counsel to pay Plaintiff an amount of money equal to Plaintiff's reasonable and necessary fees and expenses incurred in bringing this Motion; and (iii) granting Plaintiff such other and further relief as the Court deems just and proper under the circumstances.

5. The Court shall retain exclusive jurisdiction with respect to all matters arising from or relating to the implementation, interpretation, and enforcement of this Order.

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.'S MOTION TO WITHDRAW ITS ANSWER AND CONSENT TO JUDGMENT FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Highland Capital Management, L.P., the reorganized debtor and defendant ("Defendant" or "Highland") in the above-captioned adversary proceeding (the "Adversary Proceeding") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"), pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 11 and 15, made applicable to the Adversary Proceeding by Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011 and 7015, hereby submits Highland Capital Management L.P.'s Motion to Withdraw its Answer and Consent to Judgment for Permanent Injunctive Relief (the "Motion"). In support of its Motion, Highland respectfully states as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT[2]

1. In or around February 2021, Highland, through the diligence of the independent directors appointed by this Court in January 2020 (the "Independent Directors"), discovered that, in August 2017, Highland's senior management and certain of its employees had caused Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC," and together with CDO Fund, the "Funds"), among others, to transfer in excess of $300 million in face-amount of cash and securities to Sentinel Reinsurance, Ltd. ("Sentinel"). The transfers were ostensibly made to pay a $25 million "premium" on a $100 million "after-the-event" insurance policy issued by Sentinel (the "Policy") that purportedly insured defense costs and judgments incurred in connection with a lawsuit brought by UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (together, "UBS") against the Funds and Highland in New York state court. Former management and employees of Highland, including in-house attorneys, purposefully hid the transfers and the Policy from the Independent Directors causing significant damage to Highland.

2. Promptly after discovering the transfers to Sentinel, Highland disclosed them to UBS and was consequently forced to renegotiate its settlement of UBS's claim against Highland's estate—a settlement ultimately approved by this Court.

3. UBS subsequently commenced the Adversary Proceeding against Highland seeking an injunction prohibiting Highland from making, or causing to be made, transfers to the Sentinel Entities. Although Highland consented to the relief requested on a temporary basis, the underlying facts concerning the Transferred Assets were largely in the hands and memories of certain of Highland's former employees and third parties, such as Sentinel and its accounting firm. Consequently, Highland believed a fully-developed factual record was required before it could determine whether permanent injunctive relief was justified.

4. Now, after having reviewed the factual discovery conducted in the Adversary Proceeding, as well as its own books and records, Highland has concluded that, subject only to further Court order, it is compelled to withdraw its Answer and consent to the permanent injunctive relief sought by UBS. Specifically, Highland has concluded that (a) its defenses are not warranted by existing law or supported by a non-frivolous argument for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law, or establishing new law, (b) after having a reasonable opportunity for further investigation and discovery, there is no evidentiary support to oppose the relief requested, and (c) certain of Highland's prior denials in its Answer are no longer reasonably based on a lack of information.

5. Based on the foregoing, including events that occurred after Highland served its Answer, Highland (a) moves for leave to withdraw its Answer and (b) consents to the entry of a judgment (the "Judgment") in the form annexed hereto as Exhibit A that provides, among other things, that:

> Subject to any further order of the Court, Highland is hereby permanently enjoined from making, or allowing funds under its control (including but not limited to Multi-Strat or CDO Fund) to make, any payments or further transfers to the Sentinel Entities (or any entities known by Highland to be transferees of the Sentinel Entities) consisting of, resulting from, or relating to the Transferred Assets pending a decision of a court of competent jurisdiction as to whether the Transferred Assets were fraudulently transferred to or for the benefit of Sentinel, Dondero, Ellington, and/or any of their affiliates or as part of a fraudulent scheme.

See Docket No. 3 (Original Complaint for Injunctive Relief) ¶ 6.

6. Entry of an order granting the relief requested herein will conserve the resources of the parties to the Adversary Proceeding and third-parties, and the Court and is justified based on the factual record developed in this Action.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. The Bankruptcy Case

7. On October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), Highland filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the "Delaware Court").

8. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of Highland's bankruptcy case to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division (the "Bankruptcy Court") [Bankr. Docket No. 186].[3]

9. On January 22, 2021, Highland filed its Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [Bankr. Docket No. 1808] (the "Plan").

10. On February 22, 2021, the Bankruptcy Court entered the Order Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) and

[3] "Bankr. Docket No. __" refers to the docket maintained by the Bankruptcy Court in Case No. 19-34054.

(ii) Granting Related Relief [Bankr. Docket No. 1943] (the "Confirmation Order") which confirmed Highland's Plan.

11. On August 11, 2021, the Plan became effective [Bankr. Docket No. 2700].

B. The Adversary Proceeding

12. On March 31, 2021, UBS commenced the Adversary Proceeding by filing its Original Complaint for Injunctive Relief (the "Complaint") against Highland [Docket No. 3].[4]

13. In its Complaint, UBS alleged that James Dondero (Highland's founder and former President and CEO) and certain former Highland employees fraudulently transferred assets worth hundreds of millions of dollars from funds currently or previously owned, controlled, or managed by Highland to a Cayman Islands-based entity, Sentinel, that is owned and controlled by Mr. Dondero and Scott Ellington (Highland's former general counsel), in anticipation of UBS obtaining a judgment against those funds in New York. Complaint ¶ 1.

14. In the Adversary Proceeding, UBS seeks a permanent injunction preventing Highland from allowing funds under its management or control to make payments to the Sentinel Entities pending a judicial determination as to whether the Transferred Assets were fraudulently transferred to, or for the benefit of, Sentinel, Mr. Dondero, Mr. Ellington, and/or any of their affiliates or as part of a fraudulent transfer scheme (the "Prohibited Conduct"). Complaint ¶ 6.

15. On the same day it filed its Complaint, UBS also moved for a temporary restraining order enjoining Highland from engaging in any Prohibited Conduct. [Docket No. 4].

16. On April 9, 2021, the Court entered an Order Granting Plaintiff's Motion for a Temporary Restraining Order [Docket No. 21] pursuant to which Highland was temporarily enjoined from engaging in the Prohibited Conduct until the Court decided UBS's request for a preliminary injunction.

17. On June 2, 2021, Highland filed its Answer to Complaint [Docket No. 84] (the "Answer") in which it denied certain material allegations on the ground that it did not have knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the matters asserted.

18. Indeed, Highland's lack of knowledge prevented it from consenting to the imposition of permanent injunctive relief at the time the Adversary Proceeding was filed. As Highland's counsel explained during a hearing on a related matter, many of the facts alleged were within the exclusive purview of Mr. Dondero, Mr. Ellington, and other former Highland employees and third parties. Accordingly, Highland sought to determine whether a full record would support the imposition of permanent injunctive relief.[5]

19. During these proceedings, UBS sought documents from and/or deposed the following witnesses (collectively, the "Third Party Discovery"): (a) Clifford Stoops; (b) Jeremy Ringheimer; (c) Carter Chism; (d) James Dondero; (e) Shawn Raver; (f) Matthew DiOrio; (g) Scott Ellington; (h) Brian Fuentes; (i) Isaac Leventon; (j) Mary Kathryn Lucas (nee Irving); (k) Jean Paul Sevilla; and (l) Beecher Carlson Insurance Services, LLC.

20. In addition, UBS served broad discovery requests on Highland. In response, Highland searched for, and produced, a large volume of documents to UBS and continued to investigate the underlying facts so it could respond to extensive sets of interrogatories and requests for admission.

[5] If Sentinel, or Mr. Dondero, or Mr. Ellington believed that a good faith, factual basis existed to oppose the relief sought by UBS, they could have and should have intervened in this Action. Indeed, Highland invited them to do so almost a year ago. See Transcript of June 24, 2021 hearing at 48:7-18 ("[T]o the extent that anybody is critical of how the Debtor is defending this litigation brought by UBS, Sentinel is free to intervene. In fact, Sentinel's two owners are represented here today. Mr. Dondero owns the majority of it. He's on the line. And Mr. Ellington owns the rest of it, and he's represented by counsel. So if Sentinel is -- wants to, you know, enter this litigation, the Debtor certainly has no objection. . . . [T]hey've been resisting service of process on subpoenas. I don't know whether they'll resist being named in the lawsuit. But they didn't on their own seek to intervene, which we kind of expected they would.").

21. From Highland's perspective, the Third Party Discovery and the information it produced in discovery shed considerable light on the allegations for which Highland previously lacked knowledge and established or confirmed the following facts, among others:

- Former employees of Highland caused the Transferred Assets to be conveyed to Sentinel in August 2017;
- Highland caused CDO Fund, among others, to transfer assets to Sentinel both before and during the bankruptcy without the knowledge and/or approval of the Independent Board;
- Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington indirectly own and control Sentinel;
- The Transferred Assets conveyed to Sentinel had a face value of more than $300 million and a market value at the time of transfer of over $100 million;
- Despite having a face amount of more than $300 million and a market value in excess of $100 million, the Transferred Assets were used to pay a $25 million premium on the $100 million Policy—an "after the event" policy issued by Sentinel;
- The Policy was ostensibly issued to satisfy any judgments in favor of UBS, plus costs of defending against UBS (although Sentinel has refused to pay on the Policy notwithstanding demand having been made);
- None of the former Highland employees subject to the Third Party Discovery ever disclosed the existence of the Policy to Highland or its independent management and, in fact, purposefully hid the existence of the Policy and the transfers from the Independent Board;
- Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon told the Independent Board that information on CDO Fund and SOHC assets was limited or did not exist, and it is now clear that those statements were untrue and appear to have been designed to hide the Policy and defraud Highland and its affiliates of the benefits of the Policy;
- In reliance on the information provided by Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon, Highland told UBS that information on CDO Fund and SOHC assets was limited or did not exist, statements that subsequently proved to be untrue;
- Mr. Ellington and Mr. Leventon withheld evidence from the Independent Board concerning the Policy and the conveyance of the Transferred Assets to Sentinel and were assisted in doing so by, among others, Highland legal department employee Matthew DiOrio who was an undisclosed director of Sentinel before and during the bankruptcy case; and

- Mr. Ellington, Mr. Leventon, and Mr. DiOrio lied to the Independent Board and caused them to make misrepresentations to UBS and the Court.

22. Based on the foregoing, Highland has concluded that (a) its defenses are not warranted by existing law or by a non-frivolous argument for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law or establishing new law, (b) after having a reasonable opportunity for further investigation and discovery, there is no evidentiary basis to oppose the relief requested, and (c) certain of Highland's prior denials in its Answer are no longer reasonably based on a lack of information.

CONCLUSION

23. For the reasons set forth herein, Highland respectfully requests that the Court (a) grant Highland's Motion, (b) enter without opposition the Judgment annexed as Exhibit A hereto, and (c) grant such other and further relief that the Court deems proper and just under the circumstances.

Docket No. __] (the "Motion"), filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland"), the reorganized debtor and defendant in the above-captioned adversary proceeding (the "Adversary Proceeding") in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"), and this Court having considered (a) the Motion and (b) the Declaration of James P. Seery, Jr. in Support of Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Motion to Withdraw its Answer and Consent to Judgment for the Permanent Injunctive Relief Sought by Plaintiff (the "Seery Declaration" and together with the Motion, "Highland's Papers"), and (c) all prior proceedings relating to the Adversary Proceeding; and this Court having jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334; and this Court having found that this is a core proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2); and this Court having found that venue of this proceeding and the Motion in this District is proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409; and this Court having found that injunctive relief is warranted under sections 105(a) and 362(a) of the Bankruptcy Code; and this Court having found that the Highland's notice of the Motion and opportunity for a hearing on the Motion were appropriate and that no other notice need be provided; and this Court having determined that the legal and factual bases set forth in the Highland's Papers establish good cause for the relief granted herein, and that (1) such relief is necessary to avoid immediate and irreparable harm to UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (together, "UBS"), (2) UBS is likely to succeed on the merits of its underlying claim for injunctive relief; (3) the balance of the equities tip in favor of UBS; and (4) such relief serves the public interest; and upon all of the proceedings had before this Court; and after due deliberation and sufficient cause appearing therefor and for the reasons set forth in the record on this Motion, it is HEREBY ORDERED THAT:

1. The Motion is GRANTED as set forth herein.

2. Highland's Answer to Complaint [Docket No. 84] is deemed WITHDRAWN.

3. Subject to any further order of this Court, Highland is hereby permanently ENJOINED AND RESTRAINED from making or allowing funds under its control (including but not limited to Multi-Strat or CDO Fund) to make any payments or further transfers to the Sentinel Entities (or any entities known by Highland to be transferees of the Sentinel Entities) consisting of, resulting from, or relating to the Transferred Assets pending a decision of a court of competent jurisdiction as to whether the Transferred Assets were fraudulently transferred to or for the benefit of Sentinel, Dondero, Ellington, and/or any of their affiliates or as part of a fraudulent scheme

4. This Order shall remain in effect unless otherwise ordered by the Court.

5. All objections to the Motion are overruled in their entirety.

6. The Court shall retain exclusive jurisdiction with respect to all matters arising from or relating to the implementation, interpretation, and enforcement of this Order.

WebEx Hearing Instructions
Judge Stacey G. Jernigan

Pursuant to General Order 2020-14 issued by the Court on May 20, 2020, all hearings before Judge Stacey G. Jernigan are currently being conducted by WebEx videoconference unless ordered otherwise.

For WebEx Video Participation/Attendance:

Link: https://us-courts.webex.com/meet/jerniga

For WebEx Telephonic Only Participation/Attendance:

Dial-In: 1.650.479.3207
Meeting ID: 479 393 582

Participation/Attendance Requirements:

- Counsel and other parties in interest who plan to actively participate in the hearing are encouraged to attend the hearing in the WebEx video mode using the WebEx video link above. Counsel and other parties in interest who will not be seeking to introduce any evidence at the hearing and who wish to attend the hearing in a telephonic only mode may attend the hearing in the WebEx telephonic only mode using the WebEx dial-in and meeting ID above.
- Attendees should join the WebEx hearing at least 10 minutes prior to the hearing start time. Please be advised that a hearing may already be in progress. During hearings, participants are required to keep their lines on mute at all times that they are not addressing the Court or otherwise actively participating in the hearing. The Court reserves the right to disconnect or place on permanent mute any attendee that causes any disruption to the proceedings. For general information and tips with respect to WebEx participation and attendance, please see Clerk's Notice 20-04: https://www.txnb.uscourts.gov/sites/txnb/files/hearings/Webex%20Information%20and%20Tips_0.pdf
- Witnesses are required to attend the hearing in the WebEx video mode and live testimony will only be accepted from witnesses who have the WebEx video function activated. Telephonic testimony without accompanying video will not be accepted by the Court.
- All WebEx hearing attendees are required to comply with Judge Jernigan's Telephonic and Videoconference Hearing Policy (included within Judge Jernigan's Judge-Specific Guidelines): https://www.txnb.uscourts.gov/content/judge-stacey-g-c-jernigan

Exhibit Requirements:

- Any party intending to introduce documentary evidence at the hearing must file an exhibit list in the case with a true and correct copy of each designated exhibit filed as a separate, individual attachment thereto so that the Court and all participants have ready access to all designated exhibits.
- If the number of pages of such exhibits exceeds 100, then such party must also deliver two (2) sets of such exhibits in exhibit binders to the Court by no later than twenty-four (24) hours in advance of the hearing.

Notice of Hearing Content and Filing Requirements:

IMPORTANT: For all hearings that will be conducted by WebEx only:

- The Notice of Hearing filed in the case and served on parties in interest must: (1) provide notice that the hearing will be conducted by WebEx videoconference only, (2) provide notice of the above WebEx video participation/attendance link, and (3) attach a copy of these WebEx Hearing Instructions or provide notice that they may be obtained from Judge Jernigan's hearing/calendar site: https://www.txnb.uscourts.gov/judges-info/hearing-dates/judge-jernigans-hearing-dates.
- When electronically filing the Notice of Hearing via CM/ECF select "at https://us-courts.webex.com/meet/jerniga" as the location of the hearing (note: this option appears immediately after the first set of Wichita Falls locations). Do not select Judge Jernigan's Dallas courtroom as the location for the hearing.

UBS'S RESPONSE TO HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.'S MOTION TO WITHDRAW ITS ANSWER AND CONSENT TO JUDGMENT FOR PERMANENT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

[1] The Reorganized Debtor's last four digits of its taxpayer identification number are (6725). The headquarters and service address for the above-captioned Reorganized Debtor is 100 Crescent Court, Suite 1850, Dallas, TX 75201.

UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (collectively, "UBS"), plaintiffs in the above-captioned adversary proceeding (the "Adversary Proceeding") and creditors in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"), submit this response (the "Response") to the Motion to Withdraw its Answer and Consent to Judgment for Permanent Injunctive Relief (the "Motion") filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or the "Debtor") on June 8, 2022 (Adv. Dkt. No. 169). In support of the Response, UBS states as follows:

UBS agrees, as Highland states in the Motion, that the Court should permanently enjoin Highland from making or allowing funds under its management or control (including, but not limited to, Multi-Strat and CDO Fund) to make any payments or further transfers to Sentinel or any of its affiliates (the "Sentinel Entities") or any transferees of the Sentinel Entities consisting of, resulting from, or relating to the Transferred Assets, and that "(a) [Highland's] defenses are not warranted by existing law or supported by a non-frivolous argument for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law, or establishing new law, (b) after having a reasonable opportunity for further investigation and discovery, there is no evidentiary support to oppose the relief requested, and (c) certain of Highland's prior denials in its Answer are no longer reasonably based on a lack of information." Mot. at 2.

UBS, however, believes that the Court should modify Highland's proposed judgment attached to the Motion as Exhibit A and submits an alternative proposed judgment attached to this Response as Exhibit 1. Specifically, UBS submits that this Court should find that UBS has satisfied the standard for a permanent injunction: "(1) success on the merits; (2) that a failure to grant the injunction will result in irreparable injury; (3) that said injury outweighs any damages that the injunction will cause the opposing party; and (4) that the injunction will not disserve the public interest." In re Heritage Real Est. Inv., Inc., No. 14-03603-NPO, 2021 WL 1395592, at *13 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. Feb. 4, 2021) (quoting Env't Tex. Citizen Lobby, Inc. v. ExxonMobil Corp., 824 F.3d 507, 533 (5th Cir. 2016)). UBS intends to submit evidence during the August 8, 2022 hearing that will support the alternative proposed judgment and permit this Court to find that the standard can be met and therefore a permanent injunction is warranted.

As a result, UBS proposes that this Court enter the proposed judgment attached to this Response as Exhibit 1. A redline comparison to show the differences between UBS's proposed judgment at Exhibit 1 and Highland's proposed judgment at Exhibit A to the Motion is attached to this Response as Exhibit 2.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, UBS respectfully requests that the Court enter the judgment attached hereto as Exhibit 1 and grant such further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

THE DUGABOY INVESTMENT TRUST and GET GOOD TRUST Appellants, v. HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P., Appellee.	§	CIVIL ACTION NO. 3:21-CV-2268-S
In re: HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P., Debtor.	§	CASE NO. 19-34054-sgj11

ORDER

Before the Court is Appellee's Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot ("Motion to Dismiss") [ECF No. 12]. The Court has reviewed and considered the Motion to Dismiss, Appellants' Response to Appellee's Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot ("Response") [ECF No. 15], Reply in Support of Appellee's Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot [ECF No. 16], Appellants' Sur-Reply to Appellee's Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot [ECF No. 22], the record on appeal ("Record") [ECF No. 9], and the applicable law. For the following reasons, the Court GRANTS the Motion to Dismiss and DISMISSES this appeal for lack of jurisdiction.

I. BACKGROUND

This bankruptcy appeal arises from the bankruptcy court's denial of the Motion to Compel Compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 (the "Motion to Compel") filed by Appellants The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy") and Get Good Trust ("Get Good") (collectively, "Appellants"). R. vol. 2 at 421. Appellee Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Appellee" or "Debtor") initiated the underlying Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding in October 2019. Dugaboy subsequently filed three proofs of claim in April 2020, including a proof of claim as a purported "successor in interest" to Canis Major Trust. Around the same time, Get Good also filed three proofs of claim, including two as a purported "successor in interest" to Canis Major Trust.

In the meantime, Debtor filed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Plan") in January 2021, and the bankruptcy court held a Plan confirmation hearing in February 2021. R. vol. 1 at 290. At the hearing, Appellants raised the issue of Debtor's failure to file any reports as required under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3, which requires debtors to file "periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability" of each non-debtor entity in which the debtor "holds a substantial or controlling interest." FED. R. BANKR. P. 2015.3(a). The bankruptcy court confirmed the Plan over Appellants' objections and entered the Confirmation Order on February 22, 2021. R. vol. 1 at 290.

Three months later, Appellants filed the Motion to Compel. R. vol. 2 at 421. Debtor filed its opposition, and the bankruptcy court conducted a hearing on the Motion to Compel on June 10, 2021. R. vol 1. at 356. Following the hearing, the bankruptcy court issued a minute order providing that (1) the hearing on the Motion to Compel would be continued to September 2021; (2) if the Plan effective date occurred before the hearing, the matter would become moot; and (3) if the Plan effective date had not occurred by the hearing, the court would consider the Motion to Compel further. Id. at 357. However, the Plan became effective on August 11, 2021, and the bankruptcy court therefore issued its Order Denying Motion to Compel Compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 ("Order") on September 6, 2021. R. vol. 1 at 10. Appellants filed their notice of appeal of the Order on September 22, 2021. See Notice of Appeal [ECF No. 1].

After this appeal was filed, however, all of the proofs of claim filed by Dugaboy and Get Good were withdrawn with prejudice. Specifically, on October 27, 2021, with Dugaboy's consent, the bankruptcy court entered orders withdrawing two of the Dugaboy claims with prejudice, and on November 10, 2021, the bankruptcy court entered an order approving a stipulation between Dugaboy and Debtor withdrawing the third Dugaboy claim with prejudice. See In re Highland Capital Management, L.P., (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Oct. 16, 2019), ECF Nos. 2965, 2966, 3007. Similarly, on November 10, 2021, all three of the Get Good claims were withdrawn with prejudice either by consent or pursuant to stipulation by Get Good. Id., ECF Nos. 3008, 3009, 3010.

Shortly after all of Appellants' claims were withdrawn, Appellee filed its Motion to Dismiss, asserting that this appeal is constitutionally moot for lack of standing.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

Standing to appeal a bankruptcy court decision is a question of law. In re Technicool Sys., Inc., 896 F.3d 382, 385 (5th Cir. 2018). Compared to traditional Article III standing, "standing to appeal a bankruptcy court order is, of necessity, quite limited." In re Dean, 18 F.4th 842, 844 (5th Cir. 2021). The Fifth Circuit applies the "person aggrieved" test, which imposes a "more exacting standard than traditional constitutional standing." Id. The "person aggrieved" test "demands a higher causal nexus between act and injury," and requires an appellant to show that she is "directly and adversely affected pecuniarily by the order of the bankruptcy court." In re Coho Energy Inc., 395 F.3d 198, 202-03 (5th Cir. 2004) (citations omitted). It is not enough that an appellant is directly impacted by "the proceedings more generally." In re Dean, 18 F.4th at 844. Rather, to have standing, the exact order being appealed must "directly affect [appellants'] wallets." Id. Such a narrow standing inquiry "ensur[es] that only those with a direct, financial stake in a given order can appeal it." Technicool, 896 F.3d at 386. As the Fifth Circuit has observed, "in bankruptcy litigation, as in life, 'the more money we come across, the more problems we see.'" Id. (quoting NOTORIOUS B.I.G., Mo Money Mo Problems, on LIFE AFTER DEATH (Bad Boy/Arista 1997)).

Standing must exist both at the commencement of the litigation and throughout its existence. Goldin v. Bartholow, 166 F.3d 710, 717 (5th Cir. 1999) (quoting Arizonans for Off. Eng. v. Arizona, 520 U.S. 43, 68 n.22 (1997) (internal alterations and quotation marks omitted)). A case becomes moot when a party loses standing, as "there are no longer adverse parties with sufficient legal interests to maintain the litigation." Id. (citation omitted). And when a case becomes moot, the court loses its "constitutional jurisdiction to resolve the issues it presents." Id. (citing Hogan v. Miss. Univ. for Women, 646 F.2d 1116, 1117 n.1 (5th Cir. 1981)).

III. ANALYSIS

Appellee asserts that while Appellants had standing at the commencement of the appeal, they lost that standing when all of their claims were withdrawn on November 10, 2021, because at that point they were no longer creditors. Appellants concede that Get Good has lost standing to pursue the appeal,[1] but contend that Dugaboy still has standing because it owns an interest in some of the entities for which Rule 2015.3 reports would have been required. Dugaboy claims that because the purpose of requiring reports under Rule 2015.3 is to "provide a complete accounting of all transactions involving non-debtor affiliates of the Debtor to determine any post-petition claims that may exist," Dugaboy still has a pecuniary interest in the production of the 2015.3 reports themselves. Resp. 2.

The Court finds that Dugaboy is not "directly and adversely affected pecuniarily" by the Order as required to establish standing. Coho, 395 F.3d at 203. By withdrawing its remaining claims against Debtor, Dugaboy no longer has any pecuniary interest in the bankruptcy estate and therefore is not a "person aggrieved" by the Order. Id. While Dugaboy does not dispute that it is no longer a creditor of the estate, it asserts that its pecuniary interest is its ownership interest in the non-debtor affiliates and a potential recovery under the Plan as one of Debtor's former equity holders. In other words, Dugaboy's primary contention is that, but for the bankruptcy court's failure to compel Debtor to file retroactive reports regarding its ownership interests in non-debtor subsidiaries as of the bankruptcy petition date, Dugaboy might have used the information in those reports to investigate whether any post-petition claims exist against Debtor's estate by any non-debtor affiliates. But such an injury is precisely the type of "hypothetical or indirect injury" that the Fifth Circuit has consistently found insufficient to confer standing. Coho, 395 F.3d at 203 (quoting Ergo Science v. Martin, 73 F.3d 595, 597 (5th Cir. 1996)).

[1] See Resp. 2 n.1 ("The Appellants concede that due to the dismissal of Get Good's claim and the lack of an ownership interest in any of the non-debtor affiliates or the Debtor, it has lost standing and consents to the dismissal of Get Good only.").

Further, even if Dugaboy did still have some claim to the estate, "[e]ven a claimant to a fund must show a realistic likelihood of injury in order to have standing." Id. There is no such likelihood here. Were the Court to reverse the Order, the effect of the bankruptcy court granting the Motion to Compel is simply that Debtor would be required to file retroactive reports regarding its ownership interests in non-debtor subsidiaries. It is unclear how post-dated reports disclosing years-old facts could lead to any direct recovery by a creditor, let alone recovery by a non-creditor with a purported ownership in non-debtor affiliates. This attenuated interest in a potential future outcome is not sufficient: "the order must burden [Dugaboy's] pocket before [it] burdens the docket." Technicool, 896 F.3d at 386.

Dugaboy also argues that it has standing as a "contingent beneficiary" under the Plan, or a beneficiary who will be entitled to payment after all creditors are paid in full. Resp. 7. This assertion is premised on the assumption that Dugaboy's 0.1866% pre-bankruptcy limited partnership interest in Debtor—which was extinguished under the Plan—makes it a contingent beneficiary of the creditor trust created under the Plan. As an initial matter, Dugaboy still does not demonstrate the requisite "causal nexus" between the actual Order being appealed and its purported interest in potential future recovery under the Plan. Coho, 395 F.3d at 202. But in any event, such a "speculative prospect of harm is far from a direct, adverse, pecuniary hit" as required to confer standing. Technicool, 896 F.3d at 386.

While Dugaboy may have a direct interest in the "proceedings more generally," bankruptcy standing requires that there is a direct, adverse, and pecuniary effect on the appellant, and that the effect is tied to the specific order being appealed. In the absence of any claim to Debtor's estate or direct financial injury flowing from the Order, Dugaboy simply cannot be a "person aggrieved" by the Order. Accordingly, the Court finds that Appellants lack standing and, as a result, this appeal is constitutionally moot.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, Appellee's Motion to Dismiss Appeal as Moot [ECF No. 12] is GRANTED, and this appeal is DISMISSED for lack of jurisdiction.

SO ORDERED.

MOTION TO WITHDRAW PROOF OF CLAIM

NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC ("NREP" or "Claimant") files this, its Motion to Withdraw Proof of Claim [Proof of Claim No. 146], and respectfully states as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Claimant filed a proof of claim, timely, but long before any Plan was proposed. The Debtor objected.

Since then, the LLC subject to the objection has operated without anticipated interference from the Debtor, and NREP would prefer that the LLC continue to do so. As a result of the Company's operations, and in consideration of the cost and uncertainty with pursuing the Claim in the face of Debtor's objection, Claimant now wishes to withdraw the claim to which the Debtor objected.

At the time of this filing, Debtor was unable to agree or provide that it was unopposed to the withdrawal. Respectfully, objection to the proposed withdrawal of a claim, if any, should be overruled, and this Motion should be granted.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the "Delaware Court"). The Delaware Court thereafter entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor's bankruptcy case (the "Bankruptcy Case") to this Court.

On March 2, 2020, the Court entered its Order (I) Establishing Bar Dates for Filing Claims and (II) Approving the Form and Manner of Notice Thereof [Docket No. 488] (the "Bar Date Order"), which, among other things, established April 8, 2020 as the deadline for all entities holding claims against the Debtor that arose before the Petition Date to file proofs of claim.

On April 8, 2020, NREP timely filed a proof of claim (the "Proof of Claim") regarding its and the Debtor's interest in a limited liability company, SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC (the "Company").

On July 30, 2020, the Debtor objected to the Proof of Claim in its First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 906] (the "Objection") on the ground that it had no liability. NREP responded the objection on October 19, 2020 (the "Response").

The Debtor's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (the "Plan") [Docket. No. 1808] was confirmed by Order entered by the Bankruptcy Court on February 22, 2021 [Docket No. 1943], and the effective date of the Plan as August 11, 2021 [Docket No. 2700].

A year after NREP filed the Proof of Claim, and eight months after it filed the Objection, the Debtor sought to disqualify NREP's then-counsel Wick Phillips Gould & Martin LLP [Docket Nos. 2196 and 2893]. Following notice and hearing, the Court entered an Order granting in part and denying in part the Debtor's motion, and NREP thereafter secured new counsel.

Thereafter in June 2022, Debtor and NREP (via new counsel) entered a Scheduling Order regarding the Proof of Claim [Docket No. 3356] and the parties have engaged in document and third-party deposition discovery. There have been no hearings in the matter, and no dispositive motions have been filed or set. This contested matter is set for hearing on November 1 and 2, 2022.

There is no other pending proceeding, lawsuit, or matter regarding the Proof of Claim or the claim made in the Proof of Claim.

Given the uninterrupted operation of the Company, and in order to put a stop to the anticipated future time and effort expended on pursuit of the Proof of Claim and the Debtor's objection to it, NREP conferred with the Debtor about withdrawal. Counsel for the Debtor was unable to state it was agreed or unopposed.

This Motion follows.

ARGUMENT AND AUTHORITY

A. Bankruptcy Rule 3006

Rule 3006 provides after a creditor's proof of claim has drawn an objection, the creditor may not withdraw the claim except on order of the court, after a hearing, and on such terms and conditions as the court deems proper.[1]

B. Standards for Applying Bankruptcy Rule 3006

Although Rule 3006 itself does not provide guidance as to the standards to be applied for withdrawing a proof of claim, the cases and comments applying it advise applying the standards used in relation to FED. R. CIV. P. 41(a).[2]

Courts in the Fifth Circuit "follow the traditional principle that dismissal should be allowed unless the defendant will suffer some plain prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit. It is no bar to dismissal that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage thereby,"[3] and there are, in fact, "only a limited number of circumstances that will warrant denial of a Federal Rule 41(a)(2) motion since 'the [court] should not require that a plaintiff continue to prosecute an action that it no longer desires to pursue.'"[4]

Legal prejudice here means prejudice to some legal interest, some legal claim, some legal argument, and may occur when a dismissal strips an otherwise available defense (e.g., statute of limitation, forum non conveniens),[5] or dismissal is requested after an adverse ruling is entered or one is imminent.[6]

The prospect of a second lawsuit, or the fact that plaintiff may obtain some tactical advantage, are not sufficient to establish legal prejudice,[7] and that the dismissing party might possibly obtain some tactical advantage in some future litigation is not a bar.[8]

Indeed, the 'fact that a plaintiff may gain a tactical advantage by dismissing its suit without prejudice and refiling in another forum is not sufficient legal prejudice to justify denying a motion for voluntary dismissal.'") (citation omitted).

In short, absent "legal harm" or "legal prejudice," the general guidance is that Bankruptcy Courts should allow withdrawal absent a showing of legal harm or prejudice.[9]

The burden of showing prejudice falls on the objecting party,[10] and withdrawal is in the Court's discretion, and in consideration of interests of the parties.[11]

In determining whether to approve withdrawal, the Court may consider the (1) diligence in bringing the motion, (2) any "undue vexatiousness" by the movant, (3) the suit's progression, including trial preparation, (4) the duplicative expense of re-litigation, and (5) the movant's reason for seeking withdrawal.[12]

[9] See In re Manchester, 2008 WL 5273289, *3 ("[S]ince the general policy under Rule 41(a) is to permit withdrawal of a complaint, withdrawal of a proof of claim should be permitted unless that withdrawal results in a 'legal harm' or 'prejudice' to a non-moving party."); see also Robles, 77 Fed. Appx. at 275 (recognizing that Rule 41 motions "should be freely granted unless the non-moving party will suffer some plain legal prejudice other than the mere prospect of a second lawsuit").

[10] See In re Manchester, 2008 WL 5273289, *3 ("The non-moving party bears the burden to prove that it will suffer such a legal harm or prejudice."); see also In re Ogden New York Servs., Inc., 312 B.R. 729, 733 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (recognizing that the objecting party bears the burden of demonstrating legal prejudice).

[11] See In re Manchester, 2008 WL 5273289, *3 ("As with a Rule 41 (a) (2) motion, a motion to withdraw a proof of claim is left to the bankruptcy court's discretion, which is 'to be exercised with due regard to the legitimate interests of both [parties].'") (quoting In re 20/20 Sport, 200 B.R. at 979).

[12] See In re Manchester, Inc., 2008 WL 5273289, *3 (("In determining whether withdrawal of a proof of claim is appropriate, courts consider the following factors: (1) the movant's diligence in bringing the motion, (2) any "undue vexatiousness" on the part of the movant, (3) the extent to which the suit has progressed, including the effort and expense undertaken by the non-moving party to prepare for trial, (4) the duplicative expense of re-litigation, and (5) the adequacy of the movant's explanation for the need to withdraw the claim.").

C. Standards for Applying Bankruptcy Rule 3006

Considering the factors in Manchester,

Standard	Application
Diligence in bringing the motion	NREP brought the Motion immediately after conferring with Debtor's counsel.
Undue vexatiousness	NREP has not been vexatious in pursuing its Proof of Claim, and outside the motion to disqualify previous counsel – filed by the Debtor, and which is not substantive – everything in the matter has proceeded by agreement, and there have been no hearings set or held.
Matter's progression, including trial preparation	The hearing on the Debtor's objection is months away, November 1 and 2, and fact and expert discovery is not yet completed.
Duplication of expense of re-litigation	The Proof of Claim is effectively sui generis and is not the subject of any other pending action, proceeding, or matter. There is no tactical advantage for the withdrawal.
Reason for dismissal	The operation of the Company during the case, and the anticipated issues therewith, have not materialized and NREP no longer desires to proceed on the matters raised in the Proof of Claim.

There are no pending Motions, and no dispositive motions have been filed, set, or heard.

Neither the Debtor nor any party-in-interest will suffer plain legal prejudice if the Proof of Claim is withdrawn: there are no imminent adverse rulings, no parallel or pending actions, no tactical advantage to be obtained.

The Debtor is reorganized, the Plan effective date has long since passed, and the withdrawal of the Proof of Claim will not have any effect on the Debtor's reorganization.

NREP simply wishes to no longer pursue a claim to which the Debtor has objected.[13]

WHEREFORE, NREP prays that it be allowed to withdraw its claim and for such other relief as may be appropriate.

CASES

RULES

Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or, as applicable, the "Debtor"), the reorganized debtor in the above-captioned chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"), by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this objection (the "Objection") to the Motion to Withdraw Proof of Claim [Docket No. 3443] (the "Motion to Withdraw"), filed by NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC ("HCRE" and together with Highland/Debtor, the "Parties"). In support of its Objection, Highland states as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT[1]

1. In another blatant abuse of the bankruptcy rules and system, HCRE (under the control of Mr. Dondero) filed a baseless proof of claim that it now abruptly seeks to withdraw after two years of litigation during which Highland expended substantial resources, completed all of its discovery obligations, and uncovered substantial damage caused by HCRE's actions. Just as Highland was compelling HCRE to complete HCRE's discovery obligations and preparing for summary judgment, HCRE realized the risk it faced and is now desperately trying to dodge Highland's day in court. Shamelessly, HCRE wants to slither away—without consequence and without offering any evidence—just days before it and its owners were to be deposed on matters certain to elicit testimony concerning HCRE's meritless claim, its contractual breaches, and its questionable tax structuring and filings.[2] Under these dubious circumstances, the Motion to Withdraw should be denied.

[2] HCRE's tax filings on behalf of SE Multifamily were so questionable that BH Equities (the lone third-party member of SE Multifamily) disregarded the 2020 Form K-1 that HCRE caused to be prepared and voluntarily reported to the IRS an allocation of profits from SE Multifamily that BH Equities believed comported with the Amended LLC Agreement. See Declaration of John A. Morris in Support of Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s Objection to Motion to Withdraw Proof of Claim (being filed simultaneously with this Objection) ("Morris Dec."), Ex. 1 at 129:21-130:7; 144:8-145:12; 147:5-149:14.

2. Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 3006, motions to withdraw contested claims may only be granted after a hearing during which courts may consider various factors (the "Manchester Factors") intended to protect the integrity of the system. Application of those factors here establishes that the Motion to Withdraw is a strategic ploy intended to avoid depositions, harass Highland, and otherwise game the system:

- Diligence in bringing the motion: HCRE gives no indication when it concluded that SE Multifamily was being "operated without interference from the Debtor,"[3] but it filed its Motion to Withdraw after two years of heavily contested litigation during which it never expressed any concerns, made any demands, or sought judicial relief concerning Highland's alleged "interference."

- Undue vexatiousness: HCRE's conduct in abruptly moving to withdraw its Dondero-signed proof of claim after two years of litigation, and after taking Highland's deposition but days before its own Witnesses were to be deposed, is a textbook example of vexatiousness—and is just the latest instance of Mr. Dondero bringing motions, or asserting claims, or filing objections, only to withdraw them after forcing Highland to spend time, money, and effort addressing them.

- Progress of the case and the effort and expense of the non-moving party: With the exception of the depositions HCRE seeks to avoid, discovery is complete,[4] and Highland is prepared to move for summary judgment—after spending hundreds of thousands of dollars disqualifying its former counsel over HCRE's objection and engaging in exhaustive discovery, including taking the depositions of the Third-Party Witnesses during which HCRE declined to ask any questions.

- Duplication of re-litigation: Given that this case is trial-ready (but for the completion of the HCRE-related depositions), it would be a massive waste of resources to start this litigation anew (as HCRE implicitly threatens) and would be incredibly prejudicial to Highland because the discovery deadlines have passed and HCRE should be precluded from getting a "do-over."

- Adequacy of explanation: HCRE's explanation makes no sense given the timing: HCRE has not (and cannot) identify anything that occurred between August 10,

[4] There is one additional exception that warrants mention because of its timing. In addition to the HCRE depositions, HCRE and Highland entered into a stipulation and proposed amended scheduling on August 5, 2022 (just seven days before HCRE filed its Motion to Withdraw) pursuant to which Highland agreed to extend the expert discovery deadline to allow HCRE to proffer an expert report while preserving its right to file a motion for summary judgment. Docket No. 3434. On August 9, 2022 (just three days before HCRE filed its Motion to Withdraw), the Court entered an Order approving the stipulation. Docket No. 3438.

2022 (when it took the deposition of Highland's corporate representative) and August 12, 2022 (when it filed the Motion to Withdraw) that caused it to conclude that SE Multifamily was being "operated without interference from the Debtor."

3. Based on the evidence that will be adduced,[5] the Court should deny the Motion to Withdraw, direct HCRE to tender the Witnesses for the depositions that HCRE unilaterally cancelled, and promptly proceed either with Highland's expected summary judgment motion or trial.

4. However, if the Court is inclined to grant the Motion to Withdraw, it should exercise its discretion under Bankruptcy Rule 3006 and set the following terms and conditions (collectively, the "Conditions") to mitigate the legal prejudice to Highland:

- HCRE should make its corporate representative, Mr. Dondero, and Mr. McGraner available for substantive depositions as previously agreed in order to level the playing field;
- HCRE should be barred from deposing BH Equities, Barker Viggato, and Mark Patrick because HCRE declined to question any of those witnesses during their respective depositions and the discovery deadline has passed;
- HCRE should be barred from taking any further discovery from Highland because Highland has completed its discovery obligations and the discovery deadline has passed;
- After the Witnesses' depositions are complete, this Court should order that the withdrawal of HCRE's POC be with prejudice or, alternatively, this Court should retain jurisdiction over all claims initially raised in HCRE's POC such that any re-filing of such claims must be in this Court; and
- HCRE should be ordered to pay all of Highland's legal fees and expenses related to HCRE's POC, including the motion to disqualify and all discovery.

[5] In addition to the application of the Manchester Factors, Highland will present evidence establishing that Mr. Dondero lacked a good faith basis to sign HCRE's POC and that it was fabricated. Specifically, the evidence will establish that the Allocation that HCRE contends was the product of a "mistake" was: (a) drafted by employees of entities owned and/or controlled by Mr. Dondero; (b) consistently set forth in four separate provisions of the Amended LLC Agreement; (c) one of the few provisions in the Amended LLC Agreement that was negotiated with BH Equities before BH Equities was admitted as a new member in SE Multifamily; and (d) according to BH Equities, consistent with the Parties' intent.

5. For the reasons set forth herein, the Motion to Withdraw should be denied; if not, it should be granted subject to all of the Conditions.

RELEVANT BACKGROUND

A. Highland, HCRE, and BH Equities Pursue "Project Unicorn" and Enter into the Amended LLC Agreement

6. In the summer of 2018, HCRE and Highland began moving forward with a plan to purchase 26 properties with an estimated value over $1.1 billion (referred to as "Project Unicorn").[6] Project Unicorn was a complex transaction with multiple, overlapping components. See, e.g., Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 29:18-30:7.

7. The first step was to formalize the relationship between HCRE and Highland. At all relevant times until January 9, 2020, both entities were controlled by James Dondero ("Mr. Dondero"), but HCRE had no employees of its own and relied on Highland's employees (and employees of other entities controlled by Mr. Dondero) to conduct business on its behalf.

8. Highland and HCRE entered into that certain Limited Liability Company Agreement for SE Multifamily Holdings LLC ("SE Multifamily"), dated as of August 23, 2018 (the "Original LLC Agreement") pursuant to which SE Multifamily was created. Morris Dec. Ex. 2. SE Multifamily was created to, among other things, serve as the Project Unicorn vehicle to acquire and improve real property on behalf of its members, Highland and HCRE. Id.* ¶ 1.3.

9. The Original LLC Agreement (a) allocated 51% of SE Multifamily's membership interests to HCRE and 49% of those interests to Highland and (b) was signed by Mr. Dondero on behalf of both Highland and HCRE. Id. at 17 and Schedule A.

[6] See, e.g., Brief in Opposition to Debtor's Motion to Disqualify Wick Phillips [Docket No. 2279] ¶¶ 4-6.

10. In order to finance the acquisition of the real estate, Highland and HCRE, among other borrowers (the "Borrowers"), entered into that certain Bridge Loan Agreement (the "Loan Agreement") pursuant to which the Borrowers obtained a secured loan from Keybank, N.A. ("Keybank"), as of September 26, 2018. See Morris Dec. Ex. 3 § 2.02(a) and (b) (providing that the purpose of the financing was "to finance the acquisition cost of the Mortgaged Properties" and "to finance a portion of the acquisition cost of the Portfolio Properties . . . .") The Loan Agreement financed about half of the purchase price of the real estate acquisition and was a necessary component to the closing of Project Unicorn. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 32:21-33:8.

11. Pursuant to the Loan Agreement, Keybank provided up to $556,275,000 in secured loans to the Borrowers, including Highland and HCRE.[7] The Loan Agreement also provided, among other things, that (a) all of the Borrowers (including Highland) were jointly and severally liable for all amounts owed under the Loan Agreement, but (b) HCRE was designated as the "Lead Borrower" with the sole authority to request and obtain borrowings and to determine how loan proceeds would be distributed among the Borrowers. Morris Dec. Ex. 3 ¶¶ 1.05(a), (b).

12. Highland was essential to Project Unicorn because, among other things, it enhanced the creditworthiness of the Borrowers and enabled the financing under the Loan Agreement to go forward. See Morris Dec. Ex. 4 at 25:11-17 ("And KeyBank needed more credit from the borrower side since this was such a large transaction, and that's when Highland Capital was added as an additional borrower to the loan").

13. BH Equities, LLC ("BH Equities") worked with Highland on Project Unicorn in anticipation of becoming a member of SE Multifamily. Without any formal agreement,

BH Equities contributed approximately $21 million in capital to fund Project Unicorn expenses. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 33:9-16, 34:5-35:17.

14. BH Equities, HCRE, and Highland formalized their relationship on March 15, 2019, with BH Equities acquiring 6% of SE Multifamily's membership interests from Highland and HCRE in exchange for the $21 million previously contributed pursuant to that certain Amended and Restated Limited Liability Company Agreement, dated as of August 23, 2018 (the "Amended LLC Agreement"). Mr. Dondero signed the Amended LLC Agreement on behalf of HCRE and Highland. Morris Dec. Ex. 5 at 18 and Schedule A.

15. Pursuant to the Amended LLC Agreement, SE Multifamily's membership interests were allocated 47.94% to HCRE, 46.06% to Highland; and 6% to BH Equities (the "Allocation"). Id. at §§ 1.7, 6.1(a), 9.3 and Schedule A. [8]

16. HCRE has served as the manager of SE Multifamily since that entity was formed in August 2018. See Id. § 1.6.

[8] Under the Amended LLC Agreement, while HCRE was allocated 47.94% of the ownership interests and entitled to 47.94% of the "Net Distributable Cash," Highland was allocated 94% of the book "Profits and Losses" from the enterprise. Morris Dec. Ex. 5 § 6.4(a). According to BH Equities, this "wasn't exactly normal" because "[n]ormally the allocation of profit and losses would also follow an allocation—the waterfall allocation or those things more closely." Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 62:15-63:21. Notwithstanding this provision, Highland never received any cash distributions, but was allocated in excess of $30 million of net rental real estate income in 2018 and 2019, which it recognized for purposes of preparing Highland's tax returns. By contrast, HCRE allocated itself zero profits for the years 2018 and 2019, while receiving actual distributions in excess of its "contributed capital." Further, by allocating the loan proceeds entirely to itself, notwithstanding that Highland was jointly and severally liable under the Loan Agreement, HCRE took all of the deductible interest for itself thereby reducing its own tax burden. In other words, taxable gains were washed through Highland, while deductions were used by HCRE. Compounding the potential impropriety of these tax allocation gymnastics, all of the "Distributable Cash" that was actually distributed to Highland-related parties (millions of dollars) was sent to HCRE and Liberty while Highland received nothing. Although similar in style, the scale is not near the more than [$350] million of ordinary, capital gain, and other income attributed to "Hunter Mountain Investment Trust" in 2016 after virtually all of the Highland economic interests were transferred to that entity at the end of 2015. Highland is continuing to investigate that transaction. As a minority member of SE Multifamily (controlled and managed by Mr. Dondero), Highland has a reasonable expectation that similar shenanigans will continue or even exacerbate in the future if this matter is not now resolved with finality.

B. HCRE Files a Proof of Claim, the Debtor Objects, and a Contested Matter Is Initiated

17. On October 16, 2019, Mr. Dondero caused Highland to file a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS). Docket No. 3 at 4.

18. On April 8, 2020, Mr. Dondero caused HCRE to file a proof of claim that was denoted by the Debtor's claims agent as proof of claim number 146 ("HCRE's POC"). HCRE's POC asserted, among other things, that:

> [HCRE] may be entitled to distributions out of SE Multifamily, but such distributions have not been made because of the actions of inactions of the Debtor. Additionally, [HCRE] contends that all or a portion of Debtor's equity, ownership, economic rights, equitable or beneficial interests in SE Multifamily does [not] belong to the Debtor or may be property of [HCRE]. Accordingly, [HCRE] may have a claim against the Debtor.

Morris Dec. Ex. 6 at 5.[9]

19. On July 30, 2020, the Debtor objected to HCRE's POC contending that it had no liability under HCRE's POC. Docket No. 906 (the "Debtor's Initial Objection").

20. On October 16, 2020, HCRE responded to the Debtor's Initial Objection ("HCRE's Initial Response") asserting, among other things:

> After reviewing what documentation is available to HCREP with the Debtor, HCREP believes the organizational documents relating to SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC (the "SE Multifamily Agreement") improperly allocates the ownership percentages of the members thereto due to mutual mistake, lack of consideration, and/or failure of consideration. As such, HCREP has a claim to reform, rescind and/or modify the agreement.

Morris Dec. Ex. 7 ¶ 5.

[9] Mr. Dondero signed HCRE's POC under penalty of perjury with a notice next to his signature reminding him of the criminal penalties that could be imposed for filing a fraudulent proof of claim.

21. HCRE's Initial Response was filed by the law firm of Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP ("Wick Phillips"). See id.

C. The Parties Litigate for Nearly Two Years

22. With the Parties' positions established, they proceeded to litigate the merits of HCRE's POC and Highland's objections thereto.

1. Initial Discovery

23. On December 10, 2020, the Parties entered into a proposed scheduling order that was subsequently approved by the Court. Docket Nos. 1536 and 1568 (the "Initial Scheduling Order"). Pursuant to the Initial Scheduling Order, the Parties were to complete discovery by March 8, 2021. Docket No. 1536 ¶ 1.

24. Consistent with the Initial Scheduling Order, the Debtor (a) timely served deposition notices and subpoenas, as amended, on HCRE and others, (b) engaged in written discovery, and (c) searched for and produced voluminous documents, including e-mail communications, requested by HCRE.[10]

25. While reviewing documents in preparation for depositions, the Debtor discovered that Wick Phillips had jointly represented HCRE and Highland in connection with at least some of the underlying transactions concerning Project Unicorn. Highland immediately brought the issue to HCRE's attention, but HCRE refused to acknowledge that any conflict existed, and Wick Phillips refused to step aside.

2. The Wick Phillips Disqualification Motion

26. With no choice other than litigating against its prior counsel, the Debtor moved to disqualify Wick Phillips on April 14, 2021. Docket Nos. 2196, 2197, and 2198 (the [10] See, e.g., Docket Nos. 1898, 1918, 1964, 1965, 1995, 1996, 2118, 2119, 2134, 2135, 2136, and 2137.

"Disqualification Motion"). In the Disqualification Motion, the Debtor contended, among other things, that Wick Phillips should be disqualified from representing HCRE because that firm previously represented the Parties jointly such that pursuing claims against the Debtor would violate Wick Phillips' duties to Highland.[11]

27. On May 6, 2021, HCRE filed its opposition to the Disqualification Motion [Docket Nos. 2278 and 2279], and on May 12, 2021, the Debtor filed its preliminary reply. Docket No. 2294.

28. On May 24, 2021, the Court entered a scheduling order with respect to the Disqualification Motion. Docket No. 2361 (the "Initial DQ Scheduling Order"). The Initial DQ Scheduling Order was amended on August 23, 2021. See Docket No. 2757.

29. The Disqualification Motion was heavily contested. The Parties engaged in written discovery, took fact depositions, and retained experts and engaged in expert discovery.[12]

30. On October 1, 2021, following the completion of fact and expert discovery, the Debtor supplemented its Disqualification Motion. Docket Nos. 2893, 2894 and 2895 (the "Supplement").

[11] The move to disqualify Wick Phillips was not an academic exercise. Wick Phillips was an integral part of constructing "Project Unicorn" (as the SE Multifamily transaction was known) for the Highland entities and was working with Mr. Dondero to divest Highland of its ownership stake. This was not the first questionable Highland real estate transaction with which these parties were involved. In 2018, in a transaction referred to as "HE 232," Wick Phillips (through D.C. Sauter, then outside counsel) took direction from Scott Ellington to transfer approximately $3 million that rightfully belonged to Highland to a Cayman Islands entity indirectly owned and controlled by Mr. Dondero and Mr. Ellington as part of the secret "SAS Structure." Highland continues to investigate these and related Cayman Island transactions.

[12] See, e.g., Docket No. 3054, Ex. 11 (deposition transcript of Robert Wills, HCRE's Rule 30(b)(6) witness for the Disqualification Motion); Docket No. 3054, Ex. 12 (deposition transcript of Robert Kehr, the Debtor's expert on issues of professional responsibilities and attorney ethics); and Docket No. 3060, Ex. 12 (deposition transcript of Ben Selman, HCRE's expert on issues of professional responsibilities and attorney ethics).

31. On October 15, 2021, HCRE filed its response to Highland's Supplement, [Docket Nos. 2927 and 2928], and on October 22, 2021, Highland filed its reply. Docket No. 2952.

32. In advance of the contested hearing on the Disqualification Motion, the Parties filed their respective witness and exhibit lists, as amended. See Docket Nos. 3051, 3052, 3054, and 3060.

33. On November 30, 2021, the Court held a lengthy hearing on the Disqualification Motion. See Docket Nos. 3062, 3071.

34. On December 10, 2021, the Court entered an order resolving the Disqualification Motion by, among other things, disqualifying Wick Phillips from representing HCRE in the contested matter concerning HCRE's POC. Docket No. 3106.

3. After the Parties Nearly Complete Discovery, Highland Informs HCRE that It Will Move for Summary Judgment

35. On January 14, 2022, Hoge & Gameros, LLP ("Hoge & Gameros") filed a notice of appearance on behalf of HCRE. Docket No. 3181 (the "Notice of Appearance").

36. On June 9, 2022, the Parties filed a proposed amended scheduling order that the Court subsequently approved. Docket Nos. 3356 and 3368 (the "Amended Scheduling Order").[13]

[13] Despite filing the Notice of Appearance, Hoge & Gameros made no effort to contact Highland' counsel to prosecute HCRE's POC for more than two months. Consequently, on March 31, 2022, Highland's counsel took the initiative to try to bring this matter to a conclusion, but it took several more weeks and follow-up communications before HCRE's counsel drafted an amended scheduling order. Morris Dec. Ex. 8

37. Pursuant to the Amended Scheduling Order, the Parties exchanged a second round of written discovery and document production and served various deposition notices and subpoenas, as amended.[14]

38. On July 7, 2022, Highland filed notices of subpoena (the "Subpoenas") for Mr. Dondero and Mr. McGraner and a Rule 30(b)(6) notice for HCRE (the "HCRE Notice" and together with the Subpoenas, the "Notices").[15] Docket Nos. 3392, 3393, and 3394. Hoge & Gameros accepted service of the Subpoenas, and the Notices were amended to accommodate the schedules of HCRE's Witnesses and their counsel.[16] Morris Dec. Ex. 9.

39. Highland also served a subpoena on Mark Patrick ("Mr. Patrick").[17] Mr. Patrick has worked at Mr. Dondero's direction for many years (first at Highland and then at Skyview) and was one of the architects of the tax structure embedded in the Amended LLC Agreement. Mr. Patrick was represented by separate counsel, and Highland completed his deposition on August 2, 2022, during which HCRE asked no questions.

40. Highland also served a subpoena on BH Equities that required both the production of documents and an appearance at a deposition.[18] BH Equities was represented by independent counsel, and Highland completed its deposition on August 4, 2022, during which HCRE asked no questions.

41. Highland also served a subpoena on Barker Viggato, LLP ("Barker Viggato" and together with BH Equities, the "Third-Party Witnesses") that required both the production of documents and the appearance at a deposition.[19] Barker Viggato is the accounting firm that prepared the tax returns and the members' Forms K-1s for SE Multifamily based on information provided by HCRE. Barker Viggato was represented by independent counsel, and Highland completed its deposition on August 5, 2022, during which HCRE asked no questions.

42. HCRE served a Rule 30(b)(6) notice on Highland, and James P. Seery, Jr. was deposed as Highland's corporate representative on August 10, 2022.

43. Pursuant to the final versions of the Notices, and as agreed to by the Parties' counsel, Mr. Dondero was scheduled to be deposed on August 16, and Mr. McGraner was scheduled to be deposed on August 17 in both his individual capacity and in his capacity as HCRE's Rule 30(b)(6) witness (the "Consensual Depositions"). Morris Dec. Ex. 10.

44. On August 12, 2022, two days after taking Highland's deposition, HCRE filed the Motion to Withdraw. On August 15, 2022, HCRE's counsel informed Highland's counsel that HCRE was unilaterally cancelling the Consensual Depositions scheduled to take place over the next 48 hours.

D. Mr. Dondero Lacked a Good-Faith Basis to Cause HCRE's POC to Be Filed

45. Substantial evidence exists that establishes that HCRE lacked a good-faith basis to assert that the Allocation set forth in the Amended LLC Agreement was the result of a "mistake" or "lack of consideration."

1. Employees Working at Mr. Dondero's Direction Drafted the Amended LLC Agreement

46. The evidence will show that Mr. Dondero controlled HCRE and Highland at the times the Original LLC Agreement and the Amended LLC Agreement were executed, and because HCRE had no employees of its own, it relied on Highland's employees to execute Project Unicorn. The blurred lines between HCRE and Highland were clear to BH Equities.

47. BH Equities could not distinguish HCRE from Highland and observed that it viewed the negotiation of the Amended LLC Agreement as a bi-lateral negotiation, with BH Equities on one side, and Highland, HCRE, and Liberty CLO Holdco, Ltd. (a subsidiary of the DAF) ("Liberty") acting as a unitary actor on the other side. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 26:6-22; 28:10-29:17; 69:10-70:5.[20]

48. "Highland" (the unitary actor from BH Equities' perspective) drafted the Amended LLC Agreement, and BH Equities provided comments. Id. at 43:9-44:3.

49. In short, the evidence will show that the Original LLC Agreement and the Amended LLC Agreement were drafted by individuals working at Mr. Dondero's direction.

2. The Allocation Is Set Forth in Four Different Places in the Amended LLC Agreement

50. The Allocation was reflected in four separate provisions of the Amended LLC Agreement, making the concept of "mistake" or "lack of consideration" far-fetched, at best.

51. Most prominently, Schedule A to the Amended LLC Agreement identified the "Capital Contributions and Percentage Interests" of the members:

Member Name	Capital Contribution	Percentage Interest
HCRE	$291,146,036	47.94%
Highland	$49,000	46.06%
BH Equities	$21,213,721	6.00%

[20] Grant Scott, Mr. Dondero's childhood friend and college roommate, served as Liberty's Director. See Morris Dec. Ex. 5 at 18 (Liberty's signature block). While Liberty apparently acquired certain preferred interests in SE Multifamily, BH Equities did not know who Mr. Scott was, never communicated with him, and never saw any comments to the Amended LLC Agreement tendered on behalf of Liberty. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 42:4-19.

Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at Schedule A.[21]

52. As if Schedule A were not enough, the Allocation was set forth in three other provisions in the Amended LLC Agreement: Section 1.7 (Company Ownership),[22] Section 6.1(a) (Distributable Cash),[23] and Section 9.3(e) (Liquidation).[24]

53. At the time the Amended LLC Agreement was executed, BH Equities believed that the Allocation set forth in Schedule A and in sections 1.7, 6.1(a), and 9.3 reflected the Parties' intent; none of the members identified and errors or suggested otherwise. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 49:5-15; 50:6-11; 50:16-51:7; 54:4-19; 55:12-19; 56:5-57:19; 58:9-59:23; 62:10-14. In fact, BH Equities agreed that Highland would receive 46.06% of the membership interests in SE Multifamily even though it only contributed $49,000 in capital because it understood that was part of the deal. Id. at 52:4-20; 60:16-61:21.

54. In sum, the evidence will show that (a) the Allocation was consistently and unambiguously set forth in four (4) separate provisions of the Amended LLC Agreement; (b) to [21] The evidence will show that HCRE did not actually contribute any of its own capital to SE Multifamily—and took no financial risk in connection with Project Unicorn—notwithstanding the "capital contribution" set forth in Schedule A. Instead, HCRE took the corporate opportunity from Highland by misusing its authority under section 1.05(b) of the Loan Agreement to allocate for itself approximately $250 million of the KeyBank loan proceeds and claiming "credit" for the capital even though Highland remained jointly and severally liable for the obligations and provided all of the resources to consummate and execute Project Unicorn. Separately, HCRE borrowed the balance of its "capital contribution" from another affiliate of Mr. Dondero's. Because all of HCRE's "capital contribution" was derived from the proceeds of loans, distributions from SE Multifamily were initially used to pay down those loans in accordance with the "waterfall" set forth in the Amended LLC Agreement. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 123:23-125:7; 126:9-127:21. Thus, by the end of 2020, HCRE held a debt-free 47.94% interest in SE Multifamily without ever having taken any risk and by exploiting Highland's platform, apparent creditworthiness, advantageous tax structure, and human resources. Project Unicorn, indeed.

[22] Section 1.7 of the Amended LLC Agreement provides, among other things, that "except with respect to particular items specified in this Agreement, HCRE shall have 47.94% ownership interest, HCMLP shall have a 46.06% ownership interest, and BH shall have a 6% ownership interest." Morris Dec. Ex. 5 at 3.

[23] Section 6.1(a) of the Amended LLC Agreement provides, among other things, that "[e]xcept as otherwise specifically provided in this Article 6 and Article 9, all Distributable Cash shall be distributed (i) 47.94% to HCRE, (ii) 46.06% to HCMLP, and (iii) 6% to BH." Morris Dec. Ex. 5 at 10.

[24] Section 9.3 of the Amended LLC Agreement provides, among other things, that any residual value in a liquidation be distributed "(i) 47.94% to HCRE, (ii) 46.06% to HCMLP, and (iii) 6% to BH." Morris Dec. Ex. 5 at 14-15.

eliminate any doubt, Schedule A set forth the Parties' respective capital contributions side-by-side with the Allocations; and (c) BH Equities has testified that the Allocation was consistent with the Parties' intent at the time the Amended LLC Agreement was entered into.

3. The Allocation Was Among the Only Provisions in the Amended LLC Agreement that Was Negotiated

55. Ironically, the Allocation was among the only provisions of the Amended LLC Agreement that BH Equities and "Highland" actually discussed.

56. On March 15, 2019 (the day the Amended LLC Agreement was executed), Paul Broaddus, a Highland employee working at Mr. Dondero's direction, sent an e-mail to BH Equities (with a copy to Matt McGraner) attaching a copy of Schedule A that set forth the Allocation as a stand-alone document. Morris Dec. Ex. 11. According to BH Equities, Schedule A, including the members' actual contribution numbers, was drafted by "Highland" and was the subject of discussions before the Amended LLC Agreement was executed – and HCRE has never asked BH Equities to amend Schedule A. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 75:23-78:20; 103:3-7.

57. The Allocation was also raised in the context of Section 6.1, referred as the "waterfall," because that provision fixed the priority of cash distributions from SE Multifamily and BH Equities wanted assurances that all capital contributions would be returned before other distributions were made. Thus, later the same day, BH Equities resurrected an earlier proposal to address the issue, but HCRE rejected it. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 80:23-83:14; Ex. 12.

58. Later, Mr. Broaddus sent a counterproposal to BH Equities that was drafted by Freddy Chang (another individual employed in the Highland complex) that (a) addressed BH Equities' concerns, (b) was adopted in full as section 6.1 of the Amended LLC Agreement, and (c) specifically set forth the Allocation. Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 88:21-89:25; 91:3-94:16; Ex. 13.

59. In sum, Schedule A and Section 6.1 (a) were drafted by employees working within the "Highland" complex; (b) expressly and unambiguously set forth the Allocation; and (c) were among the only provisions in the Amended LLC Agreement that were the subject of negotiations between "Highland" and BH Equities.

4. Highland Intended to Move for Summary Judgment

60. The foregoing facts prove that Mr. Dondero lacked a good-faith basis to file HCRE's POC and would be among the facts Highland would rely upon in support of its anticipated motion for summary judgment.[25]

61. It is absurd to suggest that supposedly sophisticated people like Messrs. Dondero, McGraner, Broaddus, Patrick, and Chang could draft and/or execute the applicable agreements and negotiate BH Equities without ever realizing what the Allocation—again, set out in four different provisions—clearly stated.

62. HCRE's POC was not filed in good faith, and after two years of contested litigation and after receiving notice of Highland's intent to move for summary judgment, HCRE should not be permitted to say "never mind" while reserving the (alleged) right to simply pick up litigation elsewhere at a time and place of its choosing.

E. The Motion to Withdraw Was Not Filed in Good Faith

63. The timing and purported reason for the Motion to Withdraw demonstrate that it was not filed in good faith. HCRE clearly has undisclosed motives and seeks an unfair, strategic advantage.

[25] This list of facts is not intended to be exhaustive. Other evidence—including, but not limited to, tax returns and Forms K-1 that HCRE caused SE Multifamily to prepare—will further establish that HCRE, its principals, and those working on its behalf always knew and intended that Highland had a 46.06% interest in SE Multifamily.

64. First, HCRE claims that it filed the Motion to Withdraw because SE Multifamily has "operated without anticipated interference from the Debtor" and HCRE wants to avoid the cost and uncertainty of litigation. Motion to Withdraw at 2. But HCRE will never be able to offer any evidence to support its suggestion that Highland has interfered or threatened to interfere with SE Multifamily, or that HCRE ever did anything to address its alleged concerns.

65. Moreover, raising concerns about costs (a peculiar proposition given Mr. Dondero's conduct throughout this case) after two years of hard-fought litigation where all that remains is a few depositions and a short trial is simply not credible. It makes no economic sense to shut down the litigation at this stage with so much supposedly at stake.[26]

66. Second, the timing of the Motion to Withdraw is highly suspicious because in the seven-day period before the Motion was filed: (a) the Parties negotiated, and the Court approved, an amendment to the Scheduling Order to enable HCRE to proffer expert opinions [Docket Nos. 3434 and 3438]; (b) HCRE made a supplemental production of over 4,000 documents, and counsel for the Parties spent time dealing with the ramifications of HCRE's untimely and substantial production [Morris Dec. Ex. 14]; (c) HCRE took the deposition of Mr. Seery as Highland's corporate representative two calendar days before filing the Motion to Withdraw; and (d) HCRE filed the Motion to Withdraw just days before its Witnesses were expected to testify per agreement [Morris Dec. Ex. 15].

67. Third, based on the foregoing, HCRE's true intent is transparent: it seeks an improper and unfair strategic advantage by avoiding depositions now, leaving the specter of future litigation hanging over Highland's head, and preserving the ability to re-file its claim later

[26] According to Mr. Dondero's "family trust," Highland's interest in SE Multifamily is worth $20 million. See Motion for Determination of the Value of the Estate and Assets Held by the Claimant Trust [Docket No. 3382]. Dugaboy's valuation is notable because it shows that HCRE's last-second concern about costs lacks credibility: after two years of litigation, a rational actor would absorb the cost of a few depositions and a short trial to capture a $20 million asset.

(and presumably elsewhere) – in which it could take discovery of Highland and the Third-Party Witnesses, all of which is now foreclosed under the current Scheduling Order.

F. HCRE Materially Breached the Amended LLC Agreement

68. HCRE has breached its obligations to Highland in material ways.

69. First, the evidence will show that HCRE breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing by eliminating the "tax distribution" provision from the Original LLC Agreement while saddling Highland with 94% of SE Multifamily's profits and losses. See Morris Dec. Ex. 2 § 6.1(f) (tax distribution provision in the Original LLC Agreement that was deleted from the Amended LLC Agreement).

70. Second, the evidence will show that, at Mr. McGraner's direction, HCRE breached the Amended LLC Agreement by causing SE Multifamily to return all "capital contributions" to itself and BH Equities while failing to return Highland's capital at the same time.

71. Third, the evidence will show that HCRE breached section 8.3 of the Amended LLC Agreement by failing to allow Highland to inspect and copy SE Multifamily's books and records. Morris Dec. Ex. 15 (Highland's June 28, 2022 demand for access to SE Multifamily's books and records); Morris Dec. Ex. 16 (e-mail chain showing that all of the lawyers representing HCRE and Mr. Dondero failed to provide any substantive response to Highland's demand).

ARGUMENT

A. Applying the Manchester Factors Mandates Denying the Motion

72. Highland agrees that the applicable standard for this Court's consideration of the Motion is set forth in Manchester, Inc. v. Lyle (In re Manchester, Inc.), 2008 Bankr. LEXIS 3312 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. December 19, 2008). Application of those factors here should compel this Court to deny the Motion.

73. The factors outlined in Manchester are:

> (1) the movant's diligence in bringing the motion, (2) any "undue vexatiousness" on the part of the movant, (3) the extent to which the suit has progressed, including the effort and expense undertaken by the non-moving party to prepare for trial, (4) the duplicative expense of re-litigation, and (5) the adequacy of the movant's explanation for the need to withdraw the claim.[27]

74. HCRE applies these factors in a conclusory, selective, and evasive manner.

Instead, based on the facts set forth above, the legal prejudice is clear:

- HCRE failed to diligently bring the Motion to Withdraw—and fails to identify what has occurred after two years of litigation to cause it to file the motion at this time.
- "Undue vexatiousness" is easily established: HCRE forced Highland to spend two years litigating and providing complete discovery while now attempting to shut this down before its Witnesses can be deposed and after being informed that Highland intends to move for summary judgment—all while trying to preserve the ability to resurrect the litigation without the restrictions of this Court's scheduling orders.
- Highland has spent considerable time, money, and effort on this matter, including retaining an expert, searching for and producing thousands of pages of documents, taking third-party discovery, and marshalling evidence to present for summary judgment.
- Re-litigating the claims asserted in HCRE's POC would be needlessly expensive and duplicative and (if HCRE has its way) would result in more discovery that is otherwise now foreclosed to it.
- HCRE's explanation for why it suddenly wishes to withdraw its proof of claim has no basis in fact.

75. The Manchester Factors are obviously intended to protect the integrity of the bankruptcy process. When the actual facts and procedural posture of this contested matter are applied, it is clear the Motion to Withdraw should be denied.

76. The cases HCRE cites do not command a different result. HCRE relies on Le Compte v. Mr. Chip, Inc., 528 F.2d 601 (5th Cir. 1976), for the proposition that merely gaining a "tactical advantage" is "no bar to dismissal" under Rule 41(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. But Le Compte is factually distinguishable. There, the defendants opposing the dismissal failed to "indicate how defendants would be prejudiced by an unconditional dismissal …. [T]here is nothing … in the record from which we can ascertain whether the court properly exercised its discretion in imposing conditions on the dismissal." Id. at 605. Unlike the defendants in Le Compte, Highland has demonstrated the significant prejudice an unconditional dismissal would inflict on Highland and the Claimant Trust beneficiaries.[28]

77. The Fifth Circuit refused to broadly apply Le Compte in later cases, calling the district court's conditions in that case "unusual" and noting that "the conditions seemed designed to disadvantage the plaintiff, rather than protect the defendant." Robles v. Atl. Sounding Co., 77 Fed. Appx. 274, 276 (5th Cir. 2003). In Robles, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the district court's imposition of two conditions on the dismissal "designed to cure any potential prejudice." Id. In affirming the district court's dismissal order, the Robles court also noted that "[p]lain legal prejudice can also exist regarding the timing of a motion for voluntary dismissal…. [F]iling a motion for voluntary dismissal at a late stage in the litigation can be grounds for denying the motion." Id. at 275 (citing Davis v. Huskipower Outdoor Equip. Corp., 936 F.2d 193, 199 (5th Cir. 1991) ("When a plaintiff fails to seek dismissal until a late stage of trial, after the defendant has

[28] HCRE also relies on Kumar v. St. Paul Surplus Lines Ins. Co., 2010 WL 1946341 (N.D. Tex. May 12, 2010), for the unremarkable proposition that a plaintiff should ordinarily be permitted to dismiss a lawsuit it no longer wishes to pursue. In that case, the plaintiff had brought a third-party action against its insurer but then sought to dismiss the case before anything of significance had happened in the litigation. The Kumar court did note, however, that "a defendant's loss of significant time, effort, or expense in preparing for trial can also constitute legal prejudice" sufficient to deny a motion to dismiss. 2010 WL 1946341, at *4 (citing U.S. ex rel. Doe v. Dow Chem. Co., 343 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2003), and Oxford v. Williams Cos., Inc., 154 F. Supp. 2d 942, 952–53 (E.D. Tex. 2001) (denying dismissal when the plaintiff filed for dismissal after 21 months of significant trial preparation)). Again, Highland will suffer precisely this type of harm, among other things, if HCRE is permitted to withdraw its proof of claim without prejudice and without conditions.

exerted significant time and effort, then a court may, in its discretion, refuse to grant a voluntary dismissal") (emphasis added).[29]

78. A case HCRE cites that does resemble this case—to the extent Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41(a)(2) guides a bankruptcy court's consideration of a motion under Bankruptcy Rule 3006—is Forbes v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 998 F. Supp. 2d 541 (S.D. Tex. 2014). There, the district court denied the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, describing a procedural history that should strike this Court as familiar. The plaintiff commenced a suit and then engaged in "a lengthy discovery dispute" for nearly two years, requiring the defendant to file a motion to compel plaintiff's response to several discovery requests she had ignored. A week after the defendant filed its sanctions motion, but before the court could rule on that motion, the defendant filed a motion for summary judgment and "[w]ithin minutes, [plaintiff] filed her motion to dismiss the entire action without prejudice …." 998 F. Supp. 2d at 546–47. Just like HCRE here,

> Forbes filed her motion to dismiss this action without prejudice nearly two years after the action was removed to federal court … The timing of Forbes's motion, however—after CitiMortgage filed its motions for discovery sanctions and for summary judgment—provides insight into her reasons. The circumstances indicate that Forbes's motion is a plain attempt to avoid the consequences of her failure to participate in discovery and to avoid an adverse ruling in her case. CitiMortgage contends that it will be prejudiced if Forbes's motion is granted and opposes dismissal. At the present stage of the litigation, CitiMortgage has > answered the complaint, the parties have participated in scheduling conferences, the parties engaged in mediation, discovery is now complete, and Defendant has briefed and filed a motion for summary judgment. Based on the factual and procedural history of this case, the Court finds that Defendant will suffer plain legal prejudice if Plaintiff's case is dismissed at this late stage and Plaintiff is given another opportunity to bring her claims without facing the consequences of her actions in this case. Therefore, Plaintiff's motion to dismiss is denied.

Id. at 547 (emphases added).

79. Forbes is squarely on point. Just as in Forbes, HCRE filed its Motion to Withdraw after two years of litigation during which Highland (a) waged a lengthy battle to disqualify its former counsel; (b) produced thousands of documents and otherwise satisfied all of its discovery obligations; (c) took third-party discovery; and (d) notified HCRE that it intends to move for summary judgment. Just as in Forbes, HCRE's true motive in seeking to withdraw its Proof of Claim can be gleaned from the timing of its motion—HCRE wants to avoid having its witnesses deposed and facing Highland's imminent summary judgment motion. And just as in Forbes, Highland "will suffer plain legal prejudice" if HCRE is permitted to withdraw HCRE's POC "at this late stage and … is given another opportunity to bring [its] claims without facing the consequences of [its] actions in this case."[30]

B. Alternatively, the Court Should Impose the Conditions to Mitigate the Prejudice to Highland

80. HCRE fails to cite any decision granting a motion to withdraw a proof of claim under Bankruptcy Rule 3006 without "terms and conditions" in circumstances remotely similar to those present here. The cases HCRE relies on all state that the bankruptcy court can and should impose adequate conditions on any order permitting the withdrawal of a contested proof of claim to redress the "plain legal prejudice" faced by the non-moving party. Conditioning the withdrawal is the only way to remedy Highland's plain legal prejudice and avoid allowing HCRE to benefit from the cynical games HCRE has shamelessly played here.

[30] The court in Davis reached a similar result for similar reasons: "The Davises moved to dismiss this case without prejudice more than a year after the case was removed to federal court. They filed their motion after months of filing pleadings, attending conferences, and submitting memoranda … we do not believe that the district judge abused his discretion in denying the motion for voluntary dismissal without prejudice." 936 F.2d at 199.

81. If this Court is inclined to grant the Motion to Withdraw, this Court should exercise its discretion under Bankruptcy Rule 3006 and impose all of the Conditions.

CONCLUSION

82. For the foregoing reasons, Highland respectfully requests that this Court deny the Motion to Withdraw or, alternatively, grant the Motion to Withdraw subject to the Conditions, and grant such other relief the Court deems just and proper.

Other Authorities

Appellants Highland Income Fund; NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund; Highland Global Allocation Fund; and NexPoint Capital, Inc. (collectively, the "Funds"), petition the Court to grant panel rehearing for the limited purpose of clarifying and confirming one part of its August 19, 2022, opinion. See Fed. R. App. P. 35, 40; 5th Cir. R. 40.[1] Specifically, the Funds request that the Court confirm that the scope of the injunction and gatekeeper provisions in the Plan are limited in accordance with the Court's holding on the exculpation provision.[2]

Background

1. In its August 19, 2022, opinion (the "Opinion"), a copy of which is attached at Tab "A," the Court reversed and vacated the provisions of the Plan that exculpated certain non-debtor parties. Relying on Pacific Lumber, the Court determined that the exculpation provision ran afoul of 11 U.S.C. § 524(e) by reaching beyond Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors. Opinion at 22 (citing Bank of N.Y. Tr. Co., N.A. v. Official Unsecured Creditors' Comm. (In re Pac. Lumber Co.), 584 F.3d 229, 251-53 (5th Cir. 2009). Thus, the Court struck the Plan's exculpation provision to the extent it protected other parties, such as Highland Capital's employees, Strand, the Reorganized Debtor, HCMLP GP, the Claimant Trust along with its trustee and the members of its Oversight Board, the Litigation Sub-Trust and its trustee,

[1] Appellant NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund is now known as "NexPoint Diversified Real Estate Trust." To avoid confusion, in this petition, the Funds will refer to that appellant by its former name.

[2] The Funds will use the same defined terms the Court used in its opinion.

professionals retained by Highland Capital and the Committee, and the Related Persons of the foregoing.

2. The Court held that the injunction and gatekeeper provisions in the Plan were generally acceptable, but it noted that the Funds' and the other Appellants' objections to such provisions were resolved by the Court's striking of the impermissibly exculpated parties. Opinion at 27 ("First, Appellants' primary contention—that the Plan's injunction 'is broad' by releasing non-debtors in violation of § 524(e)—is resolved by our striking the impermissibly exculpated parties."); Opinion at 29 ("In sum, the Plan violates § 524(e) but only insofar as it exculpates and enjoins certain non-debtors.")(emphasis added); Opinion at 30 n.19 ("But non-debtor exculpation within a reorganization plan is not a lawful means to impose vexatious litigant injunctions and sanctions.").

3. As the Court is aware, together, the Plan injunction and gatekeeper provisions enjoin parties from pursuing a claim or cause of action against any "Protected Party" without the bankruptcy court's blessing. The Plan's definition of "Protected Parties" encompasses parties that the Court struck from the exculpation provision, including Highland Capital's employees and successors and assigns, Strand, the Reorganized Debtor, the Claimant Trust, its trustee and the members of its Oversight Board, the Litigation Sub-Trust and its trustee, HCMLP GP, professionals retained by Highland Capital and the Committee, and the Related Persons of the foregoing. The Plan prevents parties from "commenc[ing] or pursu[ing] a claim or cause of action of any kind ... that arose or arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case, the negotiation of the Plan, the administration of the Plan or property to be distributed under the Plan, the wind down of the business of the Debtor or the Reorganized Debtor, the administration of the Claimant Trust or the Litigation Sub-Trust, or the transactions in furtherance of the foregoing" against any of these non-debtor "Protected Parties" without the bankruptcy court's prior permission. Like the exculpation provision, the impact is that non-debtor parties are potentially protected from liability in contravention of this Court's precedent.

Request for Limited Clarification

4. The Funds' interpretation of the Court's opinion is that the Court correctly held that the parties protected by the injunction and gatekeeper provisions must similarly be limited to Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors, such that the protections afforded thereby coincide with the permissible scope of the exculpation provision and 11 U.S.C. § 524(e). Opinion at 27 and 30 n.19. If the Funds' interpretation is correct, the impact is that parties must seek the bankruptcy court's prior permission to pursue claims and causes of action against Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors. However, no such permission is required to the extent a party seeks to pursue claims and causes of action against other non-debtor parties (i.e., Highland Capital's employees and successors and assigns, Strand, the Reorganized Debtor, the Claimant Trust, its trustee and the members of its Oversight Board, the Litigation Sub-Trust and its trustee, HCMLP GP, professionals retained by Highland Capital and the Committee, and the Related Persons of the foregoing).

5. To be clear, the Funds do not ask the Court to alter what they understand to be the Court's conclusion with respect to the injunction and gatekeeper provisions but, rather, ask that the Court issue a limited clarification. The Funds are concerned that the Court's statement that such provisions are "perfectly lawful," might be argued to mean that the injunction and gatekeeper provisions—without any tailoring—are allowed to stand. Opinion at 27. Even though the Funds believe that such an interpretation would run afoul of what the Court intended, they could foresee litigation arising over the extent of these provisions since there remain ongoing relationships among many of the stakeholders.

6. Therefore, the Funds file this petition in order to request that the Court narrowly amend the Opinion in order to confirm the Court's holding that the impermissibly exculpated parties are similarly struck from the protections of the injunction and gatekeeper provisions of the Plan (in other words, that such parties cannot constitute "Protected Parties"), such that the injunction and gatekeeper provisions extend only to Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors. The Funds believe that this clarification is important to their ability to exercise contractual rights, and, if necessary, pursue claims against non-debtor parties arising from assumed contracts. Absent such relief, the Funds are concerned that there will be further litigation over the proper meaning of the Court's Opinion, litigation that could be avoided by the sought-after clarification.

Conclusion

WHEREFORE, the Funds respectfully request that the Court grant this petition and enter an order clarifying the Court's August 19, 2022, opinion solely with respect to the breadth of the injunction and gatekeeper provisions.

Respectfully submitted,

Appeal from the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas
USDC No. 19-34054
USDC No. 3:21-CV-538

Before Wiener, Graves, and Duncan, Circuit Judges.

Stuart Kyle Duncan, Circuit Judge:

Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Dallas-based investment firm, managed billion-dollar, publicly traded investment portfolios for nearly three decades. By 2019, however, myriad unpaid judgments and liabilities forced Highland Capital to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. This provoked a nasty breakup between Highland Capital and its co-founder James Dondero. Under those trying circumstances, the bankruptcy court successfully mediated with the largest creditors and ultimately confirmed a reorganization plan amenable to most of the remaining creditors.

Dondero and other creditors unsuccessfully objected to the confirmation order and then sought review in this court. In turn, Highland Capital moved to dismiss their appeal as equitably moot. First, we hold that equitable mootness does not bar our review of any claim. Second, we affirm the confirmation order in large part. We reverse only insofar as the plan exculpates certain non-debtors in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), strike those few parties from the plan's exculpation, and affirm on all remaining grounds.

I. Background

A. Parties

In 1993, Mark Okada and appellant James Dondero co-founded Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland Capital") in Dallas. Highland Capital managed portfolios and assets for other investment advisers and funds through a complex of entities under the Highland umbrella. Highland Capital's ownership-interest holders included Hunter Mountain Investment Trust (99.5%); appellant The Dugaboy Investment Trust, Dondero's family trust (0.1866%);[1] Okada, personally and through trusts (0.0627%); and Strand Advisors, Inc. (0.25%), the only general partner, which Dondero wholly owned.

Dondero also manages two of Highland Capital's clients—appellants Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. (the "Advisors"). Both the Advisors and Highland Capital serviced and advised billion-dollar, publicly traded investment funds for appellants Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, Highland Global Allocation Fund, and NexPoint Capital, Inc. (collectively, the "Funds"), among others. For example, on behalf of the Funds, Highland Capital managed certain investment vehicles known as collateral loan obligations ("CLOs") under individualized servicing agreements.

B. Bankruptcy Proceedings

Strapped with a series of unpaid judgments, Highland Capital filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in the District of Delaware in October 2019. The creditors included Highland Capital's interest holders, business affiliates, contractors, former partners, employees, defrauded investors, and unpaid law firms. Among those creditors, the Office of the United States Trustee appointed a four-member Unsecured Creditors' Committee (the "Committee").[2] See 11 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(1), (b)(1). Throughout the bankruptcy proceedings, the Committee investigated Highland Capital's past and current operations, oversaw its continuing operations, and negotiated the reorganization plan. See id. § 1103(c). Upon the Committee's request, the court transferred the case to the Northern District of Texas in December 2019.

Highland Capital's reorganization did not proceed under the governance of a traditional Chapter 11 trustee. Instead, the Committee reached a corporate governance settlement agreement to displace Dondero, which the bankruptcy court approved in January 2020. Under the agreed order, Dondero stepped down as director and officer of Highland Capital and Strand to be an unpaid portfolio manager and "agreed not to cause any Related Entity . . . to terminate any agreements" with Highland Capital. The Committee selected a board of three independent directors to act as a quasi-trustee and to govern Strand and Highland Capital: James Seery Jr., John Dubel, and retired Bankruptcy Judge Russell Nelms (collectively, the "Independent Directors"). The order also barred any claim against the Independent Directors in their official roles without the bankruptcy court's authorizing the claim as a "colorable claim[] of willful misconduct or gross negligence." Six months later, at the behest of the creditors, the bankruptcy court appointed Seery as Highland Capital's Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer, and Foreign Representative. The order contained an identical bar on claims against Seery acting in these roles. Neither order was appealed.

Throughout summer 2020, Dondero proposed several reorganization plans, each opposed by the Committee and the Independent Directors. Unpersuaded by Dondero, the Committee and Independent Directors negotiated their own plan. When Dondero's plans failed, he and other creditors began to frustrate the proceedings by objecting to settlements, appealing orders, seeking writs of mandamus, interfering with Highland Capital's management, threatening employees, and canceling trades between Highland Capital and its clients. See Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Dondero (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), Ch. 11 Case No. 19-34054-SGJ11, Adv. No. 20-03190-SGJ11, 2021 WL 2326350, at *1, *26 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. June 7, 2021) (holding Dondero in civil contempt, sanctioning him $100,000, and comparing this case to a "nasty divorce"). In Seery's words, Dondero wanted to "burn the place down" because he did not get his way. The Independent Directors insisted Dondero resign from Highland Capital, which he did in October 2020.

Highland Capital, meanwhile, proceeded toward confirmation of its reorganization plan—the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Plan"). In August 2020, the Independent Directors filed the Plan and an accompanying disclosure statement with the support of the Committee. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1121, 1125. The bankruptcy court approved the statement as well as proposed notice and voting procedures for creditors, teeing up confirmation. Leading up to the confirmation hearing, the Advisors and the Funds asked the court to bar Highland Capital from trading or disposing of CLO assets pending confirmation. The bankruptcy court denied the request, and Highland Capital declined to voluntarily abstain and continued to manage the CLO assets.

Before confirmation, Dondero and other creditors (including several non-appellants) filed over a dozen objections to the Plan. Like Dondero, the United States Trustee primarily objected to the Plan's exculpation of certain non-debtors as unlawful. Highland Capital voluntarily modified the Plan to resolve six such objections. The Plan proposed to create eleven classes of creditors and equity holders and three classes of administrative claimants. See 11 U.S.C. § 1122. Of the voting-eligible classes, classes 2, 7, and 9 voted to accept the Plan while classes 8, 10, and 11 voted to reject it.

C. Reorganization Plan

The Plan works like this: It dissolves the Committee, and creates four entities—the Claimant Trust, the Reorganized Debtor, HCMLP GP LLC,[3] and the Litigation Sub-Trust. Administered by its trustee Seery, the Claimant Trust "wind[s]-down" Highland Capital's estate over approximately three years by liquidating its assets and issuing distributions to class-8 and -9 claimants as trust beneficiaries. Highland Capital vests its ongoing servicing agreements with the Reorganized Debtor, which "among other things" continues to manage the CLOs and other investment portfolios. The Reorganized Debtor's only general partner is HCMLP GP LLC. And the Litigation Sub-Trust resolves pending claims against Highland Capital under the direction of its trustee Marc Kirschner.

The whole operation is overseen by a Claimant Trust Oversight Board (the "Oversight Board") comprised of four creditor representatives and one restructuring advisor. The Claimant Trust wholly owns the limited partnership interests in the Reorganized Debtor, HCMLP GP LLC, and the Litigation Sub-Trust. The Claimant Trust (and its interests) will dissolve either at the soonest of three years after the effective date (August 2024) or (1) when it is unlikely to obtain additional proceeds to justify further action, (2) all claims and objections are resolved, (3) all distributions are made, and (4) the Reorganized Debtor is dissolved.

Anticipating Dondero's continued litigiousness, the Plan shields Highland Capital and bankruptcy participants from lawsuits through an exculpation provision, which is enforced by an injunction and a gatekeeper

[3] The Plan calls this entity "New GP LLC," but according to the motion to dismiss as equitably moot, the new general partner was later named HCMLP GP LLC. For the sake of clarity, we use HCMLP GP LLC.

provision (collectively, "protection provisions"). The protection provisions extend to nearly all bankruptcy participants: Highland Capital and its employees and CEO; Strand; the Independent Directors; the Committee; the successor entities and Oversight Board; professionals retained in this case; and all "Related Persons"[4] (collectively, "protected parties").[5]

The Plan exculpates the protected parties from claims based on any conduct "in connection with or arising out of" (1) the filing and administration of the case, (2) the negotiation and solicitation of votes preceding the Plan, (3) the consummation, implementation, and funding of the Plan, (4) the offer, issuance, and distribution of securities under the Plan before or after the filing of the bankruptcy, and (5) any related negotiations, transactions, and documentation. But it excludes "acts or omissions that constitute bad faith, fraud, gross negligence, criminal misconduct, or willful misconduct" and actions by Strand and its employees predating the appointment of the Independent Directors.

Under the Plan, bankruptcy participants are enjoined "from taking any actions to interfere with the implementation or consummation of the Plan" or filing any claim related to the Plan or proceeding. Should a party seek to bring a claim against any of the protected parties, it must go to the bankruptcy court to "first determin[e], after notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of any kind." Only then may the bankruptcy court "specifically authoriz[e]" the party to bring the claim. The Plan reserves for the bankruptcy court the "sole and exclusive jurisdiction to determine whether a claim or cause of action is colorable" and then to adjudicate the claim if the court has jurisdiction over the merits.

[4] The Plan generously defines "Related Persons" to include all former, present, and future officers, directors, employees, managers, members, financial advisors, attorneys, accountants, investment bankers, consultants, professionals, advisors, shareholders, principals, partners, heirs, agents, other representatives, subsidiaries, divisions, and managing companies.

D. Confirmation Order

At a February 2021 hearing, the bankruptcy court confirmed the Plan from the bench over several remaining objections. See FED R. BANKR. P. 3017–18; 11 U.S.C. §§ 1126, 1128, 1129. In its later-written decision, the bankruptcy court observed that Highland Capital's bankruptcy was "not a garden variety chapter 11 case." The type of debtor, the reason for the bankruptcy filing, the kinds of creditor claims, the corporate governance structure, the unusual success of the mediation efforts, and the small economic interests of the current objectors all make this case unique.

The confirmation order criticized Dondero's behavior before and during the bankruptcy proceedings. The court could not "help but wonder" if Highland Capital's deficit "was necessitated because of enormous litigation fees and expenses incurred" due to Highland Capital's "culture of litigation." Recounting Highland Capital's litigation history, it deduced that Dondero is a "serial litigator." It reasoned that, while "Dondero wants his company back," this "is not a good faith basis to lob objections to the Plan." It attributed Dondero's bad faith to the Advisors, the Trusts, and the Funds, given the "remoteness of their economic interests." For example, the bankruptcy court "was not convinced of the[] [Funds'] independence" from Dondero because the Funds' board members did not testify and had "engaged with the Highland complex for many years." And so the bankruptcy court "consider[ed] them all to be marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero." The court, meanwhile, applauded the members of the Committee for their "wills of steel" for fighting "hard before and during this Chapter 11 Case" and "represent[ing] their constituency . . . extremely well."

On the merits of the Plan, the bankruptcy court again approved the Plan's voting and confirmation procedures as well as the fairness of the Plan's classes. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1122, 1125(a)–(c). The court held the Plan complied with the statutory requirements for confirmation. See id. §§ 1123(a)(1)–(7), 1129(a)(1)–(7), (9)–(13). Because classes 8, 10, and 11 had voted to reject the Plan, it was confirmable only by cramdown.[6] See id. § 1129(b). The bankruptcy court found that the Plan treated the dissenting classes fairly and equitably and satisfied the absolute-priority rule, so the Plan was confirmable. See id. § 1129(b)(2)(B)–(C). The court also concluded that the protection provisions were fair, equitable, and reasonable, as well as "integral elements" of the Plan under the circumstances, and were within both the court's jurisdiction and authority. The court confirmed the Plan as proposed and discharged Highland Capital's debts. Id. § 1141(d)(1). After confirmation and satisfaction of several conditions precedent, the Plan took effect August 11, 2021.

E. The Appeal

Dondero, the Advisors, the Funds, and the Trusts (collectively, "Appellants") timely appealed, objecting to the Plan's legality and some of the bankruptcy court's factual findings.[7] Together with Highland Capital, Appellants moved to directly appeal the confirmation order to this court, which the bankruptcy court granted. See 28 U.S.C. § 158(d). A motions panel certified and consolidated the direct appeals. See ibid. Both the bankruptcy court and the motions panel declined to stay the Plan's confirmation pending appeal. Given the Plan's substantial consummation since its confirmation, Highland Capital moved to dismiss the appeal as equitably moot, a motion the panel ordered carried with the case.

We first consider equitable mootness and decline to invoke it here. We then turn to the merits, conclude the Plan exculpates certain non-debtors beyond the bankruptcy court's authority, and affirm in all other respects.

II. Standard of Review

A confirmation order is an appealable final order, over which we have jurisdiction. Bullard v. Blue Hills Bank, 575 U.S. 496, 502 (2015); see 28 U.S.C. §§ 158(d), 1291. This court reviews a bankruptcy court's factual findings for clear error and legal conclusions de novo. Evolve Fed. Credit Union v. Barragan-Flores (In re Barragan-Flores), 984 F.3d 471, 473 (5th Cir. 2021) (citation omitted).

III. Equitable Mootness

Highland Capital moved to dismiss this appeal as equitably moot. It argues we should abstain from appellate review because clawing back the implemented Plan "would generate untold chaos." We disagree and deny the motion.

[7] The Trusts adopt the Funds' and the Advisors' briefs in full, and Dondero adopts the Funds' brief in full and the Advisors' brief in part. Fed. R. App. P. 28(i).

The judge-made doctrine of equitable mootness allows appellate courts to abstain from reviewing bankruptcy orders confirming "complex plans whose implementation has substantial secondary effects." New Indus., Inc. v. Byman (In re Sneed Shipbuilding, Inc.), 916 F.3d 405, 409 (5th Cir. 2019) (citing In re Trib. Media Co., 799 F.3d 272, 274, 281 (3d Cir. 2015)). It seeks to balance "the equitable considerations of finality and good faith reliance on a judgment" and "the right of a party to seek review of a bankruptcy order adversely affecting him." In re Manges, 29 F.3d 1034, 1039 (5th Cir. 1994) (quoting First Union Real Estate Equity & Mortg. Inv. v. Club Assocs. (In re Club Assocs.), 956 F.3d 1065, 1069 (11th Cir. 1992)); see In re Hilal, 534 F.3d 498, 500 (5th Cir. 2008); see also 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1129.09 (16th ed.), LexisNexis (database updated June 2022) (observing "the equitable mootness doctrine is embraced in every circuit").[8]

This court uses equitable mootness as a "scalpel rather than an axe," applying it claim-by-claim, instead of appeal-by-appeal. In re Pac. Lumber Co.(Pacific Lumber), 584 F.3d 229, 240–41 (5th Cir. 2009). For each claim, we analyze three factors: "(i) whether a stay has been obtained, (ii) whether the plan has been 'substantially consummated,' and (iii) whether the relief requested would affect either the rights of parties not before the court or the success of the plan." In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1039 (citing In re Block Shim

No one factor is dispositive. See In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1039.

Here, the bankruptcy court and this court declined to stay the Plan pending appeal, and it took effect August 11, 2021. Given the months of progress, no party meaningfully argues the Plan has not been substantially consummated.[9] See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 242 (observing "consummation includes transferring all or substantially all of the property covered by the plan, the assumption of business by the debtors' successors, and the commencement of plan distributions" (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1141; and In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1041 n.10)). But that alone does not trigger equitable mootness. See In re SCOPAC, 624 F.3d 274, 281–82 (5th Cir. 2010). Instead, for each claim, the inquiry turns on whether the court can craft relief for that claim that would not have significant adverse consequences to the reorganization. Highland Capital highlights four possible disruptions: (1) the unraveling of the Claimant Trust and its entities, (2) the expense of disgorging disbursements, (3) the threat of defaulting on exit-financing loans, and (4) the exposure to vexatious litigation.

Each party first suggests its own all-or-nothing equitable mootness applications. To Highland Capital, Appellants' broad requested remedy with only a minor economic stake demands mooting the entire appeal. To Appellants, the type of reorganization plan categorially bars equitable mootness, or, alternatively, Highland Capital's joining the motion to certify the appeal estops it from asserting equitable mootness. These arguments are unpersuasive and foreclosed by Pacific Lumber.

First, Highland Capital contends the entire appeal is equitably moot because Appellants, with only a minor economic stake and questionable good faith, "seek[] nothing less than a complete unravelling of the confirmed Plan." It claims the court cannot "surgically excise[]" certain provisions, as the Funds request, because the Bankruptcy Code prohibits "modifications to confirmed plans after substantial consummation." See 11 U.S.C. § 1127(b). Not so.

"Although the Bankruptcy Code . . . restricts post-confirmation plan modifications, it does not expressly limit appellate review of plan confirmation orders." Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 240 (footnote omitted) (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1127). This court may fashion "fractional relief" to minimize an appellate disturbance's effect on the rights of third parties. In re Tex. Grand Prairie Hotel Realty, L.L.C., 710 F.3d 324, 328 (5th Cir. 2013) (denying dismissal on equitable mootness grounds because the court "could grant partial relief . . . without disturbing the reorganization"); cf. In re Cont'l Airlines, 91 F.3d 553, 571–72 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (Alito, J., dissenting)

(observing "a remedy could be fashioned in the present case to ensure that the [debtor's] reorganization is not undermined"). In short, Highland Capital's speculations are farfetched, as the court may fashion the remedy it sees fit without upsetting the reorganization.

Second, Appellants contend that equitable mootness cannot apply—full-stop—because this appeal concerns a liquidation plan, not a reorganization plan. We reject that premise. See infra Part IV.A. Even if it were correct, however, this court has conducted the equitable-mootness inquiry for a Chapter 11 liquidation plan in the past. See In re Superior Offshore Int'l, Inc., 591 F.3d 350, 353–54 (5th Cir. 2009). And other circuits have squarely rejected the categorical bar proposed by Appellants. See In re Abengoa Bioenergy Biomass of Kan., LLC, 958 F.3d 949, 956–57 (10th Cir. 2020); In re BGI, Inc., 772 F.3d 102, 107–09 (2d Cir. 2014). We do the same.

Finally, Appellants assert that because Highland Capital and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. jointly moved to certify the appeal, it should be estopped from arguing the appeal is equitably moot. They cite no legal support for that approach. We decline to adopt it.

Instead, we proceed with a claim-by-claim analysis, as our precedent requires. Highland Capital suggests only two claims are equitably moot: (1) the protection-provisions challenge and (2) the absolute-priority-rule challenge. Neither provides a basis for equitable mootness.

For the protection provisions, Highland Capital anticipates that, without the provisions, its officers, employees, trustees, and Oversight Board members would all resign rather than be exposed to Dondero-initiated litigation. Those resignations would disrupt the Reorganized Debtor's operation, "significant[ly] deteriorat[ing] asset values due to uncertainty." Appellants disagree, offering several instances when this court has reviewed release, exculpation, and injunction provisions over calls for equitable mootness. See, e.g., In re Hilal, 534 F.3d at 501; Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 252; In re Thru Inc., 782 F. App'x 339, 341 (5th Cir. 2019) (per curiam). In response, Highland Capital distinguishes this case because the provisions are "integral to the consummated plans." See In re Charter Commc'ns, Inc., 691 F.3d 476, 486 (2d Cir. 2012). We again reject that premise. See infra Part IV.E.1. In any event, Appellants have the better argument.

We have before explained that "equity strongly supports appellate review of issues consequential to the integrity and transparency of the Chapter 11 process." In re Hilal, 534 F.3d 498, 500 (5th Cir. 2008). That is so because "the goal of finality sought in equitable mootness analysis does not outweigh a court's duty to protect the integrity of the process." Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 252. As in Pacific Lumber, the legality of a reorganization plan's non-consensual non-debtor release is consequential to the Chapter 11 process and so should not escape appellate review in the name of equity. Ibid. The same is true here. Equitable mootness does not bar our review of the protection provisions.

For the absolute-priority-rule challenge,[10] Highland Capital contends our review requires us to "rejigger class recoveries." Pacific Lumber is again instructive. There, the court declined to apply equitable mootness to a secured creditor's absolute-priority-rule challenge, as no other panel had extended the doctrine so far. Id. at 243. Similarly, Highland Capital fails to identify a single case in which this court has declined review of the treatment of a class of creditor's claims resulting from a cramdown. See id. at 252. Regardless, Appellants challenge the distributions to classes 8, 10, and 11. According to Highland Capital's own declaration, "Class 8 General

Unsecured Claims have received their Claimant Trust Interests." But there is no evidence that classes 10 or 11 have received any distributions. Contra Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 251 (holding certain claims equitably moot where "the smaller unsecured creditors" had already "received payment for their claims"). As a result, the relief requested would not affect third parties or the success of the Plan. See In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1039. The doctrine of equitable mootness does not bar our review of the cramdown and treatment of class-8 creditors.

We DENY Highland Capital's motion to dismiss the appeal as equitably moot.

IV. Discussion

As to the merits, Appellants fire a bankruptcy-law blunderbuss. They contest the Plan's classification as a reorganization plan, the Plan's satisfaction of the absolute priority rule, the Plan's confirmation despite Highland Capital's noncompliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3, and the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the court's factual finding that the Funds are "owned/controlled" by Dondero. For each, we disagree and affirm. We do, however, agree with Appellants that the bankruptcy court exceeded its statutory authority under § 524(e) by exculpating certain non-debtors, and so we reverse and vacate the Plan only to that extent.

A. Discharge of Debt

We begin with the Plan's classification as a reorganization plan, allowing for automatic discharge of the debts. The confirmation of a Chapter 11 restructuring plan "discharges the debtor from any [pre-confirmation] debt" unless, under the plan, the debtor liquidates its assets, stops "engag[ing] in [its] business after consummation of the plan," and would be denied discharge in a Chapter 7 case. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1), (3); see In re Sullivan, No. 99-11107, 2000 WL 1597984, at *2 (5th Cir. Sept. 26, 2000)

(per curiam). The bankruptcy court concluded Highland Capital continued to engage in business after plan consummation, so its debts are automatically discharged. The Trusts call foul because, in their view, Highland Capital's "wind down" of its portfolio management is not a continuation of its business. We disagree.

Whether a corporate debtor "engages in business" is "relatively straightforward." Um v. Spokane Rock I, LLC, 904 F.3d 815, 819 (9th Cir. 2018) (contrasting the more complex question for individual debtors); see Grausz v. Sampson (In re Grausz), 63 F. App'x 647, 650 (4th Cir. 2003) (per curiam) (same). That is, "a business entity will not engage in business post-bankruptcy when its assets are liquidated and the entity is dissolved." Um, 904 F.3d at 819 (collecting cases).[11] But even a temporary continuation of business after a plan's confirmation is sufficient to discharge a Chapter 11 debtor's debt. See In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship, 116 F.3d 790, 804 n.15 (5th Cir. 1997) (recognizing a debtor's "conducting business for two years following Plan confirmation satisfies § 1141(d)(3)(B)" (citation omitted)). That is the case here.

By the plain terms of the Plan, Highland Capital has and will continue its business as the Reorganized Debtor for several years. Indeed, much of this appeal concerns objections to Highland Capital's "continu[ing] to manage the assets of others." Because the Plan contemplates Highland Capital "engag[ing] in business after consummation," 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1), the bankruptcy court correctly held Highland Capital was eligible for automatic discharge of its debts.[12]

B. Absolute Priority Rule

Next, we consider the Plan's compliance with the absolute-priority rule. When assessing whether a plan is "fair and equitable" in a cramdown scenario, courts must invoke the absolute-priority rule. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(1); see 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1129.04. Under that rule, if a class of unsecured claimants rejects a plan, the plan must provide that those claimants be paid in full on the effective date or any junior interest "will not receive or retain under the plan . . . any property." 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B).[13]

Because class-8 claimants voted against the Plan, the bankruptcy court proceeded by nonconsensual confirmation. The court concluded the Plan was fair and equitable to class 8 and its distributions were in line with the absolute-priority rule. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B). The Advisors claim the Plan violates the absolute priority rule by giving class-10 and -11 claimants a "Contingent Claimant Trust Interest" without fully satisfying class-8 claimants. We agree the absolute-priority rule applies, and the Plan plainly satisfies it.

The Plan proposed to pay 71% of class-8 creditors' claims with pro rata distributions of interest generated by the Claimant Trust and then pro rata

[13] See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 244 (noting the rule "enforces a strict hierarchy of [creditor classes'] rights defined by state and federal law" to protect dissenting creditor classes); see also In re Geneva Steel Co., 281 F.3d 1173, 1180 n.4 (10th Cir. 2002) ("[U]nsecured creditors stand ahead of investors in the receiving line and their claims must be satisfied before any investment loss is compensated." (citations omitted)).

distributions from liquidated Claimant Trust assets. Classes 10 and 11 received a pro rata share of "Contingent Claimant Trust Interests," defined as a Claimant Trust Interest vesting only when the Claimant Trustee certifies that all class-8 claimants have been paid indefeasibly in full and all disputed claims in class 8 have been resolved. Voilà: no interest junior to class 8 will receive any property until class-8 claimants are paid.

But the Advisors point to Highland Capital's testimony and briefs to suggest the Contingent Claimant Trust Interests (received by classes 10 and 11) are property in some sense because they have value. That argument is specious. Of course, the Contingent Claimant Trust Interests have some small probability of vesting in the future and, thus, has some de minimis present value. See Norwest Bank Worthington v. Ahlers, 485 U.S. 197, 207-08 (1988) (holding a junior creditor's receipt of a presently valueless equity interest is receipt of property). But the absolute-priority rule has never required us to bar junior creditors from ever receiving property. By the Plan's terms, no trust property vests with class-10 or -11 claimants "unless and until" class-8 claims "have been paid indefeasibly in full." See 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). That plainly comports with the absolute-priority rule.

We turn to whether the failure to comply with Bankruptcy Rule of Procedure 2015.3 bars the Plan's confirmation. The Independent Directors failed to file periodic financial reports per Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2015.3(a) about entities "in which the [Highland Capital] estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." The Advisors claim the failure dooms the Plan's confirmation because the Plan proponent failed to comply "with the applicable provisions of this title." 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(2). We disagree.

Rule 2015.3 cannot be an applicable provision of Title 11 because the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure are not provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. See Bonner v. Adams (In re Adams), 734 F.2d 1094, 1101 (5th Cir. 1984) ("The Bankruptcy Rules Enabling Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2075, provides that the Supreme Court may prescribe 'by general rules, the forms of process, writs, pleadings, and motions, and the practice and procedure' in bankruptcy courts."); cf. In re Mandel, No. 20-40026, 2021 WL 3642331, at *6 n.7 (5th Cir. Aug. 17, 2021) (per curiam) (noting "Rule 2015.3 implements section 419 of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005," which amended 28 U.S.C. § 2073). The Advisors' attempt to tether the rule to the bankruptcy trustee's general duties lacks any legal basis. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(8), 1106(a)(1), 1107(a). The bankruptcy court, therefore, correctly overruled the Advisors' objection.

D. Factual Findings

One factual finding is in dispute, but we see no clear error. The bankruptcy court found that, despite their purported independence, the Funds are entities "owned and/or controlled by [Dondero]." The Funds ask the court to vacate the factual finding because it threatens the Funds' compliance with federal law and damages their reputations and values. According to the Funds, the characterization is unfair, as they are not litigious like Dondero and are completely independent from him. Highland Capital maintains Dondero has sole discretion over the Funds as their portfolio manager and through his control of the Advisors, so the finding is supported by the record.

"Clear error is a formidable standard: this court disturbs factual findings only if left with a firm and definite conviction that the bankruptcy court made a mistake." In re Krueger, 812 F.3d 365, 374 (5th Cir. 2016) (cleaned up). We defer to the bankruptcy court's credibility determinations.

See Randall & Blake, Inc. v. Evans (In re Canion), 196 F.3d 579, 587–88 (5th Cir. 1999).

Here, the bankruptcy court drew its factual finding from the testimony of Jason Post, the Advisors' chief compliance officer, and Dustin Norris, an executive vice president for the Funds and the Advisors. Post testified that the Funds have independent board members that run them. But the bankruptcy court found Post not credible because "he abruptly resigned" from Highland Capital at the same time as Dondero and is currently employed by Dondero. Norris testified that Dondero "owned and/or controlled" the Funds and Advisors. The bankruptcy court found Norris credible and relied on his testimony. The bankruptcy court also observed that none of the Funds' board members testified in the bankruptcy case and all "engaged with the Highland complex for many years." Because nothing in this record leaves us with a firm and definite conviction that the bankruptcy court made a mistake in finding that the Funds are "owned and/or controlled by [Dondero]," we leave the bankruptcy court's factual finding undisturbed.

E. The Protection Provisions

Finally, we address the legality of the Plan's protection provisions. As discussed, the Plan exculpates certain non-debtor third parties supporting the Plan from post-petition lawsuits not arising from gross negligence, bad faith, or willful or criminal misconduct. It also enjoins certain parties "from taking any actions to interfere with the implementation or consummation of the Plan." The injunction requires that, before any lawsuit is filed, the plaintiff must seek the bankruptcy court's approval of the claim as "colorable"—i.e., the bankruptcy court acts as a gatekeeper. Together, the provisions screen and prevent bad-faith litigation against Highland Capital, its successors, and other bankruptcy participants that could disrupt the Plan's effectiveness.

The bankruptcy court deemed the provisions legal, necessary under the circumstances, and in the best interest of all parties. We agree, but only in part. Though the injunction and gatekeeping provisions are sound, the exculpation of certain non-debtors exceeds the bankruptcy court's authority. We reverse and vacate that limited portion of the Plan.

1. Non-Debtor Exculpation

We start with the scope of the non-debtor exculpation. In a Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding, "discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt." 11 U.S.C. § 524(e). Contrary to the bankruptcy court's holding, the exculpation here partly runs afoul of that statutory bar on non-debtor discharge by reaching beyond Highland Capital, the Committee, and the Independent Directors. See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d 251–53. We must reverse and strike the few unlawful parts of the Plan's exculpation provision.

The parties agree that Pacific Lumber controls and also that the bankruptcy court had the power to exculpate both Highland Capital and the Committee members. Appellants, however, submit the bankruptcy court improperly stretched Pacific Lumber to shield other non-debtors from breach-of-contract and negligence claims, in violation of § 524(e). Highland Capital counters that the exculpation provision is a commonplace Chapter 11 term, is appropriate given Dondero's litigious nature, does not implicate § 524(e), and merely provides a heightened standard of care.

To support that argument, Highland Capital highlights the distinction between a concededly unlawful release of all non-debtor liability and the Plain's limited exculpation of non-debtor post-petition liability. See, e.g., In re PWS Holding Corp., 228 F.3d 224, 246–47 (3d Cir. 2000) (describing releases as "eliminating" a covered party's liability "altogether" while exculpation provisions "set[] forth the applicable standard of liability" in future litigation). According to Highland Capital, the Third and Ninth Circuits have adopted that distinction when applying § 524(e). See Blixseth v. Credit Suisse, 961 F.3d 1074, 1084 (9th Cir. 2020), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct. 1394 (2021); In re PWS Holding, 228 F.3d at 246–47. Under those cases, narrow exculpations of post-petition liability for certain critical third-party non-debtors are lawful "appropriate" or "necessary" actions for the bankruptcy court to carry out the proceeding through its statutory authority under § 1123(b)(6) and § 105(a). See 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(6) ("[A] plan may . . . include any other appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of this title."); id § 105(a) ("The court may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title.").

Highland Capital reads Pacific Lumber as "in step with the law in [those] other circuits" by allowing a limited exculpation of post-petition liability. Cf. Blixseth, 961 F.3d at 1084. We disagree. As the Ninth Circuit acknowledged, our court in Pacific Lumber arrived at "a conclusion opposite [the Ninth Circuit's]." 961 F.3d at 1085 n.7. Moreover, the Ninth Circuit expressly disavowed Pacific Lumber's rationale—that an exculpation provision provides a "fresh start" to a non-debtor in violation of § 524(e)—because, in the Ninth Circuit's view, the post-petition exculpation "affects only claims arising from the bankruptcy proceedings themselves." Ibid. We are not persuaded, as Highland Capital contends, that the Ninth Circuit was "sloppy" and simply "misread Pacific Lumber." See O.A. Rec. 19:45–21:38.

The simple fact of the matter is that there is a circuit split concerning the effect and reach of § 524(e).[14] Our court along with the Tenth Circuit hold § 524(e) categorically bars third-party exculpations absent express authority in another provision of the Bankruptcy Code. Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 252–53; Landsing Diversified Props. v. First Nat'l Bank & Tr. Co. of Tulsa (In re W. Real Estate Fund, Inc.), 922 F.2d 592, 600 (10th Cir. 1990) (per curiam). By contrast, the Ninth Circuit joins the Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits in reading § 524(e) to allow varying degrees of limited third-party exculpations. Blixseth, 961 F.3d at 1084; accord In re PWS Holding, 228 F.3d at 246–47 (allowing third-party releases for "fairness, necessity to the reorganization, and specific factual findings to support these conclusions"); In re Metromedia Fiber Network, Inc., 416 F.3d 136, 143 (2d Cir. 2005); In re A.H. Robins Co., 880 F.2d 694, 702 (4th Cir. 1989); In re Dow Corning Corp., 280 F.3d 648, 658 (6th Cir. 2002); In re Airadigm Commc'ns., Inc., 519 F.3d 640, 657 (7th Cir. 2008); In re Seaside Eng'g & Surveying, Inc., 780 F.3d 1070, 1078 (11th Cir. 2015).

Our Pacific Lumber decision was not blind to the countervailing view, as it twice cites the Third Circuit's contrary holding in other contexts. See 584 F.3d at 241, 253 (citing In re PWS Holding, 228 F.3d at 236–37, 246). But we rejected the parsing between limited exculpations and full releases that Highland Capital now requests. We are obviously bound to apply our own precedent. See Hidalgo Cnty. Emergency Serv. Found. v. Carranza (In re Hidalgo Cnty. Emergency Serv. Found.), 962 F.3d 838, 841 (5th Cir. 2020) ("Under our well-recognized rule of orderliness, . . . a panel of this court is bound by circuit precedent." (citation omitted)).

bankruptcy" absent another source of authority. 584 F.3d at 252–53; see also In re Zale Corp., 62 F.3d 746, 760 (5th Cir. 1995). At oral argument, Highland Capital pointed only to § 1123(b)(6) and § 105(a) as footholds. See O.A. Rec. 16:45–17:28. But in this circuit, § 105(a) provides no statutory basis for a non-debtor exculpation. In re Zale, 62 F.3d at 760 (noting "[a] § 105 injunction cannot alter another provision of the code" (citing In re Oxford Mgmt., Inc., 4 F.3d 1329, 1334 (5th Cir. 1993))). And the same logic extends to § 1123(b)(6), which allows a plan to "include any other appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of this title." 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(6) (emphasis added).

Pacific Lumber identified two sources of authority to exculpate non-debtors. See 584 F.3d at 252–53. The first is to channel asbestos claims (not present here). Id. at 252 (citing 11 U.S.C. § 524(g)). The second is to provide a limited qualified immunity to creditors' committee members for actions within the scope of their statutory duties. Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 253 (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1103(c)); see In re Vitro S.A.B. de CV, 701 F.3d 1031, 1069 (5th Cir. 2012). And, though not before the court in Pacific Lumber, we have also recognized a limited qualified immunity to bankruptcy trustees unless they act with gross negligence. In re Hilal, 534 F.3d at 501 (citing In re Smyth, 207 F.3d 758, 762 (5th Cir. 2000)); accord Baron v. Sherman (In re Ondova Ltd.), 914 F.3d 990, 993 (5th Cir. 2019) (per curiam). If other sources exist, Highland Capital failed to identify them. So we see no statutory authority for the full extent of the exculpation here.

The bankruptcy court read Pacific Lumber differently. In its view, Pacific Lumber created an additional ground to exculpate non-debtors: when the record demonstrates that "costs [a party] might incur defending against suits alleging such negligence are likely to swamp either [it] or the consummated reorganization." 584 F.3d at 252. We do not read the decision that way. The bankruptcy court's underlying factual findings do not alter whether it has statutory authority to exculpate a non-debtor. That is the holding of Pacific Lumber.

That leaves one remaining question: whether the bankruptcy court can exculpate the Independent Directors under Pacific Lumber. We answer in the affirmative. As the bankruptcy court's governance order clarified, nontraditional as it may be, the Independent Directors were appointed to act together as the bankruptcy trustee for Highland Capital. Like a debtor-in-possession, the Independent Directors are entitled to all the rights and powers of a trustee. See 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a); 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1101.01. It follows that the Independent Directors are entitled to the limited qualified immunity for any actions short of gross negligence. See In re Hilal, 534 F.3d at 501. Under this unique governance structure, the bankruptcy court legally exculpated the Independent Directors.

In sum, our precedent and § 524(e) require any exculpation in a Chapter 11 reorganization plan be limited to the debtor, the creditors' committee and its members for conduct within the scope of their duties, 11 U.S.C. § 1103(c), and the trustees within the scope of their duties, see Baron, 914 F.3d at 993. And so, excepting the Independent Directors and the Committee members, the exculpation of non-debtors here was unlawful. Accordingly, the other non-debtor exculpations must be struck from the Plan. See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 253.[15]

[15] Highland Capital, like the bankruptcy court, claims the res judicata effect of the January and July 2020 orders appointing the independent directors and appointing Seery as CEO binds the court to include the protection provisions here. We lack jurisdiction to consider collateral attacks on final bankruptcy orders even when it concerns whether the court properly exercised jurisdiction or authority at the time. See Travelers Indem. Co. v. Bailey, 557 U.S. 137 (2009); In re Linn Energy, L.L.C., 927 F.3d 862, 866–67 (5th Cir. 2019) (quoting Bailey, 557 U.S. at 152). To the extent Appellants seek to roll back the protections

As it stands, the Plan's exculpation provision extends to Highland Capital and its employees and CEO; Strand; the Reorganized Debtor and HCMLP GP LLC; the Independent Directors; the Committee and its members; the Claimant Trust, its trustee, and the members of its Oversight Board; the Litigation Sub-Trust and its trustee; professionals retained by the Highland Capital and the Committee in this case; and all "Related Persons." Consistent with § 524(e), we strike all exculpated parties from the Plan except Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors.

2. Injunction & Gatekeeper Provisions

The injunction and gatekeeper provisions are, on the other hand, perfectly lawful. Appellants object to the bankruptcy court's injunction as vague and the gatekeeper provision as overbroad. We are unpersuaded.

First, Appellants' primary contention—that the Plan's injunction "is broad" by releasing non-debtors in violation of § 524(e)—is resolved by our striking the impermissibly exculpated parties. See supra Part IV.E.1.

Second, Appellants dispute the permanency of the injunction for the legally exculpated parties by enjoining conduct "on and after the Effective in the bankruptcy court's January 2020 and July 2020 orders (which is not clear from their briefing), such a collateral attack is precluded.

As a result, the bankruptcy court was correct insofar as those orders have the effect of exculpating the Independent Directors and Seery in his executive capacities, but it was incorrect that res judicata mandates their inclusion in the Plan's new exculpation provision. Despite removal from the exculpation provision in the confirmation order, the Independent Directors' agents, advisors, and employees, as well as Seery in his official capacities are all exculpated to the extent provided in the January and July 2020 orders, given the orders' ongoing res judicata effects and our lack of jurisdiction to review those orders. But that says nothing of the effect of the Plan's exculpation provision.

Date." Even assuming the issue was preserved,[16] permanency alone is no reason to alter a bankruptcy court's otherwise-lawful injunction on appeal. See In re Zale, 62 F.3d at 759–60 (recognizing the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction to issue an injunction in the first place allowed it to issue a permanent injunction).

Third, the Advisors argue that the injunction is "overbroad and vague" because it does not define what it means to "interfere" with the "implementation or consummation of the Plan." That is unsupported by the record. As the bankruptcy court recognized, the Plan defined what constitutes interference: (i) filing a lawsuit, (ii) enforcing judgments, (iii) enforcing security interests, (iv) asserting setoff rights, or (v) acting "in any manner" not conforming with the Plan. The injunction is not unlawfully overbroad or vague.

Finally, Appellants maintain that the gatekeeper provision impermissibly extends to unrelated claims over which the bankruptcy court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction. See In re Craig's Stores of Tex., Inc., 266 F.3d 388, 390 (5th Cir. 2001) (noting a bankruptcy court retains jurisdiction post-confirmation only over "matters pertaining to the implementation or execution of the plan" (citations omitted)). While that may be the case, our precedent requires we leave that determination to the bankruptcy court in the first instance.

Courts have long recognized bankruptcy courts can perform a gatekeeping function. Under the "Barton doctrine," the bankruptcy court may require a party to "obtain leave of the bankruptcy court before initiating an action in district court when the action is against the trustee or other bankruptcy-court-appointed officer, for acts done in the actor's official capacity." Villegas v. Schmidt, 788 F.3d 156, 159 (5th Cir. 2015) (emphasis added) (quoting Carter v. Rodgers, 220 F.3d 1249, 1252 (11th Cir. 2000)); accord Barton v. Barbour, 104 U.S. 126 (1881).[17] In Villegas, we held "that a party must continue to file with the relevant bankruptcy court for permission to proceed with a claim against the trustee." 788 F.3d at 158. Relevant here, we left to the bankruptcy court, faced with pre-approval of a claim, to determine whether it had subject matter jurisdiction over that claim in the first instance. Id. at 158–59; see, e.g., Carroll v. Abide, 788 F.3d 502, 506–07 (5th Cir. 2015) (noting Villegas "rejected an argument that the Barton doctrine does not apply when the bankruptcy court lacked jurisdiction"). In other words, we need not evaluate whether the bankruptcy court would have jurisdiction under every conceivable claim falling under the widest interpretation of the gatekeeper provision. We leave that to the bankruptcy court in the first instance.[18]

In sum, the Plan violates § 524(e) but only insofar as it exculpates and enjoins certain non-debtors. The exculpatory order is therefore vacated as to all parties except Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the

[17] The Advisors also maintain that Highland Capital is neither a receiver nor a trustee, so Barton has no application here. We disagree. Highland Capital, for all practical purposes, was a debtor in possession entitled to the rights of a trustee. See 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1101.01 ("The debtor in possession is generally vested with all of the rights and powers of a trustee as set forth in section 1106 . . . ."); see also Carter, 220 F.3d at 1252 n.4. (finding no distinction between bankruptcy court "approved" and bankruptcy court "appointed" officers).

[18] For the same reasons, we also leave the applicability of Barton's limited statutory exception to the bankruptcy and district courts in the first instance. See 28 U.S.C. § 959(a) (allowing suit, without leave of the appointing court, if the challenged acts relate to the trustee or debtor in possession "carrying on business connected with [their] property").

Independent Directors for conduct within the scope of their duties. We otherwise affirm the inclusion of the injunction and the gatekeeper provisions in the Plan.[19]

V. Conclusion

Highland Capital's motion to dismiss the appeal as equitably moot is DENIED. The bankruptcy court's judgment is AFFIRMED in part, REVERSED in part, and REMANDED for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

[19] Nothing in this opinion should be construed to hinder the bankruptcy court's power to enjoin and impose sanctions on Dondero and other entities by following the procedures to designate them vexatious litigants. See In re Carroll, 850 F.3d 811, 815 (5th Cir. 2017) (per curiam). But non-debtor exculpation within a reorganization plan is not a lawful means to impose vexatious litigant injunctions and sanctions.

FOR HCRE:

THE COURT: All right. We have a setting this morning in Highland Capital, Case Number 19-34054. We have both a motion to withdraw proof of claim of HCRE Partners, LLC, as well as the reorganized debtor's objection to a motion to quash and cross-motion to enforce subpoenas.

All right. So let's start by getting lawyer appearances, please. For HCRE, who do we have appearing?

Let me get appearances first from the main parties. For the debtor this morning, who is appearing?

MR. GAMEROS: Good morning, Your Honor. Bill Gameros for NexPoint Real Estate Partners f/k/a HCRE.

THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

For Highland, who do we have appearing this morning?

MR. MORRIS: Good morning, Your Honor. John Morris, Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones for Highland Capital Management, L.P.

THE COURT: Good morning.

All right. I'm guessing these are our only appearances. These are the only parties involved who filed pleadings. If there is anyone who felt the need to appear, go ahead.

(No audible response)

THE COURT: All right. Well, I don't know if you all have talked about the sequence we are going to take things this morning. Obviously, the first filed motion is HCRE's motion to withdraw proof of claim. But we have a discovery dispute and I think -- well, we've got Highland objecting to the motion to withdraw the proof of claim, but I think the backup argument is at the very least let us take discovery before you rule on the motion to withdraw proof of claim.

So have you all talked about who's going to go first on this one?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, we haven't spoken about it, but it makes sense to me that if we withdraw the proof of claim, it moots everything else. And I think that's really what we ought to do, take it all at one time.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Morris, do you agree on that sequence?

MR. MORRIS: I'm happy to cede the podium and let Mr. Gameros go first since he filed the first motion, but I do think that Your Honor had your finger on the pulse that before -- either the motion should be denied for the reasons set forth in our papers or we should be permitted discovery.

THE COURT: All right.

With that, Mr. Gameros, I'll hear your opening statement and hear what your evidence is going to be.

MR. GAMEROS: We didn't file any evidence today. We just simply want to withdraw the proof of claim. I think that we've satisfied the Manchester factors.

Quite frankly, there's only been the filing of the proof of claim and a scheduling order entered. Since I've been involved in it, we've only had the scheduling order entered. Anything else that's happened in this case was a motion to disqualify that precipitated our appearance. We filed the motion to withdraw. There's no summary judgments pending, no dispositive motions pending.

Quite frankly, we've looked at it as the company continued to operate. The things we were worried about happening didn't happen. And as a result, we decided we don't need the proof of claim, we don't want to continue it because I think we satisfy Manchester. If the Court has any concerns at all, A, the debtor's reorganized so proceeding with our proof of claim or withdrawing it doesn't affect it and, B, you can conditionally withdraw with a forecredudous [sic] order withdrawing the proof of claim.

But, quite frankly, I don't think we could amend it and we passed the claims bar date. So the Court should simply allow NexPoint Real Estate Partners to discontinue pursuing a proof of claim that they don't want to continue anymore. Everything else falls after that. That's it.

THE COURT: All right. Well, assuming the Manchester factors apply here, you're not going to have any evidence on any of these factors?

MR. GAMEROS: I don't believe that we need to have evidence on those. The only one that could possibly be at issue is one that the debtor might be able to bring but they haven't, and that's actual legal prejudice.

The withdrawal of the proof of claim here essentially says they win. And they've objected to our proof of claim, and now we're withdrawing it. So the proof of claim is resolved in their favor except we're withdrawing it instead of going through all of the exercise to get to a hearing where we don't want to pursue the proof of claim anymore.

THE COURT: All right. But is it a withdrawal that you seek with prejudice with any bells and whistles about future preclusion of litigation?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, the proof of claim -- I know the Court knows this, it's its own type of proceeding. This isn't a adversary proceeding or a different kind of lawsuit. It's simply a proof of claim, and we know we're not going to be able to amend it, we're not going to be able to re-assert it because it's after the bar date. That's why the Court should allow the withdrawal and, to the extent the Court wishes to condition it, condition it with prejudice. That's it.

THE COURT: Mr. Morris, I'll hear from you.

MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

Before I begin, I'd like to move into evidence Exhibits 1 through 6 that appear at Docket 3485 and 3486.

They're mirror images of each other. They're duplicates of each other, Your Honor.

But because our motion -- our objection to the motion for a protective order and the cross-motion to compel were filed as one document, the Court had us file it basically twice so that one is serving as the objection to the motion for the protective order and the other is serving as the cross-motion to compel. And so you'll see at Dockets 3485 and 3486 duplicate declarations from me with Exhibits 1 through 6.

THE COURT: All right. Any objections?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor?

THE COURT: Any objection?

MR. MORRIS: And then -- and then, Your Honor?

THE COURT: I'm sorry, I did not hear what Mr. Gameros said.

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, we don't object.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. GAMEROS: We don't necessarily believe it's relevant, but we don't object to its admission.

THE COURT: All right. They'll --

MR. MORRIS: And then, Your Honor, we've got --

THE COURT: Docket -- Exhibits 1 through 6 are admitted.

Go ahead.

(Debtor's Exhibits 1 through 6 admitted into evidence)

MR. MORRIS: And then at Docket 3488 we have another declaration under my signature with Exhibits 1 through 16, which are offered in opposition to HCRE's motion to withdraw their proof of claim.

THE COURT: Any objection?

MR. GAMEROS: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Those exhibits and that declaration are admitted, as well.

(Debtor's Exhibits 1 through 16 admitted into evidence)

MR. MORRIS: So, Your Honor, if I may, please, you know, the lack of evidence and the dismissiveness with which HCRE is approaching this proceeding is alarming.

We have litigated for two years. We were forced to move and litigate vigorously a motion to disqualify our prior counsel even though we put into evidence a document that said Wick Phillips represents Highland Capital Management. We were still forced to do that. We were forced to engage in expert. We were forced to have a hearing on this.

We have gone through discovery not once but twice. We have fulfilled every single obligation that were were required to fulfill under the scheduling orders. We have engaged in two rounds of written discovery. We have offered up every witness that has been noticed. We have produced thousands of pages of documents.

We took discovery from third parties, and this is really important for a number of reasons, Your Honor. We served subpoenas on BH Equities. BH Equities is not subject to the jurisdiction in Dallas, so we served the subpoena. We took the deposition.

They can't be compelled to testify at a hearing. HCRE chose not to ask any questions. The accounting firm, they chose not to ask any questions. Discovery is over, okay. I hear Counsel talk about the proof of claim. We need -- and this is where the prejudice comes in. We need an order on the merits. We need to know that HCRE is never going to challenge again Highland's 46.06 percent interest in SE Multifamily. That's what we need, because that's what we were about to get and they know that. And that's why they're folding their tent.

We informed them that we were moving for summary judgment. In fact, just seven days before they filed their motion, we negotiated a stipulation in order to extend the expert discovery deadline so that they could file an expert report while preserving Highland's ability to move for summary judgment. HCRE knew this when it filed its motion.

I want to say right now, Your Honor, Highland is willing to forego its right to move for summary judgment. We don't need to take that step. Let's just proceed. This motion should be denied. They offer no evidence whatsoever. Let's just proceed with the three depositions because discovery is otherwise closed and let's have a one-day trial live in your courtroom, Your Honor. We could have this done in six weeks.

The legal prejudice is enormous. We've set it out in our papers. Our evidence supports it. But I want to just highlight a few things. Again, I hear vagueness here. I hear you can dismiss the proof of claim with prejudice, but somehow I get the feeling from their papers from the cases that they cited to, from the quotations that say just because we get a tactical advantage doesn't mean that the motion should be denied, just because we may choose to file this in a different forum.

And that's the question that I really hope the Court will ask Mr. Gameros. Is HCRE waiving its right to ever challenge this again because if you can't get an unambiguous answer to that question, the motion must be denied because that's the prejudice.

But there's more prejudice, too. They've taken our deposition and based on what Mr. Gameros just told you, based on what's in their papers, they perceive something that happened in that deposition as being advantageous to them. If this Court were to consider dismissing this case with prejudice, it should do so on the condition that that transcript cannot be used for any purpose at any time anywhere because otherwise it's not fair, otherwise we've been prejudiced by them being permitted to take our deposition but foreclosing us from taking their deposition. Either the playing field needs to be level or that deposition transcript should never see the light of day.

That's condition number two, not just the dismissal with prejudice here, we need an ironclad commitment that HCRE is irrevocably waiving its right to challenge Highland's interest in SE Multifamily because that would be the result if this went to trial. And that transcript of Mr. Seery as Highland's 30(b)(6) witness should never see the light of day because they're playing games. They want to use that for some other purpose. And if they want to do that, that's fine, but I get to take their depositions. The playing field has to be level, Your Honor.

We have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on this case. The excuse that they're giving, the reason that they're giving for dismissing the case at this time makes no sense whatsoever. There's nothing in the proof of claim, nothing in the pleadings. There will never be any evidence.

There's no affidavit suggesting that Highland was interfering with SE Multifamily, that Highland threatened to interfere with SE Multifamily, that until this motion was filed that HCRE had any concerns whatsoever that Highland would be engaging in wrongful conduct. There will never be any evidence whatsoever that HCRE ever took any steps to protect itself from this so-called interference that they're now so fearful of.

And I do want to -- I have to ask this question, Your Honor. If HCRE believed that they were at risk on Wednesday, August 10th, so that they had to take Mr. Seery's deposition, what happened after that that caused them 48 hours later to file this motion with no notice whatsoever?

It's not right, Your Honor. So let me get to the substance. This is not a motion under Rule 41. Under Rule 41, plaintiffs sometimes have the right, the unilateral right to withdraw a pleading. HCRE has no right to that today. Rule 3006 is very clear. When there is a proof of claim that is contested, the proof of claim can only be withdrawn with court approval after a hearing and subject to whatever conditions the Court decides are appropriate.

And that's to protect the integrity of the process. And that's what we're asking the Court to do, to protect the integrity of the claims resolution process.

It is a fact-intensive inquiry. In this district, as HCRE has pointed out, there is precedent, the Manchester case, that sets forth a long list of factors that a court could consider in the face of such a motion. As we explain in our opposition, we believe that every single one of those factors weighs in favor of denying the motion.

I'm going to go through just a bit of it, Your Honor, because I think it's very important that everybody see exactly what's happening. In contrast to the lack of evidence by HCRE, we have all of the exhibits that have just been admitted into evidence here. The claims stated, the proof of claims, start with the proof of claim, stated that some or all of Highland's interest in SE Multifamily might be the property of HCRE.

It's a proof of claim that was signed by Jim Dondero. It was signed under the penalty of perjury. There is no good-faith basis for that proof of claim to have been filed, none whatsoever. If you take a look at their response to Highland's initial objection which can be found at Exhibit 7 on the initial docket, we'll put it up on the screen jut -- here's Exhibit 7 from Docket Number 3488.

And this is HCRE's response. And if we can go to Paragraph 5. This is the -- this is really their response here. And it says:

> "After reviewing what documentation is available to HCRE with the debtor, HCRE believes the organizational documents relating to SC Multifamily improperly allocates the ownership percentages of the members thereto due to mutual mistake, lack of consideration, and/or the failure of consideration. As such, HCRE has a claim to reform, rescind, or modify the agreement."

This is their proof of claim, that there was some mistake that happened in the drafting of the SE Multifamily documents. There is no good-faith basis for this proof of claim. There is no good-faith basis for this response that's up on the screen. And let me show you why.

If Your Honor had an opportunity to review BH Equities' deposition transcript, at least the portions that we specifically cited to, BH Equities is a truth third party. They're the only third party that is a member of SE Multifamily. I took their deposition. They retained Dentons. They produced documents. They acted professionally.

And their witness testified up, down, and sideways that from their perspective, it was a bilateral negotiation with them on one side and the grand Highland on the other side and that Highland drafted the ultimate agreement, the amended and restated LLC agreement.

It's an issue that is not in dispute. Highland drafted the document. People working on the Highland platform in the spring of 2019 when Mr. Dondero was in control, solely in control of Highland and HCRE.

So they say in that response and in the proof of claim that the allocation, the allocation is the allocation of the membership interest in SE Multifamily, they say, oh my goodness, that allocation was wrong because Highland only put in $49,000. And Mr. Dondero signed the agreement.

Let's take a look just quickly at Exhibit 5, and let's see how it's possible that Mr. Dondero could swear under oath that he made a mistake. If we can go to Schedule A.

Take a look at this, Your Honor. This is Schedule A. It's about a page or two after Mr. Dondero's signature. It has the percentage interest that he says was a mistake as if he didn't know the capital contribution that Highland put in. And if we got to a trial, Your Honor, we would show that Highland actually reached into its pocket for the $49,000. HCRE, in contrast, borrowed all the money, even though Highland was on the hook for the obligations to Key Bank.

But, nevertheless, here it is. It's in plain, plain, plain terms. The numbers are next to each other. It's not just the percentage interest. It shows the capital contribution. I'd be really interested in asking Mr. Dondero did he review this. I suspect he'll say no because that's what he usually says. But doesn't that scream fraud? How do you say you made a mistake when the numbers are on that page? I don't understand it.

Yet, we've spent two years and hundreds of thousands of dollars litigating this case. But here's the thing, Your Honor, it's not just in Schedule A. If we could go to Section 1.7 earlier in the agreement.

And remember, this is a document that BH Equities says was drafted by Highland. Look at 7; 7 is company ownership. That's the name of the section. Again, HCMLP has 46.06 percent. Is that a mistake? How did this -- somebody should explain how this mistake happened.

Let's go to Section 6.1. Section 6.1 is critical, and we'll see this in a moment. This is what's known as the waterfall. It shows how the distributions of cash from SE Multifamily are going to be made to its members. And you'll see in Section 6.1A that after certain things occur, cash is going to be distributed 46.06 percent to Highland. Another mistake, I guess, without explanation.

Section 9.3. Section 9 deals with liquidation and termination, and 9.3 is effectively the waterfall that's supposed to be in place upon a liquidation. And at the bottom of the waterfall in 9.3(e), not surprisingly, you see the exact same allocation.

So the allocation that Mr. Dondero swore under oath was the result of a mutual mistake was an allocation that appears in four separate places in a document that was drafted by people under his authority. Think about that. It's extraordinary. We spent two years litigating this case, and now they just want to go home.

But wait, there's so much more, Your Honor. I'm not going to go through all of it, but I want to just show you two other documents because these numbers are not in this document by accident. They're there on purpose.

If we could go to Exhibit Number 11.

So if you've seen from our papers and at all, Your Honor, Highland presented an initial draft of the amended and restated agreement to BH Equities on March 14th. It had to be completed by March 15th in order t make it retroactive to the prior August because that's for tax reasons. And you'll see up on the screen there's an email exchange from Mr. Broaddus at Highland to a fellow named Dusty Thomas at BH Management.

And it's two emails. The first one is sent on the afternoon of March 15th. And the important point is a little bit down where he says: "The contributions schedule in the attached needs to be updated with the actual contribution numbers."

So this is Highland telling BH Equities that the contribution schedule, which is Schedule A, needs to be updated so that the actual contribution numbers are in it. This is the mistake. This is the mistake, right. And notice that Mr. McGraner, I'm told is one of the Apex employees, he's got notice of this. He know exactly what's happening, right.

And Mr. Broaddus follows up. He follows up the next day and says the contribution schedule is attached. Well, let's take a look at what the contribution schedule is, if we can go to the next page. Look at that.

It's the same contribution schedule that appears in the final agreement. And this is just critical, Your Honor, because this shows that Highland, people working at the direction of Highland are preparing this document and it's a stand-alone document. So it's not as if somebody can say, gee, you know, it got lost in the sauce, it was deep in the details, deep in the weeds and I just missed it.

The very purpose of the sending of this document was to show the other counterparty, BH Equities, exactly what the capital contribution and percentage interest were going to be, not just the percentage interest but the capital contributions.

Later on that day, if we can go the next document, Exhibit 13. BH Equities was very concerned about the waterfall. They wanted to make sure that they were going to get back their capital before other distributions were made. And you can see here this is an email from Mr. Thomas back to Mr. Broaddus where he raises this issue, and I'll just kind of cut to the chase. Attached to Mr. Thomas' email was a proposal that BH Equities had made the prior fall with respect to the waterfall.

There's no dispute that Mr. Broaddus on behalf of Highland, the big Highland, rejected BH Equities' proposal. And if we can go the prior page and see exactly what they did in response. Instead, you can see Mr. Chang, Freddie Chang, another member of the Highland complex, with a very private email to Mr. Broaddus, right, BH Equities isn't even copied on it. And he comes up, it's labeled 6.1, but this is what becomes -- it's labeled 1.1, but this is what becomes 6.1 in the actual agreement. This is the waterfall. This is Mr. Chang and Mr. Broaddus exchanging an email with a new version of the waterfall that they wanted. And the new version that they wanted shows in Section 1.1(a) here that Highland was going to get 46.06 percent of the distributable cash as set forth therein.

A mistake? A mutual mistake when people working under Mr. Dondero's direction drafted these documents in specific -- as part of a negotiation? This is about the only thing that was the subject of a negotiation.

And, of course, there's more because if you take a look at the deposition transcript that we cited from BH Equities from BH Equities' perspective, Section 1.7, 6.1, and 9.3 and Schedule A all reflects the parties' intent. And that deposition is closed, right. I mean they chose not to ask any questions. They didn't challenge that. There is no good-faith basis for this proof of claim to have ever been filed. And that, Your Honor, is the definition of vexatiousness, and that is one of the Manchester factors.

Another one of the factors is the extent to which the suit has progressed. Other than the depositions that they unilaterally shut down, the only thing left was either a summary judgment motion or a trial. Again, discovery is over. Highland has fulfilled its obligations. There is nothing left to do here except to take three depositions and have a trial on the merits. So the suit has progressed far.

Duplicate of expense of re-litigation, are we really going to do this again? Are they really going to get the benefit of new discovery in a new lawsuit somewhere else that's not a proof of claim but that somehow tries to recraft it because we've seen stuff like this before from Mr. Dondero. He's going to say, oh, that was just a proof of claim, that's a different standard that somehow, you know, I can bring a different claim in a different court at a different time. We're going to do this again? I hope not.

How about the adequacy of the explanation? They concluded that Highland wasn't interfering. Where was the evidence that Highland ever interfered? Where was the evidence that Highland ever threatened to interfere? Where was the evidence that HCRE ever expressed a concern that Highland would interfere? Where's their application to the Court for some kind of protective order or some type of protection, some type of injunction relief to prevent us from interfering? There's nothing.

HCRE filed this -- and I'll have to speculate here because they're not -- I don't thing they're being candid with the Court. They filed it because they hoped to do this trial in a different forum at a different time elsewhere.

They're shutting it down because they know that their witnesses are going to be asked questions that are going to further buttress Highland's claims to breach of contract, going to get into some serious tax questions where even BH Equities wouldn't even rely on the K-1s that HCRE caused to be prepared. Really tough questions.

I know they want to get out now, but they never should have filed the proof of claim. And forcing Highland to go down this path to incur this expense, to take our deposition and then try to shut the door, can't think of a better fact scenario for the denial of a 3006 motion than we have here.

Look at just what happened in the seven days before they filed their motion because it is extraordinary, and I didn't even put everything in the papers because one of the things I forgot to put in is Mr. Gameros sent to me seven days before the motion the 30(b)(6) notice for Highland. So that's sent on August 5th.

On August 5th, we finish negotiating and sign a stipulation that extends the expert discovery deadline to allow them to call an expert which we think had no merit which is why we reserve the right on the motion to strike because we don't think -- as described to us at the time, but nevertheless, we reserved our right to either make a motion to strike or to proceed right to summary judgment. It's all in the stipulation that we negotiated, that we signed on behalf of the clients, and that Your Honor's approved just two days before this is

I think Mr. Seery's deposition was the 10th. At 4:00 on the 9th, HCRE produced over 4,000 pages of documents like six weeks after the deadline, right. And Counsel and I spent the next 24 hours -- you know, I was pretty upset, I'll admit it, but you've got -- you know, it's in the record, you know, what my written responses were. And I tried very hard to avoid motion practice, and I tried very hard as I always do to try to come to a reasonable resolution. And we actually got to that point just moments before Mr. Seery's deposition. And then they take Mr. Seery's deposition.

So think about it. They serve a 30(b)(6) notice, they take a deposition, they produce 4,000 pages of documents, they negotiate and sign a stipulation to extend the discovery deadline, the Court takes the time to review the stipulation, orders it. All of this happens within seven days of their motion, two days after they take Mr. Seery's deposition and just two days before I'm scheduled to take their client's depositions.

Based on the complete lack of evidence on HCRE's part and the evidence that I've just shown the Court, we believe the Court should simply deny the -- deny all three motions, you know what I mean? Let's just cut to the chase, let's take three substantive depositions, and let's set a trial date. That, I believe, is the most appropriate result here.

If the Court is not inclined to rule on the motion to withdraw, the Court should then deny the motion for a protective order and grant our cross-motion to compel the depositions on this motion. I assure the Court that if the Court decides to follow that path, my questioning will be limited to the Manchester factors. And I won't get into the substance because that wouldn't be ripe.

The first question is whether or not they have a right to -- whether the Court should grant their motion to withdraw, and I will limit my questioning if we go down, you know, option B to those questions, to the Manchester questions, right. There's no question that we have the right to discovery. They filed a motion. We filed an objection. We now have a contested matter under the bankruptcy rules. We're entitled to discovery.

I want to address, I guess, on this topic some of the issues that were raised in the motion for the protective order. They say, oh, we didn't serve the witnesses. That's easily -- well, first, I would point out that if you looked at Exhibit 1, you know, Counsel previously accepted service of subpoenas on Mr. Dondero and Mr. McGraner's behalf. Maybe he's got an explanation why he did it before but he won't do that now. But if that's the way HCRE wants to do it, we'll hire professional process servers that can -- that give us a couple of weeks and we'll find them. We'll find them. And if not, we'll get the adverse inference.

They said we didn't give enough time, that we didn't take into account their scheduling. Just look at Exhibit 4, Your Honor. I specifically wrote to Counsel, it's there in writing. You know, it's there in writing. If you need an accommodation, let me know. Let me know if the dates and times work. I have flexibility. I told him that in writing. And yet, the reason the Court should enter a protective order is because we didn't give them sufficient time or we wouldn't take into account their schedules.

We've got all the time now, Your Honor. I'm actually not available next week, but after that, I can take these depositions any time the last week of September, the first week of October, whatever is convenient for them. That is no reason to grant a protective order.

And then, finally, this notion that, you know, Mr. McGraner and Mr. Dondero are some Apex employees, Your Honor, HCRE has no employees. None. Mr. Dondero signed the original LLC agreement. He signed the amended LLC agreement. He signed the proof of claim. Who else should I be deposing? Mr. McGraner owns a substantial interest of HCRE. He's on the emails that show he had contemporaneous knowledge that people working in the Highland complex were drafting Schedule A in a manner that was ultimately accepted not just by Highland and HCRE but by a third party, BH Equities.

There's nobody to depose other than Mr. McGraner and Mr. Dondero. I mean I guess Mr. Ellington, I haven't thought about that. He is a five percent owner. But for a company with no employees, who else am I supposed to depose?

Finally, Your Honor, I've taken probably enough time here. But option C, right, I think this just be denied outright. If not, we should at least be permitted to get some discovery before the Court rules on the motion. Option C, if the Court really wants to dismiss this -- grant the motion in any respect, there ought to be severe conditions on it.

It has to be a dismissal on the merits. It has to be a dismissal that pays Highland its reasonable legal fees incurred for this waste of time. And it has to be conditioned on the fact that Mr. Seery's deposition transcript will be barred from use in any proceeding going forward or they have got to show up for the depositions to level the playing field.

So that's where we are, Your Honor. Three choices. You know, they're in the order that we think are most appropriate. But I've got nothing further at this point, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. A couple of questions for you.

You've represented as an officer of the Court that your client, the estate, has incurred hundreds of thousands of dollars of attorneys' fees and costs relating to this proof of claim. Is that correct?

MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. And I'm just curious, did this claimant, HCRE, file other pleadings during the Highland case, like objections to the plan or -- I remember discovery disputes when Wick Phillips was involved in the main case. But I'm just curious, did you look at other times they may have participated as a party, a creditor?

MR. MORRIS: In all candor, Your Honor, I haven't --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRIS: -- looked at that. My memory, which could be wrong, my memory is that they did file other things, although it's possible I'm just confusing it with Wick Phillips representing different entities of Mr. Dondero. But I believe that Wick Phillips was involved in other matters. I think HCRE filed other things, but I don't know off the top of my head.

THE COURT: Okay. So the representation that hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent on this proof of claim dispute, I mean you're zeroing in on this proof of claim dispute. Is that correct?

MR. MORRIS: One hundred percent limited to this proof of claim.

I mean think about what we did here, Your Honor. We had a whole litigation over Wick Phillips. Both sides retained experts. We took fact discovery. We participated in written discovery, something that never ever should have happened. But we were forced to do that, and I do include that as part of this.

What else have we done? Because I think it's -- I think Your Honor's asking a fair question, like how do you get to that number. Before the Wick Phillips' disqualification motion and the reason that we got to that point is we had engaged in written discovery. And this is back in the spring of 2021. We served, you know, document requests, we served requests to admit, we served interrogatories. All of that was answered.

We produced thousands of pages of documents at that time. And it was in preparing for the depositions that were then scheduled that we saw in the documents the conflict that Wick Phillips had. So we went though that whole process throughout the rest of 2021, completely unnecessary. Just completely unnecessary, but nevertheless, we did. We prevailed.

New counsel came in in January and did nothing, right. It took us six months to get to a scheduling order. It took me almost three months to get them to respond at all. But we did the whole thing again, and we went through more written discovery and more interrogatories and more requests to admit and more document requests. And we produced more documents.

We served subpoenas on Mark Patrick, on BH Equities, on Baker Vigotto, the accounting firm that prepares the tax returns at the direction of HCRE on behalf of SE Multifamily. There's lots of negotiations in there. There's -- I mean Your Honor can see just how many times depositions were scheduled and rescheduled and rescheduled again to accommodate everybody's summer and business, right.

So we took the deposition of Mr. Patrick. We took the deposition of Barker Vigotto. We took the deposition of BH Equities. We defended Mr. Seery and his deposition. We took the time to prepare for that. We were reviewing the 4,000 documents that they produced belatedly, right. We're marshaling our evidence, getting ready for our summary judgment motion. We're negotiating amendments to scheduling orders at HCRE's request.

Yeah, we spent several hundred thousand dollars, Your Honor, for sure.

THE COURT: Okay.

All right, Mr. Gameros, do you have cross-examination of Mr. Morris?

MR. GAMEROS: I don't have cross-examination of Mr. Morris. I'd just like to respond to a few points if I could.

Is that permitted, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Oh, yes. I mean this was your chance to cross-examine Mr. Morris since he submitted a declaration with exhibits. But if you decline to do that, I think Mr. Morris --

MR. GAMEROS: Cross-examine Mr. Morris, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Just -- Mr. Morris, the reorganized debtor rests, right? I got the impression you were resting?

MR. MORRIS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right.

MR. MORRIS: Yes.

THE COURT: Mr. Gameros, now your chance for rebuttal.

MR. GAMEROS: All right.

First, in terms of hundreds of thousands of dollars of fees and the activity level since my firm appeared in January of 2022, I think we need to look back at the disqualification proceeding and remember that the estate was denied its request for attorneys' fees on the disqualification and that's in this Court's order.

If we proceed to trial, they won't be entitled to attorneys' fees for winning, if they do. There's no claim here that entitles the estate to shift its attorneys' fees to NexPoint. None.

And I think that's important. The relief that he's asking for, Your Honor, if you listen to what the estate's requesting, it wants to limit the use of Mr. Seery's deposition. It wants to have a trial. Now apparently they may not move for summary judgment. Okay. Things that they would like, but all they get is a ruling on a proof of claim. And we've already said the Court should allow us to withdraw the proof of claim and condition it with prejudice.

There is no other lawsuit out there. There is no other position being taken anywhere. Frankly, Your Honor, the reason why I said admit the exhibits and I question their relevance is because none of them go to actual legal prejudice. Can't show it, hasn't shown it, hasn't demonstrated it. It says they did a lot of work, gave you the greatest hits of some email, but quite frankly, Your Honor, that goes to merit, not legal prejudice. That goes to, I believe, part of their story as to what happened.

The story that matters to me is we think things were going to happen during the estate, he's right. We didn't move for them. We looked back at it and said we don't need the proof of claim anymore, we should withdraw it. That's the only thing that's happened, and that's why we're here. We don't think he's entitled to discovery as to why we withdrew the proof of claim.

It's his burden to show legal prejudice. He can show it or he can't. He hasn't.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. GAMEROS: The estate hasn't.

THE COURT: Mr. Gameros?

MR. GAMEROS: (Indiscernible) Mr. Dondero.

THE COURT: I have a question. I mean I'm looking at your pleading, your motion to withdraw the proof of claim, and I'm looking at this wonderful chart you have on Page 7 saying here are the standards under Bankruptcy Rule 3006, you, Court, should consider. They were articulated in the Manchester case.

And it's not merely about is there any prejudice to the estate. I mean you set forth five factors. One is "reason for dismissal." One is diligence in bringing the motion to withdraw. One is undue vexatiousness. One is the matter's progression including trial preparation. One is duplication of expense of relitigation.

This is your own authority, which I believe actually is correctly articulating the standards. It's not just about prejudice. Yes, I agree that some of the case law has zeroed in on that one in particular. But I mean you say yourself reason for dismissal is a factor the Court must consider.

MR. GAMEROS: That's correct, Your Honor. Those are the factors, and I think our analysis on them is correct.

If we go all the way to trial and the result is that our proof of claim is denied, we're in the same position we are right now. So why should the parties, the estate, and the Court go through that exercise?

THE COURT: Okay. Well, that's another issue, I think, other than the reason for dismissal. But a follow-up question to what you just said is this.

Would you agree to a condition on the withdrawal of your proof of claim that your client agrees that Highland has a 46-point whatever it was percent interest in SE Multifamily Holdings and your client waives any right in the future to challenge that interest?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, if that's what the Court wants to put in an order and I have a chance to confer with my client on it, I'm pretty sure that would be agreeable.

THE COURT: Today's the day. I'm not going to continue. I've got, you know, the whole day booked if I needed it because I wasn't sure what you all were going to want to put on.

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, we'd agree with that.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, I'm sorry to interrupt, but a waiver of any appeal, too. I just hard that if that's what you want to put in the order, that's okay. But this case has to end, and that's what we're looking for.

We're a post-confirmation estate that will not go forward with the possibility hanging over its head that it may be divested of this asset. That is what this proof of claim and this dispute is about.

And what the debtor needs in order to avoid legal prejudice is the complete elimination of any uncertainty that it owns 46.06 percent of SE Multifamily. And if HCRE is not willing to give that comfort today, we again renew our request for a direction that the three HCRE witnesses appear for substantive depositions and we get this on the trial calendar.

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, we'll agree to it.

THE COURT: Well, you know what, this is such a big deal I really need a client representative to say that. It would be that --

MR. GAMEROS: I don't have one here today, but I can get you one.

THE COURT: How soon --

MR. GAMEROS: Do you want me to file a stipulation or an affidavit?

THE COURT: Pardon?

MR. GAMEROS: Do you want me to file an affidavit?

THE COURT: Well, let's be a hundred percent clear. Your client would state that with the granting of the motion to withdraw proof of claim number 146, HCRE is irrevocably waiving the right to ever challenge Highland Capital Management's 46 percent interest -- and I know it's 46-point something -- 46 percent interest in SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC and is, likewise, waiving the right to appeal or challenge the order to this effect.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may, perhaps we can take a ten-minute recess and allow him to consult with his client and perhaps get a client representative on the phone who can make that representation?

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Gameros, you think you can get a client rep on the WebEx?

MR. GAMEROS: I'm pretty sure I can, Your Honor.

THE COURT: All right. Well, how about we take a 15-minute recess. Does that sound a reasonable amount of time? We've got, you know, two dozen people --

MR. GAMEROS: It does, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Two dozen people on the WebEx. I don't know if maybe one is a client representative, but we'll take a 15-minute break and I'll come back. Okay.

THE CLERK: All rise.

(Recess at 10:33 a.m./Reconvened at 10:50 a.m.)

THE CLERK: All rise.

THE COURT: Please be seated.

We're back on the record in Highland.

Mr. Gameros, how did you want to proceed now?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor wanted me to get a representative of NexPoint Real Estate Partners to state that they agree that the estate has its 46 percent interest in the company agreement subject to the company agreement. And I've got Mr. Sauter here who has authority to speak on behalf of NexPoint Real Estate Partners.

THE COURT: All right. Well, so what is his position with HCRE?

MR. SAUTER: Your Honor, I don't have -- this is DC Sauter. I don't have an official position with HCRE, but I have spoken with Mr. Dondero and he has authorized me to appear here today and agree to the conditions that Mr. Gameros just outlined.

THE COURT: All right. Well, it sounds like hearsay to me. I don't know -- Counsel, let me have you both respond. You know, I worry about this will fall apart the minute Mr. Dondero is instructing a lawyer, I never agreed to that. I mean I just don't know. This is highly unusual.

First --

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, if I might?

THE COURT: Please.

MR. GAMEROS: Mr. Sauter is an officer of the Court. He works, you know, with Mr. Dondero at his business at NexPoint; certainly an authorized agent on behalf of NexPoint Real Estate Partners to make this agreement on behalf of NexPoint Real Estate Partners.

To the extent that the condition that you originally described as a conclusory matter, in other words, how to end the withdrawal, we already agreed to that, that we also can agree on the record to waive any appeal. Mr. Sauter is authorized to agree to that, as well.

So I think as an agent and a lawyer on behalf of NexPoint Real Estate Partners, he's fully able to do that.

THE COURT: How do I know he's able to do that?

And, by the way, if Mr. Dondero is in I guess the last 15 minutes given him authority to testify before the Court, why couldn't Dondero just get on the WebEx himself?

MR. SAUTER: Your Honor, I think he felt more comfortable with me being a lawyer agreeing to those terms so that he wouldn't misstate something. He has been listening. I believe he's still on, although I'm not certain.

THE COURT: Mr. Morris, do you want to respond? I mean I'm not sure, frankly, I care what you say, no offense. I don't think I have a person with clear authority here.

MR. MORRIS: I'll just be quick and say I agree.

THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Gameros --

MR. GAMEROS: As an attorney for NexPoint Real Estate Partners, I have the authority to make that agreement on the record and it be binding. Mr. Sauter is confirming that authority having spoken with Mr. Dondero about it.

I think that the Court is fully --

THE COURT: Mr. Gameros --

MR. GAMEROS: -- capable of doing that --

THE COURT: Mr. Gameros, come on. You know this is the client's decision to make. Okay. I don't have a client representative. I don't have an officer or controlling equityholder as evidence here of --

MR. MORRIS: Mr. Dondero --

THE COURT: -- the willingness to make the agreement. Pardon?

MR. MORRIS: Can Mr. Dondero make the representation on the record to the Court that he is authorizing Mr. Sauter to waive any claim that HCRE has to Highland's 46.06 percent interest in SE Multifamily along with any appeal? This is just step one. But if Mr. Dondero was on the phone, let him speak up and make it crystal clear that he is delegating the full authority to Mr. Sauter to negotiate and enter into this consensual order on behalf of HCRE.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Gameros, do you want to give your client authority to speak up? Your client representative, someone who's actually an officer or a controller or equity owner?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, if Mr. Dondero can do that, that would be great. I don't know if he's in a place where he can do that.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Dondero, if you can hear us, are you willing to give some quick testimony in that regard?

MR. DONDERO: I can't see the box --

UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Surprising that -- surprising he was on the phone before, but now he's not after delegating. Just I'm not --

MR. SAUTER: Your Honor, he's on the phone. I'm just -- if you will give me a minute, I got to run around the corner and try to make sure he knows how to unmute himself.

THE COURT: Star 6. If he's on a phone, star 6 is the way to unmute himself. But I want to see video, too.

THE OPERATOR: There we go. Try again.

MR. DONDERO: Hello?

THE COURT: All right.

MR. DONDERO: Hello?

THE COURT: Mr. Dondero, is that you?

MR. DONDERO: It's me. I've been on the entire time.

THE COURT: All right. Can you turn your video on, please?

MR. DONDERO: I am on my cell phone.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, so I guess you just called in on your cell phone, you don't have a WebEx connection on your cell phone?

MR. DONDERO: I don't have a WebEx.

THE COURT: Okay. Well -- yeah, it sounded like you were in the same office as Mr. Sauter. Is that -- did I misunderstand?

MR. DONDERO: We work in the same office. I'm in my car. I just stepped out of my car.

THE COURT: All right. Well, this is not ideal, you know, without us seeing you. But I'll go ahead and swear you in. All right. Can you hear me okay? I need to swear you in.

MR. DONDERO: Yes.

THE COURT: All right.

JAMES DONDERO, HCRE'S WITNESS, SWORN

THE COURT: All right.

Mr. Gameros, do you want to ask him the questions we need to hear answers on, please?

MR. GAMEROS: Thank you, Your Honor.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. GAMEROS:

Q Mr. Dondero, on behalf of HCRE, do you agree as a condition for withdrawing the proof of claim that HCRE will not challenge the estate's ownership or equity interest in SE Multifamily subject to the company agreement?

A Yes.

Q Do you agree that you will not appeal and that, therefore, HCRE is waiving any appeal right to that determination as a condition of withdrawing the proof of claim?

A Yes.

MR. GAMEROS: Those are the questions for Mr. Dondero.

MR. MORRIS: Your Honor, if I may?

THE COURT: Mr. Morris, you may.

MR. MORRIS: I'm very uncomfortable. I'm very uncomfortable with the inclusion of the language subject to the company agreement. It sounds like a very conditional waiver. We need an irrevocable unconditional admission by HCRE that Highland owns 46.06 percent of SE Multifamily, period, full stop. If they want to keep conditions in there and make it conditional and make it subject to other things, let's please deny the motion and proceed to trial.

THE COURT: All right. Well, Mr. --

MR. GAMEROS: The equity that they own is part of the company agreement. It's not modifying the company agreement by saying.

THE COURT: Well --

MR. MORRIS: Our ownership is not subject to the agreement. We either have an ownership interest or we don't. Our rights and obligations as a member of SE Multifamily are subject to the agreement, but our ownership interest is not. And that's the ambiguity that we need to remove.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, Mr. Gameros, do you want to rephrase the question or are you not willing to make the agreement as specific as Mr. Morris says he needs it?

MR. GAMEROS: That's what I'm -- I guess I don't understand what his complaint is. If the estate owns 46 percent of the equity of SE Multifamily, it owns that subject to the company agreement. It's not a separate ownership interest. So I don't know what the problem is.

THE COURT: Okay. Let me try to phrase it as I understand it.

What I understand has been asserted in the proof of claim is that what was set forth in the agreement was a mistake, okay. A mistake. And it sounds like you're using language that says we'll agree the agreement, you know, they have a 46 percent interest pursuant to the agreement. But that doesn't change -- that does not really zero in on the argument made in the proof of claim that there was a mistake in the agreement, right?

So you'd have to go broader to completely resolve the issues raised in your proof of claim and say we agree, Highland has a 46.06 interest in SE Multifamily and we agree that is correct and we waive any right to challenge it in the future and we waive any right to appeal this order.

MR. GAMEROS: And, Your Honor, if that's the condition, I guess my concern is that the 46 percent is still part of the company agreement. We agree not to challenge it on the basis of anything asserted in the proof of claim, that being mistake, lack of consideration, or failure of consideration. Their 46 percent is their ownership interest in SE Multifamily and HCRE won't challenge that.

Is that sufficient?

THE COURT: Well, I need to hear from your client. I mean he needs to be asked every which way from Sunday whether he is waiving the right to challenge Highland's 46.06 interest from now until eternity, okay. That's basically, you know, we either have that agreement or we'll just have a trial.

BY MR. GAMEROS:

Q Mr. Dondero, do you agree that NexPoint Real Estate Partners will not challenge in any way the estate's interest in SE Multifamily, its 46-point whatever percent interest that is?

A I think the nuance is that agreement is okay in current as of today. But it's part of an operating agreement, and that percentage ownership can change due to capital calls and other things. And it could change over time. It's never in a partnership agreement fixed into perpetuity. And so no businessman can agree to that.

If the Court wants it fixed into perpetuity, that would be very odd.

MR. MORRIS: Can we go to trial, Your Honor? Can we just deny the motion and go to trial? Let me have my depositions and go to trial. This is -- if Mr. Dondero wants to take that position, he's welcome to do that. But I'm entitled to finality, and I'd like to get there.

THE COURT: All right. Well, Mr. Gameros, anything else you want to ask your client that you think might be helpful?

BY MR. GAMEROS:

Q Mr. Dondero, you desire to withdraw the proof of claim. Correct?

A Yes.

Q And you agree to an order denying the proof of claim with prejudice. Correct?
A Yes.
Q And can you agree that HCRE will not challenge the equity ownership of its member in SE Multifamily of the estate?
A Yes.

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, I think there it is.

THE COURT: Mr. Morris, do you have any --

MR. GAMEROS: He agrees.

THE COURT: -- do you have any follow-up questions --

MR. MORRIS: The waiver of the right to --

THE COURT: -- Mr. Dondero?

MR. MORRIS: The waiver of the right to any appeal whatsoever. And I do have -- you know, there are the other conditions that we mentioned earlier, right? Either they have to also agree that Mr. Seery's deposition transcript shall never be used for any purpose at any time or they need to level the playing field and submit their witnesses to examination.

The playing field needs to be level here. Either if they want to use that deposition transcript for some purpose, I have no problem with that. Just let me take my depositions. If they don't want to submit their witnesses to depositions, then they also have to agree that that transcript will never be used for any other purpose. It's as if this proof of claim has never been filed, right, for that purpose, right. Because that's just not fair. That's the legal prejudice.

How do you take my client's deposition on Wednesday and file this motion on Friday knowing your client's supposed to be deposed on Tuesday? Level the playing field. That's conditional number two.

And condition number three, frankly, Your Honor, this proof of claim was fraudulent. I mean my client has been damaged. My client has spent an enormous amount of money on this, and I'd like them to agree to if not make us whole, you know, do something because it's wrong. It's just wrong that Mr. Dondero files proofs of claim under penalty of perjury that have absolutely no basis in fact.

It's distressing. I'd like those two last issues addressed, as well.

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, in terms of the Court's questions in terms of finality with respect to the membership interest in SE Multifamily, Mr. Dondero agrees with the Court. He's already said that he won't waive -- that he waives, rather -- I'm sorry, let me start again.

He has said very clearly that he has waived appeal of this order allowing the withdrawal of the proof of claim with the conditions that you asked for. I think you should grant the motion to withdraw and we can put an end to all of this.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRIS: Here's the thing, Your Honor. We know there's going to be more litigation with HCRE. We know they've breached the contract. We know because the evidence is in the record. We know that Highland demanded access to books and records as is its contractual right back in June. We know that that notice was sent to all of Mr. Dondero's lawyers and HCRE's lawyers. And we know that that request has been absolutely categorically ignored. Okay?

We are going to --

MR. GAMEROS: This has nothing to do with the proof of claim.

MR. MORRIS: We are going to get -- well, no.

To be clear, Your Honor, that is what's driving this concern is because we know that there's going to be additional litigation. We know the tax forms are not accurate. We know there's already an existing breach of contract.

And what we're trying to make sure is that HCRE is not able to resurrect this concept that we don't have an ownership interest, that it's not 46.06 percent, that Mr. Seery made some admission that they're going to use in some future litigation. That's the prejudice, okay.

So I think step one is (indiscernible), but then we need either an agreement that the transcript isn't going to be used elsewhere or that I get the deposition of the HCRE witnesses because it's unfair prejudice to use this process to take that deposition on Wednesday, August 10th and to file this motion on Friday, August 12th. That is unfair prejudice for them to have taken my client's sworn testimony and then shut it down before I could take theirs.

So either eliminate it all or let it all in, right? It can't be. They can't possibly benefit from this.

THE COURT: Let me understand something, Mr. Morris, you just said. We know we're going to have future litigation. I mean I'm not asking for revelation of attorney-client privilege, but -- communications, but you kind of dangled it out there.

You're saying that the reorganized debtor intends to file litigation against HCRE because of what you think are breaches by it as manager of SE Multifamily of the existing agreement.

MR. MORRIS: The evidence is already in the record, Your Honor. We have -- Highland as a member of SE Multifamily has the contractual right to obtain access to inspect and copy -- those are the words, inspect and copy SEC [sic] Multifamily's books and records.

We made that request at the end of June. It's one of the exhibits that's attached that's in the record now. I made probably three different follow-up emails, and it's been completely ignored, okay.

HCRE is the manager of SE Multifamily, right. They're in control. They're the ones who dictate how the accounting is done. They're the ones who dictate how distributions are made. They're the ones who dictate how tax forms are prepared. They have an obligation under the amended and restated agreement to cause SE Multifamily to prepare the tax returns. They're the ones who are in direct contact with Barker Vigotto.

There's a whole host of issues we're going to examine, but the one thing that I do know for certain, Your Honor, is that they are in breach of the agreement today because they have refused for three months now to give us what we're entitled to. And that is access to inspect and copy SE Multifamily's books and records.

So unless they agree to do that, and I mean pretty soon, we're not going to have any alternative. If you recall, Your Honor, Mr. Dondero's trust, the Dugaboy Trust, filed this valuation motion which we'll address in due course. I don't know where they got the number, but according to Mr. Dondero's trust, Highland's interest in SE Multifamily is worth $20 million. This is not a small asset. This is not harassment.

But they're not complying with their contractual obligation to give us access to inspect and copy SE Multifamily's books and records. For a $20-million asset where it's -- I mean they're conceding now that we're the owner of those membership interest. How can they deny us access?

And if they don't give us that access so that we can verify the value of this asset, so that we can verify whether or not we've gotten the distributions that we're entitled to, so that we can verify that the profits and losses that have been allocated to Highland were actually proper and consistent with the agreement, I'm afraid that there will be further litigation, and that's why we need to -- we need to nail this down right now because I don't want to get a counterclaim that says we left the deal open to challenging Highland's interest in SE Multifamily. That door needs to close today.

THE COURT: Okay. All right. Well, I'm going to start out by saying we're in a very unusual procedural posture.

Before I forget, Mr. Gameros, I meant to mention this at the very beginning. The motion to withdraw the proof of claim of your client, you had an odd way of signing it. I wonder if this was a mistake or you always sign this way. You signed the pleading signature Charles W. Gameros, Jr., PC.

Is that -- was that inadvertent or do you always sign that way? I mean a lawyer's supposed to personally sign under Rule 11 a pleading. Was that just inadvertent or do you think that's fine?

MR. GAMEROS: I've used that signature block for over 20 years, and I've never -- no one has ever asked. I thought it was fine.

THE COURT: Okay. Well, no one's ever asked and you think it's fine. I think you need to go back and do some research on that, okay. I'm not sure it's fine. I'm not sure it's fine.

I mean you would agree that you're personally bound under Rule 11 when you file a pleading, right?

MR. GAMEROS: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I mean I know it feels a little different if you're -- well, I don't know. You're not a -- you have a firm, Hoge & Gameros, L.L.P. I mean it wouldn't be appropriate for Mr. Morris to sign a pleading Pachulski Stang, right? He has to sign his name personally on a pleading, right?

MR. GAMEROS: Your Honor, I'll make that change.

THE COURT: Okay.

Well, so we're in an unusual procedural context. We I think all agree that Bankruptcy Rule 3006 is the applicable authority, and it provides that, you know, a creditor can't just withdraw a claim when there's been an objection filed to it. There has to be notice and an order from the Court.

And so we don't run into this situation very often, but I have seen it before. And as someone or both correctly noted, it is a rule that sort of goes to the integrity of the system. Filing a proof of claim is obviously a very significant act in the context of a bankruptcy case.

You file a proof of claim under penalty of perjury so it's a big deal from, you know, a criminal exposure standpoint but it's also a big deal because we want to make sure only parties with legitimate claims are given a seat at the table, so to speak, in bankruptcy as far as, you know, their right to a distribution, their right to be heard in a case.

So, you know, that's the reason for the rule. We don't see it come into play very often, but it's there because we want to make sure that we protect the integrity of the bankruptcy process. And if someone files a proof of claim and it's pending and, you know, activity happens in the bankruptcy case as a result of it, that we don't just let a party say never mind.

So the Manchester case, which you both cited in your pleadings, has set forth fact-intensive factors -- fact-intensive inquiry. And, again, I'm just looking at HCRE's motion, Page 7. There was a chart and it sets forth the Manchester factors. Factor number one, diligence in bringing the motion to withdraw the proof of claim.

In Mr. Gameros' chart, his response to that factor is that HCRE brought its motion to withdraw immediately after conferring with debtor's counsel. I don't even know what that means, okay. But what I do know is in looking at diligence of bringing the motion, the proof of claim was filed April 8th, 2020. It was objected to, the proof of claim, July 30th, 2020. And then on August 12th, 2022, this motion to withdraw the proof of claim was filed.

So two years and one month after the objection was filed to the proof of claim HCRE withdraws it. So that doesn't seem very diligent. It's not diligent at all, to be honest.

Your second factor, you cited, Mr. Gameros, undue vexatiousness, and you say HCRE has not been vexatious in pursuing its proof of claim. And outside the motion to disqualify previous counsel, which is not substantive, everything in the matter has proceeded by agreement and there have been no hearings set or held.

Okay. Well, debtor has represented in its pleadings and today through counsel on the record that it has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars litigating this. It has mentioned that four depositions have been taken. It was Mr. Mark Patrick. It was the tax accounting firm. We had the B -- the entity -- BH Equities, LLC, their representative. And then Mr. Seery. So four depositions, and I'm told a lot of written discovery.

And on the day before the -- well, the day after, day or two after the Seery deposition, the motion to withdraw the proof of claim was filed after 5:00 in the evening on a Friday, August 12th, and I guess a couple of business days before the depositions were to occur of Mr. Dondero and the fellow, Mr. McGraner, and I feel like there was one other deposition. I'm losing track of those.

THE CLERK: The 30(b)(6).

THE COURT: Oh, the 30(b)(6). The 30(b)(6) representative.

So on top of all of that, you know, Highland argues there was just simply no good-faith basis for the proof of claim. Proof of claim asserted the membership interest, Highland's 46.06 interest, set forth in the Multifamily LLC agreement were the result of mistake.

Mr. Dondero signed the agreement for both parties, HCRE and Highland. And then now the motion to withdraw says something to the effect of the anticipated issues have not materialized. So anyway, the undue vexatiousness factor I think weighs -- because of these factors I've mentioned, weighs in favor of there has been undue vexatiousness.

Factor number three, according to HCRE's motion to withdraw the proof of claim, is matter's progression including trial preparation. Again, four depositions, thousands of pages of written discovery. We were days away from the last depositions occurring, those of HCRE's potential witnesses and we have trials set. We have a trial set in November. So that factor, again, seems to weigh heavily in favor of Highland's objection here.

Duplication of expense of relitigation, here's why we got Mr. Dondero on the phone or wanted to have a witness with authority. Highland is saying we are concerned about relitigation of this ownership interest issue. And as part of its argument, Highland has said we've got claims, we've got our own claims for breach of agreement and different things that are going to cause us to have to drill down on terms of the LLC agreement.

And we can't -- we don't want to face exposure on this issue of, well, you don't have the ownership interest or the rights you say you do, Highland. So, you know, if we could get ironclad language here of, you know, we waive the right, we agree that Highland has the 46.06 interest and we waive the right to challenge that, then I don't think we'd have to worry about relitigation of the issues in the proof of claim. But it feels like we had a little bit of reluctance to say it as forcefully as we would need to have it said to avoid relitigation.

Reason for dismissal, I don't know. I don't know what the reason for dismissal. Again, to quote HCRE's pleading on Page 7, the reason for dismissal is, "The operation of the company" -- I think that means SE Multifamily -- "during the case and the anticipated issues therewith have not materialized and NREP no longer desires to proceed in the matters raised in the proof of claim."

I mean that's just not in sync with the theory espoused in the proof of claim that we think there was a mistake made in the LLC agreement. So, again, looking at these legal factors, I do not think that the correct result is to grant the motion to withdraw the proof of claim under Rule 3006 under the Manchester factors. I will throw in that I think there is potential for prejudice here of the debtor.

I mean not even considering that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent over two-plus years on this issue, you know, I remember very well the disqualifying motion. And I said Wick Phillips should be disqualified. I didn't shift fees because I just wasn't sure at the time that, frankly, HCRE should be imposed with the fees attributable to its lawyers, not recognizing the conflict of interest when they saw one. It was just a little fuzzy in my mind.

But I'm just letting you know that now that we are here many years later, many months later and we have all the sudden, okay, never mind, this is just a situation where I have some regrets I didn't shift fees, to be honest. But -- so the motion is denied. The depositions shall go forward. I'm not sure, you know, if the dates that have been proposed are still workable, but if someone wants to speak up now about those deposition dates to avoid an emergency hearing, I'm willing to hear that.

I think what I heard was, well, I don't know what -- have you talked about dates at all? Probably not, Mr. Morris, in light of this hearing today.

MR. MORRIS: We have not, Your Honor. But I do think that Counsel and I can work that out. I'm not available until the week of the 26th. So it won't be early that week but sometime between let's say the 28th of September and the 7th of October, I'll be prepared to take these depositions. And I would respectfully request, and we can work with Ms. Ellison to try to find a trial date sometime the last week of October, first week of November so we can get this finished.

THE COURT: Okay. Did I dream up that there was a trial set already in November?

MR. MORRIS: You know what?

You know what, let's just keep that date, Your Honor. Let's just keep that date.

THE COURT: All right. Traci, are you still on the line? Can you confirm my memory? I thought we had a two-day trial set aside for this in November.

MS. ELLISON: Is this on the merits of HCRE's claims, Judge Jernigan? I have a note holding November 1 and 2.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MORRIS: Yeah.

THE COURT: So we'll go ahead and mark that down.

Now the last -- so you'll work on an a mutually agreeable date for these three remaining depositions sometime, you know, late September, early October. And I trust you will --

MR. MORRIS: Yeah. I would respectfully request that Counsel just propose dates for the depositions. I'll wait to hear from him. But I think -- I'm representing to the Court that any time between September 28th and let's just give it two full weeks, October 12th. That's plenty of time in advance of the trial.

THE COURT: All right. Mr. Gameros, anything you want to add on that?

MR. GAMEROS: No, Your Honor. I'm sure we can work with Mr. Morris to get those scheduled.

THE COURT: All right. And here's actually the last thing I wanted to say.

You know, I had thought about, you know, waiting 24 hours to give you a ruling on this motion to withdraw the proof of claim and directing you all to kind of talk and see if maybe you could work out language, you know, without the pressure of the Court hovering over you that could make both of your clients satisfied.

I still encourage you to do that, but I'm going to pick on our U.S. Trustee. I see she's observing today, and I'm not going to ask you to say anything, Ms. Lambert. But if you all do agree, if you all in the next, you know, 24 hours come to some sort of agreement, I don't mean to be alarming, but I want it run by the U.S. Trustee because, you know, I've heard some things that have troubled me about the, you know, lack of good faith with regard to the proof of claim and, you know,

And, you know, I talked earlier about this goes to the integrity of the system, you know, filing a proof of claim under penalty of perjury. Anyway, I'm feeling a little bit uncomfortable about signing off on an agreed order where there may be quid pro quos that went back and forth in connection with withdrawing a proof of claim. I mean at some point -- well, that's why we have scrutiny of these things under Rule 3006, right?

Again, there are integrity issues. And so I just -- you know, if you were to work out language, I want you to run it by Ms. Lambert and I want to hear that either she was okay with it or she wasn't okay with it or maybe she declines to comment. You know, I'm not going to tell her how to do her job, but I feel like that needs to happen, okay?

It's just something uncomfortable going on in my brain about, you know, again a proof of claim being on file two, almost two and a half years and then, you know, okay, never mind, okay, I agree to never mind as long as you agree to XYZ.

And I have no idea what's in the Seery transcript. I don't have it before me. But, you know, I don't even know what that's all about. I don't even know if I care what that's all about. I just know if there are quid pro quos I feel like, you know, maybe I need to have the U.S. Trustee, you know, not per se signing off on any agreed order but at least kind of looking at it and telling me either U.S. Trustee's fine with it, U.S. Trustee is not fine with it, or U.S. Trustee declines to comment. Just I know that I've gone through the drill, okay?

So just letting you know I am still, you know, all open to an agreed resolution of this, okay. But we're going forward as if you can't get there, okay?

All right. I'll look for -- what am I going to look for? I'm going to look for an order denying the motion to withdraw proof of claim. I'm going to look for an order granting the -- well, an order resolving the objection to motion to quash and cross-motion for subpoenas saying that these three witnesses are going to appear at a mutually agreeable time either late September or early October.

All right. We're adjourned.

THE CLERK: All rise.

MR. MORRIS: Thank you, Your Honor.

I. INTRODUCTION

The Objection to Renewed Motion to Recuse ("Objection") filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or the "Debtor") only underscores why recusal is not just warranted but necessary in this case. HCMLP devotes only nine pages of its Objection to actual legal argument. But that argument fails to address or distinguish much of the case law cited in Movants' Amended Renewed Motion to Recuse (the "Renewed Motion") [Doc. 3570] and relies on a litany of irrelevant cases that are easily distinguishable. The remaining 41 pages of the Objection consist of procedural background (critical parts of which are wrong) and "additional background," which is largely rhetoric designed to exploit the Court's existing bias.

The main thrust of HCMLP's Objection is that the Renewed Motion is untimely and that the Court's rulings are correct and final. But HCMLP cites the wrong legal standard for timeliness and relies on cases that have nothing to do with the posture of this case. HCMLP's other refrain—that all of the Court's rulings discussed in the Renewed Motion are correct and final—is both ironic (given HCMLP's argument that the Court's order on recusal cannot be considered "final") and irrelevant to the ultimate issue of whether the Court's treatment of Movants is objectively biased such that recusal is appropriate. HCMLP's only answer to that key question is that the Court has said it is not biased, and so it must be true. That is not the standard for recusal and provides no basis to deny Movants' Renewed Motion. The Renewed Motion should be granted.

II. HCMLP'S ITERATION OF THE "FACTS" IS IRRELEVANT AND WRONG

HCMLP's 41-page recitation of "facts" is laden with unsubstantiated assertions, misinformation, and irrelevant arguments that appear largely designed to distort rather than educate. Movants see little utility in addressing many of those statements, which are irrelevant to the underlying question of whether the Court bears an objective bias against Movants requiring recusal. Instead, Movants address only the most egregious examples of factual misstatements.

A. HCMLP Misrepresents The Procedural History Of This Case

Although not relevant to the legal question of whether recusal is warranted, HCMLP devotes substantial space in its Objection to discussing actions supposedly taken by Mr. Dondero early in the bankruptcy case and seeking to hold those actions against him. See, e.g., Opp., ¶¶ 1, 30-32, 34. That is surprising, given that HCMLP's counsel, Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones LLP ("Pachulski"), was advising Mr. Dondero before the bankruptcy case was even filed and recommending each of the actions that Mr. Dondero took, starting with its recommendation that he file a chapter 11 bankruptcy on HCMLP's behalf in Delaware. See Supplemental Appendix ("Supp. App'x") Ex. X, Declaration of James D. Dondero ("Dondero Decl."), ¶ 2. At the time, Pachulski advised Mr. Dondero that there was less than a one percent chance the case would get transferred to this Court. Id. Incredibly, HCMLP now accuses Mr. Dondero of forum shopping by electing to follow Pachulski's advice. See Obj., ¶¶ 30-31. Pachulski also mounted a lively argument against transferring the case to this Court based on some of the very same concerns Movants have raised in their recusal motion. Renewed Mot. at 5 & nn.20-22.[1]

HCMLP also says Mr. Dondero is in no position to complain about the transfer of HCMLP's bankruptcy to this Court because he did not appeal that ruling, but omits the fact that Mr. Dondero did not appeal because Pachulski advised him he could not to do so. Id. It is exceptionally misleading for the very counsel that advised these early actions to argue that Mr. Dondero did something wrong or otherwise sat on his hands.

HCMLP likewise alleges that Mr. Dondero "voluntarily surrendered control of Highland to an independent board of directors" and failed to object to or appeal (and to the contrary, [1] HCMLP argues that Mr. Dondero "controlled Highland and directed its counsel to oppose the Transfer Motion" (Obj., ¶ 34), but that argument rings very hollow when it was Pachulski that advised Mr. Dondero to file the chapter 11 petition in Delaware bankruptcy court in the first place and opposed the motion to transfer at a time when Pachulski (as Debtor's counsel) owed fiduciary duties to the estate to take actions in the best interest of the estate.

"affirmatively approved") the language of the related Settlement Order restricting Mr. Dondero's actions and allowing the Court to sanction him. Obj., ¶¶ 38-39.[2] But again, Pachulski advised Mr. Dondero to cede control to an independent board, saying his resignation would expedite the exit from bankruptcy, Pachulski advised Mr. Dondero to approve the language of the Settlement Order, and Pachulski assured Mr. Dondero that his continued cooperation would work to ensure HCMLP emerged from bankruptcy as a going concern. Dondero Decl., ¶ 3. Importantly, at the time, Mr. Dondero reasonably believed Pachulski was acting as his individual counsel in part because Pachulski never advised him that he (or Strand, for that matter) should obtain separate counsel before taking these significant (and as it turns out, highly disadvantageous) steps. Id. ¶¶ 3-4.[3]

Finally, in an effort to justify the Court's treatment of Movants, HCMLP repeatedly invokes the supposed "history and culture of litigiousness" at HCMLP under Mr. Dondero's leadership as well as the "plethora" of rulings and other judgments issued against both Mr. Dondero and his affiliates prior to bankruptcy. See Obj., ¶¶ 1, 26, 42. Although Movants dispute HCMLP's characterization of the company's culture prior to bankruptcy, it is worth noting that the decisions made by Highland regarding litigation prior to bankruptcy were not "propagated" solely by Mr. Dondero but were often conceived of and approved by other "human beings," including Thomas Surgent, HCMLP's former and current Chief Compliance Officer, its former

[2] Mr. Dondero surrendered his positions at Strand, not HCMLP. See Settlement Order, Dkt. 339. Notably, while HCMLP argues that Mr. Dondero "voluntarily surrendered" his positions, HCMLP at the same time argues confusingly and contradictorily that Mr. Dondero was "forced to resign." Compare Obj., ¶ 38, with Obj., ¶ 32.

[3] HCMLP partially waived the attorney-client privilege as part of its settlement with the Unsecured Creditors Committee. See Dkt. 281, ¶ 13; Supp. App'x, Ex. Y, January 21, 2020 Hr'g Tr. at 96:7-13 (Mr. Pomerantz: "The settlement also granted standing to the Committee to investigate and prosecute certain insider claims, along with broad access to the Debtor's books and records, including attorney-client privileged information necessary to prosecute those claims."). At the time, this decision was directly adverse to the interests of Mr. Dondero and Strand, notwithstanding that Pachulski simultaneously advised them to accept the settlement and execute various documents to effectuate it. Under these circumstances, neither HCMLP nor Pachulski may hide behind the attorney-client privilege to avoid disclosure of facts that are directly relevant to the issues raised by HCMLP in its Opposition.

Deputy General Counsel, and its current General Counsel. See Obj., ¶ 42. HCMLP conveniently buries Mr. Surgent's significant role in the company's past. Further, HCMLP fails to cite a single pre-bankruptcy ruling or judgment against Mr. Dondero, and Movants are aware of none. Nonetheless, HCMLP is content to make this statement repeatedly as though it is fact, which is consistent with what HCMLP has done throughout these bankruptcy proceedings.

B. HCMLP Misreads The Court's Order On Movants' Motion To Supplement

At the outset of its Objection, HCMLP argues that Movants' Renewed Motion should be rejected because it was filed in violation of the Court's order denying Movants' Motion for Final, Appealable Order and Supplement to Motion to Recuse ("Motion to Supplement"). Obj., ¶ 23 & n.21. That order directed Movants to either (1) file a "simple motion," seeking only a "revised and amended recusal order" but removing language that Movants perceived to impede their appellate rights, or (2) "file a new motion . . . based on alleged new evidence or grounds for recusal" not previously considered by the Court. Order, Dkt. 3479 at 3. Importantly, however, the Court's order on the Motion to Supplement came on the heels of a hearing in which the Court specifically told Movants they could file a "new motion to recuse . . . to start this over and supplement the record." App'x at 0210 (emphasis added).[4] HCMLP now argues that what Movants were supposed to file was a motion to recuse limited to new record evidence of bias and nothing more. That argument is both nonsensical and irrelevant.

The entire point of Movants' Motion to Supplement was to ensure that an appellate court, when reviewing Movants' request for recusal, has the benefit of the entire record supporting recusal, as Movants made clear in their Motion to Supplement and at the hearing on that motion. See Dkt. 3470 at 4; App'x at 0207. If the Court's order were read in the manner suggested by

HCMLP, that would mean an appellate court could only consider a small portion of the record on appeal from the Court's denial of Movants' Renewed Motion, which would give the appellate court only a fraction of the relevant picture. That makes no sense, and adopting HCMLP's reading of the order would only further impede Movants' due process right to build an appellate record based on all salient evidence, which is all Movants have been trying to do. In fact, HCMLP acknowledges that such attempt to restrict the record would be improper, as it admits that the Court must focus on the "entirety of the proceedings." Obj., ¶ 120.

In any event, HCMLP's argument makes no difference to whether the Court should grant or deny Movants' Renewed Motion. Movants' basis for recusal is not a single fact or an isolated incident. Instead, Movants seek recusal based on a pattern of treatment throughout the bankruptcy proceedings that, taken as a whole, demonstrate both the appearance of bias and actual animus toward Movants. There is no procedural or statutory bar to filing a motion to recuse at any time under these circumstances, based on any record evidence the moving party deems relevant to the issue. The Court may disagree that the evidence cited supports the relief requested, but Movants' mere inclusion of prior evidence is not a reason to deny the Renewed Motion.

C. HCMLP's Arguments About The Outcome Of Various Rulings Are Irrelevant

HCMLP also spends much of its time arguing that various rulings by the Court are final, were not appealed or have been upheld on appeal, or were otherwise correct. See, e.g., Obj., ¶¶ 6, 12 n.11, 35, 39, 45, 64, 69, 71, 80. That is irrelevant. As Movants acknowledged in their Renewed Motion, recusal ordinarily should not be used as a mechanism to challenge the outcome of rulings issued by the courts. See Renewed Mot. at 20. And that is not what Movants seek to do. Instead, Movants seek recusal because the Court's process—including its overt negative rhetoric, its departure from usual procedures, and its general treatment of Movants—reflects the type of deep-seeded animosity that would cause any objective observer to question the Court's impartiality.[5]

In short, it does not matter whether the Court "got it right" or not. Recusal is required where, as here, the Court has acted in a manner that is partial, or at the very least appears partial.

D. HCMLP Distorts The Factual Record And Fails To Cite Relevant Evidence

HCMLP spills a lot of ink describing (in a manner rife with misstatements and distortions but often lacking citations or evidentiary support) what happened at various hearings cited by Movants in the Renewed Motion as evidence of bias. Again, the outcome of various motions and hearings makes little difference to this analysis. How those results came to be, on the other hand, makes all the difference. Thus, in addition to clarifying some of the more egregious misstatements made by HCMLP in the Objection, Movants will also clarify its use of the Court's hearing and rulings to demonstrate the Court's bias.

The June 2020 CLO Holdco Hearing. HCMLP argues the Court's statements and actions at the CLO HoldCo hearing are not evidence of bias because "neither CLOH nor the DAF are Movants." Obj., ¶ 47. HCMLP further argues that Movants have the facts wrong because, HCMLP insists, "the $2.5 million was deposited into the court registry at CLOH's request." Obj., ¶ 48 (emphasis in original). Both of these arguments are wrong.

First, it makes no difference that CLOH and the DAF are not Movants in the Renewed Motion. Both HCMLP and the Court have repeatedly argued that every entity remotely connected

[5] In any event, it is ironic that HCMLP argues so strenuously that any order on recusal cannot be final when it argues that various other interlocutory orders of this Court are necessarily final. See Obj., ¶¶ 3, 67. Notably, the issue of finality in this context is not as simple as HCMLP would have this Court think. In chapter 11 cases, there typically is no "final judgment" the way there is in an ordinary civil case in federal district court. For that reason, courts have held that the order confirming the chapter 11 plan of reorganization is the "final judgment" in bankruptcy. See, e.g., In re Shank, 569 B.R. 238, 249 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2017) (citing United Student Aid Funds, Ins. v. Espinosa, 559 U.S. 260, 269 (2010)). The Plan was confirmed and became effective more than a year ago in this case. The vast majority of HCMLP's assets have been liquidated. Unsecured creditors have been paid a significant percentage of their claims. Yet HCMLP would seemingly have the courts conclude that that the case still is not "final" for purposes of appeal.

to Mr. Dondero is "controlled" by him, including CLOH and the DAF.[6] Moreover, the whole point is that the Court's animus toward Mr. Dondero results in the Court treating all of Mr. Dondero's affiliates (or presumed affiliates) as inherently suspicious, leading to rulings that are at odds with the evidence and the law. This is precisely what happened at the CLO Holdco hearing.[7]

Second, HCMLP's argument that CLOH's money was deposited into the Court registry because CLOH wanted it there is disingenuous at best. Indeed, even the Debtor argued to the Court at the hearing that the money should be released to CLOH. See March 4, 2020 Hr'g Tr. at 17:8-22, HCMLP App'x at 3234. However, when it became apparent that the Court was disinclined to release the money, Mr. Dondero's counsel proposed that, in the event the Court denied the motion, the funds at issue should be distributed into the registry of the Court as an alternative to permitting HCMLP to retain them. See id. at 3260. CLOH and the DAF certainly did not request that the Court retain the funds in its registry indefinitely, nor did they argue that depositing the funds in the Court's registry was the correct course of action.

HCMLP also argues that the Court's actions were not biased because CLOH sought a release of its money from the Court's registry less than a month later, something HCMLP deems "evidence of CLOH's bad faith." Obj., ¶ 19. Accusing Mr. Dondero and any entity connected to him of "bad faith" is another favorite tactic of HCMLP, likely because the Court has demonstrated its receptiveness to accusations of bad faith against Mr. Dondero, even when there is no valid basis for or evidence supporting the accusation. But in this particular instance, the Court did not find that CLOH was acting in bad faith by seeking a release of money that indisputably belonged to it. And again, CLOH never agreed that its money could remain in the Court's registry indefinitely. In any event, HCMLP's argument in this regard is particularly misleading because HCMLP agreed to the release of CLOH's money. It did so because there was no good faith reason to refuse to do so. Notably, although the parties objecting to the release of CLOH's funds indisputably had no legal basis to object and no right to the funds (i.e., zero ownership interest in the funds), at no time did the Court comment that their objections were "Rule 11 frivolous" or threaten the objectors with sanctions.

[6] Indeed, one of the reasons that the Court refused to release CLOH's money, despite the Debtor's argument that it should do so, is because Matt Clemente, on behalf of the Unsecured Creditors Committee, argued at the hearing that the Court should disallow the distributions to CLOH and the DAF because those entities were "owned and/or controlled by Mr. Dondero." HCMLP App'x, at 3245.

[7] HCMLP argues that "Movants cannot have it both ways" and "[e]ither CLOH and the DAF are controlled by Mr. Dondero or they are not." Obj., ¶ 18. They are not "related" but are "connected." But it is HCMLP that is trying to have it both ways: it has argued throughout the bankruptcy proceedings that CLOH and the DAF, like many other entities, are "controlled" by Mr. Dondero, but they take the position in their Objection that the Court's treatment of CLOH and the DAF has nothing to do with him. In any event, the Plan (a document drafted by HCMLP) identifies CLOH and the DAF as "Related Parties," meaning that HCMLP views Mr. Dondero, CLOH, and the DAF as operating in lock-step. See Plan at 14.

The December 2020 Restriction Motion. HCMLP also argues at length about why the Court's actions at the hearing on the Restriction Motion do not support recusal. Obj., ¶¶ 51-56. In particular, HCMLP cites a string of "admissions" from one of HCMLP's former Executive Vice Presidents, Dustin Norris, to argue that Mr. Norris provided "all of the evidence the Court needed to reach its conclusion" that Mr. Dondero was the sole person responsible for filing the Restriction Motion (which sought to prevent the liquidation of certain CLO assets). Obj., ¶¶ 54-55. But HCMLP conveniently fails to include all of the testimony Mr. Norris provided regarding the decision by the Retail Funds and the Advisors to file the Restriction Motion.[8] Mr. Norris actually testified that, while Mr. Dondero vocalized concern about HCMLP's decision to liquidate the CLO assets, the Advisors' internal legal team, compliance team, and Mr. Norris working with outside counsel, along with senior management of Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors decided to pursue filing the Restriction Motion. See December 16, 2020 Hr'g Tr. at 29:21-30:1, HCMLP App'x at 3368. This is the critical testimony, and the Court simply ignored because it did not fit the narrative that Mr. Dondero is the bad actor behind every legal motion made in HCMLP's bankruptcy proceeding and nobody around him is able to make their own informed decision.

[8] The "Retail Funds" are Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, and NexPoint Capital, Inc. The "Advisors" are Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. Renewed Mot. at 19-20. Although there is no evidence of record that these entities are or were owned or controlled by Mr. Dondero (and HCMLP cites to none), in keeping with its tactic of arguing that every entity is "controlled" by Mr. Dondero, HCMLP labels the Retail Funds and Advisors the "Dondero Parties" and argues that the Retail Funds are "controlled" by him. Obj., ¶¶ 53, 63. They are not.

The January 2021 Injunctive Relief Hearing. Drawing on one of its favorite unsupported themes (i.e., Mr. Dondero as puppet master), HCMLP next argues that the Court's treatment of the Retail Funds and Advisors at the January 2021 injunctive relief hearing was appropriate because "Mr. Dondero caused the Advisors and Retail Funds to continue interfering with, and unjustifiably threatening, Highland." Obj., ¶ 57. Of course, HCMLP cites no evidence for this accusation. Then HCMLP doubles down and it accuses Movants of "failing to disclose key facts" relating to the hearing. Obj., ¶ 59. The first such "fact" is HCMLP's argument that Movants "now admit" the K&L Gates Letters were improper. Obj., ¶ 60. In support of this argument, HCMLP quotes a short-hand description of the K&L Gates Letters from Movants' original recusal motion. Id., ¶ 60 n.40. Movants most certainly did not and do not admit that the K&L Gates Letters were improper. Those letters did nothing more than tell the Debtor that the Retail Funds and Advisors intended to seek the Court's permission to lift the automatic stay to exercise their contractual rights.

HCMLP nonetheless argues (again, under the guise of "fact") that the K&L Gates Letters were "quintessentially vexatious and sanctionable conduct" because they sought previously denied relief through alternative means. Obj., ¶ 60 (citing Nix v. Major League Baseball, 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 104770, at *58-65 (S.D. Tex. June 13, 2022)). It is unclear how a letter explaining the Retail Funds' and Advisors' intent to seek Court permission to act could possibly be considered vexatious, and the case cited by HCMLP does not clear up that mystery. In Nix, the plaintiff filed multiple repetitive lawsuits in various jurisdictions and also lawsuits in the same jurisdiction alleging slightly different causes of action. 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS, at *58-65. That is vastly different from the situation involved here, where the Retail Funds and Advisors took non-judicial action by asking the Debtor not to liquidate CLO assets at below market value and advising the Debtor that they would seek Court intervention if necessary.

The January 2021 Examiner Motion. HCMLP also argues that the Court's disenfranchisement of Movants makes no difference because Movants "admit" they acted for an improper purpose in seeking the appointment of an examiner in advance of the February 2021 confirmation hearing. Obj., ¶ 67 (citing Movants' original recusal motion). Specifically, according to HCMLP, Movants "admit" that they filed a motion for an examiner "to force a delay of the long-scheduled Confirmation Hearing." Id. But the quote HCMLP cites (which is from Movants' original recusal motion as opposed to the Renewed Motion) is taken out of context. The very next sentence of the original recusal motion explains that Movants sought to have the examiner motion heard on an expedited basis to prevent delay of the confirmation hearing, which might occur if the motion was heard on an ordinary schedule. See Original Recusal Mot., Dkt. 2061, ¶ 37.[9] Rather than provide expedited relief—something the Court has done many times at HCMLP's request—the Court set the hearing on Movants' motion on a date after the scheduled confirmation hearing, ensuring that Movants could not be meaningfully heard because, as the Court knew, an examiner cannot be appointed after plan confirmation.[10]

Orders Requiring Mr. Dondero to Appear. HCMLP does not meaningfully dispute that

[9] Notwithstanding that HCMLP ignores the context of the quote it relies on (which actually shows that Movants' intent was the opposite of delay), HCMLP deems Movants' act of filing the examiner motion "quintessentially vexatious." Obj., ¶ 67.

[10] For that reason, HCMLP's observation that "[n]o party appealed the denial of the Examiner Motion" makes no sense. As HCMLP's counsel is no doubt aware, an examiner cannot be appointed after plan confirmation, so any appeal of the Court's order would have been futile and no doubt would have been labeled by HCMLP as "vexatious."

the Court took the extraordinary measure of requiring Mr. Dondero to appear at all hearings, including hearings that had nothing to do with him. Instead, HCMLP argues (without citation) that Mr. Dondero proved that the Court's order was appropriate when he "subsequently failed to appear at a hearing thereby validating the Court's concerns." Obj., ¶ 76. This accusation is highly disingenuous. As Mr. Dondero's counsel explained on the record at that hearing, the motion at issue (a motion to continue) was set on an expedited basis, Mr. Dondero's counsel was not aware that Mr. Dondero needed to attend non-evidentiary hearings in the main bankruptcy case and, therefore, counsel failed to coordinate with Mr. Dondero to apprise him of the hearing and his need to appear, which counsel admitted was an "oversight" on counsel's part.[11] In other words, there is no evidence that Mr. Dondero deliberately flouted the Court's order. Notwithstanding counsel's admission that the mistake was his, the Court sua sponte issued a new order requiring Mr. Dondero to appear at every hearing going forward, whether substantive or not, and whether he took a position on the issue to be heard or not. See Order dated May 24, 2021, Dkt. 2362.

HCMLP also strenuously argues that the Court "never ordered Nancy Dondero to appear at any hearings." Obj., ¶ 77. But HCMLP admits that the Court did order the trustee of The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy") and Get Good Trust to attend any hearings involving those entities or hearings at which those entities took a position. Order, Dkt. 2458. And the Court knew at that point that Mr. Dondero's sister, Nancy Dondero, was the acting trustee of Dugaboy. The Court only ordered the trustees to appear because it "ha[d] concerns whether these Trusts [were] simply acting at the direction of Mr. Dondero and are not independent parties." Id. at 3. In other words, the Court's order intentionally targeted Mr. Dondero.[12] In the more than three years

[12] HCMLP also argues that the Court's order requiring the trustees for Dugaboy and Get Good to appear at hearings was much narrower than the order regarding Mr. Dondero. Obj., ¶ 77. While the Court did not order the trustees to attend all hearings, the order was nonetheless incredibly broad. It required Ms. Dondero as trustee to attend "all future since this bankruptcy proceeding began, the Court has not ordered any other party to attend all hearings.

Other Supposed "Facts". In addition to these factual misstatements and distortions, HCMLP also fails to cite evidence and, on numerous occasions, couches allegations as fact. By way of example only:

- HCMLP makes numerous statements of supposed "fact" without citing any evidence to support the allegation, including, but not limited to: Obj., ¶¶ 28 (Mr. Dondero and his entities are legion), 30 (chapter 11 filed in Delaware because Mr. Dondero thought it would be a more hospitable forum), 37 (settlement was necessary due to Dondero entities' history of self-dealing), 42 (Mr. Dondero and his entities have a history of litigiousness supported only by a footnote that is further factual argument rather than evidence to support such an allegation), 57 (Mr. Dondero continued to cause advisors to interfere with HCMLP), 63 (Mr. Dondero controls all of the Dondero entities and causes them to attempt to reassert control over HCMLP), 82 (Movants filed the HV Complaint).

- HCMLP repeatedly attributes actions to the Movants that the Movants did not take and calls every party it describes a "Dondero party," again without citation to any evidence of ownership, control, or even involvement. See, e.g., Obj., ¶ 1, 53, 63, 82, 85.

- In describing the Court's "experience with Mr. Dondero," HCMLP cites (as one example of Mr. Dondero's prior "bad acts") that "Mr. Dondero allegedly orchestrated a fraudulent transfer of assets that left the Acis debtors judgment proof." Obj., ¶ 29. It is unclear how an unsubstantiated "allegation" could support this Court's opinions of Mr. Dondero, but this highlights the problem.

HCMLP's recitation of supposed facts falls well short of providing any viable reason to reject Movants' Renewed Motion.

E. HCMLP's Factual Arguments Only Underscore Why Recusal Is Necessary

What is perhaps most telling about HCMLP's recitation of "facts" is its tendency to repeatedly emphasize those points that it believes will resonate with this Court, even where the hearings in th[e] Bankruptcy Case in which the Trusts have taken or are taking a position." Order, Dkt. 2458, at 3. The order further clarified: "This directive does not apply merely to evidentiary hearings or "substantive" hearings, and [sic] it applies to the underlying bankruptcy case as well as related adversary proceedings in which the Trusts are parties or take positions." Id.

Most notably, HCMLP repeats its allegations that the problem here is not judicial bias but "the never-ending, meritless, vindictive, and vexatious litigation strategy that Mr. Dondero stubbornly clings to regardless of the burdens imposed on the judicial system, the havoc wrought, and the damages inflicted on himself, Highland's creditors, and even his own steadfast loyalists." Obj., ¶ 2. That statement is remarkably ironic, for a number of reasons. First, as HCMLP acknowledges, "[t]his Court did not find or conclude that Movants are 'vexatious litigants.'" Id., ¶ 71 n. 43 (emphasis in original).[13] Nonetheless, HCMLP uses that adjective to describe Mr. Dondero no less than 12 times in its Objection alone.[14] HCMLP goes as far as using an out-of-context quote to describe Movants as "quintessentially vexatious."[15] "Vexatious" is also the adjective most used by HCMLP and its counsel to describe Mr. Dondero when arguing before this Court.[16] Consequently, it only makes sense that the adjective: (1) found its way into the Court's order confirming HCMLP's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (as Modified) (the "Plan"), (2) provided the purported justification for the Court to adopt a sweeping channeling provision, and [13] Under Texas law, a Court "'may find a plaintiff a vexatious litigant if the defendant shows that there is not a reasonable probability that the plaintiff will prevail in the litigation against the defendant' and one of three additional prerequisites has occurred within the last seven years … These additional elements include (1) the filing of at least five suits as a pro se litigant that have been dismissed against the plaintiff; (2) relitigating a case pro se after having previously received an adverse and final determination; and (3) a prior finding in state or federal court that the plaintiff is a vexatious litigant in an action concerning the same or substantially similar facts." Baldwin v. Zurich Am. Ins. Co., 2017 WL 2963515, *4 (W.D. Tex. July 11, 2017) (citing Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 11.054).

[14] Obj., ¶¶ 2, 60, 67, 70, 71, 95, 97, 100; see also id., ¶ 42 (describing the "culture of litigiousness" under Mr. Dondero's control).

[16] See, e.g., Dkt. 1828, ¶ 22 ("Exculpation is particularly appropriate in this case to stem the tide of frivolous and vexatious litigation against the Exculpated Parties which Dondero and his Related Entities are seeking so desperately to continue to pursue."); Dkt. 3487 at 2 ("abruptly moving to withdraw its Dondero-signed proof of claim after two years of litigation, and after taking Highland's deposition but days before its own Witnesses were to be deposed, is a textbook example of vexatiousness—and is just the latest instance of Mr. Dondero bringing motions, or asserting claims, or filing objections, only to withdraw them after forcing Highland to spend time, money, and effort addressing them."); Dkt. 3550, ¶ 22 ("The Gatekeeper was created to give Highland, among others, breathing room to consummate the Plan and manage Highland's assets free from Mr. Dondero's vexatious and harassing litigation for the benefit of all creditors.").

(3) has been subsequently regurgitated by appellate courts, as if there has been some finding or legal basis to declare Mr. Dondero "vexatious."[17] There has not, which is why the Court's ubiquitous use of the term is so problematic and so emblematic of the Court's bias.

HCMLP likewise repeats the same tired accusation that a myriad of "courts and arbitration panels" in various states and foreign jurisdictions have adjudicated claims or ruled against Mr. Dondero. Obj., ¶¶ 1, 6.[18] HCMLP does not cite any examples of such judgments or rulings, because there are none.[19] That reality does not seem to bother HCMLP; instead, HCMLP merely argues that the actual parties involved in those legal battles were controlled by Mr. Dondero, so the Court should attribute any bad findings to him. Obj., ¶ 28 n.7. Despite being legally and factually unsupported, the Court has previously adopted that logic, which is why HCMLP employs it here.

More importantly, it makes no difference whether other courts have ruled against parties controlled by Mr. Dondero on other issues. The Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution requires an impartial and disinterested tribunal. Caperton v. A.T. Massey Coal Co., 556 U.S. 868, 877 (2009) ("It is axiomatic that a fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process."). Section 455 was enacted because litigants "ought not have to face a judge where there is a reasonable question of impartiality." H. Rep. No. 1453, 93rd Cong., 2d Sess. 1 (1974), reprinted in 1974 U.S. Code Cong. & Admin. News 6351, 6355. Movants are entitled to fair treatment in this Court on the evidentiary record actually before it.

[18] See also id., ¶ 28 (claiming that "[t]he adverse rulings against Mr. Dondero and his entities are legion," but citing none).

[19] The only actual examples cited by HCMLP are the arbitration award issued in favor of the Redeemer Committee against HCMLP, and a discovery ruling issued by the Delaware Chancery Court in a totally separate proceeding. Obj., ¶¶ 26-27 & nn.25-26. But again, neither the arbitration award or the discovery ruling were issued against Mr. Dondero.

III. HCMLP'S LEGAL ARGUMENTS ARE MERITLESS

A. HCMLP's Argument Regarding Timeliness Is Wrong

Throughout its Objection, HCMLP repeatedly references the timing of Movants' Renewed Motion, arguing that the length of time that has passed since various rulings issued by the Court makes the Renewed Motion "per se" untimely. Obj., ¶¶ 102, 108. HCMLP's argument misstates the law and misses the point.

As a preliminary matter, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has never adopted a "per se untimeliness" rule. To the contrary, the Fifth Circuit has expressly "declined" to do so. United States v. Sanford, 157 F.3d 987, 988 (5th Cir. 1998). Indeed, even in Hill v. Schilling, 495 F. App'x 480, 483 (5th Cir. 2012)—the case cited by HCMLP for its "per se untimeliness" argument—the Fifth Circuit did not adopt or apply a per se rule. Instead, the Court, faced with a single alleged act of judicial impropriety, explained that "the closest thing to per se untimeliness" occurs "when a party already knows the facts purportedly showing an appearance of impropriety but waits until after an adverse decision has been made by the judge before raising the issue of recusal." Hill, 495 F. App'x at 483 (emphasis added). In Hill, unlike here, the movants sought recusal based solely on their allegation that the trial judge's spouse held an economic interest in one of the parties. Id. Despite knowing about the economic interest for some time, the movants proceeded through trial and did not move to recuse the judge until after receiving an unfavorable judgment. Id. In that very different circumstance, the Fifth Circuit agreed that the motion to recuse was untimely.[20]

[20] The entirety of the case law cited by HCMLP is similarly inapposite. In each of those cases, there was a single alleged basis for recusal, either the judge's personal relationship with one of the parties or the judge's economic interest in the outcome of the litigation. See Sanford, 157 F.3d at 988 (recusal based on fact that one party's counsel previously testified against judge); United States v. Olis, 571 F. Supp. 2d 777, 783 (5th Cir. 2008) (recusal based on judge's alleged social contacts with interested parties); Grambling Univ. Nat'l Alumni Ass'n v. Bd. of Supervisors for La. System, 286 F. App'x 864, 867 (5th Cir. 2008) (recusal based on court's prior working relationship with counsel, a former judge of the same court); Travelers Ins. Co. v. Liljeberg Enters., Inc., 38 F.3d 1404, 1410 (5th Cir. 1994)

The Fifth Circuit's reasoning in Hill (and the remaining cases cited by Movants) has no application to this case, where Movants assert a pattern of conduct that, taken as a whole, reveals both the appearance of bias and actual animus towards Movants. See Davis v. Board of School Com'rs of Mobile Cnty., 517 F.2d 1044, 1051 (5th Cir. 1975) (grounds for recusal exist "where such pervasive bias and prejudice is shown by otherwise judicial conduct as would constitute bias against a party"). Nor is this a situation where Movants have employed a "wait and see" approach and only sought recusal after an adverse judgment. As HCMLP itself argues, nothing in this case is "final," the Kirschner litigation (which the Court has recommended it should retain through trial) is in its nascent stages, the Court continues to preside over several other adversary proceedings involving Movants, and the Plan allows the Court to sit as gatekeeper over any potential disputes even touching upon the Plan. Movants seek recusal now because the Court's bias and animus represents a continuing and ongoing harm that can only be remedied if a non-biased fact-finder presides over the myriad proceedings still before the Court. There is no timing issue under these circumstances.

Further, HCMLP's contention that concerns of judicial economy render the Renewed Motion untimely is also wrong. As Movants explained in their opening brief, the goal of 28 U.S.C. § 455 is to promote public confidence in the judicial system by avoiding even the appearance of partiality. See Renewed Mot. at 19-20; see also Levitt v. Univ. of Texas at El Paso, 847 F.2d 221, 226 (5th Cir. 1988). For that reason, courts addressing this issue have consistently chosen impartiality over judicial economy, including in cases where recusal was sought only on remand after trial. See Renewed Mot. at 23 & n.122 (citing cases). As these courts have explained, "the gain in protecting against actual bias, prejudice, or conflict of interest outweighs the loss to judicial economy . . ." See, e.g., York, 888 F.2d at 1055. Judicial economy is not more important than impartial justice and certainly is no reason to deny the Renewed Motion.

B. Movants Do Not Rely On Extrajudicial Bias, Nor Is It Required For Recusal

HCMLP next contends that the "core" of the Renewed Motion is extrajudicial bias, which it claims does not exist. Obj., ¶ 113. This is a gross mischaracterization of Movants' arguments. Movants expressly do not rely on extrajudicial bias as the basis for recusal, nor is extrajudicial bias a prerequisite to recusal, as Movants explained in their opening brief. See Renewed Mot. at 20 n.102, 103. Rather, in Liteky, a case on which HCMLP principally relies, the Supreme Court clarified that extrajudicial bias, while a common basis for establishing grounds for recusal, is not the exclusive means. Likeky v. United States, 510 U.S. 540, 551, 554 (1994) ("The fact that an opinion held by a judge derives form a source outside judicial proceedings is not a necessary condition for 'bias or prejudice' recusal, since predispositions developed during the course of a trial will sometimes (albeit rarely) suffice."). It bears repeating that "judicial remarks during the course of a trial" that "reveal such a high degree of favoritism or antagonism as to make fair judgment impossible," will support a bias or partiality challenge. Id. at 555; Renewed Mot. at 21. The Fifth Circuit recognized this "pervasive bias" exception to the extrajudicial bias doctrine even before Liteky. See Davis, 517 F.2d at 1051.

In any event, as HCMLP acknowledges, Movants do point to at least one instance in which the Court relied on an extrajudicial source—a news article that the Judge read—to make inquiries about whether HCMLP applied for or received COVID-related Payroll Protection Plan ("PPP") loans. Obj., ¶ 46 n. 64. HCMLP nonetheless argues that the Court's reliance on an extrajudicial source is not evidence of bias because the Court took no action against Mr. Dondero or Movants and only required HCMLP to respond to the Court's inquiries. Id. HCMLP misses the point. The reason that Movants cite this particular example is because the Court raised the issue of PPP loans only because of the Court's unfavorable perception (untethered to any factual basis) of Mr. Dondero. Specifically, the Court stated that it had "extrajudicial knowledge thanks to keeping up with current events" and openly questioned in Court whether "Mr. Dondero or Highland affiliates" improperly obtained PPP loans.[21] An exchange then occurred between the Court and HCMLP's counsel in which HCMLP's counsel represented that the Debtor had not obtained a PPP loan but that he had "no way of answering" whether "Mr. Dondero, or any of his affiliated funds" had done so.[22] As a result, the Court required Debtor's counsel to investigate whether any such loan had been obtained and to report back to the Court, explaining "you can probably imagine the different things going through my brain," and clarifying, "I'm not expecting it to be Highland Capital Management, LP."[23] In short, the Court directed HCMLP to investigate Mr. Dondero and his affiliates for suspected wrongdoing based on an admittedly extrajudicial source. That is evidence of bias based on an extrajudicial source that weighs in favor of recusal.

C. There Can Be No Doubt Of The Court's Antagonism For Movants

HCMLP next argues that there is no basis to find that the Court has demonstrated the degree of favoritism or antagonism necessary for recusal. Obj., ¶ 22. However, in making this argument, HCMLP cites little more than the Court's own subjective denial of bias. See Obj., ¶ 12 (quoting Court's statements that it has "the utmost respect for [Movants]" and "no disrespect for Mr. Dondero"); id. at ¶ 119 (noting the Court's characterization of its statements as mere "clashes between a court and counsel" that are "simply insufficient" for recusal). That cursory response ignores the substantial body of statements made by the Court throughout these proceedings, including statements where the Court accuses Mr. Dondero and his affiliates of wrongdoing (often based on little more than suspicion), describes them as bad actors, and determines that they lack credibility in virtually every situation in which they are called to give testimony.[24]

HCMLP's response also ignores the substantial body of case law cited in Movants' opening brief, which contain examples of bias warranting recusal that were far less egregious than what has occurred in this case. If, as HCMLP insists, the Court focuses on the "entirety of the proceedings" (Obj., ¶ 120), there can be no doubt that the Court's statements amount to much more than mere "clashes between a court and counsel." The Court's negative statements about Mr. Dondero and his affiliates are so consistent and pervasive that they have been regurgitated ad nauseum by his detractors, adopted by HCMLP as a method of bolstering almost every argument it makes before this Court, and repeated by appellate courts even when this Court's statements do not amount to true "findings" of fact. By way of summary, the Court has:

- admitted that the negative opinions the Court formed about Mr. Dondero during the Acis Bankruptcy cannot be excised from the Court's mind;
- made repeated references to proceedings in the Acis Bankruptcy to justify findings in the HCMLP proceedings that are not otherwise supported by this bankruptcy record;
- made repeated negative statements about Mr. Dondero, as well as entities and individuals that the Court perceives to have some relationship to Mr. Dondero, in connection with the Court's ruling;
- repeatedly threatened Mr. Dondero and his counsel with sanctions, questioned Movants' good faith, or concluded Movants were acting in bad faith for simply: (1) defending lawsuits and motions; (2) asserting valid legal positions; and/or (3) preserving their rights, including in the exact manner in which others have been permitted to do so (e.g., the US Trustee's objections to the Plan);

[24] See, e.g., January 26, 2021 H'rg Tr. at 240:14-20 (The Court to Mr. Dondero: "But the more I hear, the more I feel you're just trying to burn the house down. Okay? Maybe it's an either/or proposition with you: I'll either get my company back or I'll burn the house down. That's what it feels like."); Confirmation Order, Dkt. 1943 at ¶ 19 ("[T]he Bankruptcy Court questions [the objectors'] good faith. Specifically, the Bankruptcy Court considers them all to be marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero.").

- sanctioned Mr. Dondero in connection with a motion that he and others testified he had no role in filing or responsibility for authorizing;

- prophylactically sanctioned Mr. Dondero and other entities and counsel if and when they assert their lawful appellate rights;

- disregarded the presumption that related corporations have institutional independence and concluded, without supporting evidence, that any entity the Court demes to be connected to or controlled by Mr. Dondero (i.e., including highly regulated, publicly-traded funds governed by independent boards) is essentially no more than a tool of Mr. Dondero;

- disregarded the testimony of any witness with a connection to Mr. Dondero as per se less credible, which includes attorneys and persons who owe fiduciary duties and ethical obligations; and

- ruled against Mr. Dondero and Movants at ever possible opportunity, regardless of the evidence and the testimony before the Court.

In its Renewed Motion, Movants cited the Court to several cases in which the courts held that the same type of obvious antagonism displayed here was sufficient to require recusal. Renewed Mot. at 7 n.32, 9 n.40, 22 n.114. HCMLP does not attempt to address those cases, much less distinguish them. And many of those cases involve much less antagonism than what is at issue here. See e.g., Johnson v. Sawyer, 120 F.3d 1307, 1334-38 (5th Cir. 1997) (appearance of bias found based on judicial remarks like: the court had a "bone to pick" with the Internal Revenue Service; questioning the witness's integrity because the testimony contradicted the court's prior order; expressing concern post-trail about the conduct of the lawyers; attributing assertions to the wrong counsel); Sentis Grp., Inc., Coral Grp., Inc. v. Shell Oil Co, 559 F.3d 888, 904-05 (8th Cir. 2009) (a "sufficiently high degree of antagonism" was found where the court directed profanities at Plaintiffs or Plaintiffs' counsel, denied Plaintiffs a meaningful opportunity to respond to Defendants' argument that misconstrued the court's prior orders, and dismissed Plaintiff's attempt to explain those orders); see also United States v. Microsoft Corp., 56 F.3d 1448, 1464 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (noting "the district judge's failure to accord any weight to Microsoft's interests in making its determination adds to the appearance of bias in this case").

The test for disqualification is simple: would it appear to a reasonable person that the court's impartiality may be questioned? 28 U.S.C. § 455(a); Liljeberg v. Health Servs. Acquisition Corp., 486 U.S. 847, 850 (2001). A cursory review of the record from these proceedings makes the answer to that question an easy "yes" here. The Court's orders targeting Mr. Dondero (and those the Court deems associated with him) compromise the appearance of justice. Rorrer v. City of Stow, 743 F.3d 1025, 1049-50 (6th Cir. 2014) (finding the appearance of impartiality from the court's issuance of a one-sided discovery order that limited the number of witness plaintiff may call without explanation or apparent rationale). So do the Court's consistent expressions suggesting it has already decided Mr. Dondero is a bad actor. See Matter of Johnson, 921 F.2d 585, 587 (5th Cir. 1991) (judge abused discretion in declining to recuse where the record included statements that the judge "all but made up [his] mind as to what he was going to do in the case and that he was "not in the least inclined to be neutral"); United States v. Bergrin, 682 F.3d 261, 283-84 (3d Cir. 2012) (the court's repeated expressions of discomfort with the manner in which an indictment was plead allowed the court's impartiality to reasonably be questioned); United States v. Whitman, 209 F.3d 619, 625-26 (6th Cir. 2000) (the court's impromptu lecture of defendant's counsel's attitude during proceedings "had the unfortunate effect of creating the impression that the impartial administration of the law was not his primary concern"). Viewed wholistically, this record is more than sufficient to raise the appearance of partiality.

D. HCMLP Mischaracterizes The Alternative Relief Sought By Movants

Finally, HCMLP argues that this Court has no authority to grant Movants' request to issue a ruling on Movants' Renewed Motion that eliminates the retention of jurisdiction language that appeared in the Court's prior order denying recusal. According to HCMLP, "it is not for this Court to determine whether its orders are final and appealable," and the Court "has no authority" to enter an order of the type requested by Movants. Again, HCMLP mischaracterizes the relief sought by Movants and is wrong.

Contrary to HCMLP's argument, Movants do not expect (and do not ask) this Court to make any ruling that its order on recusal is final, or to otherwise include language of finality. Movants merely ask the Court to eliminate any existing "reservation" language that could be construed by an appellate court as rendering the order non-final on the issue. As Movants have now explained multiple times, when Movants appealed this Court's denial of their original motion to recuse, the District Court held it lacked jurisdiction to consider the appeal because the Bankruptcy Court's ruling was non-final. See Renewed Mot. at 2 & n.6; see also Movants' App'x, Ex. U at 5:11-6:9. In describing the Bankruptcy Court's order, the District Court expressly noted the last sentence of that order, in which the Bankruptcy Court "reserve[d] the right to supplement or amend th[e] ruling." Id.; see also Dondero v. Hon. Stacey G. Jernigan, Civ. Action No. 3-21-CV-0879-K, Dkt. 39 at 2. HCMLP itself argued on appeal that this reservation of rights language was important and impeded finality because "Judge Jernigan's potential future supplementation or amendment of the Recusal Order 'might change the calculus' of the order." See id., Dkt. 31 at 5. Movants simply ask this Court to remove any perceived impediment to appellate review.

For that reason, HCMLP's argument that the Court does not have authority to give the alternative relief requested by Movants makes no sense. This Court can obviously craft its orders using whatever language (or eliminating any language) it sees fit. That is all Movants ask the Court to do. HCMLP's final argument should be rejected.

IV. CONCLUSION

It is time to put motion practice relating to recusal to an end. Movants respectfully request that the Court consider the entirety of the record supporting recusal and issue an order on Movants' motion that accounts for the lengthy history of this case and the whole body of evidence presented.

Movants also request that the Court issue an order that does not contain reservation of rights or other limiting language that could be later interpreted by an appellate court as an impediment to appellate jurisdiction.

Counsel for Petitioner

QUESTION PRESENTED

Section 524(e) of the Bankruptcy Code states that the "discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt." According to the Fifth Circuit, even though the text refers to the effect of a discharge rather than to the powers of a bankruptcy court, section 524(e) "categorically bars" a court from confirming any chapter 11 plan of reorganization that releases third parties from liability, either in full or through their limited exculpation for negligence claims relating to the administration of the bankruptcy estate as in this case.

In the opinion below, the Fifth Circuit acknowledged that, by contrast, the Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, and Eleventh Circuits "read[] § 524(e) to allow varying degrees of limited third-party exculpations."

The question presented is whether section 524(e), as its text suggests, states only the effect of a discharge on third parties' liability for a debtor's own debts or instead, as the Fifth Circuit holds, constrains the power of a court when confirming a plan of reorganization.

PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDING

Petitioner is Highland Capital Management, L.P., the reorganized chapter 11 debtor in the bankruptcy proceedings below, and the appellee in the court of appeals.

Respondents are NexPoint Advisors, L.P., NexPoint Asset Management, L.P., Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, Highland Global Allocation Fund, NexPoint Capital, Incorporated, James Dondero, The Dugaboy Investment Trust, and Get Good Trust. Respondents were the appellants in the court of appeals.

CORPORATE DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

OPINIONS BELOW

The opinion of the court of appeals (App., infra, 1a-38a) is reported at 48 F.4th 419. The order of the bankruptcy court confirming the plan of reorganization (App., infra, 39a-160a) is unreported.

JURISDICTION

The court of appeals entered judgment on August 19, 2022. App., infra, 161a. On September 7, 2022, the court issued a revised opinion without entering a new judgment. On November 8, 2022, Justice Alito extended the time to file a petition for a writ of certiorari to and including January 5, 2023.

This Court's jurisdiction is invoked under 28 U.S.C. § 1254(1).

STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Section 524 of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 524, provides in relevant part:

(a) A discharge in a case under this title—

(1) voids any judgment at any time obtained, to the extent that such judgment is a determination of the personal liability of the debtor with respect to any debt discharged under section 727, 944, 1141, 1192, 1228, or 1328 of this title, whether or not discharge of such debt is waived;

(2) operates as an injunction against the commencement or continuation of an action, the employment of process, or an act, to collect, recover or offset any such debt as a personal liability of the debtor, whether or not discharge of such debt is waived; and

(3) operates as an injunction against the commencement or continuation of an action, the employment of process, or an act, to collect or recover from, or offset against, property of the debtor of the kind specified in section 541(a)(2) of this title that is acquired after the commencement of the case, on account of any allowable community claim, except a community claim that is excepted from discharge under section 523, 1192, 1228(a)(1), or 1328(a)(1), or that would be so excepted, determined in accordance with the provisions of sections 523(c) and 523(d) of this title, in a case concerning the debtor's spouse commenced on the date of the filing of the petition in the case concerning the debtor, whether or not discharge of the debt based on such community claim is waived.

(e) Except as provided in subsection (a)(3) of this section, discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt.

STATEMENT

The court below, on direct appeal from the bankruptcy court, reversed in part an order confirming a chapter 11 plan of reorganization because the plan contained an exculpation clause that included non-debtors. That clause established that specified persons and entities that guided petitioner during its bankruptcy case would be held to a standard of care excluding their liability for simple negligence.[1] Following circuit precedent—with which most other courts of appeals have disagreed—the Fifth Circuit held that section 524(e) of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), prohibits chapter 11 reorganization plans from exculpating or releasing non-debtors from liability, except as is specifically authorized by some other provision of the Bankruptcy Code. As the court of appeals acknowledged, "[t]he simple fact of the matter is that there is a circuit split" on that issue. App., infra, 30a.

The Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, and Eleventh Circuits all disagree with the Fifth. In those circuits, section 524(e) is not understood to constrain bankruptcy courts from limiting the liability of non-debtors under a chapter 11 plan in appropriate circumstances.

The Fifth and Tenth Circuits, however, read section 524(e) as prohibiting chapter 11 plans from protecting almost all non-debtors from liability in almost any circumstance, even if doing so is vital to the success of the plan and viability of the reorganized debtor.

This deep and intractable dispute among the circuits turns on what section 524(e) means when it states that the "discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt." 11 U.S.C. § 524(e). The seven-circuit majority view is that section 524(e) merely confirms the effect of a discharge under subsection (a) of the same section, id. § 524(a): such a discharge does not automatically affect creditors' rights against any other persons or entities also liable on the same debt.

[1] "Exculpation clauses" are distinct from third-party releases. Whereas a non-debtor release "eliminat[es]" a non-debtor's liability "altogether," In re PWS Holding Corp., 228 F.3d 224, 247 (3d Cir. 2000), an exculpation clause is a limited release that sets a standard of care, id. at 245. Petitioner's plan contained a non-debtor exculpation, not a third-party release. As explained below, however, the Fifth Circuit treats 11 U.S.C. § 524(e) as equally prohibiting exculpation clauses and third-party releases, except as applied to a narrow set of parties. For the question presented by this petition, therefore, the distinctions between exculpation clauses and non-debtor releases matter little.

Section 524(e) does not, under the majority view, impose any independent restriction on the bankruptcy court's broad, equitable authority. Among other sources granting that authority, the Bankruptcy Code explicitly empowers a court confirming a plan of reorganization to "include any other appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of" the Bankruptcy Code. 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(6).

By contrast, the two-circuit minority view, applied by the court of appeals below, is that section 524(e) states not just the effect of a discharge itself but also a broad limitation of the courts' power to protect non-debtors in any way except under a specific grant of authority elsewhere in the Code.

The majority view is correct, and the decision below is wrong. Section 524(e) simply states that the discharge of a debtor's liability on a debt does not itself affect any other creditor's liability on that same debt. Section 524(e) uses no mandatory language at all; it does not tell the court or the parties what provisions a plan "shall" or "shall not" include. In other words, section 524(e) is simply a saving clause intended to clarify that a debtor's statutorily defined discharge is limited in scope to the debtor itself.

This is an important and recurring issue of bankruptcy law, as is demonstrated by the depth and duration of the circuit split. The facts of this case further demonstrate that importance.

Petitioner is an SEC-registered investment advisor that, during its bankruptcy, continued to manage billions of dollars of financial assets. Petitioner's professionals and related entities now face a barrage of litigation about their bankruptcy-related conduct from petitioner's ousted founder—a "serial litigator," as the bankruptcy court accurately called him—who objected to petitioner's reorganization and threatened to "burn the place down" when he did not get his way before the bankruptcy court.

In these circumstances, the bankruptcy court found that exculpation—a limitation of liability commonplace in corporate law and routinely afforded to the directors and officers of financial companies outside of bankruptcy—was necessary to prevent the post-effective-date estate from being swamped with frivolous litigation arising from conduct that occurred during the bankruptcy case. Petitioner's reorganization plan thus exculpated certain parties, including petitioner and specified non-debtors, from liability other than for acts or omissions constituting bad faith, fraud, gross negligence, criminal misconduct, or willful misconduct.

The court of appeals struck most non-debtors from the confirmed plan's exculpation provision, holding that section 524(e) "categorically bars" their exculpation. The court of appeals acknowledged the bankruptcy court's findings that those exculpations were necessary to the success of petitioner's reorganization plan. Nevertheless, it concluded that circuit precedent bound it to strike certain of those exculpations from the plan. That incorrect holding merits review by this Court.

A. Legal Background

A principal goal of bankruptcy law is to afford the debtor a "fresh start." The bankruptcy discharge, which releases the debtor from obligations on its pre-petition debts, is an important tool for accomplishing that goal. Each of the Bankruptcy Code chapters under which debtors can seek relief contains a specific provision for how and when the debtor's discharge occurs under that chapter. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 727, 944, 1192, 1228, 1328. Section 524 provides general provisions, applicable across all chapters, about the effect of a discharge.

Under section 524, discharge does not itself extinguish the debtor's underlying debt. Rather, discharge voids the debtor's (and only the debtor's) liability on the debt and enjoins creditors from pursuing actions against the debtor on any claims arising from that debt. 11 U.S.C. § 524(a). The debt otherwise remains valid and enforceable. Judgments on that debt against any non-debtors are unaffected, and creditors may pursue further recovery from any such liable non-debtors. See 4 Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 524.05 (16th ed. 2022).

Section 524(e) makes this point explicit. It states that, "[e]xcept as provided in subsection (a)(3) of this section," which deals with certain community-property debts, "discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt." 11 U.S.C. § 524(e).

B. Factual and Procedural Background

1. The Parties

Petitioner Highland Capital Management, L.P., is the reorganized chapter 11 debtor. Highland, a global investment adviser founded in 1993, provided investment management and advisory services, managing billions of dollars of assets, both directly and through affiliates.

Respondent James Dondero is petitioner's co-founder and former CEO. NexPoint Advisors, L.P., and NexPoint Asset Management, L.P. (f/k/a as Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P.) are registered investment advisors owned or controlled by Dondero. They, in turn, manage Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund (n/k/a NexPoint Diversified Real Estate Trust), Highland Global Allocation Fund, and NexPoint Capital Incorporated, which are investment vehicles also controlled by Dondero. The Dugaboy Investment Trust and Get Good Trust are Dondero's family trusts.

2. Petitioner's Chapter 11 Bankruptcy

Petitioner's path to bankruptcy was far from typical. It did not suffer a business calamity, have problems with its vendors or landlords, or default on payments to its lenders. Rather, petitioner's chapter 11 case was brought on by "a myriad of massive, unrelated, business litigation claims that it faced * * * after a decade or more of contentious litigation in multiple forums all over the world" instigated by Dondero when he was petitioner's CEO.

App., infra, 52a. As the bankruptcy court found, Dondero is a "serial litigator" whose litigiousness caused petitioner to file for bankruptcy and strapped it with more than a billion dollars in claims. See id. at 52a-55a.

Petitioner filed for chapter 11 bankruptcy on October 16, 2019. Its creditors' committee consisted of three entities holding litigation claims against petitioner, and one of petitioner's litigation discovery vendors. Concerned about Dondero's ability to serve as an estate fiduciary, the U.S. Trustee moved to appoint a chapter 11 trustee to manage petitioner's estate. Petitioner ultimately avoided the appointment of a trustee by entering into a settlement agreement with the creditors' committee (the "Governance Settlement"). That settlement—approved by the bankruptcy court—changed petitioner's management and governance during the pendency of the bankruptcy case.

The Governance Settlement removed Dondero from all control positions at petitioner. It appointed three outside, independent directors to manage petitioner and its reorganization. The bankruptcy court later approved one of petitioner's independent directors, James P. Seery, Jr., to be petitioner's new CEO and Chief Restructuring Officer ("CRO").

To induce the independent directors' service, the Governance Settlement (a) limited their and their agents and advisors' prospective liability to claims asserting willful misconduct or gross negligence, and (b) required the bankruptcy court to act as a gatekeeper by screening for colorability any claims against the protected parties. The order appointing Seery as CEO and CRO included similar protections for Seery in his additional role. The bankruptcy court found as fact that, without the exculpation and gatekeeper provisions, "none of the independent directors would have taken on the role" because of the "litigation culture that enveloped Highland historically." App., infra, 60a.

The bankruptcy court found that "this [Governance Settlement] and the appointment of the independent directors changed the entire trajectory of the case and saved the Debtor from the appointment of a trustee." App., infra, 58a. Once appointed, Seery and the other independent directors began to negotiate settlements with petitioner's principal creditors, paving the way for approval of the resulting reorganization plan by creditors holding 99.8% in dollar amount of the claims against petitioner.

Petitioner's chapter 11 plan is an "asset monetization plan" in which distributions to creditors will result from the orderly winddown and sale of petitioner's holdings and other assets over the course of several years. App., infra, 48a. The bankruptcy court described this plan, and its overwhelming creditor support, as "nothing short of a miracle." Id. at 62a.

Dondero, by contrast, had advocated for a reorganization plan that would reinstall him as CEO of an ongoing enterprise. After petitioner and other stakeholders rejected those proposals, Dondero explicitly threatened to "burn the place down." App., infra, 111a.

It was no idle threat. Dondero and entities under his control have attempted to frustrate petitioner's reorganization by, among other things, objecting to nearly every settlement between petitioner and its creditors, challenging nearly every motion, appealing from nearly every order, obstructing petitioner's trading activity, and threatening petitioner's employees. To date, these various obstructions have resulted in two contempt findings against Dondero and one against certain of his controlled entities, including one arising from an attempted meritless lawsuit against Seery in violation of the order appointing him CEO and CRO, and nine separate appeals to the Fifth Circuit.

In recognition that such attacks on petitioner and its reorganization were not going to stop, petitioner's confirmed chapter 11 plan provided three "Plan Protections" to certain persons and entities whose efforts were going to be vital to the plan's success:

First, the plan exculpates certain persons and entities—defined as the "Exculpated Parties"—for conduct relating to the administration of the case (including the negotiation and implementation of the plan) from liability other than for bad faith, fraud, gross negligence, criminal misconduct, or willful misconduct. App., infra, 106a-111a, 139a. The Exculpated Parties are, among others, petitioner and its agents, the independent directors, the creditors' committee and its members, and service professionals retained by petitioner and the committee. Id. at 34a.

Second, the plan enjoins certain persons—defined as the "Enjoined Parties"—from taking actions to interfere with the implementation and consummation of the plan. App., infra, 112a. The Enjoined Parties include Dondero and his related entities.

Third, the plan has a gatekeeper provision, which precludes the Enjoined Parties from commencing claims against any defined "Protected Party" without first obtaining the bankruptcy court's determination that the proposed claim is colorable. App., infra, 112a-117a.

The bankruptcy court found that all three Plan Protections were necessary to the success of petitioner's plan. Most pertinently for present purposes, the bankruptcy court found "that the proposed Exculpated Parties might expect to incur costs that could swamp them and the reorganization based on the prior litigious conduct of Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities." App., infra, 111a. That finding, as will be explained below, was undisturbed on appeal, but the court of appeals reversed in part despite that finding.

The bankruptcy court confirmed the plan, which then took effect. The Fifth Circuit authorized a direct appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 158(d).

3. The Appeal

The court of appeals affirmed the confirmation order in its entirety except for the plan's exculpation provision, which it found partly violated 11 U.S.C. § 524(e). The court held that "§ 524(e) categorically bars third-party exculpations absent express authority in another provision of the Bankruptcy Code." App., infra, 30a (citing In re Pacific Lumber Co., 584 F.3d 229 (5th Cir. 2009)). The court concluded that "the exculpation here partly runs afoul of that statutory bar on non-debtor discharge by reaching beyond Highland Capital, the Committee, and the Independent Directors." Id. at 28a. Those three entities, the court held, were entitled to exculpation from liability under other provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. See id. at 32a-34a.

By contrast, the court of appeals held that other persons or entities—whose exculpation was not, in the court's view, grounded in a specific provision of the Bankruptcy Code—could not be exculpated from any liability because of section 524(e). App., infra, 28a-35a. Those persons and entities include petitioner's officers and agents and certain retained service professionals—even though the bankruptcy court had found protection of each to be indispensable to the plan's success.

The court of appeals acknowledged that "[t]he simple fact of the matter is that there is a circuit split concerning the effect and reach of § 524(e)," and that the Fifth Circuit had adopted the minority position in that split. App., infra, 30a. The court rejected petitioner's invitation to distinguish its prior decision on this issue. See id. at 30a-33a.

Certain respondents sought panel rehearing, asking the court to hold that the persons and entities it had struck from the plan's exculpation provision must likewise be left unprotected by the plan's injunction and gatekeeper provisions. In response, the court altered a single sentence of its opinion, which did not affect the Fifth Circuit's ruling that "the injunction and gatekeeping provisions are sound," App., infra, 28a, or its conclusion about section 524(e).

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

For thirty years, the courts of appeals have been deeply divided over whether section 524(e) prohibits bankruptcy courts from ordering a limited exculpation or release of non-debtor liability as part of a chapter 11 reorganization plan. That longstanding circuit split—in which such provisions are authorized in seven circuits but generally prohibited in two circuits—shows no signs of dissipating. This Court should therefore grant certiorari to resolve the intractable disagreement among the circuits on an issue of great importance.

A. There Is An Acknowledged And Substantial Circuit Split

As the court of appeals acknowledged below, "there is a circuit split concerning the effect and reach of § 524(e)." App., infra, 30a. At least seven circuits have concluded that nonconsensual non-debtor relief is not barred by section 524(e). Only two circuits—including the Fifth Circuit—have reached the opposite conclusion. See id. at 30a-31a (listing cases).

This circuit conflict is widely recognized. See Blixseth v. Credit Suisse, 961 F.3d 1074, 1082 n.4 (9th Cir. 2020) ("There is a long-running circuit split on this issue."), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct. 1394 (2021); In re Seaside Eng'g & Surveying, Inc., 780 F.3d 1070, 1077 (11th Cir. 2015) ("Other circuits are split as to whether a bankruptcy court has the authority to issue a non-debtor release."); In re Dow Corning Corp., 280 F.3d 648, 657 (6th Cir. 2002) ("[S]ome courts have found that the Bankruptcy Code does not permit enjoining a non-consenting creditor's claims against a non-debtor."); In re Metromedia Fiber Network, Inc., 416 F.3d 136, 141 (2d Cir. 2005) (acknowledging conflicting appellate decisions).

As one district court recently observed, this "long-standing conflict among the Circuits that have ruled on the question" has created "the anomaly that whether a bankruptcy court can bar third parties from asserting non-derivative claim against a non-debtor–a matter that surely ought to be uniform throughout the country–is entirely a function of where the debtor files for bankruptcy." In re Purdue Pharma, L.P., 635 B.R. 26, 89 (S.D.N.Y. 2021), appeal pending, No. 22-110 (2d Cir.) (argued Apr. 29, 2022).[2]

1. The majority approach—followed by the Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, and Eleventh Circuits—allows bankruptcy courts, in certain circumstances, to confirm a chapter 11 plan containing a non-debtor exculpation or third-party release, and to do so over an interested party's objection. In re Metromedia Fiber Network, Inc., 416 F.3d 136, 142-143 (2d Cir. 2005); In re PWS Holding Corp., 228 F.3d 224, 247 (3d Cir. 2000); In re A.H. Robins Co., 880 F.2d 694, 702 (4th Cir. 1989); In re Dow Corning Corp., 280 F.3d 648, 657-658 (6th Cir. 2002); In re Airadigm Commc'ns, Inc., 519 F.3d 640, 656 (7th Cir. 2008); Blixseth v. Credit Suisse, 961 F.3d 1074, 1082 (9th Cir. 2020), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct.

The Seventh Circuit's opinion in Airadigm Communications, 519 F.3d 640, sums up the majority approach. See also In re Seaside Eng'g & Surveying, Inc., 780 F.3d at 1078 n.7 (recent Eleventh Circuit decision observing that the Seventh Circuit's analysis "squarely supports the majority position"). In Airadigm Communications, the confirmed plan released certain non-debtor parties "for any act or omission arising out of or in connection with the Case, the confirmation of this Plan, the consummation of this Plan, or the administration of this Plan or property to be distributed under this Plan, except for willful misconduct." 519 F.3d at 655.

The court upheld that plan provision, holding that section 524(e) does not "bar[] a bankruptcy court from releasing non-debtors from liability to a creditor without the creditor's consent." 519 F.3d at 656. The "natural reading" of section 524(e), the court explained, "does not foreclose a third-party release from a creditor's claims." Ibid. Rather, section 524(e) simply clarifies that the discharge of a debtor's debt "does not affect the liability of any other entity on * * * such debt," 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), and thus acts as a "saving clause" to "preserve[] rights that might otherwise be construed as lost after the reorganization," 519 F.3d at 656. In other words, according to the majority view, section 524(e) simply establishes that, if the debtor and a non-debtor are both liable on the same debt, then the debtor and only the debtor benefits from discharge with respect to that debt.

The Seventh Circuit also observed that section 524(e) lacks any terms even "purport[ing] to limit the bankruptcy court's powers." 519 F.3d at 656. It does not, for instance, include any "mandatory terms" like "shall" or "will." Ibid. By contrast, "where Congress has limited the powers of the bankruptcy court, it has done so clearly—for example, by expressly limiting the court's power." Ibid. In the absence of such mandatory, power-limiting language, the court concluded, there is no reason to read section 524(e) as "bar[ring] a non-consensual third-party release from liability." Ibid.

The Seventh Circuit further held that "Congress affirmatively gave the bankruptcy court the power to release third parties from a creditor's claims without the creditor's consent" through sections 105(a) and 1123(b)(6) of the Bankruptcy Code. 519 F.3d at 657; see generally United States v. Energy Res. Co., 495 U.S. 545, 549 (1990) (construing same provisions). The Seventh Circuit understood those provisions to "permit[] the bankruptcy court to release third parties from liability to participating creditors if the release is 'appropriate' and not inconsistent with any provision of the bankruptcy code." 519 F.3d at 657.[3]

2. Only two circuits—the Fifth and Tenth—disagree with the majority approach. In those circuits, section 524(e) is interpreted as prohibiting bankruptcy courts from exculpating or releasing most non-debtors under chapter 11 plans. In re Pacific Lumber Co., 584 F.3d 229, 252-253 (5th Cir. 2009); In re Western Real Est. Fund, Inc., 922 F.2d 592, 600 (10th Cir. 1990) (per curiam).

[3] The Fifth Circuit here rejected reliance on those statutory provisions. App., infra, 32a. If, however, the majority construction of section 524(e) is correct, and that section does not limit the powers of a bankruptcy court, then the basis for the Fifth Circuit's opinion evaporates without regard to the correct construction of other provisions of the Code.

In Pacific Lumber, the Fifth Circuit held that section 524(e) "broadly * * * foreclose[s] non-consensual non-debtor releases" because it "only releases the debtor, not co-liable third parties." 584 F.3d at 252. The Fifth Circuit thus expressly rejected the "more lenient approach to non-debtor releases taken by other courts" even then—now 14 years ago. Ibid.[4] In the decision below, the Fifth Circuit acknowledged the even deeper circuit split that now exists but reaffirmed its view that section 524(e) "categorically bars third-party exculpations." App., infra, 30a. The rule in the Tenth Circuit is similar. See In re Western Real Est. Fund, Inc., 922 F.2d at 602

[4] In Pacific Lumber, the Fifth Circuit affirmed only a non-debtor release of the "disinterested volunteers" on the creditors' committee, concluding that such a limited non-debtor release was consistent with the committee members' "qualified immunity for actions within the scope of their duties" under 11 U.S.C. § 1103(c). 584 F.3d at 253. The Fifth Circuit applied that same holding in its decision below, and likewise correctly affirmed the non-debtor exculpation of petitioner's disinterested, independent directors as being consistent with the limited liability of a bankruptcy trustee. Respondents have obtained an extension of time until January 16, 2023, to file a petition for a writ of certiorari to challenge that holding. No. 22A303. That holding—reached under a minority view of section 524(e) as being a highly restrictive view of bankruptcy courts' powers—does not implicate the circuit split that the Fifth Circuit acknowledged and is not certworthy. Petitioner will elaborate on the uncertworthiness of the issue in its response to any petition for a writ of certiorari that respondents may file.

The Fifth Circuit's decision to double down on its minority approach to section 524(e) demonstrates that the circuits will not resolve their diverging approaches of their own accord.

B. The Question Presented Is A Recurring And Important Issue

It is of critical and widespread importance to the bankruptcy laws whether chapter 11 plans can incorporate non-debtor releases and exculpations to facilitate a debtor's successful reorganization. The depth and persistence of the circuit split on this issue demonstrate how often this issue arises in chapter 11 bankruptcies, including some of the most complex and consequential corporate reorganizations managed by the bankruptcy courts.

An exculpation clause, like the one in petitioner's plan, serves to provide only "limited immunity" to certain parties for conduct related to the chapter 11 case. American Bankruptcy Institute, Report of Commission to Study the Reform of Chapter 11, at 250 (2014) ("ABI Study"). In connection with plan confirmation, courts have found such limitations of liability to be reasonable and appropriate in a variety of circumstances, particularly (as here) when an exculpation "was narrowly tailored, exculpated only negligent conduct, and was in the best interests of the estate." Id. at 250-251 (citing In re Enron Corp., 326 B.R. 497, 504 (S.D.N.Y. 2005)). Such provisions, where permissible, can have laudatory effects on the success of a bankruptcy case, including "encouraging parties to engage in the process and assist the debtor in achieving a confirmable plan—actions that * * * estate representatives and their professionals * * * may not be willing to undertake in the face of litigation risk." Id. at 251.

Although petitioner's plan did not include a non-debtor release, such releases—which relieve recipients of all liability for specified claims against them, and which are also categorically prohibited under the Fifth Circuit's reading of section 524(e)—can in certain circumstances also provide significant benefits to the debtor's estate. Courts in the majority circuits generally permit such releases only in "rare," "unique," and "truly unusual" cases in which doing so is "important to the success of the plan." Metromedia, 416 F.3d at 141-143.

In those exceptional cases, because of their "particular fact patterns," non-debtor releases can be instrumental in "facilitat[ing] a confirmable plan and ultimately benefit[ing] all stakeholders." ABI Study at 255; see also id. at 255-256 (recommending context-specific consideration for third-party releases of claims against non-debtors, and disapproving of any "blanket prohibition" on such releases).

Yet, because of the circuits' divergent approaches, debtors' ability to avail themselves of non-debtor exculpations or releases depends on the happenstance of geography. In an area of the law that prizes "uniform[ity]," such a result is untenable. U.S. Const. Art. I, § 8, Cl. 4; see In re Purdue Pharma, 635 B.R. at 104 ("conflicting" circuit decisions on non-debtor releases and exculpation have created "a most unfortunate circumstance when dealing with a supposedly uniform and comprehensive nationwide scheme to adjust debtor-creditor relations").

Moreover, these geographic disparities in the availability of non-debtor plan relief have invited forum shopping. Debtors who perceive non-debtor exculpation or releases as a valuable tool to achieve a successful reorganization seek out jurisdictions that allow for such relief to be granted, and avoid those jurisdictions that do not. See, e.g., Robert K. Rasmussen, COVID-19 Debt and Bankruptcy Infrastructure, 131 Yale L.J.F. 337, 354 (2021) (noting a debtor's choice to file for bankruptcy in Chicago because it "decided that the law on third-party releases was more favorable in the Seventh Circuit than in other possible venues"). But this Court has emphasized the importance of "discourag[ing] forum shopping * * * to prevent a party from receiving a windfall merely by reason of the happenstance of bankruptcy." Butner v. United States, 440 U.S. 48, 55 (1979) (quotation marks omitted); see also Ralph Brubaker, Mandatory Aggregation of Mass Tort Litigation in Bankruptcy, 131 Yale L.J.F. 960, 991-992 (2022) (noting the "well-known and rapidly escalating phenomenon of unrestricted forum shopping" in chapter 11 cases).

Despite the long-standing circuit split and use of non-debtor exculpations and releases in most circuits, this Court has never specifically considered whether such relief is permitted under the Bankruptcy Code. See Travelers Indem. Co. v. Bailey, 557 U.S. 137, 155 (2009) (noting that the Court did "not resolve whether a bankruptcy court * * * could properly enjoin claims against nondebtor insurers that are not derivative of the debtor's wrongdoing"). Without this Court's review, there is no reason to think that this three-decade-long division of authority will resolve itself.

Only this Court can establish a uniform rule concerning debtors' ability to use non-debtor releases and exculpation to achieve successful chapter 11 reorganizations.

C. The Fifth Circuit's Approach Is Wrong

The acknowledged circuit split on a recurring and important question would warrant this Court's review even if the decision below were correct. But it is not.

First, neither Pacific Lumber nor the decision below engages with the text of section 524(e) itself. As the Seventh Circuit explained, nothing in section 524(e) actually prohibits a bankruptcy court from granting non-debtor relief. Airadigm Commc'ns, 519 F.3d at 656. The provision lacks any mandatory language constraining bankruptcy courts' authority in any respect. Ibid. It is merely a "saving clause" intended to clarify that a debtor's discharge from its debts has no effect on the liability of others on those same debts. Ibid.

Second, other provisions of the Bankruptcy Code do—unlike section 524(e)—expressly address what a court may do rather than what the automatic effect of a discharge is. This Court has underscored, for example, that the Bankruptcy Code "grants the bankruptcy courts residual authority to approve reorganization plans including 'any . . . appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of this title.'" Energy Res. Co., 495 U.S. at 549 (quoting 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(6)).

This Court need not resolve any issues concerning the meaning of such other provisions to resolve the question presented by this petition. But Congress's careful attention to courts' authority elsewhere in the Code shows the stark implausibility of construing the words "discharge * * * does not affect" as if they too were a limitation on courts' powers.

D. This Case Is An Ideal Vehicle For Resolving This Important Question

This case is an ideal vehicle for addressing the question presented. Both the bankruptcy court (App., infra, 106a-111a) and the court of appeals (id. at 28a-35a) decided the issue following extensive briefing and argument concerning the effect of section 524(e). The Fifth Circuit's decision directly addressed the circuits' competing approaches to section 524(e). Id. at 30a-31a.

Furthermore, the Fifth Circuit reversed petitioner's confirmed plan solely as to certain of its non-debtor exculpations; it otherwise affirmed confirmation of the plan in full. App., infra, 21a; see also id. at 38a ("[T]he Plan violates § 524(e) but only insofar as it exculpates and enjoins certain non-debtors."). The question presented is thus squarely and cleanly presented here.

Finally, this case involves only non-debtor exculpations, not any more comprehensive non-debtor releases. No one has ever identified any basis other than section 524(e) to invalidate exculpation clauses, whereas non-party releases raise a host of other questions as well. See, e.g., In re Purdue Pharma L.P., 633 B.R. 53, 98-101 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.) (discussing constitutional issues raised by non-debtor releases), rev'd in pertinent part, 635 B.R. 26, 89 (S.D.N.Y. 2021), appeal pending, No. 22-110 (2d Cir.) (argued Apr. 29, 2022).

This Court should accordingly grant certiorari to resolve the deep and entrenched circuit split over the interpretation of section 524(e).

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted.

RE: Patrick Daugherty v. James Dondero, et al.,
Civil Action No. 2019-0956-MTZ

Dear Counsel:

On May 15, 2020, plaintiff Patrick Daugherty filed his amended complaint in this action (the "Amended Complaint").[1] In March of 2021, this matter was stayed in view of a related bankruptcy. But today I write to resolve three motions, which I collectively refer to as the "Motions to Dismiss": (1) the Motion to Dismiss the Amended Verified Complaint filed by defendant Michael Hurst;[2] (2) the Motion to Dismiss or, in the Alternative, Stay Plaintiff's Verified Amended Complaint filed by defendants James Dondero, Highland Employee Retention Assets LLC ("HERA"), Highland ERA Management LLC ("HERA

[1] Docket Item ("D.I.") 28 [hereinafter Am. Compl.].

Management"), Scott Ellington, Thomas Surgent, and Issac Leventon (collectively the "Highland Defendants");[3] and (3) the Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Verified Amended Complaint filed by defendants Marc Katz and Hunton Andrews Kurth LLP's ("Andrews Kurth" and collectively the "Andrews Kurth Defendants" and together with Hurst and the Highland Defendants, "Defendants").[4] I conclude that Daugherty has impermissibly split his claims. Defendants' Motions to Dismiss are granted.

I. BACKGROUND[5]

Daugherty was a partner and senior executive of nonparty Highland Capital Management L.P. ("Highland Capital"). In 2009, Highland Capital formed HERA, a Delaware limited liability company. Highland Capital granted Daugherty and other employees "equity-like awards in certain funds, and then distribut[ed] the proceeds of those interests to the employees in their capacity as unit holders of HERA."[6] Daugherty was also a director of HERA.

Daugherty has had a difficult relationship with Highland Capital and its principals for over a decade. He resigned from Highland Capital on September 28, 2011, though he continued to hold an interest in HERA. He contends that in February 2012, his adversaries began a multi-step plan designed to deprive him of that HERA interest.

In 2012, Highland Capital sued Daugherty in a Texas court, and Daugherty responded by filing counterclaims against Highland Capital and third-party claims against HERA and others. During those proceedings, certain Defendants created an escrow to hold Daugherty's HERA interest pending the resolution of the litigation, which they represented would be transferred to him if he prevailed. But Daugherty contends the escrow was created to allow those Defendants to represent to the Texas judge and jury that they had not deprived Daugherty of his interest: according to Daugherty, those Defendants never intended to transfer Daugherty's interest to him, even if he won.

Daugherty did win on at least one of his claims.[7] The Texas jury found in his favor and awarded him damages of $2.6 million plus interest against HERA (the "Texas Judgment"). The verdict was appealed, and the Texas Court of Appeals affirmed the trial court's decision on December 1, 2016, making the Texas Judgment collectable. Shortly thereafter, the escrow agent resigned and the escrowed assets were transferred to Highland Capital, not back to HERA. Moreover, Daugherty alleges that before the Texas Judgment became final, certain Defendants caused a disproportionate amount of legal fees from those proceedings to be allocated to HERA. With the assets transferred to Highland from the escrow, and in light of the fee allocations, HERA no longer held any assets and so could not satisfy the Texas Judgment. Daugherty alleges he has been unable to collect the Texas Judgment.

On July 6, 2017, Daugherty sued Highland Capital and the Highland Defendants in this Court (the "First Delaware Action").[8] His claims generally fall into three categories: (1) the transfer of HERA's assets out of escrow; (2) amendments to HERA's LLC agreement introduced by certain Defendants; and (3) indemnification and fees on fees relating to the Texas litigation.[9] Over the next two years, the Court issued two written decisions resolving motions to dismiss,[10] the parties engaged in various other motion practice,[11] Daugherty filed two amended complaints,[12] and the parties completed discovery. On July 11, 2018, Dondero was dismissed from the case, leaving Highland Capital, HERA, and HERA Management as the only defendants.[13] The case proceeded to trial on October 14, 2019.

On the morning of October 16, 2019—the third day of trial—the defendants informed the Court that Highland Capital filed for bankruptcy.[14] All proceedings against Highland Capital were automatically stayed, and the parties agreed that the rest of the First Delaware Action should also be stayed.[15] Those proceedings remained stayed, and the trial record remains open.

Plaintiff initiated this action on December 1, 2019, and filed the Amended Complaint on May 15, 2020.[16] The Amended Complaint asserts claims against all defendants in the First Delaware Action (including Dondero) other than Highland Capital. It added as new defendants Highland Capital's outside counsel (Andrews Kurth, Katz, and Hurst) and three of Highland Capital's in-house counsel (Ellington, Leventon, and Surgent). The new allegations in the Amended Complaint center on these new Defendants' participation in transferring HERA's assets out of escrow and otherwise assisting in devaluing or appropriating Daugherty's HERA interest. The Amended Complaint arises out of the same series of actions at issue in the First Delaware Action—a point Daugherty readily admits.[17]

On July 15, 2020, Defendants filed the Motions to Dismiss pursuant to Court of Chancery Rule 12(b)(6).[18] The Highland Defendants also moved in the alternative to stay this action.[19] Daugherty asserted claims relating to the Texas Judgment and other damages sought in the Delaware actions as a creditor in Highland Capital's bankruptcy, so I granted the stay pending the resolution of Highland Capital's bankruptcy proceedings.[20] The bankruptcy proceedings remain ongoing, but Daugherty has reached a settlement of his claims against Highland Capital.[21]

On a May 5, 2022, status conference, I requested that the parties provide supplemental briefing on the issues of claim splitting and the Texas attorney immunity doctrine[22] for purposes of determining whether some or all of the claims set forth in the Amended Complaint could be resolved on the pleadings and without intruding on the bankruptcy proceedings.[23] The parties filed their supplemental briefs[24] and I heard argument on October 6, 2022.[25]

II. ANALYSIS

The standard governing Defendants' Motions to Dismiss is as follows:

> (i) [A]ll well-pleaded factual allegations are accepted as true; (ii) even vague allegations are "well-pleaded" if they give the opposing party notice of the claim; (iii) the Court must draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the non-moving party; and [(iv)] dismissal is inappropriate unless the "plaintiff would not be entitled to recover under any reasonably conceivable set of circumstances susceptible of proof."[26]

Defendants moved to dismiss the Amended Complaint on the basis of claim splitting. The claim splitting doctrine requires that a plaintiff raise all legal theories arising from a common nucleus of operative fact in one action so long as she has had a full and free opportunity to do so.[27] A final judgment in the first-filed action is not a necessary element of the doctrine.[28] Claim splitting may bar a second cause of action even where there is not complete overlap between the named defendants.[29] The burden is on the plaintiff to show that she could not have raised her new claims in the first proceeding.[30] Two principles drive the claim splitting doctrine: (1) "that no person should be unnecessarily harassed with a multiplicity of suits"; and (2) a litigant should be prohibited "from getting 'two bites at the apple.'"[31]

Daugherty's First Delaware Action asserted claims arising out of, among other things, the transfer of HERA assets from the escrow. Those proceedings were stayed by the automatic bankruptcy stay and by consent. Daugherty then filed this second action, asserting claims that he concedes arise from the same common nucleus of operative fact,[32] which he describes as only "nominally new,"[33] against overlapping and additional defendants. These simultaneously pending, overlapping cases undoubtedly risk subjecting Defendants to multiple judgments and potentially risk giving Daugherty two chances at prevailing on claims arising from the same series of transactions (in addition to his third opportunity as a creditor in Highland Capital's bankruptcy). Indeed, Daugherty does not dispute that he has engaged in claim splitting; he argues he should be excused from the consequences of doing so.[34]

Daugherty urges this Court to apply an exception to the claim splitting doctrine that, in other jurisdictions, forecloses dismissal where a plaintiff could not have discovered a cause of action due to the defendant's fraud or concealment.[35] He contends he did not assert his claims against the additional defendants earlier because, according to Daugherty, Dondero stated for the first time at trial that Highland Capital was relying on the advice of counsel in carrying out the underlying acts.[36]

[34] See D.I. 104 at 43 ("I agree with one thing [Defendants] said. The claims were split, but where I take issue is that the claim splitting was improper here."); Supp. Ans. Br. at 7–10.

If I were to implement this exception to improper claim splitting, this case would not satisfy it. Daugherty has failed to persuade me that the defendants in the First Delaware Action concealed either the attorney defendants' involvement in the underlying events or the principals' intention to rely on advice of counsel to defeat the claims against them. The defendants in the First Delaware Action indicated they would argue that they did not act with the mental state required for Daugherty's claims because they relied on the advice of counsel, but it appears Daugherty did not pursue documents or testimony under the at-issue exception until his objection to Dondero's trial testimony.

The defendants in the First Delaware Action consistently pled an affirmative defense that they "did not act with the necessary knowledge, intent, or scienter, and instead acted in good faith and with due care at all times."[37] On January 9, 2019, they responded to Daugherty's interrogatory requesting the basis for that defense by stating, in relevant part, that "[t]he Amended Complaint alleges no specific facts establishing that the transfer of the Deposit Assets was made with the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud," and that "Defendants' Counsel," among others, have knowledge concerning this defense.[38] Daugherty did not move to compel a more expansive response. On March 22, 2019, Daugherty noticed service of a subpoena duces tecum on Andrews Kurth LLP requesting documents relating to the escrow.[39] It is not clear to me whether Daugherty ever received those documents, but he never filed a motion to compel relating to that subpoena. Daugherty also moved for the commission of a subpoena ad testificandum to be served on Katz.[40] That motion was denied without prejudice, and the Court expressly permitted Daugherty to renew that motion after obtaining other discovery if he could demonstrate that there were "gaps in the record he needs to fill."[41] He never did so. Likewise, in a May 24, 2019 motion to compel, Daugherty expressed concerns with the defendants' April 2019 privilege log, but he did not seek relief on any entry on the basis of the at issue exception.[42] When

Dondero was deposed on August 6, 2019, it appears that he conveyed that he relied on the advice of counsel several times as to several different matters.[43]

In pretrial briefing, the First Delaware Action defendants' brief included multiple references to the advice of counsel defense, and expressly argued that the defendants relied on their Delaware counsel's advice as a defense to several of the claims relating to the escrow.[44]

And so, leading up to trial, it appears Daugherty was on notice that the First Delaware Action defendants might argue that their reliance on the advice of counsel foreclosed a finding that they held the requisite intent in taking the complained-of actions. He also was on notice that he did not know what that advice was. He investigated the defendants' affirmative defense and conducted discovery to his apparent satisfaction in the First Delaware Action.

In opposing the Motions to Dismiss, Daugherty argues Defendants raised the advice of counsel defense for the first time at trial. His briefing cites a number of pages of trial testimony, without explaining how any of that testimony supports his position.[45] In the hearing, he focused on the following testimony, which he argued constituted new information:[46]

> Q. Did Highland have outside counsel advising with respect to the purchase of the units?
> A. Yes. I believe the whole situation was the most lawyered thing we've ever done. I mean, there was counsel for each of the board members, there was counsel for Highland, there was counsel for HERA, there was Delaware counsel. Everything was orchestrated, dictated by counsel.
> Q. Did Highland have -- did that counsel that Highland used also advise counsel on the documents, the transaction documents, relating to those purchases?
> A. Yes. All the functional documents and major moves at various turning points were all at the request -- or decided by counsel.[47]

Q. Did you have any communication -- are you familiar with Abrams & Bayliss, with what Abrams & Bayliss is?

A. I know they're a Delaware law firm. But beyond that, no.

Q. Did you ever have any communications with Abrams & Bayliss about them resigning as escrow agent?

A. No. Highland and myself, I know, were purposely kept separate from this whole thing. And it was driven by -- it was driven by counsel.[48]

Q. My question is a little bit more specific because it relates to the escrow assets and Mr. Daugherty. If you had been told by counsel that Mr. Daugherty was entitled to the escrow assets, you would have given him the escrow assets; right?

A. Yes. We would have done whatever counsel told us. We tried very hard to compartmentalize this mess. We have a business to run. And this is -- a half dozen lawsuits, haranguing everybody in public, it was all intended to disrupt our business as much as possible. So we tried to delegate it and compartmentalize it to the lawyers as much as possible.[49]

[49] Id. at 325–26.

> Q. Let's talk about which lawyers you're referring to. So I'll start with the in-house lawyers again. Which in-house lawyers of Highland are you relying on with respect to the transfer of the escrow assets?
>
> A. It would have been the same three internal lawyers working with external counsel.
>
> Q. Mr. Ellington, Mr. Leventon, and Mr. Surgent; is that right?
>
> A. I believe so. I believe they were the ones at that time and place.
>
> Q. Which outside counsel are you relying on?
>
> A. I don't know if Andrews and Kurth had merged with Piper. I don't know who else was involved besides the Abrams guys. But it would have been, more likely than not, those two counsels with whatever other counsel was representing some of the people who were sued individually.[50]

Additionally, Daugherty's counsel clarified with Dondero that he had testified he had relied on counsel in connection with buying out other HERA unitholders.[51]

Then, and only then, did Daugherty object. He did not object to any of the above testimony as introducing a new, unexpected, or potentially waived defense. Rather, Daugherty took issue with the fact that the defendants asserted attorney-client privilege over their counsel's advice, arguing privilege was waived under the

at-issue exception and that he "reserve[d] the right to pursue the at-issue waiver in the event that anyone else at Highland might recall the advice that was received."[52]

But as explained, Daugherty was aware of the defense before that testimony, and had an opportunity to pursue any legal advice put at issue before Dondero's trial testimony. Daugherty cannot avoid the consequences of his claim splitting on the assertion that he was surprised at trial in the First Delaware Action.[53]

[52] Id. at 300; id. at 293 ("MR. UEBLER: Your Honor, the defendants are using the attorney-client privilege as a sword and a shield. The purposes [sic] of the testimony is to establish, at least as far as I understand it, if this buyout process was proper. And Mr. Dondero has testified today that it was done at the advice of counsel. If they're going to rely on that advice to support any positions that they're taking in this case, we're entitled to know what that advice was. THE COURT: . . . You're asserting the at-issue exception? MR. UEBLER: Yes.").

[53] Daugherty also suggests that he had to file a separate action because the automatic bankruptcy stay precluded amending his complaint in the First Delaware Action. Supp. Ans. Br. at 2–3 ("Daugherty filed the nominally new action against the defendants Dondero implicated as the root bad actors because Daugherty could not take action in the original case due to the automatic stay."); id. at 7 ("Because the evidence was withheld, Daugherty did not have the evidence to assert all of his claims in the first action. Then he was stymied by the automatic stay."). He has failed to demonstrate that Dondero's trial testimony would have justified a late and prejudicial amended pleading in the First Delaware Action (if it had not been stayed). A surprise defense at trial is not typically resolved by the plaintiff filing an amended complaint. Rather, where a defendant raises an argument or invokes for the first time a defense in the middle of a trial, the most sensible outcome is a finding that the party waived its argument or defense. See Barra v. Adams, 1994 WL 369532, at *6 (Del. Ch. July 1, 1994) ("As a procedural matter, the estoppel defense comes too late, as it was never pleaded or even referred to in the pretrial order" and instead raised the for the first time at trial); Carberry v. Redd, 1977 WL 9561, at *1–2 (Del. Ch. Jan. 19, 1977) (holding statute of limitations defense was waived where it was included in an answer filed after trial preparation had already begun); see also Knutkowski v. Cross, 2011 WL 6820335, at *2 n.10 (Del. Ch. Dec. 22, 2011) ("Although

Daugherty also argues that the policy concerns driving the claim splitting doctrine are not implicated here because they can be addressed by consolidating this action with the First Delaware Action. I reject this argument as well. "The Court has ample discretion in considering how to remedy claim splitting."[54] And under Court of Chancery Rule 42, the Court may consolidate actions pending before the Court whenever they "involve[] a common question of law or fact."[55] Claim splitting is not implicated unless the claims share a common nucleus of operative fact.[56] To accept Daugherty's solution would mean that the doctrine of claim splitting, which as explained can apply to contemporaneously pending actions, could never bar a second claim pending before this Court.

In addition, Court of Chancery Rule 1 states that the Court's rules "shall be construed, administered, and employed by the Court . . . to secure the just, speedy it is indisputably the general rule that a party's failure to raise an affirmative defense in the appropriate pleading results in waiver, . . . there is ample authority in this Circuit for the proposition that absent unfair surprise or prejudice to the plaintiff, a defendant's affirmative defense is not waived when it is first raised in a pre-trial dispositive motion. . . . This view is in accord with the vast majority of our sister circuits." (alterations in original) (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting Brinkley v. Harbour Recreation Club, 180 F.3d 598, 612 (4th Cir. 1999))). Such an amendment would not have been proper if the case had proceeded; that it was stayed does not make the amendment proper.

and inexpensive determination of every proceeding."[57] It is difficult to see how any of Rule 1's purposes would be served by implementing Rule 42 as Daugherty suggests. After more than two years of hard-fought litigation involving extensive motion practice, Daugherty is effectively requesting that I permit him to amend his complaint on the third day of trial to add, among other things, five new defendants to the case, based on a legal theory and discovery position he was on notice of during discovery. To allow consolidation here would only make an already procedurally complicated situation even more complicated just as it is approaching its resolution. I deny Daugherty's request for consolidation.

Defendants' Motions to Dismiss are GRANTED. The dismissal of the Amended Complaint is without prejudice.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE PROCEEDING

Movants The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy") and Hunter Mountain Investment Trust ("Hunter Mountain" and collectively with Dugaboy, "Movants") file this Motion for Leave to File Proceeding.

SUMMARY AND STATEMENT OF FACTS[1]

1. Movants file this Motion for Leave to File Proceeding (the "Motion for Leave") out of an abundance of caution in light of the gatekeeper injunction (the "Gatekeeper Provision") contained in the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) ("Plan") confirmed by order of this Court on February 22, 2021, § AA & Ex. A, Article IX.F [Dkt. No.1950]. Specifically, Movants seek an order from the Court finding that the Gatekeeper Provision is inapplicable to the proposed proceeding (the "Valuation Proceeding") to be commenced by Movants in this Court, or that the requisite standard is met.

2. The Valuation Proceeding largely seeks the same relief previously sought by Movants through motion practice. In particular, the Valuation Proceeding seeks information regarding the value of the estate, including the assets and liabilities of the Highland Claimant Trust (the "Claimant Trust") and related determinations by the Court. On December 6, 2022, the Court ordered Movants to seek the relief previously sought by motion practice through an adversary proceeding [Dkt. No. 3645]. As a result, Movants are required to name Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or "Debtor") and the Highland Claimant Trust (the "Claimant Trust") as defendants in the Valuation Proceeding, notwithstanding that what Movants are really seeking is information from HCMLP and the Claimant Trust. Under the circumstances, Movants believe their Valuation Proceeding should fall outside of the Gatekeeper Provision.

[1] Movants incorporate the facts alleged in their proposed Complaint To (I) Compel Disclosures About The Assets Of The Highland Claimant Trust And (II) Determine (A) Relative Value Of Those Assets, And (B) Nature Of Plaintiffs' Interests In The Claimant Tru[st ("Proposed Complaint" or "Valuation Complaint"), annexed hereto as Exhibit A.

3. However, if the Court determines that the Gatekeeper Provision applies to the Valuation Proceeding, Movants seek an order determining that the Valuation Proceeding presents a "colorable claim" within the meaning of the Gatekeeper Provision and should be allowed.

4. As holders of Contingent Claimant Trust Interests[2] that vest into Claimant Trust Interests once all creditors are paid in full, and as defendants in litigation pursued by Marc S. Kirschner ("Kirschner") as Trustee of the Litigation Sub-Trust (which seeks to recover damages on behalf of the Claimant Trust), Movants need to file the Valuation Proceeding in an effort to obtain information about the assets and liabilities of the Claimant Trust established to liquidate the assets of the HCMLP bankruptcy estate.

5. HCMLP's October 21, 2022 and January 24, 2023 post-confirmation reports show that, even with inflated claims and below market sales of assets, cash available is likely more than enough to pay class 8 and class 9 creditors 100 cents on the dollar. Accordingly, Movants and the entire estate would benefit from a close evaluation of current assets and liabilities. Such evaluation will also show whether assets were marked below appraised value during the pandemic and unreasonably held on the books at those values, along with overstated liabilities, to justify continued litigation. That litigation serves to enable James P. Seery ("Mr. Seery") and other estate professionals to carefully extract nearly every last dollar out of the estate with (along with incentive fees), leaving little or nothing for the owners that built the company.

6. While grave harm has already been done, valuation now would at least enable the Court to put an end to this already long-running case and salvage some value for equity. As this

[2] Capitalized terms not defined have the meanings set forth herein. If no meaning is set forth herein, the terms have the meaning set forth in the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization (as Modified) [Dkt. No. 1808].

Court observed in the In re ADPT DFW Holdings case, where there is significant uncertainty about insolvency, protections must be put in place so that the conduct of the case itself does not deplete the equity. In some cases, the protection is in the form of an equity committee; here, a prompt valuation of the estate would serve the same purpose and is needed.

7. As set forth in greater detail in the annexed complaint ("Valuation Complaint"), upon information and belief, during the pendency of HCMLP's bankruptcy proceedings, creditor claims and estate assets have been sold in a manner that fails to maximize the potential return to the estate, including Movants. Rather, Mr. Seery, first acting as Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer of the Debtor and then as the Claimant Trustee, facilitated the sale of creditor claims to entities with undisclosed business relationships with Mr. Seery who would then be inclined to approve inflated compensation when the hidden but true value of the estate's assets was realized. Because Mr. Seery and the Debtor have failed to operate the estate in the required transparent manner, they have been able to justify pursuit of unnecessary avoidance actions (for the benefit of the professionals involved), even though the assets of the estate, if managed in good faith, should be sufficient to pay all creditors.

8. Further, by understating the value of the estate and preventing open and robust scrutiny of sales of the estate's assets, Mr. Seery and the Debtor have been able to justify actions to further marginalize equity holders that otherwise would be in the money, such as including plan and trust provisions that disenfranchise equity holders by preventing them from having any input or information unless the Claimant Trustee certifies that all other interest holders have been paid in full. Because of the lack of transparency to date, unless Movants are allowed to proceed, there will be no checks and balances to prevent a wrongful failure to certify, much less any process to ensure that the estate has been managed in good faith so as to enable all interest holders, including the much-maligned equity holders, to receive their due.

9. On the petition date, the estate had over $550 million in assets, with far less in in non-disputed non-contingent liabilities.

10. By June 30, 2022, the estate had $550 million in cash and approximately $120 million of other assets despite paying what appears in reports to be over $60 million in professional fees and selling assets non-competitively, on information and belief, at least $75 million below market price.[3]

11. On information and belief, the value of the assets in the estate as of June 1, 2022, was as follows:

Highland Capital Assets		Value in Millions
		Low	High
Cash as of Feb 1. 2022		$125.00	$125.00
Recently Liquidated	$246.30
Highland Select Equity	$55.00
Highland MultiStrat Credit Fund	$51.44
MGM Shares	$26.00
Portion of HCLOF	$37.50
Total of Recent Liquidations	$416.24	$416.24	$416.24
Current Cash Balance		$541.24	$541.24
Remaining Assets
Highland CLO Funding, LTD		$37.50	$37.50
Korea Fund		$18.00	$18.00
SE Multifamily		$11.98	$12.10
Affiliate Notes[4]		$50.00	$60.00
Other (Misc. and legal)		$5.00	$20.00
Total (Current Cash + Remaining Assets)		$663.72	$688.84

[3] Additional detail in the Valuation Complaint and its exhibits.
[4] Some of the Affiliate Notes should have been forgiven as of the MGM sale, but litigation continues over that also.

12. By June 2022, Mr. Seery had also engineered settlements making the inflated face amount of the major claims against the estate $365 million, but which traded for significantly less.

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9	Beneficiary	Purchase Price
Redeemer	$137.0	$0.0	Claim buyer 1	$65 million
ACIS	$23.0	$0.0	Claim buyer 2	$8.0
HarbourVest	$45.0	$35.0	Claim buyer 2	$27.0
UBS	$65.0	$60.0	Claim buyers 1 & 2	$50.0
TOTAL	$270.0	$95.0		$150.0 million

13. On information and belied, Mr. Seery made no efforts to buy the claims into the estate or resolve the estate efficiently. Mr. Seery never made a proposal to the residual holders or Mr. Dondero and never responded with a reorganization plan to the many settlement offers from Mr. Dondero, even though many of Mr. Dondero's offers were in excess of the amounts paid by the claims buyers.

14. Instead, it appears that Mr. Seery brokered transactions enabling colleagues with long-standing but undisclosed business relationships to buy the claims without the knowledge or approval of the Court. Because the claims sellers were on the creditors committee, Mr. Seery and those creditors had been notified that "Creditors wishing to serve as fiduciaries on any official committee are advised that they may not purchase, sell or otherwise trade in or transfer claims against the Debtor while they are committee members absent an order of the Court." Making the transactions particularly suspect is the fact that the claims buyers paid amounts equivalent to the value the Plan estimated would be paid three years' hence. Sophisticated buyers would not pay what appeared to be full price unless they had material non-public information that the claims could and would be monetized for much more than the public estimates made at the time of Plan confirmation – as indeed they have been.

15. On information and belief, Mr. Seery provided such information to claims buyers rather than buying the claims in to the estate for the roughly $150 million for which they were sold.

By May 2021, when the claims transfers were announced to the Court, the estate had over 100 million in cash and access to additional liquidity to retire the claims for the sale amounts, leaving an operating business in the hands of its equity owners.

16. Specifically, Mr. Seery could and should have investigated seeking sufficient funds from equity to pay all claims and return the estate to the equity holders. This was an obvious path because the estate had assets sufficient to support a line of credit for $59 million, as Mr. Seery eventually obtained. If funds had been raised to pay creditors in the amounts for which claims were sold, much of the massive administrative costs run up by the estate would never have been incurred. One such avoided cost would be the post effective date litigation now pursued by Marc S. Kirschner, as Litigation Trustee for the Litigation Sub-Trust, whose professionals likely charge over $2000 an hour for senior lawyers and over $800 an hour for first year associates (data obtained from other cases because, of course, there has been no disclosure in the HCMLP bankruptcy of the cost of the Kirschner litigation). But buying in the claims to resolve the bankruptcy and enabling equity to resume operations would not have had the critical benefit to Mr. Seery that his scheme contained: placing the decision on his incentive bonus, perhaps as much as $30 million, in the hands of grateful business colleagues who received outsized rewards for the claims they were steered into buying. The parameters of Mr. Seery's incentive compensation is yet another item cloaked in secrecy, contrary to the general rule that the hallmark of the bankruptcy process is transparency.

17. But worse still, even with all of the manipulation that appears to have occurred, Movants believe that the combination of cash and other assets held by the Claimant Trust in its own name and held in various funds, reserve accounts, and subsidiaries, if not depleted by unnecessary litigation would be sufficient to pay all Claimant Trust Beneficiaries in full, with interest, now.

18. In short, it appears that the professionals representing HCMLP, the Claimant Trust, and the Litigation Sub-Trust are litigating claims against Movants and others, even though the only beneficiaries of any recovery from such litigation would be Movants in this adversary proceeding (and of course the professionals pressing the claims). It is only the cost of the pursuit of those claims that threatens to depress the value of the Claimant Trust sufficiently to justify continued pursuit of the claims, creating a vicious cycle geared only to enrich the professionals, including Mr. Seery, and to strip equity of any meaningful recovery.

19. Based upon the restrictions imposed on Movants including the unprecedented inability for Plaintiffs, as holders of Contingent Claimant Trust Interests, to access virtually any financial information related to the Claimant Trust, Movants have little to no insight into the value of the Claimant Trust assets versus the Claimant Trust's obligations and no method to independently ascertain those amounts until Movants become Claimant Trust Beneficiaries. Because Mr. Seery and the professionals benefiting from Mr. Seery's actions have ensured that Movants are in the dark regarding the estate's assets and liabilities, as well as the estate's professional and incentive fees that are rapidly depleting the estate, there is a compelling need for the relief sought herein.

20. Movants are seeking transparency about the assets currently held in the Claimant Trust and their value—information that would ultimately benefit all creditors and parties-in-interest by moving forward the administration of the Bankruptcy Case.

ARGUMENT

A. The Gatekeeper Provision.

21. The Debtor's Plan includes a Gatekeeper Provision, limiting how claims can be asserted against Protected Parties (Plan, § AA & Ex. A, Article IX.F), such as the reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust. Plan Ex. A, Article I.B, ¶ 105.

22. Under the Debtor's Plan confirmed by this Court, an "Enjoined Party" may not:

> [C]ommence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Protected Party that arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case, the negotiation of the Plan, the administration of the Plan or property to be distributed under the Plan, the wind down of the business of the Debtor or Reorganized Debtor, the administration of the Claimant Trust or the Litigation Sub-Trust, or the transactions in furtherance of the foregoing without the Bankruptcy Court (i) first determining, after notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of any kind . . . against a Protected Party and (ii) specifically authorizing such Enjoined Party to bring such claim or cause of action against any such Protected Party.

Plan, § AA & Ex. A, Article IX.F.

23. The Plan defines the term "Enjoined Party" to include "all Entities who have held, hold, or may hold Claims against or Equity Interests in the Debtor", "any Entity that has appeared and/or filed any motion, objection, or other pleading in this Chapter 11 Case regardless of the capacity in which such Entity appeared", and any "Related Entity." Plan Ex. A, Article I.B, ¶ 56. The Plan expressly defines "Related Entity" to include Dugaboy and Hunter Mountain. Id., § B, ¶ 110. Accordingly, each of Movants is an "Enjoined Party." The question thus arises whether Movants must seek Court permission prior to instituting the annexed Valuation Proceeding.

B. The Gatekeeper Provision Is Satisfied Because Movants Were Directed to Raise Valuation Issues through an Adversary Proceeding

24. Movants previously sought by way of contested matter to obtain the relief sought in the Valuation Proceeding [Dkt. Nos. 3382, 3467, and 3533]. Debtor objected, asserting both that that the relief asserted was unwarranted and that it could only be obtained in an adversary proceeding [Dkt No. 3465]. The Court ruled that Movants must pursue an adversary proceeding.

Given that the Court has already ordered Movants to proceed in this fashion, the Court has already served its gatekeeper function and this motion is unnecessary [Dkt. No. 3645].

25. However, Movants conferenced the issue with Debtor, and Debtor was only willing to stipulate that no gatekeeper motion was needed if Movants sought exactly the same relief as had been sought in the motion. Because the relief sought is better defined now, and to avoid further delay, in an excess of caution, Movants bring this motion. After filing, Movants will attempt to negotiate a resolution of this motion so that the Court can proceed directly to the merits.

C. The Valuation Proceeding Sets Forth a Colorable Claim.

26. Movants present colorable claims that should be authorized to proceed.

27. The Plan does not define what constitutes a "colorable claim of any kind." Nor does the Bankruptcy Code define the term. The case law construing the requirement for "colorable" claims clearly provides that the requisite showing is a relatively low threshold to satisfy, requiring Movants to prove "there is a possibility of success." See Spring Svc. Tex., Inc. v. McConnell (In re McConnell), 122 B.R. 41, 44 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1989).

28. The Fifth Circuit has stated that "the colorable claim standard is met if the [movant] has asserted claims for relief that on appropriate proof would allow a recovery. Courts have determined that a court need not conduct an evidentiary hearing, but must ensure that the claims do not lack any merit whatsoever." Louisiana World Exposition v. Fed. Ins. Co., 858 F.2d 233, 248 (5th Cir. 1988). The Court therefore need not be satisfied that there is an evidentiary basis for the claims to be asserted but instead should allow the claims if they appear to have some merit.

29. Other federal circuit courts have reached similar conclusions regarding the standard to be applied. For example, the Eighth Circuit held that "creditors' claims are colorable if they would survive a motion to dismiss." In re Racing Services, Inc., 540 F.3d 892, 900 (8th Cir. 2008); accord In Re Foster, 516 B.R. 537, 542 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2014), aff'd 602 Fed. Appx. 356 (8th Cir.

2015) (per curiam). The Sixth Circuit has adopted a similar test requiring that the court look only to the face of the complaint to determine if claims are colorable. In re The Gibson Group, Inc., 66 F.3d 1436, 1446 (6th Cir. 1995).

30. Other federal courts have adopted roughly the same standard—i.e., a claim is colorable if it is merely "plausible" and thus could survive a motion to dismiss. See In re America's Hobby Center, Inc., 223 B.R. 275, 282 (S.D.N.Y 1998); see also, e.g., In re GI Holdings, 313 B.R. at 631 (court must decide whether the committee has asserted "claims for relief that on appropriate proof would support a recovery"); Official Comm. v. Austin Fin. Serv. (In re KDI Holdings), 277 B.R. 493, 508 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999) (observing that the inquiry into whether a claim is colorable is similar to that undertaken on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim); In re iPCS, Inc., 297 B.R. 283, 291-92 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2003) (same).

31. In addition, in the non-bankruptcy context, the District Court for this district has explained that "[t]he requirement of a 'colorable claim' means only that the plaintiff must have an 'arguable claim' and not that the plaintiff must be able to succeed on that claim." Gonzales v. Columbia Hosp. at Med. City Dallas Subsidiary, L.P., 207 F. Supp. 2d 570, 577 (N.D. Tex. 2002).

32. This Court's analysis of whether the Valuation Proceeding sets forth a colorable claim is not a determination of whether the Court finds there is enough evidence presented. Rather, if on the face of the Valuation Complaint, there appears a plausible claim, then the Valuation Proceeding presents a colorable claim, and this Motion must be granted to allow Movants to file their Valuation Complaint.

33. In the First Claim for Relief of the Valuation Complaint, Movants seek disclosures of Claimant Trust Assets and request an accounting. An equitable accounting is proper "when the facts and accounts presented are so complex that adequate relief may not be obtained at law."

Gooden v. Mackie, No. 4:19-CV-02948, 2020 WL 714291 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 23 2020) (quoting McLaughlin v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. 4:12-CV-02658, 2013 WL 5231486, at *6 (S.D. Tex. Sep. 13, 2013); Bates Energy Oil & Gas v. Complete Oilfeld Servs., 361 F. Supp. 3d 633, 663 (W.D. Tex. 2019) (finding an equitable accounting claim was sufficiently stated when was a party was less than forthcoming in providing information and the available information was insufficient to determine what was done with a party's money); Phillips v. Estate of Poulin, No. 03-05-00099-CV, 2007 WL 2980179, at *3 (Tex. App.-Austin, Oct. 12, 2007, no pet.) (finding that an accounting order was appropriate where the facts are complex and when the plaintiff could not obtain adequate relief through standard discovery); Southwest Livestock & Trucking Co. v. Dooley, 884 S.W.2d 805, 809 (Tex. App.-San Antonio 1994, writ denied) (finding that an accounting was necessary in order to determine the identity of the property or the amount of money owed to a party).

34. The requested disclosures and accounting are necessary due to the lack of transparency surrounding the assets and liabilities of the Claimant Trust. The Court has retained jurisdiction to ensure that distributions to Holders of Allowed Equity Interests are accomplished pursuant to the provisions of the Plan. See Plan, Article XI. As set forth above and in the Valuation Complaint, Movants have concerns that those provisions are not being appropriately followed, and efforts to obtain the information necessary to confirm otherwise has been unavailable through discovery. As a result of the restrictions imposed on Movants, including Movants' inability, as holders of Contingent Claimant Trust Interests, to access virtually any financial information related to the Claimant Trust, Movants have little to no insight into the value of the Claimant Trust assets versus the Claimant Trust's obligations and no method to independently ascertain those amounts until Movants become Claimant Trust Beneficiaries. Because Movants are in the dark regarding the estate's assets and liabilities, as well as the estate's professional and incentive fees that are rapidly depleting the estate, there is a compelling need for the relief sought. Movants are unable to protect their own interests without an equitable accounting. Therefore, the First Claim for Relief sets forth a colorable claim.

35. The Second Claim for Relief of the Valuation Complaint sets forth Movants' request for a declaratory judgment regarding the value of Claimant Trust Assets compared to the bankruptcy estate obligations. When considering whether a valid declaratory judgment claim exists, a court must engage in a three-step inquiry. Orix Credit All., Inc. v. Wolfe, 212 F.3d 891, 895 (5th Cir. 2000). The court must ask (1) whether an actual controversy exists between the parties, (2) whether the court has the authority to grant such declaratory relief; and (3) whether the court should exercise its "discretion to decide or dismiss a declaratory judgment action." Id; see also In re Fieldwood Energy LLC, No. 20-33948, 2021 WL 4839321, at *4 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Oct. 15 2021) (seeking declaratory judgment regarding interpretation of a Plan and whether certain claims were discharged); In re Think3, Inc., 529 B.R. 147, 206-07 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2015) (sufficient actual controversy to bring a declaratory judgment action to assist with an early and prompt adjudication of claims and to promote judicial and party economy).

36. In this case, there can be no serious doubt that an actual controversy exists between the parties with respect to the relief sought, as the Debtor has already opposed the relief sought in the Valuation Complaint. Additionally, there is no dispute that the Court has the inherent power to grant the relief sought in the Proposed Complaint. Further, the third element is satisfied because this determination is important to the implementation of the Plan and distributions to Holders of Allowed Claims and Allowed Equity Interests. If the value of the Claimant Trust assets exceeds the obligations of the estate, then several currently pending adversary proceedings aimed at recovering value for HCMLP's estate are not necessary to pay creditors in full. As such, the pending adversary proceedings could be brought to a swift close, allowing creditors to be paid and the Bankruptcy Case to be brought to a close. In addition, such a determination by the Court could allow for a settlement that would cover the spread between current assets and obligations before that gap is further widened by the professional fees incurred by the Claimant Trust. Therefore, the Second Claim for Relief pleads a colorable claim.

37. Finally, in the Third Claim for Relief of the Valuation Complaint, Movants request a declaratory judgment and determination regarding the nature of their interests. As with the Second Claim for Relief, there is no serious dispute that an actual controversy exists between the parties and that the Court has the power to grant the relief requested. Additionally, the third element is satisfied because, in particular, in the event that the Court determines that the Claimant Trust assets exceed the obligations of the bankruptcy estate in an amount sufficient to pay all Allowable Claims indefeasibly, Movants seek a declaration and a determination that the conditions are such that their Contingent Claimant Trust Interests are likely to vest into Claimant Trust Interests, making them Claimant Trust Beneficiaries. To be clear, Plaintiffs do not ask the Court to determine that they are Claimant Trust Beneficiaries or otherwise to convert their contingent interests into non-contingent interests. All of that must be done according to the terms of the Plan and the Claimant Trust Agreement. However, the requested determination would further assist parties in interest, such as Movants, to ascertain whether the estate is capable of paying all creditors in full and also paying some amount to residual interest holders, as contemplated by the Plan and the Claimant Trust Agreement. Therefore, the Third Claim for Relief pleads a colorable claim.

38. The equitable relief sought in the Valuation Proceeding certainly meets any iteration of the standard for what constitutes "a colorable claim of any kind." Instead of using the information governing provisions of the Claimant Trust as a shield, HCMLP and the Claimant Trust are using them as a sword to enable continued litigation that ultimately provides no benefit to Claimant Trust Beneficiaries or Movants as holders of Contingent Claimant Trust Interests.

39. As set forth above, the Valuation Complaint seeks disclosure of information and an accounting that are related to the administration of the Plan and property to be distributed under the Plan, but not otherwise available to Movants. The Valuation Complaint also requests declaratory judgments within the Court's jurisdiction and relevant to the furtherance of the Bankruptcy Case. These claims are colorable, and this Motion for Leave should be granted.

WHEREFORE, Movants request the entry of an order i) granting this Motion for Leave; ii) determining that the Gatekeeping Provision is satisfied as applied to the Valuation Proceeding; and iii) authorizing Movants to file the Valuation Complaint.

Respectfully submitted,

Counsel for The Dugaboy Investment Trust and the Hunter Mountain Investment Trust

CERTIFICATE OF CONFERENCE

The undersigned hereby certifies that on February 5, 2023, Louis M. Phillips conferenced with counsel for Defendants, John Morris, regarding this motion. Counsel for Defendants was willing to stipulate that no gatekeeper motion was needed if Movants sought exactly the same relief as had been sought in their prior motion addressing these issues. Because the relief sought is better defined now, and to avoid further delay, in an excess of caution, Movants bring this motion. After filing, Movants will attempt to negotiate a resolution of this motion so that the Court can proceed directly to the merits.

HUNTER MOUNTAIN INVESTMENT TRUST'S EMERGENCY MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE VERIFIED ADVERARY PROCEEDING

Hunter Mountain Investment Trust ("HMIT"), Movant, files this Emergency Motion for Leave to File Verified Adversary Proceeding ("Motion"), both in its individual capacity and as a derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor, Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCM" or "Reorganized Debtor") and the Highland Claimant Trust against Muck Holdings, LLC ("Muck"), Jessup Holdings, LLC ("Jessup"), Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"), Stonehill Capital Management, LLC ("Stonehill"), James P. Seery, Jr. ("Seery") and John Doe Defendant Nos. 1-10 (Muck, Jessup, Stonehill, Farallon, Seery and the John Doe Defendant Nos. 11-10 are collectively "Respondents" or "Proposed Defendants").

I. Good Cause for Expedited Relief

1. HMIT seeks leave to file an Adversary Proceeding pursuant to the Court's "gatekeeping" orders, as well as the injunction and exculpation provisions in the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Doc. 1943), as modified (the "Plan").[1] A copy of HMIT's proposed Verified Adversary Proceeding ("Adversary Proceeding") is attached as Exhibit 1 to this Motion. This Motion is separately supported by objective evidence derived from historical filings in the bankruptcy proceedings,[2] as well as the declarations of James Dondero, dated May 2022 (Ex. 2), James Dondero, dated February 2023 (Ex. 3), and Sawnie A. McEntire with attached evidence (Ex. 4). [3]

[1] The exculpation provisions were recently modified by a decision of the Fifth Circuit. Such provisions apply to James P. Seery, Jr. only and are limited to his capacity as an Independent Director. Matter of Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 48 F.4th 419, 438 (5th Cir. 2022).

[2] Unless otherwise referenced, all references to evidence involving documents filed in the Debtor's bankruptcy proceedings (Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex.)) are cited by "Doc." reference. HMIT asks the Court to take judicial notice of the documents identified by such entries.

[3] The supporting declarations will be cited as Dondero 2022 Dec. (Ex. 2), Dondero 2023 Dec. (Ex. 3), and McEntire Dec. (Ex. 4).

2. The expedited nature of this Motion is permitted under Fed. R. Bank P. 9006 (c)(1), which authorizes a shortened time for a response and hearing for good cause. For the reasons set forth herein, HMIT has shown good cause and requests that the Court schedule a hearing on this Motion on three (3) days' notice, and that any responses be filed no later than twenty-four hours before the scheduled hearing.[4]

3. HMIT brings this Motion on behalf of itself and derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and the Highland Claimant Trust ("Claimant Trust"), as defined in the Claimant Trust Agreement (Doc. 3521-5) ("CTA").[5] Upon the Plan's Effective Date, Highland Capital Management, LP, as the original Debtor ("Original Debtor"), transferred its assets, including its causes of action, to the Claimant Trust, including the causes of action set forth in the attached Adversary Proceeding. The attached Adversary Proceeding alleges claims which are substantially more than "colorable" based upon plausible allegations that the Proposed Defendants, acting in concert, perpetrated a fraud,[6] including a fraud upon innocent stakeholders, as well as breaches of fiduciary

[4] Expedited action on this Motion is also warranted to hasten Movants' opportunity to file suit, pursue prompt relevant discovery, and reduce the threat of loss of potentially key evidence. Upon information and belief, Seery has been deleting text messages on his personal iPhone via a rolling, automatic deletion setting.

[5] Solely in the alternative, and in the unlikely event HMIT's proposed causes of actions against Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and/or Jessup are considered to be "Estate Claims" as those terms are used and defined within the CTA and Exhibit A to the Notice of Final Term Sheet [Docket No. 354] in HCM's bankruptcy (and without admitting the same), HMIT alternatively seeks standing to bring this action as a derivative action on behalf of the Litigation Sub-Trust as appropriate.

[6] Neither this Motion nor the proposed Adversary Complaint seeks to challenge the Court's Orders or the Plan. In addition, neither this Motion nor the proposed Adversary Complaint seeks to redistribute the assets of the Claimant Trust in a manner that would adversely impact innocent creditors. Rather, the duties and knowing participation in (or aiding and abetting) breaches of fiduciary duty. The Adversary Proceeding also alleges that the Proposed Defendants did so collectively by falsely representing the value of the Debtor's Estate, failing to timely disclose accurate values of the Debtor's Estate, and trading on material non-public information regarding such values. HMIT also alleges that the Proposed Defendants colluded to manipulate the Debtor's Estate—providing Seery the opportunity to plant close business allies into positions of control to approve Seery's compensation demands following the Effective Date.

4. Emergency relief is needed because of a fast-approaching date (April 16, 2023) that one or more of the Proposed Defendants may argue, depending upon choice of law, constitutes the expiration of the statute of limitations concerning some of the common law claims available to the Claimant Trust, as well as to HMIT.[7] Although HMIT offered to enter tolling agreements from each of the Proposed Defendants, they either rejected HMIT's requests or have not confirmed their willingness to do so, thereby necessitating the expedited nature of this Motion.[8] Because this Motion is subject to the proposed Adversary Proceeding seeks to benefit all innocent stakeholders while working within the terms and provisions of the Plan, as well as the Claimant Trust Agreement.

[7] The first insider trade at issue involved the sale and transfer of Claim 23 in the amount of $23 million held by ACMLD Claim, LLC to Muck on April 16, 2021 (Doc. 2215).

[8] HMIT has been diligent in its efforts to investigate the claims described in this Motion, including the filing of a Tex. R. Civ. P. Rule 202 proceeding in January 2023, which was not adjudicated until recently in March 2023. Those proceeding were conducted in the 191st Judicial District Court in Dallas County, Texas, under Cause DC-23-01004. See McEntire Dec. Ex. 4 and the attached Ex. 4-A. Farallon and Stonehill defended those proceedings by aggressively arguing, in significant part, that the discovery issues were better undertaken in this Court.[8] The Rule 202 Petition was recently dismissed (necessarily without prejudice)

Court's "gatekeeping" orders and the injunction provisions of the Plan, emergency leave is required.

5. This Motion will come as no surprise to the Proposed Defendants. Farallon and Stonehill were involved in recent pre-suit discovery proceedings under Rule 202 of the Texas Rules of Civil Procedure relating to the same insider trading allegations described in this Motion. Muck and Jessup, special purpose entities created and ostensibly controlled by Farallon and Stonehill, respectively, also were provided notice of these Rule 202 Proceedings in February 2023.[9] Like this Motion, the Rule 202 Proceedings focused on Muck, Jessup, Farallon, and Stonehill and their wrongful purchase of large, allowed claims in the Original Debtor's bankruptcy based upon material non-public information. Seery is also aware of these insider trading allegations because of a prior written demand.

6. In light of the Proposed Defendants' apparent refusal to enter tolling agreements, or their failure to fully affirm their willingness to do so, HMIT is forced to seek emergency relief from this Court to proceed timely with the proposed Adversary Proceeding before the expiration of any arguable limitations period.[10] on March 8, 2023, ostensibly based on such arguments. However, it is telling that Stonehill and Farallon admitted during the Rule 202 Proceedings to their "affiliation" with Muck and Jessup and that they bought the Claims through these entities.

[9] See Dec. of Sawnie McEntire, Ex. 4.

[10] HMIT respectfully requests that this Motion be addressed and decided on an expedited basis that provides HMIT sufficient time to bring the proposed action timely. In the event the Court denies the requested relief, HMIT respectfully requests prompt notice of the Court's ruling to allow HMIT sufficient

II. Summary of Claims

7. HMIT requests leave to commence the proposed Adversary Proceeding, attached as Exhibit 1, seeking redress for breaches of duty owed to HMIT, breaches of duties owed to the Original Debtor's Estate, aiding and abetting breaches of those fiduciary duties, conspiracy, unjust enrichment, and fraud. HMIT also alleges several viable remedies, including (i) imposition of a constructive trust; (ii) equitable disallowance of any unpaid balance on the claims at issue;[11] (iii) disgorgement of ill-gotten profits (received by Farallon, Stonehill, Muck and Jessup) to be restituted to the Claimant Trust; (iv) disgorgement of ill-gotten compensation (received by Seery) to be restituted to the Claimant Trust; (v) declaratory judgment relief; (vi) actual damages; and (vii) punitive damages.

III. Standing

8. HMIT. Prior to the Plan's Effective Date, HMIT was the largest equity holder in the Original Debtor and held a 99.5% limited partnership interest. HMIT currently holds a Class 10 Claim as a contingent Claimant Trust Interest under the CTA

time to seek, if necessary, appropriate relief in the United States District Court. In order to have a fair opportunity to seek such relief on a timely basis and protect HMIT's rights and the rights of the Reorganized Debtor, HMIT will need to seek such relief on or before Wednesday, April 5, 2023, if this Motion has not been resolved.

[11] In the alternative only, subordination of Muck's and Jessup's General Unsecured Claim Trust Interests and Subordinated Claim Trust Interests to all other interests in the Claimant Trust, including HMIT's Contingent Trust Interest, is necessary and appropriate to remedy Muck's and Jessup's wrongful conduct, and is also consistent with the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code.

(Doc. 3521-5). Upon information and belief, all conditions precedent to HMIT's certification as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary would be readily satisfied but for the Defendants' wrongful actions and conduct described in this Motion and the attached Adversary Proceeding.

9. Reorganized Debtor. Although HMIT has standing as a former Class B/C Equity Holder, Class 10 claimant, and now contingent Claimant Trust Interest under the CTA,[12] this Motion separately seeks authorization to prosecute the Adversary Proceeding derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust. All conditions precedent to bringing a derivative action are satisfied.

10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1 provides the procedural steps for "derivative actions," and applies to this proceeding pursuant to Fed. R. Bank. P. 7023.1. Applying Rule 7023.1, the Proposed Defendants' wrongful conduct occurred, and the improper trades consummated, in the spring and early summer of 2021, before the Effective Date in August 2021. During this period, HMIT was the 99.5% Class B/C limited partner in the original Debtor. As such, HMIT has individual standing to bring this action because Seery owed fiduciary duties directly to HMIT at that time, and the other Proposed Defendants aided and abetted breaches of those duties at that time.

11. The derivative nature of this proceeding is also appropriate because any demand on Seery would be futile.[13] Seery is the Claimant Trustee under the terms of the CTA. Furthermore, any demand on the Oversight Board to prosecute these claims would be equally futile because Muck and Jessup, both of whom are Proposed Defendants, dominate the Oversight Board.[14]

12. The "classic example" of a proper derivative action is when a debtor-in-possession is "unable or unwilling to fulfill its obligations" to prosecute an otherwise colorable claim where a conflict of interest exists. Cooper, 405 B.R. at 815 (quoting Louisiana World, 858 F.2d at 252). Here, because HMIT's proposed Adversary Proceeding includes claims against Seery, Muck, and Jessup, the conflicts of interest are undeniable. Seery is the Trustee of the Claimant Trust Assets under the CTA, and he also serves as the "Estate Representative."[15] Muck and Jessup, as successors to Acis, the Redeemer Committee and UBS, effectively control the Oversight Board, with the responsibility to "monitor and oversee the administration of the Claimant Trust and the Claimant Trustee's performance . . . ."[16]

[13] Any demand on the Litigation Sub-Trust would be equally futile for the same reasons addressed herein, since the Litigation Trustee serves at the direction of the Oversight Board.

13. Creditors' committees frequently bring suit on behalf of bankruptcy estates. Yet, it is clear that any appropriately designated party also may bring derivative claims. In re Reserve Prod., Inc., 232 B.R. 899, 902 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1999) (citations omitted); see In re Enron Corp., 319 B.R. 128, 131 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2004). As this Court has held in In Re Cooper:

> In Chapter 11 [cases], there is both a textual basis . . . and, frequently, a non-textual, equitable rationale for granting a creditor or creditors committee derivative standing to pursue estate actions (i.e., the equitable rationale coming into play when the debtor-in-possession has a conflict of interest in pursuing an action, such as in the situation of an insider-defendant).

In re Cooper, 405 B.R. 801, 803 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009) (also noting that "[c]onflicts of interest are, of course, frequently encountered in Chapter 11, where the metaphor of the 'fox guarding the hen house' is often apropos"); see also In re McConnell, 122 B.R. 41, 43-44 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1989) ("[I]ndividual creditors can also act in lieu of the trustee or debtor-in-possession . . . ."). Here, the Proposed Defendants are the "foxes guarding the hen house," and their conflicts of interest abound.[17] Proceeding in a derivative capacity is necessary, if not critical.

[17] See Citicorp Venture Cap., Ltd. v. Comm. of Creditors Holding Unsecured Claims, 160 F.3d 982, 987 (3d Cir. 1998) (settlement noteholders purchased Debtors' securities with "the benefit of non-public information acquired as a fiduciary" for the "dual purpose of making a profit and influenc[ing] the reorganization in [their] own self-interest."), see also, Wolf v. Weinstein, 372 U.S. 633, 642, 83 S.Ct. 969, 10 L.Ed.2d 33 (1963) ("Access to inside information or strategic position in a corporate reorganization renders the temptation to profit by trading in the Debtor's stock particularly pernicious.").

14. The proposed Adversary Proceeding also sets forth claims that readily satisfy the Court's threshold standards requiring "colorable" claims, as well as the requirements for a derivative action. This Motion, which is supported by objective evidence contained in historical filings in the bankruptcy proceedings, also incorporates sworn declarations. At the very least, this additional evidence satisfies the Court's threshold requirements of willful misconduct and fraud set forth in the "gatekeeping" orders, as well as the injunction and exculpation provisions in the Plan.[18] This evidence also supports well-pleaded allegations exempted from the scope of the releases included in the Plan.

15. HMIT is an appropriate party to bring this action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust. If successful, the Adversary Proceeding will likely recover well over $100 million for the Claimant Trust, thereby enabling the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust to pay off any remaining innocent creditors and make significant distributions to HMIT as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary.

16. As of December 31, 2022, the Claimant Trust had distributed 64.2% of the total $397,485,568 par value of all Class 8 and Class 9 unsecured creditor claims. The

[18] HMIT recognizes that it is an "Enjoined Party" under the Plan. The Plan requires a showing, inter alia, of bad faith, willful misconduct, or fraud against a "Protected Party." Seery is a "Protected Party" and an "Exculpated Party" in his capacity as an Independent Director. Muck and Jessup may be "Protected Parties" as members of the Oversight Committee, but they were not "protected" when they purchased the Claims before the Effective Date. While it is HMIT's position that Farallon and Stonehill do not qualify as "Protected Parties," they are included in this Motion in the interest of judicial economy.

Claims acquired by Muck and Jessup have an allowed par value of $365,000,000. Based on these numbers, the innocent unsecured creditors hold approximately $32 million in allowed claims.[19]

17. As of December 31, 2022, the Claimant Trust has distributed $255,201,228.[20] On a pro rata basis, that means that innocent creditors have received approximately $22,373,000 in distributions against the stated value of their allowed claims. That leaves a remaining unpaid balance of approximately $9,627,000.

18. Muck and Jessup already have received approximately $232.8 million on their Claims. Assuming and original investment of approximately $160 million, this represents over $72 million in ill-gotten profits that, if disgorged, would be far more than what is required to fully pay all other innocent creditors - immediately placing HMIT in the status of a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary. The benefits to the Reorganized Debtor, the Claimant Trust and innocent stakeholders are undeniable.[21]

19. Seery and the Oversight Board should be estopped from challenging HMIT's status to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Claimant Trust. Seery, Muck and Jessup have committed fraud, acted in bad faith and have unclean hands, and they should not be allowed to undermine the proposed Adversary Proceeding - which seeks to rectify significant wrongdoing. To hold otherwise would allow Seery, Muck, Jessup, Stonehill, and Farallon the opportunity to not just "guard the hen house," but to also open the door and take what they want.[22] HMIT seeks a declaratory judgment of its rights, accordingly.

[21] Further, under the present circumstances and time constraints, this Motion should be granted to avoid the prospect of the loss of some of HMIT's and the Claimant Trust's claims and denial of due process.

IV. The Proposed Defendants

20. Seery acted in several capacities during relevant times. He served as the Debtor's Chief Executive Officer ("CEO") and Chief Restructuring Officer ("CRO"). He also served as member of the Debtor's Independent Board.[23] He currently serves as Claimant Trustee under the CTA and remains the CEO of the Reorganized Debtor.

21. There is no doubt Seery owed the Original Debtor's Estate, as well as equity, fiduciary duties, including the duty of loyalty and the duty to avoid conflicts of interest. See In re Xtreme Power Inc., 563 B.R. 614, 632-33 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2016) (detailing fiduciary duties owed by corporate officers and directors under Delaware law); Louisiana World, 858 F.2d at 245-46 (detailing duties owed by debtors-in-possession).[24]

[22] "The doctrine of 'unclean hands' provides that "a litigant who engages in reprehensible conduct in relation to the matter in controversy ... forfeits his right to have the court hear his claim, regardless of its merit. [T]he purpose of the clean hands maxim is to protect the court against misuse by one who, because of his conduct, has forfeited his right to have the court consider his claims, regardless of their merit. As such it is not a matter of defense to be applied on behalf of a litigant; rather it is a rule of public policy." Portnoy v. Cryo-Cell Int'l, Inc., 940 A.2d 43, 80–81 (Del. Ch. 2008) (citations omitted) (internal quotations omitted for clarity).

22. Farallon and Stonehill are capital management companies which manage hedge funds; they are also Seery's close business allies with a long history of business ventures and close affiliation. Although they were strangers to the Original Debtor's bankruptcy on the petition date, and were not original creditors, they became entangled in this bankruptcy at Seery's invitation and encouragement—and then knowingly participated in the wrongful insider trades at issue. By doing so, Seery was able to plant friendly allies onto the Oversight Board to rubber stamp compensation demands. The proposed Adversary Proceeding alleges that Farallon and Stonehill bargained to receive handsome pay days in exchange.

23. Muck and Jessup are special purpose entities, admittedly created by Farallon and Stonehill on the eve of the alleged insider trades, and they were used as vehicles to assume ownership of the purchased claims.[25] The record is clear that Muck and Jessup did not exist before confirmation of the Plan in February 2021.[26] Now, however, Muck and Jessup serve on the Oversight Board with immense powers under the CTA.[27] When they purchased the claims at issue, Muck and Jessup were not acting in their official capacities on the Oversight Committee and, therefore, they were not "Protected Persons" under the Plan.

[25] See Ex. 4-B, Rule 202 Transcript at 55:22-25.

[26] See McEntire Dec., Ex. 4, Ex. 4-D, Ex. 4-E. Muck was created on March 9, 2021 before the Effective Date. Jessup was created on April 8, 2021, before the Effective Date.

[27] See Doc. 3521-5, Sec. 4(a) and 4(b).

24. By trading on the alleged material non-public information, Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup became non-statutory "insiders" with duties owed directly to HMIT at a time when HMIT was the largest equity holder.[28] See S.E.C. v. Cuban, 620 F.3d 551, 554 (5th Cir. 2010) ("The corporate insider is under a duty to 'disclose or abstain'—he must tell the shareholders of his knowledge and intention to trade or abstain from trading altogether."). In this context, there is no credible doubt that Farallon's and Stonehill's dealings with Seery were not arms-length. Again, Farallon and Stonehill were Seery's past business partners and close allies.[29] By virtue of the insider trades at issue, Farallon and Stonehill acquired control (acting through Muck and Jessup) over the Original Debtor and Reorganized Debtor through Seery's compensation agreement and awards, as well as supervisory powers over the Claimant Trust. This makes Farallon and Stonehill paradigm non-statutory insiders.

25. HMIT also seeks recovery against John Doe Defendant Nos. 1 through 10.[30] It is clear Farallon and Stonehill refuse to disclose the precise details of their legal

[29] Farallon and Stonehill are two capital management firms (similar to HCM) with whom Seery has had substantial business relationships. Also, Seery previously served as legal counsel to Farallon. Seery also has a long-standing relationship with Stonehill. GCM Grosvenor, a global asset management firm, held four seats on the Redeemer Committee (an original member of the Unsecured Creditors Committee in HCM's bankruptcy). Upon information and belief, GCM Grosvenor is a significant investor in Stonehill and Farallon. GCM Grosvenor, through Redeemer, also played a large part in appointing Seery as a director of Strand Advisors and approved his appointment as HCM's CEO and CRO.

relationships with Muck and Jessup. They resisted such discovery in the prior Rule 202 Proceedings in state district court.[31] They also refused to disclose such details in response to a prior inquiry to their counsel.[32] Furthermore, the corporate filings of both Muck and Farallon conspicuously omit the identity of their respective members or managing members.[33] Accordingly, HMIT intends to prosecute claims against John Doe Defendant Nos. 1 -- 10 seeking equitable tolling pending further discovery whether Farallon and Stonehill inserted intermediate corporate layers between themselves and the special purpose entities (Muck and Jessup) they created. See In re ATP Oil & Gas Corp., No. 12-36187, 2017 WL 2123867, *4 (Bankr. V. Background

26. As part of this Court's Governance Order, an independent board of directors—which included Seery as one of the selections of the Unsecured Creditor's Committee—was appointed to the Board of Directors (the "Board") of Strand Advisors, Inc., ("Strand Advisors"), the Original Debtor's general partner. Following approval of the Governance Order, the Board then appointed Seery as the Original Debtor's CEO and CRO. [34] Following the Effective Date of the Plan, Seery now serves as Trustee of the Claimant Trust (the Reorganized Debtor's sole post-reorganization limited partner), and continues to serve as the Reorganized Debtor's CEO. [35]

27. Imbued with his powers as CEO and CRO, Seery negotiated and obtained bankruptcy court approval of several settlements prior to the Effective Date, resulting in the following approximate allowed claims (hereinafter "Claims"):[36]

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9
Redeemer	$137 mm	$0 mm
Acis	$23 mm	$0 mm
HarbourVest	$45 mm	$35 mm
UBS	$65 mm	$60 mm
(Totals)	$270 mm	$95 mm

Each of the settling parties curiously sold their Claims to Farallon or Stonehill (or their affiliated special purpose entities) shortly after they obtained court approval of their settlements. One of these "trades" occurred within just a few weeks before the Effective Date. Farallon and Stonehill coordinated and controlled the purchase of these Claims through Muck and Jessup, and they admitted in open court that Muck and Jessup were created to allow their purchase of the Claims.[37]

28. HMIT alleges that Seery filed (or caused to be filed) deflated, misleading projections regarding the value of the Debtor's Estate,[38] while inducing unsecured creditors to discount and sell their Claims to Farallon and Stonehill. But as reflected in the attached declarations, it is now known that Seery provided material, non-public information to Farallon. The circumstantial evidence is also clear that both Farallon and Stonehill had access to and used this non-public information in connection with their purchase decisions.

29. Farallon and Stonehill are registered investment advisors who have their own fiduciary duties to their investors, and they are acutely aware of what these duties entail. Yet, upon information and belief, they collectively invested over $160 million dollars to purchase the Claims in the absence of any publicly available information that could rationally justify such investments. These "trades" become even more suspect because, at the time of confirmation, the Plan provided pessimistic projections advising stakeholders that the Claim holders would never receive full satisfaction:

- From October 2019, when the original Chapter 11 Petition was filed, to January 2021, just before the Plan was confirmed, the valuation of HCM's assets dropped over $200 million from $566 million to $328.3 million.[39]
- HCM's Disclosure Statement projected payment of 71.32% of Class 8 claims, and 0% of claims in Classes 9-11;[40]
  - This meant that Farallon and Stonehill invested more than $103 million in Claims when the publicly available information indicated they would receive $0 in return on their investment as Class 9 creditors and substantially less than par on their Class 8 Claims.
- In HCM's Q3 2021 Post-Confirmation Report, HCM reported that the amount of Class 8 claims expected to be paid dropped even further from 71% to 54%;[41]

30. In the third financial quarter of 2021, just over $6 million of the projected $205 million available to satisfy general unsecured creditors was disbursed.[42] No additional distributions were made to the unsecured claimholders until, suddenly, in Q3 2022 almost $250 million was paid toward Class 8 general unsecured claims—$45 million more than was ever projected.[43]

31. According to Highland Capital's Motion for Exit Financing,[44] and a recent motion filed by Dugaboy Investment Trust,[45] there remain substantial assets to be monetized for the benefit of the Reorganized Debtor's creditors. Thus, upon information and belief, Stonehill and Farallon, stand to realize significant profits on their wrongful investments. In turn, Stonehill and Farallon will garner (and already have garnered) substantial fees – both base fees and performance fees – as the result of their acquiring and/or managing the Claims. Upon information and belief, HMIT also alleges that Seery has received excessive compensation and bonuses approved by Farallon (Muck) and Stonehill (Jessup) as members of the Oversight Board.

32. As evidenced in the supporting declarations (Exs. 2 and 3):

- Farallon admitted it conducted no due diligence and relied upon Seery in making its multi-million-dollar investment decisions at issue.[46]
- Farallon admitted it was unwilling to sell its stake in these Claims at any price because Seery assured Farallon that the Claims were tremendously valuable.[47]
- Farallon bragged about the value of its investment referencing non-public information regarding Amazon, Inc.'s ("Amazon") interest in acquiring Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Inc. ("MGM").[48]

- Farallon was unwilling to sell its stake in the newly acquired Claims even though publicly available information suggested that Farallon would lose millions of dollars on its investment.[49]

Farallon can offer no credible explanation to explain its significant investment, and its refusal to sell at any price, except Farallon's access to material non-public information. In essence, Seery became the guarantor of Farallon's significant investment. Farallon admitted as much in its statements to James Dondero.

33. The same holds true for Stonehill. Given the negative, publicly available information, Stonehill's multi-million-dollar investments make no rational sense unless Stonehill had access to material non-public information.

34. Fed. R. Bank. P. 2015.3 requires debtors to "file periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability of each entity that is not a publicly traded corporation or a debtor in a case under title 11, and in which the estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." However, no public reports required by Rule 2015.3 were filed. Seery testified they simply "fell through the cracks." [50]

35. Six days prior to the filing of the motion seeking approval of the HarbourVest Settlement, Seery acquired material non-public information regarding Amazon's interest in acquiring MGM.[51] Upon receipt of this material non-public information, MGM should have been placed on the Original Debtor's "restricted list," but Seery continued to move forward with deals that involved MGM stock and notes.[52] Because the Original Debtor additionally held direct interests in MGM,[53] the value of MGM was of paramount importance to the value of the estate.

36. Armed with this and other insider information, Farallon—through Muck—proceeded to invest in the Claims and, acting through Muck, acceded to a powerful position on the Oversight Board to oversee future distributions to Muck and itself. It is no coincidence Seery invited his business allies into these bankruptcy proceedings with promises of great profits. Seery's allies now oversee his compensation.[54]

37. The Court also should be aware that the Texas States Securities Board ("TSSB") opened an investigation into the subject matter of the insider trades at issue, and this investigation has not been closed. The continuing nature of this investigation

[52] As part of the HarbourVest Settlement, Seery negotiated the purchase of HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF for approximately $22.5 million as part of the transaction. Approximately 19.1% of HCLOF's assets were comprised of debt and equity in MGM. The HCLOF interest was not to be transferred to the Debtor for distribution as part of the bankruptcy estate, but rather to "to an entity to be designated by the Debtor"—i.e., one that was not subject to typical bankruptcy reporting requirements. Doc. 1625, p. 9, n. 5. Doc. 1625.

[54] Amazon closed on its acquisition of MGM in March 2022, but the evidence strongly suggests that agreements for the trades already had been reached - while announcement of the trades occurred strategically after the MGM news became public. Now, as a result of their wrongful conduct, Stonehill and Farallon profited significantly on their investments, and they stand to gain substantially more profits.

underscores HMIT's position that the claims described in the attached Adversary Proceeding are plausible and certainly far more than merely "colorable."

VI. Argument

A. HMIT has asserted Colorable Claims against Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and Jessup.

38. Unlike the terms "Enjoined Party," "Protected Party," or "Exculpated Party," the Plan does not define what constitutes a "colorable" claim. Nor does the Bankruptcy Code define the term. However, relevant authorities suggest that a Rule 12(b)(6) standard is an appropriate analogue.

39. The Fifth Circuit has held that a "colorable" claim standard is met if a [movant], such as HMIT, has asserted claims for relief that, on appropriate proof, would allow a recovery. A court need not and should not conduct an evidentiary hearing but must ensure that the claims do not lack any merit whatsoever. Louisiana World Exposition v. Fed. Ins. Co., 858 F.2d 233, 248 (5th Cir. 1988). Stated differently, the Court need not be satisfied there is an evidentiary basis for the asserted claims but instead should allow the claims if they appear to have some merit.

40. Other federal appellate courts have reached similar conclusions. For example, the Eighth Circuit holds that "creditors' claims are colorable if they would survive a motion to dismiss." In re Racing Services, Inc., 540 F.3d 892, 900 (8th Cir. 2008); accord In Re Foster, 516 B.R. 537, 542 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2014), aff'd 602 Fed. Appx. 356 (8th Cir. 2015) (per curiam). The Sixth Circuit has adopted a similar test requiring that the court look only to the face of the complaint to determine if claims are colorable. In re The Gibson Group, Inc., 66 F.3d 1436, 1446 (6th Cir. 1995) (emphasis added).

41. Although there is a dearth of federal court authorities in Texas, other federal courts have adopted the same standard—i.e., a claim is colorable if it is "plausible" and could survive a motion to dismiss. See In re America's Hobby Center, Inc., 223 B.R. 273, 282 (S.D.N.Y 1998). In addition, in the non-bankruptcy context, the District Court for the Northern District of Texas explained that "[t]he requirement of a 'colorable claim' means only that the plaintiff must have an 'arguable claim' and not that the plaintiff must be able to succeed on that claim." Gonzales v. Columbia Hosp. at Med. City Dallas Subsidiary, L.P., 207 F. Supp. 2d 570, 577 (N.D. Tex. 2002) (Emphasis added).

42. Thus, in this instance, this Court's gatekeeping inquiry is properly limited to whether HMIT has stated a plausible claim on the face of the proposed pleadings involving "bad faith," "willful misconduct," or "fraud." Because the face of the Adversary Complaint alleges plausible facts, HMIT's Motion is properly granted. Clearly, the attached Adversary Proceeding would survive a Rule 12(b)(6) challenge. Furthermore, the supporting declarations and documentary evidence provide additional support, and the circumstantial evidence proves that Farallon and Stonehill, strangers to the bankruptcy on the petition date, would not have leaped into these proceedings without undisclosed assurances of profit.

B. Fraud

43. As set forth in the proposed Adversary Proceeding, HMIT alleges a colorable claim for fraud—both fraud by knowing misrepresentation and fraud by omission of material fact. Here, these allegations of fraud are appropriately governed by Texas law under appropriate choice of law principals.[55]

44. Seery had a duty to not provide material inside information to his business allies. But, he did so. At the latest, Seery became aware of the potential sale of MGM in December 2020 when he received an email from Jim Dondero.[56] Thus, Seery knew at that time that this potential sale would likely yield significant value to the Original Debtor's Estate. Yet, the financial disclosures associated with the Plan's confirmation, which were provided only a month later, presented an entirely different outlook for both Class 8 and Class 9 unsecured creditors.[57] Seery knew at that time that these pessimistic disclosures were misleading, if not inaccurate.

45. There is no credible doubt Seery intended that innocent stakeholders would rely upon the pessimistic projections set forth in the Plan Analysis. Indeed, the singular purpose of the Plan Analysis was to advise stakeholders. As such, HMIT alleges that Seery knowingly made misrepresentations with the intention that innocent stakeholders would rely, and that he failed to disclose material information concerning his entanglements with Farallon and Stonehill, as well as the related negotiations that were chock full of conflicts of interest.

[55] However, Delaware law is substantially similar on the elements of fraud. See Malinals v. Kramer, No. CIV.A. CPU 6-11002145, 2012 WL 174958, at 2 (Del. Com. PI. Jan. 5, 2012)

46. On the flip side of this conspiracy coin, Farallon and Stonehill were engaged in negotiations to acquire the Claims at discounted prices; and, they successfully did so. HMIT alleges that their success was based on knowledge that the financial disclosures associated with the Plan Analysis were significantly understated. Otherwise, it would make no financial sense for Farallon and Stonehill to do the deals at issue. Indeed, Farallon admitted that it would not sell the Claims at any price, expressing great confidence in the substantial profits it expected even in the absence of any supporting, publicly available information.[58]

47. All of the Proposed Defendants had a duty of affirmative disclosure under these circumstances. Seery always had this duty. Muck, Jessup, Farallon, and Stonehill assumed this duty when they became non-statutory "insiders." Thus, all of the Proposed Defendants are liable for conspiring to perpetrate a fraud by omission of material facts.

48. HMIT also claims that Seery and the other Proposed Defendants failed to disclose material information concerning Seery's involvement in brokering the Claims in exchange for quid pro quo assurances of enhanced compensation. Seery's compensation should be disgorged or, alternatively, such compensation constitutes a damage recoverable by the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust as assignees (or transferees) of the Original Debtor's causes of action. This compensation was the product of the alleged self-dealing, breaches of fiduciary duty, and fraud.

C. Breaches and Aiding and Abetting Breaches of Fiduciary Duties

49. It is beyond dispute Seery owed fiduciary duties to the Estate. See Xtreme Power, 563 B.R. at 632-33 (detailing fiduciary duties owed by corporate officers and directors under Delaware law);[59] Louisiana World, 858 F.2d at 245-46 (5th Cir. 1988) (detailing duties owed by debtors-in-possession). Although Seery did not buy the Claims at issue, he stood to profit from these sales because his close business allies would do his bidding after they had acceded to positions of power and control on the Oversight Board. Muck and Jessup were essentially stepping into the shoes of three of the largest unsecured creditors who were already slated to serve on the Oversight Board. Thus, by acquiring their Claims, all of the Proposed Defendants knew that Muck and Jessup would occupy these powerful oversight positions after the Effective Date.

50. Thus, the alleged conspiracy was successfully implemented before the Effective Date. Farallon and Stonehill now occupy control positions through the shell entities (Muck and Jessup) overseeing large compensation packages for Seery. Of course, this control (and the opportunity to control) presented a patent conflict of interest which Seery should have avoided, but instead knowingly created, fostered, and encouraged. HMIT alleges that Seery breached his duty to avoid this conflict or otherwise disclose this conflict and Farallon and Stonehill aided and abetted this breach.

51. The Original Debtor, as an investment adviser registered with the SEC, is also required to make public disclosures on its Form ADV, the uniform registration form for investment advisers required by the SEC. These Form ADV disclosures, which were in effect at the time of the insider trades at issue, explicitly forbade "any access person from trading either personally or on behalf of others . . . on material non-public information or communicating material non-public information to others in violation of the law or duty owed to another party."[60] It now appears these representations were false when made. Seery's alleged conduct also violated, at minimum, the duties Seery owed in his various capacities with the Original Debtor under the Form ADV disclosures.

52. Although initially strangers to the original bankruptcy, by accepting and using inside information, Farallon and Stonehill became "temporary insiders" and thus owed separate duties to the Estate. See S.E.C. v. Cuban, 620 F.3d 551 (5th Cir. 2010) ("[E]ven an individual who does not qualify as a traditional insider may become a 'temporary insider' if by entering 'into a special confidential relationship in the conduct of the business of the enterprise [they] are given access to information solely for corporate purposes." In re Washington Mut., Inc., 461 B.R. 200 (Bankr. D. Del. 2011), vacated in part, 08-12229 MFW, 2012 WL 1563880 (Bankr. D. Del. Feb. 24, 2012) (finding that equity committee stated colorable claim for equitable disallowance against creditors who "became temporary insiders of the Debtors when the Debtors gave them confidential information and allowed them to participate in negotiations with JPMC for the shared goal of reaching a settlement that would form the basis of a consensual plan of reorganization"; vacated in part as a condition of settlement only);[61] See also, In re Smith, 415 B.R. 222, 232-33 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009) ("[a]n insider is an entity or person with 'a sufficiently close relationship with the debtor that his conduct is made subject to closer scrutiny than those dealing at arm's length with the debtor.' 'Thus, the term "insider" is viewed to encompass two classes: (1) per se insiders as listed in the Code and (2) extra-statutory insiders that do not deal at arm's length.'" (citations omitted)). Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup clearly fall into this latter category.

[61] Although the Washington Mutual case was subsequently vacated, the Court's intellectual reasoning remains valid because the vacatur was mandated by a mediated settlement, not because the court's logic was flawed or changed, and the court expressly noted that the parties' settlement was conditioned on vacatur. See In re Washington Mut., Inc., No. 08-12229 MFW, 2012 WL 1563880, *8 (Bankr. D. Del. Feb. 24, 2012) ("grant[ing] partial vacatur . . . in furtherance of the settlement embodied in the Plan," and noting that "absent the requested vacatur, the collapse of the Plan could result in the termination of the Global Settlement Agreement." (emphasis added)).

53. Because Farallon and Stonehill (acting through Muck and Jessup) now hold the majority of the seats on the Oversight Board, they, along with Seery, exercise control of the reorganization proceedings. At no time were Farallon, Stonehill, or Seery's plans disclosed to the other creditors or equity. In fact, the only inference that can be reasonably drawn is that Farallon and Stonehill brazenly sought to conceal their involvement by establishing shell entities—Muck and Jessup—to nominally hold the Claims and create an opaque barrier to any effort to identify the "Oz behind the curtain." Such conduct aligns precisely with the inequitable conduct detailed in Citicorp and Adelphia (discussed below).

54. In sum, the proposed Adversary Proceeding sets forth plausible allegations that Stonehill and Farallon were aware of Seery's fiduciary duties. Indeed, as registered investment advisors, both Farallon and Stonehill were acutely aware of Seery's fiduciary obligations, including, without limitation, the duty to act in the best interests of the Original Debtor's Estate and the duty not to engage in insider trading that would benefit Seery, as an insider, and themselves, as non-statutory insiders. By accepting and then acting on material non-public information, Farallon and Stonehill (as well as Muck and Jessup) aided and abetted breaches of these fiduciary duties. By placing themselves in positions to control Seery's compensation, Farallon and Stonehill (acting through Muck and Jessup) induced, encouraged, aided and abetted Seery's self-dealing.

D. Equitable Disallowance is an Appropriate Remedy

55. HMIT also seeks equitable disallowance. Although the Fifth Circuit in Matter of Mobile Steel Co. generally limited the court's equitable powers to subordination rather than disallowance,[62] the Fifth Circuit did not foreclose the viability of equitable disallowance as a potential remedy. See 563 F.2d 692, 699 n. 10 (5th Cir. 1977). Binding U.S. Supreme Court precedent in Pepper v. Litton also permits bankruptcy courts to fashion disallowance remedies. 308 U.S. 295, 304-11 (1939). Bankruptcy Code § 510, which supplies the authority for equitable subordination, was "intended to codify case law, such as Pepper v. Litton . . . and is not intended to limit the court's power in any way…. Nor does [it] preclude a bankruptcy court from completely disallowing a claim in appropriate circumstances." In re Adelphia Commun. Corp., 365 B.R. 24, 71-72 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007), aff'd in part sub nom. Adelphia Recovery Tr. v. Bank of Am., N.A., 390 B.R. 64 (S.D.N.Y. 2008), adhered to on reconsideration, 05 CIV. 9050 (LMM), 2008 WL 1959542 (S.D.N.Y. May 5, 2008) (emphasis and omissions in original).[63] creditors "are fully protected by subordination" and "[i]f the misconduct directed against the bankrupt is so extreme that disallowance might appear to be warranted, then surely the claim is either invalid or the bankrupt possesses a clear defense against it." Mobile Steel, 563 F.2d at 699 n. 10 (emphasis added). Importantly, however, the factual scenarios considered in Mobile Steel do not exist here.

56. The Fifth Circuit's decision in Mobile Steel also was premised on the notion that disallowance would not add to the quiver of defenses to fight unfairness because

[63] In Washington Mutual, the Court's intellectual reasoning when imposing disallowance is instructive. See In re Washington Mut., Inc., No. 08-12229 MFW, 2012 WL 1563880, *8 (Bankr. D. Del. Feb. 24, 2012) ("grant[ing] partial vacatur . . . in furtherance of the settlement embodied in the Plan," and noting that "absent the requested vacatur, the collapse of the Plan could result in the termination of the Global Settlement Agreement." (emphasis added)).

57. Here, Muck and Jessup purchased both Class 8 and Class 9 Claims, and they now effectively occupy more than 90% of the entire field of unsecured creditors in these two claimant tiers. Thus, subordination cannot effectively address the current facts where the Original Debtor's CEO and CRO conspired directly with close business allies who acquired the largest unsecured claims to the detriment of other innocent creditors and former equity. The reasoning in published cases from other circuits supports this conclusion. See Adelphia, 365 B.R. at 71-73; Citicorp Venture Capital, Ltd. v. Comm. of Creditors Holding Unsecured Claims, 160 F.3d 982, 991 n. 7 (3d Cir. 1998).

58. The purpose of equitable subordination is to assure that the wrongdoer does not profit from bad conduct. In the typical case, subordination to other creditors will achieve this deterrence. But, it is clear that the Third Circuit's decision in Citicorp was structured to use subordination as just one tool in a larger tool box to make sure "at a minimum, the remedy here should deprive – [the fiduciary] of its profit on the purchase of the notes." Id at 991. In Adelphia, the Southern District of New York also used equitable subordination as a remedy to address wrongs of non-insiders who aided and abetted breaches a fiduciary duty by the debtor's management. 365 B.R. at 32.

59. But subordination cannot adequately address the wrongful conduct at issue. This is because subordination is typically limited to instances where one creditor is subordinated to other creditors, not equity. Here, for all practical purposes, there are only a few other unsecured creditors with relatively small stakes. Therefore, subordination as a weapon of deterrence is neutered.

60. In sum, by engaging in the alleged wrongful acts, including aiding and abetting Seery's breaches of fiduciary duty, Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup should not be rewarded. The Proposed Defendants engaged in alleged conduct which damaged the Original Debtor's estate, including improper agreements to compensate Seery under the terms of the CTA. Equitable disallowance is an appropriate remedy which, when combined with disgorgement of all ill-gotten profits, will deprive the Proposed Defendants of their ill-gotten gains.

E. Disgorgement and Unjust Enrichment

61. The law is clear that disgorgement is an available remedy for breach of fiduciary duty both under Texas Law, see Kinzbach Tool Co. v. Corbett-Wallace Corporation, 160 S.W. 2d 509 (Tex. 1942), and under Delaware law, see Metro Storage International, LLC v. Harron, 275 A.3d 810 (Del. Ch. 2022). Disgorgement is also an appropriate remedy for unjust enrichment under Texas law, Hunter v. Shell Oil Co., 198 F.2d 485 (5th Cir. 1952), and under Delaware law, In re Tyson Foods, Inc. Consolidated Shareholder Litigation, 919 A.2d 563 (Del. Ch. 2007).[64]

62. Likewise, the imposition of a constructive trust is proper for addressing unjust enrichment under both Delaware and Texas law, see Teacher's Retirement System of Louisiana v. Aidinoff, 900 A.2d 654 (Del. Ch. 2006) and Hsin-Chi-Su v. Vantage Drilling Company, 474 S.W. 3d 384 (Tex. App. – 14th Dist. 2015), pet. denied. The elements of unjust enrichment are: (1) the defendant must have gained a benefit (2) at the expense of plaintiff, (3) and retention of that benefit must be shown to be unjust. See Restatement (Third) of Restitution and Unjust Enrichment §321, cmt. e (2011).

63. Here, the imposition of a constructive trust and disgorgement are clearly appropriate to provide redress for the alleged breaches of fiduciary duty and the knowing participation in (or aiding and abetting) those breaches. Furthermore, the imposition of a constructive trust and disgorgement are appropriate to disgorge the improper benefits that all of the Proposed Defendants received by virtue of collusion and insider trading.

64. As set forth in the proposed Adversary Proceeding, Seery gained the opportunity to have his compensation demands rubber stamped. The other Defendants gained the opportunity to purchase valuable claims at a discount knowing that pessimistic financial projections were false and that the upside investment potential was great. Retention of the benefits they received would be unjust and inequitable.

65. Clearly, the Debtor's Estate was damaged by virtue of the claimed conduct. Seery obtained profits and compensation to the detriment of that estate as well as the estate of the Reorganized Debtor, other innocent creditors and HMIT, as former equity and as a contingent Claimant Trust Beneficiary.

F. Declaratory Relief

66. HMIT also seeks declaratory relief pursuant to Fed. R. Bank P. 7001(9). Specifically, HMIT seeks a declaratory judgment that: (a) there is a ripe controversy concerning HMIT's rights and entitlements under the Claimant Trust Agreement; (b) as a general matter, HMIT has standing to bring an action against a trustee even if its interest is considered "contingent;" (c) HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested upon disgorgement of the ill-gotten profits of Muck and Jessup, and by extension, Farallon and Stonehill; (d) HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested upon the equitable disallowance of the Claims held by Muck and Jessup over and above their initial investments; (e) Seery is properly estopped from asserting that HMIT is not an appropriate party to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and/or the Claimant Trust because of fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct, and unclean hands; (f) Muck and Jessup are properly estopped from asserting that HMIT is not an appropriate party to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized

Debtor and the Claimant Trust because of their fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct, and unclean hands; and (g) all of the Proposed Defendants are estopped from asserting that HMIT does not have standing in its individual capacity due to their fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct, and unclean hands.

G. HMIT has Direct Standing.

67. The Texas Supreme Court recently held that "a partner or other stakeholder in a business organization has constitutional standing to sue for an alleged loss in the value of its interest in the organization." Pike v. Texas EMC Mgt., LLC, 610 S.W.3d 763, 778 (Tex. 2020). In so holding, the Court considered federal law and found that the traditional "incantation that a shareholder may not sue for the corporation's injury" is really a question of capacity, which goes to the merits of a claim, rather than an issue of standing that would impact subject matter jurisdiction. Id. at 777 (noting that the 5th Circuit and "[o]ther federal circuits agree that a plaintiff has standing to sue for the lost value of its investment in a corporation"). Because Seery, Muck, Jessup, Stonehill, Farallon's alleged actions devalued HMIT's interest in the Debtor's Estate, including, without limitation, payment of excessive compensation to Seery, HMIT has standing to pursue its common law claims directly. HMIT also has direct standing to seek declaratory relief as set forth in the proposed Adversary Proceeding.

VII. Prayer

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, Hunter Mountain Investment Trust respectfully requests this Court grant HMIT leave authorizing it to file the Adversary Complaint, attached as Exhibit 1, as an Adversary Proceeding in this United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, in its own name and as a derivative action on behalf of the Debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P., against Muck Holdings, LLC, Jessup Holdings, LLC, Farallon Capital Management, LLC, Stonehill Capital Management, LLC, James P. Seery, Jr., and John Doe Defendants Nos. 1 – 10, and further grant HMIT all such other and further relief to which HMIT may be justly entitled.

CERTIFICATE OF CONFERENCE

Beginning on March 24, 2023, and also on March 27, 2023, the undersigned counsel conferred either by telephone or via email with all counsel for all Respondents regarding the relief requested in the foregoing Motion, including John A. Morris on behalf of James P. Seery, and Brent McIlwain on behalf of Muck Holdings LLC, Jessup Holdings LLC, Stonehill Capital Management, and Farallon Capital Management. Mr. Seery is opposed to this Motion. Based upon all communications with Mr. McIlwain, it is reasonably believed his clients are also opposed and we advised him that this recitation would be placed in the certificate of conference.

IN RE JAMES DONDERO,	§	IN THE DISTRICT COURT
	§
Petitioner.	§	95th JUDICIAL DISTRICT
	§	DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS

DECLARATION OF JAMES DONDERO

COUNTY OF DALLAS §
STATE OF TEXAS §

Mr. James Dondero provides this unsworn declaration under TEXAS CIVIL PRACTICE & REMEDIES CODE § 132.001.

1. My name is James Dondero. I declare under penalty of perjury that I am over the age of 18 and of sound mind and competent to make this declaration.

2. Earlier this year I retained investigators to look into certain activities involving the respondents in the above-styled case and the related bankruptcy proceedings. Last year, I called Farallon's Michael Lin about purchasing their claims in the bankruptcy. I offered them 30% more than what they paid. I was told by Michael Lin of Farallon that they purchased the interests without doing any due diligence other than what Mr. James Seery—the CEO of Highland—told them, and that he told them that the interests would be worth far more than what Farallon paid. Given the value of those claims that Mr. Seery had testified in court, it made no sense to me that Mr. Lin would think that the claims were worth more than what Mr. Seery testified under oath was the value of the bankruptcy claims.

3. In addition to my role as equity holder in the Crusader Funds, I have an interest in ensuring that the claims purchased by Respondents are not used as a means to deprive the equity holders of their share of the funds. It has become obvious that despite the fact that the bankrupt estate has enough money to pay all claimants 100 cents on the dollar, there is plainly a movement afoot to drain the bankrupt estate and deprive equity of their rights.

4. Accordingly, I commissioned an investigation by counsel who have been in communication with the Office of the United States Trustee. True and correct copies of the reports, which were created in the ordinary course, and their attachments, are attached hereto as Exhibits A and B. A true and correct copy of the letter I received from Alverez and Marsal is attached as Exhibit C hereto.

My name is James Dondero, my birthday is on June 29, 1962. My address is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, Texas 75201. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing testimony is true and correct and is within my personal knowledge.

Re: Highland Capital Management, L.P. – USBC Case No. 19-34054sgj11

Dear Nan,

The purpose of this letter is to request that your office investigate the circumstances surrounding the sale of claims by members of the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors ("Creditors' Committee") in the bankruptcy of Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or "Debtor"). As described in detail below, there is sufficient evidence to warrant an immediate investigation into whether non-public inside information was furnished to claims purchasers. Further, there is reason to suspect that selling Creditors' Committee members may have violated their fiduciary duties to the estate by tying themselves to claims sales at a time when they should have been considering meaningful offers to resolve the bankruptcy. Indeed, three of four Committee members sold their claims without advance disclosure, in violation of applicable guidelines from the U.S. Trustee's Office. This letter contains a description of information and evidence we have been able to gather, and which we hope your office will take seriously.

By way of background, Highland, an SEC-registered investment adviser, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware on October 16, 2019, listing over $550 million in assets and net $110 million in liabilities. The case eventually was transferred to the Northern District of Texas, to Judge Stacey G.C. Jernigan. Highland's decision to seek bankruptcy protection primarily was driven by an expected net $110 million arbitration award in favor of the "Redeemer Committee."[1] After nearly 30 years of successful operations, Highland and its co-founder, James Dondero, were advised by Debtor's counsel that a court-approved restructuring of the award in Delaware was in Highland's best interest.

[1] The "Redeemer Committee" was a group of investors in a Debtor-managed fund called the "Crusader Fund" that sought to redeem their interests during the global financial crisis. To avoid a run on the fund at low-watermark prices, the fund manager temporarily suspended redemptions, which resulted in a dispute between the investors and the fund manager. The ultimate resolution involved the formation of the "Redeemer Committee" and an orderly liquidation of the fund, which resulted in the investors receiving their investment plus a return versus the 20 cents on the dollar they would have received had the fund been liquidated when the redemption requests were made.

I became involved in Highland's bankruptcy through my representation of The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy"), an irrevocable trust of which Mr. Dondero is the primary beneficiary. Although there were many issues raised by Dugaboy and others in the case where we disagreed with the Court's rulings, we will address those issues through the appeals process.

From the outset of the case, the Creditors' Committee and the U.S. Trustee's Office in Dallas pushed to replace the existing management of the Debtor. To avoid a protracted dispute and to facilitate the restructuring, on January 9, 2020, Mr. Dondero reached an agreement with the Creditors' Committee to resign as the sole director of the Debtor's general partner, on the condition that he would be replaced by three independent directors who would act as fiduciaries of the estate and work to restructure Highland's business so it could continue operating and emerge from bankruptcy as a going concern. The agreement approved by the Bankruptcy Court allowed Mr. Dondero, UBS (which held one of the largest claims against the estate), and the Redeemer Committee each to choose one director and also established protocols for operations going forward. Mr. Dondero chose The Honorable Former Judge Russell F. Nelms, UBS chose John Dubel, and the Redeemer Committee chose James Seery.[2] It was expected that the new, independent management would not only preserve Highland's business but would also preserve jobs and enable continued collaboration with charitable causes supported by Highland and Mr. Dondero.

Judge Jernigan confirmed Highland's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization on February 22, 2021 (the "Plan"). We have appealed certain aspects of the Plan and will rely upon the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals to determine whether our arguments have merit. I write instead to call to your attention the possible disclosure of non-public information by Committee members and other insiders and to seek review of actions by Committee members that may have breached their fiduciary duties—both serious abuses of process.

1. The Bankruptcy Proceedings Lacked The Required Transparency, Due In Part To the Debtor's Failure To File Rule 2015.3 Reports

Congress, when it drafted the Bankruptcy Code and created the Office of the United States Trustee, intended to ensure that an impartial party oversaw the enforcement of all rules and guidelines in bankruptcy. Since that time, the Executive Office for United States Trustees (the "EOUST") has issued guidance and published rules designed to effectuate that purpose. To that end, EOUST recently published a final rule entitled "Procedures for Completing Uniform Periodic Reports in Non-Small Business Cases Filed Under Chapter 11 of Title 11" (the "Periodic Reporting Requirements"). The Periodic Reporting Requirements reaffirmed the EOUST's commitment to maintaining "uniformity and transparency regarding a debtor's financial condition and business activities" and "to inform creditors and other interested parties of the debtor's financial affairs." 85 Fed. Reg. 82906. The goal of the Periodic Reporting Requirements is to "assist the court and parties in interest in ascertaining, [among other things], the following: (1) Whether there is a substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the bankruptcy estate; . . . (3) whether there exists gross mismanagement of the bankruptcy estate; . . . [and] (6) whether the debtor is engaging in the unauthorized disposition of assets through sales or otherwise . . . ." Id.

Transparency has long been an important feature of federal bankruptcy proceedings. The EOUST instructs that "Debtors-in-possession and trustees must account for the receipt, administration, and disposition of all property; provide information concerning the estate and the estate's administration as parties in interest request; and file periodic reports and summaries of a debtor's business, including a statement of receipts and disbursements, and such other information as the United States Trustee or the United States Bankruptcy Court requires." See http://justice.gov/ust/chapter-11-information (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1), 1107(a)). And Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2015.3(a) states that "the trustee or debtor in possession shall file periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability of each entity that is not a publicly traded corporation or a debtor in a case under title 11, and in which the estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." This rule requires the trustee or a debtor in possession to file a report for each non-debtor affiliate prior to the first meeting of creditors and every six months thereafter until the effective date of a plan of reorganization. Fed R. Bankr. P. 2015.3(b). Importantly, the rule does not absolve a debtor from filing reports due prior to the effective date merely because a plan has become effective.[3] Notably, the U.S. Trustee has the duty to ensure that debtors in possession properly and timely file all required reports. 28 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(4)(F), (H).

The entire purpose of these guidelines and rules is to ensure that external stakeholders can fairly evaluate the progress of bankruptcy proceedings, including compliance with legal requirements. In fact, 11 U.S.C. § 1102(b)(3) requires a creditors' committee to share information it receives with those who "hold claims of the kind represented by the committee" but who are not appointed to the committee. In the case of the Highland bankruptcy, the transparency that the EOUST mandates and that creditors' committees are supposed to facilitate has been conspicuously absent. I have been involved in a number of bankruptcy cases representing publicly-traded debtors with affiliated non-debtor entities, much akin to Highland's structure here. In those cases, when asked by third parties (shareholders or potential claims purchasers) for information, I directed them to the schedules, monthly reports, and Rule 2015.3 reports. In this case, however, no Rule 2015.3 reports were filed, and financial information that might otherwise be gleaned from the Bankruptcy Court record is unavailable because a large number of documents were filed under seal or heavily redacted. As a result, the only means to make an informed decision as to whether to purchase creditor claims and what to pay for those claims had to be obtained from non-public sources.

It bears repeating that the Debtor and its related and affiliated entities failed to file any of the reports required under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3. There should have been at least four such reports filed on behalf of the Debtor and its affiliates during the bankruptcy proceedings. The U.S. Trustee's Office in Dallas did nothing to compel compliance with the rule.

The Debtor's failure to file the required Rule 2015.3 reports was brought to the attention of the Debtor, the Bankruptcy Court, and the U.S. Trustee's Office. During the hearing on Plan confirmation, the Debtor was questioned about the failure to file the reports. The sole excuse offered by the Debtor's Chief Restructuring Officer and Chief Executive Officer, Mr. Seery, was that the task "fell through the cracks."[4] This excuse makes no sense in light of the years of bankruptcy experience of the Debtor's counsel and financial advisors. Nor did the Debtor or its counsel ever attempt to show "cause" to gain exemption from the reporting requirement. That is because there was no good reason for the Debtor's failure to file the required reports. In fact, although the Debtor and the Creditors' Committee often refer to the Debtor's structure as a "byzantine empire," the assets of the estate fall into a handful of discrete investments, most of which have audited financials and/or are required to make monthly or quarterly net-asset-value or fair-value determinations.[5] Rather than disclose financial information that was readily available, the Debtor appears to have taken deliberate and strategic steps to avoid transparency, and the U.S. Trustee's Office did nothing to rectify the problem.

[3] After notice and a hearing, the bankruptcy court may grant relief from the Rule 2015.3 disclosure requirement "for cause," including that "the trustee or debtor in possession is not able, after a good faith effort, to comply with th[e] reporting requirements, or that the information required by subdivision (a) is publicly available." Fed. R. Bankr. 2015.3(d).

[4] See Doc. 1905 (Feb. 3, 2021 Hr'g Tr. at 49:5-21).

[5] During a deposition, the Debtor's Chief Restructuring Officer, Mr. Seery, identified most of the Debtor's assets "[o]ff the top of [his] head" and acknowledged that he had a subsidiary ledger that detailed the assets held by entities

By contrast, the Debtor provided the Creditors' Committee with robust weekly information regarding (i) transactions involving assets held directly on the Debtor's balance sheet or the balance sheet of the Debtor's wholly owned subsidiaries, (ii) transactions involving entities managed by the Debtor and in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest, (iii) transactions involving entities managed by the Debtor but in which the Debtor does not hold a direct or indirect interest, (iv) transactions involving entities not managed by the Debtor but in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest, (v) transactions involving entities not managed by the Debtor and in which the Debtor does not hold a direct or indirect interest, (vi) transactions involving non-discretionary accounts, and (vii) weekly budget-to-actuals reports referencing non-Debtor affiliates' 13-week cash flow budget. In other words, the Committee had real-time, actual information with respect to the financial affairs of non-debtor affiliates, and this is precisely the type of information that should have been disclosed to the public pursuant to Rule 2015.3.

After the claims at issue were sold, I filed a Motion to Compel compliance with the reporting requirement. Judge Jernigan held a hearing on the motion on June 10, 2021. Astoundingly, the U.S. Trustee's Office took no position on the Motion and did not even bother to attend the hearing. Ultimately, on September 7, 2021, the Court denied the Motion as "moot" because the Plan had by then gone effective. I have appealed that ruling because, again, the Plan becoming effective does not alleviate the Debtor's burden of filing the requisite reports.

The U.S. Trustee's Office also failed to object to the Court's order confirming the Debtor's Plan, in which the Court appears to have released the Debtor from its obligation to file any reports after the effective date of the Plan that were due for any period prior to the effective date, an order that likewise defeats any effort to demand transparency from the Debtor. The U.S. Trustee's failure to object to this portion of the Court's order is directly at odds with the spirit and mandate of the Periodic Reporting Requirements, which recognize the U.S. Trustee's duty to ensure that debtors timely file all required reports.

2. There Was No Transparency Regarding The Financial Affairs Of Non-Debtor Affiliates Or Transactions Between The Debtor And Its Affiliates

The Debtor's failure to file Rule 2015.3 reports for affiliate entities created additional transparency problems for interested parties and creditors wishing to evaluate assets held in non-Debtor subsidiaries. In making an investment decision, it would be important to know if the assets of a subsidiary consisted of cash, marketable securities, other liquid assets, or operating businesses/other illiquid assets. The Debtor's failure to file Rule 2015.3 reports hid from public view the composition of the assets and the corresponding liabilities at the subsidiary level. During the course of proceedings, the Debtor sold $172 million in assets, which altered the asset mix and liabilities of the Debtor's affiliates and controlled entities. Although Judge Jernigan held that such sales did not require Court approval, a Rule 2015.3 report would have revealed the mix of assets and the corresponding reduction in liabilities of the affiliated or controlled entity. In the Appendix, I have included a schedule of such sales.

Of particular note, the Court authorized the Debtor to place assets that it acquired with "allowed claim dollars" from HarbourVest (a creditor with a contested claim against the estate) into a specially-created non-debtor entity ("SPE").[6] The Debtor's motion to settle the below the Debtor. See Appendix, p. A-19 (Jan. 29, 2021 Dep. Tr. at 22:4-10; 23:1-29:10).

[6] Prior to Highland's bankruptcy, HarbourVest had invested $80 million into a Highland fund called Acis Loan Funding, later rebranded as Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF"). A dispute later arose between HarbourVest HarbourVest claim valued the asset acquired (HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF) at $22 million. In reality, that asset had a value of $40 million, and had the asset been placed in the Debtor entity, its true value would have been reflected in the Debtor's subsequent reporting. By instead placing the asset into an SPE, the Debtor hid from public view the true value of the asset as well as information relating to its disposition; all the public saw was the filed valuation of the asset. The U.S. Trustee did not object to the Debtor's placement of the HarbourVest assets into an SPE and apparently just deferred to the judgment of the Creditors' Committee about whether this was appropriate.[7] Again, when the U.S. Trustee's Office does not require transparency, lack of transparency significantly increases the need for non-public information. Because the HarbourVest assets were placed in a non-reporting entity, no potential claims buyer without insider information could possibly ascertain how the acquisition would impact the estate.

3. The Plan's Improper Releases And Exculpation Provisions Destroyed Third-Party Rights

In addition, the Debtor's Plan contains sweeping release, exculpation provisions, and a channeling injunction requiring that any permitted causes of action to be vetted and resolved by the Bankruptcy Court. On their face, these provisions violate Pacific Lumber, in with the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit rejected similarly broad exculpation clauses. The U.S. Trustee's Office in Dallas has, in all cases but this one, vigorously protected the rights of third parties against such exculpation clauses. In this case, the U.S. Trustee's Office objected to the Plan, but it did not pursue that objection at the confirmation hearing (nor even bother to attend the first day of the hearing),[8] nor did it appeal the order of the Bankruptcy Court approving the Plan and its exculpation clauses.

As a result of this failure, third-party investors in entities managed by the Debtor are now barred from asserting or channeled into the Bankruptcy Court to assert any claim against the Debtor or its management for transactions that occurred at the non-debtor affiliate level. Those investors' claims are barred notwithstanding that they were not notified of the releases and have never been given any information with which to evaluate their potential claims, nor given the opportunity to "opt out." Conversely, the releases insulate claims purchasers from the risk of potential actions by investors in funds managed by the Debtor (for breach of fiduciary duty, diminution in value, or otherwise). These releases are directly at odds with investors' expectations when they invest in managed funds—i.e., that fund managers will act in a fiduciary capacity to maximize investors' returns and that investors will have recourse for any failure to do so. While the agreements executed by investors may limit the exposure of fund managers, typically those provisions require the fund manager to obtain a third-party fairness opinion where there is a conflict between the manager's duty to the estate and his duty to fund investors.

As an example, the Court approved the settlement of UBS's claim against the Debtor and two funds managed by the Debtor (collectively referred to as "MultiStrat"). Pursuant to that settlement, MultiStrat agreed to pay UBS $18.5 million and represented that it was advised by "independent legal counsel" in the negotiation of the settlement.[9] That representation is untrue; and Highland, and HarbourVest filed claims in the Highland bankruptcy approximating $300 million in relation to damages allegedly due to HarbourVest as a result of that dispute. Although the Debtor initially placed no value on HarbourVest's claim (the Debtor's monthly operating report for December 2020 indicated that HarbourVest's allowed claims would be $0), eventually the Debtor entered into a settlement with HarbourVest—approved by the Bankruptcy Court—which entitled HarbourVest to $80 million in claims. In return, HarbourVest agreed to convey its interest in HCLOF to the SPE designated by the Debtor and to vote in favor of the Debtor's Plan.

[7] Dugaboy has appealed the Bankruptcy Court's ruling approving the placement of the HarbourVest assets into a non-reporting SPE.

[9] See Doc. 2389 (Order Approving Debtor's Settlement With UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch) at

MultiStrat did not have separate legal counsel and instead was represented only by the Debtor's counsel.[10] If that representation and/or the terms of the UBS/MultiStrat settlement in some way unfairly impacted MultiStrat's investors, they now have no recourse against the Debtor. The release and exculpation provisions in Highland's Plan do not afford third parties any meaningful recourse to third parties, even when they are negatively impacted by misrepresentations of the type contained in the UBS/MultiStrat settlement or when their interests are impaired by fund managers' failure to obtain fairness opinions to resolve conflicts of interest.

The U.S. Trustee's Office recently has argued in the context of the bankruptcy of Purdue Pharmaceuticals that release and exculpations clauses akin to those contained in Highland's Plan violate both the Bankruptcy Code and the Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution.[11] It has been the U.S. Trustee's position that where, as here, third parties whose claims are being released did not receive notice of the releases and had no way of knowing, based on the Plan's language, what claims were extinguished, third-party releases are contrary to law.[12] This position comports with Fifth Circuit case law, which makes clear that releases must be consensual, and that the released party must make a substantial contribution in exchange for any release. Highland's Plan does not provide for consent by third parties (or an opt-out provision), nor does it require that released parties provide value for their releases. Under these circumstances, it is difficult to understand why the U.S. Trustee's Office in Dallas did not lodge an objection to the Plan's release and exculpation provisions. Several parties have appealed this issue to the Fifth Circuit.

4. The Lack Of Transparency Facilitated Potential Insider Trading

The biggest problem with the lack of transparency at every step is that it created a need for access to non-public confidential information. The Debtor (as well as its advisors and professionals) and the Creditors' Committee (and its counsel) were the only parties with access to critical information upon which any reasonable investor would rely. But the public did not.

In the context of this non-transparency, it is notable that three of the four members of the Creditors' Committee and one non-committee member sold their claims to two buyers, Muck Holdings LLC ("Muck") and Jessup Holdings LLC ("Jessup"). The four claims that were sold comprise the largest four claims in the Highland bankruptcy by a substantial margin,[13] collectively totaling almost $270 million in Class 8 claims and $95 million in Class 9 claims[14]:

Claimant	Class 8 Claim	Class 9 Claims	Date Claim Settled
Redeemer Committee	$136,696,610	N/A	October 28, 2020
Acis Capital	$23,000,000	N/A	October 28, 2020
HarbourVest	$45,000,000	$35,000,000	January 21, 2021
UBS	$65,000,000	$60,000,000	May 27, 2021
TOTAL:	$269,6969,610	$95,000,000

Muck is owned and controlled by Farallon Capital Management ("Farallon"), and we have reason to believe that Jessup is owned and controlled by Stonehill Capital Management ("Stonehill"). As the purchasers of the four largest claims in the bankruptcy, Muck (Farallon) and Jessup (Stonehill) will oversee the liquidation of the Reorganized Debtor and the payment over time to creditors who have not sold their claims.

This is concerning because there is substantial evidence that Farallon and Stonehill may have been provided material, non-public information to induce their purchase of these claims.[15] In particular, there are three primary reasons we believe that non-public information was made available to facilitate these claims purchases:

- The scant publicly-available information regarding the Debtor's estate ordinarily would have dissuaded sizeable investment in purchases of creditors' claims;
- The information that actually was publicly available ordinarily would have compelled a prudent investor to conduct robust due diligence prior to purchasing the claims;
- Yet these claims purchasers spent in excess of $100 million (and likely closer to $150 million) on claims, ostensibly without any idea of what they were purchasing.

We believe the claims purchases of Stonehill and Farallon can be summarized as follows:

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9	Purchaser	Purchase Price
Redeemer	$137.0	$0.0	Stonehill	$78.0[16]
ACIS	$23.0	$0.0	Farallon	$8.0
HarbourVest	$45.0	$35.0	Farallon	$27.0
UBS	$65.0	$60.0	Stonehill and Farallon	$50.0[17]

To elaborate on our reasons for suspicion, an analysis of publicly-available information would have revealed to any potential investor that:

- There was a $200 million dissipation in the estate's asset value, which started at a scheduled amount of $556 million on October 16, 2019, then plummeted to $328 million as of September 30, 2020, and then increased only slightly to $364 million as of January 31, 2021.[18]

[15] A timeline of relevant events can be found at Appendix, p. A-26.

[16] See Appendix, pp. A-70 – A-71. Because the transaction included "the majority of the remaining investments held by the Crusader Funds," the net amount paid by Stonehill for the Claims was approximately $65 million.

[17] Based on the publicly-available information at the time Stonehill and Farallon purchased the UBS claim, the purchase made no economic sense. At the time, the publicly-disclosed Plan Analysis estimated that there would be a 71.32% distribution to Class 8 creditors and a 0.00% distribution to Class 9 creditors, which would mean that Stonehill and Farallon paid $50 million for claims worth only $46.4 million. See Appendix, p. A-28. If, however, Stonehill and Farallon had access to information that only came to light later—i.e., that the estate was actually worth much, much more (between $472-600 million as opposed to $364 million)—then it makes sense that they would pay what they did to buy the UBS claim.

[18] Compare Jan. 31, 2021 Monthly Operating Report [Doc. 2030], with Disclosure Statement (approved on Nov. 24, 2020) [Doc. 1473]. The increase in value between September 2020 and January 2021 is attributable to the Debtor's settlement with HarbourVest, which granted HarbourVest a Class 8 claim of $45 million and a Class 9 Claim of $35 million, and in exchange the Debtor received HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF, which we believe was worth approximately $44.3 million as of January 31, 2021. See Appendix, p. A-25. It is also notable that the January 2021

- The total amount of allowed claims against the estate increased by $236 million; indeed, just between the time the Debtor's disclosure statement was approved on November 24, 2020, and the time the Debtor's exhibits were introduced at the confirmation hearing, the amount of allowed claims increased by $100 million.

- Due to the decrease in the value of the Debtor's assets and the increase in the allowed claims amount, the ultimate projected recovery for creditors in bankruptcy went from 87.44% to 62.99% in just a matter of months.[19]

No prudent investor or hedge fund investing third-party money would purchase substantial claims out of the Highland estate based on this publicly-available information without conducting thorough due diligence to be satisfied that the assets of the estate would not continue to deteriorate or that the allowed claims against the estate would not continue to grow.

There are other good reasons to investigate whether Muck and Jessup (through Farallon and Stonehill) had access to material, non-public information that influenced their claims purchasing. In particular, there are close relationships between the claims purchasers, on the one hand, and the selling Creditors' Committee members and the Debtor's management, on the other hand. What follows is our understanding of those relationships:

- Farallon and Stonehill have long-standing, material, undisclosed relationships with the members of the Creditors' Committee and Mr. Seery.[20] Mr. Seery formerly was the Global Head of Fixed Income Loans at Lehman Bros. until its collapse in 2009. While at Lehman, Mr. Seery did a substantial amount of business with Farallon. After the Lehman collapse, Mr. Seery joined Sidley & Austin as co-head of the corporate restructuring and bankruptcy group, where he worked with Matt Clemente, counsel to the Creditors' Committee in these bankruptcy proceedings.

- In addition, Grovesnor, one of the lead investors in the Crusader Fund from the Redeemer Committee (which appointed Seery as its independent director) both played a substantial role on the Creditors' Committee and is a large investor in Farallon and Stonehill.

- According to Farallon principals Raj Patel and Michael Linn, while at Sidley, Mr. Seery represented Farallon in its acquisition of claims in the Lehman estate.

- Also while at Sidley, Mr. Seery represented the Steering Committee in the Blockbuster Video bankruptcy; Stonehill (through its Managing Member, John Motulsky) was one of the five members of the Steering Committee.

- Mr. Seery left Sidley in 2013 to become the President and Senior Investment Partner of River Birch Capital, a hedge fund founded by his former Lehman colleagues. He left River Birch in October 2017 just before the fund imploded. In 2017, River Birch and Stonehill Capital were two of the biggest note holders in the Toys R Us bankruptcy and were members of the Toys R Us creditors' committee.

It does not seem a coincidence that two firms with such significant ties to Mr. Seery have purchased $365 million in claims. The nature of the relationships and the absence of public data warrants an investigation into whether the claims purchasers may have had access to non-public information.

Other transactions occurring during the Highland bankruptcy also reinforce the suspicion that insider trading occurred. In particular, it appears that one of the claims buyers, Stonehill, used non-public information obtained incident to the bankruptcy to purchase stock in NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund (NYSE: NHF), a publicly traded, closed-end '40 Act fund with many holdings in common with assets held in the Highland estate outlined above. Stonehill is a registered investment adviser with $3 billion under management that has historically owned very few equity interests, particularly equity interests in a closed-end fund. As disclosed in SEC filings, Stonehill acquired enough stock in NHF during the second quarter of 2021 to make it Stonehill's eighth largest equity position.

The timing of the acquisitions of claims by Farallon and Stonehill also warrants investigation. In particular, although notices of the transfer of the claims were filed immediately after the confirmation of the Debtor's Plan and prior to the effective date of the Plan, it seems likely that negotiations began much earlier. Transactions of this magnitude do not take place overnight and typically require robust due diligence. We know, for example, that Muck was formed on March 9, 2021, more than a month before it filed notice that it was purchasing the Acis claim. If the negotiation or execution of a definitive agreement for the purchase began before or contemporaneously with Muck's formation, then there is every reason to investigate whether selling Creditors' Committee members and/or Debtor management provided Farallon with critical non-public information well before the Creditors' Committee members sold their claims and withdrew from the Committee. Indeed, Mr. Patel and Mr. Linn have stated to others that they purchased the Acis and HarbourVest claims in late January or early February. We believe an investigation will reveal whether negotiations of the sale and the purchase of claims from Creditors' Committee members preceded the confirmation of the Debtor's Plan and the resignation of those members from the Committee.

Likewise, correspondence from the fund adviser to the Crusader Fund indicates that the Crusader Fund and the Redeemer Committee had "consummated" the sale of the Redeemer Committee's claims and other assets on April 30, 2021, "for $78 million in cash, which was paid in full to the Crusader Funds at closing."[21] We also know that there was a written agreement among Stonehill, the Crusader Fund, and the Redeemer Committee that potentially dates back to the fourth quarter of 2020. Presumably such an agreement, if it existed, would impose affirmative and negative covenants upon the seller and grant the purchaser discretionary approval rights during the pendency of the sale. An investigation by your office is necessary to determine whether there were any such agreement, which would necessarily conflict with the Creditors' Committee members' fiduciary obligations.

The sale of the claims by the members of the Creditors' Committee also violates the guidelines provided to committee members that require a selling committee member to obtain approval from the Bankruptcy Court prior to any sale of such member's claim. The instructions provided by the U.S. Trustee's Office (in this instance the Delaware Office) state:

> In the event you are appointed to an official committee of creditors, the United States Trustee may require periodic certifications of your claims while the bankruptcy case is pending. Creditors wishing to serve as fiduciaries on any official committee are advised that they may not purchase, sell or otherwise trade in or transfer claims against the Debtor while they are committee members absent an order of the Court. By submitting the enclosed Questionnaire and accepting membership on an official committee of creditors, you agree to this prohibition. The United States Trustee reserves the right to take appropriate action, including removing a creditor from any committee, if the information provided in the Questionnaire is inaccurate, if the foregoing prohibition is violated, or for any other reason the United States Trustee believes is proper in the exercise of her discretion. You are hereby notified that the United States Trustee may share this information with the Securities and Exchange Commission if deemed appropriate.

In this case, no Court approval was ever sought or obtained, and the Dallas U.S. Trustee's Office took no action to enforce this guideline. The Creditors' Committee members were sophisticated entities, and they were privy to inside information that was not available to other unsecured creditors. For example, valuations of assets placed into a specially-created affiliated entities, such as the assets acquired in the HarbourVest settlement, and valuations of assets held by other entities owned or controlled by the Debtor, were available to the selling Creditors' Committee members, but not other creditors or parties-in-interest.

While claims trading itself is not necessarily prohibited, the circumstances surrounding claims trading often times prompt investigation due to the potential for abuse. This case warrants such an investigation due to the following:

a) The selling parties were three of the four Creditors' Committee members, and each one had access to information they received in a fiduciary capacity;

b) Some of the information they received would have been available to other parties-in-interest if Rule 2015.3 had been enforced;

c) The sales allegedly occurred after the Plan was confirmed, and certain other matters immediately thereafter came to light, such as the Debtor's need for an exit loan (although the Debtor testified at the confirmation hearing that no loan was needed) and the inability of the Debtor to obtain Directors and Officer insurance;

d) The Debtor settled a dispute with UBS and obligated itself (using estate assets) to pursue claims and transfers and to transfer certain recoveries to UBS, as opposed to distributing those recoveries to creditors, and the Debtor used third-party assets as consideration for the settlement[22];

e) The projected recovery to creditors changed significantly between the approval of the Disclosure Statement and the confirmation of the Debtor's Plan; and

f) There was a suspicious purchase of stock by Stonehill in NHF, a closed-end fund that is publicly traded on the New York stock exchange. The Debtor's assets and the positions held by the closed-end fund are similar.

Further, there is reason to believe that insider claims-trading negatively impacted the estate's ultimate recovery. Immediately prior to the Plan confirmation hearing, Judge Jernigan suggested that the Creditors' Committee and Mr. Dondero attempt to reach a settlement. Mr. Dondero, through counsel, made numerous offers of settlement that would have maximized the estate's recovery, even going so far as to file a proposed Plan of Reorganization. The Creditors' Committee did not timely respond to these efforts. It was not until The Honorable Former Judge D. Michael Lynn, counsel for Mr. Dondero, reminded the Creditors' Committee counsel that its members had a fiduciary duty to respond that a response was forthcoming. Mr. Dondero's proposed plan offered a greater recovery than what the Debtor had reported would be the expected Plan recovery. The Creditors' Committee's failure to timely respond to that offer suggests that some members may have been contractually constrained from doing so, which itself warrants investigation.

We encourage the EOUST to question and explore whether, at the time that Mr. Dondero's proposed plan was filed, the Creditors' Committee members already had committed to sell their claims and therefore were contractually restricted from accepting Mr. Dondero's materially better offer. If that were the case, the contractual tie-up would have been a violation of the Committee members' fiduciary duties. The reason for the U.S. Trustee's guideline concerning the sale of claims by Committee members was to allow a public hearing on whether Committee members were acting within the bounds of their fiduciary duties to the estate incident to the sale of any claim. The failure to enforce this guideline has left open questions about sale of Committee members' claims that should have been disclosed and vetted in open court.

In summary, the failure of the U.S. Trustee's Office to demand appropriate reporting and transparency created an environment where parties needed to obtain and use non-public information to facilitate claims trading and potential violations of the fiduciary duties owed by Creditors' Committee members. At the very least, there is enough credible evidence to warrant an investigation. It is up to the bankruptcy bar to alert your office to any perceived abuses to ensure that the system is fair and transparent. The Bankruptcy Code is not written for those who hold the largest claims but, rather, it is designed to protect all stakeholders. A second Neiman Marcus should not be allowed to occur.

We would appreciate a meeting with your office at your earliest possible convenience to discuss the contents of this letter and to provide additional information and color that we believe will be valuable in making a determination about whether and what to investigate. In the interim, if you need any additional information or copies of any particular pleading, we would be happy to provide those at your request.

Very truly yours,

/s/Douglas S. Draper

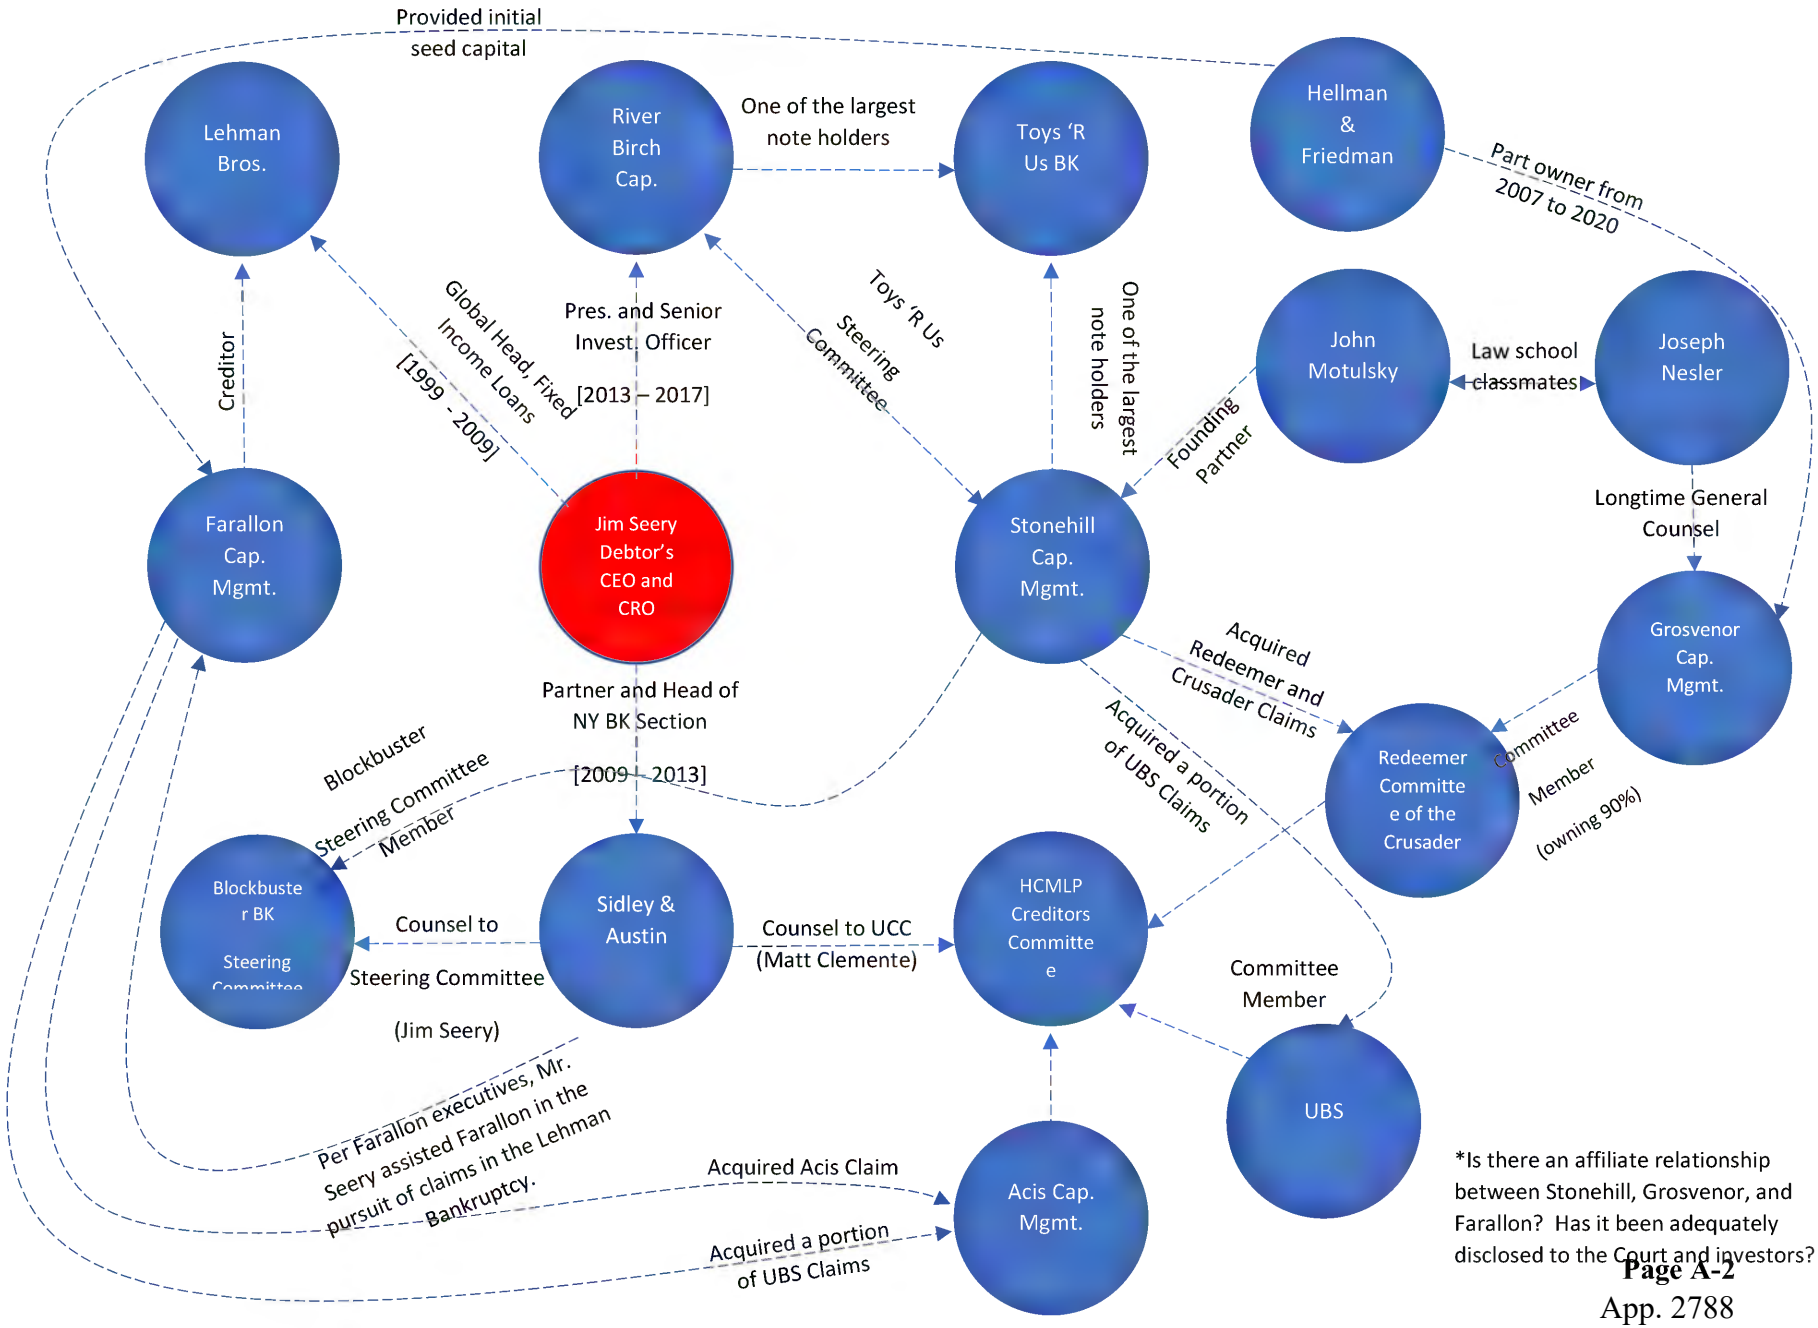
Relationships Among Debtor's CEO/CRO, the UCC, and Claims Purchasers



Debtor Protocols [Doc. 466-1]

I. Definitions

A. "Court" means the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas.

B. "NAV" means (A) with respect to an entity that is not a CLO, the value of such entity's assets less the value of its liabilities calculated as of the month end prior to any Transaction; and (B) with respect to a CLO, the CLO's gross assets less expenses calculated as of the quarter end prior to any Transaction.

C. "Non-Discretionary Account" means an account that is managed by the Debtor pursuant to the terms of an agreement providing, among other things, that the ultimate investment discretion does not rest with the Debtor but with the entity whose assets are being managed through the account.

D. "Related Entity" means collectively (A)(i) any non-publicly traded third party in which Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, or Mr. Grant Scott, or Mr. John Honis (with respect to Messrs. Okada, Scott and Honis, only to the extent known by the Debtor) has any direct or indirect economic or ownership interest, including as a beneficiary of a trust; (ii) any entity controlled directly or indirectly by Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, Mr. Grant Scott, or Mr. John Honis (with respect to Messrs. Okada, Scott and Honis, only to the extent known by the Debtor); (iii) MGM Holdings, Inc.; (iv) any publicly traded company with respect to which the Debtor or any Related Entity has filed a Form 13D or Form 13G; (v) any relative (as defined in Section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code) of Mr. Dondero or Mr. Okada each solely to the extent reasonably knowable by the Debtor; (vi) the Hunter Mountain Investment Trust and Dugaboy Investment Trust; (vii) any entity or person that is an insider of the Debtor under Section 101(31) the Bankruptcy Code, including any "non-statutory" insider; and (viii) to the extent not included in (A)(i)-(vii), any entity included in the listing of related entities in Schedule B hereto (the "Related Entities Listing"); and (B) the following Transactions, (x) any intercompany Transactions with certain affiliates referred to in paragraphs 16.a through 16.e of the Debtor's cash management motion [Del. Docket No. 7]; and (y) any Transactions with Charitable DAF Fund, L.P. (provided, however, that additional parties may be added to this subclause (y) with the mutual consent of the Debtor and the Committee, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld).

E. "Stage 1" means the time period from the date of execution of a term sheet incorporating the protocols contained below the ("Term Sheet") by all applicable parties until approval of the Term Sheet by the Court.

F. "Stage 2" means the date from the appointment of a Board of Independent Directors at Strand Advisors, Inc. until 45 days after such appointment, such appointment being effective upon Court approval.

G. "Stage 3" means any date after Stage 2 while there is a Board of Independent Directors at Strand Advisors, Inc.

H. "Transaction" means (i) any purchase, sale, or exchange of assets, (ii) any lending or borrowing of money, including the direct payment of any obligations of another entity, (iii) the satisfaction of any capital call or other contractual requirement to pay money, including the satisfaction of any redemption requests, (iv) funding of affiliates and (v) the creation of any lien or encumbrance.

I. "Ordinary Course Transaction" means any transaction with any third party which is not a Related Entity and that would otherwise constitute an "ordinary course transaction" under section 363(c) of the Bankruptcy Code.

J. "Notice" means notification or communication in a written format and shall include supporting documents necessary to evaluate the propriety of the proposed transaction.

K. "Specified Entity" means any of the following entities: ACIS CLO 2017-7 Ltd., Brentwood CLO, Ltd., Gleneagles CLO, Ltd., Greenbriar CLO, Ltd., Highland CLO 2018-1, Ltd., Highland Legacy Limited, Highland Loan Funding V Ltd., Highland Park CDO I, Ltd., Pam Capital Funding LP, PamCo Cayman Ltd., Rockwall CDO II Ltd., Rockwall CDO Ltd., Southfork CLO Ltd., Stratford CLO Ltd., Westchester CLO, Ltd., Aberdeen Loan Funding, Ltd., Bristol Bay Funding Ltd. Eastland CLO, Ltd., Grayson CLO, Ltd., Highland Credit Opportunities CDO Ltd., Jasper CLO, Ltd., Liberty Cayman Holdings, Ltd., Liberty CLO, Ltd., Red River CLO, Ltd., Valhalla CLO, Ltd.

II. Transactions involving the (i) assets held directly on the Debtor's balance sheet or the balance sheet of the Debtor's wholly-owned subsidiaries, including Jefferies Prime Account, and (ii) the Highland Select Equity Fund, L.P., Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P., and Highland Restoration Capital Partners

A. Covered Entities: N/A (See entities above).

B. Operating Requirements

1. Ordinary Course Transactions do not require Court approval (All Stages).

a) Stage 1 and Stage 2: ordinary course determined by the CRO.

b) Stage 3: ordinary course determined by the Debtor.

2. Related Entity Transactions

a) Stage 1 and Stage 2: Transactions with Related Entities require prior approval of CRO and five business days advance notice to the Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

b) Stage 3:

(1) Transactions with Related Entities greater than $1,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require five business days advance notice to the Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

(2) Transactions with Related Entities greater than $2,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

3. Third Party Transactions (All Stages)

a) Except as set forth in (b) and (c) below, Transactions in excess of $2,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require three business days advance notice to Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

b) The Debtor may satisfy any redemption requests from entities that are not Related Entities without advance notice so long as the Debtor provides notice of such Transactions to the Committee as soon as reasonably practicable. The Debtor will provide the Committee with five business days advance notice of any redemption requests made by and payable to a Related Entity, and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

c) The Debtor may satisfy margin calls and short covers without providing the Committee advance notice if the exigencies do not allow advance notice so long as the Debtor provides notice of such Transactions to the Committee as soon as reasonably practicable.

C. Weekly Reporting: The Debtor will provide the Committee with weekly reports showing all Transactions under this category.

III. Transactions involving entities the Debtor manages and in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest (other than the entities discussed in Section I above)

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all entities the Debtor manages and in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest (other than the entities discussed in Section I above).[1]

b) The Debtor may satisfy any redemption requests from entities that are not Related Entities without advance notice so long as the Debtor provides notice of such Transactions to the Committee as soon as reasonably practicable. The Debtor will provide the Committee with five business days advance notice of any redemption requests made by and payable to a Related Entity, and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

c) The Debtor may take such steps as may be reasonably necessary to winddown any managed entity and make distributions as may be required in connection with such winddown to any required parties. The Debtor will provide the Committee with five business days advance notice of any distributions to be made to a Related Entity, and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

C. Weekly Reporting: The Debtor will provide the Committee with weekly reports showing all Transactions under this category. Such reports will include Transactions involving a Specified Entity unless the Debtor is prohibited from doing so under applicable law or regulation or any agreement governing the Debtor's relationship with such Specified Entity.

V. Transactions involving entities that the Debtor does not manage but in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all entities that the Debtor does not manage but in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest.[3]

B. Ordinary Course Transactions (All Stages): N/A

C. Operating Requirements: N/A

D. Weekly Reporting: Debtor will provide weekly reports of all cross-held asset Transactions, i.e. Transactions in which the Debtor or a Related Entity also holds a direct or indirect interest.

[3] The Debtor is continuing to review the Related Entities List and to determine whether any additional parties or entities should be included on Schedule A. The Debtor will update Schedule A as soon as reasonably practicable to the extent necessary.

VI. Transactions involving entities that the Debtor does not manage and in which the Debtor does not hold a direct or indirect interest

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all entities that the Debtor does not manage and in which the Debtor does not hold a direct or indirect interest.[4]

B. Ordinary Course Transactions (All Stages): N/A

C. Operating Requirements: N/A

D. Weekly Reporting: Debtor will provide weekly reports of all cross-held asset Transactions, i.e. Transactions in which the Debtor or a Related Entity also holds a direct or indirect interest.

VII. Transactions involving Non-Discretionary Accounts

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all non-discretionary accounts.[5]

B. Ordinary Course Transactions (All Stages): N/A

C. Operating Requirements: N/A

D. Weekly Reporting: Debtor will provide weekly reports of all cross-held asset Transactions, i.e. Transactions in which the Debtor or a Related Entity also holds a direct or indirect interest.

VIII. Additional Reporting Requirements – All Stages (to the extent applicable)

A. DSI will provide detailed lists and descriptions of internal financial and operational controls being applied on a daily basis for a full understanding by the Committee and its professional advisors three (3) business days in advance of the hearing on the approval of the Term Sheet and details of proposed amendments to said financial and operational controls no later than seven (7) days prior to their implementation.

B. The Debtor will continue to provide weekly budget to actuals reports referencing their 13-week cash flow budget, such reports to be inclusive of all Transactions with Related Entities.

IX. Shared Services

A. The Debtor shall not modify any shared services agreement without approval of the CRO and Independent Directors and seven business days' advance notice to counsel for the Committee.

B. The Debtor may otherwise continue satisfying its obligations under the shared services agreements.

[4] The Debtor is continuing to review the Related Entities List and to determine whether any additional parties or entities should be included on Schedule A. The Debtor will update Schedule A as soon as reasonably practicable to the extent necessary.

[5] The Debtor is continuing to review the Related Entities List and to determine whether any additional parties or entities should be included on Schedule A. The Debtor will update Schedule A as soon as reasonably practicable to the extent necessary.

X. Representations and Warranties

A. The Debtor represents that the Related Entities Listing included as Schedule B attached hereto lists all known persons and entities other than natural persons included in the definitions of Related Entities covered by Section I.D parts A(i)-(vii) above at the time of the execution of the Term Sheet.

B. The Debtor represents that the list included as Schedule C attached hereto lists all known natural persons included in the definitions of Related Entities covered by Section I.D parts A(i)-(vii) above at the time of the execution of the Term Sheet.

C. The Debtor represents that, if at any time the Debtor becomes aware of any person or entity, including natural persons, meeting the definition of Related Entities covered by Section I.D parts A(1)-(vii) above that is not included in the Related Entities Listing or Schedule C, the Debtor shall update the Related Entities Listing or Schedule C, as appropriate, to include such entity or person and shall give notice to the Committee thereof.

INFORMATION/PRODUCTION REQUESTS

MARKED FOR RULING

COURT REPORTER: My name is Debra Stevens, court reporter for TSG Reporting and notary public of the State of New York. Due to the severity of the COVID-19 pandemic and following the practice of social distancing, I will not be in the same room with the witness but will report this deposition remotely and will swear the witness in remotely. If any party has any objection, please so state before we proceed.

Whereupon,

JAMES SEERY,

having been first duly sworn/affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY
MR. DRAPER:

Q. Mr. Seery, my name is Douglas Draper, representing the Dugaboy Trust. I have series of questions today in connection with the 30(b) Notice that we filed. The first question I have for you, have you seen the Notice of Deposition the screen, please?

A. Page what?
Q. I think it is page 174.
A. Of the PDF or of the document?
Q. Of the disclosure statement that was filed. It is up on the screen right now.
COURT REPORTER: Do you intend this as another exhibit for today's deposition?
MR. DRAPER: We'll mark this Exhibit 2.
(So marked for identification as Seery Exhibit 2.)
Q. If you look to the recovery to Class 8 creditors in the November 2020 disclosure statement was a recovery of 87.44 percent?
A. That actually says the percent distribution to general unsecured creditors was 87.44 percent. Yes.
Q. And in the new document that was filed, given to us yesterday, the recovery is 62.5 percent?

J. SEERY

A. It says the percent distribution to general unsecured creditors is 62.14 percent.
Q. Have you communicated the reduced recovery to anybody prior to the date -- to yesterday?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.
A. I believe generally, yes. I don't know if we have a specific number, but generally yes.
Q. And would that be members of the Creditors' Committee who you gave that information to?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you give it to anybody other than members of the Creditors' Committee?
A. Yes.
Q. Who?
A. HarbourVest.
Q. And when was that?
A. Within the last two months.
Q. You did not feel the need to communicate the change in recovery to anybody else?

J. SEERY

A. I said Mr. Doherty.
Q. In looking at the two elements, and what I have asked you to look at is the claims pool. If you look at the November disclosure statement, if you look down Class 8, unsecured claims?
A. Yes.
Q. You have 176,000 roughly?
A. Million.
Q. 176 million. I am sorry. And the number in the new document is 313 million?
A. Correct.
Q. What accounts for the difference?
A. An increase in claims.
Q. When did those increases occur? Were they yesterday? A month ago? Two months ago?
A. Over the last couple months.
Q. So in fact over the last couple months you knew in fact that the recovery in the November disclosure statement was not accurate?

A. Yes. We secretly disclosed it to the Bankruptcy Court in open court hearings.
Q. But you never did bother to calculate the reduced recovery; you just increased --
(Reporter interruption.)
Q. You just advised as to the increased claims pool. Correct?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.
A. I don't understand your question.
Q. What I am trying to get at is, as you increase the claims pool, the recovery reduces. Correct?
A. No. That is not how a fraction works.
Q. Well, if the denominator increases, doesn't the recovery ultimately decrease if --
A. No.
Q. -- if the numerator stays the

were amended without consideration a few years ago. So, for our purposes we didn't make the assumption, which I am sure will happen, a fraudulent conveyance claim on those notes, that a fraudulent conveyance action would be brought. We just assumed that we'd have to discount the notes heavily to sell them because nobody would respect the ability of the counterparties to fairly pay.

Q. And the same discount was applied in the liquidation analysis to those notes?

A. Yes.

Q. Now --

A. The difference -- there would be a difference, though, because they would pay for a while because they wouldn't want to accelerate them. So there would be some collections on the notes for P and I.

Q. But in fact as of January you have accelerated those notes?

A. Just one of them, I believe.

Q. Which note was that?

J. SEERY

A. NexPoint, I said. They defaulted on the note and we accelerated it.

Q. So there is no need to file a fraudulent conveyance suit with respect to that note. Correct, Mr. Seery?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Disagree. Since it was likely intentional fraud, there may be other recoveries on it. But to collect on the note, no.

Q. My question was with respect to that note. Since you have accelerated it, you don't need to deal with the issue of when it's due?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. That wasn't your question. But to that question, yes, I don't need to deal with when it's due.

Q. Let me go over certain assets. I am not going to ask you for the valuation of them but I am going to ask you whether they are included in the asset portion of your $257 million number, all right? Mr. Morris didn't want me to go into specific asset value, and I don't intend to do that.

The first question I have for you is, the equity in Trustway Highland Holdings, is that included in the $257 million number?

A. There is no such entity.

Q. Then I will do it in a different way. In connection with the sale of the hard assets, what assets are included in there specifically?

A. Off the top of my head -- it is [redacted] Trustway Holdings and all the value that flows up from Trustway Holdings. It [redacted] flows up from Targa. It includes CCS [redacted] to the Debtor from CCS Medical. It includes Cornerstone and all the value that would flow from Cornerstone. It includes any other securities and all the value that would flow from Cornerstone. It includes HCLOF and all the value that would flow up from HCLOF. It includes [redacted] from Korea.

There may be others off the top of my head. I don't recall them. I don't have a list in front of me.

Q. Now, with respect to those assets, have you started the sale process of those assets?

A. No. Well, each asset is different. So, the answer is, with respect to any securities, we do seek to sell those regularly and we do seek to monetize those assets where we can depending on whether there is a restriction or not and whether there is liquidity in the market.

With respect to the PE assets or the companies I described -- Targa, CCS, Cornerstone, JHT -- we have not -- Trustway. We have not sought to sell

J. SEERY

A. I don't recall the specific limitation on the trust. But if there was a reason to hold on to the asset, if there is a limitation, we can seek an extension.

Q. Let me ask a question. With respect to these businesses, the Debtor merely owns an equity interest in them. Correct?

A. Which business?

Q. The ones you have identified as operating businesses earlier?

A. It depends on the business.

Q. Well, let me -- again, let's try to be specific. With respect to SSP, it was your position that you did not need to get court approval for the sale. Correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Which one of the operating businesses that are here, that you have identified, do you need court authority for a sale?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Each of the businesses will be different analysis that we'll undertake with bankruptcy counsel to determine what we would need depending on when it is either under the code are or under the plan.

J. SEERY

Q. Is there anything that would stop you from selling these businesses if the Chapter 11 went on for a year or two years?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

A. Is there anything that would stop me? We'd have to follow the strictures of the code and the protocols, but there would be no prohibition -- let me finish, please.

There would be no prohibition that I am aware of.

Q. Now, in connection with your differential between the liquidation of what I will call the operating businesses under the liquidation analysis and the plan analysis, who arrived at the discount or determined the discount that has been placed between the two, plan analysis versus liquidation analysis?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

A. To which document are you referring?

Q. Both the June -- the January and the November analysis has a different estimated proceeds for monetization for the plan analysis versus the liquidation analysis. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. And there is a note under there. "Assumes Chapter 7 trustee will not be able to achieve the same sales proceeds as Claimant trustee."

A. I see that, yes.

Q. Do you see that note?

A. Yes.

Q. Who arrived at that discount?

A. I did.

Q. What percentage did you use?

A. Depended on the asset. Each one is different.

Q. Is the discount a function of capability of a trustee versus your capability, or is the discount a function of timing?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form.

A. It could be a combination.

Q. So, let's -- let me walk through this. Your plan analysis has an assumption that everything is sold by December 2022. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the valuations that you have used here for the monetization assume a sale between -- a sale prior to December of 2022. Correct?

A. Sorry. I don't quite understand your question.

Q. The 257 number, and then let's take out the notes. Let's use the 210 number.

MR. MORRIS: Can we put the document back on the screen, please? Sorry, Douglas, to interrupt, but it would be helpful.

J. SEERY

MR. DRAPER: That is fine, John.

(Pause.)

MR. MORRIS: Thank you very much.

Q. Mr. Seery, do you see the 257?

A. In the one from yesterday?

Q. Yes.

A. Second line, 257,941. Yes.

Q. That assumes a monetization of all assets by December of 2022?

A. Correct.

Q. And so everything has been sold by that time; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So, what I am trying to get at is, there is both the capability between you and a trustee, and then the second issue is timing. So, what discount was put on for timing, Mr. Seery, between when a trustee would sell it versus when you would sell it?

MR. MORRIS: Objection.

Q. What is the percentage you

J. SEERY

applied?

A. Each of the assets is different.

Q. Is there a general discount that you used?

A. Not a general discount, no. We looked at each individual asset and went through and made an assessment.

Q. Did you apply a discount for your capability versus the capability of a trustee?

A. No.

Q. So a trustee would be as capable as you are in monetizing these assets?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

Q. Excuse me? The answer is?

A. The answer is maybe.

Q. Couldn't a trustee hire somebody as capable as you are?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Perhaps.

Q. Sir, that is a yes or no question. Could the trustee hire somebody as capable as you are?

J. SEERY

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. I don't know.

Q. Is there anybody as capable as you are?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Certainly.

Q. And they could be hired. Correct?

A. Perhaps. I don't know.

Q. And if you go back to the November 2020 liquidation analysis versus plan analysis, it is also the same note about that a trustee would bring less, and there is the same sort of discount between the estimated proceeds under the plan and under the liquidation analysis.

MR. MORRIS: If that is a question, I object.

Q. Is that correct, Mr. Seery, looking at the document?

A. There are discounts, yes.

J. SEERY

Q. Again, the discounts are applied for timing and capability?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in looking at the November plan analysis number of $190 million and the January number of $257 million, what accounts for the increase between the two dates? What assets specifically?

A. There are a number of assets. Firstly, the HCLOF assets are added.

Q. How much are those?

A. Approximately 22 and a half million dollars.

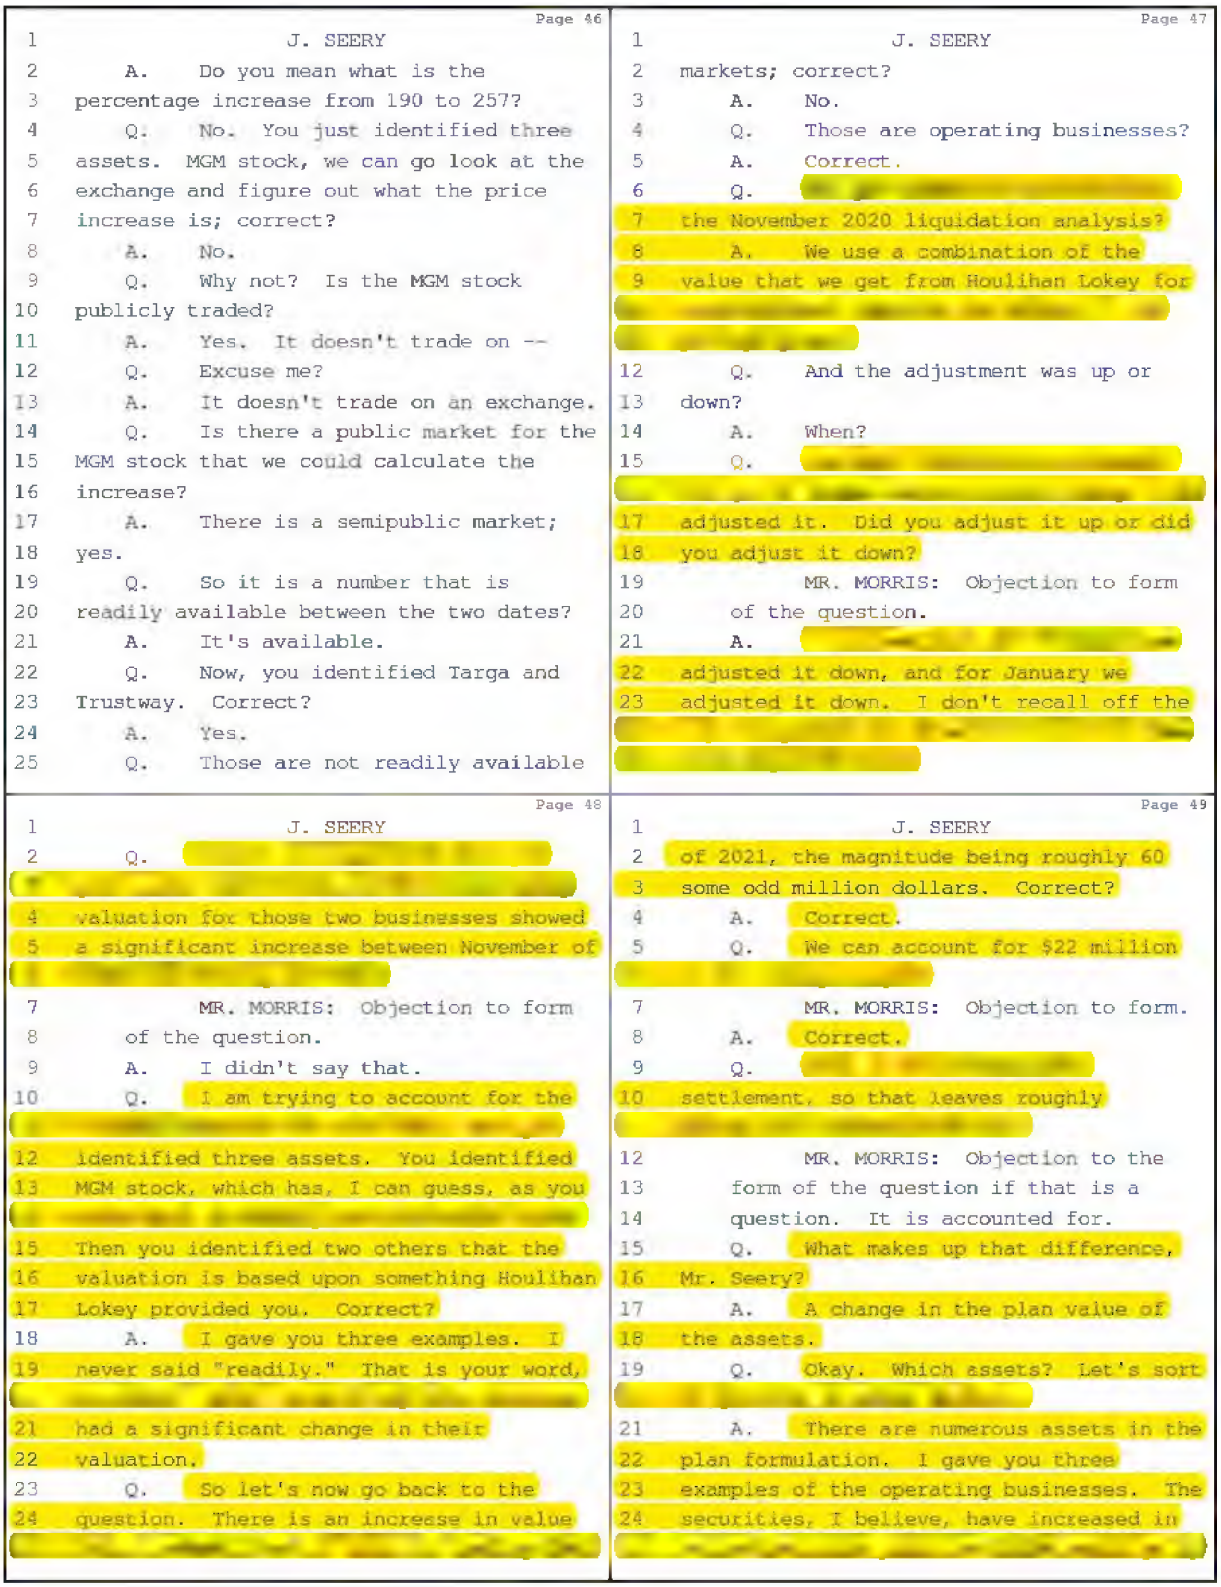
Q. Okay.

A. Secondly, there is a significant [redacted] assets over this time period.

Q. Which assets, Mr. Seery?

A. There are a number. They include MGM stock, they include Trustway, they include Targa.

Q. And what is the percentage increase from November to January, November of 2020 to January of 2021?



Page 46

J. SEERY

A. Do you mean what is the percentage increase from 190 to 257?
Q. No. You just identified three assets. MGM stock, we can go look at the exchange and figure out what the price increase is; correct?
A. No.
Q. Why not? Is the MGM stock publicly traded?
A. Yes. It doesn't trade on --
Q. Excuse me?
A. It doesn't trade on an exchange.
Q. Is there a public market for the MGM stock that we could calculate the increase?
A. There is a semipublic market; yes.
Q. So it is a number that is readily available between the two dates?
A. It's available.
Q. Now, you identified Targa and Trustway. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Those are not readily available

Page 47

J. SEERY

markets; correct?
A. No.
Q. Those are operating businesses?
A. Correct.
Q. [redacted] the November 2020 liquidation analysis?
A. We use a combination of the value that we get from Houlihan Lokey for [redacted]
Q. And the adjustment was up or down?
A. When?
Q. [redacted] adjusted it. Did you adjust it up or did you adjust it down?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.
A. [redacted] adjusted it down, and for January we adjusted it down. I don't recall off the [redacted]

Page 48

J. SEERY

Q. [redacted] valuation for those two businesses showed a significant increase between November of [redacted]
MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.
A. I didn't say that.
Q. I am trying to account for the [redacted] identified three assets. You identified MGM stock, which has, I can guess, as you [redacted] Then you identified two others that the valuation is based upon something Houlihan Lokey provided you. Correct?
A. I gave you three examples. I never said "readily." That is your word, [redacted] had a significant change in their valuation.
Q. So let's now go back to the question. There is an increase in value [redacted] of 2021, the magnitude being roughly 60 some odd million dollars. Correct?

Page 49

J. SEERY

A. Correct.
Q. We can account for $22 million [redacted]
MR. MORRIS: Objection to form.
A. Correct.
Q. [redacted] settlement, so that leaves roughly [redacted]
MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question if that is a question. It is accounted for.
Q. What makes up that difference, Mr. Seery?
A. A change in the plan value of the assets.
Q. Okay. Which assets? Let's sort [redacted]
A. There are numerous assets in the plan formulation. I gave you three examples of the operating businesses. The securities, I believe, have increased in [redacted] for one. On the operating businesses, we looked at each of them and made an assessment based upon where the market is [redacted] have moved those valuations.

Q. Let me look at some numbers again. In the liquidation analysis in November of 2020, the liquidation value is $149 million. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the liquidation analysis in January of 2021, you have $191 million?

A. Yes.

Q. You see that number. So there is $51 million there, right?

A. No.

Q. What is the difference between 191 and -- sorry. My math may be a little off. What is the difference between the two numbers, Mr. Seery?

A. Your math is off.

Q. Sorry. It is 41 million?

A. Correct.

Q. $22 million of that is the

J. SEERY

HarbourVest settlement, right?

A. I believe that's correct.

Q. Is that fair, Mr. Seery?

A. I believe that is correct, yes.

Q. And part of that differential are publicly traded or ascertainable securities. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And basically you can get, or under the plan analysis or trustee analysis, if it is a marketable security or where there is a market, the liquidation number should be the same for both. Is that fair?

A. No.

Q. And why not?

A. We might have a different price target for a particular security than the current trading value.

Q. I understand that, but I mean that is based upon the capability of the person making the decision as to when to sell. Correct?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form

J. SEERY

of the question.

Q. Mr. Seery, yes or no?

A. I said no.

Q. What is that based on, then?

A. The person's ability to assess the market and timing.

Q. Okay. And again, couldn't a trustee hire somebody as capable as you to both, A, assess the market and, B, make a determination as to when to sell?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

A. I suppose a trustee could.

Q. And there are better people or people equally or better than you at assessing a market. Correct?

A. Yes.

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

Q. So, again, let's go back to that. We have accounted for, out of $41 million where the liquidation analysis increases between the two dates, $22 million of it. That leaves

J. SEERY

$18 million. How much of that is publicly traded or ascertainable assets versus operating businesses?

A. I don't know off the top of my head the percentages.

Q. All right. The same question for the plan analysis where you have the differential between the November number and the January number. How much of it is marketable securities versus an operating business?

A. I don't recall off the top of my head.

MR. DRAPER: Let me take a few-minute break. Can we take a ten-minute break here?

THE WITNESS: Sure.

(Recess.)

BY MR. DRAPER:

Q. Mr. Seery, what I am going to show you and what I would ask you to look at is in the note E, in the statement of assumptions for the November 2020 disclosure statement. It discusses fixed

Sale of Assets of Affiliates or Controlled Entities

Asset	Sales Price
Structural Steel Products	$50 million
Life Settlements	$35 million
OmniMax	$50 million
Targa	$37 million

- These assets were sold over the contemporaneous objections of James Dondero, who was the Portfolio Manager and key-man on the funds.
- Mr. Seery admitted[1] that he must comply with the Bankruptcy Code, the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, and the Protocols for the sale of major assets of the estate. We believe that a competitive bid process and court approval should have been required for the sale of each of these assets (as was done for the sale of the building at 2817 Maple Ave. [a $9 million asset] and the sale of the interest in PetroCap [a $3 million asset]).

[1] See Mr. Seery's Jan. 29, 2021 deposition testimony, Appendix p. A-20.

Critical unknown dates and information:

- The date on which Muck entered into agreements with HarbourVest and Acis to acquire their claims and what negative and affirmative covenants those agreements contained.
- The date on which Jessup entered into an agreement with the Redeemer Committee and the Crusader Fund to acquire their claim and what negative and affirmative covenants the agreement contained.
- The date on which the sales actually closed versus the date on which notice of the transfer was filed (i.e., did UCC members continue to serve on the committee after they had sold their claims).

Counsel for the Debtor and Debtor-in-Possession

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:	§	Chapter 11
HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,[1]	§	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11
Debtor.	§

DEBTOR'S MOTION FOR ENTRY OF AN ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT WITH HARBOURVEST (CLAIM NOS. 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, 154) AND AUTHORIZING ACTIONS CONSISTENT THEREWITH

TO THE HONORABLE STACEY G. C. JERNIGAN,
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE:

[1] The last four digits of the Debtor's taxpayer identification number are 6725. The headquarters and service address for the Debtor is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, TX 75201.

Highland Capital Management, L.P., the above-captioned debtor and debtor-in-possession ("Highland" or the "Debtor"), files this motion (the "Motion") for entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, pursuant to Rule 9019 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the "Bankruptcy Rules"), approving a settlement agreement (the "Settlement Agreement"),[2] a copy of which is attached as Exhibit 1 to the Declaration of John A. Morris in Support of the Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with HarbourVest (Claim Nos. 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, 154) and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith being filed simultaneously with this Motion ("Morris Dec."), that, among other things, fully and finally resolves the proofs of claim filed by HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P., HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P., HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P., HV International VIII Secondary L.P., HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P., and HarbourVest Partners L.P. (collectively, "HarbourVest"). In support of this Motion, the Debtor represents as follows:

JURISDICTION

1. This Court has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334. This matter is a core proceeding within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2). Venue in this District is proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

2. The statutory predicates for the relief sought herein are sections 105(a) and 363 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code"), and Rule 9019 of the Bankruptcy Rules.

[2] All capitalized terms used but not defined herein shall have the meanings given to them in the Settlement Agreement.

RELEVANT BACKGROUND

A. Procedural Background

3. On October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the "Delaware Court").

4. On October 29, 2019, the official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee") was appointed by the U.S. Trustee in the Delaware Court.

5. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor's case to this Court [Docket No. 186].[3]

6. On December 27, 2019, the Debtor filed that certain Motion of the Debtor for Approval of Settlement with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course [Docket No. 281] (the "Settlement Motion"). This Court approved the Settlement Motion on January 9, 2020 [Docket No. 339] (the "Settlement Order").

7. In connection with the Settlement Order, an independent board of directors was constituted at the Debtor's general partner, Strand Advisors, Inc., and certain operating protocols were instituted.

8. On July 16, 2020, this Court entered an order appointing James P. Seery, Jr., as the Debtor's chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer [Docket No. 854].

9. The Debtor has continued in the possession of its property and has continued to operate and manage its business as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code. No trustee or examiner has been appointed in this chapter 11 case.

[3] All docket numbers refer to the docket maintained by this Court.

B. Overview of HarbourVest's Claims

10. HarbourVest's claims against the Debtor's estate arise from its $80 million investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF"), pursuant to which HarbourVest obtained a 49 percent interest in HCLOF (the "Investment").

11. In brief, HarbourVest contends that it was fraudulently induced into entering into the Investment based on the Debtor's misrepresentations and omissions concerning certain material facts, including that the Debtor: (1) failed to disclose that it never intended to pay an arbitration award obtained by a former portfolio manager, (2) failed to disclose that it engaged in a series of fraudulent transfers for the purpose of preventing the former portfolio manager from collecting on his arbitration award and misrepresented the reasons changing the portfolio manager for HCLOF immediately prior to the Investment, (3) indicated that the dispute with the former portfolio manager would not impact investment activities, and (4) expressed confidence in the ability of HCLOF to reset or redeem the collateralized loan obligations ("CLOs") under its control.

12. HarbourVest seeks to rescind its Investment and claims damages in excess of $300 million based on theories of fraud, fraudulent inducement, fraudulent concealment, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty (under Guernsey law), and on alleged violations of state securities laws and the Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization Act ("RICO").

13. HarbourVest's allegations are summarized below.[4]

[4] Solely for purposes of this Motion, and not for any other reason, the facts set forth herein are adopted largely from the HarbourVest Response to Debtor's First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 1057] (the "Response").

C. Summary of HarbourVest's Factual Allegations

14. At the time HarbourVest made its Investment, the Debtor was embroiled in an arbitration against Joshua Terry ("Mr. Terry"), a former employee of the Debtor and limited partner of Acis Capital Management, L.P. ("Acis LP"). Through Acis LP, Mr. Terry managed Highland's CLO business, including CLO-related investments held by Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("Acis Funding").

15. The litigation between Mr. Terry and the Debtor began in 2016, after the Debtor terminated Mr. Terry and commenced an action against him in Texas state court. Mr. Terry asserted counterclaims for wrongful termination and for the wrongful taking of his ownership interest in Acis LP and subsequently had certain claims referred to arbitration where he obtained an award of approximately $8 million (the "Arbitration Award") on October 20, 2017.

16. HarbourVest alleges that the Debtor responded to the Arbitration Award by engaging in a series of fraudulent transfers and corporate restructurings, the true purposes of which were fraudulently concealed from HarbourVest.

17. For example, according to HarbourVest, the Debtor changed the name of the target fund from Acis Funding to "Highland CLO Funding, Ltd." ("HCLOF") and "swapped out" Acis LP for Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. as portfolio manager (the "Structural Changes"). The Debtor allegedly told HarbourVest that it made these changes because of the "reputational harm" to Acis LP resulting from the Arbitration Award. The Debtor further told HarbourVest that in lieu of redemptions, resetting the CLOs was necessary, and that it would be easier to reset them under the "Highland" CLO brand instead of the Acis CLO brand.

18. In addition, HarbourVest also alleges that the Debtor had no intention of allowing Mr. Terry to collect on his Arbitration Award, and orchestrated a scheme to "denude"

Acis of assets by fraudulently transferring virtually all of its assets and attempting to transfer its profitable portfolio management contracts to non-Acis, Debtor-related entities.

19. Unaware of the fraudulent transfers or the true purposes of the Structural Changes, and in reliance on representations made by the Debtor, HarbourVest closed on its Investment in HCLOF on November 15, 2017.

20. After discovering the transfers that occurred between Highland and Acis between October and December 2017 following the Arbitration Award (the "Transfers"), on January 24, 2018, Terry moved for a temporary restraining order (the "TRO") from the Texas state court on the grounds that the Transfers were pursued for the purpose of rendering Acis LP judgment-proof. The state court granted the TRO, enjoining the Debtor from transferring any CLO management contracts or other assets away from Acis LP.

21. On January 30, 2018, Mr. Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions against Acis LP and its general partner, Acis Capital Management GP, LLC. See In re Acis Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 18-30264-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2018) and In re Acis Capital Management GP, LLC, Case No. 18-30265-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2018) (collectively, the "Acis Bankruptcy Case"). The Bankruptcy Court overruled the Debtor's objection, granted the involuntary petitions, and appointed a chapter 11 trustee (the "Acis Trustee"). A long sequence of events subsequently transpired, all of which relate to HarbourVest's claims, including:

- On May 31, 2018, the Court issued a sua sponte TRO preventing any actions in furtherance of the optional redemptions or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.
- On June 14, 2018, HCLOF withdrew optional redemption notices.
- The TRO expired on June 15, 2018, and HCLOF noticed the Acis Trustee that it was requesting an optional redemption.

- HCLOF's request was withdrawn on July 6, 2018, and on June 21, 2018, the Acis Trustee sought an injunction preventing Highland/HCLOF from seeking further redemptions (the "Preliminary Injunction").

- The Court granted the Preliminary Injunction on July 10, 2018, pending the Acis Trustee's attempts to confirm a plan or resolve the Acis Bankruptcy.

- On August 30, 2018, the Court denied confirmation of the First Amended Joint Plan for Acis, and held that the Preliminary Injunction must stay in place on the ground that the "evidence thus far has been compelling that numerous transfers after the Josh Terry judgment denuded Acis of value."

- After the Debtor made various statements implicating HarbourVest in the Transfers, the Acis Trustee investigated HarbourVest's involvement in such Transfers, including extensive discovery and taking a 30(b)(6) deposition of HarbourVest's managing director, Michael Pugatch, on November 17, 2018.

- On March 20, 2019, HCLOF sent a letter to Acis LP stating that it was not interested in pursuing, or able to pursue, a CLO reset transaction.

D. The Parties' Pleadings and Positions Concerning HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim

22. On April 8, 2020, HarbourVest filed proofs of claim against Highland that were subsequently denoted by the Debtor's claims agents as claim numbers 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154, respectively (collectively, the "Proofs of Claim"). Morris Dec. Exhibits 2-7.

23. The Proofs of Claim assert, among other things, that HarbourVest suffered significant harm due to conduct undertaken by the Debtor and the Debtor's employees, including "financial harm resulting from (i) court orders in the Acis Bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise relegated the activity of HCLOF [i.e., the Preliminary Injunction]; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis Bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF." See, e.g., Morris Dec. Exhibit 2 ¶3.

24. HarbourVest also asserted "any and all of its right to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the forgoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with relating to" the Operative Documents "and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the forgoing harm." See, e.g., Morris Dec. Exhibit 2 ¶4.

25. Highland subsequently objected to HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim on the grounds that they were no-liability claims. [Docket No. 906] (the "Claim Objection").

26. On September 11, 2020, HarbourVest filed its Response. The Response articulated specified claims under U.S. federal and state and Guernsey law, including claims for fraud, fraudulent concealment, fraudulent inducement, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation (collectively, the "Fraud Claims"), U.S. State and Federal Securities Law Claims (the "Securities Claims"), violations of the Federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), breach of fiduciary duty and misuse of fund assets, and an unfair prejudice claim under Guernsey law (collectively, with the Proofs of Claim, the "HarbourVest Claims").

27. On October 18, 2020, HarbourVest filed its Motion of HarbourVest Pursuant to Rule 3018 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Purposes of Voting to Accept or Reject the Plan [Docket No. 1207] (the "3018 Motion"). In its 3018 Motion, HarbourVest sought for its Claims to be temporarily allowed for voting purposes in the amount of more than $300 million (based largely on a theory of treble damages).

E. Settlement Discussions

28. In October, the parties discussed the possibility of resolving the Rule 3018 Motion.

29. In November, the parties broadened the discussions in an attempt to reach a global resolution of the HarbourVest Claims. In the pursuit thereof, the parties and their counsel participated in several conference calls where they engaged in a spirited exchange of perspectives concerning the facts and the law.

30. During follow up meetings, the parties' interests became more defined. Specifically, HarbourVest sought to maximize its recovery while fully extracting itself from the Investment, while the Debtor sought to minimize the HarbourVest Claims consistent with its perceptions of the facts and law.

31. After the parties' interests became more defined, the principals engaged in a series of direct, arm's-length, telephonic negotiations that ultimately lead to the settlement, whose terms are summarized below.

F. Summary of Settlement Terms

32. The Settlement Agreement contains the following material terms, among others:

- HarbourVest shall transfer its entire interest in HCLOF to an entity to be designated by the Debtor;[5]
- HarbourVest shall receive an allowed, general unsecured, non-priority claim in the amount of $45 million and shall vote its Class 8 claim in that amount to support the Plan;
- HarbourVest shall receive a subordinated, allowed, general unsecured, non-priority claim in the amount of $35 million and shall vote its Class 9 claim in that amount to support the Plan;
- HarbourVest will support confirmation of the Debtor's Plan, including, but not limited to, voting its claims in support of the Plan;
- The HarbourVest Claims shall be allowed in the aggregate amount of $45 million for voting purposes;
- HarbourVest will support the Debtor's pursuit of its pending Plan of Reorganization; and
- The parties shall exchange mutual releases.

[5] The NAV for HarbourVest's 49.98% interest in HCLOF was estimated to be approximately $22 million as of December 1, 2020.

See generally Morris Dec. Exhibit 1.

BASIS FOR RELIEF REQUESTED

33. Bankruptcy Rule 9019 governs the procedural prerequisites to approval of a settlement, providing that:

> On motion by the trustee and after notice and a hearing, the court may approve a compromise or settlement. Notice shall be given to creditors, the United States trustee, the debtor, and indenture trustees as provided in Rule 2002 and to any other entity as the court may direct.

FED. R. BANKR. P. 9019(a).

34. Settlements in bankruptcy are favored as a means of minimizing litigation, expediting the administration of the bankruptcy estate, and providing for the efficient resolution of bankruptcy cases. See Myers v. Martin (In re Martin), 91 F.3d 389, 393 (3d Cir. 1996); Rivercity v. Herpel (In re Jackson Brewing Co.), 624 F.2d 599, 602 (5th Cir. 1980). Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 9019(a), a bankruptcy court may approve a compromise or settlement as long as the proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and in the best interest of the estate. See In re Age Ref. Inc., 801 F.3d 530, 540 (5th Cir. 2015). Ultimately, "approval of a compromise is within the sound discretion of the bankruptcy court." See United States v. AWECO, Inc. (In re AWECO, Inc.), 725 F.2d 293, 297 (5th Cir. 1984); Jackson Brewing, 624 F.2d at 602–03.

35. In making this determination, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit applies a three-part test, "with a focus on comparing 'the terms of the compromise with the rewards of litigation.'" Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Cajun Elec. Power Coop. (In re Cajun Elec. Power Coop.), 119 F.3d 349, 356 (5th Cir. 1997) (citing Jackson Brewing, 624 F.2d at 602). The Fifth Circuit has instructed courts to consider the following factors: "(1) The probability of success in the litigation, with due consideration for the uncertainty of law and fact, (2) The complexity and likely duration of the litigation and any attendant expense, inconvenience and delay, and (3) All other factors bearing on the wisdom of the compromise." Id. Under the rubric of the third factor referenced above, the Fifth Circuit has specified two additional factors that bear on the decision to approve a proposed settlement. First, the court should consider "the paramount interest of creditors with proper deference to their reasonable views." Id.; Conn. Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. United Cos. Fin. Corp. (In re Foster Mortgage Corp.), 68 F.3d 914, 917 (5th Cir. 1995). Second, the court should consider the "extent to which the settlement is truly the product of arms-length bargaining, and not of fraud or collusion." Age Ref. Inc., 801 F.3d at 540; Foster Mortgage Corp., 68 F.3d at 918 (citations omitted).

36. There is ample basis to approve the proposed Settlement Agreement based on the Rule 9019 factors set forth by the Fifth Circuit.

37. First, although the Debtor believes that it has valid defenses to the HarbourVest Claims, there is no guarantee that the Debtor would succeed in its litigation with HarbourVest. Indeed, to establish its defenses, the Debtor would be required to rely, at least in part, on the credibility of witnesses whose veracity has already been called into question by this Court. Moreover, it will be difficult to dispute that the Transfers precipitated the Acis Bankruptcy, and, ultimately, the imposition of the Bankruptcy Court's TRO that restricted HCLOF's ability to reset or redeem the CLOs and that is at the core of the HarbourVest Claims.

38. The second factor—the complexity, duration, and costs of litigation—also weighs heavily in favor of approving the Settlement Agreement. As this Court is aware, the events forming the basis of the HarbourVest Claims—including the Terry Litigation and Acis Bankruptcy—proceeded for years in this Court and in multiple other forums, and has already cost the Debtor's estate millions of dollars in legal fees. If the Settlement Agreement is not approved, then the parties will expend significant resources litigating a host of fact-intensive issues including, among other things, the substance and materiality of the Debtor's alleged fraudulent statements and omissions and whether HarbourVest reasonably relied on those statements and omissions.

39. Third, approval of the Settlement Agreement is justified by the paramount interest of creditors. Specifically, the settlement will enable the Debtor to: (a) avoid incurring substantial litigation costs; (b) avoid the litigation risk associated with HarbourVest's $300 million claim; and (c) through the plan support provisions, increase the likelihood that the Debtor's pending plan of reorganization will be confirmed.

40. Finally, the Settlement Agreement was unquestionably negotiated at arm's-length. The terms of the settlement are the result of numerous, ongoing discussions and negotiations between the parties and their counsel and represent neither party's "best case scenario." Indeed, the Settlement Agreement should be approved as a rational exercise of the Debtor's business judgment made after due deliberation of the facts and circumstances concerning HarbourVest's Claims.

NO PRIOR REQUEST

41. No previous request for the relief sought herein has been made to this, or any other, Court.

NOTICE

42. Notice of this Motion shall be given to the following parties or, in lieu thereof, to their counsel, if known: (a) counsel for HarbourVest; (b) the Office of the United States Trustee; (c) the Office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Texas; (d) the Debtor's principal secured parties; (e) counsel to the Committee; and (f) parties requesting notice pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2002. The Debtor submits that, in light of the nature of the relief requested, no other or further notice need be given.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, (a) granting the relief requested herein, and (b) granting such other relief as is just and proper.

Exhibit 1

Settlement Agreement

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement (the "Agreement") is entered into as of March 30, 2021, by and among (i) Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or the "Debtor"), (ii) Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (n/k/a Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) ("Multi-Strat," and together with its general partner and its direct and indirect wholly-owned subsidiaries, the "MSCF Parties"), (iii) Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand"), and (iv) UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (collectively, "UBS").

Each of HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, and UBS are sometimes referred to herein collectively as the "Parties" and individually as a "Party."

RECITALS

WHEREAS, in 2007, UBS entered into certain contracts with HCMLP and two funds managed by HCMLP—Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC," and together with CDO Fund, the "Funds") related to a securitization transaction (the "Knox Agreement");

WHEREAS, in 2008, the parties to the Knox Agreement restructured the Knox Agreement;

WHEREAS, UBS terminated the Knox Agreement and, on February 24, 2009, UBS filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of New York (the "State Court") against HCMLP and the Funds seeking to recover damages related to the Knox Agreement, in an action captioned UBS Securities LLC, et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., et al., Index No. 650097/2009 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.) (the "2009 Action");

WHEREAS, UBS's lone claim against HCMLP in the 2009 Action for indemnification was dismissed in early 2010, and thereafter UBS amended its complaint in the 2009 Action to add five new defendants, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"), Highland Credit Strategies Master Funds, L.P. ("Credit-Strat"), Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P. ("Crusader"), Multi-Strat, and Strand, and to add new claims for fraudulent inducement, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference with contract, alter ego, and general partner liability;

WHEREAS, UBS filed a new, separate action against HCMLP on June 28, 2010, for, inter alia, fraudulent conveyance and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, captioned UBS Securities LLC, et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., Index No. 650752/2010 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.) (the "2010 Action");

WHEREAS, in November 2010, the State Court consolidated the 2009 Action and the 2010 Action (hereafter referred to as the "State Court Action"), and on May 11, 2011, UBS filed a Second Amended Complaint in the 2009 Action;

WHEREAS, in 2015, UBS entered into settlement agreements with Crusader and Credit-Strat, and thereafter UBS filed notices with the State Court in the State Court Action dismissing its claims against Crusader and Credit-Strat;

EXECUTION VERSION

WHEREAS, the State Court bifurcated claims asserted in the State Court Action for purposes of trial, with the Phase I bench trial deciding UBS's breach of contract claims against the Funds and HCMLP's counterclaims against UBS;

WHEREAS, on August 7, 2017, the Funds, along with Highland CDO Opportunity Fund, Ltd., Highland CDO Holding Company, Highland Financial Corp., and HFP, purportedly sold assets with a purported collective fair market value of $105,647,679 (the "Transferred Assets") and purported face value of over $300,000,000 to Sentinel Reinsurance, Ltd. ("Sentinel") pursuant to a purported asset purchase agreement (the "Purchase Agreement");

WHEREAS, Sentinel treated the Transferred Assets as payment for a $25,000,000 premium on a document entitled "Legal Liability Insurance Policy" (the "Insurance Policy");

WHEREAS, the Insurance Policy purports to provide coverage to the Funds for up to $100,000,000 for any legal liability resulting from the State Court Action (the "Insurance Proceeds");

WHEREAS, one of the Transferred Assets CDO Fund transferred to Sentinel was CDO Fund's limited partnership interests in Multi-Strat (the "CDOF Interests");

WHEREAS, Sentinel had also received from HCMLP limited partnership interests in Multi-Strat for certain cash consideration (together with the CDOF Interests, the "MSCF Interests");

WHEREAS, the existence of the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy were unknown to Strand's independent directors and the Debtor's bankruptcy advisors prior to late January 2021;

WHEREAS, in early February 2021, the Debtor disclosed the existence of the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy to UBS;

WHEREAS, prior to such disclosure, the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy were unknown to UBS;

WHEREAS, on November 14, 2019, following the Phase I trial, the State Court issued its decision determining that the Funds breached the Knox Agreement on December 5, 2008 and dismissing HCMLP's counterclaims;

WHEREAS, Sentinel purportedly redeemed the MSCF Interests in November 2019 and the redeemed MSCF Interests are currently valued at approximately $32,823,423.50 (the "Sentinel Redemption");

WHEREAS, on February 10, 2020, the State Court entered a Phase I trial judgment against the Funds in the amount of $1,039,957,799.44 as of January 22, 2020 (the "Phase I Judgment");

WHEREAS, Phase II of the trial of the State Court Action, includes, inter alia, UBS's claim for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing against HCMLP, UBS's

fraudulent transfer claims against HCMLP, HFP, and Multi-Strat, and UBS's general partner claim against Strand;

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2019, HCMLP filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The Bankruptcy Case was transferred to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Bankruptcy Court") on December 4, 2019;

WHEREAS, Phase II of the trial of the State Court Action was automatically stayed as to HCMLP by HCMLP's bankruptcy filing;

WHEREAS, on May 11, 2020, UBS, Multi-Strat, Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, Ltd., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO Asset Holdings, L.P. (collectively, the "May Settlement Parties"), entered into a Settlement Agreement (the "May Settlement") pursuant to which the May Settlement Parties agreed to the allocation of the proceeds of certain sales of assets held by Multi-Strat, including escrowing a portion of such funds, and restrictions on Multi-Strat's actions;

WHEREAS, on June 26, 2020, UBS timely filed two substantively identical claims in the Bankruptcy Case: (i) Claim No. 190 filed by UBS Securities LLC; and (ii) Claim No. 191 filed by UBS AG London Branch (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "UBS Claim"). The UBS Claim asserts a general unsecured claim against HCMLP for $1,039,957,799.40;

WHEREAS, on August 3, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court entered an Order Directing Mediation [Docket No. 912] pursuant to which HCMLP, UBS, and several other parties were directed to mediate their Bankruptcy Case disputes before two experienced third-party mediators, Retired Judge Allan Gropper and Sylvia Mayer (together, the "Mediators"). HCMLP and UBS formally met with the Mediators together and separately on numerous occasions, including on August 27, September 2, 3, and 4, and December 17, 2020, and had numerous other informal discussions outside of the presence of the Mediators, in an attempt to resolve the UBS Claim;

WHEREAS, on August 7, 2020, HCMLP filed an objection to the UBS Claim [Docket No. 928]. Also on August 7, 2020, the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, and Crusader, Highland Crusader Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Fund, Ltd., and Highland Crusader Fund II, Ltd. (collectively, the "Redeemer Committee"), objected to the UBS Claim [Docket No. 933]. On September 25, 2020, UBS filed its response to these objections [Docket No. 1105];

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2020, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee each moved for partial summary judgment on the UBS Claim [Docket Nos. 1180 and 1183, respectively], and on November 6, 2020, UBS opposed these motions [Docket No. 1337];

WHEREAS, by Order dated December 9, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court granted, as set forth therein, the motions for partial summary judgment filed by HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee and denied UBS's request for leave to file an amended proof of claim [Docket No. 1526];

WHEREAS, on November 6, 2020, UBS filed UBS's Motion for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Voting Purposes Pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3018 [Docket No. 1338] (the "3018 Motion"), and on November 16, 2020, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee each opposed the 3018 Motion [Docket Nos. 1404 and 1409, respectively];

WHEREAS, by Order dated December 8, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court granted the 3018 Motion and allowed the UBS Claim, on a temporary basis and for voting purposes only, in the amount of $94,761,076 [Docket No. 1518];

WHEREAS, on January 22, 2021, the Debtor filed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization for Highland Capital Management, L.P. (As Modified) [Docket No. 1808] (as amended, and as may be further amended, supplemented, or otherwise modified, the "Plan");

WHEREAS, on March 29, 2021, the Debtor caused CDO Fund to make a claim on the Insurance Policy to collect the Insurance Proceeds pursuant to the Phase I Judgment;

WHEREAS, on March 29, 2021, UBS filed an adversary proceeding seeking injunctive relief and a motion for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction to, among other things, enjoin the Debtor from allowing Multi-Strat to distribute the Sentinel Redemption to Sentinel or any transferee of Sentinel (the "Multi-Strat Proceeding"), which relief the Debtor, in its capacity as Multi-Strat's investment manager and general partner, does not oppose;

WHEREAS, the Parties wish to enter into this Agreement to settle all claims and disputes between and among them, to the extent and on the terms and conditions set forth herein, and to exchange the mutual releases set forth herein, without any admission of fault, liability, or wrongdoing on the part of any Party; and

WHEREAS, this Agreement will be presented to the Bankruptcy Court for approval pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9019 ("Rule 9019") and section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code;

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the above recitals, the covenants, conditions, and promises made herein, and other good and valuable consideration, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties agree as follows:

AGREEMENT

1. Settlement of Claims. In full and complete satisfaction of the UBS Released Claims (as defined below):

(a) The UBS Claim will be allowed as (i) a single, general unsecured claim in the amount of $65,000,000 against HCMLP, which shall be treated as a Class 8 General Unsecured Claim under the Plan;[1] and (ii) a single, subordinated unsecured claim in the amount of $60,000,000 against HCMLP, which shall be treated as a Class 9 Subordinated General Unsecured Claim under the Plan.

[1] Capitalized terms used but not defined herein shall have the meanings attributed to them in the Plan.

(b) Multi-Strat will pay UBS the sum of $18,500,000 (the "Multi-Strat Payment") as follows: (i) within two (2) business days after the Order Date, the May Settlement Parties will submit a Joint Release Instruction (as defined in the May Settlement) for the release of the amounts held in the Escrow Account (as defined in the May Settlement) to be paid to UBS in partial satisfaction of the Multi-Strat Payment on the date that is ten (10) business days following the Order Date; and (ii) Multi-Strat will pay UBS the remainder of the Multi-Strat Payment in immediately available funds on the date that is ten (10) business days following the Order Date, provided that, for the avoidance of doubt, the amounts held in the Escrow Account will not be paid to UBS until and unless the remainder of the Multi-Strat Payment is made.

(c) Subject to applicable law, HCMLP will use reasonable efforts to (i) cause CDO Fund to pay the Insurance Proceeds in full to UBS as soon as practicable, but no later than within 5 business days of CDO Fund actually receiving the Insurance Proceeds from or on behalf of Sentinel; (ii) if Sentinel refuses to pay the Insurance Proceeds, take legal action reasonably designed to recover the Insurance Proceeds or the MSCF Interests or to return the Transferred Assets to the Funds to satisfy the Phase I Judgment and in addition shall provide reasonable assistance to UBS in connection with any legal action UBS takes to recover the Insurance Proceeds or to return the Transferred Assets to the Funds to satisfy the Phase I Judgment or obtain rights to the MSCF interests, including but not limited to the redemption payments in connection with the MSCF Interests; (iii) cooperate with UBS and participate (as applicable) in the investigation or prosecution of claims or requests for injunctive relief against the Funds, Multi-Strat, Sentinel, James Dondero, Isaac Leventon, Scott Ellington, Andrew Dean, Christopher Walter, Jean Paul Sevilla, Matthew DiOrio, Katie Irving, and/or any other current or former employee or director of the Funds or Sentinel and/or any other former employee or former director of any of the HCMLP Parties that is believed to be involved with the Purchase Agreement, Insurance Policy, Transferred Assets, the transfer of the MSCF Interests, or any potentially fraudulent transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel, excluding the individuals listed on the schedule provided to UBS on March 25, 2021 (the "HCMLP Excluded Employees"); (iv) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide UBS with all business and trustee contacts at the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd, if any, that are actually known by the Debtor after reasonable inquiry; (v) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide UBS with a copy of the governing documents, prospectuses, and indenture agreements for the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd, as applicable, that are in the Debtor's actual possession, custody, or control, (vi) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide, to the extent possible, any CUSIP numbers of the securities of the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd., as applicable, including information regarding the location and amount of any cash related to those entities' holdings, in each case only to the extent actually known by the Debtor after reasonable inquiry; (vii) cooperate with UBS to assign or convey any such assets described in Section 1(c)(vi) or any other assets owned or controlled by the Funds and/or HFP, including for avoidance of doubt any additional assets currently unknown to the Debtor that the Debtor discovers in the future after the Agreement Effective Date; (viii) respond as promptly as reasonably possible to requests by UBS for access to relevant documents and approve as promptly as reasonably possible requests for access to relevant documents from third parties as needed with respect to the Transferred Assets, the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the

MSCF Interests and any other assets currently or formerly held by the Funds or HFP, including without limitation the requests listed in Appendix A (provided, however, that the provision of any such documents or access will be subject to the common interest privilege and will not constitute a waiver of any attorney-client or other privilege in favor of HCMLP) that are in the Debtor's actual possession, custody, or control; (ix) preserve all documents in HCMLP's possession, custody, or control regarding or relating to the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the MSCF Interests, or any transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel, including but not limited to the documents requested in Appendix A, from 2016 to present, and issue a litigation hold to all individuals deemed reasonably necessary regarding the same; and (x) otherwise use reasonable efforts to assist UBS to collect its Phase I Judgment against the Funds and HFP and assets the Funds and/or HFP may own, or have a claim to under applicable law ahead of all other creditors of the Funds and HFP; provided, however, that, from and after the date hereof, HCMLP shall not be required to incur any out-of-pocket fees or expenses, including, but not limited to, those fees and expenses for outside consultants and professionals (the "Reimbursable Expenses"), in connection with any provision of this Section 1(c) in excess of $3,000,000 (the "Expense Cap"), and provided further that, for every dollar UBS recovers from the Funds (other than the assets related to Greenbriar CLO Ltd. or Greenbriar CLO Corp.), Sentinel, Multi-Strat (other than the amounts set forth in Section 1(b) hereof), or any other person or entity described in Section 1(c)(iii) in connection with any claims UBS has that arise out of or relate to the Phase I Judgment, the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the Transferred Assets, the MSCF Interests, or the Insurance Proceeds (the "UBS Recovery"), UBS will reimburse HCMLP ten percent of the UBS Recovery for the Reimbursable Expenses incurred by HCMLP, subject to: (1) the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date and (2) UBS's receipt and review of invoices and time records (which may be redacted as reasonably necessary) for outside consultants and professionals in connection with such efforts described in this Section 1(c), up to but not exceeding the Expense Cap after any disputes regarding the Reimbursable Expenses have been resolved pursuant to procedures to be agreed upon, or absent an agreement, in a manner directed by the Bankruptcy Court; and provided further that in any proceeding over the reasonableness of the Reimbursable Expenses, the losing party shall be obligated to pay the reasonable fees and expenses of the prevailing party; and provided further that any litigation in which HCMLP is a co-plaintiff with UBS or a plaintiff pursuing claims on behalf of or for UBS's benefit pursuant to this Section 1(c) shall be conducted in consultation with UBS, including but not limited to the selection of necessary outside consultants and professionals to assist in such litigation; and provided further that UBS shall have the right to approve HCMLP's selection of outside consultants and professionals to assist in any litigation in which HCMLP is a co-plaintiff with UBS or a plaintiff pursuing claims on behalf of or for UBS's benefit pursuant to this Section 1(c).

(d) Redeemer Appeal.

(i) On the Agreement Effective Date, provided that neither the Redeemer Committee nor any entities acting on its behalf or with any assistance from or coordination with the Redeemer Committee have objected to this Agreement or the 9019 Motion (as defined below), UBS shall withdraw with prejudice its appeal of the Order Approving Debtor's Settlement with (A) the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund (Claim No. 72) and (B) the Highland Crusader Funds (Claim No. 81), and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith [Docket No. 1273] (the "Redeemer Appeal"); and

(ii) The Parties have stipulated to extend the deadline for the filing of any briefs in the Redeemer Appeal to June 30, 2021 and will agree to such further extensions as necessary to facilitate this Settlement Agreement.

(e) As of the Agreement Effective Date, the restrictions and obligations set forth in the May Settlement, other than those in Section 7 thereof, shall be extinguished in their entirety and be of no further force or effect.

(f) On the Agreement Effective Date, the Debtor shall instruct the claims agent in the Bankruptcy Case to adjust the claims register in accordance with this Agreement.

(g) On the Agreement Effective Date, any claim the Debtor may have against Sentinel or any other party, and any recovery related thereto, with respect to the MSCF Interests shall be automatically transferred to UBS, without any further action required by the Debtor. For the avoidance of doubt, the Debtor shall retain any and all other claims it may have against Sentinel or any other party, and the recovery related thereto, unrelated to the MSCF Interests.

2. Definitions.

(a) "Agreement Effective Date" shall mean the date the full amount of the Multi-Strat Payment defined in Section 1(b) above, including without limitation the amounts held in the Escrow Account (as defined in the May Settlement), is actually paid to UBS.

(b) "HCMLP Parties" shall mean (a) HCMLP, in its individual capacity; (b) HCMLP, as manager of Multi-Strat; and (c) Strand.

(c) "Order Date" shall mean the date of an order entered by the Bankruptcy Court approving this Agreement pursuant to a motion filed under Rule 9019 and section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code.

(d) "UBS Parties" shall mean UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch.

3. Releases.

(a) UBS Releases. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the UBS Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue (A) the HCMLP Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), except as expressly set forth below, and (B) the MSCF Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), except as expressly set forth below, for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "UBS Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to (1) the obligations of the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties under this Agreement, including without limitation the allowance of or distributions on account of the UBS Claim or the settlement terms described in Sections 1(a)-(g) above; (2) the Funds or HFP, including for any liability with respect to the prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, and/or Insurance Policy, or such prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, and/or Insurance Policy by UBS; (3) James Dondero or Mark Okada, or any entities, including without limitation Hunter Mountain Investment Trust, Dugaboy Investment Trust, and NexBank, SSB, owned or controlled by either of them, other than the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties (but for the avoidance of doubt, such releases of the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties shall be solely with respect to such entities and shall not extend in any way to James Dondero or Mark Okada in their individual capacity or in any other capacity, including but not limited to as an investor, officer, trustee, or director in the HCMLP Parties or MSCF Parties); (4) Sentinel or its subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, assigns, employees, or directors, including James Dondero, Isaac Leventon, Scott Ellington, Andrew Dean, Christopher Walter, Jean Paul Sevilla, Matthew DiOrio, Katie Irving, and/or any other current or former employee or director of the Funds or Sentinel and/or any other former employee or former director of any of the HCMLP Parties that is believed to be involved with the Purchase Agreement, Insurance Policy, MSCF Interests, or Transferred Assets, including for any liability with respect to the prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, the MSCF Interests, any potentially fraudulent transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel and/or Insurance Policy, excluding the HCMLP Excluded Employees; (5) the economic rights or interests of UBS in its capacity as an investor, directly or indirectly (including in its capacity as an investment manager and/or investment advisor), in any HCMLP-affiliated entity, including without limitation in the Redeemer Committee and Credit Strat, and/or in such entities' past, present or future subsidiaries and feeders funds (the "UBS Unrelated Investments"); and (6) any actions taken by UBS against any person or entity, including any HCMLP Party or MSCF Party, to enjoin a distribution on the Sentinel Redemption or the transfer of any assets currently held by or within the control of CDO Fund to Sentinel or a subsequent transferee or to seek to compel any action that only such person or entity has standing to pursue or authorize in order to permit UBS to recover the Insurance Proceeds, Transferred Assets, the Phase I Judgment or any recovery against HFP; provided, however, that, from and after the date hereof, any out-of-pocket fees or expenses incurred by HCMLP in connection with this Section 3(a)(6) will be considered Reimbursable Expenses and shall be subject to, and applied against, the Expense Cap as if they were incurred by HCMLP pursuant to Section 1(c) subject to the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date and after any disputes regarding such Reimbursable Expenses have been resolved in the manner described in Section 1(c).

(b) HCMLP Release. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the HCMLP Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue any of the UBS Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "HCMLP Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to the obligations of the UBS Parties under this Agreement or Section 7 of the May Settlement; and (b) the obligations of the UBS Parties in connection with the UBS Unrelated Investments.

(c) Multi-Strat Release. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the MSCF Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue any of the UBS Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "Multi-Strat Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to the obligations of the UBS Parties under this Agreement or Section 7 of the May Settlement.

4. No Third Party Beneficiaries. Except for the parties released by this Agreement, no other person or entity shall be deemed a third-party beneficiary of this Agreement.

5. UBS Covenant Not to Sue. Subject to the occurrence of the Agreement Effective date, if UBS ever controls any HCMLP-affiliated defendant in the State Court Action by virtue of the prosecution, enforcement, or collection of the Phase I Judgment (collectively, the "Controlled State Court Defendants"), UBS covenants on behalf of itself and the Controlled State Court Defendants, if any, that neither UBS nor the Controlled State Court Defendants will assert or pursue any claims that any Controlled State Court Defendant has or may have against any of the HCMLP Parties; provided, however, that nothing shall prohibit UBS or a Controlled State Court Defendant from taking any of the actions set forth in Section 3(a)(1)-(6); provided further, however, if and to the extent UBS receives any distribution from any Controlled State Court Defendant that is derived from a claim by a Controlled State Court Defendant against the Debtor, subject to the exceptions set forth in Section 3(a), which distribution is directly attributable to any property the Controlled State Court Defendant receives from the Debtor and separate and distinct from property owned or controlled by CDO Fund, SOHC, or Multi-Strat, then such recovery shall be credited against all amounts due from the Debtor's estate on account of the UBS Claim allowed pursuant to Section 1(a) of this Agreement, or if such claim has been paid in full, shall be promptly turned over to the Debtor or its successors or assigns.

6. Agreement Subject to Bankruptcy Court Approval.

(a) The force and effect of this Agreement and the Parties' obligations hereunder are conditioned in all respects on the approval of this Agreement and the releases herein by the Bankruptcy Court. The Parties agree to use reasonable efforts to have this Agreement expeditiously approved by the Bankruptcy Court by cooperating in the preparation and prosecution of a mutually agreeable motion and proposed order (the "9019 Motion") to be filed by the Debtor no later than five business days after execution of this Agreement by all Parties unless an extension is agreed to by both parties.

7. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each UBS Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the UBS Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any UBS Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such UBS Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any UBS Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such UBS Party.

(b) Each HCMLP Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the HCMLP Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any HCMLP Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such HCMLP Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any HCMLP Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such HCMLP Party.

(c) Each MSCF Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the Multi-Strat Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any Multi-Strat Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such MSCF Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any Multi-Strat Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such MSCF Party.

8. No Admission of Liability. The Parties acknowledge that there is a bona fide dispute with respect to the UBS Claim. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed, expressly or by implication, as an admission of liability, fault, or wrongdoing by HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, UBS, or any other person, and the execution of this Agreement does not constitute an admission of liability, fault, or wrongdoing on the part of HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, UBS, or any other person.

9. Successors-in-Interest. This Agreement shall be binding upon and shall inure to the benefit of each of the Parties and their representatives, successors, and assigns.

10. Notice. Each notice and other communication hereunder shall be in writing and will, unless otherwise subsequently directed in writing, be delivered by email and overnight delivery, as set forth below, and will be deemed to have been given on the date following such mailing.

11. Advice of Counsel. Each of the Parties represents that such Party has: (a) been adequately represented by independent legal counsel of its own choice, throughout all of the negotiations that preceded the execution of this Agreement; (b) executed this Agreement upon the advice of such counsel; (c) read this Agreement, and understands and assents to all the terms and conditions contained herein without any reservations; and (d) had the opportunity to have this Agreement and all the terms and conditions contained herein explained by independent counsel, who has answered any and all questions asked of such counsel, or which could have been asked of such counsel, including, but not limited to, with regard to the meaning and effect of any of the provisions of this Agreement.

12. Entire Agreement. This Agreement contains the entire agreement and understanding concerning the subject matter of this Agreement, and supersedes and replaces all prior negotiations and agreements, written or oral and executed or unexecuted, concerning such subject matter. Each of the Parties acknowledges that no other Party, nor any agent of or attorney for any such Party, has made any promise, representation, or warranty, express or implied, written or oral, not otherwise contained in this Agreement to induce any Party to execute this Agreement. The Parties further acknowledge that they are not executing this Agreement in reliance on any promise, representation, or warranty not contained in this Agreement, and that any such reliance would be unreasonable. This Agreement will not be waived or modified except by an agreement in writing signed by each Party or duly authorized representative of each Party.

13. No Party Deemed Drafter. The Parties acknowledge that the terms of this Agreement are contractual and are the result of arm's-length negotiations between the Parties and their chosen counsel. Each Party and its counsel cooperated in the drafting and preparation of this Agreement. In any construction to be made of this Agreement, the Agreement will not be construed against any Party.

14. Future Cooperation. The Parties agree to cooperate and execute such further documentation as is reasonably necessary to effectuate the intent of this Agreement.

15. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts with the same force and effect as if executed in one complete document. Each Party's signature hereto will signify acceptance of, and agreement to, the terms and provisions contained in this Agreement.

Photographic, electronic, and facsimile copies of signed counterparts may be used in lieu of the originals of this Agreement for any purpose.

16. Governing Law; Venue; Attorneys' Fees and Costs. The Parties agree that this Agreement will be governed by and will be construed according to the laws of the State of New York without regard to conflict-of-law principles. Each of the Parties hereby submits to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court during the pendency of the Bankruptcy Case and thereafter to the exclusive jurisdiction of the state and federal courts located in the Borough of Manhattan, New York, with respect to any disputes arising from or out of this Agreement. In any action to enforce this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover its reasonable and necessary attorneys' fees and costs (including experts).

OUR FOUNDER

RETURN TO ABOUT (/ABOUT/)

Warren Hellman: One of the good guys

Warren Hellman was a devoted family man, highly successful businessman, active philanthropist, dedicated musician, arts patron, endurance athlete and all-around good guy. Born in New York City in 1934, he grew up in the Bay Area, graduating from the University of California at Berkeley. After serving in the U.S. Army and attending Harvard Business School, Warren began his finance career at Lehman Brothers, becoming the youngest partner in the firm's history at age 26 and subsequently serving as President. After a distinguished career on Wall Street, Warren moved back west and co-founded Hellman & Friedman, building it into one of the industry's leading private equity firms.

Warren deeply believed in the power of people to accomplish incredible things and used his success to improve and enrich the lives of countless people. Throughout his career, Warren helped found or seed many successful businesses including Matrix Partners, Jordan Management Company, Farallon Capital Management and Hall Capital Partners.

Within the community, Warren and his family were generous supporters of dozens of organizations and causes in the arts, public education, civic life, and public health, including creating and running the San Francisco Free Clinic. Later in life, Warren became an accomplished 5-string banjo player and found great joy in sharing the love of music with others. In true form, he made something larger of this avocation to benefit others by founding the Hardly Strictly Bluegrass Festival, an annual three-day, free music festival that draws hundreds of thousands of people together from around the Bay Area.

An accomplished endurance athlete, Warren regularly completed 100-mile runs, horseback rides and combinations of the two. He also was an avid skier and national caliber master ski racer and served as president of the U.S. Ski Team in the late 1970s, and is credited with helping revitalize the Sugar Bowl ski resort in the California Sierras.

In short, Warren Hellman embodied the ideal of living life to the fullest. He had an active mind and body, and a huge heart. We are lucky to call him our founder. Read more about Warren. (https://hf.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/09/Warren-Hellman-News-Release.pdf)

The $57 billion alternatives manager will become a public company after merging with a SPAC backed by Cantor Fitzgerald.

August 03, 2020

Chicago, IL (Tim Boyle/Bloomberg)

In a sign of the times, GCM Grosvenor will become a public company through a SPAC.

The Chicago-based alternative investments firm is planning to go public by merging with a special purpose acquisition company in a deal valued at $2 billion. The 50-year-old firm has $57 billion in assets in private equity, infrastructure, real estate, credit, and absolute return investments.

"We have long valued having external shareholders and we wanted to preserve the accountability and focus that comes with that," Michael Sacks, GCM Grosvenor's chairman and CEO, said in a statement.

GCM Grosvenor will combine with CF Finance Special Acquisition Corp, a SPAC backed by Cantor Fitzgerald, according to an announcement from both companies on Monday. After the company goes public, Sacks will continue to lead GCM Grosvenor, which is owned by management and Hellman & Friedman, a private equity firm. Hellman & Friedman, which has owned a minority stake of the Chicago asset manager since 2007, will sell its equity as

Case Study – Large Loan Origination

Debt origination for an affiliate of Simon Property Group Inc. and Farallon Capital Management

Date	June 2007
Asset Class	Retail
Asset Size	1,808,506 Sq. Ft.
Sponsor	Simon Property Group Inc. / Farallon Capital Management
Transaction Type	Refinance
Total Debt Amount	Lehman Brothers: $121 million JP Morgan: $200 million

Transaction Overview

- In June 2007, Lehman Brothers co-originated a loan in the aggregate amount of $321 million (Lehman portion: $121 million) with JP Morgan to a special purpose affiliate of a joint venture between Simon Property Group Inc ("Simon") and Farallon Capital Management ("Farallon") secured by the shopping center known as Gurnee Mills Mall (the "Property") located in Gurnee, IL .
- The Property consists of a one-story, 200 store discount mega-mall comprised of 1,808,506 square feet anchored by Burlington Coat Factory, Marshalls, Bed Bath & Beyond and Kohls among other national retailers. Built in 1991, the Property underwent a $5 million interior renovation in addition to a $71 million redevelopment between 2004 and 2005. As of March 2007, the Property had a in-line occupancy of 99.5%.

Lehman Brothers Role

- Simon and Farallon comprised the sponsorship which eventually merged with The Mills Corporation in early 2007 for $25.25 per common share in cash. The total value of the transaction was approximately $1.64 billion for all of the outstanding common stock, and approximately $7.9 billion including assumed debt and preferred equity.
- Lehman and JP Morgan subsequently co-originated $321 million loan at 79.2% LTV based on an appraisal completed in March by Cushman & Wakefield. The Loan was used to refinance the indebtedness secured by the Property.

Sponsorship Overview

- The Mills Corporation, based in Chevy Chase MD is a developer owner and manager of a diversified portfolio of retail destinations including regional shopping malls and entertainment centers. They currently own 38 properties in the United States totaling 47 million square feet.

Re: Update & Notice of Distribution

Dear Highland Crusader Funds Stakeholder,

As you know, in October 2020, the Bankruptcy Court approved a settlement of the Redeemer Committee's and the Crusader Funds' claims against Highland Capital Management L.P. ("HCM"), as a result of which the Redeemer Committee was allowed a general unsecured claim of $137,696,610 against HCM and the Crusader Funds were allowed a general unsecured claim of $50,000 against HCM (collectively, the "Claims"). In addition, as part of the settlement, various interests in the Crusader Funds held by HCM and certain of its affiliates are to be extinguished (the "Extinguished Interests"), and the Redeemer Committee and the Crusader Funds received a general release from HCM and a waiver by HCM of any claim to distributions or fees that it might otherwise receive from the Crusader Funds (the "Released Claims" and, collectively with the Extinguished Interests, the "Retained Rights").

A timely appeal of the settlement was taken by UBS (the "UBS Appeal) in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division. However, the Bankruptcy Court subsequently approved a settlement between HCM and UBS, resulting in dismissal of the UBS Appeal with prejudice on June 14, 2021.

On April 30, 2021, the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee consummated the sale of the Claims against HCM and the majority of the remaining investments held by the Crusader Funds to Jessup Holdings LLC ("Jessup") for $78 million in cash, which was paid in full to the Crusader Funds at closing. The sale specifically excluded the Crusader Funds' investment in Cornerstone Healthcare Group Holding Inc. and excluded certain specified provisions of the settlement agreement with HCM (the "Settlement Agreement"), including, but not limited to, the Retained Rights. The sale of the Claims and investments was made with no holdbacks or escrows.

The sale to Jessup resulted from a solicitation of offers to purchase the Claims commenced by Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management LLC ("A&M CRF"), as Investment Manager of the Crusader Funds, in consultation with the Redeemer Committee. Ultimately, the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee entered exclusive negotiations with Jessup, culminating in the sale to Jessup.

A&M CRF, pursuant to the Plan and Scheme and with the approval of House Hanover, the Redeemer Committee and the Board of the Master Fund, now intends to distribute the proceeds from the Jessup transaction ($78 million), net of any applicable tax withholdings and with no reserves for the Extinguished Claims or the Released Claims. In addition, the distribution will include approximately $9.4 million in proceeds that have been redistributed due to the cancellation and extinguishment of the interests and shares in the Crusader Funds held by HCM, Charitable DAF and Eames in connection with the Settlement Agreement, resulting in a total gross distribution of $87.4 million. Distributions will be based on net asset value as of June 30, 2021.

Please note that A&M CRF intends to make the distributions by wire transfer no later than July 31, 2021. Please confirm your wire instructions on or before July 20, 2021. If there are any revisions to your wire information, please use the attached template to provide SEI and A&M CRF your updated information on investor letterhead. This information should be sent on or before July 20, 2021 to Alvarez & Marsal CRF and SEI at CRFInvestor@alvarezandmarsal.com and AIFS-IS_Crusader@seic.com, respectively.

The wire payments will be made to the investor bank account on file with an effective and record date of July 1, 2021. Should you have any questions, please contact SEI or A&M CRF at the e-mail addresses listed above.

Sincerely,

Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management, LLC

Re: Highland Capital Management, L.P. Bankruptcy Case
Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ) Bankr. N.D. Tex.

Dear Ms. Eitel:

I am a senior bankruptcy practitioner who has worked closely with Douglas Draper (representing separate, albeit aligned, clients) in the above-referenced Chapter 11 case. I have represented debtors-in-possession on multiple occasions, have served as an adjunct professor of law teaching advanced corporate restructuring, and consider myself not only a bankruptcy expert, but an expert on the practicalities and realities of how estates and cases are administered and, therefore, how they could be manipulated for personal interests. I write to follow up on the letter that Douglas sent to your offices on October 4, 2021, on account of additional information my clients have learned in this matter. So that you understand, my clients in the case are NexPoint Advisors, L.P. and Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P., both of whom are affiliated with and controlled by James Dondero, and I write this letter on their behalf and based on information they have obtained.

I share Douglas' view that serious abuses of the bankruptcy process occurred during the bankruptcy of Texas-headquartered Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or the "Debtor") which, left uninvestigated and unaddressed, may represent a systemic issue that I believe would be of concern to your office and within your office's sphere of authority. Those abuses include potential insider trading and breaches of fiduciary duty by those charged with protecting creditors, understated estimations of estate value seemingly designed to benefit insiders and management, gross mistreatment of employees who were key to the bankruptcy process, and ultimately a plan aimed at liquidating an otherwise viable estate, to the detriment of third-party investors in Debtor-managed funds. To be clear, I recognize that the Bankruptcy Court has ruled the way that it has and I am not criticizing the Bankruptcy Court or seeking to attack any of its orders. Rather, as has been and will be shown, the Bankruptcy Court acted on misinformation presented to it, intentional lack of transparency, and manipulation of the facts and circumstances by the fiduciaries of the estate. I therefore wish to add my voice to Douglas' aforementioned letter, provide additional information, encourage your investigation, and offer whatever information or assistance I can.

The abuses here are akin to the type of systemic abuse of process that took place in the bankruptcy of Neiman Marcus (in which a core member of the creditors' committee admittedly attempted to perpetrate a massive fraud on creditors), and which is something that lawmakers should be concerned about, particularly to the extent that debtor management and creditors' committee members are using the federal bankruptcy process to shield themselves from liability for otherwise harmful, illegal, or fraudulent acts.

BACKGROUND

Highland Capital Management and its Founder, James Dondero

Highland Capital Management, L.P. is an SEC-registered investment advisor co-founded by James Dondero in 1993. A graduate of the University of Virginia with highest honors, Mr. Dondero has over thirty years of experience successfully overseeing investment and business activities across a range of investment platforms. Of note, Mr. Dondero is chiefly responsible for ensuring that Highland weathered the global financial crisis, evolving the firm's focus from high-yield credit to other areas, including real estate, private equity, and alternative investments. Prior to its bankruptcy, Highland served as advisor to a suite of registered funds, including open-end mutual funds, closed-end funds, and an exchange-traded fund.

In addition to managing Highland, Mr. Dondero is a dedicated philanthropist who has actively supported initiatives in education, veterans' affairs, and public policy. He currently serves as a member of the Executive Board of the Southern Methodist University Cox School of Business and sits on the Executive Advisory Council of the George W. Bush Presidential Center.

Circumstances Precipitating Bankruptcy

Notwithstanding Highland's historical success with Mr. Dondero at the helm, Highland's funds—like many other investment platforms—suffered losses during the financial crisis, leading to myriad lawsuits by investors. One of the most contentious disputes involved a group of investors who had invested in Highland-managed funds collectively termed the "Crusader Funds." During the financial crisis, to avoid a run on the Crusader Funds at low-watermark prices, the funds' manager temporarily suspended redemptions, leading investors to sue. That dispute resolved with the formation of an investor committee self-named the "Redeemer Committee" and the orderly liquidation of the Crusader Funds, which resulted in investors' receiving a return of their investments plus a return, as opposed to the 20 cents on the dollar they would have received had their redemption requests been honored when made.

Despite this successful liquidation, the Redeemer Committee sued Highland again several years later, claiming that Highland had improperly delayed the liquidation and paid itself fees not authorized under the parties' earlier settlement agreement. The dispute went to arbitration, ultimately resulting in an arbitration award against Highland of $189 million (of which Highland expected to make a net payment of $110 million once the award was confirmed).

Believing that a restructuring of its judgment liabilities was in Highland's best interest, on October 16, 2019, Highland—a Delaware limited partnership—filed a voluntary petition for relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware.[1]

On October 29, 2019, the Bankruptcy Court appointed the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors ("Creditors' Committee"). The Creditors' Committee Members (and the contact individuals for those members) are: (1) The Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund (Eric Felton), (2) Meta e-Discovery (Paul McVoy), (3) UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (Elizabeth Kozlowski), and (4) Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLP (Joshua Terry).[2] At the time of their appointment, creditors agreeing to serve on the Creditors' Committee were given an Instruction Sheet by the Office of the United States Trustee, instructing as follows:

> Creditors wishing to serve as fiduciaries on any official committee are advised that they may not purchase, sell or otherwise trade in or transfer claims against the Debtor while they are committee members absent an order of the Court. By submitting the enclosed Questionnaire and accepting membership on an official committee of creditors, you agree to this prohibition. The United States Trustee reserves the right to take appropriate action, including removing the creditor from any committee, if the information provided in the Questionnaire is inaccurate, if the foregoing prohibition is violated, or for any other reason the United States Trustee believes is proper in the exercise of her discretion.

See Instruction Sheet, Ex. A (emphasis in original).

In response to a motion by the Creditors' Committee, on December 4, 2019, the Delaware Bankruptcy Court unexpectedly transferred the bankruptcy case to the Northern District of Texas, to Judge Stacey G.C. Jernigan's court.[3]

SYSTEMIC PROBLEMS OCCURRING IN THE CONTEXT OF HIGHLAND'S COURT-ADMINISTERED BANKRUPTCY

Mr. Dondero Gets Pushed Out of Management and New Debtor Management Announces Plans to Liquidate the Estate

From the outset of the case, the Creditors' Committee and the U.S. Trustee's Office in Dallas pushed to replace Mr. Dondero as the sole director of the Debtor's general partner, Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand"). To avoid a protracted dispute and to facilitate the restructuring, on January 9, 2020, Mr. Dondero agreed to resign as the sole director, on the condition that he would be replaced by three independent directors who would act as fiduciaries of the estate and work to restructure Highland's business so it could continue operating and emerge from bankruptcy as a going concern. As Mr. Draper previously has explained, the agreement approved by the Bankruptcy Court allowed Mr. Dondero, UBS (which held one of the largest claims against the estate), and the Redeemer Committee each to choose one director, and also established protocols for operations going forward. Mr. Dondero chose The Honorable Former Judge Russell F. Nelms, UBS chose John Dubel, and the Redeemer Committee chose James Seery.[4]

In brokering the agreement, Mr. Dondero made clear his expectations that new, independent management would not only preserve Highland's business by expediting an exit from bankruptcy in three to six months, but would also preserve jobs and enable continued collaboration with charitable causes supported by Highland and Mr. Dondero. Unfortunately, those expectations did not materialize. Rather, it quickly became clear that Strand's and Highland's management was being dominated by one of the independent directors, Mr. Seery (as will be seen, for his self-gain). Shortly after his placement on the Board, on March 15, 2020, Mr. Seery became de facto Chief Executive Officer, after which he immediately took steps to freeze Mr. Dondero out of operations completely, to the detriment of Highland's business and its employees. The Bankruptcy Court formally approved Mr. Seery's appointment as CEO and Chief Restructuring Officer on July 14, 2020.[5] Although Mr. Seery publicly represented that his goal was to restructure the Debtor's business and enable it to emerge as a going concern, privately he was engineering a much different plan. Less than two months after Mr. Seery's appointment as CEO/CRO, the Debtor filed its initial plan of reorganization, disclosing for the first time its intention to terminate substantially all employees by the end of 2020 and to liquidate Highland's assets by 2022.[6]

Over objections by Mr. Dondero and numerous other stakeholders, the Bankruptcy Court confirmed Highland's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization on February 22, 2021 (the "Plan").[7] There are appeals of that Plan, as well as many of the other rulings made by the Bankruptcy Court, currently pending before the United States District Court and the Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Transparency Problems Pervade the Bankruptcy Proceedings

The Regulatory Framework

As you are aware, one of the most important features of federal bankruptcy proceedings is transparency. The EOUST instructs that "Debtors-in-possession and trustees must account for the receipt, administration, and disposition of all property; provide information concerning the estate and the estate's administration as parties in interest request; and file periodic reports and summaries of a debtor's business, including a statement of receipts and disbursements, and such other information as the United States Trustee or the United States Bankruptcy Court requires." See http://justice.gov/ust/chapter-11-information (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1106(a)(1), 1107(a)). And Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2015.3(a) states that "the trustee or debtor in possession shall file periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability of each entity that is not a publicly traded corporation or a debtor in a case under title 11, and in which the estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." This rule requires the trustee or a debtor in possession to file a report for each non-debtor affiliate prior to the first meeting of creditors and every six months thereafter until the effective date of a plan of reorganization. Fed R. Bankr. P. 2015.3(b). Importantly, the rule does not absolve a debtor from filing reports due prior to the effective date merely because a plan has become effective.[8] Notably, the U.S. Trustee has the duty to ensure that debtors in possession properly and timely file all required reports. 28 U.S.C. § 1112(b)(4)(F), (H).

The entire purpose of these guidelines and rules is to ensure that external stakeholders can fairly evaluate the progress of bankruptcy proceedings, including compliance with legal requirements. Particularly in large bankruptcies, creditors and investors alike should expect that debtors, their management, and representatives on creditors' committees abide by their reporting obligations and all other legal requirements. Bankruptcy is not meant to be a safe haven for lawlessness, nor is it designed to obfuscate the operations of the debtor. Instead, transparency is mandatory so that the debtor is accountable to stakeholders and so that stakeholders can ensure that all insiders are operating for the benefit of the estate.

In Highland's Bankruptcy, the Regulatory Framework Is Ignored

Against this regulatory backdrop, and on the heels of high-profile bankruptcy abuses like those that occurred in the context of the Neiman Marcus bankruptcy, the Highland bankruptcy offered almost no transparency to stakeholders. Traditional reporting requirements were ignored. This opened the door to numerous abuses of process and potential violations of federal law, as detailed below.

As Mr. Draper already has highlighted, one significant problem in Highland's bankruptcy was the Debtor's failure to file any of the reports required under Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3, either on behalf of itself or its affiliated entities. Typically, such reports would include information like asset value, income from financial operations, profits, and losses for each non-publicly traded entity in which the estate has a substantial or controlling interest. This was very important here, where the Debtor held the bulk of its value—hundreds of millions of dollars—in non-debtor subsidiaries. The Debtor's failure to file the required Rule 2015.3 reports was brought to the attention of the Debtor, the Bankruptcy Court, and the U.S. Trustee's Office. During the hearing on Plan confirmation, the Debtor was questioned about the failure to file the reports. The sole excuse offered by the Debtor's Chief Restructuring Officer and Chief Executive Officer, Mr. Seery, was that the task "fell through the cracks."[9] Nor did the Debtor or its counsel ever attempt to show "cause" to gain exemption from the reporting requirement. That is because there was no good reason for the Debtor's failure to file the required reports. In fact, although the Debtor and the Creditors' Committee often refer to the Debtor's structure as a "byzantine empire," the assets of the estate fall into a handful of discrete investments, most of which have audited financials and/or are required to make monthly or quarterly net-asset-value or fair-value determinations.[10] Rather than disclose financial information that was readily available, the Debtor appears to have taken deliberate and strategic steps to avoid transparency.

In stark contrast to its non-existent public disclosures, the Debtor provided the Creditors' Committee with robust weekly information regarding transactions involving assets held by the Debtor or its wholly-owned subsidiaries, transactions involving managed entities and non-managed entities in which the Debtor held an interest, transactions involving non-discretionary accounts, and weekly budget-to-actuals reports referencing non-Debtor affiliates' 13-week cash flow budget. In other words, the Committee member had real-time financial information with respect to the affairs of non-debtor affiliates, which is precisely the type of information that should have been disclosed to the public pursuant to Rule 2015.3. Yet, the fact that the Committee members alone had this information enabled some of them to trade on it, for their personal benefit.

The Debtor's management failed and refused to make other critical disclosures as well. As explained in detail below, during the bankruptcy proceedings, the Debtor sold off sizeable assets without any notice and without seeking Bankruptcy Court approval. The Debtor characterized these transactions as the "ordinary course of business" (allowing it to avoid the Bankruptcy Court approval process), but they were anything but ordinary. In addition, the Debtor settled the claims of at least one creditor—former Highland employee Patrick Daugherty—without seeking court approval of the settlement pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9019. We understand that the Debtor paid Mr. Daugherty $750,000 in cash as part of that settlement, done as a "settlement" to obtain Mr. Daugherty's withdrawal of his objection to the Debtor's plan.

[10] During a deposition, Mr. Seery identified most of the Debtor's assets "[o]ff the top of [his] head" and acknowledged that he had a subsidiary ledger that detailed the assets held by entities below the Debtor. See Exh. A (Jan. 29, 2021 Dep. Tr. at 22:4-10; 23:1-29:10).

Despite all of these transparency problems, the Debtor's confirmed Plan contains provisions that effectively release the Debtor from its obligation to file any of the reports due for any period prior to the effective date—thereby sanctioning the Debtor's failure and refusal to follow the rules. The U.S. Trustee also failed to object to this portion of the Court's order of confirmation, which is directly at odds with the spirit and mandate of the Periodic Reporting Requirements recently adopted by the EOUST and historical rules mandating transparency.[11]

As will become apparent, because neither the federal Bankruptcy Court nor the U.S. Trustee advocated or demanded compliance with the rules, the Debtor, its newly-appointed management, and the Creditors' Committee charged with protecting the interests of all creditors were able to manipulate the estate for the benefit of a handful of insiders, seemingly in contravention of law.

Debtor And Debtor-Affiliate Assets Were Deliberately Hidden and Mischaracterized

Largely because of the Debtor's failure to file Rule 2015.3 reports for affiliate entities, interested parties and creditors wishing to evaluate the worth and mix of assets held in non-Debtor affiliates could not do so. This is particularly problematic, because during proceedings, the Debtor sold $172 million in assets, which altered the mix of assets and liabilities of the Debtor's affiliates and controlled entities. In addition, the estate's asset value decreased by approximately $200 million in a matter of months. Absent financial reporting, it was impossible for stakeholders to determine whether the $200 impairment in asset value reflected actual realized losses or merely temporary mark-downs precipitated by problems experienced by certain assets during the pandemic (including labor shortages, supply-chain issues, travel interruptions, and the like). Although the Bankruptcy Court held that such sales did not require Court approval, a Rule 2015.3 report would have revealed the mix of assets and the corresponding reduction in liabilities of the affiliated or controlled entity—information that was critical in evaluating the worth of claims against the estate or future investments into it.

One transaction that was particularly problematic involved alleged creditor HarbourVest, a private equity fund with approximately $75 billion under management. Prior to Highland's bankruptcy, HarbourVest had invested $80 million into (and obtained 49.98% of the outstanding shares of) a Highland fund called Acis Loan Funding, later rebranded as Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF"). A charitable fund called Charitable DAF Fund, L.P. ("DAF") held 49.02% member interests in HCLOF, and the remaining □2.00% was held by Highland and certain of its employees. Prior to Highland's bankruptcy proceedings, a dispute arose between HarbourVest and Highland, in which HarbourVest claimed it was duped into making the investment because Highland allegedly failed to disclose key facts relating to the investment (namely, that Highland was engaged in ongoing litigation with former employee, Josh Terry, [11] See "Procedures for Completing Uniform Periodic Reports in Non-Small Business Cases Filed Under Chapter 11 of Title 11" (the "Periodic Reporting Requirements"). The Periodic Reporting Requirements reaffirmed the EOUST's commitment to maintaining "uniformity and transparency regarding a debtor's financial condition and business activities" and "to inform creditors and other interested parties of the debtor's financial affairs." 85 Fed. Reg. 82906.

which would result in HCLOF's incurring legal fees and costs). HarbourVest alleged that, as a result of the Terry lawsuit, HCLOF incurred approximately $15 million in legal fees and costs.[12]

In the context of Highland's bankruptcy, however, HarbourVest filed a proof of claim alleging that it was due over $300 million in damages in the dispute, a claim that bore no relationship to economic reality. As a result, Debtor management initially valued HarbourVest's claims at $0, a value consistently reflected in the Debtor's publicly-filed financial statements, up through and including its December 2020 Monthly Operating Report.[13] Eventually, however, the Debtor announced a settlement with HarbourVest which entitled HarbourVest to $45 million in Class 8 claims and $35 million in Class 9 claims.[14] At the time, the Debtor's public disclosures reflected that Class 8 creditors could expect to receive approximately 70% payout on their claims, and Class 9 creditors could expect 0.00%. In other words, HarbourVest's total $80 million in allowed claims would allow HarbourVest to realize a $31.5 million return.[15]

As consideration for this potential payout, HarbourVest agreed to convey its interest in HCLOF to a special-purpose entity ("SPE") designated by the Debtor (a transaction that involved a trade of securities) and to vote in favor of the Debtor's Plan. In its pleadings and testimony in support of the settlement, the Debtor represented that the value of HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF was $22.5 million. It later came to light, however, that the actual value of that asset was at least $44 million.

There are numerous problems with this transaction which may not have occurred with the requisite transparency. As a registered investment advisor, the Debtor had a fiduciary obligation to disclose the true value of HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF to investors in that fund. The Debtor also had a fiduciary obligation to offer the investment opportunity to the other investors prior to purchasing HarbourVest's interest for itself. Mr. Seery has acknowledged that his fiduciary duties to the Debtor's managed funds and investors supersedes any fiduciary duties owed to the Debtor and its creditors in bankruptcy. Nevertheless, the Debtor and its management appear to have misrepresented the value of the HarbourVest asset, brokered a purchase of the asset without disclosure to investors, and thereafter placed the HarbourVest interest into a non-reporting SPE.[16] This meant that no outside stakeholder had any ability to assess the value of that interest, nor could any outsider possibly ascertain how the acquisition of that interest impacted the bankruptcy estate. In the absence of Rule 2015.3 reports or listing of the HCLOF interest on the Debtor's balance sheet, it was impossible to determine at the time of the HarbourVest settlement (or thereafter) whether the Debtor properly accounted for the asset on its balance sheet.

Highland engaged in several other asset sales in bankruptcy without disclosing those sales in advance to outside stakeholders or investors, and without offering investors in funds impacted by the sales the opportunity to purchase the assets. For example:

[12] Assuming that HarbourVest were entitled to fraud damages as it claimed, the true amount of its damages was less than $7.5 million (because HarbourVest only would have borne 49.98% of the $15 million in legal fees).
[13] See Monthly Operating Report for Highland Capital Management for the Month Ending December 2020, Dkt. 1949.
[14] Class 8 consists of general unsecured claims; Class 9 consists of subordinated claims.
[15] We have reason to believe that HarbourVest's Class 8 and Class 9 claims were contemporaneously sold to Farallon Capital Management—an SEC-registered investment advisor—for approximately $28 million.
[16] Even former Highland employee Patrick Daugherty recognized the problematic nature of asset dispositions like the one involving HarbourVest, commenting that such transactions "have left [Mr. Seery] and Highland vulnerable to a counter-attack under the [Investment] Advisors Act." See Ex. B.

- The Debtor sold approximately $25 million of NexPoint Residential Trust shares that today are valued at over $70 million; the Debtor likewise sold $6 million of PTLA shares that were taken over less than 60 days later for $18 million.

- The Debtor divested interests worth $145 million held in certain life settlements (which paid on the death of the individuals covered, whose average age was 90) for $35 million rather than continuing to pay premiums on the policies, and did so without obtaining updated estimates of the life settlements' value, to the detriment of the fund and investors (today two of the covered individuals have a life expectancy of less than one year);

- The Debtor sold interests in OmniMax without informing the Bankruptcy Court, without engaging in a competitive bidding process, and without cooperating with other funds managed by Mr. Dondero, resulting in what we believe is substantially lesser value to investors;

- The Debtor sold interests in Structural Steel Products (worth $50 million) and Targa (worth $37 million), again without any process or notice to the Bankruptcy Court or outside stakeholders, resulting in what we believe is diminished value for the estate and investors.

Because the Bankruptcy Code does not define what constitutes a transaction in the "ordinary course of business," the Debtor's management was able to characterize these massive sales as ordinary course transactions when they were anything but ordinary, resulting in diminution in value to the estate and its creditors.

In summary, the consistent lack of transparency throughout bankruptcy proceedings facilitated sales and deal-making that failed to maximize value for the estate and precluded outside stakeholders from evaluating or participating in asset purchases or claims trading that might have benefitted the estate and outside investors in Debtor-managed funds.

The Debtor Reneged on Its Promise to Pay Key Employees, Contrary to Sworn Testimony

Highland's bankruptcy also diverges from the norm in its treatment of key employees, who usually can expect to be fairly compensated for pre-petition work and post-petition work done for the benefit of the estate. That did not happen here, despite the Debtor's representation to the Bankruptcy Court that it would.

By way of background, prior to its bankruptcy, Highland offered employees two bonus plans: an Annual Bonus Plan and a Deferred Bonus Plan. Under the Annual Bonus Plan, all of Highland's employees were eligible for a yearly bonus payable in up to four equal installments, at six-month intervals, on the last business day of each February and August. Under the Deferred Bonus Plan, Highland's employees were awarded shares of a designated publicly traded stock, the right to which vested 39 months later. Under both bonus plans, the only condition to payment was that the employee be employed by Highland at the time the award (or any portion of it) vested.

At the outset of the bankruptcy proceedings, the Debtor promised that pre-petition bonus plans would be honored. Specifically, in its Motion For Entry of an Order Authorizing the Debtor to Pay and Honor Ordinary Course Obligations Under Employee Bonus Plans and Granting Related Relief, the Debtor informed the Court that employee bonuses "continue[d] to be earned on a post-petition basis," and that "employee compensation under the Bonus Plans [was] critical to the Debtor's ongoing operations and that any threat of nonpayment under such plans would have a potentially catastrophic impact on the Debtor's reorganization efforts."[17] Significantly, the Debtor explained to the Court that its operations were leanly staffed, such that all employees were critical to ongoing operations and such that it expected to compensate all employees. As a result of these representations, key employees continued to work for the Debtor, some of whom invested significant hours at work ensuring that the Debtor's new management had access to critical information for purposes of reorganizing the estate.

Having induced Highland's employees to continue their employment, the Debtor abruptly changed course, refusing to pay key employees awards earned pre-petition under the Annual Bonus Plan and bonuses earned pre-petition under the Deferred Bonus Plan that vested post-petition. In fact, Mr. Seery chose to terminate four key employees just before the vesting date in an effort to avoid payment, despite his repeated assurances to the employees that they would be "made whole." Worse still, notwithstanding the Debtor's failure and refusal to pay bonuses earned and promised to these terminated employees, in Monthly Operating Reports signed by Mr. Seery under penalty of perjury, the Debtor continued to treat the amounts owed to the employees as post-petition obligations, which the Debtor continued to accrue as post-petition liabilities even after termination of their employment.

The Debtor's misrepresentations to the Bankruptcy Court and to the employees themselves fly in the face of usual bankruptcy procedure. As the Fifth Circuit has explained, administrative expenses like key employee salaries are an "'actual and necessary cost'" that provides a "benefit to the state and its creditors."[18] It is undisputed that these employees continued to work for the Debtor, providing an unquestionable benefit to the estate post-petition, but were not provided the promised compensation, for reasons known only to the Debtor.

Again, this is not business as usual in bankruptcy proceedings, and if we are to ensure the continued success of debtors in reorganization proceedings, it is important that key employees be paid in the ordinary course for their efforts in assisting debtors and that debtor management be made to live up to promises made under penalty of perjury to the bankruptcy courts.

There Is Substantial Evidence that Insider Trading Occurred

Perhaps one of the biggest problems with the lack of transparency at every step is that it facilitated potential insider trading. The Debtor (as well as its advisors and professionals) and the Creditors' Committee (and its counsel) had access to critical information upon which any reasonable investor would rely. But because of the lack of reporting, the public did not.

Mr. Draper's October 4, 2021 letter sets forth in detail the reasons for suspecting that insider trading occurred, but his explanation bears repeating here. In the context of a non-transparent bankruptcy proceeding, three of the four members of the Creditors' Committee and one non-committee member sold their claims to two buyers, Muck Holdings LLC ("Muck") and Jessup Holdings LLC ("Jessup"). The four claims sold comprise the largest four claims in the Highland bankruptcy by a substantial margin,[19] collectively totaling almost $270 million in Class 8 claims and $95 million in Class 9 claims:

Muck is owned and controlled by Farallon Capital Management ("Farallon"), and we believe Jessup is owned and controlled by Stonehill Capital Management ("Stonehill"). As the purchasers of the four largest claims in the bankruptcy, Muck (Farallon) and Jessup (Stonehill) will oversee the liquidation of the reorganized Debtor and the payment over time to creditors who have not sold their claims. These two hedge funds also will determine the performance bonus due to Mr. Seery for liquidating the estate. As set forth in the attached balance sheet dated August 31, 2021, we estimate that the estate today is worth nearly $600 million,[20] which could result in Mr. Seery's receipt of a performance bonus approximating $50 million.

This is concerning because there is substantial evidence that Farallon and Stonehill may have been provided material, non-public information to induce their purchase of these claims. We agree with Mr. Draper that there are three primary reasons to believe that non-public information was made available to facilitate these claims purchases:

- The scant publicly-available information regarding the Debtor's estate ordinarily would have dissuaded sizeable investment in purchases of creditors' claims;
- The information that actually was publicly available ordinarily would have compelled a prudent investor to conduct robust due diligence prior to purchasing the claims;
- Yet these claims purchasers spent in excess of $100 million (and likely closer to $150 million) on claims, ostensibly without any idea of what they were purchasing.

Credible information indicates that the claims purchases of Stonehill and Farallon can be summarized as follows:

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9	Purchaser	Purchase Price
Redeemer	$137.0	$0.0	Stonehill	$78.0[21]
ACIS	$23.0	$0.0	Farallon	$8.0
HarbourVest	$45.0	$35.0	Farallon	$27.0
UBS	$65.0	$60.0	Stonehill and Farallon	$50.0

[20] See Ex. D.
[21] See Ex. E. Because the transaction included "the majority of the remaining investments held by the Crusader Funds," the net amount paid by Stonehill for the Claims was approximately $65 million.

An analysis of publicly-available information would have revealed to any potential investor that:

- The estate's asset value had decreased by $200 million, from $556 million on October 16, 2019, to $328 million as of September 30, 2020 (increasing only slightly to $364 million as of January 31, 2021).[22]

- Allowed claims against the estate increased by a total amount of $236 million.

- Due to the decrease in the value of the Debtor's assets and the increase in the allowed claims amount, the ultimate projected recovery for creditors in bankruptcy decreased from 87.44% to 62.99% in just a matter of months.[23]

No prudent investor or hedge fund investing third-party money would purchase substantial claims out of the Highland estate based on this publicly-available information absent robust due diligence demonstrating that the investment was sound.

As discussed by Mr. Draper, the very close relationships between the claims purchasers, on the one hand, and the selling Creditors' Committee members and the Debtor's management, on the other hand also raise red flags. In particular:

- Farallon and Stonehill have long-standing, material relationships with the members of the Creditors' Committee and Mr. Seery. Mr. Seery formerly was the Global Head of Fixed Income Loans at Lehman Bros. until its collapse in 2009. While Mr. Seery was Global Head, Lehman Bros. did substantial business with Farallon. After Lehman's collapse, Mr. Seery joined Sidley & Austin as co-head of the corporate restructuring and bankruptcy group, where he worked with Matt Clemente, counsel to the Creditors' Committee in Highland's bankruptcy proceedings.

- In addition, Grovesnor, one of the lead investors in the Crusader Funds from the Redeemer Committee (which appointed Seery as its independent director) both played a substantial role on the Creditors' Committee and is a large investor in Farallon and Stonehill. It is unclear whether Grovesnor, a registered investment advisor, notified minority investors in the Crusader Funds or Farallon and Stonehill of these facts.

- According to Farallon principals Raj Patel and Michael Linn, while at Sidley, Mr. Seery assisted Farallon in its acquisition of claims in the Lehman estate, and Farallon realized more than $100 million in claims on those trades.

The increase in value between September 2020 and January 2021 is attributable to the Debtor's settlement with HarbourVest, which granted HarbourVest a Class 8 claim of $45 million and a Class 9 Claim of $35 million, and in exchange the Debtor received HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF, which in reality was worth approximately $44.3 million as of January 31, 2021. See Ex. C. It is also notable that the January 2021 monthly financial report values Class 8 claims at $267 million, an exponential increase over their estimated value of $74 million in December 2020.

[23] See Ex. F.

- Also while at Sidley, Mr. Seery represented the Steering Committee in the Blockbuster Video bankruptcy; Stonehill (through its Managing Member, John Motulsky) was one of the five members of the Steering Committee.

- Mr. Seery left Sidley in 2013 to become the President and Senior Investment Partner of River Birch Capital, a hedge fund founded by his former Lehman colleagues. He left River Birch in October 2017 just before the fund imploded. In 2017, River Birch and Stonehill Capital were two of the biggest note holders in the Toys R Us bankruptcy and were members of the Toys R Us creditors' committee.

I strongly agree with Mr. Draper that it is suspicious that two firms with such significant ties to Mr. Seery have purchased $365 million in claims. The aggregate $150 million purchase price paid by Farallon and Stonehill is 56% of all Class 8 claims, virtually the full plan value expected to be realized after two years. We believe it is worth investigating whether these claims buyers had access to material, non-public information regarding the actual value of the estate.

Other transactions occurring during the Highland bankruptcy also reinforce the suspicion that insider trading occurred. In particular, it appears that one of the claims buyers, Stonehill, used non-public information obtained incident to the bankruptcy to purchase stock in NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund (NYSE: NHF), a publicly traded, closed-end '40 Act fund with many holdings in common with assets held in the Highland estate outlined above. Stonehill is a registered investment adviser with $3 billion under management that has historically owned very few equity interests, particularly equity interests in a closed-end fund. As disclosed in SEC filings, Stonehill acquired enough stock in NHF during the second quarter of 2021 to make it Stonehill's eighth largest equity position.

The timing of the acquisitions of claims by Farallon and Stonehill also raises suspicion. For example, although notices of the transfer of the claims were filed immediately after the confirmation of the Debtor's Plan and prior to the effective date of the Plan, it seems likely that negotiations began much earlier. Transactions of this magnitude do not take place overnight and typically require robust due diligence. Muck was formed on March 9, 2021, more than a month before it filed notice that it was purchasing the Acis claim. If the negotiation or execution of a definitive agreement for the purchase began before or contemporaneously with Muck's formation, then there is every reason to believe that selling Creditors' Committee members and/or Debtor management provided Farallon with critical non-public information well before the Creditors' Committee members sold their claims and withdrew from the Committee. Indeed, Mr. Patel and Mr. Linn have stated to others that they purchased the Acis and HarbourVest claims in late January or early February. This is strong evidence that negotiation and/or agreements relating to the purchase of claims from Creditors' Committee members preceded the confirmation of the Debtor's Plan and the resignation of those members from the Committee.

Likewise, correspondence from the fund adviser to the Crusader Funds indicates that the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee had "consummated" the sale of the Redeemer Committee's claims and other assets on April 30, 2021, "for $78 million in cash, which was paid in full to the Crusader Funds at closing."[24] In addition, that there was a written agreement among Stonehill, the Crusader Funds, and the Redeemer Committee that sources indicate dates back to the fourth quarter of 2020. That agreement presumably imposed affirmative and negative covenants upon the seller and granted the purchaser discretionary approval rights during the pendency of the sale. Such an agreement would necessarily conflict with the Creditors' Committee members' fiduciary obligations.

[24] See Ex. E.

The sale of the claims by the members of the Creditors' Committee also violates the instructions provided to committee members by the U.S. Trustee that required a selling committee member to obtain approval from the Bankruptcy Court prior to any sale of such member's claim. No such Court approval was ever sought or obtained, and the Dallas U.S. Trustee's Office took no action to enforce this guideline. The Creditors' Committee members were sophisticated entities, and they were privy to inside information that was not available to other unsecured creditors. For example, valuations of assets placed into a specially-created affiliated entities, such as the assets acquired in the HarbourVest settlement, and valuations of assets held by other entities owned or controlled by the Debtor, were available to the selling Creditors' Committee members, but not to other creditors or parties-in-interest.

While claims trading itself is not prohibited, there is reason to believe that the claims trading that occurred in the Highland bankruptcy violated federal law:

a) The selling parties were three of the four Creditors' Committee members, and each one had access to information they received in a fiduciary capacity;

b) Some of the information they received would have been available to other parties-in-interest if Rule 2015.3 had been enforced;

c) The projected recovery to creditors decreased significantly between the approval of the Disclosure Statement and the confirmation of the Debtor's Plan; and

d) There was a suspicious purchase of stock by Stonehill in NHF, a closed-end fund previously affiliated with Highland (and now managed by NexPoint Advisors, L.P.) that is publicly traded on the New York stock exchange.The Debtor's assets and the positions held by the closed-end fund are similar.

Mr. Seery's Compensation Structure Encouraged Misrepresentations Regarding the Value of the Estate and Assets of the Estate

An additional problem in Highland's bankruptcy is that Mr. Seery, as an Independent Director as well as the Debtor's CEO and CRO, received financial incentives that encouraged claims trading and dealing in insider information.

Mr. Seery received sizeable compensation for his heavy-handed role in Highland's bankruptcy. Upon his appointment as an Independent Director in January 2020, Mr. Seery received compensation from the Debtor of $60,000 per month for the first three months, $50,000 per month for the following three months, and $30,000 per month for remaining months, subject to adjustment by agreement with the Debtor.[25] When Mr. Seery subsequently was appointed the Debtor's CEO and CRO in July 2020, he received additional compensation, including base compensation of $150,000 per month retroactive to March 2020 and for so long as he served in those roles, as well as a "Restructuring Fee."[26] Mr. Seery's employment agreement contemplated that the Restructuring Fee could be calculated in one of two ways:

(1) If Mr. Seery were able to resolve a material amount of outstanding claims against the estate, he would be entitled to $1 million on confirmation of what the Debtor termed a [25] See Dkt. 339, ¶ 3.

[26] See Dkt. 854, Ex. 1.

"Case Resolution Plan," $500,000 at the effective date of the Case Resolution Plan, and $750,000 upon completion of distributions to creditors under the plan.

(2) If, by contrast, Mr. Seery were not able to resolve the estate and instead achieved a "Monetization Vehicle Plan," he would be entitled to $500,000 on confirmation of the Monetization Vehicle Plan, $250,000 at the effective date of that plan, and—most importantly—a to-be-determined "contingent restructuring fee" based on "performance under the plan after all material distributions" were made.

The Restructuring Fee owed for a Case Resolution Plan was materially higher than that payable under the Monetization Vehicle Plan and provided a powerful economic incentive for Mr. Seery to resolve creditor claims in any way possible. Notably, at the time of Mr. Seery's formal appointment as CEO/CRO, he had already negotiated settlements in principle with Acis and the Redeemer Committee, leaving only the HarbourVest and UBS claims to resolve.

Further, after the Plan's effective date, as appointed Claimant Trustee, Mr. Seery was promised compensation of $150,000 per month (termed his "Base Salary"), subject to the negotiation of additional "go-forward" compensation, including a "success fee" and severance pay.[27] Mr. Seery's success fee presumably will be based on whether the Plan outperforms what was disclosed in the Plan Analysis. In other words, Mr. Seery had a financial incentive to grossly understate the value of the estate in public disclosures, not only to facilitate claims trading and resolution of the biggest claims in bankruptcy (for purposes of obtaining the larger Case Resolution Fee) but also to ensure that he eventually receives a large "success fee." Again, we estimate that, based on the estate's nearly $600 million value today, Mr. Seery's success fee could approximate $50 million.

One excellent example of the way in which Mr. Seery facilitated claims trading and thereby lined his own pockets is the sale of UBS's claim. Based on the publicly-available information at the time Stonehill and Farallon purchased the UBS claim, the purchase made no economic sense. At the time, the publicly-disclosed Plan Analysis estimated that there would be a 71.32% distribution to Class 8 creditors and a 0.00% distribution to Class 9 creditors, which would mean believe is that, at the time of their claims purchase, the estate actually was worth much, much more (between $472-$600 million). If, prior to their claims purchases, Mr. Seery (or others in the Debtor's management) apprised Stonehill and Farallon of the true estate value (which was material, non-public information at the time), then the value they paid for the UBS claim made sense, because they would have known they were likely to recover close to 100% on Class 8 and Class 9 claims.

But perhaps the most important evidence of mismanagement of this bankruptcy proceeding and misalignment of financial incentives is the Debtor's repeated refusal to resolve the estate in full despite dozens of opportunities to do so. Immediately prior to the Plan confirmation hearing, Judge Jernigan suggested that the Creditors' Committee and Mr. Dondero attempt to reach a settlement. Mr. Dondero, through counsel, already had made 35 offers of settlement that would have maximized the estate's recovery, even going so far as to file a proposed plan of reorganization. Some of these offers were valued between $150 and $232 million. And we now believe that as of August 1, 2020, the Debtor's estate had an actual value of at least $460 million, including $105 million in cash and a $50 million revolving credit facility. With Mr. Dondero's offer, the Debtor's cash and the credit facility could have resolved the estate, which would have enabled the Debtor to pay all proofs of claim, leave a residual estate intact for equity holders, and allow the company to continue to operate as a going concern.

[27] See Plan Supplement, Dkt. 1875, § 3.13(a)(i).

Nonetheless, neither the Debtor nor the Creditors' Committee responded to Mr. Dondero's offers. It was not until The Honorable Former Judge D. Michael Lynn, counsel for Mr. Dondero, reminded the Creditors' Committee counsel that its members had a fiduciary duty to respond that a response was forthcoming. We believe Mr. Dondero's proposed plan offered a materially greater recovery than what the Debtor had reported would be the expected Plan recovery. The Creditors' Committee's failure to timely respond to that offer suggests that Debtor management, the Creditors' Committee, or both were financially disincentivized from accepting a case resolution offer and that some members of the Creditors' Committee were contractually constrained from doing so.

What happened instead was that the Debtor, its management, and the Creditors' Committee brokered deals that allowed grossly inflated claims and sales of those claims to a small group of investors with significant ties to Debtor management. In a transparent bankruptcy proceeding, we question whether any of this could have happened. What we do know is that the Debtor's non-transparent bankruptcy has ensured there will be nothing left for residual stakeholders, while enriching a handful of intimately connected individuals and investors.

The Debtor's Management and Advisors Are Almost Totally Insulated From Liability

Despite the mismanagement of bankruptcy proceedings, the Bankruptcy Court has issued a series of orders ensuring that the Debtor and its management cannot not be held liable for their actions in bankruptcy.

In particular, the Court issued a series of orders protecting Mr. Seery from potential liability for any act undertaken in the management of the Debtor or the disposition of its assets:

- In its order approving the settlement between the Creditors' Committee and Mr. Dondero, the Court barred any Debtor entity "from commenc[ing] or pursu[ing] a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director, any Independent Director's agents, or any Independent Director's advisors relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director" unless the Court first (1) determined the claim was a "colorable" claim for willful misconduct or gross negligence, and (2) authorized an entity to bring the claim. The Court also retained "sole jurisdiction" over any such claim.[28]

- In its order approving the Debtor's retention of Mr. Seery as its Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer, the Court issued an identical injunction barring any claims against Mr. Seery in his capacity as CEO/CRO without prior court approval.[29] The same order authorized the Debtor to indemnify Mr. Seery for any claims or losses arising out of his engagement as CEO/CRO.[30]

Worse still, the Plan approved by the Bankruptcy Court contains sweeping release and exculpation provisions that make it virtually impossible for third parties, including investors in the Debtor's managed funds, to file claims against the Debtor, its related entities, or their management. The Plan's exculpation provisions contain also contain a requirement that any potential claims be vetted and approved by the Bankruptcy Court. As Mr. Draper already explained, these provisions violate the holding of In re Pacific Lumber Co., in which the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit rejected similarly broad exculpation clauses.[31]

The fundamental problem with the Plan's broad exculpation and release provisions has been brought into sharp focus in recent days, with the filing of a lawsuit by the Litigation Trustee against Mr. Dondero, other individuals formerly affiliated with Highland, and several trusts and entities affiliated with Mr. Dondero.[32] Among other false accusations, that lawsuit alleges that the aggregate amount of allowed claims in bankruptcy was high because the Debtor and its management were forced to settle with various purported judgment creditors who had engaged in pre-petition litigation with Mr. Dondero and Highland. But it was Mr. Seery and Debtor's management, not Mr. Dondero and the other defendants, who negotiated those settlements with creditors in bankruptcy and who decided what value to assign to their claims. Ordinarily, Mr. Dondero and the other defendants could and would file compulsory counterclaims against the Debtor and its management for their role in brokering and settling claims in bankruptcy. But the Bankruptcy Court has effectively precluded such counterclaims (absent the defendants obtaining the Court's advance permission to assert them) by releasing the Debtor and its management from virtually all liability in relation to their roles in the bankruptcy case. That is a violation of due process.

Notably, the U.S. Trustee's Office recently has argued in the context of the bankruptcy of Purdue Pharma that release and exculpations clauses akin to those contained in Highland's Plan violate both the Bankruptcy Code and the Due Process Clause of the United States Constitution.[33] In addition, the U.S. Trustee explained that the bankruptcy courts lack constitutional authority to release state-law causes of action against debtor management and non-debtor entities.[34] Indeed, it has been the U.S. Trustee's position that where, as here, third parties whose claims are being released did not receive notice of the releases and had no way of knowing, based on the applicable plan's language, what claims were extinguished, third-party releases are contrary to law.[35] This position comports with Fifth Circuit case law, which makes clear that releases must be consensual, and that the released party must make a substantial contribution in exchange for any release.

As a result of the release and exculpation provisions of the Plan, employees and third-party investors in entities managed by the Debtor who are harmed by actions taken by the Debtor and its management in bankruptcy are barred from asserting their claims without prior Bankruptcy Court approval. Those third parties' claims are barred notwithstanding that they were not notified of the releases and have never been given any information with which to evaluate their potential claims (as mentioned, the Debtor has not disclosed several major assets sales, nor does the Plan require the Debtor to disclose post-confirmation asset sales). Conversely, the releases insulate claims purchasers from the risk of potential actions by investors in funds managed by the Debtor (for breach of fiduciary duty, diminution in value, or otherwise). These releases are directly at odds with investors' expectations and the written documents delivered to and approved by investors when they invest in managed funds—i.e., that fund managers will act in a fiduciary capacity to maximize investors' returns and that investors will have recourse for any failure to do so.

As an example, the Court approved the settlement of UBS's claim against the Debtor and two funds managed by the Debtor (collectively referred to as "MultiStrat"). Pursuant to that settlement, MultiStrat agreed to pay UBS $18.5 million. But the settlement made no sense for several reasons. First, Highland owns approximately 48% of MultiStrat, so causing MultiStrat to make such a substantial payment to settle a claim in Highland's bankruptcy necessarily negatively impacted its other non-Debtor investors. Second, in its lawsuit, UBS alleged that MultiStrat wrongfully received a $6 million payment, but MultiStrat paid more than three times this amount to settle allegations against it—a deal that made little economic sense. Finally, as part of the settlement, MultiStrat represented that it was advised by "independent legal counsel" in the negotiation of the settlement, a representation that was patently untrue.[36] In reality, the only legal counsel advising MultiStrat was the Debtor's counsel, who had economic incentives to broker the deal in a manner that benefited the Debtor rather than MultiStrat and its investors.[37] If (as it seems) that representation and/or the terms of the UBS/MultiStrat settlement unfairly impacted MultiStrat's investors, they now have no recourse against the Debtor. The release and exculpation provisions in Highland's Plan do not afford third parties any meaningful recourse, even when they are negatively impacted by misrepresentations of the type contained in the UBS/MultiStrat settlement or when their interests are impaired by fund managers' failure to obtain fairness opinions to resolve conflicts of interest.

Bankruptcy Proceedings Are Used As an End-Run Around Applicable Legal Duties

The UBS deal is but one example of how Highland's bankruptcy proceedings, including the settlement of claims and claims trading that occurred, seemingly provided a safe harbor for violations of multiple state and federal laws. For example, the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 requires registered investment advisors like the Debtor to act as fiduciaries of the funds that they manage. Indeed, the Act imposes an "affirmative duty of 'utmost good faith' and full and fair disclosure of material facts" as part of advisors' duties of loyalty and care to investors. See 17 C.F.R. Part 275. Adherence to these duties means that investment advisors cannot buy securities for their account prior to buying them for a client, cannot make trades that may result in higher commissions for the advisor or their investment firm, and cannot trade using material, non-public information. In addition, investment advisors must ensure that they provide investors with full and accurate information regarding the assets managed.

State blue sky laws similarly prohibit firms holding themselves out as investment advisors from breaching these core fiduciary duties to investors. For example, the Texas Securities Act prohibits any registered investment advisor from trading on material, non-public information. The Act also conveys a private right of action to investors harmed by breaches of an investment advisor's fiduciary duties.

As explained above, Highland executed numerous transactions during its bankruptcy that may have violated the Investment Advisors Act and state blue sky laws. Among other things:

- Highland facilitated the purchase of HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF (placing that interest in an SPE designated by the Debtor) without disclosing the true value of the interest and without first offering it to other investors in the fund;

[36] See Doc. 2389 (Order Approving Debtor's Settlement With UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch) at Ex. 1, §§ 1(b), 11; see Appendix, p. A-57.

[37] The Court's order approving the UBS settlement is under appeal in part based on MultiStrat's lack of independent legal counsel.

- Highland concealed the estate's true value from investors in its managed funds, making it impossible for those investors to fairly evaluate the estate or its assets during bankruptcy;

- Highland facilitated the settlement of UBS's claim by causing MultiStrat, a non-Debtor managed entity, to pay $18.5 million to the Debtor, to the detriment of MultiStrat's investors; and

- Highland and its CEO/CRO, Mr. Seery, brokered deals between three of four Creditors' Committee members and Farallon and Stonehill—deals that made no sense unless Farallon and Stonehill were supplied material, non-public information regarding the true value of the estate.

In short, Mr. Seery effectuated trades that seemingly lined his own pockets, in transactions that we believe detrimentally impacted investors in the Debtor's managed funds.

CONCLUSION

The Highland bankruptcy is an example of the abuses that can occur if the Bankruptcy Code and Bankruptcy Rules are not enforced and are allowed to be manipulated, and if federal law enforcement and federal lawmakers abdicate their responsibilities. Bankruptcy should not be a safe haven for perjury, breaches of fiduciary duty, and insider trading, with a plan containing third-party releases and sweeping exculpation sweeping everything under the rug. Nor should it be an avenue for opportunistic venturers to prey upon companies, their investors, and their creditors to the detriment of third-party stakeholders and the bankruptcy estate. My clients and I join Mr. Draper in encouraging your office to investigate, fight, and ultimately eliminate this type of abuse, now and in the future.

Debtor Protocols [Doc. 466-1]

I. Definitions

A. "Court" means the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas.

B. "NAV" means (A) with respect to an entity that is not a CLO, the value of such entity's assets less the value of its liabilities calculated as of the month end prior to any Transaction; and (B) with respect to a CLO, the CLO's gross assets less expenses calculated as of the quarter end prior to any Transaction.

C. "Non-Discretionary Account" means an account that is managed by the Debtor pursuant to the terms of an agreement providing, among other things, that the ultimate investment discretion does not rest with the Debtor but with the entity whose assets are being managed through the account.

D. "Related Entity" means collectively (A)(i) any non-publicly traded third party in which Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, or Mr. Grant Scott, or Mr. John Honis (with respect to Messrs. Okada, Scott and Honis, only to the extent known by the Debtor) has any direct or indirect economic or ownership interest, including as a beneficiary of a trust; (ii) any entity controlled directly or indirectly by Mr. Dondero, Mr. Okada, Mr. Grant Scott, or Mr. John Honis (with respect to Messrs. Okada, Scott and Honis, only to the extent known by the Debtor); (iii) MGM Holdings, Inc.; (iv) any publicly traded company with respect to which the Debtor or any Related Entity has filed a Form 13D or Form 13G; (v) any relative (as defined in Section 101 of the Bankruptcy Code) of Mr. Dondero or Mr. Okada each solely to the extent reasonably knowable by the Debtor; (vi) the Hunter Mountain Investment Trust and Dugaboy Investment Trust; (vii) any entity or person that is an insider of the Debtor under Section 101(31) the Bankruptcy Code, including any "non-statutory" insider; and (viii) to the extent not included in (A)(i)-(vii), any entity included in the listing of related entities in Schedule B hereto (the "Related Entities Listing"); and (B) the following Transactions, (x) any intercompany Transactions with certain affiliates referred to in paragraphs 16.a through 16.e of the Debtor's cash management motion [Del. Docket No. 7]; and (y) any Transactions with Charitable DAF Fund, L.P. (provided, however, that additional parties may be added to this subclause (y) with the mutual consent of the Debtor and the Committee, such consent not to be unreasonably withheld).

E. "Stage 1" means the time period from the date of execution of a term sheet incorporating the protocols contained below the ("Term Sheet") by all applicable parties until approval of the Term Sheet by the Court.

F. "Stage 2" means the date from the appointment of a Board of Independent Directors at Strand Advisors, Inc. until 45 days after such appointment, such appointment being effective upon Court approval.

G. "Stage 3" means any date after Stage 2 while there is a Board of Independent Directors at Strand Advisors, Inc.

H. "Transaction" means (i) any purchase, sale, or exchange of assets, (ii) any lending or borrowing of money, including the direct payment of any obligations of another entity, (iii) the satisfaction of any capital call or other contractual requirement to pay money, including the satisfaction of any redemption requests, (iv) funding of affiliates and (v) the creation of any lien or encumbrance.

I. "Ordinary Course Transaction" means any transaction with any third party which is not a Related Entity and that would otherwise constitute an "ordinary course transaction" under section 363(c) of the Bankruptcy Code.

J. "Notice" means notification or communication in a written format and shall include supporting documents necessary to evaluate the propriety of the proposed transaction.

K. "Specified Entity" means any of the following entities: ACIS CLO 2017-7 Ltd., Brentwood CLO, Ltd., Gleneagles CLO, Ltd., Greenbriar CLO, Ltd., Highland CLO 2018-1, Ltd., Highland Legacy Limited, Highland Loan Funding V Ltd., Highland Park CDO I, Ltd., Pam Capital Funding LP, PamCo Cayman Ltd., Rockwall CDO II Ltd., Rockwall CDO Ltd., Southfork CLO Ltd., Stratford CLO Ltd., Westchester CLO, Ltd., Aberdeen Loan Funding, Ltd., Bristol Bay Funding Ltd. Eastland CLO, Ltd., Grayson CLO, Ltd., Highland Credit Opportunities CDO Ltd., Jasper CLO, Ltd., Liberty Cayman Holdings, Ltd., Liberty CLO, Ltd., Red River CLO, Ltd., Valhalla CLO, Ltd.

II. Transactions involving the (i) assets held directly on the Debtor's balance sheet or the balance sheet of the Debtor's wholly-owned subsidiaries, including Jefferies Prime Account, and (ii) the Highland Select Equity Fund, L.P., Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P., and Highland Restoration Capital Partners

A. Covered Entities: N/A (See entities above).

B. Operating Requirements

1. Ordinary Course Transactions do not require Court approval (All Stages).

a) Stage 1 and Stage 2: ordinary course determined by the CRO.

b) Stage 3: ordinary course determined by the Debtor.

2. Related Entity Transactions

a) Stage 1 and Stage 2: Transactions with Related Entities require prior approval of CRO and five business days advance notice to the Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

b) Stage 3:

(1) Transactions with Related Entities greater than $1,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require five business days advance notice to the Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

(2) Transactions with Related Entities greater than $2,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

3. Third Party Transactions (All Stages)

a) Except as set forth in (b) and (c) below, Transactions in excess of $2,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require three business days advance notice to Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

b) The Debtor may satisfy any redemption requests from entities that are not Related Entities without advance notice so long as the Debtor provides notice of such Transactions to the Committee as soon as reasonably practicable. The Debtor will provide the Committee with five business days advance notice of any redemption requests made by and payable to a Related Entity, and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

c) The Debtor may satisfy margin calls and short covers without providing the Committee advance notice if the exigencies do not allow advance notice so long as the Debtor provides notice of such Transactions to the Committee as soon as reasonably practicable.

C. Weekly Reporting: The Debtor will provide the Committee with weekly reports showing all Transactions under this category.

III. Transactions involving entities the Debtor manages and in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest (other than the entities discussed in Section I above)

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all entities the Debtor manages and in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest (other than the entities discussed in Section I above).[1]

   a) Stage 1 and Stage 2: Transactions with Related Entities require prior approval of CRO and five business days advance notice to the Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

   b) Stage 3:

      (1) Transactions with Related Entities greater than $1,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require five business days advance notice to the Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

      (2) Transactions with Related Entities greater than $2,000,000 (either individually or in the aggregate basis on a rolling 30 day period) require Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

3. Third Party Transactions (All Stages):

   a) Except (x) as set forth in (b) and (c) below and (y) for any Transaction involving a Specified Entity and the sale or purchase by such Specified Entity of an asset that is not an obligation or security issued or guaranteed by any of the Debtor, a Related Entity or a fund, account, portfolio company owned, controlled or managed by the Debtor or a Related Entity, where such Transaction is effected in compliance with the collateral management agreement to which such Specified Entity is party, any Transaction that decreases the NAV of an entity managed by the Debtor in excess of the greater of (i) 10% of NAV or (ii) $3,000,000 requires five business days advance notice to Committee and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

b) The Debtor may satisfy any redemption requests from entities that are not Related Entities without advance notice so long as the Debtor provides notice of such Transactions to the Committee as soon as reasonably practicable. The Debtor will provide the Committee with five business days advance notice of any redemption requests made by and payable to a Related Entity, and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

c) The Debtor may take such steps as may be reasonably necessary to winddown any managed entity and make distributions as may be required in connection with such winddown to any required parties. The Debtor will provide the Committee with five business days advance notice of any distributions to be made to a Related Entity, and if the Committee objects, the burden is on the Debtor to seek Court approval, which the Committee agrees may be sought on an expedited basis.

C. Weekly Reporting: The Debtor will provide the Committee with weekly reports showing all Transactions under this category. Such reports will include Transactions involving a Specified Entity unless the Debtor is prohibited from doing so under applicable law or regulation or any agreement governing the Debtor's relationship with such Specified Entity.

V. Transactions involving entities that the Debtor does not manage but in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all entities that the Debtor does not manage but in which the Debtor holds a direct or indirect interest.[3]

B. Ordinary Course Transactions (All Stages): N/A

C. Operating Requirements: N/A

D. Weekly Reporting: Debtor will provide weekly reports of all cross-held asset Transactions, i.e. Transactions in which the Debtor or a Related Entity also holds a direct or indirect interest.

[3] The Debtor is continuing to review the Related Entities List and to determine whether any additional parties or entities should be included on Schedule A. The Debtor will update Schedule A as soon as reasonably practicable to the extent necessary.

VI. Transactions involving entities that the Debtor does not manage and in which the Debtor does not hold a direct or indirect interest

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all entities that the Debtor does not manage and in which the Debtor does not hold a direct or indirect interest.[4]

B. Ordinary Course Transactions (All Stages): N/A

C. Operating Requirements: N/A

D. Weekly Reporting: Debtor will provide weekly reports of all cross-held asset Transactions, i.e. Transactions in which the Debtor or a Related Entity also holds a direct or indirect interest.

VII. Transactions involving Non-Discretionary Accounts

A. Covered Entities: See Schedule A hereto. Schedule A includes or will include all non-discretionary accounts.[5]

B. Ordinary Course Transactions (All Stages): N/A

C. Operating Requirements: N/A

D. Weekly Reporting: Debtor will provide weekly reports of all cross-held asset Transactions, i.e. Transactions in which the Debtor or a Related Entity also holds a direct or indirect interest.

VIII. Additional Reporting Requirements – All Stages (to the extent applicable)

A. DSI will provide detailed lists and descriptions of internal financial and operational controls being applied on a daily basis for a full understanding by the Committee and its professional advisors three (3) business days in advance of the hearing on the approval of the Term Sheet and details of proposed amendments to said financial and operational controls no later than seven (7) days prior to their implementation.

B. The Debtor will continue to provide weekly budget to actuals reports referencing their 13-week cash flow budget, such reports to be inclusive of all Transactions with Related Entities.

IX. Shared Services

A. The Debtor shall not modify any shared services agreement without approval of the CRO and Independent Directors and seven business days' advance notice to counsel for the Committee.

B. The Debtor may otherwise continue satisfying its obligations under the shared services agreements.

[4] The Debtor is continuing to review the Related Entities List and to determine whether any additional parties or entities should be included on Schedule A. The Debtor will update Schedule A as soon as reasonably practicable to the extent necessary.

[5] The Debtor is continuing to review the Related Entities List and to determine whether any additional parties or entities should be included on Schedule A. The Debtor will update Schedule A as soon as reasonably practicable to the extent necessary.

X. Representations and Warranties

A. The Debtor represents that the Related Entities Listing included as Schedule B attached hereto lists all known persons and entities other than natural persons included in the definitions of Related Entities covered by Section I.D parts A(i)-(vii) above at the time of the execution of the Term Sheet.

B. The Debtor represents that the list included as Schedule C attached hereto lists all known natural persons included in the definitions of Related Entities covered by Section I.D parts A(i)-(vii) above at the time of the execution of the Term Sheet.

C. The Debtor represents that, if at any time the Debtor becomes aware of any person or entity, including natural persons, meeting the definition of Related Entities covered by Section I.D parts A(1)-(vii) above that is not included in the Related Entities Listing or Schedule C, the Debtor shall update the Related Entities Listing or Schedule C, as appropriate, to include such entity or person and shall give notice to the Committee thereof.

INFORMATION/PRODUCTION REQUESTS

MARKED FOR RULING

COURT REPORTER: My name is Debra Stevens, court reporter for TSG Reporting and notary public of the State of New York. Due to the severity of the COVID-19 pandemic and following the practice of social distancing, I will not be in the same room with the witness but will report this deposition remotely and will swear the witness in remotely. If any party has any objection, please so state before we proceed.

Whereupon,

JAMES SEERY,

having been first duly sworn/affirmed, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY
MR. DRAPER:

Q. Mr. Seery, my name is Douglas Draper, representing the Dugaboy Trust. I have series of questions today in connection with the 30(b) Notice that we filed. The first question I have for you, have you seen the Notice of Deposition

J. SEERY

the screen, please?
A. Page what?
Q. I think it is page 174.
A. Of the PDF or of the document?
Q. Of the disclosure statement that was filed. It is up on the screen right now.
COURT REPORTER: Do you intend this as another exhibit for today's deposition?
MR. DRAPER: We'll mark this Exhibit 2.
(So marked for identification as Seery Exhibit 2.)
Q. If you look to the recovery to Class 8 creditors in the November 2020 disclosure statement was a recovery of 87.44 percent?
A. That actually says the percent distribution to general unsecured creditors was 87.44 percent. Yes.
Q. And in the new document that was filed, given to us yesterday, the recovery is 62.5 percent?

J. SEERY

A. It says the percent distribution to general unsecured creditors is 62.14 percent.
Q. Have you communicated the reduced recovery to anybody prior to the date -- to yesterday?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.
A. I believe generally, yes. I don't know if we have a specific number, but generally yes.
Q. And would that be members of the Creditors' Committee who you gave that information to?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you give it to anybody other than members of the Creditors' Committee?
A. Yes.
Q. Who?
A. HarbourVest.
Q. And when was that?
A. Within the last two months.
Q. You did not feel the need to communicate the change in recovery to anybody else?

J. SEERY

A. I said Mr. Doherty.
Q. In looking at the two elements, and what I have asked you to look at is the claims pool. If you look at the November disclosure statement, if you look down Class 8, unsecured claims?
A. Yes.
Q. You have 176,000 roughly?
A. Million.
Q. 176 million. I am sorry. And the number in the new document is 313 million?
A. Correct.
Q. What accounts for the difference?
A. An increase in claims.
Q. When did those increases occur? Were they yesterday? A month ago? Two months ago?
A. Over the last couple months.
Q. So in fact over the last couple months you knew in fact that the recovery in the November disclosure statement was not accurate?

A. Yes. We secretly disclosed it to the Bankruptcy Court in open court hearings.
Q. But you never did bother to calculate the reduced recovery; you just increased --
(Reporter interruption.)
Q. You just advised as to the increased claims pool. Correct?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.
A. I don't understand your question.
Q. What I am trying to get at is, as you increase the claims pool, the recovery reduces. Correct?
A. No. That is not how a fraction works.
Q. Well, if the denominator increases, doesn't the recovery ultimately decrease if --
A. No.
Q. -- if the numerator stays the

were amended without consideration a few years ago. So, for our purposes we didn't make the assumption, which I am sure will happen, a fraudulent conveyance claim on those notes, that a fraudulent conveyance action would be brought. We just assumed that we'd have to discount the notes heavily to sell them because nobody would respect the ability of the counterparties to fairly pay.

Q. And the same discount was applied in the liquidation analysis to those notes?

A. Yes.

Q. Now --

A. The difference -- there would be a difference, though, because they would pay for a while because they wouldn't want to accelerate them. So there would be some collections on the notes for P and I.

Q. But in fact as of January you have accelerated those notes?

A. Just one of them, I believe.

Q. Which note was that?

J. SEERY

A. NexPoint, I said. They defaulted on the note and we accelerated it.

Q. So there is no need to file a fraudulent conveyance suit with respect to that note. Correct, Mr. Seery?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Disagree. Since it was likely intentional fraud, there may be other recoveries on it. But to collect on the note, no.

Q. My question was with respect to that note. Since you have accelerated it, you don't need to deal with the issue of when it's due?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. That wasn't your question. But to that question, yes, I don't need to deal with when it's due.

Q. Let me go over certain assets. I am not going to ask you for the valuation of them but I am going to ask you whether they are included in the asset portion of your $257 million number, all right? Mr. Morris didn't want me to go into specific asset value, and I don't intend to do that.

The first question I have for you is, the equity in Trustway Highland Holdings, is that included in the $257 million number?

A. There is no such entity.

Q. Then I will do it in a different way. In connection with the sale of the hard assets, what assets are included in there specifically?

A. Off the top of my head -- it is all of the assets, but it includes Trustway Holdings and all the value that flows up from Trustway Holdings. It includes Targa and all the value that flows up from Targa. It includes CCS Medical and all the value that would flow to the Debtor from CCS Medical. It includes Cornerstone and all the value that would flow from Cornerstone. It includes any other securities and all the value that would flow from Cornerstone. It includes HCLOF and all the value that would flow up from HCLOF. It includes Korea and all the value that would flow up from Korea.

There may be others off the top of my head. I don't recall them. I don't have a list in front of me.

Q. Now, with respect to those assets, have you started the sale process of those assets?

A. No. Well, each asset is different. So, the answer is, with respect to any securities, we do seek to sell those regularly and we do seek to monetize those assets where we can depending on whether there is a restriction or not and whether there is liquidity in the market.

With respect to the PE assets or the companies I described -- Targa, CCS, Cornerstone, JHT -- we have not -- Trustway. We have not sought to sell

J. SEERY

A. I don't recall the specific limitation on the trust. But if there was a reason to hold on to the asset, if there is a limitation, we can seek an extension.

Q. Let me ask a question. With respect to these businesses, the Debtor merely owns an equity interest in them. Correct?

A. Which business?

Q. The ones you have identified as operating businesses earlier?

A. It depends on the business.

Q. Well, let me -- again, let's try to be specific. With respect to SSP, it was your position that you did not need to get court approval for the sale. Correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Which one of the operating businesses that are here, that you have identified, do you need court authority for a sale?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Each of the businesses will be a different analysis that we'll undertake with bankruptcy counsel to determine what we would need depending on what is going to happen and what the restrictions either under the code are or under the plan.

Q. Is there anything that would stop you from selling these businesses if the Chapter 11 went on for a year or two years?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

A. Is there anything that would stop me? We'd have to follow the strictures of the code and the protocols, but there would be no prohibition -- let me rephrase, please.

There would be no prohibition that I am aware of.

Q. Now, in connection with your differential between the liquidation of what I will call the operating businesses under the liquidation analysis and the plan analysis, who arrived at the discount or determined the discount that has been placed between the two, plan analysis versus liquidation analysis?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

A. To which document are you referring?

Q. Both the June -- the January and the November analysis has a different estimated proceeds for monetization for the plan analysis versus the liquidation analysis. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. And there is a note under there. "Assumes Chapter 7 trustee will not be able to achieve the same sales proceeds as Claimant trustee."

A. I see that, yes.

Q. Do you see that note?

A. Yes.

Q. Who arrived at that discount?

A. I did.

Q. What percentage did you use?

A. Depended on the asset. Each one is different.

Q. Is the discount a function of capability of a trustee versus your capability, or is the discount a function of timing?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form.

A. It could be a combination.

Q. So, let's -- let me walk through this. Your plan analysis has an assumption that everything is sold by December 2022. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the valuations that you have used here for the monetization assume a sale between -- a sale prior to December of 2022. Correct?

A. Sorry. I don't quite understand your question.

Q. The 257 number, and then let's take out the notes. Let's use the 210 number.

MR. MORRIS: Can we put the document back on the screen, please? Sorry, Douglas, to interrupt, but it would be helpful.

J. SEERY

MR. DRAPER: That is fine, John.

(Pause.)

MR. MORRIS: Thank you very much.

Q. Mr. Seery, do you see the 257?

A. In the one from yesterday?

Q. Yes.

A. Second line, 257,941. Yes.

Q. That assumes a monetization of all assets by December of 2022?

A. Correct.

Q. And so everything has been sold by that time; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So, what I am trying to get at is, there is both the capability between you and a trustee, and then the second issue is timing. So, what discount was put on for timing, Mr. Seery, between when a trustee would sell it versus when you would sell it?

MR. MORRIS: Objection.

Q. What is the percentage you

J. SEERY

applied?

A. Each of the assets is different.

Q. Is there a general discount that you used?

A. Not a general discount, no. We looked at each individual asset and went through and made an assessment.

Q. Did you apply a discount for your capability versus the capability of a trustee?

A. No.

Q. So a trustee would be as capable as you are in monetizing these assets?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

Q. Excuse me? The answer is?

A. The answer is maybe.

Q. Couldn't a trustee hire somebody as capable as you are?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Perhaps.

Q. Sir, that is a yes or no question. Could the trustee hire somebody

J. SEERY

as capable as you are?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. I don't know.

Q. Is there anybody as capable as you are?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Certainly.

Q. And they could be hired. Correct?

A. Perhaps. I don't know.

Q. And if you go back to the November 2020 liquidation analysis versus plan analysis, it is also the same note about that a trustee would bring less, and there is the same sort of discount between the estimated proceeds under the plan and under the liquidation analysis.

MR. MORRIS: If that is a question, I object.

Q. Is that correct, Mr. Seery, looking at the document?

A. There are discounts, yes.

J. SEERY

Q. Again, the discounts are applied for timing and capability?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, in looking at the November plan analysis number of $190 million and the January number of $257 million, what accounts for the increase between the two dates? What assets specifically?

A. There are a number of assets. Firstly, the HCLOF assets are added.

Q. How much are those?

A. Approximately 22 and a half million dollars.

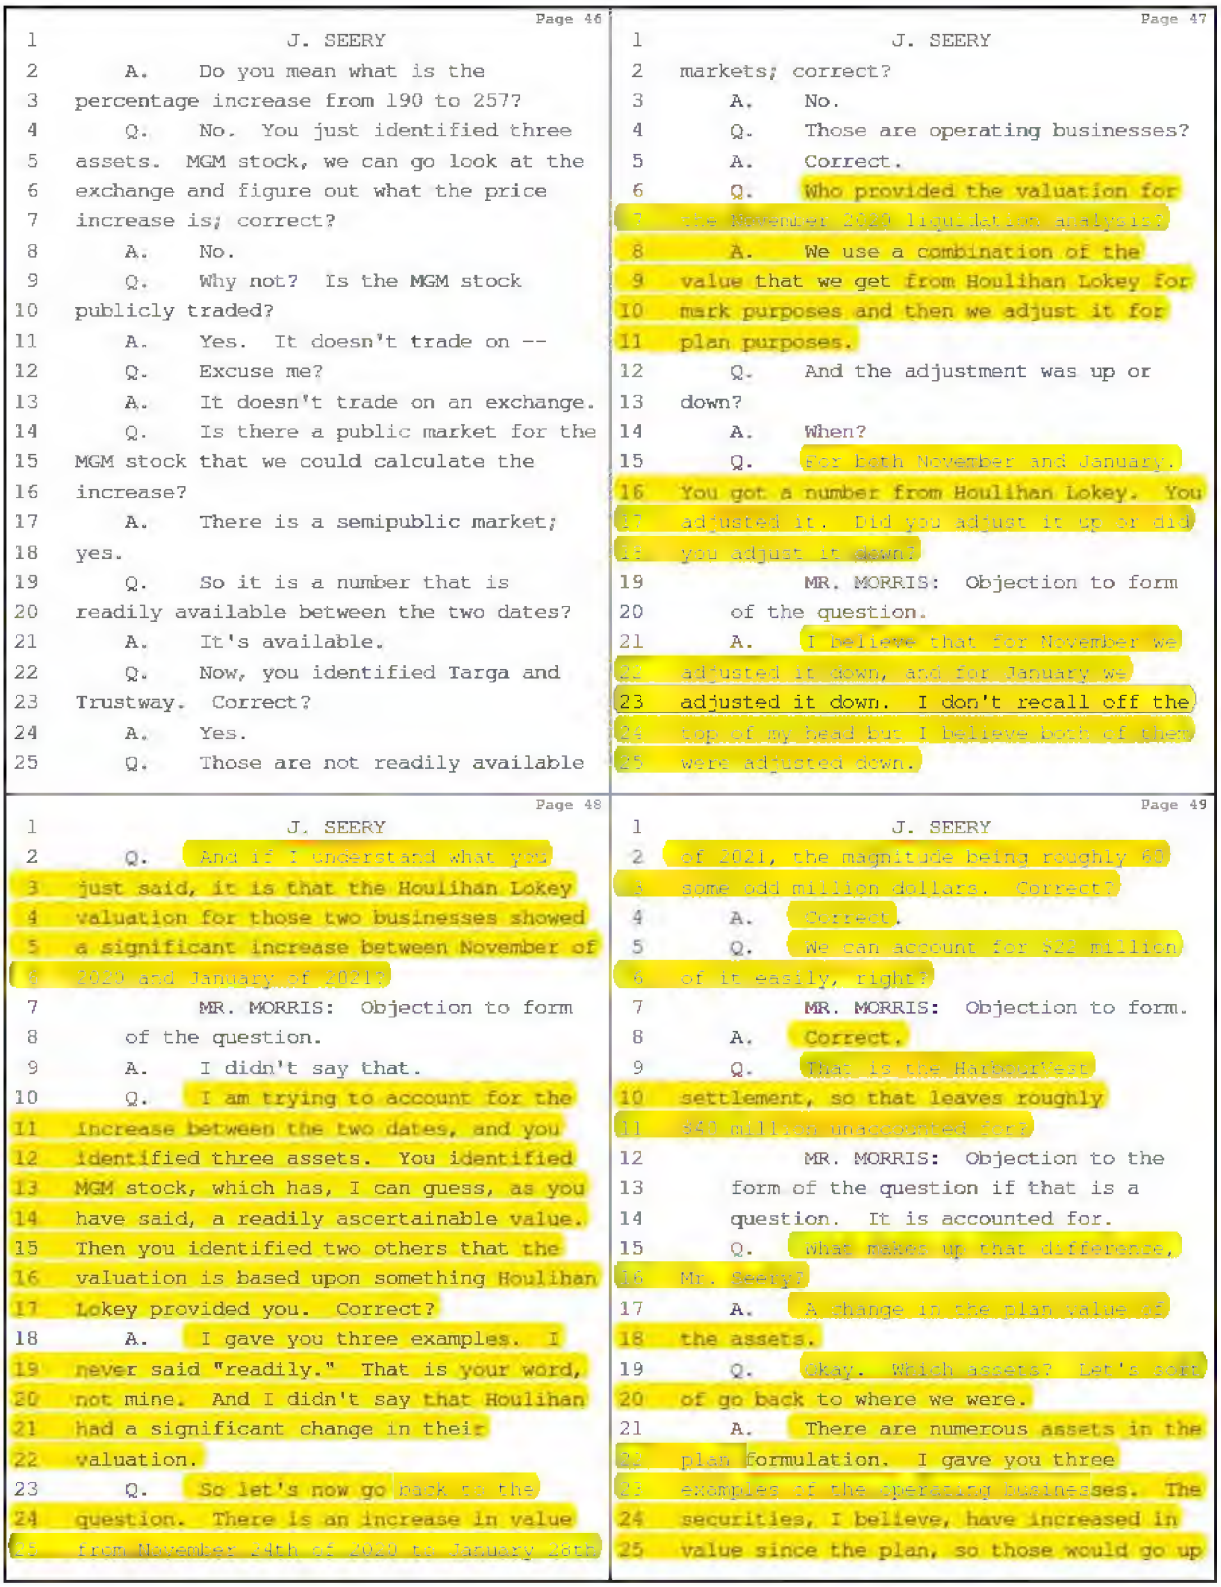
Q. Okay.

A. Secondly, there is a significant increase in the value of certain of the assets over this time period.

Q. Which assets, Mr. Seery?

A. There are a number. They include MGM stock, they include Trustway, they include Targa.

Q. And what is the percentage increase from November to January, November of 2020 to January of 2021?



Page 46

J. SEERY

A. Do you mean what is the percentage increase from 190 to 257?
Q. No. You just identified three assets. MGM stock, we can go look at the exchange and figure out what the price increase is; correct?
A. No.
Q. Why not? Is the MGM stock publicly traded?
A. Yes. It doesn't trade on --
Q. Excuse me?
A. It doesn't trade on an exchange.
Q. Is there a public market for the MGM stock that we could calculate the increase?
A. There is a semipublic market; yes.
Q. So it is a number that is readily available between the two dates?
A. It's available.
Q. Now, you identified Targa and Trustway. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Those are not readily available

Page 47

J. SEERY

markets; correct?
A. No.
Q. Those are operating businesses?
A. Correct.
Q. Who provided the valuation for the November 2020 liquidation analysis?
A. We use a combination of the value that we get from Houlihan Lokey for mark purposes and then we adjust it for plan purposes.
Q. And the adjustment was up or down?
A. When?
Q. For both November and January. You got a number from Houlihan Lokey. You adjusted it. Did you adjust it up or did you adjust it down?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.
A. I believe that for November we adjusted it down, and for January we adjusted it down. I don't recall off the top of my head but I believe both of them were adjusted down.

Page 48

J. SEERY

Q. And if I understand what you just said, it is that the Houlihan Lokey valuation for those two businesses showed a significant increase between November of 2020 and January of 2021?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.
A. I didn't say that.
Q. I am trying to account for the increase between the two dates, and you identified three assets. You identified MGM stock, which has, I can guess, as you have said, a readily ascertainable value. Then you identified two others that the valuation is based upon something Houlihan Lokey provided you. Correct?
A. I gave you three examples. I never said "readily." That is your word, not mine. And I didn't say that Houlihan had a significant change in their valuation.
Q. So let's now go back to the question. There is an increase in value from November 24th of 2020 to January 28th of 2021, the magnitude being roughly 60 some odd million dollars. Correct?

Page 49

J. SEERY

A. Correct.
Q. We can account for 522 million of it easily, right?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to form.
A. Correct.
Q. That is the Harbourvest settlement, so that leaves roughly 340 million unaccounted for?
MR. MORRIS: Objection to the form of the question if that is a question. It is accounted for.
Q. What makes up that difference, Mr. Seery?
A. A change in the plan value of the assets.
Q. Okay. Which assets? Let's sort of go back to where we were.
A. There are numerous assets in the plan formulation. I gave you three examples of the operating businesses. The securities, I believe, have increased in value since the plan, so those would go up for one. On the operating businesses, we looked at each of them and made an assessment based upon where the market is and what we believe the values are, and we have moved those valuations.

Q. Let me look at some numbers again. In the liquidation analysis in November of 2020, the liquidation value is $149 million. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the liquidation analysis in January of 2021, you have $191 million?

A. Yes.

Q. You see that number. So there is $51 million there, right?

A. No.

Q. What is the difference between 191 and -- sorry. My math may be a little off. What is the difference between the two numbers, Mr. Seery?

A. Your math is off.

Q. Sorry. It is 41 million?

A. Correct.

Q. $22 million of that is the

J. SEERY

HarbourVest settlement, right?

A. I believe that's correct.

Q. Is that fair, Mr. Seery?

A. I believe that is correct, yes.

Q. And part of that differential are publicly traded or ascertainable securities. Correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And basically you can get, or under the plan analysis or trustee analysis, if it is a marketable security or where there is a market, the liquidation number should be the same for both. Is that fair?

A. No.

Q. And why not?

A. We might have a different price target for a particular security than the current trading value.

Q. I understand that, but I mean that is based upon the capability of the person making the decision as to when to sell. Correct?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form

J. SEERY

of the question.

Q. Mr. Seery, yes or no?

A. I said no.

Q. What is that based on, then?

A. The person's ability to assess the market and timing.

Q. Okay. And again, couldn't a trustee hire somebody as capable as you to both, A, assess the market and, B, make a determination as to when to sell?

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

A. I suppose a trustee could.

Q. And there are better people or people equally or better than you at assessing a market. Correct?

A. Yes.

MR. MORRIS: Objection to form of the question.

Q. So, again, let's go back to that. We have accounted for, out of $41 million where the liquidation analysis increases between the two dates, $22 million of it. That leaves

J. SEERY

$18 million. How much of that is publicly traded or ascertainable assets versus operating businesses?

A. I don't know off the top of my head the percentages.

Q. All right. The same question for the plan analysis where you have the differential between the November number and the January number. How much of it is marketable securities versus an operating business?

A. I don't recall off the top of my head.

MR. DRAPER: Let me take a few-minute break. Can we take a ten-minute break here?

THE WITNESS: Sure.

(Recess.)

BY MR. DRAPER:

Q. Mr. Seery, what I am going to show you and what I would ask you to look at is in the note E, in the statement of assumptions for the November 2020 disclosure statement. It discusses fixed

Sale of Assets of Affiliates or Controlled Entities

Asset	Sales Price
Structural Steel Products	$50 million
Life Settlements	$35 million
OmniMax	$50 million
Targa	$37 million

- These assets were sold over the contemporaneous objections of James Dondero, who was the Portfolio Manager and key-man on the funds.
- Mr. Seery admitted[1] that he must comply with the Bankruptcy Code, the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, and the Protocols for the sale of major assets of the estate. We believe that a competitive bid process and court approval should have been required for the sale of each of these assets (as was done for the sale of the building at 2817 Maple Ave. [a $9 million asset] and the sale of the interest in PetroCap [a $3 million asset]).

Counsel for the Debtor and Debtor-in-Possession

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
DALLAS DIVISION

In re:	§	Chapter 11
HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.,[1]	§	Case No. 19-34054-sgj11
Debtor.	§

DEBTOR'S MOTION FOR ENTRY OF AN ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT WITH HARBOURVEST (CLAIM NOS. 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, 154) AND AUTHORIZING ACTIONS CONSISTENT THEREWITH

TO THE HONORABLE STACEY G. C. JERNIGAN,
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY JUDGE:

[1] The last four digits of the Debtor's taxpayer identification number are 6725. The headquarters and service address for the Debtor is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, TX 75201.

Highland Capital Management, L.P., the above-captioned debtor and debtor-in-possession ("Highland" or the "Debtor"), files this motion (the "Motion") for entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, pursuant to Rule 9019 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the "Bankruptcy Rules"), approving a settlement agreement (the "Settlement Agreement"),[2] a copy of which is attached as Exhibit 1 to the Declaration of John A. Morris in Support of the Debtor's Motion for Entry of an Order Approving Settlement with HarbourVest (Claim Nos. 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, 154) and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith being filed simultaneously with this Motion ("Morris Dec."), that, among other things, fully and finally resolves the proofs of claim filed by HarbourVest 2017 Global Fund L.P., HarbourVest 2017 Global AIF L.P., HarbourVest Dover Street IX Investment L.P., HV International VIII Secondary L.P., HarbourVest Skew Base AIF L.P., and HarbourVest Partners L.P. (collectively, "HarbourVest"). In support of this Motion, the Debtor represents as follows:

JURISDICTION

1. This Court has jurisdiction over this matter pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and 1334. This matter is a core proceeding within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2). Venue in this District is proper pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409.

2. The statutory predicates for the relief sought herein are sections 105(a) and 363 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code"), and Rule 9019 of the Bankruptcy Rules.

[2] All capitalized terms used but not defined herein shall have the meanings given to them in the Settlement Agreement.

RELEVANT BACKGROUND

A. Procedural Background

3. On October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware, Case No. 19-12239 (CSS) (the "Delaware Court").

4. On October 29, 2019, the official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee") was appointed by the U.S. Trustee in the Delaware Court.

5. On December 4, 2019, the Delaware Court entered an order transferring venue of the Debtor's case to this Court [Docket No. 186].[3]

6. On December 27, 2019, the Debtor filed that certain Motion of the Debtor for Approval of Settlement with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course [Docket No. 281] (the "Settlement Motion"). This Court approved the Settlement Motion on January 9, 2020 [Docket No. 339] (the "Settlement Order").

7. In connection with the Settlement Order, an independent board of directors was constituted at the Debtor's general partner, Strand Advisors, Inc., and certain operating protocols were instituted.

8. On July 16, 2020, this Court entered an order appointing James P. Seery, Jr., as the Debtor's chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer [Docket No. 854].

9. The Debtor has continued in the possession of its property and has continued to operate and manage its business as a debtor-in-possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code. No trustee or examiner has been appointed in this chapter 11 case.

[3] All docket numbers refer to the docket maintained by this Court.

B. Overview of HarbourVest's Claims

10. HarbourVest's claims against the Debtor's estate arise from its $80 million investment in Highland CLO Funding, f/k/a Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF"), pursuant to which HarbourVest obtained a 49 percent interest in HCLOF (the "Investment").

11. In brief, HarbourVest contends that it was fraudulently induced into entering into the Investment based on the Debtor's misrepresentations and omissions concerning certain material facts, including that the Debtor: (1) failed to disclose that it never intended to pay an arbitration award obtained by a former portfolio manager, (2) failed to disclose that it engaged in a series of fraudulent transfers for the purpose of preventing the former portfolio manager from collecting on his arbitration award and misrepresented the reasons changing the portfolio manager for HCLOF immediately prior to the Investment, (3) indicated that the dispute with the former portfolio manager would not impact investment activities, and (4) expressed confidence in the ability of HCLOF to reset or redeem the collateralized loan obligations ("CLOs") under its control.

12. HarbourVest seeks to rescind its Investment and claims damages in excess of $300 million based on theories of fraud, fraudulent inducement, fraudulent concealment, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of fiduciary duty (under Guernsey law), and on alleged violations of state securities laws and the Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organization Act ("RICO").

13. HarbourVest's allegations are summarized below.[4]

[4] Solely for purposes of this Motion, and not for any other reason, the facts set forth herein are adopted largely from the HarbourVest Response to Debtor's First Omnibus Objection to Certain (A) Duplicate Claims; (B) Overstated Claims; (C) Late-Filed Claims; (D) Satisfied Claims; (E) No-Liability Claims; and (F) Insufficient-Documentation Claims [Docket No. 1057] (the "Response").

C. Summary of HarbourVest's Factual Allegations

14. At the time HarbourVest made its Investment, the Debtor was embroiled in an arbitration against Joshua Terry ("Mr. Terry"), a former employee of the Debtor and limited partner of Acis Capital Management, L.P. ("Acis LP"). Through Acis LP, Mr. Terry managed Highland's CLO business, including CLO-related investments held by Acis Loan Funding, Ltd. ("Acis Funding").

15. The litigation between Mr. Terry and the Debtor began in 2016, after the Debtor terminated Mr. Terry and commenced an action against him in Texas state court. Mr. Terry asserted counterclaims for wrongful termination and for the wrongful taking of his ownership interest in Acis LP and subsequently had certain claims referred to arbitration where he obtained an award of approximately $8 million (the "Arbitration Award") on October 20, 2017.

16. HarbourVest alleges that the Debtor responded to the Arbitration Award by engaging in a series of fraudulent transfers and corporate restructurings, the true purposes of which were fraudulently concealed from HarbourVest.

17. For example, according to HarbourVest, the Debtor changed the name of the target fund from Acis Funding to "Highland CLO Funding, Ltd." ("HCLOF") and "swapped out" Acis LP for Highland HCF Advisor, Ltd. as portfolio manager (the "Structural Changes"). The Debtor allegedly told HarbourVest that it made these changes because of the "reputational harm" to Acis LP resulting from the Arbitration Award. The Debtor further told HarbourVest that in lieu of redemptions, resetting the CLOs was necessary, and that it would be easier to reset them under the "Highland" CLO brand instead of the Acis CLO brand.

18. In addition, HarbourVest also alleges that the Debtor had no intention of allowing Mr. Terry to collect on his Arbitration Award, and orchestrated a scheme to "denude"

Acis of assets by fraudulently transferring virtually all of its assets and attempting to transfer its profitable portfolio management contracts to non-Acis, Debtor-related entities.

19. Unaware of the fraudulent transfers or the true purposes of the Structural Changes, and in reliance on representations made by the Debtor, HarbourVest closed on its Investment in HCLOF on November 15, 2017.

20. After discovering the transfers that occurred between Highland and Acis between October and December 2017 following the Arbitration Award (the "Transfers"), on January 24, 2018, Terry moved for a temporary restraining order (the "TRO") from the Texas state court on the grounds that the Transfers were pursued for the purpose of rendering Acis LP judgment-proof. The state court granted the TRO, enjoining the Debtor from transferring any CLO management contracts or other assets away from Acis LP.

21. On January 30, 2018, Mr. Terry filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions against Acis LP and its general partner, Acis Capital Management GP, LLC. See In re Acis Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 18-30264-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2018) and In re Acis Capital Management GP, LLC, Case No. 18-30265-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2018) (collectively, the "Acis Bankruptcy Case"). The Bankruptcy Court overruled the Debtor's objection, granted the involuntary petitions, and appointed a chapter 11 trustee (the "Acis Trustee"). A long sequence of events subsequently transpired, all of which relate to HarbourVest's claims, including:

- On May 31, 2018, the Court issued a sua sponte TRO preventing any actions in furtherance of the optional redemptions or other liquidation of the Acis CLOs.
- On June 14, 2018, HCLOF withdrew optional redemption notices.
- The TRO expired on June 15, 2018, and HCLOF noticed the Acis Trustee that it was requesting an optional redemption.

- HCLOF's request was withdrawn on July 6, 2018, and on June 21, 2018, the Acis Trustee sought an injunction preventing Highland/HCLOF from seeking further redemptions (the "Preliminary Injunction").

- The Court granted the Preliminary Injunction on July 10, 2018, pending the Acis Trustee's attempts to confirm a plan or resolve the Acis Bankruptcy.

- On August 30, 2018, the Court denied confirmation of the First Amended Joint Plan for Acis, and held that the Preliminary Injunction must stay in place on the ground that the "evidence thus far has been compelling that numerous transfers after the Josh Terry judgment denuded Acis of value."

- After the Debtor made various statements implicating HarbourVest in the Transfers, the Acis Trustee investigated HarbourVest's involvement in such Transfers, including extensive discovery and taking a 30(b)(6) deposition of HarbourVest's managing director, Michael Pugatch, on November 17, 2018.

- On March 20, 2019, HCLOF sent a letter to Acis LP stating that it was not interested in pursuing, or able to pursue, a CLO reset transaction.

D. The Parties' Pleadings and Positions Concerning HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim

22. On April 8, 2020, HarbourVest filed proofs of claim against Highland that were subsequently denoted by the Debtor's claims agents as claim numbers 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, and 154, respectively (collectively, the "Proofs of Claim"). Morris Dec. Exhibits 2-7.

23. The Proofs of Claim assert, among other things, that HarbourVest suffered significant harm due to conduct undertaken by the Debtor and the Debtor's employees, including "financial harm resulting from (i) court orders in the Acis Bankruptcy that prevented certain CLOs in which HCLOF was invested from being refinanced or reset and court orders that otherwise relegated the activity of HCLOF [i.e., the Preliminary Injunction]; and (ii) significant fees and expenses related to the Acis Bankruptcy that were charged to HCLOF." See, e.g., Morris Dec. Exhibit 2 ¶3.

24. HarbourVest also asserted "any and all of its right to payment, remedies, and other claims (including contingent or unliquidated claims) against the Debtor in connection with and relating to the forgoing harm, including for any amounts due or owed under the various agreements with the Debtor in connection with relating to" the Operative Documents "and any and all legal and equitable claims or causes of action relating to the forgoing harm." See, e.g., Morris Dec. Exhibit 2 ¶4.

25. Highland subsequently objected to HarbourVest's Proofs of Claim on the grounds that they were no-liability claims. [Docket No. 906] (the "Claim Objection").

26. On September 11, 2020, HarbourVest filed its Response. The Response articulated specified claims under U.S. federal and state and Guernsey law, including claims for fraud, fraudulent concealment, fraudulent inducement, fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation (collectively, the "Fraud Claims"), U.S. State and Federal Securities Law Claims (the "Securities Claims"), violations of the Federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act ("RICO"), breach of fiduciary duty and misuse of fund assets, and an unfair prejudice claim under Guernsey law (collectively, with the Proofs of Claim, the "HarbourVest Claims").

27. On October 18, 2020, HarbourVest filed its Motion of HarbourVest Pursuant to Rule 3018 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Purposes of Voting to Accept or Reject the Plan [Docket No. 1207] (the "3018 Motion"). In its 3018 Motion, HarbourVest sought for its Claims to be temporarily allowed for voting purposes in the amount of more than $300 million (based largely on a theory of treble damages).

E. Settlement Discussions

28. In October, the parties discussed the possibility of resolving the Rule 3018 Motion.

29. In November, the parties broadened the discussions in an attempt to reach a global resolution of the HarbourVest Claims. In the pursuit thereof, the parties and their counsel participated in several conference calls where they engaged in a spirited exchange of perspectives concerning the facts and the law.

30. During follow up meetings, the parties' interests became more defined. Specifically, HarbourVest sought to maximize its recovery while fully extracting itself from the Investment, while the Debtor sought to minimize the HarbourVest Claims consistent with its perceptions of the facts and law.

31. After the parties' interests became more defined, the principals engaged in a series of direct, arm's-length, telephonic negotiations that ultimately lead to the settlement, whose terms are summarized below.

F. Summary of Settlement Terms

32. The Settlement Agreement contains the following material terms, among others:

- HarbourVest shall transfer its entire interest in HCLOF to an entity to be designated by the Debtor;[5]
- HarbourVest shall receive an allowed, general unsecured, non-priority claim in the amount of $45 million and shall vote its Class 8 claim in that amount to support the Plan;
- HarbourVest shall receive a subordinated, allowed, general unsecured, non-priority claim in the amount of $35 million and shall vote its Class 9 claim in that amount to support the Plan;
- HarbourVest will support confirmation of the Debtor's Plan, including, but not limited to, voting its claims in support of the Plan;
- The HarbourVest Claims shall be allowed in the aggregate amount of $45 million for voting purposes;
- HarbourVest will support the Debtor's pursuit of its pending Plan of Reorganization; and
- The parties shall exchange mutual releases.

[5] The NAV for HarbourVest's 49.98% interest in HCLOF was estimated to be approximately $22 million as of December 1, 2020.

See generally Morris Dec. Exhibit 1.

BASIS FOR RELIEF REQUESTED

33. Bankruptcy Rule 9019 governs the procedural prerequisites to approval of a settlement, providing that:

> On motion by the trustee and after notice and a hearing, the court may approve a compromise or settlement. Notice shall be given to creditors, the United States trustee, the debtor, and indenture trustees as provided in Rule 2002 and to any other entity as the court may direct.

FED. R. BANKR. P. 9019(a).

34. Settlements in bankruptcy are favored as a means of minimizing litigation, expediting the administration of the bankruptcy estate, and providing for the efficient resolution of bankruptcy cases. See Myers v. Martin (In re Martin), 91 F.3d 389, 393 (3d Cir. 1996); Rivercity v. Herpel (In re Jackson Brewing Co.), 624 F.2d 599, 602 (5th Cir. 1980). Pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 9019(a), a bankruptcy court may approve a compromise or settlement as long as the proposed settlement is fair, reasonable, and in the best interest of the estate. See In re Age Ref. Inc., 801 F.3d 530, 540 (5th Cir. 2015). Ultimately, "approval of a compromise is within the sound discretion of the bankruptcy court." See United States v. AWECO, Inc. (In re AWECO, Inc.), 725 F.2d 293, 297 (5th Cir. 1984); Jackson Brewing, 624 F.2d at 602–03.

35. In making this determination, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit applies a three-part test, "with a focus on comparing 'the terms of the compromise with the rewards of litigation.'" Official Comm. of Unsecured Creditors v. Cajun Elec. Power Coop. (In re Cajun Elec. Power Coop.), 119 F.3d 349, 356 (5th Cir. 1997) (citing Jackson Brewing, 624 F.2d at 602). The Fifth Circuit has instructed courts to consider the following factors: "(1) The probability of success in the litigation, with due consideration for the uncertainty of law and fact, (2) The complexity and likely duration of the litigation and any attendant expense, inconvenience and delay, and (3) All other factors bearing on the wisdom of the compromise." Id. Under the rubric of the third factor referenced above, the Fifth Circuit has specified two additional factors that bear on the decision to approve a proposed settlement. First, the court should consider "the paramount interest of creditors with proper deference to their reasonable views." Id.; Conn. Gen. Life Ins. Co. v. United Cos. Fin. Corp. (In re Foster Mortgage Corp.), 68 F.3d 914, 917 (5th Cir. 1995). Second, the court should consider the "extent to which the settlement is truly the product of arms-length bargaining, and not of fraud or collusion." Age Ref. Inc., 801 F.3d at 540; Foster Mortgage Corp., 68 F.3d at 918 (citations omitted).

36. There is ample basis to approve the proposed Settlement Agreement based on the Rule 9019 factors set forth by the Fifth Circuit.

37. First, although the Debtor believes that it has valid defenses to the HarbourVest Claims, there is no guarantee that the Debtor would succeed in its litigation with HarbourVest. Indeed, to establish its defenses, the Debtor would be required to rely, at least in part, on the credibility of witnesses whose veracity has already been called into question by this Court. Moreover, it will be difficult to dispute that the Transfers precipitated the Acis Bankruptcy, and, ultimately, the imposition of the Bankruptcy Court's TRO that restricted HCLOF's ability to reset or redeem the CLOs and that is at the core of the HarbourVest Claims.

38. The second factor—the complexity, duration, and costs of litigation—also weighs heavily in favor of approving the Settlement Agreement. As this Court is aware, the events forming the basis of the HarbourVest Claims—including the Terry Litigation and Acis Bankruptcy—proceeded for years in this Court and in multiple other forums, and has already cost the Debtor's estate millions of dollars in legal fees. If the Settlement Agreement is not approved, then the parties will expend significant resources litigating a host of fact-intensive issues including, among other things, the substance and materiality of the Debtor's alleged fraudulent statements and omissions and whether HarbourVest reasonably relied on those statements and omissions.

39. Third, approval of the Settlement Agreement is justified by the paramount interest of creditors. Specifically, the settlement will enable the Debtor to: (a) avoid incurring substantial litigation costs; (b) avoid the litigation risk associated with HarbourVest's $300 million claim; and (c) through the plan support provisions, increase the likelihood that the Debtor's pending plan of reorganization will be confirmed.

40. Finally, the Settlement Agreement was unquestionably negotiated at arm's-length. The terms of the settlement are the result of numerous, ongoing discussions and negotiations between the parties and their counsel and represent neither party's "best case scenario." Indeed, the Settlement Agreement should be approved as a rational exercise of the Debtor's business judgment made after due deliberation of the facts and circumstances concerning HarbourVest's Claims.

NO PRIOR REQUEST

41. No previous request for the relief sought herein has been made to this, or any other, Court.

NOTICE

42. Notice of this Motion shall be given to the following parties or, in lieu thereof, to their counsel, if known: (a) counsel for HarbourVest; (b) the Office of the United States Trustee; (c) the Office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of Texas; (d) the Debtor's principal secured parties; (e) counsel to the Committee; and (f) parties requesting notice pursuant to Bankruptcy Rule 2002. The Debtor submits that, in light of the nature of the relief requested, no other or further notice need be given.

WHEREFORE, the Debtor respectfully requests entry of an order, substantially in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, (a) granting the relief requested herein, and (b) granting such other relief as is just and proper.

Counsel for the Debtor and Debtor-in-Possession

Exhibit 1

Settlement Agreement

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement (the "Agreement") is entered into as of March 30, 2021, by and among (i) Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or the "Debtor"), (ii) Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (n/k/a Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) ("Multi-Strat," and together with its general partner and its direct and indirect wholly-owned subsidiaries, the "MSCF Parties"), (iii) Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand"), and (iv) UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (collectively, "UBS").

Each of HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, and UBS are sometimes referred to herein collectively as the "Parties" and individually as a "Party."

RECITALS

WHEREAS, in 2007, UBS entered into certain contracts with HCMLP and two funds managed by HCMLP—Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC," and together with CDO Fund, the "Funds") related to a securitization transaction (the "Knox Agreement");

WHEREAS, in 2008, the parties to the Knox Agreement restructured the Knox Agreement;

WHEREAS, UBS terminated the Knox Agreement and, on February 24, 2009, UBS filed a complaint in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, County of New York (the "State Court") against HCMLP and the Funds seeking to recover damages related to the Knox Agreement, in an action captioned UBS Securities LLC, et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., et al., Index No. 650097/2009 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.) (the "2009 Action");

WHEREAS, UBS's lone claim against HCMLP in the 2009 Action for indemnification was dismissed in early 2010, and thereafter UBS amended its complaint in the 2009 Action to add five new defendants, Highland Financial Partners, L.P. ("HFP"), Highland Credit Strategies Master Funds, L.P. ("Credit-Strat"), Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, L.P. ("Crusader"), Multi-Strat, and Strand, and to add new claims for fraudulent inducement, fraudulent conveyance, tortious interference with contract, alter ego, and general partner liability;

WHEREAS, UBS filed a new, separate action against HCMLP on June 28, 2010, for, inter alia, fraudulent conveyance and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, captioned UBS Securities LLC, et al. v. Highland Capital Management, L.P., Index No. 650752/2010 (N.Y. Sup. Ct.) (the "2010 Action");

WHEREAS, in November 2010, the State Court consolidated the 2009 Action and the 2010 Action (hereafter referred to as the "State Court Action"), and on May 11, 2011, UBS filed a Second Amended Complaint in the 2009 Action;

WHEREAS, in 2015, UBS entered into settlement agreements with Crusader and Credit-Strat, and thereafter UBS filed notices with the State Court in the State Court Action dismissing its claims against Crusader and Credit-Strat;

WHEREAS, the State Court bifurcated claims asserted in the State Court Action for purposes of trial, with the Phase I bench trial deciding UBS's breach of contract claims against the Funds and HCMLP's counterclaims against UBS;

WHEREAS, on August 7, 2017, the Funds, along with Highland CDO Opportunity Fund, Ltd., Highland CDO Holding Company, Highland Financial Corp., and HFP, purportedly sold assets with a purported collective fair market value of $105,647,679 (the "Transferred Assets") and purported face value of over $300,000,000 to Sentinel Reinsurance, Ltd. ("Sentinel") pursuant to a purported asset purchase agreement (the "Purchase Agreement");

WHEREAS, Sentinel treated the Transferred Assets as payment for a $25,000,000 premium on a document entitled "Legal Liability Insurance Policy" (the "Insurance Policy");

WHEREAS, the Insurance Policy purports to provide coverage to the Funds for up to $100,000,000 for any legal liability resulting from the State Court Action (the "Insurance Proceeds");

WHEREAS, one of the Transferred Assets CDO Fund transferred to Sentinel was CDO Fund's limited partnership interests in Multi-Strat (the "CDOF Interests");

WHEREAS, Sentinel had also received from HCMLP limited partnership interests in Multi-Strat for certain cash consideration (together with the CDOF Interests, the "MSCF Interests");

WHEREAS, the existence of the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy were unknown to Strand's independent directors and the Debtor's bankruptcy advisors prior to late January 2021;

WHEREAS, in early February 2021, the Debtor disclosed the existence of the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy to UBS;

WHEREAS, prior to such disclosure, the Purchase Agreement and Insurance Policy were unknown to UBS;

WHEREAS, on November 14, 2019, following the Phase I trial, the State Court issued its decision determining that the Funds breached the Knox Agreement on December 5, 2008 and dismissing HCMLP's counterclaims;

WHEREAS, Sentinel purportedly redeemed the MSCF Interests in November 2019 and the redeemed MSCF Interests are currently valued at approximately $32,823,423.50 (the "Sentinel Redemption");

WHEREAS, on February 10, 2020, the State Court entered a Phase I trial judgment against the Funds in the amount of $1,039,957,799.44 as of January 22, 2020 (the "Phase I Judgment");

WHEREAS, Phase II of the trial of the State Court Action, includes, inter alia, UBS's claim for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing against HCMLP, UBS's

fraudulent transfer claims against HCMLP, HFP, and Multi-Strat, and UBS's general partner claim against Strand;

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2019, HCMLP filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The Bankruptcy Case was transferred to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Bankruptcy Court") on December 4, 2019;

WHEREAS, Phase II of the trial of the State Court Action was automatically stayed as to HCMLP by HCMLP's bankruptcy filing;

WHEREAS, on May 11, 2020, UBS, Multi-Strat, Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, Ltd., and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO Asset Holdings, L.P. (collectively, the "May Settlement Parties"), entered into a Settlement Agreement (the "May Settlement") pursuant to which the May Settlement Parties agreed to the allocation of the proceeds of certain sales of assets held by Multi-Strat, including escrowing a portion of such funds, and restrictions on Multi-Strat's actions;

WHEREAS, on June 26, 2020, UBS timely filed two substantively identical claims in the Bankruptcy Case: (i) Claim No. 190 filed by UBS Securities LLC; and (ii) Claim No. 191 filed by UBS AG London Branch (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "UBS Claim"). The UBS Claim asserts a general unsecured claim against HCMLP for $1,039,957,799.40;

WHEREAS, on August 3, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court entered an Order Directing Mediation [Docket No. 912] pursuant to which HCMLP, UBS, and several other parties were directed to mediate their Bankruptcy Case disputes before two experienced third-party mediators, Retired Judge Allan Gropper and Sylvia Mayer (together, the "Mediators"). HCMLP and UBS formally met with the Mediators together and separately on numerous occasions, including on August 27, September 2, 3, and 4, and December 17, 2020, and had numerous other informal discussions outside of the presence of the Mediators, in an attempt to resolve the UBS Claim;

WHEREAS, on August 7, 2020, HCMLP filed an objection to the UBS Claim [Docket No. 928]. Also on August 7, 2020, the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund, and Crusader, Highland Crusader Fund, L.P., Highland Crusader Fund, Ltd., and Highland Crusader Fund II, Ltd. (collectively, the "Redeemer Committee"), objected to the UBS Claim [Docket No. 933]. On September 25, 2020, UBS filed its response to these objections [Docket No. 1105];

WHEREAS, on October 16, 2020, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee each moved for partial summary judgment on the UBS Claim [Docket Nos. 1180 and 1183, respectively], and on November 6, 2020, UBS opposed these motions [Docket No. 1337];

WHEREAS, by Order dated December 9, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court granted, as set forth therein, the motions for partial summary judgment filed by HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee and denied UBS's request for leave to file an amended proof of claim [Docket No. 1526];

WHEREAS, on November 6, 2020, UBS filed UBS's Motion for Temporary Allowance of Claims for Voting Purposes Pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3018 [Docket No. 1338] (the "3018 Motion"), and on November 16, 2020, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee each opposed the 3018 Motion [Docket Nos. 1404 and 1409, respectively];

WHEREAS, by Order dated December 8, 2020, the Bankruptcy Court granted the 3018 Motion and allowed the UBS Claim, on a temporary basis and for voting purposes only, in the amount of $94,761,076 [Docket No. 1518];

WHEREAS, on January 22, 2021, the Debtor filed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization for Highland Capital Management, L.P. (As Modified) [Docket No. 1808] (as amended, and as may be further amended, supplemented, or otherwise modified, the "Plan");

WHEREAS, on March 29, 2021, the Debtor caused CDO Fund to make a claim on the Insurance Policy to collect the Insurance Proceeds pursuant to the Phase I Judgment;

WHEREAS, on March 29, 2021, UBS filed an adversary proceeding seeking injunctive relief and a motion for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction to, among other things, enjoin the Debtor from allowing Multi-Strat to distribute the Sentinel Redemption to Sentinel or any transferee of Sentinel (the "Multi-Strat Proceeding"), which relief the Debtor, in its capacity as Multi-Strat's investment manager and general partner, does not oppose;

WHEREAS, the Parties wish to enter into this Agreement to settle all claims and disputes between and among them, to the extent and on the terms and conditions set forth herein, and to exchange the mutual releases set forth herein, without any admission of fault, liability, or wrongdoing on the part of any Party; and

WHEREAS, this Agreement will be presented to the Bankruptcy Court for approval pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9019 ("Rule 9019") and section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code;

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the above recitals, the covenants, conditions, and promises made herein, and other good and valuable consideration, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties agree as follows:

AGREEMENT

1. Settlement of Claims. In full and complete satisfaction of the UBS Released Claims (as defined below):

(a) The UBS Claim will be allowed as (i) a single, general unsecured claim in the amount of $65,000,000 against HCMLP, which shall be treated as a Class 8 General Unsecured Claim under the Plan;[1] and (ii) a single, subordinated unsecured claim in the amount of $60,000,000 against HCMLP, which shall be treated as a Class 9 Subordinated General Unsecured Claim under the Plan.

[1] Capitalized terms used but not defined herein shall have the meanings attributed to them in the Plan.

(b) Multi-Strat will pay UBS the sum of $18,500,000 (the "Multi-Strat Payment") as follows: (i) within two (2) business days after the Order Date, the May Settlement Parties will submit a Joint Release Instruction (as defined in the May Settlement) for the release of the amounts held in the Escrow Account (as defined in the May Settlement) to be paid to UBS in partial satisfaction of the Multi-Strat Payment on the date that is ten (10) business days following the Order Date; and (ii) Multi-Strat will pay UBS the remainder of the Multi-Strat Payment in immediately available funds on the date that is ten (10) business days following the Order Date, provided that, for the avoidance of doubt, the amounts held in the Escrow Account will not be paid to UBS until and unless the remainder of the Multi-Strat Payment is made.

(c) Subject to applicable law, HCMLP will use reasonable efforts to (i) cause CDO Fund to pay the Insurance Proceeds in full to UBS as soon as practicable, but no later than within 5 business days of CDO Fund actually receiving the Insurance Proceeds from or on behalf of Sentinel; (ii) if Sentinel refuses to pay the Insurance Proceeds, take legal action reasonably designed to recover the Insurance Proceeds or the MSCF Interests or to return the Transferred Assets to the Funds to satisfy the Phase I Judgment and in addition shall provide reasonable assistance to UBS in connection with any legal action UBS takes to recover the Insurance Proceeds or to return the Transferred Assets to the Funds to satisfy the Phase I Judgment or obtain rights to the MSCF interests, including but not limited to the redemption payments in connection with the MSCF Interests; (iii) cooperate with UBS and participate (as applicable) in the investigation or prosecution of claims or requests for injunctive relief against the Funds, Multi-Strat, Sentinel, James Dondero, Isaac Leventon, Scott Ellington, Andrew Dean, Christopher Walter, Jean Paul Sevilla, Matthew DiOrio, Katie Irving, and/or any other current or former employee or director of the Funds or Sentinel and/or any other former employee or former director of any of the HCMLP Parties that is believed to be involved with the Purchase Agreement, Insurance Policy, Transferred Assets, the transfer of the MSCF Interests, or any potentially fraudulent transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel, excluding the individuals listed on the schedule provided to UBS on March 25, 2021 (the "HCMLP Excluded Employees"); (iv) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide UBS with all business and trustee contacts at the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd, if any, that are actually known by the Debtor after reasonable inquiry; (v) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide UBS with a copy of the governing documents, prospectuses, and indenture agreements for the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd, as applicable, that are in the Debtor's actual possession, custody, or control, (vi) as soon as reasonably practicable, provide, to the extent possible, any CUSIP numbers of the securities of the Funds, HFP, Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd, Eastland CLO Ltd, Grayson CLO Ltd, Valhalla CLO Ltd, and Governance Re Ltd., as applicable, including information regarding the location and amount of any cash related to those entities' holdings, in each case only to the extent actually known by the Debtor after reasonable inquiry; (vii) cooperate with UBS to assign or convey any such assets described in Section 1(c)(vi) or any other assets owned or controlled by the Funds and/or HFP, including for avoidance of doubt any additional assets currently unknown to the Debtor that the Debtor discovers in the future after the Agreement Effective Date; (viii) respond as promptly as reasonably possible to requests by UBS for access to relevant documents and approve as promptly as reasonably possible requests for access to relevant documents from third parties as needed with respect to the Transferred Assets, the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the

MSCF Interests and any other assets currently or formerly held by the Funds or HFP, including without limitation the requests listed in Appendix A (provided, however, that the provision of any such documents or access will be subject to the common interest privilege and will not constitute a waiver of any attorney-client or other privilege in favor of HCMLP) that are in the Debtor's actual possession, custody, or control; (ix) preserve all documents in HCMLP's possession, custody, or control regarding or relating to the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the MSCF Interests, or any transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel, including but not limited to the documents requested in Appendix A, from 2016 to present, and issue a litigation hold to all individuals deemed reasonably necessary regarding the same; and (x) otherwise use reasonable efforts to assist UBS to collect its Phase I Judgment against the Funds and HFP and assets the Funds and/or HFP may own, or have a claim to under applicable law ahead of all other creditors of the Funds and HFP; provided, however, that, from and after the date hereof, HCMLP shall not be required to incur any out-of-pocket fees or expenses, including, but not limited to, those fees and expenses for outside consultants and professionals (the "Reimbursable Expenses"), in connection with any provision of this Section 1(c) in excess of $3,000,000 (the "Expense Cap"), and provided further that, for every dollar UBS recovers from the Funds (other than the assets related to Greenbriar CLO Ltd. or Greenbriar CLO Corp.), Sentinel, Multi-Strat (other than the amounts set forth in Section 1(b) hereof), or any other person or entity described in Section 1(c)(iii) in connection with any claims UBS has that arise out of or relate to the Phase I Judgment, the Purchase Agreement, the Insurance Policy, the Transferred Assets, the MSCF Interests, or the Insurance Proceeds (the "UBS Recovery"), UBS will reimburse HCMLP ten percent of the UBS Recovery for the Reimbursable Expenses incurred by HCMLP, subject to: (1) the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date and (2) UBS's receipt and review of invoices and time records (which may be redacted as reasonably necessary) for outside consultants and professionals in connection with such efforts described in this Section 1(c), up to but not exceeding the Expense Cap after any disputes regarding the Reimbursable Expenses have been resolved pursuant to procedures to be agreed upon, or absent an agreement, in a manner directed by the Bankruptcy Court; and provided further that in any proceeding over the reasonableness of the Reimbursable Expenses, the losing party shall be obligated to pay the reasonable fees and expenses of the prevailing party; and provided further that any litigation in which HCMLP is a co-plaintiff with UBS or a plaintiff pursuing claims on behalf of or for UBS's benefit pursuant to this Section 1(c) shall be conducted in consultation with UBS, including but not limited to the selection of necessary outside consultants and professionals to assist in such litigation; and provided further that UBS shall have the right to approve HCMLP's selection of outside consultants and professionals to assist in any litigation in which HCMLP is a co-plaintiff with UBS or a plaintiff pursuing claims on behalf of or for UBS's benefit pursuant to this Section 1(c).

(d) Redeemer Appeal.

(i) On the Agreement Effective Date, provided that neither the Redeemer Committee nor any entities acting on its behalf or with any assistance from or coordination with the Redeemer Committee have objected to this Agreement or the 9019 Motion (as defined below), UBS shall withdraw with prejudice its appeal of the Order Approving Debtor's Settlement with (A) the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund (Claim No. 72) and (B) the Highland Crusader Funds (Claim No. 81), and Authorizing Actions Consistent Therewith [Docket No. 1273] (the "Redeemer Appeal"); and

(ii) The Parties have stipulated to extend the deadline for the filing of any briefs in the Redeemer Appeal to June 30, 2021 and will agree to such further extensions as necessary to facilitate this Settlement Agreement.

(e) As of the Agreement Effective Date, the restrictions and obligations set forth in the May Settlement, other than those in Section 7 thereof, shall be extinguished in their entirety and be of no further force or effect.

(f) On the Agreement Effective Date, the Debtor shall instruct the claims agent in the Bankruptcy Case to adjust the claims register in accordance with this Agreement.

(g) On the Agreement Effective Date, any claim the Debtor may have against Sentinel or any other party, and any recovery related thereto, with respect to the MSCF Interests shall be automatically transferred to UBS, without any further action required by the Debtor. For the avoidance of doubt, the Debtor shall retain any and all other claims it may have against Sentinel or any other party, and the recovery related thereto, unrelated to the MSCF Interests.

2. Definitions.

(a) "Agreement Effective Date" shall mean the date the full amount of the Multi-Strat Payment defined in Section 1(b) above, including without limitation the amounts held in the Escrow Account (as defined in the May Settlement), is actually paid to UBS.

(b) "HCMLP Parties" shall mean (a) HCMLP, in its individual capacity; (b) HCMLP, as manager of Multi-Strat; and (c) Strand.

(c) "Order Date" shall mean the date of an order entered by the Bankruptcy Court approving this Agreement pursuant to a motion filed under Rule 9019 and section 363 of the Bankruptcy Code.

(d) "UBS Parties" shall mean UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch.

3. Releases.

(a) UBS Releases. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the UBS Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue (A) the HCMLP Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), except as expressly set forth below, and (B) the MSCF Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), except as expressly set forth below, for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "UBS Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to (1) the obligations of the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties under this Agreement, including without limitation the allowance of or distributions on account of the UBS Claim or the settlement terms described in Sections 1(a)-(g) above; (2) the Funds or HFP, including for any liability with respect to the prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, and/or Insurance Policy, or such prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, and/or Insurance Policy by UBS; (3) James Dondero or Mark Okada, or any entities, including without limitation Hunter Mountain Investment Trust, Dugaboy Investment Trust, and NexBank, SSB, owned or controlled by either of them, other than the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties (but for the avoidance of doubt, such releases of the HCMLP Parties and MSCF Parties shall be solely with respect to such entities and shall not extend in any way to James Dondero or Mark Okada in their individual capacity or in any other capacity, including but not limited to as an investor, officer, trustee, or director in the HCMLP Parties or MSCF Parties); (4) Sentinel or its subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, assigns, employees, or directors, including James Dondero, Isaac Leventon, Scott Ellington, Andrew Dean, Christopher Walter, Jean Paul Sevilla, Matthew DiOrio, Katie Irving, and/or any other current or former employee or director of the Funds or Sentinel and/or any other former employee or former director of any of the HCMLP Parties that is believed to be involved with the Purchase Agreement, Insurance Policy, MSCF Interests, or Transferred Assets, including for any liability with respect to the prosecution, enforcement, collection, or defense of the Phase I Judgment, Purchase Agreement, the MSCF Interests, any potentially fraudulent transfer of assets from the Funds to Sentinel and/or Insurance Policy, excluding the HCMLP Excluded Employees; (5) the economic rights or interests of UBS in its capacity as an investor, directly or indirectly (including in its capacity as an investment manager and/or investment advisor), in any HCMLP-affiliated entity, including without limitation in the Redeemer Committee and Credit Strat, and/or in such entities' past, present or future subsidiaries and feeders funds (the "UBS Unrelated Investments"); and (6) any actions taken by UBS against any person or entity, including any HCMLP Party or MSCF Party, to enjoin a distribution on the Sentinel Redemption or the transfer of any assets currently held by or within the control of CDO Fund to Sentinel or a subsequent transferee or to seek to compel any action that only such person or entity has standing to pursue or authorize in order to permit UBS to recover the Insurance Proceeds, Transferred Assets, the Phase I Judgment or any recovery against HFP; provided, however, that, from and after the date hereof, any out-of-pocket fees or expenses incurred by HCMLP in connection with this Section 3(a)(6) will be considered Reimbursable Expenses and shall be subject to, and applied against, the Expense Cap as if they were incurred by HCMLP pursuant to Section 1(c) subject to the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date and after any disputes regarding such Reimbursable Expenses have been resolved in the manner described in Section 1(c).

(b) HCMLP Release. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the HCMLP Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue any of the UBS Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "HCMLP Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to the obligations of the UBS Parties under this Agreement or Section 7 of the May Settlement; and (b) the obligations of the UBS Parties in connection with the UBS Unrelated Investments.

(c) Multi-Strat Release. Upon the occurrence of the Agreement Effective Date, and to the maximum extent permitted by law, each of the MSCF Parties hereby forever, finally, fully, unconditionally, irrevocably, and completely releases, relieves, acquits, remises, exonerates, forever discharges, and covenants never to sue any of the UBS Parties and each of their current and former advisors, attorneys, trustees, directors, officers, managers, members, partners, employees, beneficiaries, shareholders, agents, participants, subsidiaries, parents, affiliates, successors, designees, and assigns (each in their capacities as such), for and from any and all claims, debts, liabilities, demands, obligations, promises, acts, agreements, liens, losses, costs and expenses (including, without limitation, attorneys' fees and related costs), damages, injuries, suits, actions, and causes of action of whatever kind or nature, whether known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, matured or unmatured, liquidated or unliquidated, contingent or fixed, at law or in equity, or statutory or otherwise, including, without limitation, any claims, defenses, and affirmative defenses, whether known or unknown, including, without limitation, those that have been or could have been alleged or asserted in the State Court Action or the Bankruptcy Case (collectively, the "Multi-Strat Released Claims"), provided, however, that notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein, such releases shall not apply to the obligations of the UBS Parties under this Agreement or Section 7 of the May Settlement.

4. No Third Party Beneficiaries. Except for the parties released by this Agreement, no other person or entity shall be deemed a third-party beneficiary of this Agreement.

5. UBS Covenant Not to Sue. Subject to the occurrence of the Agreement Effective date, if UBS ever controls any HCMLP-affiliated defendant in the State Court Action by virtue of the prosecution, enforcement, or collection of the Phase I Judgment (collectively, the "Controlled State Court Defendants"), UBS covenants on behalf of itself and the Controlled State Court Defendants, if any, that neither UBS nor the Controlled State Court Defendants will assert or pursue any claims that any Controlled State Court Defendant has or may have against any of the HCMLP Parties; provided, however, that nothing shall prohibit UBS or a Controlled State Court Defendant from taking any of the actions set forth in Section 3(a)(1)-(6); provided further, however, if and to the extent UBS receives any distribution from any Controlled State Court Defendant that is derived from a claim by a Controlled State Court Defendant against the Debtor, subject to the exceptions set forth in Section 3(a), which distribution is directly attributable to any property the Controlled State Court Defendant receives from the Debtor and separate and distinct from property owned or controlled by CDO Fund, SOHC, or Multi-Strat, then such recovery shall be credited against all amounts due from the Debtor's estate on account of the UBS Claim allowed pursuant to Section 1(a) of this Agreement, or if such claim has been paid in full, shall be promptly turned over to the Debtor or its successors or assigns.

6. Agreement Subject to Bankruptcy Court Approval.

(a) The force and effect of this Agreement and the Parties' obligations hereunder are conditioned in all respects on the approval of this Agreement and the releases herein by the Bankruptcy Court. The Parties agree to use reasonable efforts to have this Agreement expeditiously approved by the Bankruptcy Court by cooperating in the preparation and prosecution of a mutually agreeable motion and proposed order (the "9019 Motion") to be filed by the Debtor no later than five business days after execution of this Agreement by all Parties unless an extension is agreed to by both parties.

7. Representations and Warranties.

(a) Each UBS Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the UBS Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any UBS Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such UBS Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any UBS Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such UBS Party.

(b) Each HCMLP Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the HCMLP Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any HCMLP Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such HCMLP Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any HCMLP Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such HCMLP Party.

(c) Each MSCF Party represents and warrants that (i) it has full authority to enter into this Agreement and to release the Multi-Strat Released Claims and has not sold, transferred, or assigned any Multi-Strat Released Claim to any other person or entity, and (ii) no person or entity other than such MSCF Party has been, is, or will be authorized to bring, pursue, or enforce any Multi-Strat Released Claim on behalf of, for the benefit of, or in the name of (whether directly or derivatively) such MSCF Party.

8. No Admission of Liability. The Parties acknowledge that there is a bona fide dispute with respect to the UBS Claim. Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed, expressly or by implication, as an admission of liability, fault, or wrongdoing by HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, UBS, or any other person, and the execution of this Agreement does not constitute an admission of liability, fault, or wrongdoing on the part of HCMLP, the MSCF Parties, Strand, UBS, or any other person.

9. Successors-in-Interest. This Agreement shall be binding upon and shall inure to the benefit of each of the Parties and their representatives, successors, and assigns.

10. Notice. Each notice and other communication hereunder shall be in writing and will, unless otherwise subsequently directed in writing, be delivered by email and overnight delivery, as set forth below, and will be deemed to have been given on the date following such mailing.

11. Advice of Counsel. Each of the Parties represents that such Party has: (a) been adequately represented by independent legal counsel of its own choice, throughout all of the negotiations that preceded the execution of this Agreement; (b) executed this Agreement upon the advice of such counsel; (c) read this Agreement, and understands and assents to all the terms and conditions contained herein without any reservations; and (d) had the opportunity to have this Agreement and all the terms and conditions contained herein explained by independent counsel, who has answered any and all questions asked of such counsel, or which could have been asked of such counsel, including, but not limited to, with regard to the meaning and effect of any of the provisions of this Agreement.

12. Entire Agreement. This Agreement contains the entire agreement and understanding concerning the subject matter of this Agreement, and supersedes and replaces all prior negotiations and agreements, written or oral and executed or unexecuted, concerning such subject matter. Each of the Parties acknowledges that no other Party, nor any agent of or attorney for any such Party, has made any promise, representation, or warranty, express or implied, written or oral, not otherwise contained in this Agreement to induce any Party to execute this Agreement. The Parties further acknowledge that they are not executing this Agreement in reliance on any promise, representation, or warranty not contained in this Agreement, and that any such reliance would be unreasonable. This Agreement will not be waived or modified except by an agreement in writing signed by each Party or duly authorized representative of each Party.

13. No Party Deemed Drafter. The Parties acknowledge that the terms of this Agreement are contractual and are the result of arm's-length negotiations between the Parties and their chosen counsel. Each Party and its counsel cooperated in the drafting and preparation of this Agreement. In any construction to be made of this Agreement, the Agreement will not be construed against any Party.

14. Future Cooperation. The Parties agree to cooperate and execute such further documentation as is reasonably necessary to effectuate the intent of this Agreement.

15. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts with the same force and effect as if executed in one complete document. Each Party's signature hereto will signify acceptance of, and agreement to, the terms and provisions contained in this Agreement.

Photographic, electronic, and facsimile copies of signed counterparts may be used in lieu of the originals of this Agreement for any purpose.

16. Governing Law; Venue; Attorneys' Fees and Costs. The Parties agree that this Agreement will be governed by and will be construed according to the laws of the State of New York without regard to conflict-of-law principles. Each of the Parties hereby submits to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court during the pendency of the Bankruptcy Case and thereafter to the exclusive jurisdiction of the state and federal courts located in the Borough of Manhattan, New York, with respect to any disputes arising from or out of this Agreement. In any action to enforce this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover its reasonable and necessary attorneys' fees and costs (including experts).

OUR FOUNDER

RETURN TO ABOUT (/ABOUT/)

Warren Hellman: One of the good guys

Warren Hellman was a devoted family man, highly successful businessman, active philanthropist, dedicated musician, arts patron, endurance athlete and all-around good guy. Born in New York City in 1934, he grew up in the Bay Area, graduating from the University of California at Berkeley. After serving in the U.S. Army and attending Harvard Business School, Warren began his finance career at Lehman Brothers, becoming the youngest partner in the firm's history at age 26 and subsequently serving as President. After a distinguished career on Wall Street, Warren moved back west and co-founded Hellman & Friedman, building it into one of the industry's leading private equity firms.

Warren deeply believed in the power of people to accomplish incredible things and used his success to improve and enrich the lives of countless people. Throughout his career, Warren helped found or seed many successful businesses including Matrix Partners, Jordan Management Company, Farallon Capital Management and Hall Capital Partners.

Within the community, Warren and his family were generous supporters of dozens of organizations and causes in the arts, public education, civic life, and public health, including creating and running the San Francisco Free Clinic. Later in life, Warren became an accomplished 5-string banjo player and found great joy in sharing the love of music with others. In true form, he made something larger of this avocation to benefit others by founding the Hardly Strictly Bluegrass Festival, an annual three-day, free music festival that draws hundreds of thousands of people together from around the Bay Area.

An accomplished endurance athlete, Warren regularly completed 100-mile runs, horseback rides and combinations of the two. He also was an avid skier and national caliber master ski racer and served as president of the U.S. Ski Team in the late 1970s, and is credited with helping revitalize the Sugar Bowl ski resort in the California Sierras.

In short, Warren Hellman embodied the ideal of living life to the fullest. He had an active mind and body, and a huge heart. We are lucky to call him our founder. Read more about Warren. (https://hf.com/wp-content/uploads/2015/09/Warren-Hellman-News-Release.pdf)

August 03, 2020

Chicago, IL (Tim Boyle/Bloomberg)

In a sign of the times, GCM Grosvenor will become a public company through a SPAC.

The Chicago-based alternative investments firm is planning to go public by merging with a special purpose acquisition company in a deal valued at $2 billion. The 50-year-old firm has $57 billion in assets in private equity, infrastructure, real estate, credit, and absolute return investments.

"We have long valued having external shareholders and we wanted to preserve the accountability and focus that comes with that," Michael Sacks, GCM Grosvenor's chairman and CEO, said in a statement.

GCM Grosvenor will combine with CF Finance Special Acquisition Corp, a SPAC backed by Cantor Fitzgerald, according to an announcement from both companies on Monday. After the company goes public, Sacks will continue to lead GCM Grosvenor, which is owned by management and Hellman & Friedman, a private equity firm. Hellman & Friedman, which has owned a minority stake of the Chicago asset manager since 2007, will sell its equity as

Debt origination for an affiliate of Simon Property Group Inc. and Farallon Capital Management

Date	June 2007
Asset Class	Retail
Asset Size	1,808,506 Sq. Ft.
Sponsor	Simon Property Group Inc. / Farallon Capital Management
Transaction Type	Refinance
Total Debt Amount	Lehman Brothers: $121 million JP Morgan: $200 million

Transaction Overview

- In June 2007, Lehman Brothers co-originated a loan in the aggregate amount of $321 million (Lehman portion: $121 million) with JP Morgan to a special purpose affiliate of a joint venture between Simon Property Group Inc ("Simon") and Farallon Capital Management ("Farallon") secured by the shopping center known as Gurnee Mills Mall (the "Property") located in Gurnee, IL .
- The Property consists of a one-story, 200 store discount mega-mall comprised of 1,808,506 square feet anchored by Burlington Coat Factory, Marshalls, Bed Bath & Beyond and Kohls among other national retailers. Built in 1991, the Property underwent a $5 million interior renovation in addition to a $71 million redevelopment between 2004 and 2005. As of March 2007, the Property had a in-line occupancy of 99.5%.

Lehman Brothers Role

- Simon and Farallon comprised the sponsorship which eventually merged with The Mills Corporation in early 2007 for $25.25 per common share in cash. The total value of the transaction was approximately $1.64 billion for all of the outstanding common stock, and approximately $7.9 billion including assumed debt and preferred equity.
- Lehman and JP Morgan subsequently co-originated $321 million loan at 79.2% LTV based on an appraisal completed in March by Cushman & Wakefield. The Loan was used to refinance the indebtedness secured by the Property.

Sponsorship Overview

- The Mills Corporation, based in Chevy Chase MD is a developer owner and manager of a diversified portfolio of retail destinations including regional shopping malls and entertainment centers. They currently own 38 properties in the United States totaling 47 million square feet.

Re: Update & Notice of Distribution

Dear Highland Crusader Funds Stakeholder,

As you know, in October 2020, the Bankruptcy Court approved a settlement of the Redeemer Committee's and the Crusader Funds' claims against Highland Capital Management L.P. ("HCM"), as a result of which the Redeemer Committee was allowed a general unsecured claim of $137,696,610 against HCM and the Crusader Funds were allowed a general unsecured claim of $50,000 against HCM (collectively, the "Claims"). In addition, as part of the settlement, various interests in the Crusader Funds held by HCM and certain of its affiliates are to be extinguished (the "Extinguished Interests"), and the Redeemer Committee and the Crusader Funds received a general release from HCM and a waiver by HCM of any claim to distributions or fees that it might otherwise receive from the Crusader Funds (the "Released Claims" and, collectively with the Extinguished Interests, the "Retained Rights").

A timely appeal of the settlement was taken by UBS (the "UBS Appeal) in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division. However, the Bankruptcy Court subsequently approved a settlement between HCM and UBS, resulting in dismissal of the UBS Appeal with prejudice on June 14, 2021.

On April 30, 2021, the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee consummated the sale of the Claims against HCM and the majority of the remaining investments held by the Crusader Funds to Jessup Holdings LLC ("Jessup") for $78 million in cash, which was paid in full to the Crusader Funds at closing. The sale specifically excluded the Crusader Funds' investment in Cornerstone Healthcare Group Holding Inc. and excluded certain specified provisions of the settlement agreement with HCM (the "Settlement Agreement"), including, but not limited to, the Retained Rights. The sale of the Claims and investments was made with no holdbacks or escrows.

The sale to Jessup resulted from a solicitation of offers to purchase the Claims commenced by Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management LLC ("A&M CRF"), as Investment Manager of the Crusader Funds, in consultation with the Redeemer Committee. Ultimately, the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee entered exclusive negotiations with Jessup, culminating in the sale to Jessup.

A&M CRF, pursuant to the Plan and Scheme and with the approval of House Hanover, the Redeemer Committee and the Board of the Master Fund, now intends to distribute the proceeds from the Jessup transaction ($78 million), net of any applicable tax withholdings and with no reserves for the Extinguished Claims or the Released Claims. In addition, the distribution will include approximately $9.4 million in proceeds that have been redistributed due to the cancellation and extinguishment of the interests and shares in the Crusader Funds held by HCM, Charitable DAF and Eames in connection with the Settlement Agreement, resulting in a total gross distribution of $87.4 million. Distributions will be based on net asset value as of June 30, 2021.

Please note that A&M CRF intends to make the distributions by wire transfer no later than July 31, 2021. Please confirm your wire instructions on or before July 20, 2021. If there are any revisions to your wire information, please use the attached template to provide SEI and A&M CRF your updated information on investor letterhead. This information should be sent on or before July 20, 2021 to Alvarez & Marsal CRF and SEI at CRFInvestor@alvarezandmarsal.com and AIFS-IS_Crusader@seic.com, respectively.

The wire payments will be made to the investor bank account on file with an effective and record date of July 1, 2021. Should you have any questions, please contact SEI or A&M CRF at the e-mail addresses listed above.

Sincerely,

Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management, LLC

Re: Update & Notice of Distribution

Dear Highland Crusader Funds Stakeholder,

As you know, in October 2020, the Bankruptcy Court approved a settlement of the Redeemer Committee's and the Crusader Funds' claims against Highland Capital Management L.P. ("HCM"), as a result of which the Redeemer Committee was allowed a general unsecured claim of $137,696,610 against HCM and the Crusader Funds were allowed a general unsecured claim of $50,000 against HCM (collectively, the "Claims"). In addition, as part of the settlement, various interests in the Crusader Funds held by HCM and certain of its affiliates are to be extinguished (the "Extinguished Interests"), and the Redeemer Committee and the Crusader Funds received a general release from HCM and a waiver by HCM of any claim to distributions or fees that it might otherwise receive from the Crusader Funds (the "Released Claims" and, collectively with the Extinguished Interests, the "Retained Rights").

A timely appeal of the settlement was taken by UBS (the "UBS Appeal) in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division. However, the Bankruptcy Court subsequently approved a settlement between HCM and UBS, resulting in dismissal of the UBS Appeal with prejudice on June 14, 2021.

On April 30, 2021, the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee consummated the sale of the Claims against HCM and the majority of the remaining investments held by the Crusader Funds to Jessup Holdings LLC ("Jessup") for $78 million in cash, which was paid in full to the Crusader Funds at closing. The sale specifically excluded the Crusader Funds' investment in Cornerstone Healthcare Group Holding Inc. and excluded certain specified provisions of the settlement agreement with HCM (the "Settlement Agreement"), including, but not limited to, the Retained Rights. The sale of the Claims and investments was made with no holdbacks or escrows.

The sale to Jessup resulted from a solicitation of offers to purchase the Claims commenced by Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management LLC ("A&M CRF"), as Investment Manager of the Crusader Funds, in consultation with the Redeemer Committee. Ultimately, the Crusader Funds and the Redeemer Committee entered exclusive negotiations with Jessup, culminating in the sale to Jessup.

A&M CRF, pursuant to the Plan and Scheme and with the approval of House Hanover, the Redeemer Committee and the Board of the Master Fund, now intends to distribute the proceeds from the Jessup transaction ($78 million), net of any applicable tax withholdings and with no reserves for the Extinguished Claims or the Released Claims. In addition, the distribution will include approximately $9.4 million in proceeds that have been redistributed due to the cancellation and extinguishment of the interests and shares in the Crusader Funds held by HCM, Charitable DAF and Eames in connection with the Settlement Agreement, resulting in a total gross distribution of $87.4 million. Distributions will be based on net asset value as of June 30, 2021.

Please note that A&M CRF intends to make the distributions by wire transfer no later than July 31, 2021. Please confirm your wire instructions on or before July 20, 2021. Reorganized Debtor.	)

GLOBAL NOTES TO POST CONFIRMATION REPORT

The Reorganized Debtor has filed the attached post-confirmation report (the "PCR") in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division (the "Court"), on behalf of debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ) (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The Reorganized Debtor prepared the PCR with the assistance of the Reorganized Debtor's employees, advisors, and professionals. The PCR was prepared solely for the purpose of complying with the post-confirmation quarterly reporting requirements established by the United States Trustee Program (see https://www.justice.gov/ust/chapter-11-operating-reports). The PCR should not be relied upon by any persons for any information in connection with current or future financial conditions or events relating to the Reorganized Debtor or its estate.

The financial information contained in the PCR is preliminary, unaudited, limited in scope, and is not prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America nor in accordance with other applicable non-bankruptcy law. In preparing the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor relied on financial data from the books and records available to it at the time of such preparation, as well as certain filings on the docket in the Bankruptcy Case. Although the Reorganized Debtor made commercially reasonable efforts to ensure the accuracy and completeness of the PCR, inadvertent errors or omissions may exist. The Reorganized Debtor reserves the right to amend and supplement the PCR as may be necessary or appropriate.

Part 2: Preconfirmation Professional Fees and Expenses

In Section A of the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor listed the bankruptcy related professionals employed in connection with the Bankruptcy Case.

In Section B of the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor listed non-bankruptcy professionals, those that would have been retained absent the Bankruptcy Case, and the ordinary course professionals ("OCP"). Hunton Andrews Kurth LLP ("Hunton") and Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr

[1] The Reorganized Debtor's last four digits of its taxpayer identification number are (6725). The headquarters and service address for the above-captioned Reorganized Debtor is 100 Crescent Court, Suite 1850, Dallas, TX 75201.

LLP ("Wilmer Hale") were originally ordinary course professionals but were later employed professionals. The amounts listed for Hunton and Wilmer Hale include the OCP payments and employed professional payments.

In Section C of the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor totals all payments included in Sections A and B, along with payments made to professional employed by the official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee").

The approved current quarter, approved cumulative, and paid cumulative will have the same amount listed due to approval and payment of final fee applications.

Part 3: Recoveries of the Holders of Claims and Interests under Confirmed Plan

The payments made to holders of General Unsecured Claims were disbursed from the Claimant Trust, but for presentation purposes, have been included in Part 3 of the post-confirmation report for the Reorganized Debtor.

The presentation contained in this PCR does not reflect the material and necessary reserves that will be taken in accordance with Reorganized Debtor's governing documents and the Plan.

The Debtor reserves all right to object to any claim in accordance with the terms of the Plan.

[1] Bank cash for Claimant Trust, HCMLP (debtor up to August 11, 2021; re-organized from August 11, 2021), Highland Litigation Trust Sub-Trust ("Litigation Trust"), HCMLP GP LLC and including cash at brokerage account(s), cash equivalents as well as cash or equivalent reserves for earned operating obligations, if applicable. All amounts herein EXCLUDE the Highland Indemnity Trust ("Indemnity Trust") and the cash held within the Disputed Claims Reserve, which are described separately, as well as any other segregated agency or shareholder representative account(s) for which cash is held solely for the benefit of others.

[2] Based upon the baseless filed motion seeking to litigate against indemnified parties and threats from vexatious parties, the Claimant Trustee expects to fund significant additional amounts into the Indemnity Trust.

Item 2: Class 8 / Class 9 Summary (in $ millions)

Note that payments described within Part 3 of the quarterly operating report include payments to classes 6, 7, 8, and 9, whereas payments below only include payments to classes 8 and 9, as applicable.

Class 8 / 9 Summary (in $ millions)	Cash Payments through March 31, 2023	Disputed Claims Reserve	Remaining [3]
Class 8	$263.4	$11.6	$28.7
Class 9	$0.0	$0.0	$98.8
Classes 8 + 9	$263.4	$11.6	$127.4

[3] Face amount of allowed class 8/9 claims PLUS face amount of pending class 8/9 claims LESS cumulative payments to classes 8/9 LESS cumulative reserves for classes 8/9. Amounts EXCLUDE accrued interest on claim balances as well as amounts of pending admin priority claims, and unliquidated pending class 8/9 claims. Any future distributions to classes 8 and 9 are subject to satisfaction of Claimant Trust senior obligations.

Item 3: Remaining disputed/expunged or pending claims (in $ millions)

Amounts reserved within the Disputed Claims Reserve are in no way indicative of the value or validity of the claim, but rather are simply established based on the face amount of the claim and the proportionate calculation of amounts already distributed to actual allowed claimholders.

Party	Claim number(s)	Face amount	Reserved in Disputed Claims Reserve	Unreserved
Highland CLO Management, Ltd.	Scheduled/Disputed	$10.1	($9.2)	$1.0
Patrick Daugherty [4]	205	$2.7	($2.4)	$0.3
CLO Holdco, Ltd. [5]	254	Unliquidated	$0.0	See note
HCRE Partners, LLC [6]	146	Unliquidated	$0.0	See note
Hunter Covitz [7]	186	Unliquidated	$0.0	See note
Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, LP and NexPoint Advisors, LP [8]	239	$6.7	$0.0	$6.7
Total		$19.5	($11.6)	$7.9

[4] Proof of claim has been partially settled, with the exception of the Reserved Claim as described in the settlement agreement with Mr. Daugherty [Docket No. 3298]. Claimant may assert additional amounts may be owed.

[5] CLO Holdco, Ltd., initially filed proof of claim 133 and subsequently amended that claim to $0.00 in open court and then by filing proof of claim 198. HCMLP relied on that agreement and amendment. Subsequently, CLO Holdco, Ltd., sought to amend claim 198 to an estimated amount of $3.8 million by filing proof of claim 254. The Litigation Trust objected to the attempted amended claim, and CLO Holdco, Ltd.'s claim was adjudicated at $0.00. CLO HoldCo, Ltd., has appealed.

[6] HCRE Partners, LLC filed a motion to withdraw proof of claim 146. HCMLP contested that the withdrawal of the claim. The matter is sub judice.

[7] Proof of claim 186 was expunged, but alleged transferee of expunged claim has appealed; appeal pending.

[8] Proof of claim 239, which is an administrative priority claim, was expunged and judgment was granted against alleged creditor, but alleged creditor has appealed.

Item 4: Interest-bearing debt outstanding as of March 31, 2023 (in $ millions)

No interest-bearing debt outstanding. Exit Facility retired in 2022. [9]

[9] Encompasses Claimant Trust, HCMLP (re-organized), Litigation Trust, HCMLP GP LLC, but does not look-through to their respective subsidiaries and/or private funds or companies held by private funds.

Item 5: Remaining investments, notes, and other assets [10]

Asset (alphabetic sorting, except "Other misc.")	Description
Breach of contract judgment	Direct asset. Bonded judgment against Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, LP and NexPoint Advisors, LP, pending appeal.
Contempt civil penalty	Direct asset. Civil penalty owed by Mr. Dondero from the first of two contempt orders against him (his second contempt civil penalty was already received from subsidiary of DAF).
Contingent rights, post-sale	Residual contingent rights tied to milestones from a company that was sold Pre-Petition – direct and indirect interests through managed fund(s).
Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF")	Majority-owned by HCMLP or Claimant Trust (directly or indirectly) but controlled by two independent Guernsey-based directors – investments of this entity are predominantly subordinated notes of Acis-managed CLOs, whose remaining value is predominantly cash. Remaining distributions are held up due to litigation against Acis-related entities and HCLOF by Mr. Dondero's entities.
NHT.U (TSXV exchange)	Direct asset. Hospitality REIT managed by a subsidiary of NexPoint Advisors, LP.
NHT Holdco LLC	Hospitality REIT managed by a subsidiary of NexPoint Advisors, LP. Indirect interests held through a Delaware LLC created for the sole purpose of holding shares of the hospitality REIT. Mr. Dondero is the manager of the entity. HCMLP has demanded shares as provided in the LLC agreement but has yet to receive delivery of the shares.
Note from Hunter Mountain Investment Trust	Direct asset. Defaulted note. Subject to Litigation Trustee collecting.
Note from The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy")	Direct asset. Term note. Last receipt in December 2022. Next scheduled receipt in December 2023.
Notes from Mr. Dondero + his affiliates (except Dugaboy)	Direct asset. Demand notes and accelerated term notes, plus costs of collection. Subject to Claimant Trust collection litigation.
Post-sale escrows	Residual escrow(s) remaining related to the monetizations of two private companies. Direct and indirect interests through managed fund(s).
Private companies	Direct and indirect interests in two privately held companies.
Private equity fund interests	Direct or indirect interests in two private funds that make Oil & Gas and Healthcare-related investments, respectively.
SE Multifamily Holdings LLC	Direct asset. Membership interests. Subject to Claimant Trust litigation.
Other misc.	Future revenue streams; receivables; misc. investments; cash (unrestricted and reserved); litigation claims of the Litigation Trust; indemnification claims.

[10] Listing is not comprehensive, but rather is intended to capture potentially significant asset categories that have yet to be fully monetized. Listing includes assets of the Claimant Trust, HCMLP (re-organized), Litigation Trust, and HCMLP GP LLC. Descriptions herein indicate whether the asset is directly owned by one or more of these entities and/or whether the asset is indirectly beneficially owned.

PETITION FOR PERMISSION TO APPEAL
(DIRECT APPEAL FROM BANKRUPTCY COURT 28 U.S.C. § 158(d))

NexPoint Advisors, L.P. and Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. n/k/a NexPoint Asset Management, L.P. (the "Petitioners" or the "Appellants"), respectfully request that the Court grant them permission to appeal the Plan Conforming Order (defined below), entered by the Bankruptcy Court upon remand from this Court, directly to this Court pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 5 and 28 U.S.C. § 158(d)(2)(A).

I. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

A. THE ORIGINAL CONFIRMATION ORDER

This is an appeal after remand of an order of the Bankruptcy Court confirming a Chapter 11 plan on "cramdown" over the objection of the Appellant and various others.

On February 22, 2021, the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Bankruptcy Court") entered that certain Order (i) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified); and (ii) Granting Related Relief (the "Confirmation Order"), by which the Bankruptcy Court confirmed the Debtor's Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [docket no.

1808], as further modified (the "Plan"), filed by Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Debtor").

A true and correct copy of the Confirmation Order, which includes the Plan as an original part thereof, is attached hereto as Exhibit "A."

The Debtor filed its voluntary Chapter 11 bankruptcy case (the "Bankruptcy Case") on October 16, 2019. The Debtor was a multi-billion dollar global investment advisor and manager of various funds, and is a registered investment advisor under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940. See Confirmation Order at p. 6. Among other assets that the Debtor manages is more than $1 billion invested by third parties in collateral loan obligation investment vehicles (the "CLOs"). See id. The CLOs own the underlying assets, usually securities, and the Debtor manages those assets for the CLOs, including by making decisions as to when to sell CLO assets, pursuant to a series of portfolio management agreements between the Debtor and the CLOs. See id.

The Plan is a wind down and liquidation plan. The Plan bifurcates the estate into two entities: (i) a claimant trust is created for the benefit of creditors (and potentially for the benefit of equity interest holders), which trust is vested with most assets of the estate, including causes of action, see id. at pp. 5-6; and (ii) the Debtor is reorganized and retains various business assets, including its management rights of the CLOs. See id. The claimant trust will own the reorganized Debtor. See id.

The reorganized Debtor will liquidate and wind-down its assets in approximately two (2) years after confirmation, during which time it will continue to manage the CLOs and various other investments that it holds or manages. See id. at p. 47. This is significant because the Debtor will continue in business postconfirmation, which implicates two aspects of the Plan that are directly relevant to this Petition.

First, the Plan originally (prior to remand) contained a broad exculpation provision exculpating the Debtor, its professionals, its general partner, and that partner's board members, among many others, from any claims for negligence. See Exhibit "A" at Plan pp. 47-48. This exculpation extended not only to case administration matters, but also to ordinary business matters and also to post-confirmation matters related to the implementation of the Plan. See id. The Appellants objected to the Plan's exculpation provisions because the Appellants themselves are registered advisors who advise many publicly traded funds and other investment vehicles, some of which funds own interests in the CLOs or otherwise have their assets managed by the Debtor. Thus, the Appellants wished to ensure that the Plan did not impermissibly exculpate persons from, among other things, any potential claims related to how they managed the CLOs or other investments.

The Appellants objected to the exculpation provisions of the Plan because those provisions effectuate prohibited third releases (i.e. claims by a non-debtor against a non-debtor) in violation of this Court's precedent in In re Pacific Lumber Co., 584 F.3d 229, 253 (5th Cir. 2009). Pacific Lumber permitted the exculpation of the members of a creditor's committee for actions taken in the bankruptcy case, but it prohibited the exculpation of other persons or professionals. See id. at 253. As discussed below, the Appellants substantially prevailed on this argument in the first appeal of the Confirmation Order to this Court.

Second, the Plan contains a permanent "gatekeeper injunction" directly prohibiting the Appellants by name from commencing or pursuing any claim or cause of action against various protected persons, unless the Bankruptcy Court—purporting to exercise "sole and exclusive" jurisdiction—first determines, after notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action is "colorable." See id. at pp. 50-51. The Appellants objected to any such injunction for postconfirmation matters because the effect of the gatekeeper injunction was to grant a de facto exculpation in violation of the Bankruptcy Code and Pacific Lumber and because the Bankruptcy Court would have no postconfirmation jurisdiction to determine whether a claim or cause of action is "colorable." See In re Craig's Stores of Tex. Inc., 266 F.3d 388, 390 (5th Cir. 2001). Should the Appellants wish to pursue an action arising after confirmation, and the Bankruptcy Court finds that the claim is not "colorable," that means that a court without jurisdiction will have forever decided and prohibited the bringing of the claim.

The Bankruptcy Court rejected these arguments, finding that the Debtor and others needed special protections from alleged vexatious litigation in the form of the "gatekeeper" injunction and other Plan injunction provisions, without which the Debtor would not be able to obtain post-confirmation D&O insurance. See Confirmation Order at pp. 57-59.

B. THIS COURT'S ORIGINAL OPINION

The Appellants and others appealed the Confirmation Order which, after the Bankruptcy Court certified that appeal for a direct appeal to this Court, and this Court granted a petition for direct appeal, proceeded in this Court as Case No. 21-10449 (the "First Appeal").

On August 19, 2022, in the First Appeal, this Court issued its opinion and judgment affirming in part and reversing in part the Confirmation Order with respect to the scope of the Plan's exculpation provisions. Following a motion for rehearing filed by various of the appellants, this Court withdrew its original opinion and entered a subsequent opinion in the First Appeal on September 7, 2022, remanding to the Bankruptcy Court for further proceedings in accordance with the opinion (the "Original Opinion"). A true and correct copy of the Original Opinion is attached hereto as Exhibit "B."

The Original Opinion replaced only one sentence in the prior opinion: "[t]he injunction and gatekeeper provisions are, on the other hand, perfectly lawful" was replaced with: "[w]e now turn to the Plan's injunction and gatekeeper provisions." Exhibit H at p. 4. The Appellants believed this change to be very significant, in that this Court deleted the prior reference to the gatekeeper injunction being "perfectly lawful."

On September 12, 2022, this Court issued its Judgment in the First Appeal (the "Mandate"), a true and correct copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit "C." The Mandate has not been recalled or stayed, the Court denying various appellants' motion for the same.[2]

By the Original Opinion, this Court concluded that the Plan and Confirmation Order violated 11 U.S.C. § 524(e) and Pacific Lumber because the exculpation provisions exceeded the permissible scope and effectuated non-debtor releases in violation of the Bankruptcy Code. See Exhibit B at p. 30. This Court vacated the Plan's exculpation provisions with respect to all exculpated parties except for the Debtor, the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors appointed in the Bankruptcy Case and its members, and the independent directors of the Debtor's general partner for conduct within the scope of their duties. See id. This Court then remanded the matter to the Bankruptcy Court for further proceedings consistent with the Original Opinion.

[2] Both the Appellants and the Debtor filed petitions for certiorari with the United States Supreme Court. As of this filing, and while the Supreme Court has requested responsive briefing, the Supreme Court has not decided whether it would grant review.

The Appellants additionally read the Original Opinion and Mandate as reversing the Bankruptcy Court's gatekeeper injunction, as discussed below, although whether this Court did so was disputed.[3] That is the primary issue on this Appeal.

C. POST-REMAND PROCEEDINGS

On September 9, 2022, the Debtor filed its Motion to Conform Plan (the "Motion to Conform"). A true and correct copy of the Motion to Conform is attached hereto as Exhibit "D." By the Motion to Conform, the Debtor sought an order from the Bankruptcy Court conforming the Confirmation Order to the Original Opinion, arguing that the only change to the Confirmation Order that was necessary was to change the definition of "Exculpated Parties" in the Plan to only the following: "collectively, (i) the Debtor, (ii) the Independent Directors, (iii) the Committee, and (iv) the members of the Committee (in their official capacities)." Exhibit "D" at p. 4.

[3] It was for more clarity on the issue of the gatekeeper injunction that the Appellant sought a rehearing which, as noted above, this Court granted. While the Appellants believed that the Court's opinion on rehearing confirmed that the Court was reversing the Bankruptcy Court on the gatekeeper injunction, this too was disputed and, as discussed below, rejected by the Bankruptcy Court.

Certain parties labeled as the "Funds" (as that term was used in the Original Opinion) filed an objection to the Motion to Conform, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit "E." This objection argued that the Confirmation Order and Plan should be conformed not only to limit the scope of the persons protected by the exculpation provision but that the persons protected by the gatekeeper injunction must be similarly limited in order to comply with the Original Opinion and Mandate; i.e. that the gatekeeper injunction could extend only to the same persons protected by the exculpation provision. Otherwise, the Plan would do through the gatekeeper injunction what this Court had held it could not do through the exculpation provision.

On September 30, 2022, the Appellants filed their Limited Objection of the Advisors to Motion to Conform Plan (the "Objection"). A true and correct copy of the Objection is attached as Exhibit "F." By the Objection, the Appellants joined in the aforementioned objection filed by the funds. The Appellants argued that the Original Opinion did more than strike only the offending provisions of the Plan's exculpation provision, but also that it struck similarly offending provisions in the gatekeeper injunction by, among other things, holding that "the Plan violates § 524(e) . . . insofar as it exculpates and enjoins certain non-debtors." Exhibit B at p. 30 (emphasis added). The Appellants argued that this Court confirmed their view in the Original Opinion when it struck, on rehearing, the prior provision regarding the gatekeeper injunction being "perfectly lawful."

The Appellants also argued that a different provision of the Plan must be struck to conform the Plan to the Original Opinion, that being Article IX of the Plan which applied the Plan's injunctive provisions to successors, including the "Litigation Sub-Trust, and the Claimant Trust and their respective property and interests in property." Exhibit F at p. 3. Finally, the Appellants argued that the Plan should have been conformed to also exclude from the gatekeeper injunction those suits expressly authorized by 28 U.S.C. § 959(a), which provides that "[t]rustees, receivers or managers of any property, including debtors in possession, may be sued, without leave of the court appointing them, with respect to any of their acts or transactions in carrying on business connected with such property." 28 U.S.C. § 959(a). Thus, the Appellants argued that the gatekeeper injunction could not enjoin the bringing of actions expressly permitted by this federal statute.

On October 14, 2022, the Debtor filed its Reply in Support of Motion to Conform Plan, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit "G," in which the Debtor reasserted its argument in the Motion to Conform that no further changes to the Plan and the Confirmation Order were necessitated by this Court's Original Opinion, other than changing the definition of "Exculpated Parties." The Debtor argued that the relief requested by the Appellants in the Objection was inappropriate and that the sole relief provided in the Original Opinion was to remove certain persons from the scope of the Plan's exculpation provisions.

On February 27, 2023, the Bankruptcy Court entered its Memorandum Opinion and Order on Reorganized Debtor's Motion to Conform Plan (the "Plan Conforming Order"). A true and correct copy of the Plan Conforming Order is attached hereto as Exhibit "H." By the Plan Conforming Order, the Bankruptcy Court rejected the Appellants' arguments and conformed the Plan solely with the Debtor's proposed change to the definition of Exculpated Parties, "[t]he court grants the Motion and orders that one change be made to the Plan to conform it to the mandate of the Fifth Circuit: revise the definition of "Exculpated Parties" as proposed in the Motion and no more. Exhibit H at p. 19.

D. THE CERTIFICATION ORDER

The Appellants believed that the Bankruptcy Court erred with respect to the Plan Conforming Order by not conforming the Plan's gatekeeper injunction, as it had the Plan's exculpation provisions.

On March 13, 2022, the Appellants timely filed their Joint Notice of Appeal, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit "I," by which the Appellants appealed the Plan Conforming Order to the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "District Court"), where the Appeal is presently pending as Civil Action Number: 3:23-cv-00573-E (the "District Court Proceeding").

On March 22, 2023, the Appellants and the Debtor filed their Joint Motion for Certification of Direct Appeal to the Fifth Circuit of Order on Reorganized Debtor's Motion to Conform Plan, a true and correct copy of which is attached as Exhibit "J," agreeing that a certification for direct appeal to this Court was proper "because a direct appeal will materially advance the progress of the case or proceeding." Exhibit J at p. 2.

On March 28, 2023, the Bankruptcy Court entered its Order Certifying Direct Appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals of Order on Reorganized Debtor's Motion to Conform Plan (the "Certification Order"). A true and correct copy of the Certification Order is attached hereto as Exhibit "K." By the Certification Order, the Bankruptcy Court certified the Appeal for a direct appeal to this Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158(d)(2)(A)(iii) "because the direct appeal may materially advance the progress of the case or proceeding in which the Appeal is taken." Exhibit K at p. 2.

E. THE ISSUES ON APPEAL

The issues that the Appellants have raised in this Appeal are as follows:

1. Whether the Bankruptcy Court erred as a matter of law, and in violation of this Court's Original Opinion and Mandate, when it failed on remand to order that, in addition to revising the definition of "Exculpated Parties" in the Plan, the definition of "Protected Parties" in the Plan (applicable to the gatekeeper injunction) should also be revised to include only "(i) the Debtor, (ii) the Independent Directors, (iii) the Committee, and (iv) members of the Committee (in their official capacities)" (each as defined in the Plan).

2. Whether the Bankruptcy Court erred as a matter of law, and in violation of this Court's Original Opinion and Mandate, when it failed on remand to order the revision of the Plan to remove the Plan's provision conferring limited qualified immunity on the Debtor's successors (the third paragraph of Article IX.F of the Plan).

3. Whether the Bankruptcy Court erred as a matter of law, and in violation of this Court's Original Opinion and Mandate, when it failed on remand to order the revision of the gatekeeper provisions (the fourth paragraph of Article IX.F of the Plan) to remove from its scope suits and claims expressly permitted by federal statute to be brought against a trustee or debtor-in-possession.

II. RELIEF REQUESTED

The Appellants respectfully petition this Court to grant permission for the Appeal to be heard directly by this Court, bypassing the District Court, as provided for by 28 U.S.C. § 158(d)(2). That section:

> was enacted to provide for direct review of bankruptcy court judgments, orders, or decrees by the applicable court of appeals in cases where the bankruptcy court or the district court certify that there is no controlling decision from the Supreme Court or circuit court, the case involves a matter of public importance, there are conflicting precedents, or an immediate appeal may materially advance the progress of the bankruptcy proceeding.

In re OCA, Inc., 552 F.3d 413, 418 (5th Cir. 2008) (citing 28 U.S.C. § 158(d)(2)(A)(i)-(iii)).

"The two primary goals behind this provision are (i) to provide quicker and less costly means of resolving significant issues that are inevitably bound for the court of appeals, and (ii) to facilitate the development of more binding precedents in bankruptcy law." In re Qimonda AG, 470 B.R. 374, 382-83 (E.D.Va. 2012) (citing H.R. Rep. No. 109-31(7) at 148 (2005), as reprinted in 2005 U.S.L.L.A.N. 88, 206).

In the event that the Bankruptcy Court or the District Court makes the certification under 28 U.S.C. § 158(d)(2), this Court has jurisdiction if it authorizes the direct appeal. Id. As set forth in the Certification Order, the Bankruptcy Court determined that the Appeal meets the requirements for direct appeal because an immediate appeal may materially advance the progress of the case or the proceeding in which the Appeal is taken.

III. DISCUSSION

The ultimate issue in this Appeal is whether the Bankruptcy Court properly conformed the Plan to comply with this Court's Original Opinion and Mandate. It goes without saying that no court is in a better position than this Court to construe and apply its Original Opinion.

The governing statute provides as follows:

> The appropriate court of appeals shall have jurisdiction of appeals described in the first sentence of subsection (a) if the bankruptcy court, the district court, or the bankruptcy appellate panel involved, acting on its own motion or on the request of a party to the judgment, order, or decree described in such first sentence, or all the appellants and appellees (if any) acting jointly, certify that—
>
> > (i) the judgment, order, or decree involves a question of law as to which there is no controlling decision of the court of appeals for the circuit or of the Supreme Court of the United States, or involves a matter of public importance;
> >
> > (ii) the judgment, order, or decree involves a question of law requiring resolution of conflicting decisions; or
> >
> > (iii) an immediate appeal from the judgment, order, or decree may materially advance the progress of the case or proceeding in which the appeal is taken;
>
> and if the court of appeals authorizes the direct appeal of the judgment, order, or decree.

28 U.S.C. 158(d)(2)(A). This Petition is timely under Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 8007(g).

Permission to appeal directly to this Court should be granted because, as agreed to by the Debtor and as certified by the Bankruptcy Court, a direct appeal will materially advance the progress of the case or proceeding in which the Appeal is pending, within the meaning of section 158(d)(2)(A)(iii).

With respect to materially advancing the progress of the case, all parties have stated that they intend to appeal any ruling of the District Court, thus ensuring that this Court will consider this Appeal anyway. The Bankruptcy Court certified the Appeal on this basis. Insofar as this Court will almost certainly be presented with the same Appeal eventually, the Appellants submit that it is in everyone's best interests to proceed with a direct appeal, as the parties will save significant fees and costs, upwards of one year of delay will be avoided, the Bankruptcy Case will move toward finality,[4] and the District Court will be spared being called upon to adjudicate an appeal that will be further appealed to this Court, thus promoting judicial economy.

The Appellants will add that this Appeal also raises an issue of "public importance" and, while there is controlling precedent from this Court in the form of the Original Opinion, the Appellants submits that this Court should clarify and enforce the Original Opinion with respect to the gatekeeper injunction that is involved.

At present, the Appellants are under a final injunction limiting their access to the courts and to seek legal redress to protect themselves and their clients, or to advise their clients to do so, even as the Debtor manages (or managed) billions of dollars of investments that subjected the Debtor to a large number of contractual, statutory, and fiduciary duties and obligations. Limiting one's access to the federal courts to enforce federal law, especially when that limitation is issued by an Article I court with questionable jurisdiction, at best, is a most serious matter that merits this Court's prompt review.

IV. PRAYER

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, the Appellants respectfully request that the Court, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158(d), permit the Appeal to proceed directly in this Court.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 26th day of April, 2023.

I. INTRODUCTION[1]

The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Movant") files this Motion to Preserve Evidence and Compel the Forensic Imaging of James P. Seery, Jr.'s iPhone (and any other of his Apple devices sharing the same Apple ID) to preserve the ESI contained on that iPhone and to permit the recovery of text messages Mr. Seery admits to deleting.

On February 16, 2023, Mr. Morris of Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones wrote in his capacity as Mr. Seery's personal counsel in responding to a subpoena in another matter. With respect to Mr. Seery's iPhone, Mr. Morris stated the following:

> 1. Mr. Seery's iPhone is personal in nature. While it is backed up to iCloud, that back-up does not contain deleted items, whether deleted manually or as part of an automatic setting.
> 2. The automatic text deletion setting is currently set at one year; texts that are manually or automatically deleted are not retrievable.[2]

This shocking disclosure of Mr. Seery's automatic text deletion setting – made now for the first time despite years of litigation in this bankruptcy case and related adversary proceedings – triggered all that follows below.

Mr. Seery joined the board of Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or the "Reorganized Debtor") on January 9, 2020, he was appointed Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer in July 2020, and he is a significant witness in this proceeding and various related adversary proceedings. He is in possession of, and is continuing to use, an iPhone that he asserts is "personal in nature," but which he also has testified he uses regularly for HCMLP business purposes.[3] Despite having a duty to preserve evidence in this proceeding from the moment he joined the HCMLP board, despite also later becoming materially involved in other related litigation in which he also had a duty to preserve evidence, and despite specifically receiving a December 30, 2020, letter reminding him and HCMLP of their duty to preserve evidence, specifically including text messages and cellular phone voice mails, Mr. Seery deliberately, and in violation of his and HCMLP's duty to preserve evidence, activated a one-year auto-delete setting on his iPhone so text messages more than one year old were automatically deleted on a rolling basis, thus willfully destroying potentially relevant evidence.

This is not (at this time) a motion to compel Movant's access to the forensic image. Rather, in light of Mr. Seery's admission that he has been continuously deleting potentially relevant ESI for years, Movant seeks to prevent his further destruction of evidence and to create an image from which HCMLP's or Mr. Seery's counsel can review and produce responsive ESI, and from which the parties may attempt to recover relevant ESI Mr. Seery has already deleted, which his ongoing use of the iPhone is potentially overwriting and rendering unrecoverable.

Movant conferred with counsel for Mr. Seery, but despite the admitted destruction of ESI, Mr. Seery refused to permit the preservation of evidence on Mr. Seery's iPhone by creating a forensic image without sound justification. Thus, for the reasons set forth below, Movant respectfully requests that the Court enter an order compelling HCMLP and/or Mr. Seery to promptly submit Mr. Seery's iPhone to a neutral forensic data expert to create a forensic image of his iPhone, pursuant to the protocol set forth below. This is necessary to ensure the preservation of evidence on Mr. Seery's iPhone reasonably believed to be relevant to this and various other proceedings, to assist efforts to recover already-deleted text messages before his continued use renders such efforts impossible, and to prevent Mr. Seery's further spoliation of evidence.

II. ARGUMENT AND AUTHORITIES

A. HCMLP and Mr. Seery Had a Continuing Duty to Preserve ESI on Mr. Seery's iPhone from the Time He Joined HCMLP's Board in January 2020, when HCMLP Was Already in Bankruptcy Litigation

"As a general matter, it is beyond question that a party to civil litigation has a duty to preserve relevant information, including ESI, when that party "has notice that the evidence is relevant to litigation or . . . should have known that the evidence may be relevant to future litigation.""[4] Thus, "[t]he Federal Rules of Civil Procedure require that parties take reasonable steps to preserve ESI that is relevant to litigation."[5] "Generally, the duty to preserve extends to documents or tangible things (defined by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 34) by or to individuals 'likely to have discoverable information that the disclosing party may use to support its claims or defenses.'"[6] The "duty to preserve evidence extends to those persons likely to have relevant information – the key players in the case, and applies to unique, relevant evidence that might be useful to the adversary."[7] Companies with a duty to preserve evidence are also required "to effectively communicate to employees who [are] likely to have possession of relevant documents and electronically stored information that they should preserve that information for purposes of ongoing and anticipated litigation."[8] The preservation duty extends to communications on employees' personal devices also used (even if infrequently) for business purposes.[9]

Specifically regarding text messages, "[i]t is well established that text messages "fit comfortably within the scope of materials that a party may request under Rule 34.""[10] Thus, the failure to suspend routine document destruction policies, resulting in the deletion of text messages, is a failure of reasonable document preservation steps.[11] Thus, courts have found the failure to turn off, or suspend, a mobile phone's text message "auto-erase" function violates the requirement to take reasonable steps to preserve evidence.[12] Failing to back up an iPhone also violates the duty to preserve ESI.[13] At least one federal court noted that "[i]t takes, at most, only a few minutes to disengage the auto-delete function on a cell phone."[14] Indeed, this Court has cited with approval to such cases,[15] including in an opinion based in part on a January 8, 2021 hearing concerning Mr. Dondero's cell phone, which Mr. Seery personally attended.

Mr. Seery's testimony confirms he knew of his retention obligation. Mr. Seery testified about how to maintain text messages on Apple phones in the context of Mr. Dondero's alleged obligations to maintain such messages on his personal phone.[16] He also testified that even a personal mobile device may have Highland information on it.[17] Most notably, he engaged in the following exchange: "Q: Do you have a Highland cell phone? A: No. Q: So do you use your personal phone for Highland business? A: Yes. Q: Do you preserve all of your text messages?

A: I don't delete them. I believe that they're accessible, yes."[18] All of this testimony was given in the context of Mr. Seery's experience and training as "a licensed attorney [who] was formerly a partner and co-Head of the Sidley Austin LLP New York Corporate Reorganization and Bankruptcy Group."[19] It is therefore beyond doubt that Mr. Seery was acutely aware of his continuing duty to preserve text messages.

HCMLP had a duty to preserve ESI when it entered Chapter 11 Bankruptcy on October 16, 2019.[20] Mr. Seery had a duty to preserve ESI on his devices when he was appointed to HCMLP's board approximately three months later, on January 9, 2020.[21] That duty was continuing when Mr. Seery was also appointed as HCMLP's Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer, which became effective as of March 15, 2020.[22] Moreover, on December 30, 2020, HCMLP (through counsel) and Mr. Seery (directly) received a letter from counsel for then-current, and now-former, HCMLP employees, reminding HCMLP and Mr. Seery of their duty to preserve evidence, including text messages:

> we remind you that you must comply with the law to preserve all evidence that could be relevant to this matter, including all documents, text messages, voice mails, and emails, including but not limited to all communications with our clients, including text messages and cellular phone voice mails concerning the subject matter of this letter; including text messages and cellular phone voice mails by and between the Independent Board and the Creditor's Committee; any and all documents reflecting fees paid by affiliated entities to the Debtor for work performed by and bonuses (cash, retention, and deferred) to be paid to our clients; and any and > all documents reflecting the Independent Board's decision on what constitutes an "insider."[23]

In fact, in connection with these proceedings, HCMLP expressly acknowledged its duty to preserve evidence as well as its corresponding duty to notify its employees of their duty to preserve evidence, stating in the Document Production Protocol made part of its Settlement Term Sheet: "Debtor [HCMLP] acknowledges that they should take reasonable and proportional steps to preserve discoverable information in the party's possession, custody or control. This includes notifying employees possessing relevant information of their obligation to preserve such data."[24] In adversary proceeding 19-34054-sgj11, this Court emphasized HCMLP's acknowledgment of those duties, stating:

> the January 2020 Corporate Governance Settlement set forth a "Document Production Protocol," which stated that ESI was included within the documents being sought and stated that "Debtor acknowledges that they should take reasonable and proportional steps to preserve discoverable information in the party's possession, custody or control. This includes notifying employees possessing relevant information of their obligation to preserve such data."[25]

The Court thus concluded that "whether Mr. Dondero and inhouse counsel paid attention or not, they were on notice very early in this case that they had a duty to preserve ESI."[26] This very early notice applies equally to HCMLP's new CEO, Mr. Seery.

Moreover, it is no excuse that HCMLP characterizes Mr. Seery's iPhone as "personal in nature,"[27] because the truth is that Mr. Seery has testified that he used his iPhone for business purposes,[28] including using the phone to exchange text messages with then-current, and now-former, HCMLP employees, including HCMLP's former CEO Jim Dondero, regarding HCMLP business.[29] HCMLP and Mr. Seery unquestionably had a duty to preserve the ESI, including text messages, on Mr. Seery's iPhone beginning on January 9, 2020.

Based on his position, Mr. Seery would certainly have communicated with others about (1) purchases and/or sales of HCM assets (2) costs of HCM operations, (3) claims of creditors, (4) settlement of claims of creditors, (5) claims trading, (6) duty to prepare reports, (7) provision of (or refusals to provide) information to equity and numerous other matters potentially relevant to (A) claims brought pursuant to the Motion for Leave at Dkt 3662, (B) the Valuation Adversary Proceeding at Dkt 1 in Cause No. 23-03038, (C) the so-called Vexatious Litigant Motion evidenced at Dkt 102-1 in Cause No. 3:21-cv-00881-X, (D) the Kirschner litigation, Dkt 158 in Cause no. 21-03076. and (E) Charitable DAF Fund, LP and CLO Holdco, Ltd. v. B. Mr. Seery's Years-Long Use of Auto-Delete Violated His and HCMLP's Duty to Preserve ESI

Despite his ongoing duty to preserve the text messages on his iPhone, Mr. Seery deliberately set his iPhone to automatically delete all text messages more than a year old, regardless of their relevance to existing or future litigation.[31] Notably, the default text message preservation setting on an iPhone is to retain text messages forever, so to automatically delete text messages after a year (or 30 days), a user must manually change the default retention setting.[32] Thus, at some point after obtaining his iPhone, Mr. Seery actively changed (or caused to be changed) his default iPhone text message retention setting from permanent retention to a one-year auto-delete setting.[33] Mr. Seery maintained that one-year auto-delete setting until shortly before March 10, 2023, on which date he represented that the setting had been "recently suspended."[34] Mr. Seery deactivated his auto-delete setting only after use of the setting was discovered in another lawsuit and he received multiple requests to cease deleting messages from counsel for certain adversary proceeding defendants.[35] Notably, Mr. Seery, though his counsel, was queried as to when he enabled the setting, but refused to answer.[36] While Mr. Seery maintained the one-year auto-delete setting, any iCloud backup did not back up the deleted messages.[37] Thus, Mr. Seery represents that the deleted text messages "are not retrievable," and he is unable to produce any of the deleted text messages.[38] However, to the extent Mr. Seery uses other Apple devices (e.g., iPad, MacBook, Apple Watch) sharing the same Apple ID as the iPhone, it is possible that the deleted text messages were replicated on the other Apple devices.

C. The Court Should Require Forensic Imaging to Preserve the Remaining ESI on Mr. Seery's iPhone and to Prevent Further Evidence Spoliation

Despite "recently suspend[ing]" his iPhone's auto-delete setting, Mr. Seery continues to use his iPhone, thereby continuing to store new data on his device, which makes the recovery of deleted texts more difficult or, eventually, potentially impossible. "When you delete a piece of data from your device — a photo, video, text or document — it doesn't vanish. Instead, your device labels that space as available to be overwritten by new information.… Once the memory on that device fills up entirely, new information is saved on top of those deleted items."[39] So, the longer one uses a device with deleted data, the bigger the risk that the deleted data will be overwritten so that it is no longer recoverable.[40]

Consequently, to mitigate Mr. Seery's destruction of evidence, and to provide the best chance for a digital forensics expert to recover Mr. Seery's deleted texts, it is essential to create a forensic image of Mr. Seery's iPhone as soon as possible.[41] Although it is likely that many of the deleted texts are currently recoverable, each day Mr. Seery uses his iPhone, he increases the risk that the deleted texts will be overwritten, and thereby rendered unrecoverable.[42] For that reason, it is also important to preserve an image of any other Apple devices Mr. Seery uses or used (e.g., iPad, MacBook, Apple Watch) that share the same Apple ID as the iPhone because it is possible that the deleted text messages were replicated on the other Apple devices.

Importantly, the pressing need to create a forensic image of Mr. Seery's iPhone exists only because of Mr. Seery's deliberate destruction of ESI through activating a one-year auto-delete setting on his iPhone.

This Court has the power and discretion to order HCMLP and Mr. Seery to create a forensic (or mirror) image of his iPhone (and other connected Apple devices).[43] Indeed, this Court has already ordered forensic imaging of "cellular phones tablets, laptops, computers, or any other electronic devices that can store data," in this very case.[44] "To be sure, forensic imaging is not uncommon in the course of civil discovery,"[45] though "'courts must consider the significant interests implicated by forensic imaging before ordering such procedures,' including that they must 'account properly for the significant privacy and confidentiality concerns` of the parties."[46]

However, with these considerations in mind, "courts have permitted restrained and orderly computer forensic examinations where the moving party has demonstrated that its opponent has defaulted in its discovery obligations by unwillingness or failure to produce relevant information by more conventional means."[47]

Those circumstances are present here, where HCMLP and Mr. Seery have admitted they failed to preserve ESI on Mr. Seery's iPhone and consider the deleted texts to be "not retrievable,"[48] and therefore not available for production. In other words, the only way a party will ever obtain relevant evidence from one of Mr. Seery's deleted texts will be through a forensic data recovery process.

Courts have also ordered forensic imaging specifically to facilitate the recovery of deleted ESI. For instance, in Talon Transaction Technologies, the court ordered forensic imaging when, like here, a party admitted it did not preserve all potentially relevant ESI, and that ESI was subject to being overwritten.[49]

Similarly, like here, in Antioch Co. v. Scrapbook Boarders, Inc., the plaintiff sought forensic imaging "to ensure the recovery, and preservation, of [deleted] information," when "data from a computer which has been deleted remains on the hard drive, but is constantly being overwritten, irretrievably, by the Defendants' continued use of that equipment."[50] And also like Movant here, Antioch provided the affidavit of a forensic data expert attesting that "data which is deleted from a computer is retained on the hard drive, but is constantly being overwritten by new data, through the normal use of the computer equipment."[51] The court concluded that "the Defendants may have relevant information, on their computer equipment, which is being lost through normal use of the computer, and which might be relevant to the Plaintiff's claims, or the Defendants' defenses."[52] The court granted the motion to compel the forensic imaging because "Antioch should be able to attempt to resurrect data which has been deleted from the Defendants' computer equipment."[53]

Courts that have compelled forensic imaging of computer equipment and phones have utilized a similar protocol to balance the need to preserve or recover potentially relevant ESI with privacy and confidentiality considerations.[54] This Court should draw from those protocols and apply a similar protocol in this case, as follows:

1. The parties shall agree on a neutral expert to conduct the forensic imaging of Mr. Seery's iPhone and any other Apple devices sharing the same Apple ID as Mr. Seery's iPhone (the "Devices") within one week from the date of the order granting this Motion.[55] If the parties are unable to agree on a neutral expert, the Court will appoint one.

2. The expert will maintain all information regarding the imaging of the Devices in the strictest confidence. Within one week from the date of the order granting this Motion, the parties will agree on a confidentiality agreement to govern the expert's handling of the imaged information. The expert's inspection of Mr. Seery's Devices will not waive any applicable privilege or other doctrine, rule, or protection assuring the confidentiality of the information and data on the Devices.

3. HCMLP and Mr. Seery will make Mr. Seery's Devices available for imaging at a mutually agreeable time aimed to minimize disruption, but in any event no later than one week after expert is designated. HCMLP and Mr. Seery are to provide a detailed report and notice of all Devices produced for inspection by the same date.

4. After the expert has completed making the forensic image(s), Mr. Seery's Devices may be returned to normal use, provided that the auto-delete setting remains deactivated.

5. The expert shall use the forensic image to attempt to recover the deleted text messages in a reasonable searchable form.

6. The expert shall provide the image and the recovered data to HCMLP's and Mr. Seery's counsel and shall also provide a contemporaneous report identifying and detailing, for each Device, any recovered data to counsel for HCMLP, Mr. Seery, and Movant, by no later than 3 weeks after the Devices are imaged.

necessitating the expense of a neutral expert, the cost for the appointment of a neutral forensic expert is to be borne 80% by the Defendants and 20% by the Plaintiff."). Cost shifting further is warranted by Mr. Seery's misleading, if not outright false, testimony about his text messages that "I don't delete them. I believe they're accessible, yes." Ex. 7, App. 000225 at 233:2 – 9.

7. HCMLP's and/or Mr. Seery's counsel will maintain the image and the recovered data for future review and production of responsive documents in accordance with the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

8. The expert shall also maintain the image and recovered data until 60 days after the conclusion of this bankruptcy proceeding and all related adversary proceedings, or until such other later time as agreed by the parties.

The foregoing protocols adequately address any privacy or confidentiality concerns associated with the imaging of Mr. Seery's Devices, while permitting Movant to attempt to resurrect data Mr. Seery deleted from his iPhone in violation of his duty to preserve evidence.

III. CONCLUSION

Movant respectfully requests that the Court grant the Motion and enter an order compelling HCMLP and/or Mr. Seery to submit Mr. Seery's Devices for forensic imaging according to the foregoing protocol.

Counsel for The Dugaboy Investment Trust

CERTIFICATE OF CONFERENCE

I certify that on May 30, 2023, counsel for Mr. Seery, Joshua Levy of Willkie Farr & Gallagher, and counsel for The Dugaboy Investment Trust, Michael P. Aigen, held a conference to discuss the foregoing motion and requested relief. Counsel for Mr. Seery contended that, contrary to the prior written representations from Debtor's counsel, Mr. Seery was able to recover deleted texts so that an image of Mr. Seery's devices was unnecessary. Counsel did not know, however, whether this recovered all texts that were previously deleted and would not agree to a forensic imaging of Mr. Seery's iPhone in order to determine if all deleted texts were recovered. Thus the parties could not reach an agreement regarding Movant's requested relief.

Michele:

The answers to your questions as follows:

1. Mr. Seery's iPhone is personal in nature. While it is backed up to iCloud, that back-up does not contain deleted items, whether deleted manually or as part of an automatic setting.
2. The automatic text deletion setting is currently set at one year; texts that are manually or automatically deleted are not retrievable; and
3. We have provided all texts and screenshots that we could locate based on a reasonable search. As I mentioned, we're glad that you had the screenshot of Goldsmith bringing documents to a storage facility because we both recalled that Jim sent that to me and I could not locate it (and you can see from Jim's response that he told Daugherty to "knock it off"). As you know, our ability to locate documents is based on search terms. If Jim forwarded a screen shot (or anything else) without comment (which is possible), I would only be able to find it by reviewing every email received from Jim – which, after three years of daily communications, we don't believe we are required to do. To be as helpful as we can, I recall Jim sending several screenshots to me over the years including: (a) the one of Goldsmith, (b) one of Scott speaking with someone in front of a house (which I think you sent), (c) one of Thomas Surgent's car (obviously sent in 2020). Jim does currently not have any of those pictures on his iPhone. And obviously, as verified by the information produced, Jim never requested these unsolicited pictures or did anything with them (other than forward them to me).

To summarize what we also discussed:

1. Jim and I accepted service of the subpoenas despite the fact that service was improper;
2. We produced all responsive emails, pictures, and texts we located after conducting a reasonable search;
3. We immediately withdrew the objection that you challenged to make clear we were not hiding anything;
4. We've acknowledged receiving (or sharing) certain texts that you obtained elsewhere;
5. One of those texts clearly shows Jim's discomfort with the photo of Ms. Goldsmith;
6. My text with Dandeneau (Scott's lawyer for that purpose) during the remand hearing shows I was ready to "pounce" on Daugherty if he even suggested that he was working on behalf or at that direction of Jim or the Trust.

Please confirm that Jim and I have done all we need to do to comply the subpoena. Otherwise, please let me know what questions remain.

Regards,

John

Mr. Morris,

As a follow up from Friday's call, we look forward to hearing from you this week as to (1) whether Seery's data backed up to the Cloud, (2) Seery's automatic deletion settings, if any and what the setting is, and (3) confirm that you could not locate another email for any other contemporaneous screenshots of Daugherty's texts sent to Seery, which you stated that Seery screenshotted and sent to you from time to time.

Re: Kirschner v. Dondero, et al., Adv. Pro. No. 21-03076-sgj

Dear John:

I write on behalf of Scott Ellington and Isaac Leventon (collectively "Defendants") in the above-referenced matter. It recently has come to my attention that Highland Capital Management, L.P.'s ("HCMLP") President, Mr. James P. Seery, Jr., has been deleting text messages on his personal iPhone (the "Phone"). Via email communication in another matter, attached herein for reference, you stated:

1. Mr. Seery's iPhone is personal in nature. While it is backed up to iCloud, that back-up does not contain deleted items, whether deleted manually or as part of an automatic setting.

2. The automatic text deletion setting is currently set at one year; texts that are manually or automatically deleted are not retrievable.

From your statements, it appears that Mr. Seery has been deleting text messages on his Phone via a rolling, automatic deletion setting (the "Deletion Setting").

With respect to an iPhone, "you can choose to automatically delete your iMessages from your device after 30 days or a year, or to keep them on your device forever. For your convenience, iMessages are backed up in iCloud and encrypted if you have enabled either iCloud Backup or Messages in iCloud."[1] Accordingly, it appears that Mr. Seery would have had to manually change the settings on his Phone to set text messages to delete automatically after a year.

[1] https://www.apple.com/legal/privacy/data/en/messages/#:~:text=You%20can%20choose%20to%20automatically,Backup%20or%20Messages%20in%20iCloud.

Defendants know that Mr. Seery used his text messages for HCMLP's business purposes because Defendants themselves have seen such messages. Accordingly, Defendants hereby request that you: (1) take action to suspend the Deletion Setting, and (2) instruct Mr. Seery to take all steps necessary to preserve all physical and electronic documents and ESI in his possession, custody, or control that relate to the above-referenced matter, including without limitation, ensuring that potentially relevant documents are preserved intact and are not destroyed, altered, modified, or deleted. In particular, Mr. Seery must immediately suspend any document retention or destruction policies.

In addition, Defendants demand the following information regarding the Deletion Setting:

1. Is the Deletion Setting still enabled on the Phone as of your receipt of this correspondence? If not, when was it disabled?

2. When did Mr. Seery enable the Deletion Setting?

3. When did HCMLP's counsel first become aware of the Deletion Setting on the Phone?

4. What instructions, if any, were given by counsel to Mr. Seery to preserve documents that might be relevant to on-going or anticipated litigation? When were such instructions issued? Which counsel issued such instructions?

5. Prior to the date of this correspondence, was counsel to the Litigation Trustee informed of the Deletion Setting?

6. Has Mr. Seery replaced his Phone since he joined HCMLP's board on or about January 9, 2020? If so, what happened to the old phone and/or the data on the old phone?

7. Has counsel for HCMLP or for the Litigation Trustee taken any steps to ensure that other identified witnesses under their control do not have a similar Deletion Setting on their personal mobile devices? If so, please inform us of what steps were taken, when those steps were taken, by which counsel, and with respect to which potential witnesses.

Upon receipt of this correspondence, please immediately confirm the suspension of the Deletion Setting on Mr. Seery's Phone. Please respond to the remaining inquiries promptly so that we may take the appropriate next steps with respect to this matter.

Finally, we understand that the parties are discussing a potential standstill of various proceedings, including of the above-referenced matter. However, given the spoliation issues presented above, we found it necessary to promptly send this letter. We do not anticipate that this issue will or should hinder any standstill agreement being reached amongst the parties.

Best regards,

Michelle Hartmann

Mr. Morris,

As a follow up from Friday's call, we look forward to hearing from you this week as to (1) whether Seery's data backed up to the Cloud, (2) Seery's automatic deletion settings, if any and what the setting is, and (3) confirm that you could not locate another email for any other contemporaneous screenshots of Daugherty's texts sent to Seery, which you stated that Seery screenshotted and sent to you from time to time.

Re: Kirschner v. Dondero, et al., Adv. Pro. No. 21-03076-sgj

Dear Robert:

I am writing in response to your correspondence of March 7, 2023 ("Trustee Correspondence") regarding my March 4, 2023 letter to John Morris of Pachsulski, Stang, Ziehl, & Jones, Debtor's counsel and counsel for Mr. Seery, regarding Mr. Seery's apparent on-going destruction of potentially relevant documents ("Defendants' Correspondence"). While I would appreciate clarification of the respective responsibility being assumed by Pachulski and Quinn Emanuel regarding the Deletion Setting, I will nonetheless include both firms in all future correspondence regarding this matter.

As a preliminary matter, I find it disturbing that John Morris had time to consult with you on this matter and you had the time to write me, but neither of you have taken the time to confirm that the on-going destruction of potentially responsive evidence is stopped.[1] Therefore, please confirm that Mr. Seery has suspended the Deletion Setting and has been instructed to otherwise preserve potentially relevant documents in his possession, custody, or control. If you are refusing to put a stop to the apparent on-going destruction of documents, please let me know as soon as possible so that we may determine the next appropriate steps.

With respect to Defendants' Correspondence, that the Highland Litigation Sub-Trust (the "Trustee") has taken interest in Mr. Seery's Deletion Setting answers the question of whether the Trustee is aware of the Deletion Setting, however, please clarify when the Trustee became aware of the Deletion Setting. Additionally, please provide substantive answers to the remaining inquiries from Defendants' Correspondence.

[1] There is no reasonable dispute that Mr. Seery's text messages should have been preserved as electronically stored information potentially relevant to the on-going matters. In his correspondence dated March 31, 2021 to my clients, John Morris specifically identifies that the parties must preserve all documents, including "text messages" and that my clients should "immediately suspend any document retention/destruction policies…that could result in the destruction or deletion of any potentially relevant documents in its possession, custody, or control." See the letters attached.

With respect to the balance of your letter, you raise several points, including that (a) neither side has committed yet to production of text messages, (b) certain defendants allegedly rendered collection of their text messages impossible, and (c) the Trustee has produced millions of pages of documents and the Defendants very few. I am not aware of any case law that would consider any of these facts as justifications for, much less relevant to, a party principal's currently on-going deletion of potentially relevant documents. We can continue discussions regarding what should be produced in this matter, but regardless, Mr. Seery cannot continue to destroy potentially relevant evidence.

I am copying John on this correspondence as he is Mr. Seery's counsel and still has not responded to the Defendants' Correspondence. While it is unclear to me which of the various firms advising Mr. Seery have assumed responsibility for his on-going Deletion Setting, you all collectively are responsible for stopping the deletion pending a final determination of what should and will be produced in the various on-going matters. I expect that you will comply with this duty to prevent further destruction of evidence.

Re: In re Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 19-34054-sgj11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex.)

Dear Mr. Ellington:

We are counsel to Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP"), the debtor in the above captioned Chapter 11 case (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The purpose of this document preservation notice (this "Notice") is to notify you of your obligation to preserve documents and information relating in any way to the matters referenced herein.

UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (together, "UBS") has recently commenced an adversary proceeding against HCMLP (the "Adversary Case") in connection with the Bankruptcy Case. In the Adversary Case, UBS has alleged that HCMLP, acting through and at the direction of James Dondero and other former employees of HCMLP, fraudulently transferred hundreds of millions of dollars of assets (the "Transferred Assets") away from Highland CDO Opportunity Master Fund, L.P. ("CDO Fund") and Highland Special Opportunities Holding Company ("SOHC," and together with CDO Fund, the "Funds") and affiliated entities—in anticipation of a judgment that UBS obtained against the Funds in the UBS

Litigation[1]—to Sentinel Reinsurance, Ltd. ("Sentinel," and together with its affiliates, the "Sentinel Entities"), a Cayman Islands entity that Mr. Dondero and Scott Ellington owned and controlled.

UBS further alleges that certain of these assets were fraudulently transferred to Sentinel pursuant to a purported purchase agreement (the "Purchase Agreement"), dated as of August 7, 2017, purportedly to satisfy the premium on a legal liability insurance policy issued by Sentinel (the "Insurance Policy"), which policy was supposedly intended to insure the Funds against an adverse judgment in the UBS Litigation. Among the assets that were purportedly transferred to Sentinel are (i) an interest in Multi-Strat that was ostensibly redeemed in November 2019 (the "Sentinel Redemption") and (ii) assets held by CDO Fund related to Greenbriar CLO Ltd., Greenbriar CLO Corp., Aberdeen Loan Funding Ltd., Eastland CLO Ltd., Grayson CLO Ltd., Valhalla CLO Ltd., and Governance Re, Ltd., including cash payments related to those assets.

HCMLP will seek discovery from various parties and third parties in connection with the Adversary Case and any other legal actions that may be commenced relating to the subject matter of this Notice, potentially including from you. You are receiving this preservation demand because we believe that you have documents or other materials related to the matters referenced herein. Applicable law and the rules of discovery require the immediate preservation of all documents and electronically stored information in your possession, custody, or control that relate in any way to these matters.

Pursuant to the Notice, HCMLP demands that you retain all documents, communications (including e-mails and text messages), and other materials in its possession, custody, or control (including such documents and materials in the possession or custody of your representatives, agents, employees, subsidiaries, or affiliates) that relate, directly or indirectly, to the subject matter of this Notice, including, but not limited to, any of the following:

[1] "UBS Litigation" refers to the action commenced by UBS in the Supreme Court of the State of New York against HCMLP, the Funds, and Highland Credit Opportunities CDO, L.P. (n/k/a Highland Multi Strategy Credit Fund, L.P.) ("Multi-Strat"), among other defendants, and which has been consolidated in the action captioned *UBS Securities LLC et al. v. You must take all steps necessary to preserve all physical and electronic documents and ESI in its possession, custody, or control that relate to the subject matter of this Notice, including without limitation ensuring that potentially relevant documents are preserved intact and are not destroyed, altered, modified, or deleted. In particular, you must immediately suspend any document retention/destruction policies, including any backup tape recycling policies, that could result in the destruction or deletion of any potentially relevant documents in its possession, custody, or control, and must retain all software, hardware, or other information required to access or view potentially relevant ESI. Failure to take such actions may subject you to sanctions.

This preservation demand is continuing in nature and requires your preservation of potentially relevant documents and materials that come into its possession, custody, or control after the date of this Notice.

Please acknowledge receipt of this Notice and promptly confirm that you will comply with this preservation demand.

2. The expedited nature of this Motion is permitted under Fed. R. Bank P. 9006 (c)(1), which authorizes a shortened time for a response and hearing for good cause. For the reasons set forth herein, HMIT has shown good cause and requests that the Court schedule a hearing on this Motion on three (3) days' notice, and that any responses be filed no later than twenty-four hours before the scheduled hearing.[4]

3. HMIT brings this Motion on behalf of itself and derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and the Highland Claimant Trust ("Claimant Trust"), as defined in the Claimant Trust Agreement (Doc. 3521-5) ("CTA").[5] Upon the Plan's Effective Date, Highland Capital Management, LP, as the original Debtor ("Original Debtor"), transferred its assets, including its causes of action, to the Claimant Trust, including the causes of action set forth in the attached Adversary Proceeding. The attached Adversary Proceeding alleges claims which are substantially more than "colorable" based upon plausible allegations that the Proposed Defendants, acting in concert, perpetrated a fraud,[6] including a fraud upon innocent stakeholders, as well as breaches of fiduciary

[4] Expedited action on this Motion is also warranted to hasten Movants' opportunity to file suit, pursue prompt relevant discovery, and reduce the threat of loss of potentially key evidence. Upon information and belief, Seery has been deleting text messages on his personal iPhone via a rolling, automatic deletion setting.

[5] Solely in the alternative, and in the unlikely event HMIT's proposed causes of actions against Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and/or Jessup are considered to be "Estate Claims" as those terms are used and defined within the CTA and Exhibit A to the Notice of Final Term Sheet [Docket No. 354] in HCM's bankruptcy (and without admitting the same), HMIT alternatively seeks standing to bring this action as a derivative action on behalf of the Litigation Sub-Trust as appropriate.

[6] Neither this Motion nor the proposed Adversary Complaint seeks to challenge the Court's Orders or the Plan. In addition, neither this Motion nor the proposed Adversary Complaint seeks to redistribute the assets of the Claimant Trust in a manner that would adversely impact innocent creditors. Rather, the duties and knowing participation in (or aiding and abetting) breaches of fiduciary duty. The Adversary Proceeding also alleges that the Proposed Defendants did so collectively by falsely representing the value of the Debtor's Estate, failing to timely disclose accurate values of the Debtor's Estate, and trading on material non-public information regarding such values. HMIT also alleges that the Proposed Defendants colluded to manipulate the Debtor's Estate—providing Seery the opportunity to plant close business allies into positions of control to approve Seery's compensation demands following the Effective Date.

4. Emergency relief is needed because of a fast-approaching date (April 16, 2023) that one or more of the Proposed Defendants may argue, depending upon choice of law, constitutes the expiration of the statute of limitations concerning some of the common law claims available to the Claimant Trust, as well as to HMIT.[7] Although HMIT offered to enter tolling agreements from each of the Proposed Defendants, they either rejected HMIT's requests or have not confirmed their willingness to do so, thereby necessitating the expedited nature of this Motion.[8] Because this Motion is subject to the proposed Adversary Proceeding seeks to benefit all innocent stakeholders while working within the terms and provisions of the Plan, as well as the Claimant Trust Agreement.

[7] The first insider trade at issue involved the sale and transfer of Claim 23 in the amount of $23 million held by ACMLD Claim, LLC to Muck on April 16, 2021 (Doc. 2215).

[8] HMIT has been diligent in its efforts to investigate the claims described in this Motion, including the filing of a Tex. R. Civ. P. Rule 202 proceeding in January 2023, which was not adjudicated until recently in March 2023. Those proceeding were conducted in the 191st Judicial District Court in Dallas County, Texas, under Cause DC-23-01004. [redacted] Farallon and Stonehill defended those proceedings by aggressively arguing, in significant part, that the discovery issues were better undertaken in this Court.[8] The Rule 202 Petition was recently dismissed (necessarily without prejudice)

Court's "gatekeeping" orders and the injunction provisions of the Plan, emergency leave is required.

5. This Motion will come as no surprise to the Proposed Defendants. Farallon and Stonehill were involved in recent pre-suit discovery proceedings under Rule 202 of the Texas Rules of Civil Procedure relating to the same insider trading allegations described in this Motion. Muck and Jessup, special purpose entities created and ostensibly controlled by Farallon and Stonehill, respectively, also were provided notice of these Rule 202 Proceedings in February 2023. Like this Motion, the Rule 202 Proceedings focused on Muck, Jessup, Farallon, and Stonehill and their wrongful purchase of large, allowed claims in the Original Debtor's bankruptcy based upon material non-public information. Seery is also aware of these insider trading allegations because of a prior written demand.

6. In light of the Proposed Defendants' apparent refusal to enter tolling agreements, or their failure to fully affirm their willingness to do so, HMIT is forced to seek emergency relief from this Court to proceed timely with the proposed Adversary Proceeding before the expiration of any arguable limitations period.[10] on March 8, 2023, ostensibly based on such arguments. However, it is telling that Stonehill and Farallon admitted during the Rule 202 Proceedings to their "affiliation" with Muck and Jessup and that they bought the Claims through these entities.

WITHDRAWN

[10] HMIT respectfully requests that this Motion be addressed and decided on an expedited basis that provides HMIT sufficient time to bring the proposed action timely. In the event the Court denies the requested relief, HMIT respectfully requests prompt notice of the Court's ruling to allow HMIT sufficient

II. Summary of Claims

7. HMIT requests leave to commence the proposed Adversary Proceeding, attached as Exhibit 1, seeking redress for breaches of duty owed to HMIT, breaches of duties owed to the Original Debtor's Estate, aiding and abetting breaches of those fiduciary duties, conspiracy, unjust enrichment, and fraud. HMIT also alleges several viable remedies, including (i) imposition of a constructive trust; (ii) equitable disallowance of any unpaid balance on the claims at issue;[11] (iii) disgorgement of ill-gotten profits (received by Farallon, Stonehill, Muck and Jessup) to be restituted to the Claimant Trust; (iv) disgorgement of ill-gotten compensation (received by Seery) to be restituted to the Claimant Trust; (v) declaratory judgment relief; (vi) actual damages; and (vii) punitive damages.

III. Standing

8. HMIT. Prior to the Plan's Effective Date, HMIT was the largest equity holder in the Original Debtor and held a 99.5% limited partnership interest. HMIT currently holds a Class 10 Claim as a contingent Claimant Trust Interest under the CTA

time to seek, if necessary, appropriate relief in the United States District Court. In order to have a fair opportunity to seek such relief on a timely basis and protect HMIT's rights and the rights of the Reorganized Debtor, HMIT will need to seek such relief on or before Wednesday, April 5, 2023, if this Motion has not been resolved.

[11] In the alternative only, subordination of Muck's and Jessup's General Unsecured Claim Trust Interests and Subordinated Claim Trust Interests to all other interests in the Claimant Trust, including HMIT's Contingent Trust Interest, is necessary and appropriate to remedy Muck's and Jessup's wrongful conduct, and is also consistent with the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code.

(Doc. 3521-5). Upon information and belief, all conditions precedent to HMIT's certification as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary would be readily satisfied but for the Defendants' wrongful actions and conduct described in this Motion and the attached Adversary Proceeding.

9. Reorganized Debtor. Although HMIT has standing as a former Class B/C Equity Holder, Class 10 claimant, and now contingent Claimant Trust Interest under the CTA,[12] this Motion separately seeks authorization to prosecute the Adversary Proceeding derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust. All conditions precedent to bringing a derivative action are satisfied.

10. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1 provides the procedural steps for "derivative actions," and applies to this proceeding pursuant to Fed. R. Bank. P. 7023.1. Applying Rule 7023.1, the Proposed Defendants' wrongful conduct occurred, and the improper trades consummated, in the spring and early summer of 2021, before the Effective Date in August 2021. During this period, HMIT was the 99.5% Class B/C limited partner in the original Debtor. As such, HMIT has individual standing to bring this action because Seery owed fiduciary duties directly to HMIT at that time, and the other Proposed Defendants aided and abetted breaches of those duties at that time.

[12] The last transaction at issue involved Claim 190, the Notice for which was filed on August 9, 2021. (Doc. 2698).

11. The derivative nature of this proceeding is also appropriate because any demand on Seery would be futile.[13] Seery is the Claimant Trustee under the terms of the CTA. Furthermore, any demand on the Oversight Board to prosecute these claims would be equally futile because Muck and Jessup, both of whom are Proposed Defendants, dominate the Oversight Board.[14]

12. The "classic example" of a proper derivative action is when a debtor-in-possession is "unable or unwilling to fulfill its obligations" to prosecute an otherwise colorable claim where a conflict of interest exists. Cooper, 405 B.R. at 815 (quoting Louisiana World, 858 F.2d at 252). Here, because HMIT's proposed Adversary Proceeding includes claims against Seery, Muck, and Jessup, the conflicts of interest are undeniable. Seery is the Trustee of the Claimant Trust Assets under the CTA, and he also serves as the "Estate Representative."[15] Muck and Jessup, as successors to Acis, the Redeemer Committee and UBS, effectively control the Oversight Board, with the responsibility to "monitor and oversee the administration of the Claimant Trust and the Claimant Trustee's performance . . . ."[16]

[13] Any demand on the Litigation Sub-Trust would be equally futile for the same reasons addressed herein, since the Litigation Trustee serves at the direction of the Oversight Board.

[14] See Footnote 8, infra. In December 2021, several stakeholders made a demand on the Debtor through James Seery, in his capacity as Trustee to the Claimant Trust, to pursue claims related to these insider trades.

13. Creditors' committees frequently bring suit on behalf of bankruptcy estates. Yet, it is clear that any appropriately designated party also may bring derivative claims. In re Reserve Prod., Inc., 232 B.R. 899, 902 (Bankr. E.D. Tex. 1999) (citations omitted); see In re Enron Corp., 319 B.R. 128, 131 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2004). As this Court has held in In Re Cooper:

> In Chapter 11 [cases], there is both a textual basis . . . and, frequently, a non-textual, equitable rationale for granting a creditor or creditors committee derivative standing to pursue estate actions (i.e., the equitable rationale coming into play when the debtor-in-possession has a conflict of interest in pursuing an action, such as in the situation of an insider-defendant).

In re Cooper, 405 B.R. 801, 803 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009) (also noting that "[c]onflicts of interest are, of course, frequently encountered in Chapter 11, where the metaphor of the 'fox guarding the hen house' is often apropos"); see also In re McConnell, 122 B.R. 41, 43-44 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1989) ("[I]ndividual creditors can also act in lieu of the trustee or debtor-in-possession . . . ."). Here, the Proposed Defendants are the "foxes guarding the hen house," and their conflicts of interest abound.[17] Proceeding in a derivative capacity is necessary, if not critical.

[17] See Citicorp Venture Cap., Ltd. v. Comm. of Creditors Holding Unsecured Claims, 160 F.3d 982, 987 (3d Cir. 1998) (settlement noteholders purchased Debtors' securities with "the benefit of non-public information acquired as a fiduciary" for the "dual purpose of making a profit and influenc[ing] the reorganization in [their] own self-interest."), see also, Wolf v. Weinstein, 372 U.S. 633, 642, 83 S.Ct. 969, 10 L.Ed.2d 33 (1963) ("Access to inside information or strategic position in a corporate reorganization renders the temptation to profit by trading in the Debtor's stock particularly pernicious.").

14. The proposed Adversary Proceeding also sets forth claims that readily satisfy the Court's threshold standards requiring "colorable" claims, as well as the requirements for a derivative action. This Motion WITHDRAWN is supported by WITHDRAWN WITHDRAWN historical filings in the bankruptcy proceedings WITHDRAWN WITHDRAWN. At the very least, this WITHDRAWN satisfies the Court's threshold requirements of willful misconduct and fraud set forth in the "gatekeeping" orders, as well as the injunction and exculpation provisions in the Plan.[18] This WITHDRAWN also supports well-pleaded allegations exempted from the scope of the releases included in the Plan.

15. HMIT is an appropriate party to bring this action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust. If successful, the Adversary Proceeding will likely recover well over $100 million for the Claimant Trust, thereby enabling the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust to pay off any remaining innocent creditors and make significant distributions to HMIT as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary.

16. As of December 31, 2022, the Claimant Trust had distributed 64.2% of the total $397,485,568 par value of all Class 8 and Class 9 unsecured creditor claims. The

[18] HMIT recognizes that it is an "Enjoined Party" under the Plan. The Plan requires a showing, inter alia, of bad faith, willful misconduct, or fraud against a "Protected Party." Seery is a "Protected Party" and an "Exculpated Party" in his capacity as an Independent Director. Muck and Jessup may be "Protected Parties" as members of the Oversight Committee, but they were not "protected" when they purchased the Claims before the Effective Date. While it is HMIT's position that Farallon and Stonehill do not qualify as "Protected Parties," they are included in this Motion in the interest of judicial economy.

Claims acquired by Muck and Jessup have an allowed par value of $365,000,000. Based on these numbers, the innocent unsecured creditors hold approximately $32 million in allowed claims.[19]

17. As of December 31, 2022, the Claimant Trust has distributed $255,201,228.[20] On a pro rata basis, that means that innocent creditors have received approximately $22,373,000 in distributions against the stated value of their allowed claims. That leaves a remaining unpaid balance of approximately $9,627,000.

18. Muck and Jessup already have received approximately $232.8 million on their Claims. Assuming and original investment of approximately $160 million, this represents over $72 million in ill-gotten profits that, if disgorged, would be far more than what is required to fully pay all other innocent creditors - immediately placing HMIT in the status of a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary. The benefits to the Reorganized Debtor, the Claimant Trust and innocent stakeholders are undeniable.[21]

19. Seery and the Oversight Board should be estopped from challenging HMIT's status to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Claimant Trust. Seery, Muck and Jessup have committed fraud, acted in bad faith and have unclean hands, and they should not be allowed to undermine the proposed Adversary Proceeding - which seeks to rectify significant wrongdoing. To hold otherwise would allow Seery, Muck, Jessup, Stonehill, and Farallon the opportunity to not just "guard the hen house," but to also open the door and take what they want.[22] HMIT seeks a declaratory judgment of its rights, accordingly.

[21] Further, under the present circumstances and time constraints, this Motion should be granted to avoid the prospect of the loss of some of HMIT's and the Claimant Trust's claims and denial of due process.

IV. The Proposed Defendants

20. Seery acted in several capacities during relevant times. He served as the Debtor's Chief Executive Officer ("CEO") and Chief Restructuring Officer ("CRO"). He also served as member of the Debtor's Independent Board.[23] He currently serves as Claimant Trustee under the CTA and remains the CEO of the Reorganized Debtor.

21. There is no doubt Seery owed the Original Debtor's Estate, as well as equity, fiduciary duties, including the duty of loyalty and the duty to avoid conflicts of interest. See In re Xtreme Power Inc., 563 B.R. 614, 632-33 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2016) (detailing fiduciary duties owed by corporate officers and directors under Delaware law); Louisiana World, 858 F.2d at 245-46 (detailing duties owed by debtors-in-possession).[24]

[22] "The doctrine of 'unclean hands' provides that "a litigant who engages in reprehensible conduct in relation to the matter in controversy ... forfeits his right to have the court hear his claim, regardless of its merit. [T]he purpose of the clean hands maxim is to protect the court against misuse by one who, because of his conduct, has forfeited his right to have the court consider his claims, regardless of their merit. As such it is not a matter of defense to be applied on behalf of a litigant; rather it is a rule of public policy." Portnoy v. Cryo-Cell Int'l, Inc., 940 A.2d 43, 80–81 (Del. Ch. 2008) (citations omitted) (internal quotations omitted for clarity).

[23] Seery is the beneficiary of the Court's "gatekeeping" orders and is an "exculpated" party in his capacity as an Independent Director. He is also a "Protected Party."

[24] The Internal Affairs Doctrine dictates choice of law. Here, the Debtor, Highland Capital Management, was organized under the law of Delaware. As much, Seery's fiduciary duties and claims involving breaches of those duties will be governed by Delaware law.

22. Farallon and Stonehill are capital management companies which manage hedge funds; they are also Seery's close business allies with a long history of business ventures and close affiliation. Although they were strangers to the Original Debtor's bankruptcy on the petition date, and were not original creditors, they became entangled in this bankruptcy at Seery's invitation and encouragement—and then knowingly participated in the wrongful insider trades at issue. By doing so, Seery was able to plant friendly allies onto the Oversight Board to rubber stamp compensation demands. The proposed Adversary Proceeding alleges that Farallon and Stonehill bargained to receive handsome pay days in exchange.

23. Muck and Jessup are special purpose entities, admittedly created by Farallon and Stonehill on the eve of the alleged insider trades, and they were used as vehicles to assume ownership of the purchased claims.[WITHDRAWN] WITHDRAWN Muck and Jessup did not exist before confirmation of the Plan in February 2021.[26] Now, however, Muck and Jessup serve on the Oversight Board with immense powers under the CTA.[27] When they purchased the claims at issue, Muck and Jessup were not acting in their official capacities on the Oversight Committee and, therefore, they were not "Protected Persons" under the Plan.

[WITHDRAWN] WITHDRAWN

[26] WITHDRAWN Muck was created on March 9, 2021 before the Effective Date. Jessup was created on April 8, 2021, before the Effective Date.

[27] See Doc. 3521-5, Sec. 4(a) and 4(b).

24. By trading on the alleged material non-public information, Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup became non-statutory "insiders" with duties owed directly to HMIT at a time when HMIT was the largest equity holder.[28] See S.E.C. v. Cuban, 620 F.3d 551, 554 (5th Cir. 2010) ("The corporate insider is under a duty to 'disclose or abstain'—he must tell the shareholders of his knowledge and intention to trade or abstain from trading altogether."). In this context, there is no credible doubt that Farallon's and Stonehill's dealings with Seery were not arms-length. Again, Farallon and Stonehill were Seery's past business partners and close allies.[29] By virtue of the insider trades at issue, Farallon and Stonehill acquired control (acting through Muck and Jessup) over the Original Debtor and Reorganized Debtor through Seery's compensation agreement and awards, as well as supervisory powers over the Claimant Trust. This makes Farallon and Stonehill paradigm non-statutory insiders.

25. HMIT also seeks recovery against John Doe Defendant Nos. 1 through 10.[30] It is clear Farallon and Stonehill refuse to disclose the precise details of their legal [28] Because of their "insider" status, this Court should closely scrutinize the transactions at issue.

[29] Farallon and Stonehill are two capital management firms (similar to HCM) with whom Seery has had substantial business relationships. Also, Seery previously served as legal counsel to Farallon. Seery also has a long-standing relationship with Stonehill. GCM Grosvenor, a global asset management firm, held four seats on the Redeemer Committee (an original member of the Unsecured Creditors Committee in HCM's bankruptcy). Upon information and belief, GCM Grosvenor is a significant investor in Stonehill and Farallon. GCM Grosvenor, through Redeemer, also played a large part in appointing Seery as a director of Strand Advisors and approved his appointment as HCM's CEO and CRO.

relationships with Muck and Jessup. They resisted such discovery in the prior Rule 202 Proceedings in state district court.[WITHDRAWN] They also refused to disclose such details in response to a prior inquiry to their counsel.[WITHDRAWN] Furthermore, the corporate filings of both Muck and Farallon conspicuously omit the identity of their respective members or managing members.[WITHDRAWN] Accordingly, HMIT intends to prosecute claims against John Doe Defendant Nos. 1 -- 10 seeking equitable tolling pending further discovery whether Farallon and Stonehill inserted intermediate corporate layers between themselves and the special purpose entities (Muck and Jessup) they created. See In re ATP Oil & Gas Corp., No. 12-36187, 2017 WL 2123867, *4 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. May 16, 2017) (lsgur .J.); see also In re IFS Fin. Corp. No. 02-39553, 2010 WL 4614293, *3 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. No. 2, 2010) ("The identity of the party concealing the fraud is immaterial, the critical factor is whether any of the parties involved concealed property of the estate." "In either case, the trustee must demonstrate that despite exercising diligence, he could not have discovered the identity of the [unnamed] defendants prior to the expiration of the limitations period.") ATP Oil, 2017 WL 2123867 at *4. That burden is easily satisfied here.

V. Background

26. As part of this Court's Governance Order, an independent board of directors—which included Seery as one of the selections of the Unsecured Creditor's Committee—was appointed to the Board of Directors (the "Board") of Strand Advisors, Inc., ("Strand Advisors"), the Original Debtor's general partner. Following approval of the Governance Order, the Board then appointed Seery as the Original Debtor's CEO and CRO. [34] Following the Effective Date of the Plan, Seery now serves as Trustee of the Claimant Trust (the Reorganized Debtor's sole post-reorganization limited partner), and continues to serve as the Reorganized Debtor's CEO. [35]

27. Imbued with his powers as CEO and CRO, Seery negotiated and obtained bankruptcy court approval of several settlements prior to the Effective Date, resulting in the following approximate allowed claims (hereinafter "Claims"):[36]

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9
Redeemer	$137 mm	$0 mm
Acis	$23 mm	$0 mm
HarbourVest	$45 mm	$35 mm
UBS	$65 mm	$60 mm
(Totals)	$270 mm	$95 mm

[35] See Doc. 1943, Order Approving Plan, p. 34.

[36] Orders Approving Settlements [Doc. 1273, Doc. 1302, Doc. 1788, Doc. 2389].

Each of the settling parties curiously sold their Claims to Farallon or Stonehill (or their affiliated special purpose entities) shortly after they obtained court approval of their settlements. One of these "trades" occurred within just a few weeks before the Effective Date. Farallon and Stonehill coordinated and controlled the purchase of these Claims through Muck and Jessup, and they admitted in open court that Muck and Jessup were created to allow their purchase of the Claims.[WITHDRAWN]

28. HMIT alleges that Seery filed (or caused to be filed) deflated, misleading projections regarding the value of the Debtor's Estate,[38] while inducing unsecured creditors to discount and sell their Claims to Farallon and Stonehill. But [WITHDRAWN] [WITHDRAWN] it is now known that Seery provided material, non-public information to Farallon. The circumstantial evidence is also clear that both Farallon and Stonehill had access to and used this non-public information in connection with their purchase decisions.

29. Farallon and Stonehill are registered investment advisors who have their own fiduciary duties to their investors, and they are acutely aware of what these duties entail. Yet, upon information and belief, they collectively invested over $160 million dollars to purchase the Claims in the absence of any publicly available information that could rationally justify such investments. These "trades" become even more suspect because, at the time of confirmation, the Plan provided pessimistic projections advising stakeholders that the Claim holders would never receive full satisfaction:

[WITHDRAWN] [WITHDRAWN]

[38] The pessimistic projections were issued as part of the Plan Analysis on February 2, 2021. [Doc. 1875-1]. The Debtor projected 0% return on Class 9 claims and only 71.32% return on Class 8 Claims.

- From October 2019, when the original Chapter 11 Petition was filed, to January 2021, just before the Plan was confirmed, the valuation of HCM's assets dropped over $200 million from $566 million to $328.3 million.[39]
- HCM's Disclosure Statement projected payment of 71.32% of Class 8 claims, and 0% of claims in Classes 9-11;[40]
  - This meant that Farallon and Stonehill invested more than $103 million in Claims when the publicly available information indicated they would receive $0 in return on their investment as Class 9 creditors and substantially less than par on their Class 8 Claims.
- In HCM's Q3 2021 Post-Confirmation Report, HCM reported that the amount of Class 8 claims expected to be paid dropped even further from 71% to 54%;[41]

30. In the third financial quarter of 2021, just over $6 million of the projected $205 million available to satisfy general unsecured creditors was disbursed.[42] No additional distributions were made to the unsecured claimholders until, suddenly, in Q3 2022 almost $250 million was paid toward Class 8 general unsecured claims—$45 million more than was ever projected.[43]

31. According to Highland Capital's Motion for Exit Financing,[44] and a recent motion filed by Dugaboy Investment Trust,[45] there remain substantial assets to be monetized for the benefit of the Reorganized Debtor's creditors. Thus, upon information and belief, Stonehill and Farallon, stand to realize significant profits on their wrongful investments. In turn, Stonehill and Farallon will garner (and already have garnered) substantial fees – both base fees and performance fees – as the result of their acquiring and/or managing the Claims. Upon information and belief, HMIT also alleges that Seery has received excessive compensation and bonuses approved by Farallon (Muck) and Stonehill (Jessup) as members of the Oversight Board.

32. WITHDRAWN

- Farallon admitted it conducted no due diligence and relied upon Seery in making its multi-million-dollar investment decisions at issue.[WD]
- Farallon admitted it was unwilling to sell its stake in these Claims at any price because Seery assured Farallon that the Claims were tremendously valuable.[WD]
- Farallon bragged about the value of its investment referencing non-public information regarding Amazon, Inc.'s ("Amazon") interest in acquiring Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Inc. ("MGM").[WD]

- Farallon was unwilling to sell its stake in the newly acquired Claims even though publicly available information suggested that Farallon would lose millions of dollars on its investment.[49]

Farallon can offer no credible explanation to explain its significant investment, and its refusal to sell at any price, except Farallon's access to material non-public information. In essence, Seery became the guarantor of Farallon's significant investment. Farallon admitted as much in its statements to James Dondero.

33. The same holds true for Stonehill. Given the negative, publicly available information, Stonehill's multi-million-dollar investments make no rational sense unless Stonehill had access to material non-public information.

34. Fed. R. Bank. P. 2015.3 requires debtors to "file periodic financial reports of the value, operations, and profitability of each entity that is not a publicly traded corporation or a debtor in a case under title 11, and in which the estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." However, no public reports required by Rule 2015.3 were filed. Seery testified they simply "fell through the cracks." [50]

35. Six days prior to the filing of the motion seeking approval of the HarbourVest Settlement, Seery acquired material non-public information regarding Amazon's interest in acquiring MGM.[51] Upon receipt of this material non-public information, MGM should have been placed on the Original Debtor's "restricted list," but Seery continued to move forward with deals that involved MGM stock and notes.[52] Because the Original Debtor additionally held direct interests in MGM,[53] the value of MGM was of paramount importance to the value of the estate.

36. Armed with this and other insider information, Farallon—through Muck—proceeded to invest in the Claims and, acting through Muck, acceded to a powerful position on the Oversight Board to oversee future distributions to Muck and itself. It is no coincidence Seery invited his business allies into these bankruptcy proceedings with promises of great profits. Seery's allies now oversee his compensation.[54]

37. The Court also should be aware that the Texas States Securities Board ("TSSB") opened an investigation into the subject matter of the insider trades at issue, and this investigation has not been closed. The continuing nature of this investigation

[52] As part of the HarbourVest Settlement, Seery negotiated the purchase of HarbourVest's interest in HCLOF for approximately $22.5 million as part of the transaction. Approximately 19.1% of HCLOF's assets were comprised of debt and equity in MGM. The HCLOF interest was not to be transferred to the Debtor for distribution as part of the bankruptcy estate, but rather to "to an entity to be designated by the Debtor"—i.e., one that was not subject to typical bankruptcy reporting requirements. Doc. 1625, p. 9, n. 5. Doc. 1625.

[53] See Doc. 2229, Motion for Exit Financing.

[54] Amazon closed on its acquisition of MGM in March 2022, but the evidence strongly suggests that agreements for the trades already had been reached - while announcement of the trades occurred strategically after the MGM news became public. Now, as a result of their wrongful conduct, Stonehill and Farallon profited significantly on their investments, and they stand to gain substantially more profits.

underscores HMIT's position that the claims described in the attached Adversary Proceeding are plausible and certainly far more than merely "colorable."

VI. Argument

A. HMIT has asserted Colorable Claims against Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and Jessup.

38. Unlike the terms "Enjoined Party," "Protected Party," or "Exculpated Party," the Plan does not define what constitutes a "colorable" claim. Nor does the Bankruptcy Code define the term. However, relevant authorities suggest that a Rule 12(b)(6) standard is an appropriate analogue.

39. The Fifth Circuit has held that a "colorable" claim standard is met if a [movant], such as HMIT, has asserted claims for relief that, on appropriate proof, would allow a recovery. A court need not and should not conduct an evidentiary hearing but must ensure that the claims do not lack any merit whatsoever. Louisiana World Exposition v. Fed. Ins. Co., 858 F.2d 233, 248 (5th Cir. 1988). Stated differently, the Court need not be satisfied there is an evidentiary basis for the asserted claims but instead should allow the claims if they appear to have some merit.

40. Other federal appellate courts have reached similar conclusions. For example, the Eighth Circuit holds that "creditors' claims are colorable if they would survive a motion to dismiss." In re Racing Services, Inc., 540 F.3d 892, 900 (8th Cir. 2008); accord In Re Foster, 516 B.R. 537, 542 (B.A.P. 8th Cir. 2014), aff'd 602 Fed. Appx. 356 (8th Cir. 2015) (per curiam). The Sixth Circuit has adopted a similar test requiring that the court look only to the face of the complaint to determine if claims are colorable. In re The Gibson Group, Inc., 66 F.3d 1436, 1446 (6th Cir. 1995) (emphasis added).

41. Although there is a dearth of federal court authorities in Texas, other federal courts have adopted the same standard—i.e., a claim is colorable if it is "plausible" and could survive a motion to dismiss. See In re America's Hobby Center, Inc., 223 B.R. 273, 282 (S.D.N.Y 1998). In addition, in the non-bankruptcy context, the District Court for the Northern District of Texas explained that "[t]he requirement of a 'colorable claim' means only that the plaintiff must have an 'arguable claim' and not that the plaintiff must be able to succeed on that claim." Gonzales v. Columbia Hosp. at Med. City Dallas Subsidiary, L.P., 207 F. Supp. 2d 570, 577 (N.D. Tex. 2002) (Emphasis added).

42. Thus, in this instance, this Court's gatekeeping inquiry is properly limited to whether HMIT has stated a plausible claim on the face of the proposed pleadings involving "bad faith," "willful misconduct," or "fraud." Because the face of the Adversary Complaint alleges plausible facts, HMIT's Motion is properly granted. Clearly, the attached Adversary Proceeding would survive a Rule 12(b)(6) challenge. Furthermore, the supporting WITHDRAWN documentary evidence provide additional support, and the circumstantial evidence proves that Farallon and Stonehill, strangers to the bankruptcy on the petition date, would not have leaped into these proceedings without undisclosed assurances of profit.

B. Fraud

43. As set forth in the proposed Adversary Proceeding, HMIT alleges a colorable claim for fraud—both fraud by knowing misrepresentation and fraud by omission of material fact. Here, these allegations of fraud are appropriately governed by Texas law under appropriate choice of law principals.[55]

44. Seery had a duty to not provide material inside information to his business allies. But, he did so. At the latest, Seery became aware of the potential sale of MGM in December 2020 when he received an email from Jim Dondero. [redacted] Thus, Seery knew at that time that this potential sale would likely yield significant value to the Original Debtor's Estate. Yet, the financial disclosures associated with the Plan's confirmation, which were provided only a month later, presented an entirely different outlook for both Class 8 and Class 9 unsecured creditors.[57] Seery knew at that time that these pessimistic disclosures were misleading, if not inaccurate.

45. There is no credible doubt Seery intended that innocent stakeholders would rely upon the pessimistic projections set forth in the Plan Analysis. Indeed, the singular purpose of the Plan Analysis was to advise stakeholders. As such, HMIT alleges that Seery knowingly made misrepresentations with the intention that innocent stakeholders would rely, and that he failed to disclose material information concerning his entanglements with Farallon and Stonehill, as well as the related negotiations that were chock full of conflicts of interest.

[55] However, Delaware law is substantially similar on the elements of fraud. See Malinals v. Kramer, No. CIV.A. CPU 6-11002145, 2012 WL 174958, at 2 (Del. Com. PI. Jan. 5, 2012)

[redacted] WITHDRAWN

[57] See Doc. 1875-1, Plan Analysis, February 1, 2021.

46. On the flip side of this conspiracy coin, Farallon and Stonehill were engaged in negotiations to acquire the Claims at discounted prices; and, they successfully did so. HMIT alleges that their success was based on knowledge that the financial disclosures associated with the Plan Analysis were significantly understated. Otherwise, it would make no financial sense for Farallon and Stonehill to do the deals at issue. Indeed, Farallon admitted that it would not sell the Claims at any price, expressing great confidence in the substantial profits it expected even in the absence of any supporting, publicly available information.

47. All of the Proposed Defendants had a duty of affirmative disclosure under these circumstances. Seery always had this duty. Muck, Jessup, Farallon, and Stonehill assumed this duty when they became non-statutory "insiders." Thus, all of the Proposed Defendants are liable for conspiring to perpetrate a fraud by omission of material facts.

48. HMIT also claims that Seery and the other Proposed Defendants failed to disclose material information concerning Seery's involvement in brokering the Claims in exchange for quid pro quo assurances of enhanced compensation. Seery's compensation should be disgorged or, alternatively, such compensation constitutes a damage recoverable by the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust as assignees (or transferees) of the Original Debtor's causes of action. This compensation was the product of the alleged self-dealing, breaches of fiduciary duty, and fraud.

C. Breaches and Aiding and Abetting Breaches of Fiduciary Duties

49. It is beyond dispute Seery owed fiduciary duties to the Estate. See Xtreme Power, 563 B.R. at 632-33 (detailing fiduciary duties owed by corporate officers and directors under Delaware law);[59] Louisiana World, 858 F.2d at 245-46 (5th Cir. 1988) (detailing duties owed by debtors-in-possession). Although Seery did not buy the Claims at issue, he stood to profit from these sales because his close business allies would do his bidding after they had acceded to positions of power and control on the Oversight Board. Muck and Jessup were essentially stepping into the shoes of three of the largest unsecured creditors who were already slated to serve on the Oversight Board. Thus, by acquiring their Claims, all of the Proposed Defendants knew that Muck and Jessup would occupy these powerful oversight positions after the Effective Date.

50. Thus, the alleged conspiracy was successfully implemented before the Effective Date. Farallon and Stonehill now occupy control positions through the shell entities (Muck and Jessup) overseeing large compensation packages for Seery. Of course, this control (and the opportunity to control) presented a patent conflict of interest which Seery should have avoided, but instead knowingly created, fostered, and encouraged. HMIT alleges that Seery breached his duty to avoid this conflict or otherwise disclose this conflict and Farallon and Stonehill aided and abetted this breach.

[59] The Xtreme case also notes that "several Delaware courts have recognized that 'directors who are corporate employees lack independence because of their substantial interest in retaining their employment." 563 B.R. at 633-34. Because Muck and Jessup are now in control of Seery's compensation, it follows that Seery is beholden to them, and Seery's disclosure of inside information to Stonehill and Farallon confirms his conflict of interest.

51. The Original Debtor, as an investment adviser registered with the SEC, is also required to make public disclosures on its Form ADV, the uniform registration form for investment advisers required by the SEC. These Form ADV disclosures, which were in effect at the time of the insider trades at issue, explicitly forbade "any access person from trading either personally or on behalf of others . . . on material non-public information or communicating material non-public information to others in violation of the law or duty owed to another party."[60] It now appears these representations were false when made. Seery's alleged conduct also violated, at minimum, the duties Seery owed in his various capacities with the Original Debtor under the Form ADV disclosures.

52. Although initially strangers to the original bankruptcy, by accepting and using inside information, Farallon and Stonehill became "temporary insiders" and thus owed separate duties to the Estate. See S.E.C. v. Cuban, 620 F.3d 551 (5th Cir. 2010) ("[E]ven an individual who does not qualify as a traditional insider may become a 'temporary insider' if by entering 'into a special confidential relationship in the conduct of the business of the enterprise [they] are given access to information solely for corporate purposes." In re Washington Mut., Inc., 461 B.R. 200 (Bankr. D. Del. 2011), vacated in part, 08-12229 MFW, 2012 WL 1563880 (Bankr. D. Del. Feb. 24, 2012) (finding that equity committee stated colorable claim for equitable disallowance against creditors who "became temporary insiders of the Debtors when the Debtors gave them confidential information and allowed them to participate in negotiations with JPMC for the shared goal of reaching a settlement that would form the basis of a consensual plan of reorganization"; vacated in part as a condition of settlement only);[61] See also, In re Smith, 415 B.R. 222, 232-33 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009) ("[a]n insider is an entity or person with 'a sufficiently close relationship with the debtor that his conduct is made subject to closer scrutiny than those dealing at arm's length with the debtor.' 'Thus, the term "insider" is viewed to encompass two classes: (1) per se insiders as listed in the Code and (2) extra-statutory insiders that do not deal at arm's length.'" (citations omitted)). Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup clearly fall into this latter category.

[61] Although the Washington Mutual case was subsequently vacated, the Court's intellectual reasoning remains valid because the vacatur was mandated by a mediated settlement, not because the court's logic was flawed or changed, and the court expressly noted that the parties' settlement was conditioned on vacatur. See In re Washington Mut., Inc., No. 08-12229 MFW, 2012 WL 1563880, *8 (Bankr. D. Del. Feb. 24, 2012) ("grant[ing] partial vacatur . . . in furtherance of the settlement embodied in the Plan," and noting that "absent the requested vacatur, the collapse of the Plan could result in the termination of the Global Settlement Agreement." (emphasis added)).

53. Because Farallon and Stonehill (acting through Muck and Jessup) now hold the majority of the seats on the Oversight Board, they, along with Seery, exercise control of the reorganization proceedings. At no time were Farallon, Stonehill, or Seery's plans disclosed to the other creditors or equity. In fact, the only inference that can be reasonably drawn is that Farallon and Stonehill brazenly sought to conceal their involvement by establishing shell entities—Muck and Jessup—to nominally hold the Claims and create an opaque barrier to any effort to identify the "Oz behind the curtain." Such conduct aligns precisely with the inequitable conduct detailed in Citicorp and Adelphia (discussed below).

54. In sum, the proposed Adversary Proceeding sets forth plausible allegations that Stonehill and Farallon were aware of Seery's fiduciary duties. Indeed, as registered investment advisors, both Farallon and Stonehill were acutely aware of Seery's fiduciary obligations, including, without limitation, the duty to act in the best interests of the Original Debtor's Estate and the duty not to engage in insider trading that would benefit Seery, as an insider, and themselves, as non-statutory insiders. By accepting and then acting on material non-public information, Farallon and Stonehill (as well as Muck and Jessup) aided and abetted breaches of these fiduciary duties. By placing themselves in positions to control Seery's compensation, Farallon and Stonehill (acting through Muck and Jessup) induced, encouraged, aided and abetted Seery's self-dealing.

D. Equitable Disallowance is an Appropriate Remedy

55. HMIT also seeks equitable disallowance. Although the Fifth Circuit in Matter of Mobile Steel Co. generally limited the court's equitable powers to subordination rather than disallowance,[62] the Fifth Circuit did not foreclose the viability of equitable disallowance as a potential remedy. See 563 F.2d 692, 699 n. 10 (5th Cir. 1977). Binding U.S. Supreme Court precedent in Pepper v. Litton also permits bankruptcy courts to fashion disallowance remedies. 308 U.S. 295, 304-11 (1939). Bankruptcy Code § 510, which supplies the authority for equitable subordination, was "intended to codify case law, such as Pepper v. Litton . . . and is not intended to limit the court's power in any way…. Nor does [it] preclude a bankruptcy court from completely disallowing a claim in appropriate circumstances." In re Adelphia Commun. Corp., 365 B.R. 24, 71-72 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2007), aff'd in part sub nom. Adelphia Recovery Tr. v. Bank of Am., N.A., 390 B.R. 64 (S.D.N.Y. 2008), adhered to on reconsideration, 05 CIV. 9050 (LMM), 2008 WL 1959542 (S.D.N.Y. May 5, 2008) (emphasis and omissions in original).[63]

56. The Fifth Circuit's decision in Mobile Steel also was premised on the notion that disallowance would not add to the quiver of defenses to fight unfairness because

[63] In Washington Mutual, the Court's intellectual reasoning when imposing disallowance is instructive. See In re Washington Mut., Inc., No. 08-12229 MFW, 2012 WL 1563880, *8 (Bankr. D. Del. Feb. 24, 2012) ("grant[ing] partial vacatur . . . in furtherance of the settlement embodied in the Plan," and noting that "absent the requested vacatur, the collapse of the Plan could result in the termination of the Global Settlement Agreement." (emphasis added)).

creditors "are fully protected by subordination" and "[i]f the misconduct directed against the bankrupt is so extreme that disallowance might appear to be warranted, then surely the claim is either invalid or the bankrupt possesses a clear defense against it." Mobile Steel, 563 F.2d at 699 n. 10 (emphasis added). Importantly, however, the factual scenarios considered in Mobile Steel do not exist here.

57. Here, Muck and Jessup purchased both Class 8 and Class 9 Claims, and they now effectively occupy more than 90% of the entire field of unsecured creditors in these two claimant tiers. Thus, subordination cannot effectively address the current facts where the Original Debtor's CEO and CRO conspired directly with close business allies who acquired the largest unsecured claims to the detriment of other innocent creditors and former equity. The reasoning in published cases from other circuits supports this conclusion. See Adelphia, 365 B.R. at 71-73; Citicorp Venture Capital, Ltd. v. Comm. of Creditors Holding Unsecured Claims, 160 F.3d 982, 991 n. 7 (3d Cir. 1998).

58. The purpose of equitable subordination is to assure that the wrongdoer does not profit from bad conduct. In the typical case, subordination to other creditors will achieve this deterrence. But, it is clear that the Third Circuit's decision in Citicorp was structured to use subordination as just one tool in a larger tool box to make sure "at a minimum, the remedy here should deprive – [the fiduciary] of its profit on the purchase of the notes." Id at 991. In Adelphia, the Southern District of New York also used equitable subordination as a remedy to address wrongs of non-insiders who aided and abetted breaches a fiduciary duty by the debtor's management. 365 B.R. at 32.

59. But subordination cannot adequately address the wrongful conduct at issue. This is because subordination is typically limited to instances where one creditor is subordinated to other creditors, not equity. Here, for all practical purposes, there are only a few other unsecured creditors with relatively small stakes. Therefore, subordination as a weapon of deterrence is neutered.

60. In sum, by engaging in the alleged wrongful acts, including aiding and abetting Seery's breaches of fiduciary duty, Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup should not be rewarded. The Proposed Defendants engaged in alleged conduct which damaged the Original Debtor's estate, including improper agreements to compensate Seery under the terms of the CTA. Equitable disallowance is an appropriate remedy which, when combined with disgorgement of all ill-gotten profits, will deprive the Proposed Defendants of their ill-gotten gains.

E. Disgorgement and Unjust Enrichment

61. The law is clear that disgorgement is an available remedy for breach of fiduciary duty both under Texas Law, see Kinzbach Tool Co. v. Corbett-Wallace Corporation, 160 S.W. 2d 509 (Tex. 1942), and under Delaware law, see Metro Storage International, LLC v. Harron, 275 A.3d 810 (Del. Ch. 2022). Disgorgement is also an appropriate remedy for unjust enrichment under Texas law, Hunter v. Shell Oil Co., 198 F.2d 485 (5th Cir. 1952), and under Delaware law, In re Tyson Foods, Inc. Consolidated Shareholder Litigation, 919 A.2d 563 (Del. Ch. 2007).[64]

62. Likewise, the imposition of a constructive trust is proper for addressing unjust enrichment under both Delaware and Texas law, see Teacher's Retirement System of Louisiana v. Aidinoff, 900 A.2d 654 (Del. Ch. 2006) and Hsin-Chi-Su v. Vantage Drilling Company, 474 S.W. 3d 384 (Tex. App. – 14th Dist. 2015), pet. denied. The elements of unjust enrichment are: (1) the defendant must have gained a benefit (2) at the expense of plaintiff, (3) and retention of that benefit must be shown to be unjust. See Restatement (Third) of Restitution and Unjust Enrichment §321, cmt. e (2011).

63. Here, the imposition of a constructive trust and disgorgement are clearly appropriate to provide redress for the alleged breaches of fiduciary duty and the knowing participation in (or aiding and abetting) those breaches. Furthermore, the imposition of a constructive trust and disgorgement are appropriate to disgorge the improper benefits that all of the Proposed Defendants received by virtue of collusion and insider trading.

64. As set forth in the proposed Adversary Proceeding, Seery gained the opportunity to have his compensation demands rubber stamped. The other Defendants gained the opportunity to purchase valuable claims at a discount knowing that pessimistic financial projections were false and that the upside investment potential was great. Retention of the benefits they received would be unjust and inequitable.

65. Clearly, the Debtor's Estate was damaged by virtue of the claimed conduct. Seery obtained profits and compensation to the detriment of that estate as well as the estate of the Reorganized Debtor, other innocent creditors and HMIT, as former equity and as a contingent Claimant Trust Beneficiary.

F. Declaratory Relief

66. HMIT also seeks declaratory relief pursuant to Fed. R. Bank P. 7001(9). Specifically, HMIT seeks a declaratory judgment that: (a) there is a ripe controversy concerning HMIT's rights and entitlements under the Claimant Trust Agreement; (b) as a general matter, HMIT has standing to bring an action against a trustee even if its interest is considered "contingent;" (c) HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested upon disgorgement of the ill-gotten profits of Muck and Jessup, and by extension, Farallon and Stonehill; (d) HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested upon the equitable disallowance of the Claims held by Muck and Jessup over and above their initial investments; (e) Seery is properly estopped from asserting that HMIT is not an appropriate party to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and/or the Claimant Trust because of fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct, and unclean hands; (f) Muck and Jessup are properly estopped from asserting that HMIT is not an appropriate party to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized

Debtor and the Claimant Trust because of their fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct, and unclean hands; and (g) all of the Proposed Defendants are estopped from asserting that HMIT does not have standing in its individual capacity due to their fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct, and unclean hands.

G. HMIT has Direct Standing.

67. The Texas Supreme Court recently held that "a partner or other stakeholder in a business organization has constitutional standing to sue for an alleged loss in the value of its interest in the organization." Pike v. Texas EMC Mgt., LLC, 610 S.W.3d 763, 778 (Tex. 2020). In so holding, the Court considered federal law and found that the traditional "incantation that a shareholder may not sue for the corporation's injury" is really a question of capacity, which goes to the merits of a claim, rather than an issue of standing that would impact subject matter jurisdiction. Id. at 777 (noting that the 5th Circuit and "[o]ther federal circuits agree that a plaintiff has standing to sue for the lost value of its investment in a corporation"). Because Seery, Muck, Jessup, Stonehill, Farallon's alleged actions devalued HMIT's interest in the Debtor's Estate, including, without limitation, payment of excessive compensation to Seery, HMIT has standing to pursue its common law claims directly. HMIT also has direct standing to seek declaratory relief as set forth in the proposed Adversary Proceeding.

VII. Prayer

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, Hunter Mountain Investment Trust respectfully requests this Court grant HMIT leave authorizing it to file the Adversary Complaint, attached as Exhibit 1, as an Adversary Proceeding in this United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, in its own name and as a derivative action on behalf of the Debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P., against Muck Holdings, LLC, Jessup Holdings, LLC, Farallon Capital Management, LLC, Stonehill Capital Management, LLC, James P. Seery, Jr., and John Doe Defendants Nos. 1 – 10, and further grant HMIT all such other and further relief to which HMIT may be justly entitled.

VERIFIED ADVERSARY COMPLAINT

Hunter Mountain Investment Trust ("HMIT") files this Verified Adversary Complaint in its individual capacity and, as a derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor, Highland Capital Management L.P. ("HCM" or "Reorganized Debtor") and the Highland Claimant Trust (collectively "Plaintiffs"), complaining of Muck Holdings, LLC ("Muck"), Jessup Holdings, LLC ("Jessup"), Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"), Stonehill Capital Management, LLC ("Stonehill"), James P. Seery, Jr., ("Seery") and John Doe Defendant Nos. 1-10 (Muck, Jessup, Stonehill, Farallon, Seery and the John Doe Defendants Nos. 1-10 are collectively "Defendants"), and would show:

I. Introduction

1. HMIT brings this Verified Adversary Complaint ("Complaint") on behalf of itself, individually, and as a derivative action benefitting the Reorganized Debtor and on behalf of the Highland Claimant Trust ("Claimant Trust"), as defined in the Claimant Trust Agreement (Doc. 3521-5) ("CTA").[1] This derivative action is specifically brought pursuant to Rule 23.1 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and B. R. Rule 7023.1. At the time of the transactions at issue, HMIT held a 99.5% limited partnership in Highland Capital Management, LP, the Original Debtor, as described herein. This derivative action is not a collusive effort to confer jurisdiction that the Court would otherwise lack.

2. Upon the Effective Date, the assets of the bankruptcy estate of Highland Capital Management, L.P., as the Original Debtor (the "Debtor's Estate") were transferred to the Highland Claimant Trust under the terms of the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [Doc. 1943, Exhibit A] (the "Plan") and as defined in the CTA. These assets include all "causes of action" that the Debtor's Estate had before the Effective Date including, without limitation, the causes of action set forth in this Adversary Proceeding. Furthermore, the Claimant Trust is managed by the Claimant Trustee, Seery. Therefore, any demand upon Seery to prosecute the claims set forth in this Complaint would be futile because Seery is a Defendant. Similarly, the Oversight Board exercises supervision over Seery as Claimant

[1] Solely in the alternative, and in the unlikely event HMIT's proposed causes of actions against Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and/or Jessup are considered to be "Estate Claims" as those terms are used and defined within the CTA and Exhibit A to the Notice of Final Term Sheet [Docket No. 354] in HCM's bankruptcy (and without admitting the same), HMIT alternatively seeks standing to bring this action as a derivative action on behalf of the Litigation Sub-Trust as appropriate. Any demand on the Litigation Sub-Trust would be equally futile for the same reasons addressed in HMIT's Emergency Motion for Leave (Doc. __).

Trustee, and Muck and Jessup are members of the Oversight Board. Any demand upon Muck and Jessup to prosecute these claims would be equally futile. All conditions precedent to bringing this derivative action have otherwise been satisfied.

3. This action has become necessary because of Defendants' tortious conduct. This tortious conduct occurred before the Effective Date of the Plan, but its effects have caused damage both before and after the Effective Date. Prior to the Effective Date, HMIT owned 99.5% of the limited partnership interest in the Original Debtor and was the beneficiary of fiduciary duties owed by Seery.

4. Seery, the Original Debtor's CEO and former Chief Restructuring Officer ("CRO"), wrongfully facilitated and promoted the sale of large unsecured creditor claims to his close business allies and friends, Farallon and Stonehill. He did so by providing material non-public information to them concerning the value of the Original Debtor's Estate that other stakeholders did not know. Farallon and Stonehill, who were otherwise strangers to the bankruptcy proceedings, wrongfully purchased the claims through their special purpose entities, Muck and Jessup, based upon this inside information, and they are now profiting from their misconduct. Seery's dealings with the other Defendants were not arm's length, but instead were covert, undisclosed, and collusive.

5. Motivated by corporate greed, the other Defendants aided and abetted or, alternatively, knowingly participated in Seery's wrongful conduct. They also breached their own duties as "non-statutory insiders." Because of their long-standing, historical relationships with Seery, and their use of material non-public information, Farallon, Stonehill, Muck, and Jessup assumed positions of control over the affairs of the Debtor's bankruptcy, including compensation awards to Seery. As such, they became non-statutory insiders.

6. HMIT was formerly the largest equity holder in the Debtor, holding a 99.5% limited partnership interest. HMIT now holds an Allowed Class 10 Class B/C Limited Partnership Interest and a Contingent Trust Interest under the CTA. Given HMIT's' position as former equity, HMIT's right to recover from the Claimant Trust is junior to the Reorganized Debtor's unsecured creditors, now known as Claimant Trust Beneficiaries. However, the vast majority of the approved unsecured claims superior to HMIT's interest are the claims wrongfully acquired by insider trading and the breaches of duty at issue in this proceeding.

7. By wrongfully soliciting, fostering, and encouraging the wrongful insider trades, Seery violated his fiduciary duties to the Debtor's Estate, specifically his duty of loyalty and his duty to maximize the value of the Estate with corresponding recovery by legitimate creditors and former equity. Seery was motivated out of self-interest to garner personal benefit (to the detriment of the Debtor's Estate) by strategically benefitting his business allies with non-public information. He then successfully "planted" his allies onto the Oversight Board, which, as a consequence does not act as an independent board in the exercise of its responsibilities. Rather, imbued with powers to oversee Seery's future compensation, the other Defendants are postured to reward Seery financially regarding Defendants' illicit dealings and, upon information and belief, they have done so.

8. By receiving and acting upon material non-public information concerning the financial condition of the Debtor's Estate, Stonehill and Farallon, acting individually and through special purpose shell entities they created and controlled, directly or indirectly, are also liable for aiding and abetting Seery's breaches of fiduciary duties. By acquiring the claims at issue, Muck and Jessup, the shell entities created and controlled by Stonehill and Farallon, also became non-statutory insiders owing duties of disclosure which they also breached.

9. HMIT separately seeks recovery against John Doe Defendant Nos. 1-10. Farallon actively concealed the precise legal relationship between Farallon and Muck. Stonehill actively concealed the precise legal relationship between Stonehill and Jessup. What is known, however, is that Farallon and Stonehill created these special purpose shell entities on the eve of the insider trades to acquire ownership of the claims and to otherwise control the affairs of the Oversight Board. Both Farallon and Stonehill rejected inquiries concerning the exact nature of their relationship with these special purpose entities. Accordingly, HMIT seeks equitable tolling of any statute of limitations concerning claims against unknown business entities that Farallon and Stonehill may have created and inserted as intermediate corporate layers in the transactions at issue.

10. HMIT seeks to disgorge all Defendants' ill-gotten profits and equitable disallowance of the remaining unpaid balances on the following allowed claims: Claim Nos. 23, 72, 81, 143, 147, 149, 150, 153, 154, 190, and 191 (the "Claims") currently held by Muck and Jessup. Because Defendants received substantial distributions from the Claimant Trust in connection with these Claims, HMIT seeks to disgorge all such distributions above Defendants' initial investment—compelling restitution of such funds to the Claimant Trust for the benefit of innocent creditors and former equity pursuant to the waterfall established under the Plan and the CTA. HMIT also seeks to disgorge Seery's compensation from the date his collusive conduct first occurred. Alternatively, HMIT seeks damages on behalf of the Claimant Trust in an amount equal to all compensation paid to Seery from the onset of his collusive conduct to present.

II. Jurisdiction and Venue

11. Pursuant to Misc. Order No. 33 Order of Reference of Bankruptcy Cases, U.S. District Court for N.D. Texas (the "Order of Reference"), this Complaint is commenced in the Bankruptcy Court because it is "related to a case under Title 11." The filing of this Complaint is expressly subject to and without waiver of Plaintiff' rights and ability to seek withdrawal of the reference pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157(d), FED. R. BANKR. P. 5011, and Local Bankruptcy Rule 5011-1. Plaintiffs hereby demand a right to a trial by jury of all claims asserted herein and nothing in this Complaint, nor Plaintiffs' compliance with the Order of Reference, shall be deemed a waiver of this right.

12. This Court has jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties as a "related to" proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1334 and 157(a) and Articles IX.F, and XI. of the Plan.

13. Pursuant to Rule 7008 of the Bankruptcy Rules, Plaintiffs do not consent to the entry of final orders or judgment by the bankruptcy court.

14. Venue is proper in this district and division pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 1408 and 1409, and Articles IX.F, and XI. of the Plan.

III. Parties

15. HMIT is a Delaware statutory trust that was the largest equity holder in the Original Debtor, holding a 99.5% limited partnership interest. HMIT is also the holder of a Contingent Trust Interest in the Claimant Trust, but should be treated as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary due to Defendants' wrongful conduct.

16. Pursuant to the Plan and the CTA, the Claimant Trust holds the assets of the Reorganized Debtor, including the causes of action that accrued to the Original Debtor before the Effective Date. The Claimant Trust is established in accordance with the Delaware Statutory Trust Act and Treasury Regulatory Section 301.7701-4(d).

17. Muck is a Delaware limited liability company, with its principal office in California, and may be served with process at One Maritime Plaza, Suite 2100, San Francisco, CA 94111. Muck has made prior appearances in the Debtor's bankruptcy.

18. Jessup is a Delaware limited liability company, with its principal office in New York, and may be served with process via its registered agent, Vcorp Services, LLC, at 108 W. 13th Street Suite 100, Wilmington, Delaware 19801. Jessup has made prior appearances in the Debtor's bankruptcy.

19. Farallon is a Delaware limited liability company, with its principal office in California, and may be served with process at One Maritime Plaza, Suite 2100, San Francisco, CA 94111. Farallon is a capital management company that manages hedge funds and is a registered investment advisor. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Farallon because Farallon's conduct giving rise to or relating to the claims in this Adversary Proceeding occurred in Texas, thereby satisfying all minimum contacts requirements and due process considerations.

20. Stonehill is a Delaware limited liability company, with its principal office in New York, and may be served with process at 320 Park Avenue, 26th Floor, New York, NY 10022. Stonehill is a capital management company managing hedge funds and is a registered investment advisor. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Stonehill because Stonehill's conduct giving rise to or relating to the claims in this Adversary Proceeding occurred in Texas, thereby satisfying all minimum contacts and all due process considerations.

21. Seery is an individual citizen and resident of the State of New York. Mr. Seery may be served with process at 100 Crescent Court, Suite 1805, Dallas, Texas 75201.

22. John Doe Defendant Nos. 1-10 are currently unknown individuals or business entities who may be identified in discovery as involved in the wrongful transactions at issue.

IV. Facts

A. Procedural Background

23. On October 16, 2019, the Debtor filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in Delaware Bankruptcy Court,[2] which was later transferred to the Northern District of Texas Bankruptcy Court, Dallas Division, on December 4, 2019.[3]

24. On October 29, 2019, the U.S. Trustee's office appointed a four-member Unsecured Creditors Committee ("UCC") consisting of three judgment creditors—the Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund ("Redeemer"); Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC (collectively "Acis"); and UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch (collectively "UBS")—and an unpaid vendor, Meta-E Discovery.

25. Following the venue transfer to Texas, on December 27, 2019, the Debtor filed its Motion of the Debtor for Approval of Settlement with the Official Committee of

Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course ("Governance Motion").[4] On January 9, 2020, the Court signed a Governance Order granting the Governance Motion.[5]

26. As part of the Governance Order, an independent board of directors—which included Seery as one of the selections of the Unsecured Creditors Committee—was appointed to the Board of Directors (the "Board") of Strand, the Original Debtor's general partner. The Board then appointed Seery as the Chief Executive Officer in place of the previous CEO, Mr. James Dondero, as well as the CRO.[6] Seery currently serves as Trustee of the Claimant Trust under the terms of the CTA and the CEO of the Reorganized Debtor.[7]

B. The Targeted Claims

27. In his capacity as the Original Debtor's CEO and CRO, Seery negotiated and obtained court approval for settlements with several large unsecured creditors including Redeemer, Acis, UBS, and another major unsecured creditor, HarbourVest (Redeemer, Acis, UBS, and HarbourVest are collectively the "Settling Parties"), resulting in the following allowed Claims:

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9
Redeemer	$137 mm	$0 mm

[6] Doc. 854, Order Approving Retention of Seery as CEO/CRO.

[7] See Doc. 1943, Order Approving Plan, p. 34.

Acis	$23 mm	$0 mm
HarbourVest	$45 mm	$35 mm
UBS	$65 mm	$60 mm
(Totals)	$270 mm	$95 mm

As reflected in these settlements, HarbourVest and UBS owned Class 9 claims in addition to Class 8 Claims. Class 9 Claims were subordinated to Class 8 Claims in the distribution waterfall in the Plan.

28. Each of the Settling Parties sold their Claims to Farallon and Stonehill (or affiliated special purpose entities) shortly after receiving court approval of the settlements. One of these "trades" took place within just a few weeks before the Plan's Effective Date.[8] All of these trades occurred when HMIT held its 99.5% equity stake in the Debtor. Notice of these trades was first provided in filings in the records of the Original Debtor's bankruptcy proceedings, as follows: Claim No. 23 (Doc. 2211, 2212, and 2215), Claim Nos. 190 and 191 (Doc. 2697 and 2698), Claim Nos. 143, 147, 149, 150, 153 and 154 (Doc. 2263), Claim No. 81 (Doc. 2262), Claim No. 72 (Doc. 2261).

29. Farallon and Stonehill, both of whom are registered investment advisors that manage hedge funds, have fiduciary duties to their own investors. As such, they are acutely aware of their duties and obligation as fiduciaries. Yet, they both invested many tens of millions of dollars, directly or indirectly, to acquire the Claims in the absence of any publicly available information that could provide any economic justification for their investment decisions.

30. Upon information and belief, Stonehill and Farallon collectively invested an estimated $160 million to acquire the Claims with a face amount of $365 million, and they did so in the absence of any meaningful due diligence. Indeed, Farallon has admitted that it conducted no due diligence but relied on Seery's guarantees.

31. Stonehill and Farallon's investments become even more suspicious because the Plan provided the only publicly available information, which, at the time, included pessimistic projections that the Claims would ever receive full payment:

a. From October 2019, when the original Chapter 11 Petition was filed, to January 2021, just before the Plan was confirmed, the projected value of HCM's assets dropped over $200 million from $566 million to $364 million.[9]

b. HCM's Disclosure Statement projected payment of 71.32% of Class 8 claims, and 0% of claims in Classes 9-11.[10]

   - This meant that Farallon and Stonehill invested more than $163 million in Claims when the publicly available information indicated they would receive $0 in return on their investment as Class 9 creditors and substantially less than par on their Class 8 Claims.

c. In HCM's Q3 2021 Post-Confirmation Report, HCM reported that the amount of Class 8 claims expected to be paid dropped even further from 71% to 54%.

[9] Doc. 1473, Disclosure Statement, p. 18.

[10] Doc. 1875-1, Plan Supplement, Ex. A, p. 4.

d. Despite the stark decline in the value of the estate and in the midst of substantial reductions in the percentage of Class 8 Claims expected to be satisfied, Stonehill, through Jessup, and Farallon, through Muck, nevertheless purchased the four largest bankruptcy claims from the Redeemer Committee/Crusader Fund, Acis, HarbourVest, and UBS (collectively, again, the "Claims") in April and August of 2021 in the combined amount of $163 million.[11]

32. Upon information and belief, Stonehill, through its special purpose entity, Jessup, acquired the Redeemer Committee's claim for $78 million.[12] Upon information and belief, the $23 million Acis claim[13] was sold to Farallon/Muck for $8 million. Upon information and belief, HarbourVest sold its combined $80 million in claims to Farallon/Muck for $27 million. UBS sold its combined $125 million in claims for $50 million to both Stonehill/Jessup and Farallon/Muck. In the instance of UBS, the total projected payout was only $35 million. Indeed, as part of these transactions, both Farallon and Stonehill purchased Class 9 Claims at a time when the Debtor's Estate projected a zero dollar return on all such Claims.

[11] Notices of Transfers [Docs. 2212, 2215, 2261, 2262, 2263, 2215, 2297, 2298]. The Acis claim was transferred on April 16, 2021; the Redeemer, Crusader, and HarbourVest claims were transferred on April 30, 2021; and the UBS claims were transferred on August 9, 2021.

[12] July 6, 2021, letter from Alvarez & Marsal CRF Management, LLC to Highland Crusader Funds Stakeholders.

[13] Seery/HCM have argued that $10 million of the Acis claim is self-funding.

C. Material Non-Public Information is Disclosed to Seery's Affiliates at Stonehill and Farallon.

33. One of the significant assets of the Debtor's Estate was the Debtor's direct and indirect holdings in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Inc. ("MGM").[14]

34. On December 17, 2020, James Dondero, sent an email to Seery. At that time, Dondero was a member of the MGM board, and the email contained material non-public information regarding Amazon and Apple's interest in acquiring MGM.[15] Of course, any such sale would significantly enhance the value of the Original Debtor's estate.

35. Upon receipt of this material non-public information, Seery should have halted all transactions involving MGM stock, yet just six days later Seery filed a motion in this Court seeking approval of the Original Debtor's settlement with HarbourVest - resulting in a transfer to the Original Debtor of HarbourVest's interest in a Debtor-advised fund, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF"), which held substantial MGM debt and equity.[16] Conspicuously, the HCLOF interest was not transferred to the Original Debtor for distribution as part of the bankruptcy estate, but rather to "to an entity to be designated by the Debtor"—i.e., one that was not subject to typical bankruptcy reporting requirements.[17]

[16] Doc. 1625. Approximately 19.1% of HCLOF's assets were comprised of debt and equity in MGM.

[17] Doc. 1625.

36. Upon information and belief, aware that the Debtor's stake in MGM afforded a new profit center, Seery saw an opportunity to increase his own compensation and enlisted the help of Stonehill and Farallon to extract further value from the Original Debtor's Estate at the expense of other innocent creditors and equity. This quid pro quo included, at a minimum, a tacit, if not express, understanding that Seery would be well-compensated.

37. Until 2009, Seery was the Global Head of Fixed Income Loans at Lehman Brothers[18] where, on information and belief, he conducted substantial business with Farallon. Following the collapse of Lehman Brothers, Seery continued to work with, and indeed represented Farallon as its legal counsel. Seery ultimately joined a hedge fund, River Birch Capital,[19] which, along with Stonehill, served on the creditors committee in other bankruptcy proceedings. GCM Grovesnor, a global asset management firm, held four seats on the Redeemer Committee[20] and, upon information and belief, is a significant investor in Stonehill and Farallon. Grovesnor, through Redeemer, played a large part in appointing Seery as a director of Strand Advisors. Seery was beholden to Grovesnor from the outset, and, by extension, Grovesnor's affiliates Stonehill and Farallon.

[20] Declaration of John A. Morris [Doc. 1090], Ex. 1, pp. 15.

38. As successful capital management firms, with advisory and fiduciary duties to their own clients, Stonehill and Farallon typically engage in robust due diligence before making significant investments. Yet, in this case, it would have been impossible for Stonehill and Farallon to forecast any profit at the time of their multi-million-dollar investments given the negative financial information disclosed by the Original Debtor's Estate. Seery, as the CEO, was aware of and involved in approving these negative financial projections. In doing so, Seery intentionally caused the publication of misleading, false information.

39. Seery shared with Stonehill and Farallon non-public information concerning the value of the Original Debtor's Estate which was higher than publicly available information. Thus, the only logical conclusion is that all Defendants knew that the publicly available projections, which accompanied the Plan, were understated, false, and misleading. Otherwise, Farallon, Muck, Stonehill and Jessup would not have made their multi-million-dollar investments. None of the Defendants disclosed their knowledge of the misleading nature of these financial projections when they had a duty to do so. None of the Defendants disclosed the nature of their dealings in acquiring the Claims.

40. By wrongfully exploiting non-public insider information, Stonehill and Farallon—acting through Muck and Jessup—became the largest holders of unsecured claims in the Debtor's Estate with resulting control over the Oversight Board and a front row seat to the reorganization and distribution of Claimant Trust Assets. As such, they were given control (through Muck and Jessup) to approve discretionary bonuses and success fees for Seery from these assets.

D. Distributions

41. The MGM sale was ultimately consummated in March 2022 for $6.1 billion in cash, plus $2.5 billion in debt that Amazon assumed and immediately repaid.[21]

42. By the end of Q3 2021, just over $6 million of the projected $205 million available for general unsecured claimants had been disbursed.[22] No additional distributions were made to general unsecured claimholders until, suddenly, in Q3 2022 almost $250 million was paid toward Class 8 general unsecured claims—$45 million more than was ever projected.[23] Thus, Stonehill (Jessup) and Farallon (Muck) have already received returns that far eclipse their investment. They also stand to make further significant profits on their investments, including payments on Class 9 Claims.

43. As of December 31, 2022, the Claimant Trust has distributed $255,201,228. On a pro rata basis, that means that innocent creditors have received approximately $22,373,000 in distributions against the stated value of their allowed claims. That leaves a remaining unpaid balance of approximately $9,627,000.

[21] Amazon Q1 2022 10-Q.

[23] Doc. 3582.

44. Muck and Jessup already have received approximately $232.8 million on their Claims. Assuming and original investment of approximately $160 million, this represents over $72 million in ill-gotten profits that, if disgorged, would be far more than what is required to fully pay all other innocent creditors - immediately placing HMIT in the status of a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary.

45. It is clear Seery facilitated the sale of the Claims to Stonehill (Jessup) and Farallon (Muck) at discounted prices and used misleading financial projections to facilitate these trades. This was part of a larger strategy to install Stonehill (Jessup) and Farallon (Muck), his business allies, onto the Oversight Board where they would oversee lucrative bonuses and other compensation for Seery in exchange for hefty profits they expected to receive.

V. Causes of Action

A. Count I (against Seery): Breach of Fiduciary Duty

46. The allegations in paragraphs 1-45 above are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

47. As CEO and CRO of a debtor-in-possession, Seery owed fiduciary duties to HMIT, as equity, and to the Debtor's Estate, including, without limitation, the duty of loyalty. Seery also was under a duty to avoid conflicts of interests, but Seery willfully and knowingly engaged in conduct which conflicted with his fiduciary duties—and he did so out of financial self-interest.

48. By fraudulently providing and/or approving negative projections of the Debtor's Estate when he knew otherwise, Seery willfully and knowingly breached his fiduciary duties.

49. By misusing and disclosing confidential, material non-public information to Stonehill and Farallon, Seery willfully and knowingly breached his fiduciary duties.

50. By failing to disclose his role in the inside trades at issue, Seery willfully and knowingly breached his fiduciary duties.

51. As a result of his willful misconduct, Seery was unfairly advantaged by receiving additional undisclosed compensation and bonuses from the assets of the Debtor's Estate and from the Claimant Trust Assets—to the detriment of other innocent stakeholders, including HMIT, as former equity and a contingent Claimant Trust Beneficiary.

52. To remedy these breaches, Seery is liable for disgorgement of all compensation he received since his collusion with Farallon and Stonehill first began. Alternatively, Seery should be disgorged of all compensation paid to him under the terms of the CTA since the Effective Date of the Plan in August 2021.

53. Alternatively, Plaintiffs are entitled to recover damages measured by all ill-gotten compensation which Seery has received since his first collusive conduct began.

B. Count II (against Stonehill, Farallon, Jessup and Muck): Breaches of Fiduciary Duty and Knowing Participation in Breach of Fiduciary Duty

54. The allegations in paragraphs 1-53 above are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

55. Seery owed fiduciary duties to HMIT and the Debtor's Estate, and he willfully and knowingly breached these duties. Without limiting the foregoing, Seery owed a duty of loyalty which he willfully and knowingly breached. Seery also owed a duty to not engage in self-interested conduct to the detriment of the Debtor's Estate and innocent stakeholders. Seery also willfully and knowingly breached this duty.

56. Stonehill and Farallon were aware of Seery's fiduciary duties and, by purchasing the Claims and approving bonuses and other compensation for Seery, Stonehill (acting through Jessup) and Farallon (acting through Muck), willfully and knowingly participated in Seery's breaches or, alternatively, willfully aided and abetted such breaches.

57. Stonehill (Jessup) and Farallon (Muck) unfairly received many millions of dollars in profits and fees—and stand to earn even more profits and fees—to the detriment of innocent stakeholders, including HMIT.

58. Stonehill and Farallon are liable for disgorgement of all profits earned from their purchase of the Claims. In addition, they are liable in damages for excessive compensation paid to Seery as part of the covert quid pro quo with Seery.

C. Count III (against all Defendants): Fraud by Misrepresentation and Material Nondisclosure

59. The allegations in paragraphs 1-58 above are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

60. Based on Seery's duties as CEO and CRO of a debtor-in-possession, and the other Defendants' duties as non-statutory insiders, Seery, Stonehill (Jessup), and Farallon (Muck) had a duty to disclose Stonehill and Farallon's plans to purchase the Claims, but they deliberately failed to do so. Seery also had a duty to disclose correct financial projections but, rather, misrepresented such values or failed to correct false and misleading projections. These factual misrepresentations and omissions were material.

61. The withheld financial information was material because it has had an adverse impact on control over the eventual distributions to creditors and former equity, as well as the right to control Seery's compensation. By withholding such information, Seery was able to plant friendly business allies on the Oversight Board to the detriment of innocent stakeholders.

62. Defendants knew that HMIT and other creditors were ignorant of their plans, and HMIT and other stakeholders did not have an equal opportunity to discover their scheme. HMIT and the other innocent stakeholders justifiably relied on misleading information relating to the value of the Original Debtor's Estate.

63. By failing to disclose material information, and by making or aiding and abetting material misrepresentations, Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and Jessup intended to induce HMIT to take no affirmative action.

64. HMIT justifiably relied on Seery, Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and Jessup's nondisclosures and representations, and HMIT was injured as a result and the Debtor's Estate was also injured.

65. As a result of their frauds, all Defendants should be disgorged of all profits and ill-gotten compensation derived from their fraudulent scheme. Seery is also liable for damages measured by excessive compensation he has received since he first engaged in willful misconduct.

D. Count IV (against all Defendants): Conspiracy

66. The allegations in paragraphs 1-65 above are incorporated herein as if incorporated herein verbatim.

67. Defendants conspired with each other to unlawfully breach fiduciary duties to HMIT and the Debtor's Estate, to conceal their fraudulent trades, and to interfere with HMIT's entitlement to the residual of the Claimant Trust Asset.

68. Seery's disclosure of material non-public information to Stonehill and Farallon, and Muck and Jessup's purchase of the Claims, are each overt acts in furtherance of the conspiracy.

69. HMIT's interest in the residual of the Claimant Trust Assets has been adversely impacted by this conspiracy. The assets have been depleted by virtue of Seery's compensation awards.

E. Count V (against Muck and Jessup): Equitable Disallowance

70. The allegations in paragraphs 1-69 above are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

71. By purchasing the Claims based on material non-public information, Stonehill and Farallon, through Jessup and Muck, engaged in inequitable conduct.

72. By earning significant profits on their purchases, Muck and Jessup have been unfairly advantaged to the detriment of the remaining stakeholders, including HMIT.

73. Given this inequitable conduct, equitable disallowance of Muck's and Jessup's Claims to the extent over and above their initial investment is appropriate and consistent with the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code.

74. Pleading in the alternative only, subordination of Muck's and Jessup's General Unsecured Claim Trust Interests and Subordinated Claim Trust Interests to all other interests in the Claimant Trust, including HMIT's Contingent Trust Interest, is necessary and appropriate to remedy Muck's and Jessup's wrongful conduct, and is also consistent with the purposes of the Bankruptcy Code.

F. Count VI (against all Defendants): Unjust Enrichment and Constructive* Trust

75. The allegations in paragraphs 1-74 above are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

76. By acquiring the Claims using material non-public information, Stonehill and Farallon breached a relationship of trust with the Original Debtor's Estate and other innocent stakeholders and were unjustly enriched and gained an undue advantage over other creditors and former equity.

77. Allowing Stonehill, Farallon, Muck and Jessup to retain their ill-gotten benefits at the expense of other innocent stakeholders and HMIT, as former equity, would be unconscionable.

78. Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and Jessup should be forced to disgorge all distributions over and above their original investment in the Claims as restitution for their unjust enrichment.

79. The proceeds Stonehill, Farallon, Muck, and Jessup have received from the Claimant Trust are traceable and identifiable. A constructive trust should be imposed on such proceeds to secure the restitution of these improperly retained benefits.

F. Count VI (Against all Defendants): Declaratory Relief

80. The allegations in paragraphs 1-79 are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

81. HMIT seeks declaratory relief. The Court has jurisdiction to provide declaratory judgment relief when there is an actual controversy that has arisen and exists relating to the rights and duties of the parties.

82. Bankruptcy Rule 7001 provides that "a proceeding to recover property or money," may include declaratory relief. See, Fed. R. Bank P. 7001(1), (9).

83. The Claimant Trust Agreement is governed under Delaware law. The Claimant Trust Agreement incorporates and is subject to Delaware trust law. HMIT seeks a declaration, as follows:

a. There is a ripe controversy concerning HMIT's rights and entitlements under the Claimant Trust Agreement;

b. As a general matter, HMIT has standing to bring an action against a trustee even if its interest is considered contingent;

c. HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested upon disgorgement of the ill-gotten profits of Muck and Jessup, and by extension, Farallon and Stonehill;

d. HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested upon the equitable disallowance of the Claims held by Muck and Jessup over and above their initial investments. Alternatively, HMIT's status as a Claimant Trust Beneficiary is fully vested when all of Muck's and Jessup's trust interests are subordinated to the trust interests held by HMIT;

e. Seery is properly estopped from asserting that HMIT is not an appropriate party to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and/or the Claimant Trust because of Seery's fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct and unclean hands;

f. Muck and Jessup are properly estopped from asserting that HMIT is not an appropriate party to bring this derivative action on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust because of their fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct and unclean hands;

g. All Defendants are estopped from asserting that HMIT does not have standing in its individual capacity due to their fraudulent conduct, bad faith, willful misconduct and unclean hands.

VI. Punitive Damages

84. The allegations in paragraphs 1-74 are incorporated herein as if set forth verbatim.

85. The Defendants' misconduct was intentional, knowing, willful and fraudulent and in total disregard of the rights of others. An award of punitive damages is appropriate and necessary under the facts of this case.

86. All conditions precedent to recovery herein have been satisfied.

VII. Prayer

WHEREFORE, HMIT prays for judgment as follows:

1. Equitable disallowance of the Claims over and above Muck's and Jessup's original investments (or, alternatively, subordination of their Claimant Trust Interests, as addressed herein);

2. Disgorgement of all funds distributed from the Claimant Trust to Muck and/or Jessup over and above their original investments;

3. Disgorgement of compensation paid to Seery in managing or administering the Original and Reorganized Debtor's Estate;

4. Imposition of a constructive trust;

5. Declaratory relief as described herein;

6. An award of actual damages as described herein;

7. An award of exemplary damages as allowed by law;

8. Pre- and post-judgment interest; and,

9. All such other and further relief to which HMIT may be justly entitled.

Respectfully Submitted,

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.'S MOTION FOR (A) BAD FAITH FINDING AND (B) ATTORNEYS' FEES AGAINST NEXPOINT REAL ESTATE PARTNERS LLC (F/K/A HCRE PARTNERS, LLC) IN CONNECTION WITH PROOF OF CLAIM 146

Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland"), the reorganized debtor in the above-captioned bankruptcy case, by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files this Motion for (A) Bad Faith Finding and (B) Attorneys' Fees Against NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC (f/k/a

[1] Highland's last four digits of its taxpayer identification number are (8357). The headquarters and service address for Highland is 100 Crescent Court, Suite 1850, Dallas, TX 75201.

HCRE Partners LLC) in Connection with Proof of Claim 146 (the "Motion") against NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC ("HCRE" and together with Highland, the "Parties"). In support of its Motion, Highland states as follows:

I. PRELIMINARY STATEMENT[2]

1. After two years of litigation—including two separate rounds of discovery sandwiched around a motion to disqualify HCRE's counsel and a full evidentiary hearing—the Court issued an order sustaining Highland's Objection to HCRE's Proof of Claim and denying without prejudice Highland's request for a bad faith finding and an award of attorneys' fees.

2. By this Motion, Highland renews its request for a bad faith finding and for an award of attorneys' fees on the ground that HCRE—and its principals, Messrs. Dondero and McGraner—lacked a good faith basis to file and prosecute its Proof of Claim. As described more fully below, the Motion is based on the following indisputable facts adduced during the Trial:

- Mr. Dondero signed the Proof of Claim on behalf of HCRE under penalty of perjury without a reasonable basis to believe the Proof of Claim was "true and correct," as required by law; and
- The Amended LLC Agreement accurately and unambiguously reflected the parties' intent such that no factual or legal basis existed to support HCRE's contentions that the Amended LLC Agreement "improperly allocate[d] the ownership percentages of the members thereto due to mutual mistake, lack of consideration, and/or failure of consideration," or its "claim to reform, rescind and/or modify" the Amended LLC Agreement.

3. This entire proceeding was a complete waste of judicial resources and of the Claimant Trust's assets; the relief sought therefore constitutes reasonable and appropriate remedies. Moreover, a bad faith finding and an award of attorneys' fees and related expenses in the aggregate amount of $825,940.55 should be imposed to (hopefully) deter Mr. Dondero and his affiliated entities and lawyers from filing further frivolous claims and pursuing meritless litigation.

II. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

A. HCRE Files the Proof of Claim, Highland Objects, and a Contested Matter Is Initiated

4. On April 8, 2020, James Dondero ("Mr. Dondero") signed and caused HCRE to file a proof of claim that was denoted by Highland's claims agent as proof of claim number 146 (the "Proof of Claim"). Morris Dec. Ex. A (at Ex. A).[3] In its Proof of Claim, HCRE asserted, among other things, that:

> [HCRE] may be entitled to distributions out of SE Multifamily, but such distributions have not been made because of the actions or inactions of the Debtor.[4] Additionally, [HCRE] contends that all or a portion of Debtor's equity, ownership, economic rights, equitable or beneficial interests in SE Multifamily does [not] belong to the Debtor or may be the property of [HCRE]. Accordingly, Claimant may have a claim against the Debtor. Claimant has requested information from the Debtor to ascertain the exact amount of its claim. This process is on-going. Additionally, this process has been delayed due to the outbreak of the Coronavirus. Claimant is continuing to work to ascertain the exact amount of its claim and will update its claim in the next ninety days.

Id.

5. On July 30, 2020, Highland objected to HCRE's Proof of Claim (the "Objection"), contending it had no liability thereunder. Morris Dec. Ex. B.

6. On October 19, 2020, HCRE filed its response to the Objection (the "Response"), stating, among other things, as follows:

> After reviewing what documentation is available to [HCRE] with the Debtor, [HCRE] believes the organizational documents relating to SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC (the "SE Multifamily Agreement") improperly allocates the ownership percentages of the members thereto due to mutual mistake, lack of Morris in Support of Motion for (A) Bad Faith Finding and (B) Attorneys' Fees Against NexPoint Real Estate Partners LLC (f/k/a HCRE Partners, LLC) in Connection with Proof of Claim 146* being filed concurrently with the Motion.

[4] "Debtor" is used interchangeably with Highland, as applicable.

> consideration, and/or failure of consideration. As such, [HCRE] has a claim to reform, rescind and/or modify the agreement. However, [HCRE] requires additional discovery, including, but not limited to, email communications and testimony, to determine what happened in connection with the memorialization of the parties' agreement and improper distribution provisions, evaluate the amount of its claim against the Debtor, and protect its interests under the agreement.

Morris Dec. Ex. C ¶ 5 (emphasis added).

B. The Parties Engage in Two Rounds of Discovery Sandwiched Around Highland's Motion to Disqualify HCRE's Counsel

7. Consistent with a Court-approved pre-trial schedule entered on December 14, 2020 [Docket No. 1568], the Parties engaged in a first round of discovery by (a) serving deposition notices and subpoenas, (b) exchanging discovery demands and written responses, and (c) searching for and producing voluminous documents. See, e.g., Docket Nos. 1898, 1918, 1964, 1965, 1995, 1996, 2118, 2119, 2134, 2135, 2136, and 2137.

8. During the course of discovery, Highland became aware that HCRE's counsel, Wick Phillips Gould & Martin, LLP ("Wick Phillips"), had jointly represented the Parties in connection with the underlying transactions. Highland timely moved (a) to disqualify Wick Phillips from representing HCRE in connection with the Proof of Claim litigation (the "Disqualification Motion"), and (b) for an award of costs and fees incurred in bringing the Disqualification Motion. On December 10, 2021, following a lengthy hearing, the Court issued an order disqualifying Wick Phillips from representing HCRE in this matter but denying Highland's fee request. Morris Dec. Ex. D at 6-7 (citing to Docket No. 3106).

9. After HCRE retained new counsel, Hoge & Gameros, the Parties amended the pre-trial schedule (Docket Nos. 3356 and 3368), and participated in an extensive second round of discovery, including exchanging another set of written discovery requests and document productions, serving deposition notices and subpoenas, and taking and defending multiple depositions. Morris Dec. Ex. D at 9.

C. Just Before Its Witnesses Were to Be Deposed, HCRE Abruptly Moves to Withdraw Its Proof of Claim

10. On August 12, 2022, as the Parties were nearing the completion of discovery, and just days before Highland was scheduled to depose HCRE's witnesses, HCRE abruptly filed its Motion to Withdraw Proof of Claim [Docket No. 3442] (the "Motion to Withdraw"), in which HCRE sought leave from the Court to withdraw its Proof of Claim. HCRE filed its Motion to Withdraw (a) two business days after HCRE completed the depositions of Highland's witnesses, (b) one day after HCRE produced more than 4,000 pages of documents, and (c) two business days before consensually-scheduled depositions of HCRE's witnesses were set to begin. Shortly thereafter, HCRE unilaterally cancelled the depositions of its witnesses.[5]

11. On September 2, 2022, Highland objected to HCRE's Motion to Withdraw [Docket No. 3487] (the "Objection to Motion to Withdraw"), and to HCRE's Motion to Quash, and cross-moved to compel the depositions of Mr. Dondero, Mr. McGraner, and HCRE's Rule 30(b)(6) witness. [Docket No. 3483] (the "Objection to Motion to Quash and Cross-Motion to Compel, and together with the Motion to Withdraw and Motion to Quash, the "Motions").

12. On September 12, 2022, following argument on the Motions, the Court denied the Motion to Withdraw after HCRE failed to unambiguously represent that by withdrawing the Proof of Claim with prejudice, HCRE was also waiving and relinquishing any right to re-litigate or challenge Highland's ownership interest in SE Multifamily. See Morris Dec. Ex. D n.36. See also Amended Order Denying Motion to Withdraw Proof of Claim [Docket No. 3525] (denying Motion to Withdraw and directing the Parties to (a) confer in good faith to complete the depositions of Mr. Dondero, Mr. McGraner, and HCRE; (b) otherwise comply with the Amended Scheduling Order; and (c) appear for an evidentiary hearing on the Proof of Claim on November 1 and 2, 2022).

[5] In response, on August 16, 2022, Highland filed subpoenas directed to Messrs. Dondero and McGraner [Docket Nos. 3451 and 3452] and a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice directed to HCRE [Docket No. 3453], calling for the witnesses to sit for depositions on August 24 and 25, 2022. On August 23, 2022, the day before the depositions were to begin, HCRE filed a Motion to Quash and for Protection [Docket No. 3464] (the "Motion to Quash"), seeking to quash the subpoenas and deposition notice.

D. A Trial Is Held on the Proof of Claim and the Court Issues Its Order

13. On November 1, 2022, after discovery was (finally) completed, the Court held an evidentiary hearing on the Proof of Claim and the Objection (the "Trial"). See Morris Dec. Ex. E.

1. Mr. Dondero Had No Basis to Swear Under Penalty of Perjury that the Proof of Claim Was True and Correct

14. Mr. Dondero signed and executed HCRE's Proof of Claim under penalty of perjury, purportedly attesting to its truth and accuracy. Yet, as the Court has already found and determined, Mr. Dondero lacked any basis to believe that the information in the Proof of Claim was "true and correct." On cross-examination, Mr. Dondero admitted that he:

- could not recall "personally [doing] any due diligence of any kind to make sure that Exhibit A was truthful and accurate before [he] authorized it to be filed;"
- did not review or provide comments to the Proof of Claim or its Exhibit A before it was filed;
- did not review the applicable agreements or any other documents before signing the Proof of Claim;
- did not know (a) whose idea it was to file the Proof of Claim, (b) who at HCRE worked with, or provided information to, Bonds Ellis to enable Bonds Ellis to prepare the Proof of Claim, (c) what information was given to Bonds Ellis to formulate the Proof of Claim, or (d) whether "Bonds Ellis ever communicated with anybody in the real estate group regarding" the Proof of Claim;
- "never specifically asked anyone in the real estate group if [the Proof of Claim] was truthful and accurate before [he] authorized it to be filed;
- "didn't check with any member of the real estate group to see whether or not they believed [the Proof of Claim] was truthful and accurate before [he] authorized Bonds Ellis to file it;" and

- failed to do "anything . . . to make sure that this proof of claim was truthful and accurate before [he] authorized [his] electronic signature to be affixed and to have it filed on behalf of HCRE."

Morris Dec. Ex. D at 4-5 (citing evidence). In a feeble attempt to excuse his failure to do anything to confirm that the Proof of Claim was "truthful and accurate" before authorizing his electronic signature to be affixed and filed on behalf of HCRE, Mr. Dondero vaguely testified that he relied on some unidentified "process" in choosing to proceed. Morris Dec. Ex. E at 58:4-59:2.

15. Mr. Dondero cannot hide behind an unidentified "process" (assuming a "process" actually existed) that completely failed to uncover the indisputable evidence (including Mr. McGraner's unqualified admissions) that the Amended LLC Agreement accurately reflected the Parties' intentions concerning capital contributions and the allocation of membership interests. Based on his own testimony, and this Court's findings of fact, Mr. Dondero signed the Proof of Claim on HCRE's behalf in bad faith.

2. The Evidence Established that the Amended LLC Agreement Accurately and Unambiguously Reflected the Parties' Intent Leaving No Factual or Legal Basis for HCRE to File or Pursue the Proof of Claim

16. The evidence at Trial, including documentary evidence and the testimony of Mr. Dondero, Mr. McGraner, and BH Equities (a third-party signatory to the Amended LLC Agreement), proves that HCRE filed its Proof of Claim in bad faith.

17. Specifically, the evidence indisputably and definitively established that the Amended LLC Agreement accurately and unambiguously reflected the signatories' intent concerning their respective capital contributions and the allocation of memberships interests in SE Multifamily:

- Representatives of the signatories exchanged views and drafts concerning capital contributions and ownership interests that were consistent with the final, executed version of the Amended LLC Agreement (Morris Dec. Ex. D at 20-21 (citing evidence));

- Mr. Dondero "agreed that [Schedule A] comported with his expectations when he signed the Amended LLC Agreement on behalf of HCRE and Highland, including his expectation that Highland's 49% interest was going to be diluted by the 6% being granted to BH Equities." (Id. at 21-22 (citing evidence));

- Mr. McGraner (a) reviewed Schedule A before the Amended LLC Agreement was executed, (b) saw that it showed Highland made a capital contribution of $49,000 and was receiving a 46.06% interest in SE Multifamily, and (c) concluded that this allocation reflected his understanding of the terms between HCRE and Highland (Id. at 22 (citing evidence));

- BH Equities' corporate representative also acknowledged during his deposition that "'BH Equities agreed that [Highland] would hold a 46.06 percentage interest in SE Multifamily while making a capital contribution of $49,000' and 'believed Schedule A accurately reflected the intent of the parties.'" (Id. (citing evidence));

- Numerous other provisions in the Amended LLC Agreement ratified the allocation of membership interests set forth in Schedule A (Id. at 23-25 (citing evidence)); and

- Based on information provided by HCRE, SE Multifamily's tax returns "confirm that the parties intended that Highland, having made a capital contribution of $49,000, owned 46.06% of the SE Multifamily membership interests." (Id. at 25-26 (citing evidence)).

18. At the conclusion of the Hearing, HCRE requested that the Court "grant the proof of claim and reallocate the equity [in SE Multifamily] based on the capital contribution[s]."[6] Id. at 11. Highland requested that the Court enter an order (i) disallowing HCRE's Proof of Claim and (ii) finding that HCRE filed its Proof of Claim in bad faith and awarding the Reorganized Debtor its "costs." Id.

[6] Despite (a) the explicit claims asserted in HCRE's own Response (Morris Dec. Ex. B ¶ 5), and (b) the Court's concerns of "gamesmanship" expressed in connection with HCRE's Motion to Withdraw (see, e.g., Morris Dec. Ex. D at n.36), HCRE's counsel persisted—in yet another act of bad faith—to attempt to preserve the very claims that formed the basis of HCRE's Proof of Claim: "HCRE's counsel also argued that the issues of reformation, rescission, and modification, of the Amended LLC Agreement were not before the court and that, if the court were to grant the Reorganized Debtor's Objection, it should enter only a simple order denying the claim, without making any findings." Morris Dec. Ex. D at 12.

19. On April 28, 2023, the Court issued its Memorandum Opinion and Order Sustaining Debtor's Objection to, and Disallowing, Proof of Claim Number 146 [Dkt. No. 906] (the "Order"), Morris Dec. Ex. D, in which the Court sustained Highland's Objection to the Proof of Claim, and disallowed the Proof of Claim for all purposes. The Court denied, without prejudice, Highland's oral request for a bad faith finding and for sanctions against HCRE in the form of reimbursement of Highland's attorney's fees and costs because HCRE did not have an opportunity to respond to such requests. Id. at 38-39.

III. ARGUMENT

A. HCRE's Proof of Claim Was Filed in Bad Faith

20. The undisputed documentary and testimonial evidence adduced at Trial establishes that HCRE filed and prosecuted the Proof of Claim in bad faith.

21. As the Court has already found and determined, Mr. Dondero failed to conduct any due diligence before signing HCRE's Proof of Claim and otherwise lacked any basis (let alone a reasonable basis) to believe that the Proof of Claim was truthful. Indeed, had Mr. Dondero simply asked Mr. McGraner, he would have learned that the Amended LLC Agreement accurately and unambiguously reflected the Parties' intent—and that there was therefore no basis to "reform, rescind and/or modify" the Amended LLC Agreement. See Morris Dec. Ex. D at 3-5.

22. That is what Highland established during the Trial. Mr. McGraner, the "quarterback" of Project Unicorn, admitted that at the time he reviewed the ownership allocations in SE Multifamily before the operative documents were signed, he had no reason to believe there was any "mistake." The Court made numerous other factual findings that prove there was no "dispute" concerning the Parties' respective membership interests in SE Multifamily. Morris Dec. Ex. D at 19-26 (citing to substantial documentary and testimonial evidence); see also supra ¶ 17.

23. Based on the foregoing, the Court should find that HCRE's Proof of Claim was filed and prosecuted in bad faith.

B. Highland Is Entitled to Attorneys' Fees from HCRE for Costs Incurred in Connection with the Bad Faith Filing of the Proof of Claim

24. HCRE should be sanctioned for its bad faith filing and prosecution of the Proof of Claim by reimbursing Highland for attorneys' fees and expenses incurred in connection with litigating the Proof of Claim.

25. Bankruptcy courts possess inherent authority under section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code to issue sanctions after making a finding of bad faith. See In re Yorkshire, LLC, 540 F3d 328, 332 (5th Cir. 2008) (affirming bankruptcy court's imposition of sanctions for bad faith filing "following an extensive hearing in which the bankruptcy court heard testimony from the parties and witnesses and made certain credibility determinations," and "made specific findings that Appellants acted in bad faith."); In re Brown, 444 B.R. 691, 695 (E.D. Tex. 2009) (issuing sanctions against party and their counsel, and relying on section 105(a) of the Bankruptcy Code as a basis for awarding attorney's fees against parties for acting "with reckless disregard of their duty to this Court"); In re Paige, 365 BR 632, 637-399 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2007) (awarding attorneys' fees against debtor for their "bad faith" conduct during bankruptcy case, noting "[t]he sanction here is derived from the Court's inherent power to sanction" under section 105(a)); In re Lopez, 576 B.R. 84, 93 (S.D. Tex. 2017) (same).

26. Here, the Bankruptcy Court should award sanctions against HCRE in the form of attorneys' fees and expenses incurred by Highland in connection with the bad faith filing and prosecution of the Proof of Claim, in the aggregate amount of $825,940.55. Morris Dec. ¶¶ 10-17, Morris Dec. Exs. F-I.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons, Highland respectfully requests that the Court enter an order (a) finding that HCRE filed and prosecuted the Proof of Claim in bad faith, (b) entering sanctions against HCRE in the form of reimbursement to Highland of Highland's costs and expenses incurred in objecting to HCRE's Proof of Claim in the aggregate amount of $825,940.55; and (c) granting such other and further relief that the Court deems just and proper under the circumstances.

Highland Claimant Trust
Summarized Consolidated Balance Sheet [(1)]
As of May 31, 2023

Notes:

(1) This presentation is not in accordance with US GAAP and is unaudited, but has nevertheless been prepared in good faith and with the intention of providing the reader with a comprehensible understanding of the remaining assets and liabilities of the Highland Claimant Trust, Highland Capital Management, LP, HCMLP GP LLC, and Highland Litigation Trust (the "Consolidated Entities"). These entities have each been aggregated on a stand-alone basis, with intercompany amounts eliminated. Funds and entities that may otherwise be consolidated by one or more of the Consolidated Entities under US GAAP are not fully consolidated and rather are included solely at their equity value. For example, if Highland Capital Management, LP is a 20% investor in a managed fund with assets of $100 million and liabilities of zero that would normally require consolidation under US GAAP, the presentation contained herein reflects an investment of $20 million as opposed to fully consolidating the $100 million fund and reflecting minority interest of $80 million. The value of the Highland Indemnity Trust is not included herein. As of May 31, 2023, $35 million has been funded to the Highland Indemnity Trust. Highland Indemnity Trust beneficiaries are Claimant Trust Indemnified Parties. Any unused assets remaining after satisfying indemnification obligations will be transferred to the Highland Claimant Trust or otherwise be distributed to the Claimant Trust Beneficiaries in accordance with the Indemnity Trust Agreement. For presentation purposes, it is assumed that outstanding indemnification obligations will consume the entirety of the Highland Indemnity Trust. Further, no current recovery amount has been ascribed to the "Kirschner Adversary" as all such value is considered to be contingent, nor have any liabilities been reserved for various success fees payable to professionals associated with the Kirschner Adversary or any other litigations. Such liabilities are also contingent in nature.

(2) Amounts already authorized for distribution, but reserved in the Disputed Claims Reserve related to resolution of pending disputed claims.

(3) Value reflected herein consists primarily of ownership in private funds and subsidiaries, valued using NAV as the practical expedient, public & private investments (including residual sale escrows), valued at fair value, and SE Multifamily Holdings, LLC, valued using book equity value as of the most recent financials received. See note 6 for further information. There is substantial risk and uncertainty with respect to the timing and ultimate cash value to be received from monetizations of these investments and such value could ultimately be materially impacted by actual monetizations.

(4) Book amounts reflect principal amounts outstanding on various notes, without discount, adjustment, or estimates of future costs of collection, with two exceptions. The first exception is to the note receivable from Hunter Mountain Investment Trust for which over $90 million of principal and interest is currently due, payable, and in default. These notes are a component of the "Kirschner Adversary" which is currently stayed. These principal and interest amounts are fully reserved based on the assumption that Hunter Mountain Investment Trust has no other assets other than a contingent, unvested interest in the Highland Claimant Trust. That assumption is subject to change. The second exception relates to the note receivable from Highland Select Equity Master Fund, LP. This amount is fully reserved based on the pendency of the Ch. 7 proceeding for Highland Select Equity Master Fund, LP and the minimal remaining value of Highland Select Equity Master Fund, LP's assets, which is expected to be further consumed (at least in part) by trustee and professional fees. Aside from these exceptions, approximately $65 million of these principal amounts (further described below) are subject to ongoing litigation with various note counterparties who are contesting the validity of their obligations. These disputed amounts are contained within the "Balance per books" column herein without discount or adjustment. While the makers have asserted defenses, Highland believes they are meritless and is confident that judgments will ultimately be entered in Highland's favor. However, based on Mr. Dondero's history of failing to satisfy judgments entered against his affiliates by others (e.g., UBS, the Redeemer Committee, Joshua Terry, and Patrick Daugherty), the effect of complete non-payment of principal is reflected in the "adjustments" column, which also assumes non-payment of the currently performing $18 million note receivable from The Dugaboy Investment Trust. Ultimate recoveries from these notes could differ materially from the current principal outstanding depending on the outcome of the pending litigation and no recovery can be assured. Accrued interest is captured in the "Other assets" line item, subject to the exceptions discussed within this footnote. While there is currently a report & recommendation from the bankruptcy court for summary judgment, plus costs of collection, no costs of collection are reflected as assets on this balance sheet, so would be incremental. The estimated amount of such costs of collections are over $3 million.

Detail of note principal amounts subject to report & recommendations of the bankruptcy court, currently pending in district court (excludes accrued interest):

Note Maker	Principal O/S	Comments
NexPoint Advisors, LP	$ 25	Consists of a single note
NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC	12	fka HCRE Partners, LLC; five underlying notes comprise balance
NexPoint Asset Management, LP	11	fka Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, LP; four underlying notes comprise balance
James Dondero	10	Three underlying notes comprise balance
Highland Capital Management Services, Inc.	7	Five underlying notes comprise balance
Sub-total	$ 65

(5) The book equity amount reflects a multitude of estimates including, but not limited to the value of investments and collectability of notes receivable. For book purposes, no contingent liabilities or indemnification reserves have been recorded as liabilities that would reduce book equity, notwithstanding that it is currently expected that there will be a) a need to maintain further highly material indemnification reserves; and b) further incurrance of springing contingent liabilities if distribution milestones are achieved. The amount of further incremental indemnification reserves are currently expected to exceed $90 million, and may ultimately be greater, which will be required to be funded (at least in part) prior to any further material distributions to Trust Beneficiaries. In the absence of a global settlement that, among other things, fully and finally releases all Claimant Trust Indemnified Parties, Highland believes the additional indemnification reserves are required because, among other reasons, (a) based on the so-called "Dondero exclusion," insurance is likely to remain cost-prohibitive and/or unsatisfactory, leaving the Claimant Trust and Indemnity Trust assets as the sole sources of funding for indemnity obligations, (b) approximately twenty (20) matters are being actively litigated in at least 9 different forums; and (c) based on history, new litigation can be expected. Any unused assets remaining after satisfaction of indemnity obligations will be distributed as required by the Indemnity Trust Agreement. The amount of incremental springing contingent liabilities are expected to range from $5 million to $15 million, which are exclusive of various success fees associated with recoveries under the "Kirschner Adversary" and others. No reserves have been accrued for any current, pending, or threatened litigation brought by any Dondero-related parties. Lastly, it is expected that the trust and its subsidiaries will operate at an operating loss prospectively. The corresponding information in the "adjustments" column above is an estimate of the effects of these incremental indemnification reserves and contingent liabilities, but does not assume any expected future operating cash burn, which is expected to be significant.

6) The value of SE Multifamily Holdings LLC maintained on this balance sheet is $15.7 million, which is a component of the "Investments" line item and is based on a several years stale book-basis balance sheet. Notwithstanding Dondero-entities' previous disclosures of this interest at values of $20 million and $12 million, Highland also received interest from Dondero to acquire the interest for $3.8 million, among other assets. The purpose of this adjustment is to assume that the holding could be monetized at the lower $3.8 million level, which would result in a $11.9 million decrease to Highland's book equity if it were hypothetically transacted at that level. Highland has initiated proceedings in Delaware to receive books and records relating to SE Multifamily Holdings LLC, for which it has the contractual right and has been seeking for approximately a year, but for which Dondero-controlled entities have not provided to date.

7) Amounts described herein represent the face amounts of outstanding allowed and pending claims. The pending claim amounts do not include amounts that are the subject of various appeals or that are unliquidated. The allowed and pending claims (along with accrued interest) could ultimately be satisfied in part or in full using 1) the assets of the disputed claims reserve, 2) the residual amount of cash in the indemnity trust after satisfying all indemnification obligations, and 3) the residual amount of cash remaining after monetizing all other non-cash assets and paying liabilities and future expenses.

DALLAS DIVISION

HIGHLAND SELECT EQUITY MASTER FUND, L.P.,	)	Case No. 23-31037-swe7
Debtor.	)

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.'S RESPONSE AND JOINDER TO MOTION TO TRANSFER/REASSIGN CASE

Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP"), a creditor and party-in-interest in the above-referenced bankruptcy case, by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files its response to Creditor The Dugaboy Investment Trust's Objection to Debtor's Motion to Transfer [Docket No. 17] and joinder to Debtor's Motion to Transfer/Reassign Case [Docket No. 9] (the "Motion") filed by Highland Select Equity Master Fund, L.P. (the "Select Fund") and Highland Select Equity Fund GP, L.P. ("Select GP," and together with the Select Fund, the "Debtors"). In support of thereof, HCMLP adopts the legal arguments and authorities in the Motion and respectfully states as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT[1]

1. The Debtors' cases are directly related to and intertwined with the HCMLP Case and should therefore be re-assigned to Judge Jernigan, the judge who has overseen the HCMLP Case since it was transferred to her court in December 2019.

2. HCMLP is one of the Debtors' two creditors. It is indisputable that HCMLP is indirectly the sole limited partner of the Select Fund and owner of Select GP and that the Debtors act through HCMLP. The Debtors' only other purported creditor is Dugaboy, James Dondero's family trust which he controls and of which he is the lifetime beneficiary.

3. Regrettably, Dugaboy has intimated that it intends to investigate (and then pursue) baseless claims against HCMLP, its court-appointed CEO, James P. Seery, Jr., and its other employees arising from acts occurring during the HCMLP Case. While any such investigation (let alone the pursuit of claims) would be a waste of resources, the mere possibility of such an investigation mandates re-assignment of the Debtors' cases to Judge Jernigan because:

- Any such claims would relate to conduct that occurred during the HCMLP Case and was (and still is) subject to Judge Jernigan's oversight;
- Judge Jernigan is thoroughly familiar with provisions of HCMLP's confirmed Plan that will likely apply here, including the discharge and gatekeeper provisions, as well as other applicable orders and deadlines in the HCMLP Case such as the Admin Bar Date; and
- If Dugaboy ever pursues claims against HCMLP or its employees (including Mr. Seery) for conduct arising during the HCMLP Case, Dugaboy would be required pursuant to various "gatekeeper" orders to obtain Judge Jernigan's approval before commencing suit.

4. If these facts were not enough—and they are—Dugaboy previously admitted that any purported claim it has against HCMLP for acts concerning the Debtors must be raised in the

[1] All capitalized terms used, but not defined, in this Preliminary Statement have the meanings given to them below.

HCMLP Case. In April 2020, Dugaboy filed a proof of claim in the HCMLP Case seeking to hold HCMLP liable for the Debtors' alleged obligations to Dugaboy. In response to HCMLP's objection to Dugaboy's claim, Dugaboy acknowledged that HCMLP's "Plan, as part of the gatekeeper provision in the Plan, vests exclusive jurisdiction of the claim of Dugaboy against" the Select Fund in Judge Jernigan's court. HCMLP Case Docket No. 2933 ¶ 5. Notably, Judge Jernigan ultimately disallowed Dugaboy's claim against HCMLP arising from its management of the Debtors with prejudice—thereby raising even more issues of judicial estoppel, collateral estoppel, and res judicata.

5. Separately, Mr. Dondero, through yet another controlled shell entity (i.e., PCMG), commenced an action against HCMLP (this time, in the District Court) for alleged mismanagement of the Debtors. After the matter was referred to the Bankruptcy Court and HCMLP moved to dismiss, PCMG stipulated to the dismissal of the adversary proceeding with prejudice.

6. Regrettably, HCMLP believes that Dugaboy (and Mr. Dondero) will attempt to use the Debtors' bankruptcy cases as the latest vehicle to pursue baseless claims against HCMLP and its management and employees—even though any purported claims are barred for myriad reasons and would be subject to the Gatekeeper in HCMLP's Plan in any event. Such suits will indisputably affect HCMLP's bankruptcy estate and implicate the terms of HCMLP's Plan. Judicial economy therefore favors re-assigning these cases to Judge Jernigan as she will be involved in their management under any circumstances.

7. Despite the foregoing, Dugaboy has objected to re-assignment. The objection is ill-founded. The connections between these cases and the HCMLP Case are stark, indisputable, and dispositive. But Dugaboy objects to transfer solely because it dislikes Judge Jernigan, not because she is "biased" as they claim but because she understands Mr. Dondero's games—litigation as harassment. That is what is going on here. In fact, HCMLP offered to waive its claim against the Debtors and allow Dugaboy, the Debtors' only other creditor, to have all of the Debtors' cash and investments to resolve these cases, after payment of estate expenses. Dugaboy never responded to HCMLP's offer (reiterated on the record before Judge Jernigan) but chose instead to propound more litigation.

JOINDER

I. Background to the Select Fund

8. The Select Fund is a Bermuda-based limited partnership that is managed by its general partner, Select GP. HCMLP is indirectly the sole limited partner of the Select Fund[2] and the owner of Select GP. The Select Fund's former investment manager was HCMLP. Prior to the filings, the Debtors had no employees and could act only through HCMLP.

9. Prior to HCMLP's bankruptcy in October 2019, James Dondero, a founder of HCMLP and its former Chief Executive Officer, controlled the Select Fund, Select GP, HCMLP, and Dugaboy.

10. Historically, the Select Fund had one asset: a prime brokerage account with Jefferies, which held a portfolio of liquid and illiquid securities (the "Jefferies Account"). The Select Fund was managed by HCMLP, then under the control of Mr. Dondero, and securities would be bought and sold in the Jefferies Account at Mr. Dondero's direction. Mr. Dondero also directed the Select Fund to borrow money from Jefferies on margin. The loans Mr. Dondero obtained from Jefferies were secured by the securities in the Jefferies Account and the proceeds were used to purchase more securities, which in turn were pledged to Jefferies. Mr. Dondero historically caused the Select Fund to borrow as much as was allowed against the securities in the Jefferies Account.

[2] The Select Fund has one limited partner: Highland Select Equity Fund, L.P. ("Equity Fund"). Equity Fund is 100% owned by the Highland Claimant Trust. Prior to February 2021, PCMG Trading Partners XXIII, L.P. ("PCMG"), held a 0.024% limited partnership interest in Equity Fund. PCMG's limited partners are Mr. Dondero and Mark Okada, HCMLP's co-founder. Mr. Dondero holds 75% of PCMG's limited partnership interest and Mr. Okada holds the remainder. PCMG's general partner is Strand Advisors III, Inc., which is 100% owned and controlled by Mr. Dondero. PCMG's interest in Equity Fund was redeemed for cash in February 2021.

11. The Debtors have two creditors. HCMLP loaned the Select Fund $3 million (with the consent of the Committee) in March 2020 (the "HCMLP Loan") with the proceeds being used to fund a margin call from Jefferies.[3] The Debtors only other alleged creditor is The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy"). Dugaboy is Mr. Dondero's family trust of which Mr. Dondero is the lifetime beneficiary that previously held a 0.1866% limited partnership interest in HCMLP. Dugaboy's claim against the Debtors arises from a master securities lending agreement pursuant to which Dugaboy loaned the Select Fund certain equity securities (the "Loan Share Agreement"), which Mr. Dondero caused to be contributed to the Jefferies Account to allow Mr. Dondero to meet a then-outstanding margin call in October 2014.

II. HCMLP's Bankruptcy; Liquidation of the Jefferies Account

12. On October 16, 2019 (the "HCMLP Petition Date"), HCMLP filed for bankruptcy protection in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware (the "HCMLP Case").[4] At the request of HCMLP's creditors, the HCMLP Case was transferred to the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division (the "Bankruptcy Court"), to be overseen by The Honorable Stacey Jernigan, in large part because of her familiarity with Mr. Dondero and certain of the entities he then controlled.[5]

[3] In May 2022, the Select Fund paid HCMLP approximately $363,000 on the HCMLP Loan, which represented HCMLP's pro rata share of the Select Fund's assets after setting an expense reserve of $100,000 and, assuming no default interest on the HCMLP Loan, leaving approximately $639,000 in cash at Select Fund.

[4] The HCMLP Case is styled as In re Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 19-34054-sgj11.

[5] Judge Jernigan's familiarity with Mr. Dondero came from her presiding over In re Acis Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 18-30264-sgj-11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex.). Acis Capital Management, L.P., was a former HCMLP subsidiary, which was put into an involuntary bankruptcy after Mr. Dondero refused to pay an $8 million arbitration award to a former employee and instead chose to strip Acis of assets to make it judgment proof. Acis was marked by extremely acrimonious litigation brought by Mr. Dondero against his former employee through a series of controlled proxies. See, e.g., In re Acis Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 292 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2019); In re Acis Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 584 B.R. 115 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Apr. 13, 2018).

13. As of the month end prior to the HCMLP Petition Date, the Select Fund held approximately $171 million in long equity positions and $41 million of short equity positions in the Jefferies Account; had pledged those securities to secure $119 million in loans from Jefferies; and owed $1.1 million on an outstanding margin call in the Jefferies Account.

14. After HCMLP's creditors and the U.S. Trustee raised concerns about Mr. Dondero's ability to serve as an estate fiduciary because of his history of self-dealing, creditor-avoidance asset transfers, and other breaches of fiduciary duty, HCMLP, its official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee"), and Mr. Dondero entered into a settlement intended to avoid the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee. The settlement was approved by Judge Jernigan on January 9, 2020 [HCMLP Case Docket No. 339] (the "January Order").[6] Pursuant to the January Order:

- Mr. Dondero was removed from control of HCMLP and an independent board was appointed (the "Independent Board");[7] Mr. Dondero, however, remained an unpaid Highland portfolio manager.
- A "gatekeeper" provision was instituted prohibiting the pursuit or commencement of litigation against the Independent Directors without Judge Jernigan's prior authorization and limiting claims to those arising from willful misconduct or gross negligence.[8]
- A series of operating protocols were enacted which required HCMLP to seek Committee approval (and in some instances court approval) prior to entering into nearly any transaction, including transactions in the Jefferies Account [HCMLP Case Docket Nos. 354; 466] (the "Operating Protocols").

[6] Notwithstanding the January Order, the U.S. Trustee still pressed for the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee. [HCMLP Case Docket No. 271].

[7] The Independent Board was comprised of retired bankruptcy judge Russell Nelms, John Dubel, and James P. Seery, Jr. (the "Independent Directors").

[8] January Order ¶ 10 ("No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director . . . relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director ... without the Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Independent Director ...."). On July 16, 2020, Judge Jernigan approved Mr. Seery's appointment as HCMLP's chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer [HCMLP Case Docket No. 854] (the "July Order"). Like the January Order, the July Order prohibited litigation against Mr. Seery without Judge Jernigan's prior authorization and limited claims to those arising from willful misconduct or gross negligence. July Order ¶ 5.

15. During the fourth quarter of 2019 and first quarter of 2020, the Jefferies Account was often in margin deficit with the Select Fund (then managed by Mr. Dondero), routinely pushing back on requests to meet margin calls. In the first and second quarters of 2020, the margin shortfalls became much more acute as the world economy experienced global-pandemic-induced economic distress causing the market, including the value of the securities in the Jefferies Account, to plummet. The decline in value quickly eroded the equity in the Jefferies Account and caused a default allowing Jefferies to seize the Jefferies Account and liquidate essentially all the Select Fund's assets—including any securities allegedly loaned to the Select Fund by Dugaboy—to cover the amounts owed to Jefferies.

16. By June 30, 2020, Jefferies had substantially liquidated the Jefferies Account to repay Select Fund's loan, leaving the Jefferies Account with de minimis cash and illiquid investments.

III. Mr. Dondero's Attempts to "Burn [Highland] Down" and the Gatekeeper

17. In the fall of 2020, with the Committee refusing to capitulate to his demands, Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities, like Dugaboy, began interfering with HCMLP's management, threatening HCMLP's employees, and threatening to "burn [HCMLP] down."[9] Mr. Dondero's actions led Judge Jernigan to issue a temporary restraining order (the "TRO") against him,[10] which he promptly violated.[11]

[9] Confirmation Order (defined below), ¶¶ 74(b); 78.

[10] Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Dondero, Adv. Pro. No. 20-03190-sgj, Docket No. 10 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Dec. 10, 2020).

[11] Mr. Dondero was held in contempt for violating the TRO. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Dondero (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), 2021 Bankr. LEXIS 1533 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jun. 7, 2021), aff'd 3:21-cv-01590-N, Docket No. 42 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2022).

18. On February 22, 2021, Judge Jernigan entered the Confirmation Order[12] confirming HCMLP's Plan.[13] HCMLP's Plan included a gatekeeper provision (the "Gatekeeper")[14] prohibiting "Enjoined Parties," like Dugaboy and Mr. Dondero, from bringing claims against "Protected Parties," like HCMLP and its employees and management, unless Judge Jernigan first determines the claims to be "colorable." The Gatekeeper was adopted (i) as a direct result of Mr. Dondero's history of harassing and costly litigation[15] and (ii) to prevent harassment of HCMLP's estate and abuse of judicial resources.[16]

19. Judge Jernigan also found, as a matter of fact, that Dugaboy and approximately 40 other entities were "marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero"[17] and objecting to the Plan, not to protect economic interests, but "to be disruptors."[18]

20. In addition to the Gatekeeper and numerous factual findings concerning Mr. Dondero's use of proxies to harass HCMLP, the Plan also included:

- A discharge of HCMLP under 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1)(A) (Plan, Art. IX.B);
- An injunction prohibiting "Enjoined Parties," like Dugaboy, from pursuing claims against HCMLP or that affect its property, among other enjoined actions (id., Art. IX.F);

[12] "Confirmation Order" refers to the Order (i) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) and (ii) Granting Related Relief [HCMLP Case Docket No. 1943].

[13] "Plan" refers to the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [HCMLP Case Docket No. 1808].

[14] Plan, Art. IX.F.

[15] Confirmation Order, ¶ 77 ("During the last several months, Mr. Dondero and the Dondero Related Entities [including Dugaboy] have harassed [HCMLP], which has resulted in further substantial, costly, and time-consuming litigation for the Debtor.").

[16] Id., ¶ 79 ("Approval of the Gatekeeper Provision will prevent baseless litigation designed merely to harass the post-confirmation entities charged with monetizing the Debtor's assets for the benefit of its economic constituents, will avoid abuse of the Court system and preempt abuse of judicial time that properly could be used to consider the meritorious claims of other litigants.") (emphasis added).

[17] See, e.g., id. ¶ 19

[18] See, e.g., id. ¶ 17

- An exculpation provision limiting claims against Mr. Seery, in his role as an Independent Director, to those arising "from willful misconduct, criminal misconduct, or gross negligence" (id., Art. IV.D); and

- An administrative bar date (the "Admin Bar Date") requiring all administrative claims against HCMLP to have been filed in the HCMLP Case by September 25, 2021 (id., Art. II.A).

HCMLP's Plan, including the Gatekeeper, became effective on August 11, 2021. [HCMLP Case Docket No. 2700].

21. The Confirmation Order, including the Gatekeeper, was affirmed in all relevant respects by the Fifth Circuit. NexPoint Advisors L.P. v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), 48 F.4th 419, 425–26, 435–39 (5th Cir. 2022). The factual findings in the Confirmation Order regarding Mr. Dondero's direct and indirect harassment of HCMLP were not challenged or disturbed on appeal.

IV. Mr. Dondero's (and Dugaboy's) Continued Efforts to Harass HCMLP

22. Notwithstanding the Plan, the Gatekeeper, and two orders holding him in contempt of court,[19] Mr. Dondero has not been cowed and, with his controlled entities, is currently involved in 30 proceedings against or affecting HCMLP—but those proceedings are a fraction of the litigation compounded against HCMLP, its estate, and its management by Mr. Dondero. The docket in the HCMLP Case contains nearly 3,900 entries; over 15 adversary proceedings have been filed by or against Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates; and Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates have filed over 25 appeals from Bankruptcy Court orders. Mr. Dondero's

[19] Mr. Dondero was held in contempt for violating the TRO (see n.11 supra). Separately, Mr. Dondero, entities he controls, and others were subsequently held in contempt for violating the gatekeeper provision in the July Order by pursuing claims against Mr. Seery without Judge Jernigan's authorization. *Charitable DAF Fund LP v. efforts to harass HCMLP also include numerous efforts to litigate matters appropriately in front of Judge Jernigan in other courts[20] and four motions to recuse Judge Jernigan.

23. Dugaboy has been an active participant in Mr. Dondero's harassment. Dugaboy joined in each motion to recuse and is currently the protagonist in seven pending actions and appeals against HCMLP.

24. Mr. Dondero's and Dugaboy's harassment of HCMLP and its affiliates and employees forced HCMLP to file a motion in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "District Court") seeking an order (a) declaring Mr. Dondero, Dugaboy, and other entities controlled by Mr. Dondero "vexatious litigants," (b) enjoining them from commencing or pursuing any claim or cause of action in the District Court or the Bankruptcy Court without written permission, and (c) requiring them to file a copy of order finding them vexatious in any pending or future litigation or proceeding.[21]

25. Of particular relevance here, Mr. Dondero (through proxies, including Dugaboy) has twice attempted to pursue claims against HCMLP for its management of the Select Fund during the HCMLP Case.

26. Dugaboy's Proof of Claim. In April 2020, Dugaboy filed a proof of claim in the HCMLP Case (Proof of Claim #131) for $4 million alleging that HCMLP was somehow liable to Dugaboy because of the Select Fund's alleged failure to comply with the Loan Share Agreement. After HCMLP incurred the time and cost of objecting to Dugaboy's claim, Dugaboy withdrew it with prejudice. In withdrawing its claim, Dugaboy conceded that HCMLP's Plan "vests exclusive jurisdiction of the claim of Dugaboy against [Select Fund] in [Judge Jernigan's] Court." HCMLP Case Docket No. 2933 ¶ 5.

27. PCMG Complaint. In May 2021, PCMG—another entity controlled by Mr. Dondero (see n.2 supra)—sued HCMLP in the District Court for breach of fiduciary duty because of HCMLP's alleged mismanagement of the Select Fund.[22] PCMG never served HCMLP with its complaint but instead obtained an ex parte stay.[23] HCMLP subsequently moved for reconsideration of the stay order,[24] and the District Court lifted the stay and referred the complaint to Judge Jernigan as a matter related to the HCMLP Case.[25] HCMLP subsequently moved to dismiss the complaint for failure to comply with the Admin Bar Date.[26] After forcing HCMLP to incur substantial costs, PCMG consented to the dismissal of its complaint with prejudice.

28. After Mr. Dondero's efforts to sue HCMLP over the Select Fund failed, Dugaboy filed suit against the Debtors in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York (the "New York Action").[27] The New York Action is the sole reason the Debtors filed these cases. To avoid the costs of these cases, HCMLP offered to waive the balance of the HCMLP Loan and allow Dugaboy to take all remaining cash and investments at Select Fund in complete settlement of all parties' claims. To date, Dugaboy has not responded to that offer.

V. Dugaboy's Objection to Re-Assignment

29. Not surprisingly, Dugaboy has objected to re-assignment of these cases to Judge Jernigan [Docket No. 17] and, in doing so, ignores the reality of the HCMLP Case. Any investigation into these cases will involve conduct that occurred during, and as part of, the HCMLP Case and, among other things, will require analysis and application of the Gatekeeper, the January and July Orders, the Admin Bar Date, and HCMLP's Plan's discharge and exculpation provisions. Dugaboy cannot alter these indisputable realities nor preclude Judge Jernigan's necessary involvement in the management of these cases by alleging "bias."

30. But, importantly, Dugaboy's allegations of bias are unfounded. Judge Jernigan has ruled—many times—against Dugaboy and Mr. Dondero and made detailed factual findings about Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates. The driver of those rulings, however, was Mr. Dondero's conduct, not Judge Jernigan's "bias." Nearly every one of Judge Jernigan's rulings has been affirmed on appeal by the District Court and then by the Fifth Circuit. None of Judge Jernigan's factual findings have been overturned, notwithstanding Mr. Dondero's efforts. Mr. Dondero obviously dislikes Judge Jernigan's decisions, but they are not evidence of Judge Jernigan's bias; they are evidence of Mr. Dondero's vexatiousness.

modeled after [Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliate]"). Judge Jernigan also noted that Mr. Dondero's motion to recuse "[r]egrettably … contains several misstatements or partial descriptions of events … in several places that create misimpressions" and specifically addressed "[s]ome of the more problematic examples" of Mr. Dondero's mistruths.[28] Mr. Dondero (and Dugaboy) moved to appeal Judge Jernigan's rulings on their recusal motions. The District Court denied both leave to file an interlocutory appeal and the request for a writ of mandamus.[29]

32. Yet, despite these detailed findings, Dugaboy now seeks to have this Court determine Judge Jernigan is too biased to hear the Debtors' cases. That is improper. Mr. Dondero's desire for any judge but Judge Jernigan—notwithstanding her familiarity with, and all but certain involvement in, these cases—is its own brand of forum shopping and should not be countenanced.

33. Dugaboy is also wrong on the law. Judges "have the inherent power to transfer cases from one to another for the expeditious administration of justice." U.S. v. Stones, 411 F.3d 597, 598-99 (5th Cir. 1969); see also Cook v. City of Dallas, 683 F. App'x. 315, 322-23 (5th Cir. 2017). As evidenced by the Debtors' bankruptcy cases, Mr. Dondero's litigation crusade against HCMLP has metastasized to HCMLP's subsidiaries—subsidiaries that have no personnel of their own and therefore act only through HCMLP and its employees. Accordingly, it is highly likely that the Debtors' bankruptcy cases will affect the HCMLP Case and, wastefully and regrettably, spawn additional lawsuits against HCMLP and its employees, thus triggering the Gatekeeper. Judge Jernigan will be intimately involved in the Debtors' cases regardless of whether they are re-assigned to her. Re-assigning the Debtors' cases will therefore substantially aid judicial economy.

CONCLUSION

34. For the foregoing reasons, HCMLP respectfully requests that this Court grant (i) the Motion in its entirety and (ii) such other relief as this Court deems just and proper.

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P.'S RESPONSE AND JOINDER TO MOTION TO TRANSFER/REASSIGN CASE

Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP"), a creditor and party-in-interest in the above-referenced bankruptcy case, by and through its undersigned counsel, hereby files its response to Creditor The Dugaboy Investment Trust's Objection to Debtor's Motion to Transfer [Docket No. 20] and joinder to Debtor's Motion to Transfer/Reassign Case [Docket No. 9] (the "Motion") filed by Highland Select Equity Master Fund, L.P. (the "Select Fund") and Highland Select Equity Fund GP, L.P. ("Select GP," and together with the Select Fund, the "Debtors"). In support of thereof, HCMLP adopts the legal arguments and authorities in the Motion and respectfully states as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT[1]

1. The Debtors' cases are directly related to and intertwined with the HCMLP Case and should therefore be re-assigned to Judge Jernigan, the judge who has overseen the HCMLP Case since it was transferred to her court in December 2019.

2. HCMLP is one of the Debtors' two creditors. It is indisputable that HCMLP is indirectly the sole limited partner of the Select Fund and owner of Select GP and that the Debtors act through HCMLP. The Debtors' only other purported creditor is Dugaboy, James Dondero's family trust which he controls and of which he is the lifetime beneficiary.

3. Regrettably, Dugaboy has intimated that it intends to investigate (and then pursue) baseless claims against HCMLP, its court-appointed CEO, James P. Seery, Jr., and its other employees arising from acts occurring during the HCMLP Case. While any such investigation (let alone the pursuit of claims) would be a waste of resources, the mere possibility of such an investigation mandates re-assignment of the Debtors' cases to Judge Jernigan because:

- Any such claims would relate to conduct that occurred during the HCMLP Case and was (and still is) subject to Judge Jernigan's oversight;
- Judge Jernigan is thoroughly familiar with provisions of HCMLP's confirmed Plan that will likely apply here, including the discharge and gatekeeper provisions, as well as other applicable orders and deadlines in the HCMLP Case such as the Admin Bar Date; and
- If Dugaboy ever pursues claims against HCMLP or its employees (including Mr. Seery) for conduct arising during the HCMLP Case, Dugaboy would be required pursuant to various "gatekeeper" orders to obtain Judge Jernigan's approval before commencing suit.

4. If these facts were not enough—and they are—Dugaboy previously admitted that any purported claim it has against HCMLP for acts concerning the Debtors must be raised in the

[1] All capitalized terms used, but not defined, in this Preliminary Statement have the meanings given to them below.

HCMLP Case. In April 2020, Dugaboy filed a proof of claim in the HCMLP Case seeking to hold HCMLP liable for the Debtors' alleged obligations to Dugaboy. In response to HCMLP's objection to Dugaboy's claim, Dugaboy acknowledged that HCMLP's "Plan, as part of the gatekeeper provision in the Plan, vests exclusive jurisdiction of the claim of Dugaboy against" the Select Fund in Judge Jernigan's court. HCMLP Case Docket No. 2933 ¶ 5. Notably, Judge Jernigan ultimately disallowed Dugaboy's claim against HCMLP arising from its management of the Debtors with prejudice—thereby raising even more issues of judicial estoppel, collateral estoppel, and res judicata.

5. Separately, Mr. Dondero, through yet another controlled shell entity (i.e., PCMG), commenced an action against HCMLP (this time, in the District Court) for alleged mismanagement of the Debtors. After the matter was referred to the Bankruptcy Court and HCMLP moved to dismiss, PCMG stipulated to the dismissal of the adversary proceeding with prejudice.

6. Regrettably, HCMLP believes that Dugaboy (and Mr. Dondero) will attempt to use the Debtors' bankruptcy cases as the latest vehicle to pursue baseless claims against HCMLP and its management and employees—even though any purported claims are barred for myriad reasons and would be subject to the Gatekeeper in HCMLP's Plan in any event. Such suits will indisputably affect HCMLP's bankruptcy estate and implicate the terms of HCMLP's Plan. Judicial economy therefore favors re-assigning these cases to Judge Jernigan as she will be involved in their management under any circumstances.

7. Despite the foregoing, Dugaboy has objected to re-assignment. The objection is ill-founded. The connections between these cases and the HCMLP Case are stark, indisputable, and dispositive. But Dugaboy objects to transfer solely because it dislikes Judge Jernigan, not because she is "biased" as they claim but because she understands Mr. Dondero's games—litigation as harassment. That is what is going on here. In fact, HCMLP offered to waive its claim against the Debtors and allow Dugaboy, the Debtors' only other creditor, to have all of the Debtors' cash and investments to resolve these cases, after payment of estate expenses. Dugaboy never responded to HCMLP's offer (reiterated on the record before Judge Jernigan) but chose instead to propound more litigation.

JOINDER

I. Background to the Select Fund

8. The Select Fund is a Bermuda-based limited partnership that is managed by its general partner, Select GP. HCMLP is indirectly the sole limited partner of the Select Fund[2] and the owner of Select GP. The Select Fund's former investment manager was HCMLP. Prior to the filings, the Debtors had no employees and could act only through HCMLP.

9. Prior to HCMLP's bankruptcy in October 2019, James Dondero, a founder of HCMLP and its former Chief Executive Officer, controlled the Select Fund, Select GP, HCMLP, and Dugaboy.

10. Historically, the Select Fund had one asset: a prime brokerage account with Jefferies, which held a portfolio of liquid and illiquid securities (the "Jefferies Account"). The Select Fund was managed by HCMLP, then under the control of Mr. Dondero, and securities would be bought and sold in the Jefferies Account at Mr. Dondero's direction. Mr. Dondero also directed the Select Fund to borrow money from Jefferies on margin. The loans Mr. Dondero obtained from Jefferies were secured by the securities in the Jefferies Account and the proceeds were used to purchase more securities, which in turn were pledged to Jefferies. Mr. Dondero historically caused the Select Fund to borrow as much as was allowed against the securities in the Jefferies Account.

[2] The Select Fund has one limited partner: Highland Select Equity Fund, L.P. ("Equity Fund"). Equity Fund is 100% owned by the Highland Claimant Trust. Prior to February 2021, PCMG Trading Partners XXIII, L.P. ("PCMG"), held a 0.024% limited partnership interest in Equity Fund. PCMG's limited partners are Mr. Dondero and Mark Okada, HCMLP's co-founder. Mr. Dondero holds 75% of PCMG's limited partnership interest and Mr. Okada holds the remainder. PCMG's general partner is Strand Advisors III, Inc., which is 100% owned and controlled by Mr. Dondero. PCMG's interest in Equity Fund was redeemed for cash in February 2021.

11. The Debtors have two creditors. HCMLP loaned the Select Fund $3 million (with the consent of the Committee) in March 2020 (the "HCMLP Loan") with the proceeds being used to fund a margin call from Jefferies.[3] The Debtors only other alleged creditor is The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy"). Dugaboy is Mr. Dondero's family trust of which Mr. Dondero is the lifetime beneficiary that previously held a 0.1866% limited partnership interest in HCMLP. Dugaboy's claim against the Debtors arises from a master securities lending agreement pursuant to which Dugaboy loaned the Select Fund certain equity securities (the "Loan Share Agreement"), which Mr. Dondero caused to be contributed to the Jefferies Account to allow Mr. Dondero to meet a then-outstanding margin call in October 2014.

II. HCMLP's Bankruptcy; Liquidation of the Jefferies Account

---

[4] The HCMLP Case is styled as In re Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 19-34054-sgj11.

[5] Judge Jernigan's familiarity with Mr. Dondero came from her presiding over In re Acis Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 18-30264-sgj-11 (Bankr. N.D. Tex.). Acis Capital Management, L.P., was a former HCMLP subsidiary, which was put into an involuntary bankruptcy after Mr. Dondero refused to pay an $8 million arbitration award to a former employee and instead chose to strip Acis of assets to make it judgment proof. Acis was marked by extremely acrimonious litigation brought by Mr. Dondero against his former employee through a series of controlled proxies. See, e.g., In re Acis Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 2019 Bankr. LEXIS 292 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jan. 31, 2019); In re Acis Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 584 B.R. 115 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Apr. 13, 2018).

13. As of the month end prior to the HCMLP Petition Date, the Select Fund held approximately $171 million in long equity positions and $41 million of short equity positions in the Jefferies Account; had pledged those securities to secure $119 million in loans from Jefferies; and owed $1.1 million on an outstanding margin call in the Jefferies Account.

14. After HCMLP's creditors and the U.S. Trustee raised concerns about Mr. Dondero's ability to serve as an estate fiduciary because of his history of self-dealing, creditor-avoidance asset transfers, and other breaches of fiduciary duty, HCMLP, its official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee"), and Mr. Dondero entered into a settlement intended to avoid the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee. The settlement was approved by Judge Jernigan on January 9, 2020 [HCMLP Case Docket No. 339] (the "January Order").[6] Pursuant to the January Order:

- Mr. Dondero was removed from control of HCMLP and an independent board was appointed (the "Independent Board");[7] Mr. Dondero, however, remained an unpaid Highland portfolio manager.
- A "gatekeeper" provision was instituted prohibiting the pursuit or commencement of litigation against the Independent Directors without Judge Jernigan's prior authorization and limiting claims to those arising from willful misconduct or gross negligence.[8]
- A series of operating protocols were enacted which required HCMLP to seek Committee approval (and in some instances court approval) prior to entering into nearly any transaction, including transactions in the Jefferies Account [HCMLP Case Docket Nos. 354; 466] (the "Operating Protocols").

[6] Notwithstanding the January Order, the U.S. Trustee still pressed for the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee. [HCMLP Case Docket No. 271].

[7] The Independent Board was comprised of retired bankruptcy judge Russell Nelms, John Dubel, and James P. Seery, Jr. (the "Independent Directors").

[8] January Order ¶ 10 ("No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director . . . relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director ... without the Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Independent Director ...."). On July 16, 2020, Judge Jernigan approved Mr. Seery's appointment as HCMLP's chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer [HCMLP Case Docket No. 854] (the "July Order"). Like the January Order, the July Order prohibited litigation against Mr. Seery without Judge Jernigan's prior authorization and limited claims to those arising from willful misconduct or gross negligence. July Order ¶ 5.

15. During the fourth quarter of 2019 and first quarter of 2020, the Jefferies Account was often in margin deficit with the Select Fund (then managed by Mr. Dondero), routinely pushing back on requests to meet margin calls. In the first and second quarters of 2020, the margin shortfalls became much more acute as the world economy experienced global-pandemic-induced economic distress causing the market, including the value of the securities in the Jefferies Account, to plummet. The decline in value quickly eroded the equity in the Jefferies Account and caused a default allowing Jefferies to seize the Jefferies Account and liquidate essentially all the Select Fund's assets—including any securities allegedly loaned to the Select Fund by Dugaboy—to cover the amounts owed to Jefferies.

16. By June 30, 2020, Jefferies had substantially liquidated the Jefferies Account to repay Select Fund's loan, leaving the Jefferies Account with de minimis cash and illiquid investments.

III. Mr. Dondero's Attempts to "Burn [Highland] Down" and the Gatekeeper

17. In the fall of 2020, with the Committee refusing to capitulate to his demands, Mr. Dondero and his controlled entities, like Dugaboy, began interfering with HCMLP's management, threatening HCMLP's employees, and threatening to "burn [HCMLP] down."[9] Mr. Dondero's actions led Judge Jernigan to issue a temporary restraining order (the "TRO") against him,[10] which he promptly violated.[11]

[11] Mr. Dondero was held in contempt for violating the TRO. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Dondero (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), 2021 Bankr. LEXIS 1533 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Jun. 7, 2021), aff'd 3:21-cv-01590-N, Docket No. 42 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 17, 2022).

18. On February 22, 2021, Judge Jernigan entered the Confirmation Order[12] confirming HCMLP's Plan.[13] HCMLP's Plan included a gatekeeper provision (the "Gatekeeper")[14] prohibiting "Enjoined Parties," like Dugaboy and Mr. Dondero, from bringing claims against "Protected Parties," like HCMLP and its employees and management, unless Judge Jernigan first determines the claims to be "colorable." The Gatekeeper was adopted (i) as a direct result of Mr. Dondero's history of harassing and costly litigation[15] and (ii) to prevent harassment of HCMLP's estate and abuse of judicial resources.[16]

19. Judge Jernigan also found, as a matter of fact, that Dugaboy and approximately 40 other entities were "marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero"[17] and objecting to the Plan, not to protect economic interests, but "to be disruptors."[18]

20. In addition to the Gatekeeper and numerous factual findings concerning Mr. Dondero's use of proxies to harass HCMLP, the Plan also included:

- A discharge of HCMLP under 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1)(A) (Plan, Art. IX.B);
- An injunction prohibiting "Enjoined Parties," like Dugaboy, from pursuing claims against HCMLP or that affect its property, among other enjoined actions (id., Art. IX.F);

[12] "Confirmation Order" refers to the Order (i) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) and (ii) Granting Related Relief [HCMLP Case Docket No. 1943].

[13] "Plan" refers to the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) [HCMLP Case Docket No. 1808].

(emphasis added).

- An exculpation provision limiting claims against Mr. Seery, in his role as an Independent Director, to those arising "from willful misconduct, criminal misconduct, or gross negligence" (id., Art. IV.D); and

- An administrative bar date (the "Admin Bar Date") requiring all administrative claims against HCMLP to have been filed in the HCMLP Case by September 25, 2021 (id., Art. II.A).

HCMLP's Plan, including the Gatekeeper, became effective on August 11, 2021. [HCMLP Case Docket No. 2700].

21. The Confirmation Order, including the Gatekeeper, was affirmed in all relevant respects by the Fifth Circuit. NexPoint Advisors L.P. v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), 48 F.4th 419, 425–26, 435–39 (5th Cir. 2022). The factual findings in the Confirmation Order regarding Mr. Dondero's direct and indirect harassment of HCMLP were not challenged or disturbed on appeal.

IV. Mr. Dondero's (and Dugaboy's) Continued Efforts to Harass HCMLP

22. Notwithstanding the Plan, the Gatekeeper, and two orders holding him in contempt of court,[19] Mr. Dondero has not been cowed and, with his controlled entities, is currently involved in 30 proceedings against or affecting HCMLP—but those proceedings are a fraction of the litigation compounded against HCMLP, its estate, and its management by Mr. Dondero. The docket in the HCMLP Case contains nearly 3,900 entries; over 15 adversary proceedings have been filed by or against Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates; and Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates have filed over 25 appeals from Bankruptcy Court orders. Mr. Dondero's efforts to harass HCMLP also include numerous efforts to litigate matters appropriately in front of Judge Jernigan in other courts[20] and four motions to recuse Judge Jernigan.

[19] Mr. Dondero was held in contempt for violating the TRO (see n.11 supra). Separately, Mr. Dondero, entities he controls, and others were subsequently held in contempt for violating the gatekeeper provision in the July Order by pursuing claims against Mr. Seery without Judge Jernigan's authorization. Charitable DAF Fund LP v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., LP, 2021 Bankr. LEXIS 2074 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Aug. 3, 2021), aff'd 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 175778 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2022).

23. Dugaboy has been an active participant in Mr. Dondero's harassment. Dugaboy joined in each motion to recuse and is currently the protagonist in seven pending actions and appeals against HCMLP.

24. Mr. Dondero's and Dugaboy's harassment of HCMLP and its affiliates and employees forced HCMLP to file a motion in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "District Court") seeking an order (a) declaring Mr. Dondero, Dugaboy, and other entities controlled by Mr. Dondero "vexatious litigants," (b) enjoining them from commencing or pursuing any claim or cause of action in the District Court or the Bankruptcy Court without written permission, and (c) requiring them to file a copy of order finding them vexatious in any pending or future litigation or proceeding.[21]

25. Of particular relevance here, Mr. Dondero (through proxies, including Dugaboy) has twice attempted to pursue claims against HCMLP for its management of the Select Fund during the HCMLP Case.

26. Dugaboy's Proof of Claim. In April 2020, Dugaboy filed a proof of claim in the HCMLP Case (Proof of Claim #131) for $4 million alleging that HCMLP was somehow liable to Dugaboy because of the Select Fund's alleged failure to comply with the Loan Share Agreement. After HCMLP incurred the time and cost of objecting to Dugaboy's claim, Dugaboy withdrew it with prejudice. In withdrawing its claim, Dugaboy conceded that HCMLP's Plan "vests exclusive jurisdiction of the claim of Dugaboy against [Select Fund] in [Judge Jernigan's] Court." HCMLP Case Docket No. 2933 ¶ 5.

27. PCMG Complaint. In May 2021, PCMG—another entity controlled by Mr. Dondero (see n.2 supra)—sued HCMLP in the District Court for breach of fiduciary duty because of HCMLP's alleged mismanagement of the Select Fund.[22] PCMG never served HCMLP with its complaint but instead obtained an ex parte stay.[23] HCMLP subsequently moved for reconsideration of the stay order,[24] and the District Court lifted the stay and referred the complaint to Judge Jernigan as a matter related to the HCMLP Case.[25] HCMLP subsequently moved to dismiss the complaint for failure to comply with the Admin Bar Date.[26] After forcing HCMLP to incur substantial costs, PCMG consented to the dismissal of its complaint with prejudice.

28. After Mr. Dondero's efforts to sue HCMLP over the Select Fund failed, Dugaboy filed suit against the Debtors in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York (the "New York Action").[27] The New York Action is the sole reason the Debtors filed these cases. To avoid the costs of these cases, HCMLP offered to waive the balance of the HCMLP Loan and allow Dugaboy to take all remaining cash and investments at Select Fund in complete settlement of all parties' claims. To date, Dugaboy has not responded to that offer.

V. Dugaboy's Objection to Re-Assignment

29. Not surprisingly, Dugaboy has objected to re-assignment of these cases to Judge Jernigan [Docket No. 20] and, in doing so, ignores the reality of the HCMLP Case. Any investigation into these cases will involve conduct that occurred during, and as part of, the HCMLP Case and, among other things, will require analysis and application of the Gatekeeper, the January and July Orders, the Admin Bar Date, and HCMLP's Plan's discharge and exculpation provisions. Dugaboy cannot alter these indisputable realities nor preclude Judge Jernigan's necessary involvement in the management of these cases by alleging "bias."

30. But, importantly, Dugaboy's allegations of bias are unfounded. Judge Jernigan has ruled—many times—against Dugaboy and Mr. Dondero and made detailed factual findings about Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliates. The driver of those rulings, however, was Mr. Dondero's conduct, not Judge Jernigan's "bias." Nearly every one of Judge Jernigan's rulings has been affirmed on appeal by the District Court and then by the Fifth Circuit. None of Judge Jernigan's factual findings have been overturned, notwithstanding Mr. Dondero's efforts. Mr. Dondero obviously dislikes Judge Jernigan's decisions, but they are not evidence of Judge Jernigan's bias; they are evidence of Mr. Dondero's vexatiousness.

modeled after [Mr. Dondero and his controlled affiliate]"). Judge Jernigan also noted that Mr. Dondero's motion to recuse "[r]egrettably … contains several misstatements or partial descriptions of events … in several places that create misimpressions" and specifically addressed "[s]ome of the more problematic examples" of Mr. Dondero's mistruths.[28] Mr. Dondero (and Dugaboy) moved to appeal Judge Jernigan's rulings on their recusal motions. The District Court denied both leave to file an interlocutory appeal and the request for a writ of mandamus.[29]

32. Yet, despite these detailed findings, Dugaboy now seeks to have this Court determine Judge Jernigan is too biased to hear the Debtors' cases. That is improper. Mr. Dondero's desire for any judge but Judge Jernigan—notwithstanding her familiarity with, and all but certain involvement in, these cases—is its own brand of forum shopping and should not be countenanced.

33. Dugaboy is also wrong on the law. Judges "have the inherent power to transfer cases from one to another for the expeditious administration of justice." U.S. v. Stones, 411 F.3d 597, 598-99 (5th Cir. 1969); see also Cook v. City of Dallas, 683 F. App'x. 315, 322-23 (5th Cir. 2017). As evidenced by the Debtors' bankruptcy cases, Mr. Dondero's litigation crusade against HCMLP has metastasized to HCMLP's subsidiaries—subsidiaries that have no personnel of their own and therefore act only through HCMLP and its employees. Accordingly, it is highly likely that the Debtors' bankruptcy cases will affect the HCMLP Case and, wastefully and regrettably, spawn additional lawsuits against HCMLP and its employees, thus triggering the Gatekeeper. Judge Jernigan will be intimately involved in the Debtors' cases regardless of whether they are re-assigned to her. Re-assigning the Debtors' cases will therefore substantially aid judicial economy.

CONCLUSION

34. For the foregoing reasons, HCMLP respectfully requests that this Court grant (i) the Motion in its entirety and (ii) such other relief as this Court deems just and proper.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER PURSUANT TO PLAN "GATEKEEPER PROVISION" AND PRE-CONFIRMATION "GATEKEEPER ORDERS": DENYING HUNTER MOUNTAIN INVESTMENT TRUST'S EMERGENCY MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE VERIFIED ADVERSARY PROCEEDING[1]
[BANKR. DKT. NOS. 3699, 3760, 3815, and 3816]

I. INTRODUCTION

BEFORE THIS COURT is yet another post-confirmation dispute relating to the Chapter 11 bankruptcy case of Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland" or "Reorganized Debtor").

[1] On August 2, 2023, this court signed an Order [Bankr. Dkt. No. 3897] that was agreed to among various parties, after the filing of a Motion to Stay and Compel Mediation [Bankr. Dkt. No. 3752] filed by James D. Dondero and related entities. Pursuant to paragraph 7 of that order, certain pending matters in the bankruptcy court are stayed pending mediation. The parties did not agree to stay the matter addressed in this Memorandum Opinion and Order.

It is now more than two and half years since the confirmation of Highland's Plan[2]—the Plan having been confirmed on February 22, 2021.[3] The Plan was never stayed; it went effective on August 11, 2021 ("Effective Date"), and it was affirmed almost in its entirety by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit ("Fifth Circuit"), in late summer 2022, including an approval of the so-called Gatekeeper Provision[4] therein. The Gatekeeper Provision—and how and whether it should now be exercised or interpreted to allow a certain lawsuit to be filed—is at the heart of the current Emergency Motion for Leave to File Verified Adversary Proceeding [Bankr. Dkt. Nos. 3699, 3760, 3815, 3816] (collectively, the "Motion for Leave") filed by a movant known as Hunter Mountain Investment Trust ("HMIT").

A. Who is the Movant, HMIT?

Who is HMIT? It is undisputed that it is a former equity owner of Highland. It held 99.5% of Highland's Class B/C limited partnership interests and was classified in a Class 10 under the confirmed Plan, which class treatment provided it with a contingent interest in the Highland Claimant Trust ("Claimant Trust") created under the Plan, and as defined in the Claimant Trust Agreement. This means that HMIT could receive consideration under the Plan if all claims against Highland are ultimately paid in full, with interest. As later further discussed, it is undisputed that [2] Capitalized terms not defined in this introduction shall have the meaning ascribed to them below.

[3] The court entered its Order (I) Confirming the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) and (II) Granting Related Relief ("Confirmation Order")[Bankr. Dkt. No. 1943].

[4] In an initial opinion dated August 19, 2022, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the Confirmation Order in large part, "revers[ing] only insofar as the plan exculpates certain non-debtors in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), strik[ing] those few parties from the plan's exculpation, and affirm[ing] on all remaining grounds." In re Highland Capital Management, L.P., No. 21-10449, 2022 WL 3571094, at *1 (5th Cir. Aug. 19, 2022). On September 7, 2022, following a petition for limited panel rehearing filed by certain appellants on September 2, 2022, "for the limited purpose of clarifying and confirming one part of its August 19, 2022 opinion," the Fifth Circuit withdrew its original opinion and replaced it with its opinion reported at NexPoint Advisors, L.P. v. Highland Capital Mgmt., L.P. (In re Highland Capital Mgmt., L.P.), 48 F.4th 419, 424 (5th Cir. 2022). The substituted opinion differed from the original opinion only by the replacement of one sentence from section "IV(E)(2) – Injunction and Gatekeeper Provisions" of the original opinion: "The injunction and gatekeeper provisions are, on the other hand, perfectly lawful." was replaced with "We now turn to the Plan's injunction and gatekeeper provisions." In all other respects, the Fifth Circuit panel's original ruling remained unchanged. Petitions for writs of certiorari regarding the Confirmation Order have been pending at the United States Supreme Court since January 2023.

HMIT's only asset is its contingent interest in the Claimant Trust. It has no employees or revenue. HMIT's representative has testified that HMIT is liable on more than $62 million of indebtedness owed to The Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy"), a family trust of which James Dondero ("Dondero"), the co-founder and former chief executive officer ("CEO") of Highland, and his family members are beneficiaries, and that Dugaboy also is paying HMIT's legal fees. HMIT vehemently disputes the suggestion that it is controlled by Dondero.

B. What Does the Movant HMIT Seek Leave to File?

HMIT seeks leave to file an adversary proceeding ("Proposed Complaint")[5] in the bankruptcy court to bring claims on behalf of itself and, derivatively, on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust for alleged breach of fiduciary duties by the Reorganized Debtor's CEO and Claimant Trustee, James P. Seery, Jr. ("Seery") and conspiracy against: (1) Seery; and (2) purchasers of $365 million face amount of allowed unsecured claims in this case, who purchased their claims post-confirmation but prior to the occurrence of the Effective Date of the Plan ("Claims Purchasers,"[6] and with Seery, the "Proposed Defendants"). To be clear (and as later further explained), the claims acquired by the Claims Purchasers were acquired by them after extensive litigation, mediation, and settlements were approved by the bankruptcy court and after the original claims-holders had voted on the Plan and after Plan confirmation. As later explained,

[5] In its original Motion for Leave filed at Bankruptcy Docket No. 3699 on March 28, 2023, HMIT sought leave to file the proposed complaint ("Initial Proposed Complaint") attached as Exhibit 1 to the Motion for Leave. Nearly a month later, on April 23, 2023, HMIT filed a Supplement to Emergency Motion for Leave to File Verified Adversary Proceeding ("Supplement") [Bankr. Dkt. No. 3760], a revised proposed complaint as Exhibit 1-A, and stating that "[t]he Supplement is not intended to supersede the [Motion for Leave]; rather, it is intended as a supplement to address procedural matters and to bring forth additional facts that further confirm the appropriateness of the derivative action." Supplement, ¶ 1 and Exhibit 1-A. It is this revised proposed complaint to which this court will refer, when it uses the defined term "Proposed Complaint," even though HMIT filed redacted versions of its Motion for Leave on June 5, 2023 at Bankruptcy Docket Nos. 3815 and 3816 that attached the Initial Proposed Complaint as Exhibit 1.

[6] The Claims Purchasers identified in the Proposed Complaint are Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"); Muck Holdings, LLC ("Muck"), which is a special purpose entity created by Farallon to purchase allowed unsecured claims against Highland; Stonehill Capital Management, LLC ("Stonehill"); and Jessup Holdings, LLC ("Jessup"), which is a special purpose entity created by Stonehill to purchase allowed unsecured claims against Highland.

the Claims Purchasers filed notices of their purchases as required by Bankruptcy Rule 3001(e)(2), and no objections were filed thereto. In any event, various damages or remedies are sought against the Proposed Defendants revolving around the Claims Purchasers' claims purchasing activities.

C. Why Does HMIT Need to Seek Leave?

As alluded to above, HMIT filed its Motion for Leave to comply with the provision in the Plan known as a "gatekeeper" provision ("Gatekeeper Provision") and with this court's prior gatekeeper orders entered in January and July 2020, which all require that, before a party may commence or pursue claims relating to the bankruptcy case against certain protected parties, it must first obtain (1) a finding from the bankruptcy court that its proposed claims ("Proposed Claims") are "colorable"; and (2) specific authorization by the bankruptcy court to pursue the Proposed Claims.[7] The Gatekeeper Provision was not included in the Plan sans raison. Indeed, as the Fifth Circuit recognized in affirming confirmation of the Plan, the Gatekeeper Provision (along with the other "protection provisions" in the Plan) had been included in the Plan to address the "continued litigiousness" of Mr. James Dondero ("Dondero"), Highland's co-founder and former chief executive officer ("CEO"), that began prepetition and escalated following the post-petition "nasty breakup" between Highland and Dondero, by "screen[ing] and prevent[ing] bad-faith litigation against Highland Capital, its successors, and other bankruptcy participants that could disrupt the Plan's effectiveness."[8]

[7] To be clear, the Gatekeeper Provision in the Plan was not the first or even second injunction of its type issued in this bankruptcy case. The Gatekeeper Orders were entered by the bankruptcy court pre-confirmation: (a) in January 2020, just a few months into the case, as part of this court's order approving a corporate governance settlement between Highland and its unsecured creditors committee, in which Dondero, Highland's co-founder and former CEO, was removed from any management role at Highland and three independent directors ("Independent Directors") were appointed in lieu of a chapter 11 trustee being appointed ("January 2020 Order"); and (b) in July 2020, in this court's order authorizing the employment of Seery (one of the three Independent Directors) as the Debtor's new Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer, and Foreign Representative ("July 2020 Order," together with the January 2020 Order, the "Gatekeeper Orders").

[8] See Highland Capital, 48 F.4th at 427, 435.

D. Some Further Context Regarding Post-Confirmation Litigation Generally.

Since confirmation of the Plan, hundreds of millions of dollars have been paid out to creditors under the Plan, and there are numerous adversary proceedings and contested matters still pending, at various stages of litigation, in the bankruptcy court, the district court, and the Fifth Circuit, almost exclusively involving Dondero and entities that he owns or controls. To be sure, the post-confirmation litigation in this case does not consist of the usual adversaries and contested matters one typically sees by and against a reorganized debtor and/or litigation trustee, such as preference or other avoidance actions and litigation over objections to claims that are still pending after confirmation of a plan. Indeed, the claims of the largest creditors in this case (with claims asserted in the aggregate of more than one billion dollars) were successfully mediated and incorporated into the Plan—a plan which was ultimately accepted by the votes of an overwhelming majority of Highland's non-insider creditors. Dondero and entities under his control were the only parties who appealed the Confirmation Order, and Dondero and entities under his control have been the appellants in virtually every appeal that has been filed regarding this bankruptcy case. Petitions for writs of mandamus (which have been denied) have been filed in the district court and in the Fifth Circuit by some of these same entities, including one by HMIT, when this court denied setting an emergency hearing on the instant Motion for Leave (HMIT had sought a setting on three-days' notice).

A recent list of active matters involving Dondero and/or entities and/or individuals affiliated or associated with him, filed in the bankruptcy case by Highland and the Claimant Trust, reveals that there were at least 30 pending and "Active Dondero-Related Litigation" matters as of July 14, 2023: six (6) proceedings in this court; six (6) active appeals or actions are pending in the District Court for the Northern District of Texas; seven (7) appeals in the Fifth Circuit; two (2) petitions for writs of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court; and nine (9) other proceedings or actions with or affecting the Highland Parties ("Highland," the "Claimant Trust," and "Seery") in various other state, federal, and foreign jurisdictions.[9]

The above-described context is included because the Proposed Defendants assert that the Motion for Leave is just a continuation of Dondero's unrelenting barrage of meritless and harassing litigation, making good on his oft-mentioned alleged threat to "burn down the place" after not achieving the results he wanted in the Highland bankruptcy case. Indeed, the Motion for Leave was filed after two years of unsuccessful attempts by, first, Dondero personally, and then HMIT to obtain pre-suit discovery from the Proposed Defendants (i.e., the Claims Purchasers) through two different Texas state court proceedings, pursuant to Tex. R. Civ. P. 202 ("Rule 202"). In each of these Rule 202 proceedings, Dondero and HMIT espoused the same Seery/Claims [9] See Bankr. Dkt. No. 3880 (filed on July 14, 2023, providing a list of "Active Dondero-Related Litigation" and noting that the list is "a summary of active pending actions only and does not include actions that were resolved by final orders, including actions finally resolved after appeals to the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas and/or the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit."). Just since the filing by the Highland Parties of the list, three of the appeals pending in the Fifth Circuit have been decided against the Dondero-related appellants, two of which upheld the district court's dismissal of appeals by Dondero-related entities of bankruptcy court orders based on the lack of bankruptcy appellate standing on behalf of the appellant. On July 19, 2023, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the district court's dismissal of an appeal by NexPoint Advisors, L.P. ("NexPoint") of bankruptcy court orders approving professional compensation on the basis that NexPoint did not meet the bankruptcy appellate standing test of being a "person aggrieved" by the entry of the orders. NexPoint Advisors, L.P. v. Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones, L.L.P. (In re Highland Capital Management, L.P.), 74 F.4th 361 (5th Cir. 2023). On July 31, 2023, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the district court's dismissal of an appeal by Dugaboy—the Dondero family trust that, like the movant here in this Motion for Leave, was the holder of a limited partnership interest in Highland, and, as such, now has a contingent interest in the Claimant Trust—which had appealed a bankruptcy court order approving a Rule 9019 settlement on the same basis: Dugaboy did not meet the bankruptcy appellate standing test of being a "person aggrieved" by the entry of the settlement order. The Dugaboy Inv. Tr. v. Highland Capital Mgt., L.P. (In re Highland Capital Mgt., L.P.), No. 22-10960, 2023 WL 4861770 (5th Cir. July 31, 2023). The July 31, 2023 ruling followed the Fifth Circuit's ruling on February 21, 2023, affirming the district court's dismissal of an appeal by Dugaboy of yet another bankruptcy court order for lack of bankruptcy appellate standing. The Dugaboy Inv. Tr. v. Highland Capital Mgt., L.P. (In re Highland Capital Mgt., L.P.), No. 22-10831, 2023 WL 2263022 (5th Cir. Feb. 28, 2023). These rulings by the Fifth Circuit are discussed in greater detail below. The third ruling by the Fifth Circuit since July 14, 2023, was issued by the Fifth Circuit in a per curium opinion not designated for publication on July 26, 2023, this one affirming the district court's affirmance of yet another Rule 9019 settlement order of the bankruptcy court that was appealed by Dugaboy, agreeing with the district court that the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to approve a settlement among the Debtor, an entity affiliated with the Debtor but not a debtor itself, and UBS (the Debtor's largest prepetition creditor and the seller of its claims to the Claims Purchasers, which is one of the claims trading transactions HMIT complains about in the Proposed Complaint). See The Dugaboy Inv. Tr. v. Highland Capital Mgt., L.P., No. 22-10983, 2023 WL 4842320 (5th Cir. July 26, 2023).

Purchasers conspiracy theory espoused in the Motion for Leave—that Seery must have provided one or more of the Claims Purchasers with material nonpublic information to induce them to want to purchase large, allowed, unsecured claims at a discount; a quid pro quo is suggested, such that the Claims Purchasers were allegedly told they would make a hefty profit on the claims they purchased and, in return, they would gladly "rubber stamp" Seery's "excessive compensation" as the Claimant Trustee of the Claimant Trust. In sum, HMIT alleges this constituted wrongful "insider trading" of the bankruptcy claims. In addition, certain lawyers for Dondero and Dugaboy sent letters reporting this alleged conspiracy and "insider trading" to the Texas State Securities Board ("TSSB") and the Executive Office of the United States Trustee ("EOUST").

It is against this background and in this context that the court must analyze, in the exercise of its gatekeeping function under the confirmed Plan and its prior Gatekeeping Orders, whether HMIT should be allowed to pursue the Proposed Claims (i.e., whether the Proposed Claims are "colorable" claims as contemplated under the Gatekeeper Orders and the Gatekeeper Provision of the Plan). The court held an evidentiary hearing on the Motion for Leave on June 8, 2023 ("June 8 Hearing"), during which the court admitted exhibits and heard testimony from three witnesses both in support of and in opposition to the Motion for Leave. Having considered the Motion for Leave, the response of the Proposed Defendants thereto, HMIT's reply to the response, and the arguments and evidence presented at the hearing on the Motion for Leave, the court denies HMIT's request for leave to pursue its Proposed Claims. The court's reasoning is set forth below.

II. BACKGROUND

A. Highland's Bankruptcy Case, Dondero's Removal as CEO, and the Plan

Highland was co-founded in Dallas in 1993 by Dondero and Mark Okada ("Okada"). It operated as a global investment adviser that provided investment management and advisory services and managed billions of dollars of assets, both directly and indirectly through numerous affiliates. Highland's equity interest holders included HMIT (99.5%), Dugaboy (0.1866%), Okada, personally and through trusts (0.0627%), and Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand"), which was wholly owned by Dondero and was the only general partner of Highland (0.25%). On October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), Highland, with Dondero in control[10] and acting as its CEO, president, and portfolio manager, and facing a myriad of massive, business litigation claims – many of which had finally become or were about to be liquidated (after a decade or more of contentious litigation in multiple fora all over the world—filed for relief under chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware. The bankruptcy case was transferred to the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division in December 2019. The official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee") (and later, the United States Trustee) expressed a desire for the appointment of a chapter 11 trustee due to concerns over and distrust of Dondero, his numerous conflicts of interest, and his history of alleged mismanagement (and perhaps worse).

After many weeks under the specter of a possible appointment of a trustee, Highland and the Committee engaged in substantial and lengthy negotiations, resulting in a corporate governance settlement approved by this court on January 9, 2020.[11] As a result of this settlement, Dondero relinquished control of Highland and resigned his positions as officer or director of Highland and its general partner, Strand,[12] and three independent directors ("Independent Directors") were chosen to lead Highland through its chapter 11 case: Seery, John S. Dubel, and retired bankruptcy judge Russell Nelms. Given the Debtor's perceived culture of constant litigation while Dondero was at the helm, it was purportedly not easy to get such highly qualified persons to serve as independent board members. At the hearing on the corporate governance settlement motion, the court heard credible testimony that none of the Independent Directors would have taken on the role without (1) an adequate directors and officers' ("D&O") insurance policy protecting them; (2) indemnification from Strand that would be guaranteed by the Debtor; (3) exculpation from mere negligence claims; and (4) a gatekeeper provision prohibiting the commencement of litigation against the Independent Directors without the bankruptcy court's prior authority. The gatekeeper provision approved by the court in its January 9 Order states,[13]

[11] This order is hereinafter referred to as the "January 2020 Order" and was entered by the court on January 9, 2020 [Bankr. Dkt. No. 339] pursuant to the Motion of the Debtor to Approve Settlement with Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding the Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operation in the Ordinary Course [Bankr. Dkt. No. 281].

[12] Dondero agreed to this settlement pursuant to a stipulation he executed and that was filed in connection with Highland's motion to approve the settlement. See Stipulation in Support of Motion of the Debtor for Approval of Settlement With the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in Ordinary Course [Bankr. Dkt. No. 338].

> No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director, any Independent Director's agents, or any Independent Director's advisors relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director of Strand without the Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Independent Director, any Independent Director's agents, or any Independent Director's advisors and (ii) specifically authorizing such entity to bring such claim. The Court will have sole jurisdiction to adjudicate any such claim for which approval of the Court to commence or pursue has been granted.

Dondero agreed to remain with Highland as an unpaid portfolio manager following his resignation and did so "subject at all times to the supervision, direction and authority of the Independent Directors" and to his agreement to "resign immediately" "[i]n the event the Independent Directors determine for any reason that the Debtor shall no longer retain Dondero as an employee"[14] and to "not cause any Related Entity to terminate any agreements with the Debtor."[15] The court later entered, on July 16, 2020, an order approving the appointment of Seery as Highland's Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer, and Foreign Representative,[16] which included essentially the same "gatekeeper" language with respect to the pursuit of claims against Seery acting in these roles. The gatekeeper provision in the July 2020 Order was essentially the same as the gatekeeper provision in the January 2020 Order:

> No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against Seery relating in any way to his role as the chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer of the Debtor without the Bankruptcy Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Seery, and (ii) specifically authorizing such entity to bring such claim. The Bankruptcy Court shall have sole jurisdiction to adjudicate any such claim for which approval of the Court to commence or pursue has been granted.

July 2020 Order, 3, ¶5. Neither the January 2020 Order nor the July 2020 Order were appealed.

Throughout the summer of 2020, Dondero informally proposed several reorganization plans, none of which were embraced by the Committee or the Independent Directors. When Dondero's plans failed to gain support, he and entities under his control engaged in substantial, costly, and time-consuming litigation for Highland.[17] As the Fifth Circuit described the situation, after Dondero's plans failed "he and other creditors began to frustrate the proceedings by objecting to settlements, appealing orders, seeking writs of mandamus, interfering with Highland Capital's management, threatening employees, and canceling trades between Highland Capital and its clients."[18] On October 9, 2020, Dondero resigned from all positions with the Debtor and its

[17] According to Seery's credible testimony during the hearing on confirmation of the Plan that had been negotiated between the Committee and the Independent Directors, Dondero had threatened to "burn the place down" if his proposed plan was not accepted. See Transcript of Confirmation Hearing dated February 3, 2021 at 105:10-20. affiliates in response to a demand by the Independent Directors made after Dondero's purported threats and disruptions to the Debtor's operations.[19]

The Independent Directors and the Committee had negotiated their own plan of reorganization which culminated in the filing by Highland of its Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) (the "Plan") [Bankr. Dkt. No. 1808] on January 22, 2021.[20] Highland had negotiated settlements with most of its major creditors following mediation and had amended its initially proposed plan to address the objections of most of its creditors, leaving only the objections of Dondero and entities under his control (the "Dondero Parties") at the time of the confirmation hearing,[21] which was held over two days in early February 2021. The Plan is essentially an "asset monetization" plan pursuant to which the Committee was dissolved, and four new entities were created: the Reorganized Debtor; a new general partner for the Reorganized Debtor called HCMLP GP, LLC; the Claimant Trust (administered by Seery, its trustee); and a Litigation Sub-Trust (administered by its trustee, Marc Kirschner). Highland's various servicing agreements were vested in the Reorganized Debtor, which continues to manage collateralized loan obligation vehicles ("CLOs") and various other investments postconfirmation. The Claimant Trust owns the limited partnership interests in the Reorganized Debtor, HCMLP GP LLC, and the Litigation Sub-Trust and is charged with winding down the Reorganized Debtor over a three-year period by monetizing its assets and making distributions to Class 8 and Class 9 creditors as Claimant Trust Beneficiaries. The Claimant Trust is overseen by a Claimant Trust Oversight Board ("CTOB"), and pursuant to the terms of the Plan and the Claimant Trust Agreement ("CTA"),[22] the CTOB approved Seery's compensation package as the CEO of the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trustee. Following their acquisition of their unsecured claims, representatives of Claims Purchasers Muck and Jessup became members of the CTOB.[23] Seery's compensation included the same base salary that he was receiving as CEO and CRO of Highland, plus an added incentive bonus tiered to recoveries and distributions to the creditors under the Plan. The Plan provides for the cancellation of the limited partnership interests in Highland held by HMIT, Dugaboy, and Okada and his family trusts in exchange for each holder's pro rata share of a contingent interest in the Claimant Trust ("Contingent Claimant Trust Interest"), as holders of allowed interests in Class 10 (holders of Class B/C limited partnership interests) or Class 11 (holders of Class A limited partnership interests) under the Plan.

1. The December 17, 2020 MGM Email

Between Dondero's forced resignation from Highland in October 2020 and the confirmation hearing in February 2021, Dondero engaged in what appeared to be attempts to thwart, impede, and otherwise interfere with the Plan being proposed by the Independent Directors and the Committee. In the midst of this, on December 17, 2020, Dondero sent Seery[24] an email

[22] Highland Ex. 38

[23] The CTOB had three members: a representative of Muck (Michael Linn), a representative of Jessup (Christopher Provost), and an independent member (Richard Katz). See Joint Opposition ¶ 79.

[24] Dondero sent the email to others as well but did not copy counsel for the Independent Directors (including Seery) in violation of the terms of an existing temporary restraining order that enjoined Dondero from, among other things, "communicating . . . with any Board member" (including Seery) without including Debtor's counsel. (the "MGM Email") that featured prominently in HMIT's Motion for Leave. According to HMIT and Dondero, the MGM Email contained material nonpublic information ("MNPI") regarding the possibility of an imminent acquisition of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Inc. ("MGM"), likely by either Amazon or Apple.[25] At the time Dondero sent the MGM Email, Dondero sat on the board of directors of MGM, and the Debtor owned MGM stock directly. The Debtor also managed and partially owned a couple of other entities that owned MGM stock and managed various CLOs that owned some MGM stock as well. HMIT alleges now that Seery later misused and wrongfully disclosed to the Claims Purchasers this purported MNPI as part of a quid pro quo scheme, whereby the Claims Purchasers agreed to approve excessive compensation for Seery in the future (in exchange for him providing this allegedly "insider" information that inspired them to purchase unsecured claims with an alleged expectation of future large profits).[26] A timeline of events (in late 2020) in the weeks leading up to Dondero's MGM Email to Seery, following Dondero's departure from Highland, helps to put the email in full context:

- October 16: Dondero and his affiliates attempt to impede the Debtor's trading activities by demanding—with no legal basis—that Seery cease selling certain assets;[27]

- November 24: Bankruptcy Court enters an Order approving the Debtor's Disclosure Statement, scheduling the confirmation hearing on the Debtor's Plan for January 13, 2021, and granting related relief;[28]

- November 24–27: Dondero personally interferes with the Debtor's

- November 30: The Debtor provides written notice of termination of certain shared services agreements it had with Dondero's two non-debtor affiliates, NexPoint Advisors, L.P. ("NexPoint") and Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. ("HCMFA"; together with NexPoint, the "Advisors");[30]

- December 3: The Debtor makes written demands to Dondero and certain affiliates for payment of all amounts due under certain promissory notes they owed to the Debtor, that had an aggregate face amount of more than $60 million—this was part of creating liquidity for the Debtor's Plan;[31]

- December 3: Dondero responds with what appeared to be a threat of some sort to Seery in a text message: "Be careful what you do -- last warning;"[32]

- December 10: Dondero's interference and apparent threat cause the Debtor to seek and obtain a temporary restraining order ("TRO") against Dondero;[33]

- December 16: This court denies as "frivolous" a motion filed by certain affiliates of Dondero, in which they sought "temporary restrictions" on certain asset sales;[34] and

- December 17: Dondero sends the unsolicited MGM Email[35] to Seery, which violates the TRO entered just a week earlier.[36]

[36] Seery testified at the June 8 Hearing that Dondero knowingly violated the TRO when he sent the MGM Email:

> [The MGM Email] . . . followed the imposition of a TRO for interfering with the business. He knew what was in the TRO and he knew what it applied to, and it restricted him from communicating with me or any of the other independent directors without Pachulski [Debtor's counsel] being on it. Furthermore, Pachulski had advised Dondero's counsel that not only could they not communicate with us, if they wanted to communicate they had to prescreen the topics. And how do we know that? Because Dondero filed a motion to modify the TRO. And that was all before this email.

June 8 Hearing Transcript, 273:13-22.

The MGM Email had the subject line "Trading Restriction re MGM – material non public information" and stated:

> Just got off a pre board call, board call at 3:00. Update is as follows: Amazon and Apple actively diligencing in Data Room. Both continue to express material interest. Probably first quarter event, will update as facts change. Note also any sales are subject to a shareholder agreement.[37]

Seery credibly testified at the June 8 Hearing that he was "highly suspicious" when he received the MGM Email. This was because, among other reasons, Dondero sent it after: (i) unsuccessful efforts to impede the Debtor's trading activities (followed by the TRO); (ii) the "be careful what you do" text to Seery by Dondero: (iii) Highland's termination of its shared service arrangements with Dondero's various affiliated entities; (iv) the bankruptcy court's approval of the disclosure statement; and (v) Highland's demand to collect on the demand notes for which Dondero and his entities were liable.[38] Highland's Chapter 11 case was fast approaching the finish line. Moreover, MGM was already on the restricted list at Highland Capital, and had been for a long time, and Dondero would know this.[39] Still further, as of December 17, 2020 (the date Dondero sent the unsolicited MGM Email to Seery), Dondero no longer owed a duty of any kind to the Debtor or any entity controlled by the Debtor, having surrendered in January 2020 direct and indirect control of the Debtor to the Independent Board as part of the corporate governance settlement[40] and having resigned from all roles at the Debtor and affiliates in October 2020. Still further, Dondero—to the extent he was sharing with Seery MNPI that he obtained as a member of the board of directors of MGM—would have been violating his own fiduciary duties to MGM.

In any event, in a declaration filed by Dondero in support of HMIT's Rule 202 petition in Texas state court for pre-suit discovery,[41] he indicated that his goal in sending the MGM E-mail was to impede the Debtor and Seery from engaging in any transactions involving MGM:

> On December 17, 2020, I sent an email to employees at HCM, including the then Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer Jim Seery, containing non-public information regarding Amazon and Apple's interest in acquiring MGM. I became aware of this information due to my involvement as a member of the board of MGM. My purpose was to alert Seery and others that MGM stock, which was owned either directly or indirectly by HCM, should be on a restricted list and not be involved in any trades.

It is noteworthy that Dondero's labeling of the MGM Email (in the subject line) as a communication containing "material non public information" did not make it so. In fact, it appears from the credible evidence presented at the June 8, 2023 hearing on HMIT's Motion for Leave that the MGM Email did not disclose information to Seery that was not already made available to the public at the time it was sent. Seery testified that he did not think the MGM Email contained MNPI and that he did not personally "take any steps . . . to make sure that MGM stock was placed on a restricted list at Highland Capital after [he] received [the MGM Email]" because—as earlier noted—"MGM was already on the restricted list at Highland Capital . . . before I got to Highland."[42] Indeed, MGM was ultimately purchased by Amazon after a sale process that had been quite publicly discussed in media reports for several months[43] and that was officially [41] Highland Ex. 9 ¶ 3 (emphasis added).

[42] June 8 Hearing Transcript, 215:21-216:9. Seery elaborated upon further questioning from HMIT's counsel that he did not think the indications in the MGM Email (that came from a member of the board of directors of MGM) that "it was probably a first-quarter event" and that "Amazon and Apple were actively diligencing – are diligencing in the data room, both continue to express material interest" were not MNPI. Id., 217:23-218:10. He testified that "it was clear [before he received the MGM Email] from the media reports and the actual quotes from Kevin Ulrich of Anchorage, who was the chairman at MGM, that a transaction would have to take place very quickly. And, in fact, the transaction did not take place in the first quarter." Id., 219:3-7.

[43] See Highland Ex. 25 ("MGM has held preliminary talks with Apple, Netflix and other larger media companies . . . . MGM, in particular, seems like a logical candidate to sell this year. (article dated 1/26/20); Highland Ex. 26 (describing prospects of an MGM sale, noting that, among its largest announced to the public in late May 2021 (just a few weeks after the Claims Purchasers purchased some of their claims, but a few months before certain of their claims—the UBS claims—were purchased).[44] For example, as early as January 2020, Apple and Amazon were identified as being among a new group of "Big 6" global media companies, and MGM was identified as being a leading media acquisition target. Indeed, according to at least one media report on January 26, 2020, "MGM, in particular, seems like a logical candidate to sell this year" having already held "preliminary talks with Apple, Netflix and other larger media companies."[45] In October 2020, the Wall Street Journal reported that MGM's largest shareholder, Anchorage Capital Group ("Anchorage"), was facing mounting pressure to sell the company. Anchorage was led by Kevin Ulrich, who also served as Chairman of MGM's Board. The article reported that "[i]n recent months, Mr. Ulrich has said he is working toward a deal," and he specifically named Amazon and Apple as being among four possible buyers.[46] Thus, no one following the MGM story would have been surprised to learn in December 2020 that Apple and Amazon were conducting due diligence and had expressed "material interest" in acquiring MGM. Dondero testified during the June 8 Hearing that, at the time he sent the MGM Email, he "knew with certainty from the board level that Amazon had hit our price, and it was going to close in the next couple of months,"[47] that "as of December 17th, Amazon had made an offer that was acceptable to MGM, [and that] that's what the board meeting was. We were going into exclusive negotiations to culminate the merger with shareholders, was "Highland Capital Management, LP") (article October 11, 2020). See also Highland Exs. 27-30 & 34 (various other articles regarding possible sale/suitors of MGM, dated in years 2020 and 2021, and ultimately announcing sale to Amazon on May 26, 2021, for $8.4 billion).

[44] The MGM-Amazon deal was ultimately consummated in March 2022 for approximately $6.1 billion, net of cash acquired, plus approximately $2.5 billion in debt that Amazon assumed and immediately repaid.

them."[48] Notwithstanding this testimony, Dondero eventually admitted (after a lengthy and torturous cross examination) that he did not actually communicate this supposed "inside" information to Seery in the MGM Email. He did not "say anything about Amazon hitting the price." He did not say anything about the MGM board going into exclusive negotiations with Amazon "to culminate the merger with them." Rather, he communicated information that Seery and any member of the public who cared to look could have gleaned from publicly available information as of December 17, 2020, regarding a much-written-about potential MGM transaction that involved interest from numerous companies, including, specifically, Amazon and Apple. When questioned why "[he felt] the need to mention Apple [in the MGM Email] if Amazon had already hit the price," Dondero simply answered, "The only way you generally get something done at attractive levels in business is if two people are interested," suggesting that he specifically did not communicate the purported inside information he obtained as a MGM board member—that Amazon had met MGM's strike price and that the MGM board was moving forward with exclusive negotiations with Amazon—because he wanted it to appear that there was still a competitive process going on that included both Amazon and Apple.[49]

Even if the MGM Email contained MNPI on the day it was sent (four months prior to the first of the Claim Purchases that occurred in April 2021), the information was fully and publicly disclosed to the market in the days and weeks that followed. For example, on December 21, 2020, just four days later, a Wall Street Journal article titled MGM Holdings, Studio Behind 'James Bond,' Explores a Sale, reported that MGM had "tapped investment banks Morgan Stanley and LionTree LLC and begun a formal sale process," and had "a market value of around $5.5 billion, based on privately traded shares and including debt." The Wall Street Journal Article reiterated that (i) Anchorage "has come under pressure in recent years from weak performance and defecting clients, and its illiquid investment in MGM has become a larger percentage of its hedge fund as it shrinks," and (ii) "Mr. Ulrich has told clients in recent months he was working toward a deal for the studio and has spoken of big technology companies as logical buyers."[50] (Id. Ex. 27.) The Wall Street Journal's reporting was picked up and expanded upon in other publications soon after. For example:

[48] Id., 161:10-14.

[49] June 8 Hearing Transcript, 162:2-6.

- On December 23, 2020, Business Matters published an article specifically identifying Amazon as a potential suitor for MGM. The article, titled The world is net enough! Amazon joins other streaming services in £4bn bidding war for Bond films as MGM considers selling back catalogue, cited the Wall Street Journal article and further reported that MGM "hopes to spark a battle that could interest streaming services such as Amazon Prime";[51]

- On December 24, 2020, an article in iDropNews specifically identified Apple as entering the fray. In an article titled Could Apple be Ready to Gobble Up MGM Studios Entirely?, the author observed that "it's now become apparent that MGM is actually up on the auction block," noting that the Wall Street Journal was "reporting that the studio has begun a formal sale process" and that Apple—with a long history of exploratory interest in MGM—would be a likely bidder;[52] and

- On January 15, 2021, Bulwark published an article entitled MGM is For Sale (Again) that identified attributes of MGM likely to appeal to potential purchasers and handicapped the odds of seven likely buyers—with Apple and Amazon named as two of three potential buyers most likely to close on an acquisition.[53]

Finally, Highland and entities it controlled did not sell their MGM stock while the MGM-Amazon deal was under discussion and/or not made public but, instead, they tendered their MGM holdings in connection with, and as part of, the ultimate MGM-Amazon transaction after it closed in March 2022.

2. No Evidence to Support HMIT/Dondero's Assumptions that Seery Shared Alleged MNPI in the MGM Email with Claims Purchasers

One of HMIT's allegations in the Proposed Complaint it seeks leave to file—which is central to HMIT's and Dondero's conspiracy theory—is that Seery shared the alleged MNPI from the MGM Email with the Claims Purchasers (or at least Farallon—the owner/affiliate of Muck, one of the Claims Purchasers) and that the Claims Purchasers only acquired the purchased claims ("Purchased Claims") based on, and because, of their receipt of the MNPI from Seery. HMIT essentially admits in the original version of its Motion for Leave that it has no direct evidence that Seery communicated the alleged MNPI to any of the Claims Purchasers. Rather, its allegation is based on inferences it wants the court to make based on "circumstantial" evidence and on the Dondero Declarations that were attached to the Motion for Leave, which described communications Dondero purportedly had with one or two representatives of Farallon in the "late spring" of 2021 concerning Farallon's recent acquisition of certain claims in the Highland bankruptcy case.[54] Based on these communications, HMIT and Dondero only assume Seery must have provided the MNPI about MGM to Farallon, which must have caused both Farallon and the other Claims Purchaser, Stonehill, to acquire the Purchased Claims.[55]

At the June 8 Hearing, HMIT offered Dondero's testimony that he had three telephone conversations with two representatives of Farallon, Mike Linn ("Linn") and Raj Patel ("Patel"), [54] Motion for Leave (Bankr. Dkt. No. 3699) ¶ 1 and Ex. 3; see also Highland Ex. 9, Declaration of James Dondero (with Exhibit 1) dated February 15, 2023.

[55] Motion for Leave (Bankr. Dkt. No. 3699) ¶ 28. HMIT subsequently filed the final version of the Motion for Leave that was revised to withdraw the Dondero Declarations and delete all references therein to the Dondero Declarations (but, notably, leaving in the allegations that were based on the Dondero Declaration(s)). This was done after the court ruled that it would allow the Proposed Defendants to examine Dondero regarding his Declarations. HMIT contended at that point that the court should consider the Motion for Leave on a no-evidence Rule 12(b)(6) type basis (but could not explain why it had attached the Dondero Declarations as evidence that "supported" the Motion for Leave, if it believed no evidence should be considered). See Motion for Leave (Bankr. Dkt. No. 3816) ¶ 28; see also infra pages 45 to 47 regarding the "sideshow" litigation that occurred prior to the June 8 Hearing over whether the hearing on the Motion for Leave would be an evidentiary hearing.

who allegedly told him that they purchased the claims without conducting any due diligence and based solely on Seery's assurances that the claims were valuable. These conversations allegedly took place on May 28, 2021—two days after the MGM-Amazon deal was officially announced to the public (on May 26, 2021). Dondero also testified that a photocopy of handwritten notes ("Dondero Notes")[56] (which were partially cut off) were notes he took contemporaneously with these short telephone conversations he initiated (one with Patel and two follow-up conversations with Linn).[57] He testified that his purpose in taking these notes and in initiating the phone calls was that "[w]e'd been trying nonstop to settle the case for two-plus years. . . . [a]nd when we heard the claims traded, we realized there were new parties to potentially negotiate to resolve the case . . . [s]o I reached out [to] the Farallon guys,"[58] and further, on voir dire from the Proposed Defendants' counsel, that the purpose of taking the notes was so that he had "a written record of the important points that [he] discussed . . . so I know how to address it the next time."[59] The handwritten notes[60] stated:

50-70¢ not compelling	2
Class 8	3
Asked what would be compelling	4
-- No Offer	5

[56] HMIT Ex. 4. The handwritten notes were admitted into evidence after voir dire, not for the truth of anything Patel or Linn allegedly said to him during the three telephone conversations, but as Dondero's "present sense impression" of the telephone conversations.

[60] HMIT Ex. 4. The court has placed in a table and numbered each line for ease of reference. The table does not include the separate apparent partial date from the top left corner that Dondero testified was the date that he made the initial call to Patel: May 28, 2021.

On direct examination, Dondero testified that line 1 is what he wrote contemporaneously with the short call he initiated to Patel of Farallon in which Patel allegedly told Dondero "that he bought it because Seery told him to buy it and they had made money with Seery before"[61] and that Farallon "bought [the claim] because he was very optimistic regarding MGM"[62] before referring him to Linn, a portfolio manager at Farallon. Dondero testified that the rest of the handwritten notes (reflected in lines 2 through 10 of the table) were notes he took contemporaneously with two telephone conversations he had with Linn following his call to Patel, with lines 2-8 referring to Dondero's first call with Linn and lines 9 and 10 referring to his second call with Linn.[63] Dondero testified that the "50-70¢" in line 2 referred to his offer to Linn to pay 70 cents on the dollar to buy Farallon's[64] claims because "[w]e knew that they had – that the claims had traded around 50 cents" and "[w]e wanted to prevent the $5 million-a-month burn" (referring to attorney's fees in the Highland case) and that "not compelling Class 8" in lines 2-3 referred to Linn's response to him that the offer was not compelling.[65] Dondero testified that lines 4-5 referred to him asking Linn what amount would be compelling and to Linn's response that "he had no offer."[66] Dondero testified that lines 6-8 referred to Linn telling Dondero that Farallon bought the claims in the February, March timeframe and that Dondero told Linn that, given that the estate was spending $5 million a month on legal fees, Farallon should want to sell its claims and Linn's alleged response that "Seery told him it was worth a lot more."[67] Lastly, Dondero testified on direct examination that the last two lines referred to a second telephone conversation he had with Linn in which Dondero offered 130 percent of cost for the claims and that Linn told him that the offer was not compelling, and he would not give a price at which he would sell.[68]

On cross-examination, Dondero acknowledged that, though he had testified that the handwritten notes were intended to be a written record of the important points from the telephone conversations he had with Patel and Linn, there was no mention in the notes of: (1) MGM: (2) or that Farallon was very optimistic about MGM; (3) the sharing of MNPI; (4) a quid pro quo; or (5) Seery's compensation, and that his last note—"Told Discovery coming"—was a reference to Dondero telling Linn (not Linn telling Dondero) that discovery was coming in response to Dondero's own supposition that Farallon must have traded on MNPI.[69] Cross-examination also revealed that Farallon never told Dondero that Seery gave them MNPI, and that Dondero only believed Seery must have given Farallon MNPI, because Farallon (Patel and Linn) had told him that the only reason Farallon bought their claims was because of their prior dealings with Seery, which Dondero took to mean that they had conducted no due diligence on their own prior to acquiring the claims. Dondero also testified that he did not have any personal knowledge as to how Seery's compensation package, as CEO of the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trustee, was determined because he was "not involved" in the setting of Seery's compensation pursuant to the Claimant Trust[70] and that he never discussed Seery's compensation with Farallon.[71]

As noted earlier, Dondero attempted to obtain discovery from the Claims Purchasers in a Texas state court pursuant to Rule 202 of the Texas Rules of Civil Procedure. The Texas state

[68] Id., 138:8-22.

[69] Id., 190:14-191:25. Dondero testified that he told Linn that discovery "would be coming in the next few weeks" and noted that "this has been a couple years. . . . [w]e've been trying for two years to get . . . discovery in this."

court denied the First Rule 202 petition on June 1, 2022, after having considered the amended petition, the responses, the record, applicable authorities and having conducted a hearing on the petition on June 1, 2022.[72]

3. Dondero Unsuccessfully Seeks Discovery and to Have Various Agencies and Courts Outside of the Bankruptcy Court Acknowledge His Insider Trading Theories

Dondero acknowledged at the June 8 Hearing that the verified petition ("First Rule 202 Petition") he signed and filed on July 22, 2021, in the first Texas Rule 202 proceeding—just weeks after his telephone calls with Linn and Patel—was true and accurate. In it, he swore under oath as to what Linn told him in the telephone call concerning Farallon's purchase of the claims, and the only reason he gave for wanting discovery was that Linn told him Farallon bought the claims "sight unseen—relying entirely on Seery's advice solely because of their prior dealings."[73] Dondero acknowledged, as well, that his sworn statement that he filed in support of an amended verified Rule 202 petition filed in the same Texas Rule 202 proceeding, but nearly ten months later (in May 2022), described the same telephone conversation he had with Linn, and it did not mention MGM at all and did not say that Linn told him that Seery gave him MNPI; rather, the sworn statement stated only that "On a telephone call between Petitioner and Michael Lin[n], a representative of Farallon, Mr. Lin[n] informed Petitioner that Farallon had purchased the claims sight unseen and with no due diligence—100% relying on Seery's say-so because they had made so much money in the past when Seery told them to purchase claims" and that Linn did not tell him that Seery gave them MNPI, but he concluded that Seery gave Farallon MNPI based on what Linn did tell him.[74]

[74] Id., 195:11-197:17; Highland Ex. 4, Amended Verified Petition to Take Deposition before Suit and Seek Documents, ¶ 23.

Nine days later, Dondero filed a declaration in the same proceeding, in which he described the same call with Linn as follows:[75]

> Last year, I called Farallon's Michael Lin[n] about purchasing their claims in the bankruptcy. I offered them 30% more than what they paid. I was told by Michael Lin[n] of Farallon that they purchased the interests without doing any due diligence other than what Mr. James Seery—the CEO of Highland—told them, and that he told them that the interests would be worth far more than what Farallon paid. Given the value of those claims that Seery had testified in court, it made no sense to me that Mr. Lin[n] would think that the claims were worth more than what Seery testified under oath was the value of the bankruptcy claims.

Dondero further stated in his declaration that "I have an interest in ensuring that the claims purchased by [Farallon] are not used as a means to deprive the equity holders of their share of the funds," and that "[i]t has become obvious that despite the fact that the bankruptcy estate has enough money to pay all claimants 100 cents on the dollar, there is plainly a movement afoot to drain the bankrupt estate and deprive equity of their rights. Accordingly, "I commissioned an investigation by counsel who have been in communication with the Office of the United States Trustee."[76] Dondero attached as Exhibit A to his declaration a letter from Douglas Draper ("Draper"), an attorney with the law firm of Heller, Draper & Horn, L.L.C. in New Orleans, to the office of the General Counsel, Executive Office for U.S. Trustees, dated October 5, 2021, in which Draper opens the letter by stating that "[t]he purpose of this letter is to request that your office investigate the circumstances surrounding the sale of claims by members of the [Creditors' Committee] in the bankruptcy of [Highland]," and later noted that he "became involved in Highland's bankruptcy through my representation of [Dugaboy], an irrevocable trust of which Dondero is the primary beneficiary."[77] Mr. Draper laid out the same allegations of insider claims trading, breach of fiduciary duties, and conspiracy that HMIT seeks to bring in the Proposed Complaint.[78] The U.S. Trustee's office took no action. Dondero made a second and third attempt to get the U.S. Trustee's office to conduct an investigation into the same allegations laid out in Draper's letter, this time in "follow-up" letters to the Office of the U.S. Trustee on November 3, 2021, and six months later, on May 11, 2022, through another lawyer, Davor Rukavina ("Rukavina"), in which Rukavina wrote "to provide additional information regarding the systemic abuses of bankruptcy process occasioned during the [Highland] bankruptcy."[79] Again, the U.S. Trustee's office took no action.

[77] Id., Ex. A, 1-2.

On February 15, 2023, Dondero filed yet another sworn statement about his alleged conversation with Linn, this time in support of a Verified Rule 202 Petition filed by HMIT ("Second Rule 202 Petition"), filed in a different Texas state court (Texas District Court, 191st Judicial District, Dallas County, Texas), following Dondero's unsuccessful attempts throughout 2021 and 2022 to obtain discovery in the First Rule 202 proceeding and based on the same allegations of misconduct by Seery and Farallon.[80] In this new sworn statement, Dondero describes for the first time the "call" he had with Linn as having been "phone calls" with Patel and Linn and mentions MGM and Farallon's alleged optimism about the expected sale of MGM:[81]

> In late Spring of 2021, I had phone calls with two principals at Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"), Raj Patel and Michael Linn. During these phone calls, Mr. Patel and Mr. Linn informed me that Farallon had a deal in place to purchase the Acis and HarbourVest claims, which I understood to refer to claims that were a part of settlements in the HCM Bankruptcy Proceedings. Mr. Patel and Mr. Linn stated that Farallon agreed to purchase these claims based solely on conversations with Seery because they had made significant profits when Seery told them to purchase other claims in the past. They also stated that they were particularly optimistic because of the expected sale of MGM.

The Second Rule 202 Petition was also denied by the second Texas state court on March 8, 2023.[82]

HMIT, in an apparent attempt to provide support for its argument that the Proposed Claims are "colorable," stated in its Motion for Leave that "[t]he Court also should be aware that the Texas States [sic] Securities Board ("TSSB") opened an investigation into the subject matter of the insider trades at issue, and this investigation has not been closed. The continuing nature of this investigation underscores HMIT's position that the claims described in the attached Adversary Proceeding are plausible and certainly far more than merely 'colorable.'"[83] But, two days before opposition briefing was due, on May 9, 2023, the TSSB issued a letter ("TSSB Letter") to Highland, informing it that "[t]he staff of the [TSSB] has completed its review of the complaint received by the Staff against [Highland]. The issues raised in the complaint and information provided to our Agency were given full consideration, and a decision was made that no further regulatory action is warranted at this time."[84] HMIT's counsel (frankly, to the astonishment of the court) objected to the admission of the TSSB Letter at the June 8 Hearing "on the grounds of relevance, 403, hearsay, and authenticity . . . [a]nd I also . . . think it's important that the decision by a regulatory body has no bearing on this cause of action or the colorability of this claim, and the Texas State Securities Board will tell you that. This is completely and utterly irrelevant to your inquiry."[85] The court overruled HMIT's objection to the relevance of this exhibit—considering, among other things, that HMIT, in its Motion for Leave, specifically mentioned the allegedly open TSSB "investigation" as relevant evidence the court "should be aware" of in making its determination of whether the Proposed Claims were "colorable."[86]

C. Claims Purchasers Purchase Claims and File Notices of Transfers of Claims

To be clear about the time line here, it was after confirmation of the Plan but prior to the Effective Date of the Plan, that the Claims Purchasers: (1) purchased several large unsecured claims that had been allowed following, and as part of, Rule 9019 settlements, each of which were approved by the bankruptcy court, after notice and hearing, prior to the confirmation hearing; and (2) filed notices of the transfers of those claims pursuant to Rule 3001(e)(2) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. The noticing of the claims transfers began on April 16, 2021, with the notice of transfer of the claim held by Acis Capital Management to Muck, and ended on August 9, 2021, with the notices of transfers of the claims held by UBS Securities to Muck and Jessup:

HMIT insists that it "made no sense" for the Claims Purchasers to buy the Purchased Claims because "the publicly available information [] did not offer a sufficient potential profit to justify the publicly disclosed risk," and "their investment was projected to yield a small return with virtually no margin for error."[91] Dondero testified that it was his view that there was insufficient information in the public to justify the claims purchases.[92] But, HMIT's arguments here are contradicted by the information that was publicly available to Farallon and Stonehill at the time of their purchases and by HMIT's own allegations. In advance of Plan confirmation, Highland projected that Class 8 general unsecured creditors would recover 71.32% on their allowed claims. In the Proposed Complaint, HMIT sets forth the amounts the Claims Purchasers purportedly paid for their claims.[93] Taking into account the face amount of the allowed claims, the Claims Purchasers' projected profits (in millions of dollars) were as follows:

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9	Ascribed Value[94]	Purchaser	Purchase Price	Projected Profit
Redeemer	$137.0	$0.0	$97.71	Stonehill	$78.0	$19.71
Acis	$23.0	$0.0	$16.4	Farallon	$8.0	$8.40

[90] Bankr. Dkt. No. 2389. The Debtor's settlement with the UBS Parties was approved over the objections of Dondero, Dkt. No. 2295, and Dugaboy and the Get Good Trust. Bankr. Dkt. Nos. 2268, 2293.

[92] June 8 Hearing Transcript, 187:3-7 ("Q: And it's your testimony that there wasn't sufficient information in the public for them to buy – this is your view – that there wasn't sufficient information in the public to justify their purchases. Is that your view? A: Correct.).

[93] Id., ¶ 42.

[94] "Ascribed Value" is derived by multiplying the Class 8 amount by the projected recovery of 71.32% for that class.

HarbourVest	$45.0	$35.0	$32.09	Farallon	$27.0	$5.09
UBS	$65.0	$60.0	$46.39	Stonehill & Farallon	$50.0	($3.61)

As HMIT acknowledges, by the time Dondero spoke with Farallon in the "late spring" of 2021, the Claims Purchasers had acquired the allowed claims previously held by Acis, Redeemer, and HarbourVest.[95] Based on an aggregate purchase price of $113 million for these three claims, the Claims Purchasers would have expected to net over $33 million in profits, or nearly 30% on their investment, had Highland met its projections. The Claims Purchasers would make even more money if Highland beat its projections, because they also purchased the Class 9 claims and would therefore capture any upside. In this context, HMIT's and Dondero's assertions that it did not "make any sense" for the Claims Purchasers to purchase their claims when they did does not pass muster—given the publicly available information about potential recoveries under the Plan. Dondero even acknowledged, on cross-examination, that he was prepared to pay 30 percent more than Farallon had paid, even though he did not think there was sufficient public information available to justify Farallon's purchase of the claims.[96] Dondero essentially testified that he wanted to purchase Farallon's claims because he wanted to be in a position of control to force a settlement or resolution of the bankruptcy case, post-confirmation, under terms acceptable to him. He did not want to try to settle by negotiating with Farallon and Stonehill as creditors, but instead he wanted to purchase the claims because "if we owned all the claims, it would settle the case."[97]

[95] See Complaint, ¶ 41 n.12. The UBS claims were not acquired until August 2021, long after the alleged "quid pro quo" was supposedly agreed upon and the MGM-Amazon deal was announced in the press in late May 2021. See, Highland Ex. 34, Amazon's $8.45 Billion Deal for MGM is Historic But Feels Mundane (dated May 26, 2021).

D. Fifth Circuit's Approval of the Gatekeeper Provision in Plan, Recognition of Res Judicata Effect of the Prior Gatekeeper Orders, and the Bankruptcy Court's Order Approving Highland's Motion to Conform Plan

Harkening back to February 22, 2021, after a robust confirmation hearing, this court entered its order confirming the Plan, over the objections of Dondero and Dondero-Related Parties, specifically questioning the good faith of their objections. The court found, after noting "the remoteness of their economic interests" that "[it] has good reason to believe that [the Dondero Parties] are not objecting to protect economic interests they have in the Debtor but to be disruptors. Dondero wants his company back. This is understandable, but it is not a good faith basis to lob objections to the Plan."[94] The Plan became effective on August 11, 2021.

Of relevance to the Motion for Leave, the confirmed Plan included certain exculpations, releases, and injunctions designed to protect the Debtor and other bankruptcy participants from bad-faith litigation. These participants included: Highland's employees (with certain exceptions); Seery as Highland's CEO and CRO; Strand (after the appointment of the Independent Directors); the Independent Directors; the successor entities; the CTOB and its members; the Committee and its members; professionals retained in the case; and all "Related Persons." The injunction provisions contained a Gatekeeper Provision which is similar to the gatekeeper provisions in the prior Gatekeeper Orders in that it provided that the bankruptcy court will act as a "gatekeeper" to screen and prevent bad-faith litigation against the Protected Parties. The Gatekeeper Provision in the Plan states, in pertinent part:[98]

> No Enjoined Party may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Protected Party that arose or arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case . . . without the Bankruptcy Court (i) first determining, after notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of any kind, including, but not limited to, negligence, bad faith, criminal misconduct, willful misconduct, fraud, or gross negligence against a Protected Party and (ii) specifically > authorizing such Enjoined Party to bring such claim or cause of action against such Protected Party.

The Plan defines Protected Parties as, > collectively, (i) the Debtor and its successors and assigns, direct and indirect majority-owned subsidiaries, and the Managed Funds, (ii) the Employees, (iii) Strand, (iv) the Reorganized Debtor, (v) the Independent Directors, (vi) the Committee, (vii) the members of the Committee (in their official capacities), (viii) the Claimant Trust, (ix) the Claimant Trustee, (x) the Litigation Sub-Trust, (xi) the Litigation Trustee, (xii) the members of the [CTOB] (in their official capacities), (xiii) [HCMLP GP LLC], (xiv) the Professionals retained by the Debtor and the Committee in the Chapter 11 Case, (xv) the CEO/CRO; and (xvi) the Related Persons of each of the parties listed in (iv) through (xv); [but excluding Dondero and Okada and various entities including HMIT and Dugaboy].

The court notes that the Gatekeeper Provision in the Plan provides protection to a broader number of persons than the persons protected under the January 2020 Order (addressing the Independent Directors and their agents and advisors) and the July 2020 Order (addressing Seery in his role as CEO and CRO of the Debtor). But, at the same time, it is less restrictive than the gatekeeping provisions under the Gatekeeper Orders, in that the gatekeeping provisions in the prior orders shield the protected parties from any claim that is not both "colorable" and a claim for "willful misconduct or gross negligence," effectively providing the protected parties under the prior orders with a limited immunity from claims of simple negligence or breach of contract that do not rise to the level of "willful misconduct or gross negligence," whereas the Gatekeeping Provision under the Plan does not act as a release or exculpation of the Protected Parties in any way because it does not prohibit any party from bringing any kind of claim against a Protected Party, provided the proposed claimant first obtains a finding in the bankruptcy court that its proposed claims are "colorable."[99]

[99] It should be noted that--as discussed further below--there are, separately in the Plan, exculpations as to a smaller universe of persons--e.g., the Debtor, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors.

Dondero and some of the entities under his control appealed[100] the Confirmation Order directly to the Fifth Circuit, arguing, among other issues, that the Plan's exculpation, release, and injunction provisions, including the Gatekeeper Provision (collectively, the "Protection Provisions") impermissibly provide certain non-debtor bankruptcy participants with a discharge, purportedly in contravention of the provisions of Bankruptcy Code § 524(e)'s statutory bar on non-debtor discharges. As noted above, the Fifth Circuit, "affirm[ed] the confirmation order in large part" and "reverse[d] only insofar as the plan exculpates certain non-debtors in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), strik[ing] those few parties from the plan's exculpation, and affirm[ed] on all remaining grounds."[101] The Fifth Circuit specifically found the "injunction and gatekeeping provisions [to be] sound" and found that it was only "the exculpation of certain non-debtors" that "exceed[ed] the bankruptcy court's authority," agreeing with the bankruptcy court's conclusions that the Protection Provisions were legal, necessary under the circumstances, and in the best interest of all parties" in part, and only disagreeing to the extent that the exculpation provision improperly extended to certain bankruptcy participants other than Highland, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors and "revers[ing] and strik[ing] the few unlawful parts [100] On appeal, the appellant funds ("Funds"), whom this court found to be "owned and/or controlled" by Dondero despite their purported independence, also asked the Fifth Circuit to vacate this court's factual finding "because it threatens the Funds' compliance with federal law and damages their reputations and values" and because "[a]ccording to the Funds, the characterization is unfair, as they are not litigious like Dondero and are completely independent from him." NexPoint Advisors, L.P. v. Highland Capital Mgmt., L.P. (In re Highland Capital Mgmt., L.P.), 48 F.4th at 434. Applying the "clear error" standard of review, the Fifth Circuit "le[ft] the bankruptcy court's factual finding undisturbed" because "nothing in this record leaves us with a firm and definite conviction that the bankruptcy court made a mistake in finding that the Funds are 'owned and/or controlled by [Dondero]." Id. at 434-35.

[101] See supra note 4. The Fifth Circuit replaced its initial opinion with its final opinion a few days after certain appellants had filed a short (four-and-one-half pages) motion for rehearing (the "Motion for Rehearing") on September 2, 2022. The movants had asked the Fifth Circuit to "narrowly amend the [initial] Opinion in order to confirm the Court's holding that the impermissibly exculpated parties are similarly struck from the protections of the injunction and gatekeeper provisions of the plan (in other words, that such parties cannot constitute 'Protected Parties')." In the final Fifth Circuit opinion, same as the initial Fifth Circuit opinion, the Fifth Circuit stated that, with regard to the Confirmation Order, the panel would "reverse only insofar as the plan exculpates certain non-debtors in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), strike those few parties from the plan's exculpation, and affirm on all remaining grounds." Highland Capital, 48 F.4th at 424. No findings, discussion, or rulings regarding the injunction and gatekeeper provisions that were in the initial Fifth Circuit opinion were disturbed.

of the Plan's exculpation provision."[102] The Fifth Circuit then remanded to the Bankruptcy Court "for further proceedings in accordance with the opinion."[103]

In the course of analyzing the Protection Provisions under the Plan, the Fifth Circuit noted that the protection provisions in the January and July 2020 Orders appointing the Independent Directors and Seery as CEO and CRO of Highland were res judicata and that "those orders have the effect of exculpating the Independent Directors and Seery in his executive capacities" such that "[d]espite removal from the exculpation provision in the confirmation order, the Independent Directors' agents, advisors, and employees, as well as Seery in his official capacities are all exculpated to the extent provided in the January and July 2020 Orders."[104]

The Reorganized Debtor filed a motion in the bankruptcy court to conform the plan to the Fifth Circuit's mandate, proposing that only one change was needed to make the Plan compliant with the Fifth Circuit's ruling: narrow the defined term for "Exculpated Parties" to read as follows:

> "Exculpated Parties" means, collectively, (i) the Debtor, (ii) the Independent Directors, (iii) the Committee, and (iv) members of the Committee (in their official capacities).

The Reorganized Debtor proposed that this one simple revision of this defined term removed the exculpations deemed by the Fifth Circuit to violate section 524(e) of the Bankruptcy Code, and that no other changes would be required to conform the Plan and Confirmation Order to the Fifth Circuit's mandate. Some of the Dondero-related entities objected to the motion to conform, arguing that the Fifth Circuit's ruling required more surgery on the Plan than simply narrowing the defined term "Exculpated Parties." On February 27, 2023, this court entered its order granting

E. HMIT's Motion for Leave

HMIT filed its emergency Motion for Leave on March 28, 2023, which, with attachments, as first filed, was 387 pages in length, including an initial proposed complaint ("Initial Proposed Complaint") and two sworn declarations of Dondero that were attached as "objective evidence" in "support[ ]" of the Motion for Leave,[106] and with it, an application for an emergency setting on the hearing on the Motion to Leave. On April 23, 2023, HMIT filed a pleading entitled a "supplement" to its Motion to Leave ("Supplement"),[107] to which it attached a revised proposed verified complaint ("Proposed Complaint")[108] as Exhibit 1-A to the Motion for Leave and stated that "[t]he Supplement is not intended to amend or supersede the [Motion for Leave]; rather, it is intended as a supplement to address procedural matters and to bring forth additional facts that further confirm the appropriateness of the derivative action."[109] The HMIT Motion for Leave was later amended to eliminate the Dondero Declarations and references to the same (but not the underlying allegations that were supposedly supported by the Dondero Declarations).[110]

[109] Supplement ¶ 1.

[110] Bankr. Dkt. Nos. 3815 and 3816. Both of these filings had the Initial Proposed Complaint attached as Exhibit 1 to the Motion for Leave.

As earlier noted, HMIT desires leave to sue the Proposed Defendants regarding the post-confirmation, pre-Effective Date purchase of allowed unsecured claims. The Proposed Defendants would be:

> Seery, who was a stranger to Highland until approximately four months following the Petition Date when he was brought in as one of the three Independent Directors, and now serves as the CEO of the Reorganized Debtor and the Trustee of the Claimant Trust (and also was previously Highland's CRO during the case, then CEO, and, also, an Independent Board Member of Highland's general partner during the Highland case). Seery is best understood as the man who took Dondero's place running Highland—per the request of the Committee.
>
> Claims Purchasers, who were strangers to Highland until the end of the bankruptcy case. They are identified as Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"); Muck Holdings, LLC ("Muck"), which was a special purpose entity created by Farallon to purchase unsecured claims against Highland; Stonehill Capital Management, LLC ("Stonehill"); and Jessup Holdings, LLC ("Jessup"), which was a special purpose entity created by Stonehill to purchase unsecured claims against Highland (collectively, the "Claims Purchasers"). The Claims Purchasers purchased $240 million face value of already-allowed unsecured claims post-confirmation and pre-Effective Date in the spring of 2021 and another $125 million face value of already-allowed unsecured claims in August 2021. Bankruptcy Rule 3001(e) notices—giving notice of same—were filed on the bankruptcy clerk's docket regarding these purchases. The claims had previously been held by the creditors known as the Crusader Redeemer Committee, Acis Capital, HarbourVest, and UBS (three of these four creditors formerly served on the Committee during the Highland bankruptcy case).
>
> John Doe Defendants Nos. 1-10, which are described to be "currently unknown individuals or business entities who may be identified in discovery as involved in the wrongful transactions at issue."
>
> Highland, as a nominal defendant. HMIT added Highland as a nominal defendant in the Revised Proposed Complaint attached to the Supplement.
>
> Claimant Trust, as a nominal defendant. HMIT added the Claimant Trust as a nominal defendant in the Revised Proposed Complaint attached to the Supplement.

The proposed plaintiffs would be:

> HMIT, which, again, was the largest equity holder in Highland and held a 99.5% limited partnership interest (specifically, Class B/C limited partnership interests). HMIT is the holder of a Class 10 interest under the Plan, pursuant to which HMIT's limited partnership interest in Highland was extinguished as of the Effective Date in exchange for a pro rata share of a contingent interest in the Claimant Trust.

Highland, as a nominal party. HMIT wishes to bring its complaint on behalf of itself and derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor.

Claimant Trust, as a nominal party. HMIT wishes to bring its complaint on behalf of itself and derivatively on behalf of the Claimant Trust.

In the Proposed Complaint, HMIT asserts the following six counts: Count I (against Seery) for breach of fiduciary duties; Count II (against the Claims Purchasers and John Doe Defendants) for knowing participation in breach of fiduciary duties; Count III (against all Proposed Defendants) for conspiracy; Count IV (against Muck and Jessup) for equitable disallowance of their claims; Count V (against all Proposed Defendants) for unjust enrichment and constructive trust; and Count VI (against all Proposed Defendants) for declaratory relief.[111] The gist of the Proposed Complaint is as follows. HMIT asserts that something seems amiss regarding the post-confirmation/pre-Effective Date purchase of claims by the Claims Purchasers. Actually, more bluntly, HMIT asserts that "wrongful conduct occurred" and "improper trades" were made.[112] HMIT believes the Claims Purchasers paid around $160 million for the $365 million face amount of claims they purchased. HMIT believes that this amount was too high for any rational claim purchaser (particularly hedge funds who expect high returns) to have paid for the claims—based on Highland's Disclosure Statement and Plan projections regarding the projected distributions under the Plan to holders of allowed unsecured claims. And, of course, Dondero purports to have concluded from the three phone conversations he had with representatives of one of the Claims Purchasers that they did no due diligence before purchasing the claims. Therefore, HMIT surmises, Seery must have given these Claims Purchasers MNPI regarding Highland that convinced them that it was to their economic advantage to purchase the claims. In particular, HMIT surmises Seery must have shared [111] In the Initial Proposed Complaint, HMIT proposed to bring claims against the various Proposed Defendants in seven counts, including a count for fraud by misrepresentation and material nondisclosure against all Proposed Defendants. In the Proposed Complaint, HMIT abandons its claim for fraud by misrepresentation and material nondisclosure.

[112] Motion for Leave, 7.

MNPI regarding the likely imminent sale of MGM, in which Highland had, directly and indirectly, substantial holdings. As noted earlier, MGM was ultimately purchased by Amazon after a sale process that had been quite publicly discussed in media reports for several months and that was officially announced to the public in late May 2021 (just a few weeks after the Claims Purchasers purchased some of their claims, but a few months before certain of their claims—the UBS claims—were purchased).[113] In summary, while the Proposed Complaint is lengthy and at times hard to follow, it boils down to allegations that: (a) Seery filed (or caused to be filed) deflated, pessimistic, misleading projections regarding the value of the Debtor's estate in connection with the Plan, (b) then induced very sophisticated unsecured creditors to discount and sell their claims to the likewise very sophisticated Claims Purchasers, (c) which Claims Purchasers are allegedly friendly with Seery, and are now happily approving Seery's allegedly excessive compensation demands post-Effective Date (resulting in less money in the pot to pay off the creditor body in full, and, thus, a diminished likelihood that HMIT will realize any recovery on its contingent Class 10 interest). HMIT argues that Seery should be required to disgorge his compensation. It appears that HMIT also seeks other damages in the form of equitable disallowance of the Claims Purchasers' claims and disgorgement of distributions on account of those claims, the imposition of a constructive trust over all disgorged funds, and declaratory relief.

HMIT claims that, in seeking to file the Proposed Complaint, it is seeking to protect the rights and interests of the Reorganized Debtor, the Claimant Trust, and "innocent stakeholders" who were allegedly injured by Seery's and the Claims Purchasers' alleged conspiratorial and fraudulent scheme to line Seery's pockets with excessive compensation for his role as Claimant Trustee. In its Motion for Leave, HMIT states that "[t]he attached Adversary Proceeding alleges claims which are substantially more than 'colorable' based upon plausible allegations that the Proposed Defendants, acting in concert, perpetrated a fraud, including a fraud upon innocent stakeholders, as well as breaches of fiduciary duties and knowing participation in (or aiding or abetting) breaches of fiduciary duty."[114]

F. Is HMIT Really Dondero by Another Name?

The Proposed Defendants argue that HMIT's Motion for Leave is nothing more than a continuation of the harassing and bad-faith litigation by Dondero and his related entities that the Gatekeeper Provisions were intended to prevent and, thus, this is one of multiple reasons that the Motion for Leave should be denied.

To be clear, HMIT asserts that it is controlled by Mark Patrick ("Patrick"), who has been HMIT's administrator since August 2022. Patrick asserts that he is not influenced or controlled by Dondero, in general, and specifically not in its efforts to pursue the Proposed Claims against Seery and the Claims Purchasers. However, the testimony elicited at the June 8 Hearing—the hearing at which HMIT had the burden of showing the court that its Proposed Claims were "colorable" such that it should be allowed to pursue them through the filing of the Proposed Complaint—paints a different picture. Somewhat tellingly, HMIT chose not to call Patrick—allegedly HMIT's only representative and control person—as a witness in support of its Motion for Leave. Rather, Dondero was HMIT's first witness called in support of its motion, and the first

[114] See Motion for Leave (Bankr. Dkt. No. 3816) ¶ 3. HMIT notes, in a footnote 6, that "Neither this Motion nor the proposed Adversary Complaint seeks to challenge the Court's Orders or the Plan. In addition, neither this Motion nor the proposed Adversary Complaint seeks to redistribute the assets of the Claimant Trust in a manner that would adversely impact innocent creditors. Rather, the proposed Adversary Proceeding seeks to benefit all innocent stakeholders while working within the terms and provisions of the Plan, as well as the Claimant Trust Agreement."

questions on direct from HMIT's counsel were aimed at establishing that Dondero was not behind the filing of the Motion for Leave and the pursuit of the Proposed Claims.[115] Dondero testified that he did not (i) "have any current official position" with HMIT, (ii) "attempt to exercise [control] on the business affairs of [HMIT]," (iii) "have any official legal relationship with [HMIT] where [he] can attempt to exercise either direct or indirect control over [HMIT]," or (iv) "participate in the decision of whether or not to file the proceedings that are currently pending before Judge Jernigan."[116] After HMIT rested, Highland and the Claimant Trust called Patrick as a witness, and he testified that he was the administrator of HMIT, that HMIT does not have any employees, operations, or revenues, and, when asked if HMIT owned any assets, Patrick testified, with not a great deal of certainty, that "it's my understanding it has a contingent beneficiary interest in the Claimants [sic] Trust" and that is the only asset HMIT has.[117] Patrick testified that HMIT did not owe any money to Dondero personally, but acknowledged that in 2015, HMIT had issued a secured promissory note in favor of Dondero's family trust, Dugaboy, in the amount of approximately $62.6 million (the "Dugaboy Note") in exchange for Dugaboy transferring a portion of its limited partner interests in Highland to HMIT; the Dugaboy Note was secured in part by the Highland limited partnership interests purchased from Dugaboy.[118] Patrick admitted that, if HMIT's Class 10 interest has no value, HMIT would have no ability to pay the Dugaboy Note.[119] He further testified that neither he nor any representative of HMIT had ever spoken with any representative of Farallon or Stonehill, that he had no personal knowledge about any quid pro quo, the amount of due diligence Farallon or Stonehill conducted prior to buying their claims, or the terms of Seery's compensation package (until the terms were disclosed to them in opposition to the Motion for Leave).[120] Patrick admitted that Dugaboy was paying HMIT's attorneys' fees pursuant to a settlement agreement between HMIT and Dugaboy.[121]

On cross-examination by HMIT's counsel, Patrick further testified that HMIT has not filed any litigation, as plaintiff, other than its efforts to be a plaintiff in the Motion for Leave and its action as a petitioner in the Texas Rule 202 proceeding filed earlier in 2023 in the Texas state court.[122] HMIT's counsel argued that the point of this questioning was that "they're just trying to draw Dondero into this and – this vexatious litigant argument, and we're just developing the fact that obviously Hunter Mountain has only filed – attempting to file this action and a Rule 202 proceeding.[123] But, Dondero and HMIT's counsel referred during the June 8 Hearing to the First Rule 202 Petition (where Dondero was the petitioner) and the Second Rule 202 Petition (where HMIT was the petitioner) as "our" Rule 202 petitions, and also to the numerous attempts at getting the discovery (that Dondero had warned Linn was coming) in the collective. For example, in objecting to the admission of Highland's Exhibit 10 – the Texas state court order denying and dismissing the Second Rule 202 Petition – on the basis of relevance, HMIT's counsel referred to the order as "an order denying our second" Rule 202 Petition.[124] And, Dondero testified that his warning to Linn in May 2021 that "discovery was coming" was "my response to I knew they had traded on material nonpublic information" and that "I thought it would be a lot easier to get

This testimony from Patrick came after HMIT's counsel objection to counsel's line of questioning regarding Patrick's personal knowledge of the facts supporting the allegations in the Proposed Complaint on the basis that he was invading the attorney work product privilege, which was overruled by this court; HMIT's counsel argued (311:4-19) that the line of questioning was an "invasion of attorney work product . . . discovery on a situation like this than it has been for the last two years" and that "we've been trying for two years to get . . . discovery."[125]

Dondero's use of an entity over which he exerts influence and control to pursue his own agenda in the bankruptcy case is not new. Rather, this has been part of Dondero's modus operandi since the "nasty breakup" between Dondero and Highland that culminated with Dondero's ouster in October 2020, whereby Dondero, after not getting his way in the bankruptcy court, continued to lob objections and create obstacles to Highland's implementation of the Plan through entities he owns or controls. As noted above, the Fifth Circuit specifically upheld this court's finding in the Confirmation Order that Dondero owned or controlled the various entities that had objected to confirmation of the Plan and appealed the Confirmation Order, where the Dondero-related appellants made similar protestations that they are not owned or controlled by Dondero and asked the Fifth Circuit to vacate this court's factual finding because, among other reasons, "[a]ccording to the Funds, the characterization is unfair, as they are not litigious like Dondero and are completely independent from him."[126] Based on the totality of the evidence in this proceeding, the court finds that, contrary to the protestations of HMIT's counsel and Patrick otherwise, Dondero is the driving force behind HMIT's Motion for Leave and the Proposed Complaint. The Motion for Leave is just one more attempt by Dondero to press his conspiracy theory that he has pressed for over two years now, unsuccessfully, in Texas state court through Rule 202 proceedings, with the Texas State Securities Board, and with the United States Trustee's office.

G. Opposition to Motion for Leave: Arguing No Standing and No "Colorable" Claims

Highland, the Claimant Trust, and Seery (together, the "Highland Parties") filed a joint opposition ("Joint Opposition") to HMIT's Motion for Leave on May 11, 2023.[127] The Claims Purchasers filed a separate objection ("Claims Purchasers' Objection") to the Motion for Leave on May 11, 2023, as well.[128] In the Joint Opposition, the Highland Parties urge the court to deny HMIT leave to pursue the Proposed Claims because, as a threshold matter, HMIT does not have standing to bring them, directly or derivatively against the Proposed Defendants. They argue, in the alternative, that the Motion for Leave should be denied even if HMIT had standing to pursue the Proposed Claims because none of the Proposed Claims are "colorable" claims as that term is used in the Gatekeeper Provision of the Plan (and Gatekeeper Orders).[129]

The Claims Purchasers likewise argue that HMIT lacks standing to complain about claims trading in the bankruptcy which occurred between sophisticated Claims Purchasers and sophisticated sellers ("Claims Sellers"), represented by skilled bankruptcy and transactional counsel. Moreover, they argue HMIT cannot show that it or the Reorganized Debtor or the Claimant Trust were injured by the claims trading at issue because the Purchased Claims had already been adjudicated as allowed claims in the bankruptcy case—thus, distributions under the Plan on account of the Purchased Claims remain the same, the only difference being who holds the claims. Moreover, even if HMIT could succeed in equitably subordinating the validly transferred allowed claims, HMIT would still be in the same position it is today: the holder of a contingent, speculative Class 10 interest that would only be paid after payment, in full, with interest, of all creditors under the Plan. The Claims Purchasers argue in the alternative that the Proposed Claims are not "colorable."

Finally, the Proposed Defendants argue that the standard of review for assessing whether the Proposed Claims are "colorable" (as such term is used in the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeping Orders) is a standard that is a higher than the "plausibility" standard applied to Rule 12(b)(6). They argue that HMIT should be required to meet a higher bar with respect to colorability that includes making a prima facie showing that the Proposed Claims have merit (and/or are not without foundation) which requires HMIT to do more than meet the liberal notice-pleading standards.

H. HMIT's Reply to the Proposed Defendants' Opposition to the Motion for Leave

In its reply brief ("Reply"), filed by HMIT on May 18, 2023,[130] it argues that it has constitutional standing as an "aggrieved party" to bring the Proposed Claims on behalf of itself.[131] HMIT also argues that it has standing under Delaware Trust law to bring a derivative action on behalf of the Claimant Trust and that it not only has standing to bring the Proposed Claims derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor under the Plan, but it is the best party to bring the claims.[132] Finally, HMIT maintains that the standard of review that the bankruptcy court should apply in assessing the "colorability" of the Proposed Claims is no greater than the standard of review applied to motions to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), which would require the bankruptcy court to look only to the "four corners" of the Proposed Complaint

[130] Bankr. Dkt. No. 3785.

[131] See Reply ¶ 7.

[132] See, Reply ¶ 23 n.5, where HMIT argues "The nature of this injury, in addition to Seery's influence over the Claimant Trust, and the lack of prior action by the Claimant Trust to pursue the claims HMIT seeks to pursue derivatively, among other things, demonstrate that HMIT is not only a proper party to assert its derivative claims – but the best party to do so."

and "not weigh extraneous evidence,"[133] take all allegations as true, and view all allegations and inferences in a light most favorable to HMIT. As discussed in greater length below, HMIT argues that, under this standard, the bankruptcy court should not consider evidence in making its determination as to whether the Proposed Complaint presents "colorable" claims.

I. Litigation within the Litigation: The Pre- June 8 Hearing Skirmishes

Suffice it to say there was significant activity before the Motion for Leave actually was presented at the June 8 hearing. HMIT sought an emergency hearing on its Motion for Leave (wanting a hearing on three days' notice). When the bankruptcy court denied an emergency hearing, HMIT unsuccessfully pursued an interlocutory appeal of the denial of an emergency hearing to the district court. HMIT then petitioned for a writ of mandamus at the Fifth Circuit regarding the emergency hearing denial, which was denied by the Fifth Circuit on April 12, 2023.

Next, there were multiple pleadings and hearings regarding what kind of hearing the bankruptcy court should or should not hold on the Motion for Leave—particularly focusing on whether or not it would be an evidentiary hearing.[134] The resolution of this issue turned on what standard of review the court should apply in exercising its gatekeeping function and determining the colorability of the Proposed Claims. HMIT (although it had submitted two declarations of Dondero with its original Motion for Leave and approximately 350 pages of total evidentiary support) was adamant that there should be no evidence presented at the hearing on the Motion for Leave, arguing that the standard for review should be the plausibility standard under Rule 12(b)(6)

[133] See Reply ¶ 47.

[134] Highland, joined by Seery and the Claims Purchasers, had filed a motion asking the bankruptcy court to set a briefing schedule on the Motion for Leave and to schedule a status conference, indicating that Highland's proposed timetable for same was opposed by HMIT. HMIT subsequently filed a response unopposed to a briefing schedule and status conference, but, before the status conference, HMIT filed a brief, stating it was opposed to there being any evidence at the ultimate hearing on the HMIT Motion for Leave—arguing the bankruptcy court did not need evidence to exercise its gatekeeping function and determine if HMIT has a "colorable" claim. Rather, the court need only engage in a Rule 12(b)(6)-type plausibility analysis.

motions to dismiss such that "the threshold inquiry is very, very low. Evidence is not allowed. . . . [S]imilar to a 12(b)(6) inquiry, [the court] is limited to the four corners of the principal pleading – in this case, the complaint, or now the revised complaint."[135] Counsel for the Proposed Defendants argued that the standard of review for colorability here, in the specific context of the court exercising its gatekeeping function under the Plan, is more akin to the standards applied under the Supreme Court's Barton Doctrine[136] pursuant to which that the bankruptcy court must apply a higher standard than the 12(b)(6) standard, including the consideration of evidence at the hearing on the motion for leave; if the standard of review presents no greater hurdle to the movant than the 12(b)(6) standard applied to every plaintiff in every case, then the gatekeeping provisions mean nothing and do nothing to protect the parties from the harassing, bad-faith litigation they were put in place to prevent.[137] On May 22, 2023, after receipt of post-hearing briefing on the issue, the court entered an order stating that "the court has determined that there may be mixed questions of fact and law implicated by the Motion for Leave" and "[t]herefore, the parties will be permitted to present evidence (including witness testimony) at the June 8, 2023 hearing [on the Motion to Leave] if they so choose."

Two days later, HMIT filed an emergency motion for expedited discovery or alternatively for continuance of the June 8, 2023 hearing, seeking expedited depositions of corporate [136] The Barton Doctrine was established in the 19th century Supreme Court case of Barton v. Barbour, 104 U.S. 126 (1881), and states that a party wishing to sue a court-appointed trustee or receiver must first obtain leave of the appointing court by making a prima facie case that the claim it wishes to bring is not without foundation.

[137] See April 24 Transcript, 36:24-37:4 ("[W]e're exactly today where the Court had predicted in entering [the Confirmation Order], that the costs and distraction of this litigation are substantial. And if all we're doing is replicating a 12(b)(6) hearing on a motion for leave, we're actually not doing anything to reduce, as the Court made clear, the burdens, distractions, of litigation."); 37:5-13 ("The Fifth Circuit likewise cited Barton in its order affirming the confirmation order. representatives of the Claims Purchasers and of Seery and production of documents pursuant to deposition notices and subpoenas duces tecum that HMIT had attached to the motion. On May 26, 2023, this court held yet another status conference. Following the status conference, the court granted in part and denied in part HMIT's request for expedited discovery by ordering only Seery and Dondero to be made available for depositions prior to the June 8 Hearing. The court reached what seemed like appropriate middle ground by allowing the deposition of Seery and allowing the other parties to depose Dondero (for whom sworn declarations had been submitted), but the court was not going to allow any more discovery (i.e., of the Claims Purchasers) at so late an hour. The court was aware that HMIT and Dondero had been seeking discovery relating to the very claims trades that are the subject of the Revised Proposed Complaint from the Claims Purchasers in Texas state court "Rule 202" proceedings for approximately two years, where their attempts were rebuffed.

Approximately 60 hours before the June 8 Hearing, HMIT filed its Witness and Exhibit List disclosing for the first time two potential expert witnesses (along with biographical information and a disclosure regarding the subject matter of their likely testimony). Highland, the Claimant Trust, and Seery filed a joint motion to exclude the expert testimony and documents ("Motion to Exclude"), which the court ultimately granted in a separate order.

During the full-day June 8 Hearing on the Motion to Leave, the court admitted over 50 HMIT exhibits and over 30 Highland/Claimant Trust exhibits. The court heard testimony from HMIT's witnesses Dondero and Seery (as an adverse witness) and from the Highland Parties' witness Mark Patrick, the administrator of HMIT since August 2022 (as an adverse witness). The bankruptcy court allowed HMIT to make a running objection to all evidence—as it continued to argue that evidence was not appropriate.

III. LEGAL ANALYSIS

In determining whether HMIT should be granted leave, pursuant to the Gatekeeper Provision of the Plan and the court's prior Gatekeeper Orders, to pursue the Proposed Claims, the court must address the issue of whether HMIT would have standing to bring the Proposed Claims in the first instance. If so, the next question is whether the Proposed Claims are "colorable." But prior to getting into the weeds on standing and "colorability," some general discussion regarding the topic of claims trading in the bankruptcy world seems appropriate, given that HMIT's Proposed Claims are based, in large part, on allegations of improper claims trading.

A. Claims Trading in the Context of Bankruptcy Cases—Can It Be Tortious or Otherwise Actionable?

As noted, at the crux of HMIT's desired lawsuit is what this court will refer to as "claims trading activity" that occurred shortly after the Plan was confirmed, but before the Plan went effective. HMIT believes that the claims trading activity gave rise to various torts: breach of fiduciary duty on the part of Seery; knowing participation in breach of fiduciary duty by the other Proposed Defendants; and conspiracy by all Defendants. HMIT also believes that the following remedies should be imposed: equitable disallowance of the Purchased Claims; disgorgement of the alleged profits the Claims Purchasers made on their purchases; and disgorgement of all Seery's compensation received since the beginning of his "collusion" with the other Defendants. Without a doubt, the Motion for Leave and Proposed Complaint revolve almost entirely around the claims trading activity.

This begs the question: When (or under what circumstances) might claims trading activity during a bankruptcy case give rise to a cause of action that either the bankruptcy estate or an economic stakeholder in the case might have standing to bring? Here, the claims trading wasn't even "during a bankruptcy case" really—it was post-confirmation and pre-effective date, and it happened to be: (a) after mediation of the claims, (b) after Rule 9019 settlement motions, (c) after objections by Dondero and certain of his family trusts were lodged, (d) after evidentiary hearings, and (e) after orders were ultimately entered allowing the claims (and in most cases, such orders were appealed). The further crux of HMIT's desired lawsuit is that Seery allegedly "wrongfully facilitated and promoted the sale of large unsecured creditor claims to his close business allies and friends" by sharing material non-public information to them regarding the potential value of the claims (i.e., the potential value of the bankruptcy estate), and this is what made the claims trading activity particularly pernicious. The alleged sharing of MNPI allegedly caused the Claims Purchasers to purchase their claims without doing any due diligence and with knowledge that the claims would be worth much more than the Plan's "pessimistic" projections might have suggested, and also allowed Seery to plant friendly allies into the creditor constituency (and on the post-confirmation CTOB) that would "rubber stamp" his generous compensation. This is all referred to as "not arm's-length" and "collusive." Notably, the MNPI mostly pertained to a likely future acquisition of MGM by Amazon (which transaction, indeed, occurred in 2022, after being publicly announced in Spring of 2021); as noted earlier, Highland owned, directly and indirectly, common stock in MGM. Also notably, there had been rumors and media attention regarding a potential sale of MGM for many months.[138] In summary, to be clear, HMIT's desired lawsuit is laced with a theme of "insider trading"—although this isn't a situation of securities trading per se (i.e., the unsecured Purchased Claims were not securities), and, as noted earlier, the Texas State Securities Board has not seen fit to investigate the claims trading activity.

So, preliminarily, is claims trading in bankruptcy sinister per se? The answer is no.

[138] E.g., Benjamin Mullin, MGM Holdings, Studio Behind 'James Bond,' Explores a Sale, THE WALL STREET JOURNAL (Dec. 21, 2020, 6:38 p.m.).

The activity of investing in distressed debt (which frequently occurs during a bankruptcy case—sometimes referred to as "claims trading") is ubiquitous and, indeed, has been so for a very long time. As noted by one scholar:

> The creation of a market in bankruptcy claims is the single most important development in the bankruptcy world since the Bankruptcy Code's enactment in 1978. [Citations omitted.] Claims trading has revolutionized bankruptcy by making it a much more market-driven process. [Citations omitted.] . . . The development of a robust market for all types of claims against debtors has changed the cast of characters involved in bankruptcies. In addition to long-standing relational creditors, like trade creditors or a single senior secured bank or bank group, bankruptcy cases now involve professional distressed debt investors, whose interests and behavior are often quite different than traditional relational counterparty creditors.

As a pure policy matter, some practitioners have bemoaned this claims trading phenomenon, suggesting that "distressed debt traders may sacrifice the long-term viability of a debtor for the ability to realize substantial and quick returns on their investments."[140] Others suggest that claims trading in bankruptcy is beneficial, in that it allows creditors of a debtor an early exit from a potentially long bankruptcy case, enabling them to save expense and administrative hassles, realize immediate liquidity on their claims (albeit discounted), and may even permit them to take advantage of a tax loss on their own desired timetable.[141] On the flipside, "[c]aims trading permits an entrance to the bankruptcy process for those investors who want to take the time and effort to monitor the debtor and contribute expertise to the reorganization process."[142]

So, what are the "rules of the road" here? What does the Bankruptcy Code dictate regarding claims trading? The answer is nothing. The Bankruptcy Code itself has no provisions whatsoever regarding claims trading. The only thing resembling any regulation of claims trading during a bankruptcy case is found at Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 3001(e)—the current version of which went into effect in 1991—and it imposes extremely light regulation—if it could even be called that. This rule requires, in pertinent part (at subsection (2)), that "[i]f a claim other than one based on a publicly traded note, bond, or debenture" is traded during the case after a proof of claim is filed, notice/evidence of that trade must be filed with the bankruptcy clerk by the transferee. The transferor shall then be notified and given 21 days to object. If there is an objection, the bankruptcy court will hold a hearing regarding whether a transfer, in fact, took place. If there is no objection, nothing further needs to happen, and the transferee will be considered substituted for the transferor.

There are several things noteworthy about Rule 3001(e)(2). First, the only party given the opportunity to object is the transferor of the claim (presumably, in the situation of a dispute regarding whether there was truly an agreement regarding the transfer of the claim). Second, there is no need for a bankruptcy court order approving the transfer (except in the event of an objection by the alleged transferor). Third, the economic consideration paid need not be disclosed to the court or anyone. Fourth, there is no requirement or definition of timeliness. Finally, it explicitly does not apply with regard to publicly traded debt. This, alone, means that many claims trades are not even reported in a bankruptcy case. But it is not just publicly traded debt that will not be reflected with a Rule 3001(e) filing. For example, bank debt, in modern times, is often syndicated (i.e., fragmented into many beneficial holders of portions of the debt) and only the administrative agent for the syndicate (or the "lead bank") will file a proof of claim in the bankruptcy—thus, as the syndicated interests (participations) change hands, and they frequently do, there typically will not be a Rule 3001(e) notice filed.[143] To be clear here, this syndication-of-bank-debt fact, along with the fact that there are financial products whereby bank debt might be carved up into economic interests separate and apart from legal title to the loan, means there are many situations in which trading of claims during a bankruptcy case is not necessarily transparent or, for that matter, policed by the bankruptcy court. This is the world of modern bankruptcy. Most of the claims trading that gets reported through a Rule 3001(e) notice is the trading of small vendor claims. And this is all regarded as private sale transactions for the most part.[144] Suffice it to say that there is not a wealth of case law dealing with claims trading in a bankruptcy context. Perhaps this is not surprising, since it is not prohibited and is mostly a matter of private contract between buyer and seller. The case law that does exist seems to arise in situations of perceived bad faith of a purchaser—for example, when there was an attempt to control voting and/or ultimate control of the debtor through the plan process (not always problematic, but there are outlier cases where this was found to cross a line and result in consequences such as disallowing votes on a plan or even equitable subordination of a claim).[145] Another type of case that has generated case law is where the purchaser of claims occupied a fiduciary status with the debtor.[146] Still another type of case that has generated case law is where there is an attempt to cleanse claims that might have risks because of a seller's malfeasance, by trading the claim to a new claim holder.[147]

[144] Note that Bankruptcy Rule 3001(e) was very different before 1991. Between 1983-1991, the rule required that parties transferring claims inform the court that a transfer of claims was taking place and also disclose the consideration paid for the transferred claims. A hearing would take place prior to the execution of a trade. Judicial involvement was required and resulted in judicial scrutiny of transactions—something that simply does not exist today.

The following is a potpourri of the more notable cases that have addressed claims trading in different contexts. Most of them imposed no adverse consequences on claims traders: In re Kreisler, 546 F.3d 863, 864 (7th Cir. 2008) (where a corporation named Garlin, that was owned by the individual chapter 7 debtors' sister and close friend, purchased a $900,000 bank claim for $16,500, and there was no disclosure of Garlin's connections to debtors and no Rule 3001(e)(2) notice was filed, the Seventh Circuit reversed the bankruptcy court's invocation of the doctrine of equitable subordination to the claim, stating: "Equitable subordination is generally appropriate only if a creditor is guilty of misconduct that causes injury to the interests of other creditors;" the Seventh Circuit further stated that it could "put to one side whether the court's finding of inequitable conduct was correct" because even if there was misconduct, it did not harm the other creditors, who were in the same position whether the original creditor or Garlin happened to own the claim; the Seventh Circuit did note that Garlin's decision to purchase the original bank creditor's claim might have disadvantaged the other creditors if it interfered with the trustee's own potential settlement with the original bank creditor (note that the trustee argued that she had been negotiating a deal with bank under which bank might have reduced its claims); however, the trustee presented no evidence that any deal with the bank was imminent or even likely; thus, whether such a deal could have been reached was speculation; equitable subordination was therefore improper."); *Viking Assocs., L.L.C. v. This would result in unearned, undeserved profit for the debtor, destroy or impair the sales value of securities by abolishing the profit motive, which inspires purchasers."); In re Washington Mutual, Inc., 461 B.R. 200 (Bankr. Suffice it to say that the courts have, more often than not, been unwilling to impose legal consequences, for an actor's involvement with claims trading. At most, in outlier-type situations during a case, courts have taken steps to disallow claims for voting purposes or to subordinate claims to other unsecured creditors for distribution purposes.[148] But the case at bar does not present facts that are typical of any of the situations in reported cases.

For one thing, unlike in the reported cases this court has located, there seems to have been complete symmetry of sophistication among the claim sellers and claim purchasers here—and complete symmetry with HMIT for that matter. All persons involved are highly sophisticated financial institutions, hedge funds, or private equity funds. No one was a "mom-and-pop" type business or vendor that might be vulnerable to chicanery. The claims ranged from being worth $10's of millions of dollars to $100's of millions of dollars in face value. And, of course, the sellers/transferors of the claims have never shown up, subsequent to the claims trading [148] Note that, while some cases suggest that outright disallowance of an unsecured claim, in the case of "inequitable conduct" might be permitted (not merely equitable subordination to unsecured creditors)—usually citing to Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295 (1939)—the Fifth Circuit has suggested otherwise. In re Mobile Steel Co., Inc., 563 F.2d 692, 699-700 (5th Cir. 1977) (cleaned up) (noting that "equitable considerations can justify only the subordination of claims, not their disallowance" and also noting that "three conditions must be satisfied before exercise of the power of equitable subordination is appropriate[:] (i) The claimant must have engaged in some type of inequitable conduct[;] (ii) The misconduct must have resulted in injury to the creditors of the bankrupt or conferred an unfair advantage on the claimant[; and] (iii) Equitable subordination of the claim must not be inconsistent with the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act." In Mobile Steel, the Fifth Circuit held that the bankruptcy judge exceeded the bounds of his equitable jurisdiction by disallowing a group of claims and also reversed the subordination of certain claims, on the grounds that the bankruptcy court had made clearly erroneous findings regarding alleged inequitable conduct and other necessary facts. Contrast In re Lothian Oil Inc., 650 F.3d 539 (5th Cir. 2011) (involving the question of whether a bankruptcy court may recharacterize a claim as equity rather than debt; the court held yes, but it has nothing to do with inequitable conduct per se; rather section 502(b)'s language that a claim should be allowed unless it is "unenforceable against the debtor and property of the debtor, under any agreement or applicable law...." is the relevant authority; unlike equitable subordination, recharacterization is about looking at the true substance of a transaction not the conduct of a party (if it looks like a duck and quacks like a duck, it's a duck—i.e., equity); the court indicated that section 105 is not a basis to recharacterize debt as equity; it's a matter of looking at state law to determine if there is any basis and looking at the nature of the underlying transaction—as either a lending arrangement or equity infusion.

transactions, to complain about anything. Everyone involved here is, essentially, a behemoth and there is literally no sign of innocent creditors getting harmed. Second, the case at bar is unique in that the claims traded here had all been allowed after objections, mediation, and Rule 9019 settlements during the bankruptcy case. Thus, the amounts that would be paid on them were "locked in," so to speak. There was no risk to a hypothetical claims-purchaser of disallowance, offset, or any "claw-back" litigation (or—one might have reasonably assumed—any type of litigation). Third, the terms for distributions on unsecured claims had been established in a confirmed plan (although the claims were purchased before the effective date of the Plan). Thus, there was a degree of certainty regarding return on investment for the Claims Purchasers here that was much higher than if the claims had been purchased early, during, or mid-way through the case.[149] This was post-confirmation, pre-effective date claims purchasing. Interestingly, all three of these facts might suggest that little due diligence would be undertaken by any hypothetical purchaser. The rules of the road had been set. The court makes this observation because HMIT has suggested there is something highly suspicious about the fact that Farallon allegedly told Dondero that it did no due diligence before purchasing its claims (leading him to conclude that the Claims Purchasers must have purchased their claims based on receiving MNPI from Seery). Not only has there been no colorable evidence suggesting that insider information was shared, but the lack of due diligence in this context does not reasonably seem suspicious. The claims purchases

[149] See discussion in BANKRUPTCY MARKETS, at 91:

> Some claims purchasers buy before the bankruptcy petition is filed, some at the beginning of the case, and some towards the end. For example, there are investors who look to purchase at low prices either when a business is failing or early in the bankruptcy and ride through the case until payouts are fairly certain. [Citations omitted.] These investors might be hoping to buy at 30 cents on the dollar and get a payout at 70 cents on the dollar. Perhaps if they waited another six months, the payout would be 74 cents on the dollar, but the additional 4 cents on the dollar for six months might not be a worthwhile return for the time value of the investment. Other investors might not want to assume the risk that exists in the early days of a case when the fate of the debtor is much less certain, but they would gladly purchase at 70 cents on the dollar at the end of the case to get a payout of 74 cents on the dollar six months later.

were almost like passive investments, at this point—there was no risk of a claim objection and there was a confirmed plan, with a lengthy disclosure statement that described not only plan payment terms and projections, but essentially anything that any investor might want to know.

To reiterate, here, HMIT seeks leave to assert the following causes of action:

I. Breach of Fiduciary Duties (Seery)

II. Knowing Participation in Breach of Fiduciary Duties (Claims Purchasers)

III. Conspiracy (all Proposed Defendants)

IV. Equitable Disallowance (Claims Purchasers)

V. Unjust Enrichment and Constructive Trust (all Proposed Defendants)

VI. Declaratory Judgment (all Proposed Defendants)

The court struggles to fathom how any of these proposed causes of action or remedies can be applied in the context of: (a) post-confirmation claims trading; (b) where the claims have all been litigated and allowed.

In reflecting on the case law and various Bankruptcy Code provisions, the court can fathom the following hypotheticals in which claims trading during a bankruptcy case might be somehow actionable:

> Hypothetical #1: The most obvious situation would be if a purchaser of a claim files a Rule 3001(e) Notice, and the seller/transferor then files an objection thereto. There would then be a contested hearing between purchaser and seller regarding the validity of the transfer with the bankruptcy court issuing an appropriate order after the hearing on the objection. As noted, there was no objection to the Rule 3001(e) notices here.
>
> Hypothetical #2: Alternatively, there could be a breach of contract suit between purchaser and seller if one thinks the other breached the purchase-sale agreement somehow. Perhaps torts might also be alleged in such litigation. As noted, there is no dispute between purchasers and sellers here.
>
> Hypothetical #3: If there is believed to be fraud in connection with a plan, a party in interest might, pursuant to section 1144 of the Bankruptcy Code, move for revocation of the plan "at any time before 180 days after the date of entry of the order for confirmation" and the court "may revoke such order if and only if such order was procured by fraud." As noted, here HMIT has suggested that the "pessimistic" plan projections may have been fraudulent or misrepresentations somehow. The time elapsed long ago to seek revocation of the Plan.

Hypothetical #4: As discussed above, in rare situations (bad faith), during a Chapter 11 case, before a plan is confirmed, a claims purchaser's claim might not be allowed for voting purposes. See Sections 1126(e) of the Bankruptcy Code ("the court may designate any entity whose acceptance or rejection of such plan was not in good faith"). Obviously, in this case, this is not applicable—the claims were purchased post-confirmation.

Hypothetical #5: As discussed above, in rare situations (inequitable conduct), a court might equitably subordinate claims to other claims. See Section 510(c) of the Bankruptcy Code. But here, HMIT is seeking either: (a) equitable subordination of the claims of the Claims Purchaser to HMIT's Class 10 former equity interest (in contravention of the explicit terms of section 510(c)) or, (b) equitable disallowance of the claims of the Claims Purchasers (in contravention of Mobile Steel).

Hypothetical #6: Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(1) and the Fifth Circuit's Lothian Oil case may permit "recharacterization" of a claim from debt to equity in certain circumstances, but not in circumstances like the ones in this case. Here, the claims have already been adjudicated and allowed (some after mediation, and all after Rule 9019 settlement orders). The only way to reconsider a claim in a bankruptcy case that has already been allowed is through Bankruptcy Code section 502(j) ("A claim that has been allowed or disallowed may be reconsidered for cause. . . according to the equities of the case."). The problem here is that Bankruptcy Rule 9024 provides that a motion for "reconsideration of an order allowing or disallowing a claim against the estate entered without a contest is not subject to the one year limitation prescribed in Rule 60(c)" (emphasis added). Here there was most definitely "a contest" with regard to all of these purchased claims. Thus, it would appear that any effort to have a court reconsider these claims pursuant to section 502(j) is untimely—as it has been well beyond a year since they were allowed.

Hypothetical #7: If a party believes "insider trading" occurred there are governmental agencies that investigate and police that. Here, the purchased claims (which were not based on bonds or certificated equity interests) would not be securities so as to fall under the SEC's purview. Moreover, there was evidence that HMIT or Dondero-Related entities requested that the Texas State Securities Board investigate the claims trading and the board did not find a basis to pursue anyone for wrongdoing.

Hypothetical #8: The United States Trustee can investigate wrongdoing by a debtor or unsecured creditors committee. While the United States Trustee would naturally have concerns about members of an unsecured creditors committee (or an officer of a debtor-in-possession) adhering to fiduciary duties and not putting their > own interests above those of the estate, here, there are a couple of points that seem noteworthy. One, the claims trading activity was post-confirmation so—while certain of the claim-sellers may have still been on the unsecured creditors committee, as the effective date of the plan had not yet occurred—the circumstances are very different than if this had all happened during the early, contentious stages of the case. It seems inconceivable that there was somehow a disparity of information that might be troubling—the Plan had been confirmed and it was available for the world to see. The whole notion of "insider information" (just after confirmation here) feels a bit off-point. Bankruptcy practitioners and judges sometimes call bankruptcy a fishbowl or use the "open kimono" metaphor for good reason. It is generally a very open process. And information-sharing on the part of a debtor-in-possession or unsecured creditors committee is intended to be robust. See, e.g., Bankruptcy Code sections 521 and 1102(b)(3). In a way, HMIT here seems to be complaining about this very situation that the Code and Rules have designed.

In summary, claims trading is a highly unregulated activity in the bankruptcy world. HMIT is attempting to pursue causes of action here that, to this court's knowledge, have never been allowed in a context like this.

B. Back to Standing—Would HMIT Have Standing to Bring the Proposed Claims?

The Proposed Defendants argue that HMIT lacks standing to bring the Proposed Claims, either: (a) derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust, or (b) directly on behalf of itself. Thus, they argue that this is one reason that the Motion for Leave should be denied.

In making their specific standing arguments, the parties analyze things slightly differently:

The Claims Purchasers focus primarily on HMIT's lack of constitutional standing but also argue that HMIT does not have prudential standing under Delaware trust law to bring the Proposed Claims either individually or derivatively. Why do they mention Delaware trust law? Because the Claimant Trust is a Delaware statutory trust governed by the Delaware Statutory Trust Act, 12 Del. C. §§ 3801–29.[150]

The Highland Parties' standing arguments focus almost entirely on HMIT's lack of prudential standing under Delaware trust law to bring the Proposed Claims.

HMIT argues that the Proposed Defendants "play fast and loose with standing arguments" and that HMIT has constitutional standing as a "party aggrieved"[151] to bring the Proposed Claims on behalf of itself. HMIT also argues that it has standing under Delaware trust law to bring a [150] See Proposed Complaint, ¶ 26.

[151] Proposed Complaint, ¶7.

derivative action on behalf of the Claimant Trust, and that it not only has standing to bring the Proposed Claims derivatively on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor under the Plan, but it is the best party to do so.

1. The Different Types of Standing: Constitutional Versus Prudential

The parties are addressing two concepts of standing that can sometimes be confused and misapplied by both attorneys and judges: constitutional Article III standing, which implicates federal court subject matter jurisdiction,[152] and the narrower standing concept of prudential standing, which does not implicate subject matter jurisdiction but nevertheless might prevent a party from having capacity to sue, pursuant to limitations set by courts, statutes or other law.

Article III constitutional standing works as follows: a plaintiff, as the party invoking federal jurisdiction, bears the burden of establishing three elements: (1) that he or she suffered an injury in fact that is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent—not conjectural or hypothetical, (2) that there is a causal connection between the injury and the conduct complained of, and (3) it must be likely, not speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.[153] "If the plaintiff does not claim to have suffered an injury that the defendant caused and the court can remedy, there is no case or controversy for the federal court to resolve."[154] These elements ensure that a plaintiff has "'such a personal stake in the outcome of the controversy' as to warrant his invocation of federal-court jurisdiction and to justify exercise of the court's remedial powers on his behalf."[155]

[152] Article III, Section 2 of the U.S. Constitution gives federal courts jurisdiction over enumerated cases and controversies.

Defenders of Wildlife*, 504 U.S. 555, 560-61 (1992), where the Supreme Court stated that "the irreducible constitutional minimum of standing contains [the] three elements"); see also Spokeo, 578 U.S. at 338; *Abraugh v. Apart from this minimal constitutional mandate, courts and statutes have set other limits on the class of persons who may seek judicial remedies—and this is the concept of prudential standing. In its recent opinion in Abraugh v. Altimus,[156] the Fifth Circuit set forth a detailed analysis of the two types of "standing," noting that the term "standing" is often "misused" in our legal system, which has led to confusion for both attorneys and judges.[157] The constitutional standing that is necessary for a court to exercise subject matter jurisdiction is broader than prudential standing and is only the first hurdle a party must clear before pursuing a claim in federal court.

The Fifth Circuit explained that in addition to Article III constitutional standing, "courts have occasionally articulated other 'standing' requirements that plaintiffs must satisfy under certain conditions, beyond those imposed by Article III,"[158] such as the "standing" requirement that might be imposed by a statute or by jurisprudence. The Abraugh case was a perfect example of the latter.

Abraugh involved the civil rights statutes that provide, among other things, that "a party must have standing under the state wrongful death or survival statutes to bring [a § 1983 cause of action]" and noted that these statutes impose additional "standing" requirements that are a matter of prudential standing, not constitutional standing.[159] In Abraugh, the Fifth Circuit reversed and remanded a district court's dismissal of a § 1983 civil rights cause of action—noting that the district court had stated that it was dismissing based on a "lack of subject matter jurisdiction" because the plaintiff in that action lacked standing.[160] The plaintiff was the mother of a prisoner who died by suicide while in custody who brought a § 1983 action against Louisiana correctional officers and officials. After finding that the plaintiff/mother lacked standing under Louisiana's wrongful death and survival statutes (because there had been a surviving child and wife of the prisoner who were the proper parties with capacity to sue), the district court held that it was dismissing for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The Fifth Circuit pointed out that the plaintiff/mother may have lacked standing under Louisiana's wrongful death and survival statutes to bring the claim under § 1983, but that type of standing was matter of prudential standing, and the plaintiff/mother actually did have Article III constitutional standing ("a constitutionally cognizable interest in the life of her son").[161] Thus, the district court's error was not in finding that the plaintiff/mother lacked prudential standing but in improperly conflating the two standing concepts when it held that it had lacked subject matter jurisdiction to consider any of the plaintiff's/mother's amended complaints.[162] The Fifth Circuit noted specifically that[163] > prudential standing does not present a jurisdictional question, but "a merits question: who, according to the governing substantive law, is entitled to enforce the right?" As the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure make clear, "an action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest." FED. R. CIV. P. 17(a)(1). And a violation of this rule is a failure of "prudential" standing. "Not one of our precedents holds that the inquiry is jurisdictional." It goes only to the validity of the cause of action. And "the absence of a valid . . . cause of action does not implicate subject-matter jurisdiction."

Somewhat relevant to this prudential standing discussion is the fact that, in this bankruptcy case, there have been dozens of appeals of bankruptcy court orders by Dondero and Dondero-related entities. In connection therewith, both the district court and the Fifth Circuit, in evaluating the appellate standing of the appellants, have taken pains to distinguish between the concepts of:

(a) traditional, constitutional standing, and (b) a type of prudential standing known as the "person aggrieved" test, which is applied in the Fifth Circuit in determining whether a party has standing to appeal a bankruptcy court order—which it describes as a narrower and "more exacting" standard than constitutional standing. As explained in a Fifth Circuit opinion addressing the standing of a Dondero-related entity called NexPoint to appeal bankruptcy court orders allowing professional fees, the "person aggrieved" standard that is typically applied to ascertain bankruptcy appellate standing originated in a statute in the Bankruptcy Act. The Fifth Circuit continued to apply it after Congress removed the provision when it enacted the Bankruptcy Code in 1978.[164] Because it is narrower and "more exacting" than the test for Article III constitutional standing, it involves application of prudential standing considerations.[165] The Fifth Circuit describes the "person aggrieved" test for bankruptcy appellant standing as requiring that an appellant show that it was "directly and adversely affected pecuniarily by the order of the bankruptcy court," requiring "a higher causal nexus between act and injury than traditional standing . . . that best deals with the unique posture of bankruptcy actions."[166] In affirming the district court's dismissal of NexPoint's appeal of the bankruptcy court's fee orders, due to NexPoint's lack of prudential standing under the "person aggrieved" test, the court rejected NexPoint's argument that it had standing to appeal

[166] See id. at *3 (cleaned up). The court quotes its 2018 opinion in Matter of Technicool Sys., Inc. (In re Technicool), 896 F.3d 382, 385 (5th Cir. 2018), which explains why the "person aggrieved" prudential standing standard is applied in bankruptcy actions: "Bankruptcy cases often involve numerous parties with conflicting and overlapping interests. Allowing each and every party to appeal each and every order would clog up the system and bog down the courts. Given the specter of such sclerotic litigation, standing to appeal a bankruptcy court order is, of necessity, quite limited." Id. (cleaned up).

because "it meets traditional Article III standing requirements [and that the more exacting] prudential standing considerations such as the 'person aggrieved' standard" did not survive the Supreme Court's 2014 Lexmark[167] opinion,[168] which addressed standing issues in the context of false advertising claims under the Lanham Act and reminded that courts may not "limit a cause of action that Congress has created merely because 'prudence' dictates."[169] The Fifth Circuit held that the Supreme Court's reminder in Lexmark did not nullify the "person aggrieved" test for prudential standing in bankruptcy appeals, citing its own decision in Superior MRI Services Inc. v. Alliance Healthcare Services, Inc.[170] (rendered a year after Lexmark was decided), in which it held that Lexmark applied only to the circumstances of that case, "rather than broadly modifying—or undermining—all prudential standing concerns, such as the one animating the 'person aggrieved' standard in bankruptcy appeals."[171]

Similarly, in yet another appeal in this bankruptcy case involving three Dondero-related entities as appellants (NexPoint, Dugaboy, and HCMFA)—this one an appeal of a bankruptcy court order authorizing the creation of an indemnity subtrust and entry into an indemnity trust agreement—the district court noted the parties' confusion about the standing issue, as exemplified in the parties' reference to constitutional standing when they were actually arguing that they had prudential standing under the "person aggrieved" test: "Although the parties frame this issue as one of constitutional standing . . . they cite case law and present arguments about the prudential standing requirement embodied in the 'person aggrieved' test."[172] The district court noted that it had an "independent obligation to consider constitutional standing before reaching its prudential aspects."[173] The district court dismissed the appeal as to Dugaboy and HCMFA for lack of standing but, upon concluding that NexPoint did have standing, dismissed the appeal as to it on the merits. The Fifth Circuit affirmed.[174] Interestingly, the court noted that, while the parties did not contest the district court's determination that NexPoint had standing to pursue the appeal, it "may consider prudential standing issues sua sponte."[175] In doing so, the Fifth Circuit recognized the distinction between constitutional standing and the prudential "person aggrieved" test applied to bankruptcy appeals, which "is, of necessity, quite limited" and "an even more exacting standard than traditional constitutional standing," as it requires an appellant to show that it is "directly, adversely, and financially impacted by a bankruptcy order."[176]

In summary, in analyzing whether HMIT would have standing to bring the Proposed Claims, this court must first determine whether HMIT would have constitutional standing under Article III (which is a subject matter jurisdiction hurdle) and, assuming it does, then additionally address whether HMIT would also have prudential standing (i.e., capacity to sue) pursuant to any applicable statutes (e.g., Delaware statutes), jurisprudence, or other substantive law that might limit who may sue. aggrieved" test[177]—which, as discussed above, is a matter of prudential standing—this is applied only in the context of bankruptcy appellate matters.[178] As noted in its most recent opinion discussing standing in an appeal from the Highland bankruptcy case, the Fifth Circuit reiterated that the "person aggrieved" test is a test for bankruptcy appellate standing, which is narrower than a party in interest's right to be heard in bankruptcy cases in general.[179] The court rejected an argument that Bankruptcy Code § 1109, which provides that "[a] party in interest . . . may raise and may appear and be heard on any issue in a case under this chapter" confers appellate standing, noting that "one's standing to appear and be heard before the bankruptcy court [is] a concept distinct from standing to appeal the merits of a decision" and that the "person aggrieved" test for bankruptcy appellate standing is narrower than the test for determining one's standing to appear and be heard in a bankruptcy proceeding.[180]

Thus, the court will now analyze whether HMIT would, at a minimum, have constitutional standing to bring the Proposed Claims.

2. HMIT Would Lack Article III Constitutional Standing to Bring the Proposed Claims.

As noted above, the Supreme Court and the Fifth Circuit have made clear that constitutional standing is necessary for a court to exercise subject matter jurisdiction. It is only the first hurdle a party must clear before pursuing a claim in federal court. HMIT, as plaintiff, would bear the [177] HMIT insists that it has constitutional standing to bring claims on its individual behalf "as an aggrieved party." See Reply, ¶ 7.

[178] HMIT's argument in this matter that it has constitutional standing because it is a "party aggrieved" incorrectly conflates the prudential bankruptcy appellate "person aggrieved" test with the broader test that is applied to constitutional standing. The court is not being critical of this mistake. As noted at supra note 149, the Fifth Circuit in Abraugh pointed out that courts and attorneys alike have created confusion by misusing the term "standing" when they equate a lack of "standing," in all instances, with a lack of subject matter jurisdiction, even when the party is found to lack only prudential standing. Thus, HMIT is not alone in its confusion over the two different concepts of standing.

burden of establishing: (1) that it suffered an injury in fact that is concrete, particularized, and actual or imminent—not conjectural or hypothetical, (2) that there is a causal connection between the injury and the conduct complained of, and (3) it must be likely, not speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.[181]

Concrete and Particularized; Actual or Imminent. As the Supreme Court made clear in the Lujan case, the injury in fact element requires a showing that the injury was "concrete and particularized" and "actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical."[182] The Supreme Court in the Spokeo case expounded on the "concrete and particularized" requirements of the "injury in fact" element. Particularization requires a showing that the injury "must affect the plaintiff in a personal and individual way," but while particularization is necessary, it alone is "not sufficient," because an injury in fact must also be "concrete."[183] And, concreteness is "quite different from particularization."[184] A "concrete" injury must be "real," and "not abstract," though it does not mean that the injury must be "tangible," as the injury can be intangible and nevertheless be concrete.[185] In addition to the concreteness and particularization requirements, an injury in fact must be "actual or imminent" such that "allegations of injury that is merely conjectural or hypothetical do not suffice to confer standing."[186] "Although imminence is concededly a somewhat elastic concept, it cannot be stretched beyond its purpose, which is to ensure that the alleged injury is not too speculative for Article III purposes—that the injury is certainly impending"; "allegations of possible future injury are not sufficient."[187]

Traceability - Causal Connection. As to the second element—that the injury was caused by the defendant—the Supreme Court in Lujan further described it as requiring a showing that "the injury has to be fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant."[188] The "fairly traceable" test requires an examination of "the causal connection between the assertedly unlawful conduct and the alleged injury."[189]

Redressability. The third element—redressability—requires the court to examine the connection "between the alleged injury and the judicial relief requested."[190] "Relief that does not remedy the injury suffered cannot bootstrap a plaintiff into federal court."[191] "[A] court must determine that there is an available remedy which will have a 'substantial probability' of redressing the plaintiff's injury."[192]

The Claims Purchasers argue that HMIT lacks constitutional standing to pursue the claims asserted in the Proposed Complaint because: (i) neither HMIT nor the Bankruptcy Estate was injured by the Claim Purchasers' acquisition of the claims; and (ii) the Proposed Complaint lacks a theory of cognizable damages to the Reorganized Debtor, the Claimant Trust, and/or the beneficiaries of the Claimant Trust.[193]

[193] As noted earlier, certain of the Proposed Defendants—the Highland Parties—do not focus on HMIT's lack of constitutional standing to pursue the Proposed Claims against them, but on its lack of prudential standing under

The court agrees with the Claims Purchasers' argument here. What is HMIT's concrete and particularized injury—that is "real" and is not abstract? That is not conjectural or hypothetical? That is actual or imminent?

Recall that, under the Plan, HMIT holds a Class 10 contingent interest in the Claimant Trust that only realizes value if all creditors are paid in full with interest. HMIT alleges the following injury: it has suffered a devaluation of its unvested Contingent Claimant Trust Interest by virtue of the alleged over-compensation of Seery as the Claimant Trustee—Seery's alleged over-compensation depletes the assets in the Claimant Trust available for distribution to creditors under the Plan, such that there is less likely a chance that HMIT ultimately receives any distributions on account of its Class 10 Contingent Claimant Trust Interest.[194] Yet, HMIT testified, through both witnesses Dondero and Patrick, that it had no personal knowledge of what Seery's actual compensation is under the CTA at the time HMIT filed its Motion for Leave. It was clear that HMIT's allegations regarding Seery's "excessive" compensation were based entirely on Dondero's pure speculation. In reality, Seery's base salary is exactly what the bankruptcy court approved during the bankruptcy case by a court order (after negotiations between Seery and the Committee). The CTA now further governs his compensation. The CTA, which was publicly filed in advance of the Plan confirmation hearing and approved by this court as part of the Plan applicable law. Because constitutional standing is a matter of subject matter jurisdiction, the court has an independent duty to determine whether HMIT would have constitutional standing to pursue the Proposed Claims in federal court. The issue cannot be forfeited or waived by a party. *See Abraugh v. [194] At the June 8 Hearing, HMIT's counsel was unable to identify any other injury HMIT has alleged to have suffered. HMIT's counsel acknowledged that claims trades, in and of themselves, would not "involve injury to the Reorganized Debtor and to the Claimant Trust" and that claims trades are "normally outside the purview of the bankruptcy court" but that "[h]ere, we have alleged . . . . injury [that] takes the form of unearned excessive fees that Mr. Seery has garnered as a result of his relationship and arrangements, as we have alleged, with the Claims Purchasers." June 8 Hearing Transcript, 67:16-68:8. HMIT can only point to Seery's excess compensation as injury.

(which has been affirmed by the Fifth Circuit), specifically provides that Seery's post-Effective Date compensation would include a "Base Salary" (again, same as during the bankruptcy case), a "success fee," and "severance."[195] The CTA discussed the role of the Committee and then the CTOB in setting the success fee and severance and the like. A fully executed copy of the CTA was admitted into evidence at the June 8 Hearing. HMIT is essentially arguing that its injury (i.e., diminished likelihood of realizing value on its Contingent Claimant Trust Interest) stems from a court-sanctioned and creditor-approved process for approving compensation to Seery. Moreover, HMIT has failed to plead facts sufficient to show that, even if Seery received excessive compensation and that compensation is ordered to be returned, HMIT's Contingent Claimant Trust Interest will ever vest. The district court and the Fifth Circuit in various appeals by Dugaboy, another Dondero-related entity that, similar to HMIT, was a holder of a limited partnership interest in Highland whose interests were terminated as of the Effective Date of the Plan in exchange for a Contingent Claimant Trust Interest, have repeatedly rejected Dugaboy's claims to have standing based on the speculative nature of its alleged injuries as a contingent beneficiary of the Claimant Trust under the Plan. For example, the Fifth Circuit affirmed the district court's dismissal of an appeal by Dugaboy of the bankruptcy court's order authorizing the creation of an indemnity subtrust, wherein Judge Fitzwater found that, in addition to lacking prudential standing under the > Compensation. As compensation for any services rendered by the Claimant Trustee in connection with this Agreement, the Claimant Trustee shall receive compensation of $150,000 per month (the "Base Salary"). Within the first forty-five days following the Confirmation Date, the Claimant Trustee, on the one hand, and the Committee, if prior to the Effective Date, or the Oversight Board, if on or after the Effective Date, on the other, will negotiate go-forward compensation for the Claimant Trustee which will include (a) the Base Salary, (b) a success fee, and (c) severance.

"person aggrieved" test to appeal the bankruptcy court's order, Dugaboy lacked constitutional standing "because they have not identified any injury fairly traceable to the Order: the injuries identified are speculative at best and nonexistent at worst."[196] HMIT's allegations of injury are, without a doubt, "merely conjectural or hypothetical" and are only speculative of possible future injury if its Contingent Claimant Trust Interest ever vests."[197] The court finds that HMIT would not meet the "concrete and particularized" or the "actual or imminent" requirements for an "injury in fact," and, thus, would lack constitutional standing to pursue the Proposed Claims.

With regard to the second requirement of constitutional standing—whether HMIT could show "traceability" with respect to the Claims Purchasers and/or Seery (i.e., a "causal connection between the assertedly unlawful conduct and the alleged injury"[198]), as noted above, there is only a speculative injury. Even if there is unlawful conduct asserted (i.e., sharing of MNPI to Claims Purchasers who then, as a quid pro quo, rubber stamped excessive compensation for Seery), there is nothing other than a hypothetical theory of an alleged injury (i.e., an allegedly less likelihood of a distribution on a Contingent Claimant Trust Interest).

With respect to the third requirement of constitutional standing—whether HMIT can show "redressability" (i.e., that it is likely, not speculative, that the injury can be redressed by a favorable decision), there are multiple problems here.[199] The major remedy sought here is the equitable disallowance of the allowed Purchased Claims (and disgorgement and/or constructive trust of amounts paid or owed to the Claim Purchasers on account of their claims). There is no such remedy available here. As noted earlier, there is a similar concept of equitable subordination of a claim to another claim, or of an interest to another interest, pursuant to Bankruptcy Code section 510(c). But under the literal terms of section 510(c), claims cannot be subordinated to interests. Moreover, the Fifth Circuit noted in the Mobile Steel case,[200] that equitable disallowance of a claim (as opposed to equitable subordination of a claims) is not an available remedy. Bankruptcy Code section 502(b)(1) and the Fifth Circuit's Lothian Oil case might permit "recharacterization" of a claim from debt to equity in certain circumstances—but not based on inequitable conduct but rather on the nature of a financial transaction. In any event, here, the claims have already been adjudicated and allowed (some after mediation, and all after Rule 9019 settlement orders). The only way to reconsider a claim in a bankruptcy case that has already been allowed is through Bankruptcy Code section 502(j) ("A claim that has been allowed or disallowed may be reconsidered for cause. . . according to the equities of the case."). As noted earlier, the problem here is that Bankruptcy Rule 9024 provides that a motion for "reconsideration of an order allowing or disallowing a claim against the estate entered without a contest is not subject to the one year limitation prescribed in Rule 60(c)" (emphasis added). As further noted earlier, here there was most definitely a "contest" with regard to all of these purchased claims. Thus, it would appear that any effort to have a court reconsider and potentially disallow these claims pursuant to section 502(j) is untimely—as it has been well beyond a year since they were allowed.

[199] See supra notes 182-184 and accompanying text. The court will note that, as discussed supra note 141 and pages 71-72, the remedy of equitable subordination (as to the Claims Purchasers) would not redress HMIT's alleged injury (because equitable subordination of claims to interests is not an available remedy in the Fifth Circuit and thus subordination of the Purchased Claims to other claims would not change HMIT's distributions from the Claimant Trust, if any), and because outright disallowance of all or part of the already allowed Purchased Claims is not an available remedy either, HMIT would not be able to meet the "redressability" requirement with respect to the Claims Purchasers.

3. HMIT Would Also Lack Prudential Standing to Bring the Proposed Claims.

Even if HMIT would have constitutional standing to bring the Proposed Claims in an adversary proceeding filed in the bankruptcy court, the Proposed Claims would still be barred if HMIT would lack prudential standing to bring them under applicable state or federal law. HMIT argues that it does have prudential standing under both federal bankruptcy law and Delaware law to pursue the Proposed Claims derivatively and also to bring the Proposed Claims in its individual capacity.

With regard to "federal bankruptcy law," HMIT argues that it has standing pursuant to: (a) Rule 23.1 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, pertaining to derivative actions, which "applies to this proceeding pursuant to" Rule 7023.1 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure, and (b) Louisiana World Exposition v. Federal Insurance Co. ("LWE"),[201] the Fifth Circuit's leading case addressing when a creditors committee may be granted standing to bring causes of action on behalf of a bankruptcy estate. But, federal bankruptcy law does not confer standing where the plaintiff otherwise lacks standing under applicable state law. In other words, whether HMIT would have prudential standing to sue under Delaware law is dispositive of the issue, regardless of the forum. Rule 23.1 "speaks only to the adequacy of the . . . pleadings," and "cannot be understood to 'abridge, enlarge, or modify any substantive right,'"[202] including a right (or lack thereof) to bring a derivative action under the substantive law of Delaware. Additionally, HMIT's reliance on LWE is misplaced: LWE permits creditors, in certain circumstances during a bankruptcy case, to "file suit on behalf of a debtor-in-possession or a trustee"[203] and does not apply to a party's right to sue, derivatively, on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor or any entity that is the assignee of the former bankruptcy estate's assets. Upon confirmation of the Plan, the bankruptcy estate of Highland ceased to exist;[204] Highland is no longer a debtor-in-possession but a reorganized debtor, and the Claimant Trust is a new entity created under the Plan and Claimant Trust Agreement. Even if LWE did apply in this post-confirmation context, it supports the application of Delaware law to the issue of prudential standing and does not supersede state-law requirements for standing. In LWE, before addressing the requirements a creditors' committee must meet to sue derivatively on behalf of a bankruptcy estate as a matter of federal bankruptcy law, the Fifth Circuit conducted a lengthy analysis to determine "as a threshold issue" whether the creditors' committee in that case could assert its claims under Louisiana law.[205] The court specifically addressed whether the creditors' committee could pursue a derivative action under Louisiana law and concluded that "there is no bar in Louisiana law to actions brought by or in the name of a corporation against the directors and officers of the corporation which benefit only the creditors of the corporation; indeed, Louisiana law specifically recognizes such actions."[206] So, even under LWE (which the court does not think applies in this post-confirmation context), if HMIT would be barred from bringing a derivative action on behalf the Reorganized Debtor or Claimant Trust under state law, the analysis stops there.[207] Thus, the court looks to Delaware law to determine if HMIT would have prudential standing to pursue the derivative claims on behalf the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust.

HMIT acknowledges that both the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust are organized under Delaware law, and thus the cause of action against Seery alleging breach of fiduciary duties to the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust are governed by Delaware law under the "Internal Affairs Doctrine."[208] In addition, because HMIT's breach of fiduciary duties claim is governed by Delaware law, its aiding and abetting theory of liability as to the Claims Purchasers is also governed by Delaware law.[209] For the reasons set forth below, the court finds that HMIT would lack prudential standing under Delaware law to bring the claims set forth in the Proposed Complaint, derivatively, on behalf of either the Claimant Trust or the Reorganized Debtor.

a) First, HMIT Would Lack Prudential Standing Under Delaware Law to Bring Derivative Actions on behalf of the Claimant Trust.

The Claimant Trust is a Delaware statutory trust governed by the Delaware Statutory Trust Act, 12 Del. C. §§ 3801–29,[210] and "to proceed derivatively against a Delaware statutory trust, a plaintiff has the burden of satisfying the continuous ownership requirement" such that "the plaintiff must be a beneficial owner" continuously from "the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains" through "the time of bringing the action."[211] This requirement is "mandatory and exclusive" and only "a beneficial owner" "has standing to bring a derivative claim on behalf of the Trust."[212] The Highland Parties argue that HMIT is not a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust and, therefore, would lack standing to bring derivative claims on behalf of the Claimant Trust. HMIT argues to the contrary: that it is currently, and was at all relevant times, a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust under Delaware trust law such that it would have standing to bring derivative claims on behalf of the Claimant Trust if it were allowed to proceed with the filing of the Proposed Complaint. The disagreement turns on the nature of HMIT's interest under the Plan and the Claimant Trust Agreement and whether HMIT, as a holder of such interest, would be considered a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust under Delaware trust law.

As noted, pursuant to the Plan, HMIT's former limited partnership interest in Highland was cancelled as of the Effective Date in exchange for its pro rata share of a "Contingent Claimant Trust Interest," as defined under the Plan.[213] HMIT argues that its Contingent Claimant Trust Interest makes it a contingent beneficiary of the Claimant Trust, which makes it a present "beneficial owner" under Delaware trust law.

The Highland Parties argue that HMIT is not a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust; rather, the "beneficial owners" of the Claimant Trust are the "Claimant Trust Beneficiaries,"[214] which are defined in the Plan and the CTA as "the Holders of Allowed General Unsecured Claims" (which are in Class 8 under the Plan) and "Holders of Allowed Subordinated Claims" (which are in Class 9 under the Plan); [215] HMIT, a holder of a Class 10 interest under the Plan, is neither.

HMIT, as the holder of a "Contingent Claimant Trust Interest," has only an unvested contingent interest in the Claimant Trust and, as such, is not a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust for standing purposes under Delaware trust law. HMIT argues that it "should be treated as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary due to [the Proposed Defendants'] wrongful conduct and considering the current value of the Claimant Trust Assets before and after the relief requested herein."[216] The court disagrees.

HMIT's status as a "beneficiary" of the Claimant Trust is defined by the CTA itself, pure and simple. The CTA specifically provides that "Contingent Trust Interests" "shall not have any rights under this Agreement" and will not "be deemed 'Beneficiaries' under this Agreement," "unless and until" they vest in accordance with the Plan and the CTA. It is undisputed that HMIT's Contingent Trust Interest has not vested under the terms of the Plan and the CTA, and the court does not have the power to equitably deem HMIT's Contingent Trust Interest to be vested based on HMIT's unsupported allegation of wrongdoing on the part of Seery, the Claimant Trustee. Thus, the court finds that HMIT is not a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust and, therefore, lacks prudential standing under Delaware law to bring derivative claims on behalf of the Claimant Trust.[217]

b) HMIT Would Likewise Lack Prudential Standing Under Delaware Law to Bring Derivative Actions on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor.

HMIT acknowledges that the Reorganized Debtor, Highland Capital Management, L.P., is a Delaware limited liability partnership governed by the Delaware Limited Partnership Act, 6 Del. C. § 17-101, et seq.[218] To bring "a derivative action" on behalf of a limited partnership, "the plaintiff must be a partner or an assignee of a partnership interest" continuously from "the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains" through "the time of bringing the action."[219]

HMIT is not a partner, general or limited, of the Reorganized Debtor limited partnership. HMIT was a limited partner in the original debtor (specifically, a holder of Class B/C Limited Partnership interests in Highland), but that limited partnership interest was extinguished on August 11, 2021 (the Effective Date of the Plan) per the terms of the Plan, and HMIT does not own any partnership interest in the newly created Reorganized Debtor limited partnership.[220] Because HMIT would not hold a partnership interest in the Reorganized Debtor at "the time of bringing the action," it "lacks derivative standing" to bring claims "on the partnership's behalf."[221] HMIT likewise cannot satisfy "the continuous ownership requirement"; when HMIT's limited partnership interest in the original Debtor was cancelled on the Plan's Effective Date, HMIT "los[t] standing to continue a derivative suit" on behalf of the Debtor.[222] Finally, to the extent HMIT seeks to bring a "double derivative" action on behalf of the Claimant Trust based on claims purportedly held by its wholly owned subsidiary, the Reorganized Debtor, HMIT lacks standing. A "double derivative" action is a suit "brought by a shareholder of a parent corporation to enforce a claim belonging to a subsidiary that is either wholly owned or majority controlled."[223] And, under Delaware law, "parent level standing is required to enforce a subsidiary's claim derivatively."[224] Because HMIT would lack derivative standing to bring claims on behalf of the parent Claimant Trust,[225] it also would lack standing to bring a double derivative action.

c) Finally, HMIT Would Also Lack Prudential Standing under Applicable Law to Bring the Proposed Claims As Direct Claims.

HMIT argues that it has "direct" standing to pursue the Proposed Claims on behalf of itself, individually.[226] But just because HMIT asserts that some or even all of the Proposed Claims are direct, not derivative claims, does not make it so: "a claim is not 'direct' simply because it is pleaded that way."[227] Rather, in determining whether claims are direct or derivative, a court must "look at the substance of the Petition, and the nature of the wrongs alleged therein, rather than the Plaintiffs' characterization."[228] And, under Delaware law, "whether a claim is solely derivative or may continue as a dual-natured claim 'must turn solely on the following questions: (1) who suffered the alleged harm (the corporation or the suing stockholders, individually); and (2) who would receive the benefit of any recovery or other remedy (the corporation or the stockholders, individually)?'"[229] "In addition, to prove that a claim is direct, a plaintiff 'must demonstrate that the duty breached was owed to the stockholder and that he or she can prevail without showing an injury to the corporation.'"[230] Similarly, in the bankruptcy context, whether a creditor can assert a claim directly or whether the claim belongs to the estate turns on the nature of the injury for which relief is sought: "[i]f the harm to the creditor comes about only because of harm to the debtor, then its injury is derivative, and the claim is property of the estate," such that "only the bankruptcy trustee has standing to pursue the claim for the estate . . . ."[231] "To pursue a claim on its own behalf, a creditor must show this direct injury is not dependent on injury to the estate."[232]

As a reminder, HMIT argues that the injury it has suffered is a devaluation of its interests in the Claimant Trust by virtue of alleged over-compensation of Seery as the Claimant Trustee. HMIT was unable, when pressed during closing arguments, to identify any other injury. It essentially admitted that the claims trades, in and of themselves, would not have harmed the Claimant Trust, the Reorganized Debtor, or individual stakeholders, including HMIT, since the Claims Purchasers acquired already allowed unsecured claims, such that the distributions on those claims pursuant to the Plan would be unchanged in the hands of new holders of the claims.

Thus, by its own concessions, any alleged harm to HMIT (through devaluation of assets in the Claimant Trust) "comes about only because of harm to the debtor," so the alleged "injury is derivative."[233] The court concludes that all of the claims set forth in the Proposed Complaint allege derivative claims only, and that none would be direct claims against the Proposed Defendants. Thus, HMIT would lack prudential standing to bring any of the Proposed Claims in the Proposed Complaint, so its Motion for Leave should be denied.

d) Some Final Points Regarding Standing.

In this standing discussion, one should not lose sight of the fact that there are both procedural safeguards in place, as well as certain independent individuals in place with fiduciary duties that might act in the event of any shenanigans regarding Claimant Trust activities. Under section 4.1 of the CTA (approved as part of the Plan process), the CTOB, which includes an independent disinterested member in addition to representatives of the Claims Purchasers,[234] oversees the Claimant Trustee's performance of his duties, approves his compensation, and may remove him for cause. Moreover, there is a separate "Litigation Trustee" in this case who was brought in, post-confirmation, as an independent fiduciary to pursue claims and causes of action. These independent persons are checks and balances in the post-confirmation wind down of Highland. This is what creditors voted on in connection with the Plan. Seery and the Claims Purchasers are not in sole control of anything. The CTA, as well as Delaware law, very clearly set forth who can bring an action in the event of some colorable claim. This is the reality of prudential standing. Just as in the Abraugh case, where Louisiana law dictated that a mother could not bring a wrongful death case when the deceased prisoner had a surviving wife and child, Delaware law and the CTA dictate here that a contingent beneficiary cannot bring the Proposed Claims here. This is separate and apart from whether the claims are colorable.

C. Are the Proposed Claims "Colorable"?

1. What is the Proper Standard of Review for a "Colorability" Determination?

Although the court has determined that HMIT would not have standing (constitutional or prudential) to bring the Proposed Claims, this court will nevertheless evaluate whether the claims—assuming HMIT somehow has standing—might be "colorable." This, in turn, requires the court to assess what the legal standard is to determine if a claim is "colorable." As a reminder, the Plan's Gatekeeper Provision and this court's prior Gatekeeper Orders entered in January and July 2020 each required that, before a party may commence or pursue claims relating to the bankruptcy case against certain protected parties, it must first obtain a finding from the bankruptcy court that its proposed claims are "colorable." The Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders did not specifically define "colorable" or what type of legal standard should apply.

HMIT argues that the standard for review to be applied by this court is the same as a simple "plausibility" standard used in connection with a Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss. In other words, the court should simply assess whether the allegations of the Proposed Complaint, taken as true and with all inferences drawn in favor of the movant, state a plausible claim for relief (i.e., colorable equals plausible), and that this standard does not allow for the weighing of evidence by the court.[235] The Proposed Defendants, however, argue that the test for colorability should be more akin to the test applied under the Barton doctrine,[236] under which a plaintiff must make a prima facie case that a proposed claim against a bankruptcy trustee is "not without foundation." In this regard, they argue that the court can and should consider evidence outside of the four corners of the complaint—especially since HMIT attached to its Motion for Leave, as "evidence" to support it, two declarations of Dondero (as part of a 350-page attachment) and only attempted to withdraw those declarations after the Highland Parties urged that they be permitted to cross-examine Dondero on them.

This court ultimately determined that the "colorability" standard was somewhat of a mixed question of fact and law and, therefore, the parties could put on evidence at the June 8 Hearing if they so-chose. The court would not require it. It was up to the parties. But, in any event, the Proposed Defendants should have an opportunity to cross-examine Dondero on the statements made in his declarations since the declarations had been filed on the docket and the court had reviewed them at this point. HMIT attempted to withdraw the declarations and any reference to them in the Motion for Leave, by filing redacted versions of the Motion for Leave,[237] less than 72 hours before the June 8 Hearing; however, the redacted versions did not redact any allegations in the Motion for Leave that were purportedly supported by the Dondero declarations. Also, HMIT called Dondero as a direct witness, in addition to calling Seery as an adverse witness at the June 8 Hearing, albeit subject to its running objection to the evidentiary format of the hearing.[238] HMIT also filed a witness and exhibit list attaching 80 exhibits and over 2850 pages of evidence and moved for the admission of those exhibits at the June 8 Hearing (again, subject to its running objection to the evidentiary format of the hearing).[239]

In determining what appropriate legal standard applies here in the "colorability" analysis, the context in which the Gatekeeper Provision of the Plan was approved seems very relevant. In determining that the Gatekeeper Provision was legal, necessary, and in the best interest of all of the parties, this court set forth in the Confirmation Order a lengthy discussion of the factual support for it, and made specific findings relating to Dondero's post-petition litigation and the need for inclusion of the Gatekeeper Provision in the Plan.[240] This court observed that "prior to the commencement of the Debtor's bankruptcy case, and while under the direction of Dondero, the Debtor had been involved in a myriad of litigation, some of which had gone on for years and, in some cases, over a decade" and that "[d]uring the last several months, Dondero and the Dondero Related Entities have harassed the Debtor, which has resulted in further substantial, costly, and time-consuming litigation for the Debtor."[241] This court further found that: (1) Dondero's post-petition litigation "was a result of Dondero failing to obtain creditor support for his plan proposal and consistent with his comments, as set forth in Seery's credible testimony, that if Dondero's plan proposal was not accepted, he would 'burn down the place,'"[242] (2) without the Gatekeeper Provision in place, "Dondero and his related entities will likely commence litigation against the Protected Parties after the Effective Date" and that "the threat of continued litigation by Dondero and his related entities after the Effective Date will impede efforts by the Claimant Trust to monetize assets for the benefit of creditors and result in lower distributions to creditors because of costs and distraction such litigation or the threats of such litigation would cause,"[243] and, (3) "unless the [court] approves the Gatekeeper Provision, the Claimant Trustee and the Claimant Trust Oversight Board will not be able to obtain D&O insurance,[244] the absence of which will present unacceptable risks to parties currently willing to serve in such roles." Thus, as set forth in the Confirmation Order, the Gatekeeper Provision (and the Gatekeeper Orders as well, which were approved based on the same concerns regarding the threat of continued litigation by Dondero and his related entities) required Dondero and related entities to make a threshold showing of colorability, noting that the:

> Gatekeeper Provision is also within the spirit of the Supreme Court's "Barton Doctrine." Barton v. Barbour, 104 U.S. 126 (1881). The Gatekeeper Provision is also consistent with the notion of a prefiling injunction to deter vexatious litigants, that has been approved by the Fifth Circuit in such cases as Baum v. Blue Moon Ventures, LLC, 513 F.3d 181, 189 (5th Cir. 2008), and In re Carroll, 850 F.3d 811 (5th Cir. 2017)."[245]

The Fifth Circuit, in approving the Gatekeeper Provision on appeal, noted that that the Plan injunction and Gatekeeper Provision "screen and prevent bad-faith litigation against Highland Capital, its successors, and other bankruptcy participants that could disrupt the Plan's effectiveness."[246]

Again, the court believes it is appropriate to consider the context in which—and the purpose for which—the Gatekeeper Orders and Gatekeeper Provision were entered in assessing how "colorability" should work here. It seems that applying HMIT's proposed Rule 12(b)(6) "plausibility" standard would impose no hurdle at all to litigants and would render the threshold for bringing claims under the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders entirely duplicative of the motion to dismiss standard that every litigant already faces.

The authorities cited by HMIT in support of its argument for applying a Rule 12(b)(6) standard are inapposite. HMIT has cited no authority that addresses the appropriate standard for assessing the "colorability" of claims in the context of a plan gatekeeper provision—specifically, one implemented in response to a demonstrated need to screen and prevent continued bad-faith, harassing litigation against a chapter 11 debtor that would impede the debtor's implementation of a plan, which is what we have here. HMIT relies on a bevy of cases that include benefits coverage disputes under ERISA, Medicare coverage disputes, and constitutional challenges[247]—none of which implicate the Barton doctrine and vexatious-litigant concerns that were referenced by the court in the Plan as justifications for the gatekeeping provisions at issue here.

In affirming the Plan's Gatekeeper Provision, the Fifth Circuit stated, "Courts have long recognized bankruptcy courts can perform a gatekeeping function" and noted, by way of example, that "[u]nder the 'Barton doctrine,' the bankruptcy court may require a party to 'obtain leave of the bankruptcy court before initiating an action in district court when the action is against the trustee or other bankruptcy-court-appointed officer, for acts done in the actor's official capacity."[248] As noted above, the Fifth Circuit found that the Gatekeeper Provision, which "requires that, before any lawsuit is filed, the plaintiff must seek the bankruptcy court's approval of the claim as 'colorable'"—i.e., to "screen and prevent bad-faith litigation,"—is "sound."[249]

On balance, the court views jurisprudence applying the Barton doctrine and vexatious litigant injunctions—while not specifically addressing the "colorability" standard under gatekeeping provisions in a plan[250]—as more informative on how to approach "colorability" than any of the other authorities presented by the parties. One example is In re VistaCare Group, LLC.[251]

In VistaCare, the Third Circuit noted that, under the Barton doctrine, "[a] party seeking leave of court to sue a trustee must make a prima facie case against the trustee, showing that its claim is not without foundation," and emphasized that the "not without foundation" standard, while similar to the standard courts apply in evaluating Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss, "involves a greater degree of flexibility" than a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss because "the bankruptcy court, which given its familiarity with the underlying facts and the parties, is uniquely situated to determine whether a claim against the trustee has merit," and "is also uniquely situated to determine the potential effect of a judgment against the trustee on the debtor's estate."[252] To satisfy the "prima facie case standard," "the movant must do more than meet the liberal notice-pleading requirements of Rule 8."[253] "[I]f the [bankruptcy] court relied on mere notice-pleading standards rather than evaluating the merits of the allegations, the leave requirement would become meaningless."[254] This court agrees with the notion, that "[t]o apply a less stringent standard would eviscerate the protections" of the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders.[255] The court notes, as well, that courts in the Barton doctrine context regularly hold evidentiary hearings on motions for leave to determine if the proposed complaint meets the necessary threshold for pursuing litigation. The Third Circuit in VistaCare noted that "[w]hether to hold a hearing [on a motion for leave to bring suit against a trustee] is within the sound discretion of the bankruptcy court,"[256] and that "the decision whether to grant leave may involve a 'balancing of the interests of all parties involved,'" which will ordinarily require an evidentiary hearing.[257] The Third Circuit applied "the deferential abuse of discretion standard" in considering whether the bankruptcy court's granting of leave should be affirmed on appeal.[258]

Hedback*, 718 F.3d 762 (8th Cir. 2013) (applying abuse-of-discretion standard to Barton doctrine).

The Fifth Circuit has affirmed a bankruptcy court's conducting of an evidentiary hearing, in the context of applying a Barton doctrine analysis as to a proposed lawsuit against a trustee, without any concern that the inquiry was somehow improper.[259]

Similarly, courts in the vexatious litigant context, where there was an injunction requiring a movant to seek leave to pursue claims, have required movants to "show that the claims sought to be asserted have sufficient merit," including that "the proposed filing is both procedural and legally sound," and "that the claims are not brought for any improper purpose, such as harassment."[260] "For a prefiling injunction to have the intended impact, it must not merely require a reviewing official to apply an already existing level of review," such as the "plausibility" standard for a Rule 12(b)(6) motion.[261] Rather, courts apply "an additional layer of review," and "may appropriately deny leave to file when even part of the pleading fails to satisfy the reviewer that it warrants a federal civil action" or that the "litigant's allegations are unlikely," especially "when prior cases have shown the litigant to be untrustworthy or not credible . . . ."[262]

In summary, the court rejects HMIT's positions: (a) that it need only show, at most, that the allegations in the Proposed Complaint are "plausible" under the Rule 12(b)(6) standard for motions to dismiss; and (b) that this court improperly conducted an evidentiary hearing on the Motion for Leave (i.e., that consideration of evidence in this context is impermissible). The court notes, again, that HMIT's argument that this court is not permitted to consider evidence in making its "colorability" determination is completely contradictory to HMIT's actions in filing the Motion for Leave, where it attached two Dondero declarations as part of 350 pages of "objective evidence" that "supported" its motion.

The court concludes that the appropriate standard to be applied in making its "colorability" determination in this bankruptcy case, in the exercise of its gatekeeping function pursuant to the two Gatekeeper Orders and the Gatekeeper Provision in this Plan, is a broader standard than the "plausibility" standard applied to Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss. It is, rather, a standard that involves an additional level of review—one that places on the proposed plaintiff a burden of making a prima facie case that its proposed claims are not without foundation, are not without merit, and are not being pursued for any improper purpose such as harassment. Additionally, this court may, and should, take into consideration its knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings and the parties and any additional evidence presented at the hearing on the Motion for Leave. For ease of reference, the court will refer to this standard of "colorability" as the "Gatekeeper Colorability Test." The court considers this test as a sort of hybrid of what the Barton doctrine contemplates and what courts have applied when considering motions to file suit when a vexatious litigant bar order is in place.

2. HMIT's Proposed Complaint Does Not Present "Colorable" Claims Under this Court's Gatekeeper Colorability Test or Even Under a Rule 12(b)(6) "Plausibility" Standard.

The court finds, in the exercise of its gatekeeping function under the Gatekeeper Orders and the Gatekeeping Provision in the Plan, that the Motion for Leave should be denied as the claims set forth in the Proposed Complaint are not "colorable" claims. The court makes this determination after considering evidence admitted at the June 8 Hearing, including the testimony of Dondero, Patrick, and Seery, and the numerous exhibits offered by HMIT and the Highland Parties. HMIT's Proposed Claims lack foundation, are without merit, and appear to be motivated by the improper purposes of vexatiousness and harassment. But, even under the less stringent

"plausibility" standard under Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss, where all allegations must be accepted as true, HMIT's "[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements," fail to "[]cross the line from conceivable to plausible."[263]

HMIT makes unsubstantiated and conclusory allegations in its Motion for Leave and Proposed Complaint that the Claims Purchasers purchased the large allowed unsecured claims only because Seery, while he was CEO of Highland prior to the Effective Date of the Plan, provided them with MNPI and assurances that the Purchased Claims were very valuable. This was allegedly in exchange for their agreement to approve, in their future capacities as members of the CTOB, excessive compensation for Seery in his capacity as the Claimant Trustee after the Effective Date of the Plan. This was an alleged quid pro quo that HMIT claims establishes Seery's breach of fiduciary duties and the Claims Purchasers' conspiracy to participate in that breach. As discussed below, these allegations are unsubstantiated and conclusory allegations, and they do not support the inferences that HMIT needs the court to make when it analyzes whether the Proposed Claims are "colorable"—or even merely plausible.

a) HMIT's Proposed Breach of Fiduciary Duties Claim Set Forth in Count I of the Proposed Complaint

Based on HMIT's Proposed Complaint and the evidence admitted at the June 8 Hearing, the court finds that HMIT has not pleaded facts that would support a "colorable" breach of fiduciary duties claim against Seery, under this court's Gatekeeper Colorability Test, nor a plausible claim pursuant to the Rule 12(b) standard. HMIT alleges that Seery breached his fiduciary duties (i) "[b]y disclosing material non-public information to Stonehill and Farallon" before their purchase of certain Highland claims, and (ii) by receiving "compensation paid to him under the terms of the [CTA] since the Effective Date of the Plan in August 2021."[264]

As earlier noted, both the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust are organized under Delaware law and, thus, its proposed Count I against Seery for breach of fiduciary duties to these entities is governed by Delaware law under the "Internal Affairs Doctrine."[265] Under Delaware law, "[t]o bring a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, a plaintiff must allege '(1) that a fiduciary duty existed and (2) that the defendant breached that duty.'"[266] HMIT fails to plausibly or sufficiently allege either element such that its breach of fiduciary duty claims against Seery could survive.

Under Delaware law, officers and directors generally owe fiduciary duties only to the entity and its stakeholders as a whole, not to individual shareholders.[267] Because Seery did not owe any "duty" to HMIT directly and individually, the Proposed Complaint fails to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duties to HMIT. HMIT's "legal conclusion[]" that Seery "owed fiduciary duties to HMIT, as equity, and to the Debtor's Estate"[268] "do[es] not suffice" to plausibly allege the existence of any actionable fiduciary relationship.[269] And as discussed earlier in the standing section, HMIT does not have standing to assert a breach of fiduciary claim derivatively on behalf of the Claimant Trust or Reorganized Debtor. But even if HMIT had sufficiently alleged the existence of a fiduciary duty by Seery to HMIT—or to the Reorganized Debtor or Claimant Trust that HMIT would have standing to assert—Seery's alleged communications with Farallon would not have breached those duties.

HMIT alleges that Seery ""disclose[d] material non-public information to Stonehill and Farallon," and they "acted on inside information and Seery's secret assurances of great profits."[270] But the Proposed Complaint does not make any factual allegations regarding HMIT's "conclusory allegations," and its "legal conclusions" are "purely speculative, devoid of factual support," and therefore "stop[] short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief"[271] (and certainly stop short of being "colorable"). HMIT never alleges when any of these purported communications occurred, what material non-public information Seery provided, and what "assurances of great profits" he made to Farallon or to Stonehill. At the June 8 Hearing, Dondero could only clarify that he believed the MGM Email to have been MNPI and that he believed that Seery must have communicated that MNPI to Farallon at some point between December 17, 2020 (the date the MGM Email was sent) and May 28, 2021 (the day that Dondero alleges to have had three telephone calls with representatives of Farallon, Messrs. Patel and Linn, regarding Farallon's purchase of the bankruptcy claims). Dondero alleges that, during these phone calls, Patel and Linn gave Dondero no reason for their purchase of the claims that "made [any] sense." Dondero and Patrick also both testified that neither of them had any personal knowledge: (a) of a quid pro quo arrangement between Seery and the Claims Purchasers, (b) of Seery having actually communicated any information from the MGM Email to Farallon, or (c) whether Seery's post-Effective Date compensation had or had not been negotiated in an arms' length transaction. Dondero only speculates regarding these things, because it "made no sense" to him that the Claims Purchasers would have acquired the bankruptcy claims without having received the MNPI. But HMIT admits in the Proposed Complaint that Farallon and Stonehill purchased the Highland claims at discounts of 43% to 65% to their allowed amounts. Thus, they would receive at least an 18% return based on publicly available estimates in Highland's court-approved Disclosure Statement.[272] The evidence established that, if the acquisition of the UBS claims is excluded—recall that the UBS claims were not purchased until August 2021, which was after the May 28, 2021 phones calls that Dondero made to Farallon personnel—the Claims Purchasers would have expected to net over $33 million in profits, or nearly a 30% return on their investment, had Highland met its projections (this is based on the aggregate purchase price of $113 million for the non-UBS claims purchased in the Spring 2021).

To be clear, the only purported MNPI identified in HMIT's Proposed Complaint was the MGM Email Dondero sent to Seery containing "information regarding Amazon and Apple's interest in acquiring MGM." But, the evidence showed that this information was widely reported in the financial press at the time. Thus, it could not have constituted MNPI as a matter of law.[273] Moreover, the evidence showed that Dondero did not communicate in the MGM Email the actual inside information that he claimed to have obtained as a board member of MGM–which was that Amazon had met MGM's "strike price" and that the MGM board was going into exclusive negotiations with Amazon to culminate the merger with them (and, thus, Apple was no longer considered a potential purchaser). Dondero admitted that he included Apple in the MGM Email for the purpose of making it look like there was a competitive process still ongoing. In other words, the MGM Email, at the very least, did not include MNPI and, at worst, was deceptive regarding the status of the negotiations between MGM and potential purchasers.

As to HMIT's allegations that Seery's post-Effective Date compensation is "excessive" and that the negotiations between Seery and the CTOB "were not arm's-length,"[274] the evidence at the June 8 Hearing reflected that the allegations are completely speculative, without any foundation whatsoever, and lack merit. And they are also simply not plausible. HMIT fails to allege facts in the Proposed Complaint that would support a reasonable inference that Seery breached his fiduciary duty to HMIT or the estate as a result of bad faith, self-interest, or other intentional misconduct rising to the level of a breach of the duty of loyalty.[275]

b) HMIT's Proposed Claims Set Forth in Counts II (Knowing Participation in Breach of Fiduciaries) and III (Conspiracy)

HMIT seeks to hold the Claims Purchasers secondarily liable for Seery's alleged breach of fiduciaries duties on an aiding and abetting theory in Count II of the Proposed Complaint[276] and, along with Seery, on a civil conspiracy theory of liability in Count III of the Proposed Complaint.[277] Because HMIT's breach of fiduciary duties claim is governed by Delaware law, its aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duties claim against the Claims Purchasers (Count II) is also governed by Delaware law.[278] HMIT's conspiracy cause of action against the Claims

Purchasers and Seery (Count III), on the other hand, does not involve a matter of "internal affairs" or of corporate governance, so it is governed by Texas law under the Plan.[279]

As an initial matter, because HMIT does not present either a "colorable"—or even plausible claim—that Seery breached his fiduciary duties, it cannot show that it has alleged a "colorable" or plausible claim for secondary liability for the same alleged wrongdoing.[280] In addition, HMIT's civil conspiracy claim against the Claims Purchasers and Seery is based entirely on Dondero's speculation and unsupported inferences and, thus, HMIT has not "colorably" alleged, or even plausibly alleged, its conspiracy claim. Under Texas law, "civil conspiracy is a theory of vicarious liability and not an independent tort."[281] "[T]he elements of civil conspiracy [are] "(1) two or more persons; (2) an object to be accomplished; (3) a meeting of minds on the object or course of action; (4) one or more unlawful, overt acts; and (5) damages as the proximate result."[282] While HMIT alleges that "Defendants conspired with each other to unlawfully breach fiduciary duties,"[283] it is simply a "legal conclusion" and not the kind of allegation that the court must assume to be true even for purposes of determining plausibility under a motion to dismiss.[284]

[283] Proposed Complaint ¶ 76.

HMIT repeats four times that Seery provided MNPI to Farallon and Stonehill as a "as a quid pro quo" for "additional compensation,"[285] each time based upon conclusory allegations based "upon information and belief" and, frankly, pure speculation from Dondero that his imagined "scheme," "covert quid pro quo," and secret "conspiracy" between Seery, on the one hand, and Farallon and Stonehill, on the other,[286] must have occurred because "[i]t made no sense for the [Claims] Purchasers to invest millions of dollars for assets that – per the publicly available information – did not offer a sufficient potential profit to justify the publicly disclosed risk" (i.e., "[t]he counter-intuitive nature of the purchases at issue compels the conclusion that the [Claims] Purchasers acted on inside information and Seery's assurance of great profits.")[287] Importantly, HMIT admits that the Claims Purchasers would have turned a profit based on the information available to them at the time of their acquisitions of the Purchased Claims.[288] HMIT's allegations about the level of potential profits were contradicted by their own allegations and other evidence admitted at the June 8 Hearing. But Dondero's speculation about what level of projected return would be sufficient to justify the acquisition of the claims by the Claims Purchasers, or any other third-party investor, does not give rise to a plausible inference that they acted improperly.[289] Thus, HMIT cannot meet [285] Proposed Complaint ¶ 77; see also id. ¶¶ 4, 47, 74.

[286] See id. ¶ 3 ("Thus, acting within a cloak of secrecy, Seery provided close business acquaintances, the other Defendants with material non-public information concerning the value of assets which they then used to purchase the largest approved unsecured claims.").

[287] Id.

[288] See, e.g., id. ¶ 3 (alleging that acquiring the claims "did not offer a sufficient potential profit to justify the publicly disclosed risk")(emphasis added); ¶ 43 ("Furthermore, although the publicly available projections suggested only a small margin of error on any profit potential for its significant investment . . . ."); ¶ 49 ("Yet, in this case, it would have been impossible for Stonehill and Farallon (in the absence of inside information) to forecast any significant profit at the time of their multi-million-dollar investments given the publicly available, negative financial information.") (third emphasis added).

[289] In fact, the court did not allow Mr. Dondero to testify regarding what kind of information a hypothetical investor in bankruptcy claims would require or what level of potential profits would justify the purchase of bankruptcy claims by investors in the bankruptcy claims trading market because he was testifying as a fact witness, not an expert. Thus, the court only allowed Dondero to testify as to what data he (or entities he controls or controlled) would rely on, what his risk tolerance would have been, and what level of potential profits he would have required to purchase an allowed unsecured bankruptcy claim in a post-confirmation situation. its burden, under the Gatekeeper Colorability Test, of making a prima facie showing that its allegations do not lack foundation or merit. Nor can it meet a plausibility standard.

In addition, contrary to the Proposed Complaint's statement that it would have been "impossible for Stonehill and Farallon (in the absence of insider information) to forecast any significant profit at the time of their multi-million-dollar investments," the evidence showed there were already reports in the financial press that MGM was engaging with Amazon, Apple, and others in selling its media portfolio, and thus the prospect of an MGM transaction increasing the value of, and return on, the Purchased Claims, "at the time of their multi-million-dollar investments" was publicly available information.[290] HMIT's suggestion that the Claims Purchasers were in possession of inside information not publicly available when they acquired the Purchased Claims is simply not plausible. Nor is HMIT's allegation that "[u]pon information and belief" Farallon "conducted no due diligence but relied on Seery's profit guarantees" plausible. The allegations regarding Farallon not conducting any due diligence are based, again, entirely on Dondero's speculation and inferences he made from what Patel and Linn (of Farallon) allegedly told him on May 28, 2021; Dondero did not testify that either Patel or Linn ever told him specifically that they had conducted no due diligence. HMIT's allegations in the Proposed Complaint that Farallon "conducted no due diligence," are based on Dondero's speculation, unsubstantiated, and contradicted by the testimony of Seery, who testified that emails to him from Linn in June 2020 and later in January 2021 indicated to him that Farallon, at least, had been conducting some level of due diligence in that they had been following and paying attention to the [290] The court notes, as well, that the Claim Purchasers acquired the UBS claims in August 2021—approximately two and a half months after the announcement of the MGM-Amazon transaction (which was on May 26, 2021)—a fact that HMIT makes no attempt to harmonize with its conspiracy theory that the Claims Purchasers profited from the misuse of MNPI allegedly given to them by Seery.

Highland case.[291] In addition, there are no allegations in the Proposed Complaint regarding whether Stonehill conducted due diligence or not, and Patrick testified that neither he nor HMIT had any personal knowledge of how much due diligence Farallon or Stonehill did prior to acquiring the Purchased Claims.[292] The court finds and concludes that HMIT's allegations of aiding and abetting and conspiracy in Counts II and III of the Proposed Complaint are based on unsubstantiated inferences and speculation, lack internal consistency, and lack consistency with verifiable public facts. Accordingly, HMIT has failed to show that these claims have a foundation and merit and has also failed to show that they are plausible.

c) HMIT's Proposed Claims Set Forth in Counts IV (Equitable Disallowance), V (Unjust Enrichment and Constructive Trust), and VI (Declaratory Relief) of the Proposed Complaint

i. Count IV (Equitable Disallowance).

In Count IV of its Proposed Complaint, HMIT seeks "equitable disallowance" of the claims acquired by Farallon's and Stonehill's special purpose entities Muck and Jessup, "to the extent over and above their initial investment," and, in the alternative, equitable subordination of their claims to all claims and interests, including HMIT's unvested Class 10 Contingent Claimant Trust Interest, "given [their] willful, inequitable, bad faith conduct" of allegedly "purchasing the Claims based on material non-public information" and being "unfairly advantaged" in "earning significant profits on their purchases."[293] As noted above, these remedies are not available to HMIT.[294]

First, HMIT's request to equitably subordinate the Purchased Claims to all claims and interests is not permitted because Bankruptcy Code § 510(c), by its terms, permits equitable [291] See June 8 Hearing Transcript, 239:6-21.

[292] See id., 310:19-312:2.
[293] Proposed Complaint ¶¶ 83-87.
[294] See infra pages 74-75.

subordination of a claim to other claims or an interest to other interests but does not permit equitable subordination of a claim to interests.

Second, "equitable" disallowance of claims is not an available remedy in the Fifth Circuit pursuant to the Mobile Steel case.[295]

Third, reconsideration of an already-allowed claim in a bankruptcy case can only be accomplished through Bankruptcy Code § 502(j), which, pursuant to Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9024, allows reconsideration of allowance of a claim that was allowed following a contest (which is certainly the case with respect to the Purchased Claims) based on the "equities of the case." But this is only if the request for reconsideration is made within the one-year limitation prescribed in Rule 60(c) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. HMIT's request for disallowance of Muck and Jessup's Purchased Claims (if it could somehow be construed as a request for reconsideration of their claims), is clearly untimely, as it is being made well beyond a year since their allowance by this court following contests and approval of Rule 9019 settlements. Thus, the court finds that HMIT has not alleged a colorable or even plausible claim in Count IV of the Proposed Complaint and, therefore, the Motion for Leave should be denied.

ii. Count V (Unjust Enrichment and Constructive Trust)

In Count V of the Proposed Complaint, HMIT alleges that, "by acquiring the Claims using [MNPI], Stonehill and Farallon were unjustly enriched and gained an undue advantage over other creditors and former equity" and that "[a]llowing [the Claims Purchasers] to retain their ill-gotten benefits would be unconscionable;" thus, HMIT alleges, the Claims Purchasers "should be forced to disgorge all distributions over and above their original investment in the Claims as restitution for their unjust enrichment" and "a constructive trust should be imposed on such proceeds . . . ."[296]

[295] In re Mobile Steel Co., Inc., 563 F.2d 692 (5th Cir. 1977).

HMIT alleges further that "Seery was also unjustly enriched by his participation in this scheme and he should be required to disgorge or restitute all compensation he has received from the outset of his collusive activities" and "[a]lternatively he should be required to disgorge and restitute all compensation received since the Effective Date" over which a constructive trust should be imposed.[297] HMIT has not alleged a colorable or even a plausible claim for unjust enrichment or constructive trust in Count V.

Under Texas law,[298] "[u]njust enrichment is not an independent cause of action but rather characterizes the result of a failure to make restitution of benefits either wrongfully or passively received under circumstances which give rise to an implied or quasi-contractual obligation to repay."[299] Thus, "when a valid, express contract covers the subject matter of the parties' dispute, there can be no recovery under a quasi-contract theory."[300] Here, as noted above, HMIT's only alleged injury is a diminution of the value of its unvested Contingent Claimant Trust Interest by virtue of Seery's allegedly having wrongfully obtained excessive compensation, with the help of the Claims Purchasers. Yet Seery's compensation is governed by express agreements (i.e., the Plan and the CTA). Thus, HMIT's claim based on unjust enrichment is not an available theory of recovery.

iii. Count VI (Declaratory Relief)

HMIT seeks declaratory relief in Count VI of the Proposed Complaint, essentially, that Dondero's conspiracy theory is correct and that HMIT's would succeed on the merits with respect

[297] Id. ¶ 94.

[298] Under the Plan, Texas law governs HMIT's "claim" for unjust enrichment because it is not a "corporate governance matter." (Plan Art. XII.M.) It also governs HMIT's "claim" for constructive trust, which "is merely a remedy used to grant relief on the underlying cause of action." Sherer v. Sherer, 393 S.W.3d 480, 491 (Tex. App. 2013).

[299] Taylor v. Trevino, 569 F. Supp. 3d 414, 435 (N.D. Tex. 2021) (cleaned up); see also Yowell v. Granite Operating Co., 630 S.W.3d 566, 578 (Tex. App. 2021) (same).

[300] Taylor, 569 F. Supp. 3d at 435 (quoting Fortune Prod. Co. v. Conoco, Inc., 52 S.W.3d 671, 684 (Tex. 2000)).

to the Proposed Claims if it were permitted leave to bring them in an adversary proceeding.[301] But, a request for declaratory relief is not "an independent cause of action"[302] and "in the absence of any underlying viable claims such relief is unavailable."[303] This court has already found and concluded that HMIT would not have constitutional or prudential standing to bring the underlying causes of action in the Proposed Complaint. This court has also found and concluded that all of the Proposed Claims are without foundation or merit and are not even plausible and are all; being brought for the improper purpose of continuing Dondero's vexatious, harassing, bad-faith litigation. Thus, HMIT would not be entitled to pursue declaratory judgement relief as requested in Count VI of the Proposed Complaint.

d) HMIT Has No Basis to Seek Punitive Damages

HMIT separately alleges that the Claims Purchasers' and Seery's "misconduct was intentional, knowing, willful, in bad faith, fraudulent, and in total disregard of the rights of others," thus entitling HMIT to an award of punitive damages under applicable law. But, HMIT abandoned its proposed fraud claim that was in its Original Proposed Complaint, so its sole claim for primary liability is Seery's alleged breach of his fiduciary duties. And under Delaware law, the "court cannot award punitive damages in [a] fiduciary duty action."[304]

3. HMIT Does Not Present "Colorable" Claims Under this Court's Gatekeeper Colorability Test Because It Seeks to Bring the Proposed Complaint for Improper Purposes of Harassment and Bad-Faith, Vexatiousness.

Under this court's Gatekeeper Colorability Test, in addition to showing that its allegations and claims are not without foundation or merit, HMIT must also show that the Proposed Claims are not being brought for any improper purpose. Taking into consideration the court's knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings and the parties and the evidence presented at the hearing on the Motion for Leave, the court finds that HMIT is acting at the behest of, and under the control or influence of, Dondero in continuing to pursue harassing, bad faith, vexatious litigation to achieve his desired result in these bankruptcy proceedings. So, in addition to failing to show that its Proposed Claims have foundation and merit, HMIT cannot show that it is pursuing the Proposed Claims for a proper purpose and, thus, cannot meet the requirements under the Gatekeeper Colorability Test; HMIT's Motion for Leave should be denied.

IV. CONCLUSION

The court concludes, having taken into consideration both its knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings and the parties and the evidence presented at the hearing on the Motion for Leave, that HMIT's Motion for Leave should be denied for three independent reasons: (1) HMIT would lack constitutional standing to bring the Proposed Claims (and, thus, the federal courts would lack subject matter jurisdiction over the Proposed Claims); (2) even if HMIT would have constitutional standing to pursue the Proposed Claims, it would lack prudential standing to bring the Proposed Claims; and (3) even if HMIT would have both constitutional standing and prudential standing to bring the Proposed Claims, it has not met its burden under the Gatekeeper Colorability Test of showing that its Proposed Claims are "colorable" claims—that the Proposed Claims are not without foundation, not without merit, and not being pursued for an improper purpose. Moreover, even if this court's Gatekeeper Colorability Test should be replaced with a Rule 12(b)(6) "plausibility" standard, the Proposed Claims are not plausible.

Accordingly,

IT IS ORDERED that HMIT's Motion for Leave be, and hereby is DENIED.

Statutes and Rule

Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105(a) and Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 9011, Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP," or, as applicable, the "Debtor"), the reorganized debtor in the above-referenced action, the Highland Claimant Trust (the "Trust"; together with HCMLP, "Highland"), and James P. Seery, Jr., HCMLP's Chief Executive Officer and the Claimant Trustee of the Trust ("Seery"), by and through their undersigned counsel, file this motion (the "Motion") seeking an order requiring Scott Byron Ellington ("Ellington") and his counsel, The Pettit Law Firm ("Pettit") and Lynn Pinker Hurst & Schwegmann, LLP, to show cause why they should not be held in civil contempt for violating the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders.[2] In support of their Motion, Highland and Seery state as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

1. Ellington and his counsel point blank admit—in writing—that they are using a Texas state court "stalking" case against Daugherty to pursue claims against Highland and Seery.

2. Ellington and his counsel allege, among other things, that (i) "with the assistance of at least one other individual" (i.e., Seery), Daugherty stalked Ellington and others, and (ii) Daugherty and Seery engaged in a quid pro quo pursuant to which "Daugherty's settlement in the bankruptcy became materially better . . . only after Daugherty had provided Seery and Clubok with thousands upon thousands of pages of his investigatory work regarding Ellington."

3. Relying on these meritless allegations, Ellington seeks discovery in connection with the "settlement of Mr. Daugherty's proof of claim in the Highland bankruptcy" and "negotiations between Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery, as a representative of the Highland Estate" for the purpose of manufacturing claims against Highland and Seery:

[2] Capitalized terms not defined in this Preliminary Statement have the meanings ascribed to them below.

> The production provided by Mr. Daugherty, Mr. Seery, and others in this matter suggests the factual conclusion that the Highland Estate provided Mr. Daugherty with additional settlement consideration in exchange for information on Mr. Ellington.
>
> We believe that Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery's communications regarding settlement of Mr. Daugherty's proof of claim in the Highland bankruptcy are relevant to the factual issues that will be tried in this matter. To the extent that the redacted communications relate in any way to the negotiations between Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery, as a representative of the Highland Estate, please produce those communications.

Ellington's pursuit of claims against Highland and Seery is a clear violation of the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders.

4. The Gatekeeper Provision in the Court-approved Plan and this Court's Confirmation Order prohibit any "Enjoined Parties"—including Ellington and his counsel—from "pursu[ing] a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Protected Party"—including Highland and Seery—"that arose or arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case" without first obtaining leave from this Court. This Court's January and July 2020 Gatekeeper Orders likewise prohibit Ellington and his counsel from pursuing claims against any Independent Director or Seery without first obtaining leave from this Court.

5. In January 2022, Ellington and his counsel commenced the state court Stalking Action alleging that Daugherty followed, harassed, and photographed Ellington, his girlfriend, and his family members, and asserting state-law claims for stalking and invasion of privacy. Ellington's lawsuit does not refer to Seery or any settlement negotiations. Daugherty sought to remove the Stalking Action to this Court, arguing that this Court had jurisdiction because, among other things, the case related to Daugherty's settlement of his proof of claim with the Debtor (the "Daugherty Settlement"), to which Ellington had objected. But Ellington falsely represented to this Court that "[t]he State Court Action does not implicate the Daugherty Settlement; even if it did, the Daugherty Settlement is resolved and its relevance is moot." This Court relied on Ellington's representations and remanded the Stalking Action to state court.[3]

6. Having successfully evaded this Court's jurisdiction, Ellington and his counsel are now using the Stalking Action as a vehicle to pursue claims against Highland and Seery, contending—among other things, and notwithstanding their prior representations to this Court—that the negotiation of the Daugherty Settlement was an integral part of a "stalking" conspiracy. In response to Ellington's broad third-party subpoenas in the Stalking Action, Seery has produced tens of thousands of pages of documents, including text messages between Seery and Daugherty. Because certain text messages strings include unresponsive communications, Seery produced approximately 38 pages of documents with redactions. While pressing for the production of those unresponsive communications and for the deposition of Judge Russell Nelms (a former independent director of the Debtor), Ellington and his counsel revealed that they are pursuing claims against Highland and Seery based on Seery's negotiation of the Daugherty Settlement.

7. This timing is no accident. Ellington and his counsel are coordinating their efforts with James Dondero ("Dondero") and his related entities, which have used the Stalking Action to advance Dondero's interests in the bankruptcy case. For example, Dugaboy (Dondero's supposed family "trust") filed a motion to compel forensic imaging of Seery's iPhone based on text messages and related correspondence exchanged in the Stalking Action.[4] Now, as this Court is aware, the parties in this post-confirmation case are scheduled to hold a mediation regarding a global

[3] Based on Ellington's representations that the Stalking Action was not related to Highland or its Protected Parties, Highland did not take a position regarding removal of the Stalking Action.

[4] See The Dugaboy Investment Trust's Motion to Preserve Evidence and Compel Forensic Imagining of James P. Seery, Jr.'s iPhone (the "Imaging Motion"; Dkt. No. 3802). The Imaging Motion is based entirely on discovery-related communications exchanged among counsel in the Stalking Action—which never included counsel for Dondero or Dugaboy.

settlement in October. By pursuing yet another post-confirmation dispute, Ellington and his counsel are desperately trying to create leverage for Dondero and his affiliates against Highland and Seery in the mediation.

8. If Ellington and his counsel can use the Stalking Action to pursue claims against Highland and Seery relating to the Debtor's bankruptcy, then the Gatekeeper Provision is a dead letter and Enjoined Parties will pursue harassing and frivolous claims against Highland and Seery in state court. Ellington and his counsel clearly violated the Gatekeeper Provision and must face consequences to ensure future compliance by all Enjoined Parties. Accordingly, Highland and Seery respectfully request that this Court order Ellington and his counsel to show cause why they should not be held in civil contempt for violating this Court's Orders.

RELEVANT BACKGROUND

A. This Court Adopted The Gatekeeper Orders And Provision To Protect Against Baseless, Distracting Litigation And The Threat Of Such Litigation.

9. On January 16, 2020, this Court entered a gatekeeper order ("January 2020 Order"; Dkt. No. 339) protecting the Debtor's Independent Directors:

> No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director, any Independent Director's agents, or any Independent Director's advisors relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director of Strand without the Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Independent Director, any Independent Director's agents, or any Independent Director's advisors and (ii) specifically authorizing such entity to bring such claim. The Court will have sole jurisdiction to adjudicate any such claim for which approval of the Court to commence or pursue has been granted.

(Id. ¶ 10 (emphasis added).)

10. On July 16, 2020, this Court entered a substantially similar gatekeeper order ("July 2020 Order"; Dkt. No. 854; together with the January 2020 Order, the "Gatekeeper Orders"), protecting "Mr. Seery" from pursuit of claims "relating in any way to his role as the chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer of the Debtor." (Id. ¶ 5.)

11. On February 22, 2021, this Court entered an order ("Confirmation Order"; Dkt. No. 1943) confirming Highland's Plan, which contains a similar "gatekeeping" provision ("Gatekeeper Provision") protecting "any Protected Party" from pursuit of claims by any "Enjoined Party" "that arose or arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case." (Id. at 77; Plan at 50–51.)[5] "[T]he Gatekeeper Provision in the Plan provides protection to a broader number of persons than the persons protected under the January 2020 Order (addressing the Independent Directors and their agents and advisors) and the July 2020 Order (addressing Seery in his role as CEO and CRO of the Debtor)." (Aug. 25, 2023 Order at 32 ("August 2023 Order"; Dkt. No. 3903).) Under the Plan, Ellington and his counsel are "Enjoined Parties" and Seery and Highland are "Protected Parties."[6]

12. "The Gatekeeper Provision was not included in the Plan sans raison." (August 2023 Order at 4.) The Gatekeeper Provision, among other things, "prevent[s] baseless litigation designed merely to harass the post-confirmation entities charged with monetizing the Debtor's assets for the benefit of its economic constituents," mitigates the "costs and distraction such litigation or the threats of such litigation would cause," and "avoid[s] abuse of the Court system and preempt the use of judicial time that properly could be used to consider the meritorious claims of other litigants." (Confirmation Order ¶¶ 78–79.)

[5] References to the "Plan" are to the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) (Dkt. No. 1808).

[6] Ellington is an "Enjoined Party" because he (i) held "Claims against or Equity Interests in the Debtor"; (ii) "has appeared and/or filed any motion, objection, or other pleading in this Chapter 11 Case"; and (iii) is a "Related Entity," because he was Debtor's former general counsel was therefore "an insider of the Debtor on or before the Petition Date." (Plan at 8, 14.) Ellington's counsel are "Enjoined Parties" because they are "Related Persons" to Ellington. (Id.) HCMLP, the Trust, and Seery, are expressly listed as "Protected Parties." (Id. at 13.)

13. The Gatekeeper Provision is working as this Court intended. Most recently, in this Court's August 25 Order, the Gatekeeper Provision prevented Hunter Mountain Investment Trust ("HMIT") from pursuing baseless, speculative claims against Seery and certain purchasers of claims in Debtor's bankruptcy. (August 2023 Order at 91, 94, 104.)

B. Ellington Unsuccessfully Objected To The Daugherty Settlement.

14. On December 23, 2020, Patrick Daugherty ("Daugherty") filed an amended proof of claim in Debtor's Chapter 11 case for $40,710,819.42, relating to alleged breaches of employment-related agreements and for defamation arising from a 2017 press release posted by the Debtor. (Confirmation Order ¶ 9.) On February 2, 2021, the Debtor and Daugherty informed this Court that they had reached an agreement in principle to settle Daugherty's claim under which Daugherty would receive $750,000 in cash, an $8.25 million general unsecured claim, and a $2.75 million subordinated claim. (Id.)

15. On December 8, 2021, the Debtor sought this Court's approval of the finalized settlement of Daugherty's proof of claim. (Dkt. No. 3088.) The final terms of the Daugherty Settlement were the same as the terms announced in February 2021 with three differences: (i) Daugherty would receive a $3.75 million (instead of a $2.75 million) subordinated claim; (ii) the Debtor would transfer to Daugherty interests in an employee deferred-compensation vehicle; and (iii) the Debtor would make reasonable efforts to petition the Oversight Board to grant Daugherty observer access. (Id. ¶ 40; Dkt. No. 3257 ¶¶ 2–3.)[7]

16. On February 15, 2022, Ellington objected to the Daugherty Settlement. (Dkt. No. 3242.) Ellington did "not object to any of the economic terms of the Settlement Agreement."

[7] Highland agreed to these modifications after discovering the pre- and post-petition Sentinel frauds directed by Dondero and Ellington after the confirmation hearing.

(Id. ¶ 5 (emphasis added).) He objected only to "two newly added" non-economic terms, which he claimed would "give Daugherty a platform to obtain confidential information about Ellington and others and a mechanism to find new ways to harass Ellington." (Id.)[8] Ellington could have taken discovery on his objections, see Fed. R. Bankr. P. 9014(c), including discovery into the negotiation of the Daugherty Settlement, but chose not to. Ellington represented to this Court that he "has no reason to believe that HCMLP was aware of the alleged [stalking] activities of Daugherty or the allegations raised in the [Stalking] Action at the time HCMLP entered into" the Daugherty Settlement. (Id. ¶ 4.)

17. On March 1, 2022, this Court overruled Ellington's Objections and approved the Daugherty Settlement in its entirety. (Dkt. No. 3306.) Ellington did not appeal this Court's ruling.

C. Ellington Sues Daugherty In Texas State Court For Alleged Stalking.

18. On January 11, 2022, Ellington commenced an action (the "Stalking Action") by filing a petition in the 101st Judicial District Court of Dallas County ("Petition"; Ex. 2)[9] alleging that Daugherty was "observed outside Ellington's office, his residence, the residence of his long-time girlfriend, . . . his sister's residence, and his father's residence no less than 143 times, often taking photographs and video recordings while either parked or driving slowly by." (Id. ¶ 12.) Ellington asserts claims against Daugherty for stalking and for invasion of privacy by intrusion under Texas law and seeks injunctive relief and exemplary damages. (Id. ¶¶ 19–36.)

19. Under Texas law, Ellington's claims turn on whether Daugherty "engaged in harassing behavior" such that Ellington "reasonably feared for [his] safety or the safety of a member of [his] family." (Id. ¶¶ 21–22); Texas Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code §§ 85.001–02. Ellington

[8] Notably, although the Debtor agreed to make reasonable efforts to petition the Oversight Board to grant Daugherty observer access, Daugherty has never appeared before the Oversight Board or participated in any of its meetings.

[9] References to "Ex." refer to exhibits to the accompanying declaration of Joshua S. Levy.

acknowledges that Daugherty's "supposed motivations in stalking Plaintiff are irrelevant." (Ex. 1 ¶ 2.) Ellington's Petition makes no mention of Seery or the Daugherty Settlement.

1. Ellington Represented Repeatedly To This Court That The Stalking Action Is Unrelated To This Chapter 11 Case Or The Daugherty Settlement.

20. On January 18, 2022, Daugherty removed the Stalking Action to this Court and initiated an adversary proceeding. (Dkt. No. 3185.) On January 25, 2023, Ellington moved to remand the Stalking Action to state court, arguing repeatedly that the Stalking Action "does not implicate the Daugherty Settlement," "the Daugherty Settlement has no bearing on the merits of Ellington's stalking and invasion of privacy claims," and the Stalking Action "has no impact on the already resolved Daugherty Settlement." (Ex. 3 at 3, 6 (emphasis added); see also Ex. 4 (Mar. 29, 2022 Hr'g Tr.) at 14:13–16 (arguing that the Daugherty Settlement is "fully resolved and really moot to the motion before the Court").) Ellington further argued that Stalking Action "is independent of the administration of the bankruptcy" and "do[es] not invoke substantive rights in bankruptcy." (Ex. 3 at 4, 7.)

21. Relying on Ellington's representations, this Court remanded the Stalking Action to state court, holding that "[t]here is a remoteness, extreme remoteness to the bankruptcy case," because "the only possible hook . . . for the bankruptcy court or federal jurisdiction was if this somehow implicated the gatekeeping order" or "if the estate was somehow going to be impacted," but "I just didn't find, based on the evidence or argument, any of those things implicated." (Ex. 4 at 32:23–34:4.)

2. Ellington And His Counsel Are Using Discovery Materials From The Stalking Action To Facilitate Litigation Against The Highland Parties and Seery.

22. On November 3, 2022, Ellington served on Seery a third-party subpoena in the Stalking Action (the "Subpoena"; Ex. 5) seeking, among other things, "all communications and documents" between Seery and Daugherty relating to Ellington, certain individuals affiliated with Ellington, certain locations associated with Ellington, and any "investigation conducted by Daugherty" relating to Ellington. Seery produced tens of thousands of pages of documents in response to the Subpoena, including emails and text messages between Seery and Daugherty.

23. In February and March 2023, Highland's counsel and Ellington's counsel corresponded about Seery's text messages on his personal iPhone in connection with the Subpoena. (Dkt. Nos. 3803-1 to -4.) Two different Dondero-controlled entities—HMIT and Dugaboy Investment Trust ("Dugaboy")—used this correspondence in the Stalking Action (on which neither of them were copied) to advance Dondero's interests in this bankruptcy case by (i) bringing the Imaging Motion, and (ii) contending that the mistaken allegation concerning the supposed loss of certain text messages somehow made HMIT's claims "colorable." (See August 2023 Order at 39–42; Ex. 6 (June 8, 2023 Hr'g Tr.) at 28:24–29:12, 33:2–4, 33:14–35:15, 36:2–17, 237:2–25.)

3. Ellington And His Counsel Are Using The Stalking Action To Pursue Claims Against The Highland Parties And Seery.

24. On June 19, 2023, Ellington served a second third-party subpoena on Seery in the Stalking Action seeking Seery's deposition. (Ex. 7.) Counsel for Ellington and Seery met and conferred by email and telephone about this subpoena for several weeks, and Seery's counsel provided Ellington's counsel with copies of the Gatekeeper Orders and Gatekeeper Provision. (Ex. 9.) On July 13, 2023, Ellington served a further amended subpoena on Seery, which included additional topics for testimony. (Ex. 8.) Ellington and his counsel sought to depose Seery about, among other things, "[a]ny consideration provided to Daugherty with respect to Mr. Daugherty's so-called 'investigation' of Mr. Ellington or the stalking in this case, including, but not limited to, the treatment of Mr. Daugherty's Proof of Claim in the Highland bankruptcy." (Id.) Ultimately,

Seery agreed to testify about certain topics relevant to the Stalking Action, and Seery's deposition was scheduled for July 31, 2023. (Ex. 10.)

25. On July 14, 2023, Seery made a supplemental production to Ellington of text messages between Seery and Daugherty "with redactions to the extent they contain information that is not responsive to the Subpoena." (Ex. 11.) On July 19, 2023, Ellington's counsel, Julie Petit, asserted—without any knowledge of what was redacted—that "we do not see how the redacted texts could truly be nonresponsive" and demanded that Seery "produce the redacted text messages" without redactions. (Ex. 12.) Seery's counsel responded that "[t]he redacted material is not responsive to any request" in the Subpoena, represented that it "is unrelated to Mr. Ellington or the allegations in your complaint," and cautioned that "seeking materials beyond those related to 'stalking' would exceed the scope of reasonable discovery directed to Mr. Seery as a third-party and would constitute the 'pursuit' of claims against Mr. Seery or other covered parties without leave of the Bankruptcy Court" in violation of the Gatekeeper Provision. (Id.)

26. On July 24, 2023, Pettit provided a new theory of relevance for the redacted text messages:

> The production provided by Mr. Daugherty, Mr. Seery, and others in this matter suggests the factual conclusion that the Highland Estate provided Mr. Daugherty with additional settlement consideration in exchange for information on Mr. Ellington.
> We believe that Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery's communications regarding settlement of Mr. Daugherty's proof of claim in the Highland bankruptcy are relevant to the factual issues that will be tried in this matter. To the extent that the redacted communications relate in any way to the negotiations between Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery, as a representative of the Highland Estate, please produce those communications.

(Id. (emphasis added).) Pettit acknowledged that documents regarding the Daugherty Settlement may not be relevant to the Stalking Action, stating that "we can always amend our live petition as needed to give you comfort that you are producing relevant and responsive materials." (Id.)

27. On July 25, 2023, Seery's counsel responded to Ellington's new theory of relevance, arguing that "these allegations regarding settlement with Mr. Daugherty are not legitimately related to the 'stalking' claims alleged in Texas state court." (Id.) Seery's counsel again "advised that Mr. Ellington is bound by the Plan, the Plan Injunction, and the Gatekeeping Orders," and "[t]o the extent Mr. Ellington is now seeking discovery regarding the settlement, this constitutes 'pursuit' of claims against Highland and/or Mr. Seery without leave of the Bankruptcy Court in violation of the Bankruptcy Court's Gatekeeping Orders." (Id.) Seery's counsel put Ellington and his counsel on notice that "Mr. Seery, Highland, and the Claimant Trust take these matters seriously and will enforce all rights and seek appropriate sanctions." (Id.) Finally, Seery's counsel confirmed that, "[i]n any event, the redacted information does not relate to any allegations in your stalking lawsuit or even settlement negotiations between Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery," so they are "irrelevant and therefore appropriately redacted." (Id.)

28. While Ellington and his counsel were seeking irrelevant documents and testimony from Seery in the Stalking Action, they were also seeking to obtain documents from and depose Judge Nelms. (Declaration of Richard L. Wynne Exs. 1, 3, 5.) Judge Nelms responded that he had no responsive documents, and his counsel represented to Ellington's counsel that Judge Nelms "was not involved in, and has no knowledge of, the matters that are at issue in" the Stalking Action, and asked Ellington's counsel "to reconsider your plan to depose him." (Id. Exs. 2, 4.)

29. On July 25, 2023, the day after Pettit raised the relevance of the Daugherty Settlement to Seery's counsel, Pettit did the same in a lengthy email to Judge Nelms's counsel filled with baseless speculation and inaccuracies:

> While we do believe Daugherty left Judge Nelms was left in the dark regarding Daugherty's stalking, what is significant is that all of this happened during the time Judge Nelms was on the board and Jim Seery and Andy Clubok did know about Mr. Daugherty's inappropriate investigation. In fact, not only were Seery and Clubok aware—but according to Daugherty, Seery himself told Daugherty that he "appreciated" the investigation. . . .
>
> At the Plan Confirmation hearing on February 2, 2021, the Debtor and Daugherty announced a settlement of Daugherty's proof of claim in the Highland Bankruptcy. Nine months later in November 2021, the Debtor and Daugherty executed a settlement agreement that, in addition to the material terms announced in February 2021, gave Daugherty an additional $1m in Class 9, part of Highland's investment track record to claim as his own, ownership of two Highland affiliates he could use to pursue litigation claims, and a prospective observer role on the Claimant Oversight Board. The Debtor agreed to all of this additional settlement consideration subsequent to receiving Mr. Daugherty's cooperation in investigating Ellington. Given the Board's role in approving settlement of material proofs of claim in the bankruptcy, Ellington believes that Judge Nelms should have been made aware of Daugherty's actions—if not by Daugherty, then certainly by Jim Seery and Andy Clubok.
>
> It does not seem to be a coincidence that Judge Nelms was excluded from all communications relating to the stalking and investigation. It does not seem to be a coincidence that Mr. Daugherty's settlement in the bankruptcy became materially better for Mr. Daugherty after Judge Nelms was seemingly cut out of communications and only after Mr. Daugherty had provided Seery and Clubok with thousands upon thousands of pages of his investigatory work regarding Ellington. And it does not seem to be a coincidence that Judge Nelms participated in the legitimate negotiations with Daugherty, but that Judge Nelms was purposefully excluded from what Mr. Ellington believes were the illegitimate negotiations.

(Id. Ex. 4 (citations omitted; certain emphasis added).)

30. Ellington and his counsel then stopped responding to Judge Nelms' counsel and personally served a second third-party subpoena on Judge Nelms in the Stalking Action seeking Nelms' deposition, forcing Judge Nelms to file a motion to quash the renewed deposition. (Id. Ex. 5.) After conferring for weeks, Petit eventually provided to Judge Nelms' counsel proposed deposition topics, including:

> 9. Any consideration provided to Daugherty with respect to Mr. Daugherty's so-called "investigation" of Mr. Ellington or the stalking in this case, including, but not limited to, the treatment of Mr. Daugherty's Proof of Claim in the Highland bankruptcy.
> 10. The process for approval of Mr. Daugherty's proof of claim with respect to the settlement announced on the record in the Highland bankruptcy on February 2, 2021.
>
> 11. The ordinary process for negotiation and settlement of material proofs of claim in the Highland bankruptcy.

(Id. Ex. 6.)

31. Judge Nelms and John Dubel (another former independent director of the Debtor) have offered to provide declarations that they do not have any knowledge relevant to the stalking allegations, but Ellington and his counsel have continued to use the Stalking Action to harass them. For example, Ellington left a document subpoena at Dubel's home when he was out of town and, when Dubel did not respond, Ellington and his counsel sought to hold Dubel in contempt and threatened monetary damages. (Id. Exs. 7, 8.)

32. On July 27, 2023, two business days before Seery's scheduled deposition, Ellington's counsel informed Seery's counsel that "[w]e are going to file a Motion to Compel the redacted text messages," "[w]e will postpone Mr. Seery's deposition," and will "take it after the issue of the redactions is resolved by the Court." (Ex. 10.)[10]

[10] Seery is prepared to provide unredacted copies of the text message conversations at issue to this Court in camera should this Court request that he do so.

33. On August 21, 2023, Ellington moved to compel the production of unredacted text messages between Daugherty and Seery from Daugherty—not Seery—in Texas state court. (Ex. 1.) Ellington did not provide notice to Seery or his counsel of his motion and stated vaguely that he "intends to also seek full production from Seery." (Id. ¶ 12.) Ellington asserted that the redacted "text messages are relevant to Daugherty's investigation," but provided no basis for his assertion; he stated only that "they were sent during the relevant time, were by and between Seery and Defendant, and are surrounded by messages referencing Plaintiff and Defendant's investigation of him." (Id. at 5.) Tellingly, Ellington's motion made no mention of the Daugherty Settlement or any of the speculative theories of relevance Petit raised in her emails. Ellington also selectively attached email correspondence between his counsel and Seery's counsel to avoid showing the Texas court or Daugherty any emails referencing the Daugherty Settlement and Seery's counsel's responses. Instead, Ellington emphasized that his lawsuit is about allegations of "stalking and otherwise harassing him and his family," and asserted that Daugherty's "supposed motivations in stalking Plaintiff are irrelevant." (Id. ¶¶ 1–2 & Ex. D.)

34. On August 29, 2023, Daugherty filed a response to Ellington's motion arguing, among other things, that Ellington seeks "to gather otherwise impermissible discovery for use in concurrent bankruptcy proceedings" in violation of the "gatekeeping order in the bankruptcy court." (Ex. 13 ¶¶ 1, 3; see also id. ¶ 17 n.6 ("[T]his case is about gathering discovery for use in the bankruptcy proceedings, not an effort to support his baseless claims for stalking or invasion of privacy."); id. ¶ 20 ("Ellington should not be permitted to utilize this case as leverage to gain impermissible backdoor discovery in bankruptcy proceedings or elsewhere.").)

35. On September 11, 2023, the Texas state court granted in part Ellington's motion to compel with certain handwritten modifications: "Defendant [Daugherty] shall produce all text messages with James Seery regarding Plaintiff [Ellington] and the stalking issues; including the unredacted versions of the text messages already produced by James Seery." (Ex. 14 (handwritten modifications emphasized).) Because the redacted material does not relate to Ellington or any "stalking issues," this order will not result in the production of any additional documents or information.

ARGUMENT

I. Ellington And His Counsel Violated The Gatekeeper Provision And Gatekeeper Orders By Pursuing Claims Against Highland And Seery In The Stalking Action.

36. Under the Gatekeeper Provision, Ellington and his counsel may not "commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against" Highland and Seery "that arose or arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case" without this Court granting leave to do so. (Plan at 50–51 (emphasis added); Confirmation Order at 77.) Yet that is precisely what Ellington and his counsel are doing by using the Stalking Action to seek discovery into the Debtor's negotiations regarding the Court-approved Daugherty Settlement, which has nothing to do with any alleged stalking.

37. The Gatekeeper Provision applies to the claims Ellington and his counsel are pursuing against Highland and Seery, and Ellington's counsel has never disputed its applicability.

a. First, under the Plan, Ellington and his counsel are Enjoined Parties subject to the Gatekeeper Provision and Highland and Seery are Protected Parties protected by the Gatekeeper Provision. (See supra ¶ 11, fn.6.)

b. Second, Ellington and his counsel's speculation that Seery engaged in "inappropriate negotiations" with Daugherty in connection with his proof of claim in Debtor's Chapter 11 bankruptcy such that Debtor provided Daugherty with additional consideration in the Daugherty Settlement plainly "arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case." (See supra ¶¶ 24–35.)

c. Third, Ellington and his counsel's efforts to obtain discovery in the Stalking Action to develop potential claims against Highland and Seery constitutes "pursu[ing] a claim or cause of action" under the Gatekeeper Provision as a matter of law. During prior contempt proceedings under the Gatekeeper Orders, the District Court held that "[t]o pursue a claim, a party must 'try' or 'seek' to bring that claim," which encompasses a broader range of actions than "bring[ing] a claim against Seery." Charitable DAF Fund LP v. Highland Capital Mgmt. LP, 2022 WL 4538466, at *3 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2022). The District Court rejected contemnors' argument that "the term pursue in the gatekeeper orders refers only to legal activities that occur after a claim has already been filed," reasoning that "most dictionaries define pursue as 'seeking' or 'trying' to obtain a desired end." Id. at *2 (emphasis in original; citations omitted) (collecting dictionaries). By seeking discovery into negotiations between Seery, on behalf of Debtor, and Daugherty regarding the Daugherty Settlement—which has nothing to do with whether or not Daugherty stalked Ellington—Ellington and his counsel are pursuing claims against Highland and Seery.

38. The Gatekeeper Orders also apply to the claims Ellington and his counsel are pursuing against Seery. Under the January 2020 Order, Ellington and counsel may not "commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director," including Seery, "relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director" without this Court's leave. (January 2020 Order ¶ 10 (emphasis added).) Under the July 2020 Order, Ellington and counsel may not "commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against Mr. Seery relating in any way to his role as the chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer of the Debtor" without this Court's leave. (July 2020 Order ¶ 5.) By seeking discovery regarding "the negotiations between Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery, as a representative of the Highland Estate" (Ex. 12 (emphasis added)), Ellington and his counsel are pursuing claims against Seery in his capacities as Independent Director, CEO, and CRO of the Debtor, which are subject to the Gatekeeper Orders. Tellingly, Ellington did not pursue such discovery in connection with his objections to the Daugherty settlement but is instead doing so years later in the Stalking Action.

39. Ellington and his counsel are using the Stalking Action as a vehicle to pursue potential claims against Highland and Seery while evading this Court's jurisdiction, the Gatekeeper Provision, and the Gatekeeper Orders. But this Court held that "it will have jurisdiction after the Effective Date to implement the Gatekeeper Provision as post-confirmation bankruptcy court jurisdiction has been interpreted by the Fifth Circuit." (Confirmation Order ¶ 81 (collecting cases).) And the Fifth Circuit agreed that the "bankruptcy court retains jurisdiction post-confirmation" under "the gatekeeper provision" over "matters pertaining to the implementation or execution of the plan." In re Highland Capital Mgmt, L.P., 48 F.4th 419, 439 (5th Cir. 2022) (cleaned up); see also In re Salubrio, LLC, 2023 WL 3105153, at *8–9 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 31, 2023) (rejecting argument that a bankruptcy court's gatekeeping order was overly broad to the extent it prohibits claims brought in state court "against the Trustee, the Trustee's attorney, or other creditors without leave of Court") (citing Highland, 48 F.4th at 439).

II. This Court Should Hold Ellington And His Counsel In Civil Contempt.

40. "The power to impose sanctions for contempt of an order is an inherent and well-settled power of all federal courts—including bankruptcy courts." In re Highland Capital Mgmt., L.P., 2021 WL 3418657, at *10 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. Aug. 4, 2021) (collecting in cases), aff'd in relevant part sub nom. Charitable DAF Fund LP v. Highland Capital Mgmt. LP, 2022 WL 4538466 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 28, 2022). "A bankruptcy court's power to sanction those who 'flout its authority is both necessary and integral' to the court's performance of its duties." Id. (cleaned up) (quoting Schermerhorn v. Cenurytel, Inc. (In re SkyPort Global Comm's, Inc.), 2013 WL 4046397, at *1 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Aug. 7, 2013), aff'd, 661 F. App'x 835 (5th Cir. 2016)).

41. Parties "commit[] contempt when they violate a definite and specific order of the court requiring them to perform or refrain from performing a particular act or acts with knowledge of the court's order." Id. at *11 (cleaned up) (quoting Travelhost, Inc. v. Blandford, 68 F.3d 958, 961 (5th Cir. 1995)). "If the purpose of the sanction is to coerce the contemnor into compliance with a court order, or to compensate another party for the contemnor's violation, the order is considered purely civil." Id. (citing In re Bradley, 588 F.3d 254, 263 (5th Cir. 2009)). "[T]he party seeking an order of contempt in a civil contempt proceeding need only establish, by clear and convincing evidence (1) that a court order was in effect, and (2) that the order required certain conduct by the respondent, and (3) that the respondent failed to comply with the court's order." Id. (citing United States v. Puente, 558 F. App'x 338, 341 (5th Cir. 2013) (per curiam); FDIC v. LeGrand, 43 F.3d 163, 170 (5th Cir. 1995)). "[T]he contemptuous actions need not be willful so long as the contemnor actually failed to comply with the court's order." Id. at *12 (quoting Am. Airlines, Inc. v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 228 F.3d 574, 578 (5th Cir. 2000)).

42. These requirements are easily satisfied here. As discussed above (see supra ¶¶ 9–39), the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders remain in effect and apply to Ellington and his counsel; Seery's counsel provided copies of them to Ellington's counsel in the Stalking Action and repeatedly provided notice that they would seek sanctions for any violations; the Gatekeeper Provision prohibits pursuing claims against Highland or Seery relating to the Debtor's Chapter 11 case without this Court's leave; the Gatekeeper Orders prohibit pursuing claims against Seery relating to his role as Independent Director, CEO, or CRO of the Debtor; and Ellington's counsel admitted that Ellington and his counsel are using the Stalking Action to seek discovery into alleged misconduct in the negotiation of the settlement of Daugherty's proof of claim in Debtor's Chapter 11 case.

CONCLUSION

43. For the foregoing reasons, Highland and Seery respectfully request this the Court order Ellington and his counsel to show cause why they should not be held in civil contempt for violating the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders, enter an Order in the form appended as Exhibit A hereto, and grant any further relief as the Court deems just and proper.

Counsel for James P. Seery, Jr.

CERTIFICATE OF CONFERENCE

On June 30, 2023, Seery's counsel emailed Ellington's counsel that Highland's counsel "wants to attend [Seery's] deposition and potentially raise objections under the Gatekeeper Orders entered by the Bankruptcy Court (which I've attached) to ensure discovery in the Ellington litigation is not used in connection with the Highland bankruptcy in violation of the Gatekeeper Orders." On July 11, 2023, counsel for Seery, Ellington, Highland, and Judge Nelms met and conferred by phone. All counsel agreed that counsel for Seery and Highland could raise objections to deposition questions to Seery based on the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders.

On July 24, 2023, after Ellington's counsel's emailed demanding that Seery produce text messages without redactions, Seery's counsel emailed Ellington's counsel that seeking discovery from Seery beyond information related to the "stalking" allegations in the Stalking Action "would constitute the 'pursuit' of claims against Mr. Seery or other covered parties without leave of the Bankruptcy Court." Seery's counsel reserved the right to seek relief under the Gatekeeper Provision in the event Ellington proceeded with seeking this discovery. Later that day, Ellington's counsel responded demanding that Seery produce unredacted text message communications to the extent they "relate in any way to the negotiations between Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Seery, as a representative of the Highland Estate." On July 25, 2023, Seery's counsel emailed Ellington's counsel that Seery "will enforce all rights and seek appropriate sanctions" if Ellington continues to seek materials unrelated to the allegations in the Stalking Action. On July 27, 2023, Ellington's counsel emailed Seery's counsel that Ellington would file a motion to compel the production of Seery's text messages beyond those that are relevant to the stalking allegations. On August 21, 2023, Plaintiff filed a motion to compel these text messages from Daugherty in Texas state court.

On September 13, 2023, Seery's counsel made multiple telephone calls to, and left multiple voicemails with, Ellington's counsel, in an attempt to meet and confer regarding this Motion. Ellington's counsel did not return these calls or voicemails. Seery's counsel then emailed Ellington's counsel informing them that Seery and Highland counsel intended to file this Motion, explaining that "[a]s we've discussed by phone and by email, we believe that you and Scott Ellington are using discovery in the stalking litigation against Patrick Daugherty to pursue claims against Highland and Jim Seery in violation of the Gatekeeper Provision and Gatekeeper Orders entered by the Bankruptcy Court." Ellington's counsel demanded to see "a copy of the proposed motion prior to filing," which Seery's counsel opposed because it is not required by Local Civil Rule 7.1(a). Seery's counsel invited Ellington's counsel to "immediately withdraw all of [their] impermissible demands" and, "[f]ailing that, we will mark your position on this motion as opposed when filing." Ellington's counsel has not withdrawn any discovery requests and therefore opposes this Motion.

GLOBAL NOTES TO POST CONFIRMATION REPORT

The Reorganized Debtor has filed the attached post-confirmation report (the "PCR") in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division (the "Court"), on behalf of debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ) (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The Reorganized Debtor prepared the PCR with the assistance of the Reorganized Debtor's employees, advisors, and professionals. The PCR was prepared solely for the purpose of complying with the post-confirmation quarterly reporting requirements established by the United States Trustee Program (see https://www.justice.gov/ust/chapter-11-operating-reports). The PCR should not be relied upon by any persons for any information in connection with current or future financial conditions or events relating to the Reorganized Debtor or its estate.

The financial information contained in the PCR is preliminary, unaudited, limited in scope, and is not prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America nor in accordance with other applicable non-bankruptcy law. In preparing the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor relied on financial data from the books and records available to it at the time of such preparation, as well as certain filings on the docket in the Bankruptcy Case. Although the Reorganized Debtor made commercially reasonable efforts to ensure the accuracy and completeness of the PCR, inadvertent errors or omissions may exist. The Reorganized Debtor reserves the right to amend and supplement the PCR as may be necessary or appropriate.

Part 2: Preconfirmation Professional Fees and Expenses

In Section A of the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor listed the bankruptcy related professionals employed in connection with the Bankruptcy Case.

In Section B of the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor listed non-bankruptcy professionals, those that would have been retained absent the Bankruptcy Case, and the ordinary course professionals ("OCP"). Hunton Andrews Kurth LLP ("Hunton") and Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr LLP ("Wilmer Hale") were originally ordinary course professionals but were later employed professionals. The amounts listed for Hunton and Wilmer Hale include the OCP payments and employed professional payments.

In Section C of the PCR, the Reorganized Debtor totals all payments included in Sections A and B, along with payments made to professional employed by the official committee of unsecured creditors (the "Committee").

The approved current quarter, approved cumulative, and paid cumulative will have the same amount listed due to approval and payment of final fee applications.

Part 3: Recoveries of the Holders of Claims and Interests under Confirmed Plan

The payments made to holders of General Unsecured Claims were disbursed from the Claimant Trust, but for presentation purposes, have been included in Part 3 of the post-confirmation report for the Reorganized Debtor.

The presentation contained in this PCR does not reflect the material and necessary reserves that will be taken in accordance with Reorganized Debtor's governing documents and the Plan.

The Debtor reserves all right to object to any claim in accordance with the terms of the Plan.

GLOBAL NOTES TO POST CONFIRMATION REPORT

The Highland Claimant Trust has filed the attached post-confirmation report (the "PCR") in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division (the "Court"), with respect to the case of Reorganized Debtor Highland Capital Management, L.P., Case No. 19-34054 (SGJ) (the "Bankruptcy Case"). The Highland Claimant Trust prepared the PCR with the assistance of the Reorganized Debtor's employees, advisors, and professionals. The PCR was prepared solely for the purpose of complying with the post-confirmation quarterly reporting requirements established by the United States Trustee Program (see https://www.justice.gov/ust/chapter-11-operating-reports). The PCR should not be relied upon by any persons for any information in connection with current or future financial conditions or events relating to the Highland Claimant Trust, the Reorganized Debtor or its estate.

The financial information contained in the PCR is preliminary, unaudited, limited in scope, and is not prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America nor in accordance with other applicable non-bankruptcy law. In preparing the PCR, the Highland Claimant Trust relied on financial data from the books and records available to it at the time of such preparation, as well as certain filings on the docket in the Bankruptcy Case. Although the Highland Claimant Trust made commercially reasonable efforts to ensure the accuracy and completeness of the PCR, inadvertent errors or omissions may exist. The Highland Claimant Trust reserves the right to amend and supplement the PCR as may be necessary or appropriate.

Part 2: Preconfirmation Professional Fees and Expenses

The Highland Claimant Trust did not make any payment of professional fees prior to Confirmation of the Plan.

[1] The Reorganized Debtor's last four digits of its taxpayer identification number are (6725). The headquarters and service address for the above-captioned Reorganized Debtor is 100 Crescent Court, Suite 1850, Dallas, TX 75201.

Part 3: Recoveries of the Holders of Claims and Interests under Confirmed Plan

For presentation purposes, the chart showing claims anticipated under the plan, paid claims and allowed claims are reflected in both the Reorganized Debtor and Claimant Trust post-confirmation report under Part 3: Recoveries of the Holders of Claims and Interests under the Confirmed Plan.

The presentation contained in this PCR does not reflect the material and necessary reserves that will be taken in accordance with the Claimant Trust's governing documents and the Plan.

Dear Mr. Sanghera,

Re: NexPoint Hospitality Trust

We are Canadian counsel to Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland"), a minority unitholder of NexPoint Hospitality Trust ("NHT"). We write this letter to draw your attention to three potential breaches of TSXV policies in relation to NHT's having entered into over $82 million in convertible notes with related parties.[1] While NHT has undertaken to amend $56 million of the convertible notes at the request of the TSXV, $26 million of the notes remain unamended and potentially remain in breach of TSXV Policy 4.1. Additionally, NHT inaccurately described the notes in its news releases contrary to TSXV Policy 3.3, and did not obtain minority approval of these notes as may have been required by TSXV Policy 5.9.

Currently, NHT is trading on the TSXV at $0.25 per unit with a market capitalization of $7,338,014. Conversion of the notes therefore poses a significant risk of dilution to NHT's minority unitholders.

Background of the convertible notes

NHT is a real estate investment trust (a "REIT") that began listing on the TSXV in March 2019.[2] According to NHT's Interim Consolidated Financial Statements for Q2 2023, NHT has $82,723,000 in convertible notes outstanding as of June 30, 2023.[3] These notes were entered into with entities controlled or managed by James Dondero (who is NHT's CEO and one of its trustees), starting in January 2019 through to the end of 2022. NHT consistently disclosed that these notes were exempted from the minority approval requirements under section 5.7(1)(a) of MI 61-101 ("MI 61-101") for related party transactions because the notes did not exceed 25% of NHT's market capitalization at the time they were entered into.[4]

[1] All dollar amounts are USD.
[2] NHT Prospectus, dated March 27, 2019, TAB 1.
[3] NHT Interim Consolidated Financial Statements for Q2 2023, TAB 2, p. 23 ["Q2 2023"].
[4] See NHT News Releases dated March 30, 2021 (TAB 3), April 8, 2022 (TAB 4), May 27, 2022 (TAB 5), and November 14, 2022 (TAB 6).

The notes are described as maturing in 20 years "in most cases" and being convertible into Class B units of NHT's operating partnership (the "OP"),[5] which indirectly holds NHT's assets.[6] When the notes were originally disclosed throughout 2021 and 2022—including as recently as NHT's 2022 audited annual financial statements filed on April 4, 2023[7]—the loans were consistently described as being convertible at the option of NHT. For example, NHT's news release on March 30, 2021 described the notes as convertible "at the option of NHT in its sole discretion" [emphasis added],[8] and its Q2 2022 financial statements described the notes as "convertible at any time at the election of the Company into Class B Units" [emphasis added].[9]

However, in NHT's Q1 2023 financial statements, the description of the loans changed for the first time to "convertible at any time at the election of the holders into Class B Units" [emphasis added].[10] This deliberate change in the disclosure suggests that NHT became aware of the misleading disclosure in previous news releases and financial statements, but NHT made the change without any explanation and without any acknowledgement that it was in fact a change to the disclosure.

The TSXV's required amendments

In a June 26, 2023 news release, NHT announced that, at the request of the TSXV, it had undertaken to amend $56,165,000 of the convertible notes.[11] NHT also disclosed that MI 61-101 required minority approval of the amendments. On August 31, 2023, NHT set the 2023 annual and special meeting of the unitholders for October 12, 2023.[12]

In its Management Information Circular filed on September 21, 2023 (the "Information Circular"), NHT further disclosed that the TSXV required amendments to 32 of the convertible notes issued between June 2021 and September 2022 in the aggregate amount of $56,165,000.[13] The Information Circular explained that, although NHT initially filed the convertible notes with the TSXV under TSXV Policy 5.1 – Loans, Loan Bonuses, Finder's Fees and Commissions, the TSXV advised NHT in December 2022 that the notes were required to be treated as "Convertible Securities" under TSXV Policy 4.1 – Private Placements. The Information Circular disclosed that "due to this determination, the TSXV required the following amendments":[14]

(i) either the conversion feature be removed or limited to five years from the date of issuance of the loan;
(ii) the conversion feature be limited to the principal amount of the loan; and

(iii) the conversion price be fixed at a price equal to the market price of the REIT's units on the TSXV at the time of the issuance of the loan.

Highland's application for additional information on the convertible notes

Highland did not believe that the Information Circular provided sufficient disclosure to allow it to make an informed vote on the proposed amendments. Highland therefore commenced an application to the Capital Markets Tribunal seeking an amended information circular.

In response to Highland's application, NHT moved the meeting to October 26, 2023. Also in response to the application, NHT issued a news release on October 19, 2023 with additional information on the convertible notes.[15] The next day, Highland withdrew its application to the Capital Markets Tribunal. The news release disclosed two key pieces of information.

First, NHT clarified and corrected its earlier disclosure. It disclosed that:

> Previous disclosure of the REIT stated that the Loans were, subject to approval of the TSXV, convertible at any time at the election of the REIT into Class B Units. The REIT wishes to clarify and correct this earlier disclosure. The Loans are, and have always been, only convertible into Class B Units at the option of their respective holder. However, if any of the Loans are converted by their respective holders into Class B Units and the holder then elects to redeem those Class B Units, the REIT may elect to satisfy the redemption by issuing Units to the holder.

The news release does not explain why the previous disclosure did not properly describe the conversion rights, or why NHT failed to correct the misleading disclosure until Highland's application forced the issue.

Second, NHT disclosed that it had initially filed the convertible notes under TSXV Policy 5.1 because the convertible notes were convertible into units of the OP, rather than NHT's "publicly traded units". NHT cited that TSXV Policy 5.1 defined "loan" as excluding "any form of debt instrument issued by an Issuer that is not convertible into Listed Shares". This is an extremely narrow interpretation of TSXV Policy 5.1 that the TSXV clearly rejected as it required amendments to $56 million of the notes to bring them into compliance with Policy 4.1.

The remaining $26 million in convertible notes may breach Policy 4.1

Highland has serious concerns about the more than $26 million in convertible notes that have not been subjected to the TSXV's required amendments (the "Unamended Notes").

As described above, NHT issued over $82 million in convertible notes, but the TSXV required amendments to only just over $56 million worth of the notes. NHT has never disclosed that the Unamended Notes differ in any significant way from the convertible notes that the TSXV required to be amended. Nor has NHT offered any explanation as to why the Unamended Notes were not subject to the same amendments as the other notes. The Unamended Notes therefore likely also violate the requirements of TSXV Policy 4.1. If so, they should be subject to the same amendments as the other $56 million in notes.

Without being subject to amendments to bring about compliance with Policy 4.1, the $26 million in Unamended Notes could be converted at the holders' option at the current NHT unit market price of $0.25, which is a fraction of the unit market price when these notes were issued. This conversion could lead to an additional 104 million units being issued, when the total number of outstanding units is currently only 29,352,055. The Unamended Notes pose a significant risk of dilution for Highland and other minority unitholders. The required amendments would help to mitigate this risk and provide NHT's minority unitholders with the protection that Policy 4.1 intends.

Highland requests that the TSXV review the Unamended Notes, including any amendments to or assignments of those notes, to determine whether amendments are required to bring about compliance with TSXV Policy 4.1.

NHT may have breached TSXV Policy 3.3 – Timely Disclosure

TSXV Policy 3.3 requires accurate disclosure in news releases. Section 3.8(g) of the policy requires reporting issuers to immediately disclose "the borrowing or lending of a significant amount of funds" and section 8.3 states that "The responsibility for the adequacy and accuracy of the content of news releases rests with the directors of an Issuer."[16]

NHT has confirmed that its previous disclosures about its convertible notes are not accurate, as described above. To repeat, NHT disclosed on October 19, 2023 that:[17]

> Previous disclosure of the REIT stated that the Loans were, subject to approval of the TSXV, convertible at any time at the election of the REIT into Class B Units. The REIT wishes to clarify and correct this earlier disclosure. The Loans are, and have always been, only convertible into Class B Units at the option of their respective holder.

We note that under TSXV Policy 3.3 the TSXV has several remedies available to it, up to and including removal of the trustees.[18] We bring this potential breach of the policy to the TSXV's attention for its consideration and possible investigation.

NHT may have breached TSXV Policy 5.9 – Protection of Minority Security Holders in Special Transactions

TSXV Policy 5.9 adopts Multilateral Instrument 61-101 – Protection of Minority Security Holders in Special Transactions ("MI 61-101").[19] Under section 5.6 of MI 61-101, NHT is required to obtain minority approval for related party transactions, subject to certain exemptions. NHT has consistently disclosed that the convertible notes were exempt from the requirement for minority approval because the fair market value of the transactions did not exceed 25% of NHT's market capitalization at the time they were entered into. However, section 5.5(iii) of MI 61-101 states that the fair market values of "connected transactions" shall be aggregated in determining whether the tests for this exemption are met.[20] MI 61-101 defines "connected transactions" as "two or more transactions that have at least one party in common, directly or indirectly…and are negotiated or completed at approximately the same time."

NHT's convertible notes appear to be connected transactions. NHT consistently entered into convertible notes with entities affiliated with Dondero between 2019 and 2022, and it disclosed that these notes were all entered into for the purpose of funding NHT's operating expenses. These convertible notes together have far exceeded 25% of NHT's market capitalization—in Q1 2022 alone, NHT entered into $22,925,000 of convertible notes, which was more than 25% of NHT's market capitalization in the same period.

It appears that minority approval may have been required before NHT entered into the convertible notes, even though such approval was not sought. Highland requests that should NHT file any new convertible notes for the TSXV's review, the TSXV consider as part of its review whether minority approval was required, and, if so, obtained.

If we can be of any assistance we would be pleased to discuss this matter further.

Sincerely,

POLLEY FAITH LLP

James D. Dondero ("Mr. Dondero") and Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand" and, collectively, "Plaintiffs") respectfully move for leave to file an Adversary Proceeding Complaint (attached as Ex. A) against the law firm of Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones LLP ("Pachulski") for breaching its fiduciary duty of loyalty to Plaintiffs under Texas law.

BACKGROUND

I. Plaintiffs' Attorney-Client Relationship With Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones LLP

1. Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP") is an SEC-registered investment advisory business founded in 1993 by Mr. Dondero, directly and indirectly constituting a material aspect of Mr. Dondero's personal wealth. Compl. at ¶16. From the company's formation until the confirmation of the HCMLP bankruptcy plan in August 2021, Strand was HCMLP's general partner ("GP"), and Mr. Dondero in turn wholly owned Strand. Id. at ¶18. Prior to filing for bankruptcy, HCMLP provided money management and advisory services for approximately $2.5 billion of assets under management and provided sub-advisory services for an additional $15 billion of assets under management. Id. at ¶17. Nevertheless, HCMLP suffered losses during the 2008 financial crisis, leading to lawsuits by investors. Id. at ¶¶20-26. After one of the most contentious disputes resulted in a large arbitration award that HCMLP lacked the immediate liquidity to pay, Mr. Dondero sought advice about protecting HCMLP, as well as his and Strand's interest in the entity.

2. In October 2019, Mr. Dondero (HCMLP's co-founder) and Strand (HCMLP's general partner) turned to Pachulski for help, who advised that Plaintiffs restructure the arbitration debt by putting HCMLP into Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings in Delaware. Id. at ¶¶28-33. Bankruptcy, Pachulski counseled, would protect Plaintiffs' interest in HCMLP by providing an orderly mechanism to address the arbitration debt while ensuring that Plaintiffs retained control of HCMLP throughout the bankruptcy, which Pachulski represented would be quick. Id. at ¶ 33.

3. Throughout the next several months, Pachulski continued to advise Plaintiffs on how to best protect their interests in HCMLP by, among other things, (a) providing Plaintiffs legal advice regarding their objectives vis-à-vis the bankruptcy; (b) negotiating on behalf of Plaintiffs with the unsecured creditors committee ("UCC"); and (c) advising Plaintiffs to relinquish their control of HCMLP to avoid the appointment of an independent trustee in favor of an independent board, which was affected through a Governance Settlement.[1] Id. at ¶87. Pachulski knew that the appointment of a trustee would likely ensure that their representation of HCMLP would end (as the trustee would hire new counsel). Id. at ¶66. But if an independent board were appointed instead, Pachulski could likely stay on as counsel to HCMLP. Id. In short, Pachulski counseled Plaintiffs to engage in a course of conduct that was in dissonance with Plaintiffs' primary objectives but that was in consonance with Pachulski's own financial interest as a bankruptcy and restructuring law firm.

4. Shortly after Plaintiffs executed documents effectuating the Governance Settlement, the independent directors (the majority of whom were selected by the UCC) overseeing HCMLP became hostile towards Plaintiffs. Id. at ¶79. HCMLP then proceeded to take numerous actions adverse to Plaintiffs, including (1) obtaining a temporary restraining order ("TRO") that, among other things, prevented Mr. Dondero from contacting HCMLP's employees; (2) moving to have Dondero held in contempt for violating the TRO (eventually resulting in Mr. Dondero being ordered to pay $450,000 to compensate HCMLP for its legal fees incurred in pursuing a contempt order); (3) filing multiple adversary proceedings against Mr. Dondero and entities affiliated with him; and (4) advocating in favor of the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization, which both wiped out Strand's interest in HCMLP and created a Litigation Sub-Trust whose Trustee has since asserted claims against Plaintiffs. Id. at ¶¶14, 80.

5. Though Pachulski knew that HCMLP's creditors might move to appoint a bankruptcy trustee (and thus thwart the Plaintiffs' singular goal of retaining control of HCMLP), Pachulski failed to advise Mr. Dondero and Strand that Pachulski was not representing their interests in the restructuring and that they should retain independent outside counsel. Id. at ¶¶35, 55. And despite advising Plaintiffs on a host of issues after being approached by Mr. Dondero, Pachulski never advised that its interests as counsel to HCMLP had become adverse to Plaintiffs and thus Plaintiffs should consider retaining independent outside counsel. Id.

6. In short, as detailed in the Adversary Complaint, Pachulski placed its own business interests ahead of Plaintiffs' interests, and its actions both undermined Plaintiffs' primary goals in consenting to the bankruptcy (i.e., a fast exit from bankruptcy with Plaintiffs still in control) and exposed Plaintiffs to substantial liability. Id. at ¶81. The Adversary Complaint thus alleges that Pachulski's actions constitute a breach of its fiduciary duty of loyalty to Plaintiffs, entitling Plaintiffs to legal relief. Id. at ¶¶14-15, 86-92.

II. The Gatekeeper Provision

7. On February 22, 2021, the Court confirmed the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified, the "Plan"). The Plan became effective in August 2021, and includes a "Gatekeeper Provision." See Dkt. 1943 at ¶76. That provision "require[s] that, before a party may commence or pursue claims relating to the bankruptcy case against certain protected parties, it must first obtain (1) a finding from the bankruptcy court that its proposed claims ('Proposed Claims') are 'colorable'; and (2) specific authorization by the bankruptcy court to pursue the Proposed Claims." See Dkt. 3903 at 4 (citation omitted). Pachulski is a Protected Party under the Plan. See Dkt. 1943, Exhibit A at ¶105(xiv).

8. Because Plaintiffs are concerned that their fiduciary duty claim is arguably nearing a limitations period, Plaintiffs recently reached out to Pachulski requesting that it sign a tolling agreement to preserve Plaintiffs' claim. See Ex. B

(Email correspondence between A. Ruhland and J. Morris, dated 11/28/23 – 12/1/23). Pachulski refused. Id. Plaintiffs urged Pachulski to reconsider, both for the preservation of the value of the Highland estate and to reduce animosity between the parties. Id. As of the filing of this motion, Pachulski has not changed its position, necessitating the filing of this Motion and attached complaint.

LEGAL STANDARD

9. Under the Plan, a complaint may be filed against a Protected Party only if it satisfies the "Gatekeeper Colorability Test." See Dkt. 3903 at 91. According to the Bankruptcy Court, this legal standard is "a broader standard than the 'plausibility' standard applied to Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss" and "involves an additional level of review . . . [requiring plaintiffs to make] a prima facie case that its proposed claims are not without foundation, are not without merit, and are not being pursued for any improper purpose such as harassment." Id. (emphasis in original). The Court explained that the test permits it to consider "its knowledge of the bankruptcy proceedings and the parties and any additional evidence presented at the hearing on the Motion for Leave." Id. (emphasis in original).[2]

ARGUMENT

I. Plaintiffs Have A Proper Purpose For Bringing Their Claim

[2] Plaintiffs do not concede that the Gatekeeper Colorability Test outlined in Dkt. 3903 is the appropriate standard under a gatekeeper provision in the Fifth Circuit. Nonetheless, Plaintiffs have drafted this Motion consistent with the Court's articulation of the Gatekeeper Colorability Test.

10. A breach of fiduciary duty claim under Texas law has a four-year statute of limitations period. See Gomez Acosta v. Falvey, 594 S.W.3d 386, 393 (Tex. App.—El Paso 2019, no pet.). Letting a client's claim expire may be considered attorney malpractice. See Floyd v. Hefner, 556 F. Supp. 2d 617, 643 (S.D. Tex. 2008) (citing James Mazuca and Associates v. Schumann, 82 S.W.3d 90, 97 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2002, pet. denied).

11. Plaintiffs' claim for breach of fiduciary duty is not brought to harass Pachulski or for any improper purpose. Plaintiffs have a good faith concern that their claim for breach of fiduciary duty may be nearing its limitations period. Importantly, Plaintiffs did not want to file this Motion for Leave or the attached Adversary Complaint as this time, but Pachulski declined to sign (or even negotiate regarding the terms of) Plaintiffs' tolling agreement. See Ex. B; see also Charles Equip. Energy Sys., LLC v. INNIO Waukesha Gas Engines, Inc., 2023 WL 2346337, *7 (S.D.N.Y. Mar. 3, 2023) ("parties who want to forestall the running of the limitations period in order to engage in discussions aimed at resolving a dispute can accomplish that goal by signing toiling agreements to that effect. In the absence of such agreement . . . the limitations period runs."). Plaintiffs' Adversary Complaint is an effort by Plaintiffs to avail themselves of the only available legal remedy for the harm they have suffered due to Pachulski's actions. Thus, out of an abundance of caution, Plaintiffs had to file this Motion. As explained further below and detailed in the attached Adversary Complaint, Plaintiffs' breach of fiduciary duty claim is colorable and its Motion for Leave should be granted.

II. Plaintiffs Have A Colorable Claim Against Pachulski

12. Plaintiffs should be granted leave to assert a breach of fiduciary duty claim against Pachulski. "A Texas law claim for breach of fiduciary duty requires the plaintiff to plead the following elements: (1) the existence of a fiduciary duty, (2) breach of the duty, (3) causation, and (4) damages." In re Life Partners Holdings, Inc., 926 F.3d 103, 125 (5th Cir. 2019) (citing First United Pentecostal Church of Beaumont v. Parker, 514 S.W.3d 214, 220 (Tex. 2017) (cleaned up). The Texas Supreme Court has emphasized:

> In Texas, we hold attorneys to the highest standards of ethical conduct in their dealings with their clients. The duty is highest when the attorney . . . takes a position adverse to his or her client's interests. As Justice Cardozo observed, '[a fiduciary] is held to something stricter than the morals of the marketplace. Not honesty alone, but the punctilio of an honor the most sensitive, is then the standard of behavior.' Accordingly, a lawyer must conduct his or her business with inveterate honesty and loyalty, always keeping the client's best interest in mind.

Hoover Slovacek LLP v. Walton, 206 S.W.3d 557, 560-61 (Tex. 2006) (emphasis added) (citations omitted). Importantly, a plaintiff need not prove causation or actual damages "as to any equitable remedies [] sought." Parker, 514 S.W.3d at 221.

A. Pachulski Had A Fiduciary Duty of Loyalty to Plaintiffs

13. In Texas, an attorney-client relationship exists when an attorney agrees to render professional services to a client. See Vinson & Elkins v. Moran, 946 S.W.2d 381, 405 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 1997, writ dism'd by agr.) (citation omitted). "[A]n attorney-client relationship may [] be . . . implied from actions that reveal the parties' intent to establish the relationship." See In re Adobe Energy, Inc, 82 F. App'x 106, 114 (5th Cir. 2003); see also Acme Truck Line, Inc. v. Gardner, 2014 WL 6982277, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 9, 2014). An attorney owes a fiduciary duty of loyalty to his client throughout the course of the representation. Gillis v. Provost & Umphrey L. Firm, LLP, 2015 WL 170240, at *10 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2015, no pet.).

14. As set forth in the Adversary Complaint and summarized below, Pachulski's interactions with Plaintiffs evince an attorney-client relationship under Texas law, resulting in a fiduciary relationship with Plaintiffs:

15. Pachulski's Actions Evince An Attorney-Client Relationship With Plaintiffs. Pachulski's actions—starting from the moment Plaintiffs approached the firm in September 2019 to discuss their objectives of resolving the outstanding arbitration debt expeditiously and retaining control of HCMLP—demonstrate the existence of an attorney-client relationship. Specifically, the following acts are indicative of an attorney client relationship: (1) engaging in numerous discussions with Mr. Dondero personally, as well as in his capacity as President of Strand, regarding how best to retain control of HCMLP and to protect his financial interest;[3] (2) advising Mr. Dondero to give up control of Strand (a non-debtor) to an independent board;[4] (3) advising Mr. Dondero to appoint a Chief Restructuring Officer to increase the likelihood that Mr. Dondero and Strand would retain control over HCMLP in bankruptcy;[5] (4) advising Mr. Dondero regarding alternative proposals he should make to the UCC to address their concerns about

[3] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶9-10, 12-13.
[4] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶12, 82.
[5] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶10, 34.

Plaintiffs retaining control of HCMLP during the bankruptcy;[6] and (5) advising Plaintiffs to execute various documents to effectuate a change in control without advising Plaintiffs to hire independent outside counsel.[7] Plaintiffs clearly expected Pachulski to advise them on the above matters (otherwise, why would Pachulski repeatedly provide them advice), yet Pachulski took no steps to communicate that it was not representing Plaintiffs' interests. See Valls v. Johanson & Fairless, L.L.P., 314 S.W.3d 624, 634 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2010, no pet.) ("[A]n attorney-client relationship may arise by implication if the lawyer knows a person reasonably expects him to provide legal services but does nothing to correct that misapprehension.").

16. Plaintiffs' Actions Evince An Attorney-Client Relationship With Pachulski. The actions of Plaintiffs suggest that they believed they were clients of Pachulski: (1) Plaintiffs approached Pachulski for legal advice regarding how to protect their substantial financial interest in HCMLP given the large arbitration award and articulated their objectives to retain control of HCMLP;[8] (2) Plaintiffs acted in accordance with Pachulski's advice that Mr. Dondero give up control of Strand (a non-debtor) to an independent board;[9] (3) Plaintiffs acted in accordance with Pachulski's advice that Mr. Dondero appoint a CRO to increase the likelihood that Mr. Dondero and Strand retain control over HCMLP in bankruptcy;[10] (4)

[6] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶52.
[7] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶47, 52, 54.
[8] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶9, 28.
[9] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶12, 54, 69, 75.
[10] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶10-11, 36.

Plaintiffs acted in accordance with Pachulski's advice to Mr. Dondero regarding alternative proposals to the UCC to address concerns about Plaintiffs' retention of control of HCMLP during the bankruptcy;[11] and (5) Plaintiffs never retained independent outside counsel other than Pachulski because Pachulski had repeatedly advised Plaintiffs with respect to protecting Plaintiffs' interests in HCMLP, both before and after HCMLP filed for bankruptcy.[12] These facts plainly support the existence of an attorney-client relationship. See Johnson v. Williams, 2006 WL 1653656, at *6 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2006, pet. denied) (reversing grant of summary judgment because evidence suggested existence of attorney-client relationship when "the lawyer fails to manifest lack of consent . . . and the lawyer knows or reasonably should know that the person reasonably relies on the lawyer to provide the services." (citing Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 14 (2000))).

B. Pachulski Breached Its Duty of Loyalty to Plaintiffs

17. Attorneys breach their fiduciary duties to clients by their "failure to disclose conflicts of interest, . . . placing personal interests over the clients' interests, improper use of client confidences, taking advantage of the client's trust, engaging in self-dealing, and making misrepresentations." Goffney v. Rabson, 56 S.W.3d 186, 193 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2001, pet. denied). The duty of loyalty encompasses the duty "to render a full and fair disclosure of facts material to the client's representation." Willis v. Maverick, 760 S.W.2d 642, 645 (Tex. 1988).

[11] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶52, 54.
[12] See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶65, 69, 75.

18. The Adversary Complaint includes a colorable claim that Pachulski breached its duty of loyalty to Plaintiffs in multiple ways. First, Pachulski positioned itself to be retained as debtor's counsel by improperly putting its own self-interest in securing a lucrative engagement over its duty of loyalty to Plaintiffs. See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶81, 83; see also Goffney, 56 S.W.3d at 193 ("placing personal interests over the clients' interests" breaches duty of loyalty). And even though Pachulski's advice regarding the propriety of bankruptcy for HCMLP failed to achieve any of Plaintiffs' stated goals, the advice resulted in Pachulski earning millions in fees from their engagement with HCMLP. See Compl. at ¶¶15, 90. This constitutes an improper benefit obtained despite a clear conflict of interest. See, e.g., Jacobs v. Tapscott, 2006 WL 2728827, at *6 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 25, 2006), aff'd, 277 F. App'x 483 (5th Cir. 2008) ("An attorney's 'pursuit of his own pecuniary interests over the interests of his client . . . can be viewed as claims involving breached fiduciary duties.'" (cleaned up, citation omitted)).

19. Second, Pachulski neither disclosed nor counseled Plaintiffs that the interests of HCMLP might become adverse to Plaintiffs in the future. See, e.g., Compl. at ¶¶81, 82. More importantly, once it became clear that the interests of Pachulski and its client HCMLP were diverging from those of Plaintiffs, Pachulski never advised Plaintiffs to retain independent outside counsel. Compl. at ¶¶69, 91. In fact, facing a court likely to appoint a trustee that would be hostile to Plaintiffs retaining control of HCMLP, Pachulski continued to advise on legal strategy for HCMLP, Strand, and Dondero—each as seemingly aligned but separate clients with potential conflicts of interest between them. Compl. at ¶¶13, 61. This was improper. See In re Kuykendahl Place Assocs., Ltd., 112 B.R. 847, 850 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 1989) ("To represent an adverse interest means to serve as an agent or attorney for any individual or entity holding such adverse interest. The firm of Crain, Caton & James has represented Marc S. Geller individually. Mr. Geller is the general partner of Debtor's sole limited partner which is itself a limited partnership. Marc S. Geller has individually guaranteed an indebtedness of the Debtor-in-Possession. The guarantee, by its nature, establishes that Mr. Geller holds an interest which may be adverse to that of the Debtor-in-Possession.").

20. Further, Pachulski advised HCMLP to act adversely to Plaintiffs' interests with respect to the same issues it previously advised Plaintiffs. For example, Pachulski filed claims on behalf of HCMLP against Mr. Dondero, supported a bankruptcy plan that wiped out Strand's interest in HCMLP and resulted in a litigation sub-trust that pursued claims against Plaintiffs, and obtained a temporary restraining order against Mr. Dondero. Compl. at ¶¶14, 80. These actions constitute a breach of fiduciary duty. See Hoover, 206 S.W.3d at 560-61 (Tex. 2006) ("The duty is highest when the attorney . . . takes a position adverse to his or her client's interests. . . . a lawyer must conduct his or her business with inveterate honesty and loyalty, always keeping the client's best interest in mind." (cleaned up)).

21. Third, once Pachulski knew or should have known that there was a conflict of interest between Plaintiffs and HCMLP, Pachulski failed to secure Plaintiffs' informed consent before continuing to represent HCMLP in the bankruptcy proceeding. Compl. at ¶¶35, 55. "[A]s a general proposition loyalty to a client prohibits undertaking representation directly adverse to the representation of that client in a substantially related matter unless that client's fully informed consent is obtained and unless the lawyer reasonably believes that the lawyer's representation will be reasonably protective of that client's interests." In re Thetford, 574 S.W.3d 362, 376 (Tex. 2019); see In re Blast Fitness Grp., LLC, 2019 WL 137109 at *7 (Bankr. D. Mass. Jan. 8, 2019) ("the conflict presented by their simultaneous representations of other potentially adverse parties may have breached that [duty of loyalty]"). Pachulski's failure to sufficiently inform Plaintiffs about the potential conflict with Pachulski's representation of HCMLP in time for Plaintiffs to obtain independent outside counsel is colorable claim for breach of fiduciary duty. See Spera v. Fleming, Hovenkamp & Grayson, P.C., 25 S.W.3d 863, 873 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2000, no pet.) (remanding claim for breach of fiduciary duty because fact issue existed concerning whether lawyers had duty to tell clients about potential conflict of interest in time for clients to obtain other counsel prior to hearings).

C. Pachulski's Breach Damaged Plaintiffs And, Separately, Plaintiffs Are Entitled to Disgorgement

22. Causation is generally an essential element to a client's claim seeking actual damages as a remedy for breach of fiduciary duty. See Rogers v. Zanetti, 517 S.W.3d 123, 136 (Tex. App.—Dallas, 2015), aff'd, 518 S.W.3d 394 (Tex. 2017). But there is no requirement "to show causation and actual damages as to any equitable remedies [] sought." Parker, 514 S.W.3d 214, 221 (Tex. 2017). Thus, "forfeiture of an attorney's fee is an appropriate remedy when an attorney breaches his fiduciary duty to a client even in the absence of actual damages." See Hernandez v. LaBella, 2010 WL 431253, at *3 n.2 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] Feb. 9, 2010, no pet.) (citing Burrow v. Arce, 997 S.W.2d 229, 240 (Tex.1999)).

23. Here, Plaintiffs have a colorable claim that Pachulski's breach of its fiduciary duty entitles Plaintiffs to disgorgement of Pachulski's fees. See Gregory v. Porter & Hedges, LLP, 398 S.W.3d 881, 885 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2013, pet. denied) ("fee forfeiture is a deterrent in that it removes the incentive for an attorney to take personal advantage of her position of trust in every situation, whether the client is injured or not." (citations omitted)); see also Avco Corp. v. Turner, 2022 WL 2901015, at *3 (3d Cir. July 22, 2022) (reversing summary judgment because "disgorgement need not be a refund of fees paid" and disgorgement, "after all . . . centers on the wrongdoer's gain, not the plaintiff's loss: it is the act of giving up something (such as profits illegally obtained) on demand or by legal compulsion" (cleaned up)).

24. And though causation is not a necessary element of Plaintiffs' claim, Pachulski's disloyalty clearly caused Plaintiffs' damages. Among other things, Pachulski's actions resulted in (a) HCMLP filing claims against Dondero; (b) the wiping out of Strand's interest in HCMLP and the creation of a litigation sub-trust that has since sued Strand and Dondero (causing them to incur millions of dollars in legal fees); (c) the issuance of a TRO against Dondero ordering him to pay $450,000 to compensate HCMLP for its legal fees incurred in pursuing a subsequent contempt order; and (d) Plaintiffs' loss of control over HCMLP. Compl. at ¶88. That is, Pachulski advised Plaintiffs to voluntarily surrender their governance rights to facilitate a settlement with creditors who harbored animosity toward Mr. Dondero and, as part of the settlement, vested these creditors with standing to sue Mr. Dondero and entities affiliated with him. Id. at ¶76.

25. For these reasons, Plaintiffs' can make a prima facie case that their proposed claim for breach of fiduciary duty has foundation and is not without merit. See Dkt. 3903 at 91.

CONCLUSION

26. Plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court grant their Motion for Leave.

Defendant.	§

PLAINTIFFS' ORIGINAL COMPLAINT

TO THE HONORABLE COURT:

Plaintiffs Strand Advisors, Inc. ("Strand") and James Dondero ("Dondero") file this Original Complaint against Defendant Pachulski, Stang, Ziehl & Jones ("Pachulski" or "Defendant"), pursuant to section 105(a) of Title 11 of the United States Code (the "Bankruptcy Code") and Rule 7001(1) of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (the "Bankruptcy Rules"), and would show the Court as follows:

[1] The Debtor's last four digits of its taxpayer identification number are (6752). The headquarters and service address for the above-captioned Debtor is 300 Crescent Court, Suite 700, Dallas, TX 75201.

I. PARTIES

1. Plaintiff Strand is a Delaware corporation wholly owned by James Dondero. Its members are domiciled in the State of Texas, so it is also a citizen of the State of Texas.

2. Plaintiff James Dondero is a natural person residing in Dallas County, Texas.

3. Plaintiffs are the prior owners of the above-stated Debtor, Highland Capital Management and, thus, are affiliates and/or insiders as defined under the Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C. § 101(2), (31)).

4. Defendant Pachulski is a limited liability partnership organized under the laws of California that has partners residing in California, Texas, Delaware, and New York. Accordingly, Pachulski resides in Texas, among other states.

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE

5. This Court has jurisdiction over this adversary proceeding pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §§ 157 and § 1334 as it is related to a case currently governed by Title 11 of the United States Code. This adversary proceeding is a non-core proceeding.

6. Venue is proper in this judicial district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409(a).

7. Plaintiffs consent to the entry of a final order or judgment by the Bankruptcy Court in this matter.

III. SUMMARY OF THIS LAWSUIT

8. Overview. This lawsuit involves a law firm (Pachulski) that turned against its clients (Strand and Dondero) when it suited the law firm's own economic interests. Having advised Plaintiffs to put the entity they owned and controlled (Highland Capital Management, LP) into bankruptcy and undertake a series of actions designed to avoid appointment of a trustee, Pachulski then turned against those very same clients by representing the debtor entity in a series of actions adverse to them.

Defendant's blatant breach of its fiduciary and ethical duties caused Plaintiffs' significant harm. This lawsuit seeks redress for that damage.

9. The Parties' Initial Relationship. In 2019, Highland Capital Management, LP ("HCMLP") had a large arbitration award issued against it that had not yet been confirmed. Although HCMLP had assets in excess of the award, it did not have the immediate liquidity to pay the award if confirmed. Accordingly, HCMLP engaged Defendant to advise them regarding a potential restructuring to address the award. Both before and after HCMLP formally engaged Defendant, Plaintiffs Strand (HCMLP's general partner) and Dondero (Strand's sole owner) articulated to Defendant their objectives, regarding a potential bankruptcy—namely, that Strand (and Dondero) retain control over HCMLP and that HCMLP quickly emerge from the bankruptcy.

10. Defendant Undermines Bankruptcy. Defendant advised Dondero to have HCMLP file for bankruptcy in Delaware, assuring them that Delaware was a better venue; would help avoid the appointment of a trustee; and would be quick. Defendant further advised Dondero to appoint a CRO (Chief Restructuring Officer), which would also help avoid the appointment of a bankruptcy trustee and ensure Plaintiffs remained in control of HCMLP.

11. Defendant's advice quickly proved to be misguided. The Delaware court appointed an unsecured creditor's committee ("UCC"), most of the members of which had a long history of adverse litigation against Plaintiffs. The Delaware court then transferred the case to Texas. Meanwhile, Defendant's supposed "firewall" strategy of voluntarily appointing a CRO failed as the US Trustee filed a motion to appoint a bankruptcy trustee.

12. Defendant Advises Dondero and Strand to Give Up Rights in HCMLP. Facing a court likely to appoint a hostile trustee, Defendant advised a new legal strategy for HCMLP, Strand, and Dondero—each as seemingly aligned but separate clients with potential conflicts of interest between them. Defendant advised that Strand and Dondero propose a restructuring of HCMLP's corporate governance to the creditors whereby Dondero would relinquish control over HCMLP's general partner Strand (a non-debtor in the Bankruptcy) to an independent board of directors. In other words, the main goals of Pachulski's representation (e.g., a fast exit from bankruptcy with Plaintiffs still in control) were now imperiled. Facing little alternative due to Pachulski's flawed advice, Plaintiffs followed the recommendation and reached a settlement with the UCC wherein Plaintiffs gave up material rights (including control of Strand) by agreeing to an independent board in hopes of avoiding the appointment of a trustee over HCMLP.

13. Importantly, Defendant advised Plaintiffs to relinquish their own individual rights, not any rights held by HCMLP. The corporate governance of HCMLP was the subject of Pachulski's advice. Plaintiffs were the recipients of such advice. This advice clearly was in conflict between Plaintiffs and HCMLP—while HCMLP benefited from the advice, Plaintiffs followed such advice to their detriment. Nonetheless, Pachulski, the retained counsel for HCMLP, never advised Plaintiffs of the conflict of interest or the need for Plaintiffs to retain their own counsel to evaluate Pachulski's advice.

14. Pachulski Breaches its Fiduciary Duty by Turning on Plaintiffs. After HCMLP was under the control of an independent board of directors, HCMLP and Pachulski quickly became hostile towards Dondero and Strand. Pachulski breached its fiduciary duty to Plaintiffs by undertaking a series of adverse actions against them on behalf of HCMLP. Those adverse actions included (a) filing claims by HCMLP against Dondero; (b) advocating on behalf of a bankruptcy plan that wiped out Strand's interest in HCMLP and creating a litigation sub-trust that has since pursued claims against Strand and Dondero; and (c) seeking and obtaining a temporary restraining order against Dondero.

15. Despite this sudden direct adversity between its former clients (Strand and Dondero) and current client (HCMLP), Defendant continued to represent HCMLP throughout the Bankruptcy in breach of duties to its former clients. In the process, Defendant earned millions in legal fees. Meanwhile, Plaintiffs' interest in HCMLP was wiped out and Plaintiffs were left with nothing.

IV. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Relationship between Dondero, Strand, and HCMLP.

16. James Dondero co-founded HCMLP, a Delaware limited partnership, (together with its affiliates, "Highland") in 1993. Highland operated a diverse investment platform and served institutional and retail investors worldwide. Its investment capabilities included, for example, high yield credit, public equities, real estate, private equity and special situations, structured credit, and sector- and region- specific verticals built around specialized teams.

17. Prior to its bankruptcy filing, HCMLP—an SEC-registered global investment adviser––was one of the principal operating arms of Highland's business. HCMLP directly provided money management and advisory services for approximately $2.5 billion of assets under management and provided subadvisory services to an additional $15 billion of assets under management. During calendar year 2018, HCMLP's stand-alone revenue totaled approximately $50 million.

18. Plaintiff Strand was HCMLP's general partner ("GP") from the company's formation until the confirmation of the HCMLP bankruptcy plan in August 2021. As GP, Strand controlled HCMLP. Strand, in turn, is wholly owned by Dondero.

B. A Protracted Dispute Arises between HCMLP and Investors in one of its Funds, resulting in an Arbitration Award being issued against HCMLP.

19. HCMLP had a dispute with investors related to an investment fund formerly managed by HCMLP (known as the Highland Crusader Fund) which was formed between 2000 and 2002.

20. Specifically, in September and October 2008, as the financial markets in the United States began to fail, HCMLP was flooded with redemption requests from Crusader Fund investors, as the Crusader Fund's assets lost significant value.

21. On October 15, 2008, HCMLP placed the Crusader Fund in wind-down, thereby compulsorily redeeming the Crusader Fund's limited partnership interests. HCMLP also declared that it would liquidate the Crusader Fund's remaining assets and distribute the proceeds to investors.

22. However, disputes concerning the distribution of the assets arose among certain investors. After several years of negotiations, a Joint Plan of Distribution of the Crusader Fund (the "Crusader Plan") and the Scheme of Arrangement between Highland Crusader Fund and its Scheme Creditors (the "Crusader Scheme") were adopted in Bermuda and became effective in August 2011.

23. As part of the Crusader Plan and the Crusader Scheme, a committee called the Redeemer Committee was elected from among the Crusader Fund's investors to oversee HCMLP's management of the Crusader Fund.

24. Between October 2011 and January 2013, in accordance with the Crusader Plan and the Crusader Scheme, HCMLP distributed in excess of $1.2 billion to the Crusader Fund investors. HCMLP distributed a further $315.3 million through June 2016.

25. However, disputes subsequently arose between the Redeemer Committee and HCMLP. On July 5, 2016, the Redeemer Committee (a) terminated and replaced HCMLP as investment manager of the Crusader Fund, (b) commenced an arbitration against it (the "Arbitration"), and (c) commenced litigation in Delaware Chancery Court, inter alia, to obtain a status quo order in aid of the arbitration, which was subsequently entered.

26. In September 2018, HCMLP and the Redeemer Committee participated in a multi-day evidentiary hearing. In March 2019, following post-trial briefing, the arbitration panel issued its Award, as subsequently modified and finalized, finding in favor of the Redeemer Committee on a variety of claims and requiring HCMLP to pay a gross amount of $189 million, which would be partially netted against certain assets and deferred cash to be sent back to HCMLP. After offsets, HCMLP believed the Award would be roughly $110 million.

C. HCMLP Engages Pachulski to Advise the Company concerning a Potential Restructuring.

27. HCMLP possessed substantial assets at the time the Award was issued and believed its net worth was several hundred million dollars in excess of all of its liabilities, including the Award. However, HCMLP lacked the immediate liquidity to satisfy the Award.

28. Against this backdrop, on or about September 26, 2019, HCMLP engaged Pachulski to negotiate with the Redeemer Committee and to advise HCMLP of its options—including regarding the advisability of a potential restructuring.

29. Both before and after HCMLP formally engaged Pachulski, Dondero informed them of his and Strand's objectives for HCMLP—namely, that (a) Strand (and, thus, Dondero, as Strand's sole owner) remain in control of HCMLP and (b) HCMLP emerge from bankruptcy as quickly as possible, preferably within a few months of filing.

30. Dondero and Strand sought advice from Pachulski regarding the advisability of HCMLP filing for bankruptcy in light of those objectives, as well as regarding protections to put in place should HCMLP move forward with a bankruptcy filing.

31. Pachulski understood and accepted the engagement. Pachulski knew it was providing advice to Dondero and Strand about HCMLP and, as such, that Dondero and Strand were clients of Pachulski. Pachulski also knew and understood that Dondero and Strand were relying on the advice it was providing.

32. Pachulski knew that if HCMLP filed for bankruptcy, a substantial risk would arise that Strand and Dondero would lose control of HCMLP. For example, HCMLP's creditors might seek the appointment of a bankruptcy trustee. Pachulski knew that this risk was particularly acute, here, because of Dondero's acrimonious relationship with certain of HCMLP's creditors, including the Redeemer Committee and other creditors with whom HCMLP had engaged in acrimonious litigation prior thereto.

33. To address these concerns, Pachulski advised Plaintiffs to have HCMLP file for bankruptcy in Delaware. Pachulski further advised that any bankruptcy filing would be quick and that filing in Delaware would provide preferable protections consistent with Plaintiffs goals.

34. Pachulski also advised Plaintiffs cause HCMLP to engage a third-party Chief Restructuring Officer ("CRO") whose qualifications and independence could assuage concerns potential bankruptcy creditors might have over Strand and Dondero retaining control over HCMLP, and thus dissuade them from seeking the appointment of an independent trustee over the company.

35. Defendant failed to advise Dondero or Strand to retain independent counsel to advise them in relation to their goal of retaining control of HCMLP. Instead, Pachulski treated HCMLP and Plaintiffs as their collective clients in advising them on strategy.

36. Pachulski's advice was heeded, and on October 7, 2019, HCMLP engaged Bradley Sharp, Chief Executive Officer of Development Specialists, Inc. ("DSI")—a provider of management consulting and financial advisory services—as its CRO. Unlike the later-installed Independent Board, the CRO did not have the ability to supplant Plaintiffs' legal control of HCMLP.

D. HCMLP Files for Chapter 11 Bankruptcy and Obtains the Bankruptcy Court's Approval to retain Pachulski.

37. Based on Pachulski's advice, on October 16, 2019, HCMLP filed a voluntary petition for relief under chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware (the "Petition").[2]

38. After filing the Petition, HCMLP continued to operate and manage its business as a debtor in possession pursuant to sections 1107(a) and 1108 of the Bankruptcy Code.

[2] On December 4, 2019, the Delaware court granted a motion to transfer venue and the case was transferred to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas.

39. On October 29, 2019, HCMLP filed an application to retain Pachulski nunc pro tunc to the Petition date as its counsel in the bankruptcy proceeding.[3] (the "Retention Application").

40. The Retention Application was signed on behalf of HCMLP by Frank Waterhouse, Treasurer of Strand Advisors, Inc., as HCMLP's General Partner. Notably, therein, HCMLP stated that, "[t]o the best of [HCMLP's] knowledge…[Defendant] Pachulski has not represented [HCMLP], its creditors, equity security holders, or any other parties in interest…in any matter relating to the Debtor or its estate. See Retention Application at ¶11 (emphasis added).

41. As previously noted, however, prior to the bankruptcy filing, Dondero and Strand (who were parties in interest) sought and received legal advice from Pachulski related to their objectives, including their goal of retaining control over HCMLP during any bankruptcy.

42. Accordingly, on October 29, 2019, Defendant was—at the very least—aware of Dondero and Strand's objectives and on notice of the fact that Dondero and Strand believed that Pachulski was acting in furtherance of their interests.

43. Indeed, an attorney-client relationship had likely formed between Defendant, on the one hand, and Dondero and Strand by this point in time—notwithstanding the contrary position drafted by Pachulski on HCMLP's behalf. To the extent that an attorney-client relationship did not already exist at the time the Retention Application was filed, the parties' simultaneous and subsequent conduct confirms that one was formed shortly thereafter.

E. HCMLP Implements Pachulski's Advice to seek the Bankruptcy Court's Approval to Appoint a CRO.

44. On October 29, 2019, HCMLP also filed a motion to employ Bradley Sharp as its CRO nunc pro tunc as of the Petition Date (the "CRO Motion").

[3] See Debtor's Application Pursuant to Section 327(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, Rule 2014 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Local Rule 2014-1 for Authorization to Employ and Retain Pachulski Stang Ziehl & Jones LLP as Counsel for the Debtors and Debtors in Possession Nunc Pro Tunc to the Petition Date (Dkt. 70).

45. In the motion, it is expressly noted that:

> The Debtor has been involved in lengthy and acrimonious prepetition litigation with certain of its creditors. The Debtor recognizes that such creditors may question the Debtor's ability to act as an independent fiduciary for the benefit of this estate during the case. The Debtor also notes that its operations are complex, and its business involves the utilization of an interconnected network of subsidiaries, affiliates, and other related entities and managed funds. The Debtor acknowledges that its affiliate relationships and business structure may lead certain creditors and other parties in interest to question the appropriateness of various actions and transactions that the Debtor may enter into during the pendency of this case.[4]

46. The above statement tracks the rationale Pachulski had previously given for its recommendation that HCMLP retain a CRO—namely, that an acrimonious relationship existed between HCMLP and certain stakeholders and that an independent CRO would allay the concerns of those stakeholders regarding Strand and Dondero retaining control over HCMLP during the bankruptcy.

47. The CRO Motion was signed by Dondero in his capacity as President of Strand, GP of HCMLP. In sum, Strand and Dondero followed Pachulski's advice to employ a CRO with the understanding that it would stave off efforts by HCMLP's creditors to take control of HCMLP away from them.

F. Battle for Control of HCMLP.

48. On October 29, 2019, the United States Trustee appointed an Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the "UCC"). The creditors appointed to the UCC included the Redeemer Committee, UBS Securities LLC, and UBS AG London Branch (together, "UBS"), Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLP (together, "Acis") and Meta-e Discovery.

49. Unsurprisingly, notwithstanding HCMLP's retention of a CRO, the UCC, whose members included the Redeemer Committee as well as other entities with whom HCMLP (or its affiliates) had been involved in acrimonious pre-Petition litigation (UBS and Acis), was opposed to Strand and Dondero retaining control over HCMLP during the bankruptcy.

[4] See Motion of the Debtor Pursuant to 11 U.S.C. §§ 105(a) and 363(b) to Employ and Retain Development Specialists, Inc. to Provide a Chief Restructuring Officer, Additional Personnel, and Financial Advisory and Restructuring-Related Services, Nunc Pro Tunc as of the Petition Date (Dkt. 74) (emphasis added).

50. Thereafter, on November 12, 2019, the UCC filed an omnibus objection to various motions filed by HCMLP, including the CRO Motion and motions related to cash management and approval of protocols for "ordinary course" transactions.[5] Therein, the UCC expressed its concern with Dondero continuing to manage HCMLP during the bankruptcy.

51. On December 4, 2019—barely a month later—the Delaware Bankruptcy Court granted a creditor's motion to transfer venue from Delaware to Judge Jernigan in the Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas. Thus, Pachulski's strategy of filing in Delaware was quickly undone and Pachulski pivoted to a new plan – that Plaintiffs' surrender while Pachulski remained in place at HCMLP.

G. Pachulski Advises Plaintiffs to Surrender Control of HCMLP.

52. The day the court entered the venue order, Pachulski advised Dondero and Strand for the first time that they would have to make radical changes to HCMLP's corporate governance to avoid Judge Jernigan in Dallas from entering an order imposing a Chapter 11 Trustee. At this point, Pachulski first recommended that Dondero and Strand make an alternative proposal to the UCC. As part of Defendant's recommended proposal, Dondero would relinquish control over Strand (HCMLP's GP) and an independent board of directors would be appointed over Strand who would control HCMLP.

53. Pachulski advised that under this proposed governance structure, HCMLP would likely emerge from the bankruptcy more quickly than if an independent trustee were appointed over [5] See Omnibus Objection of the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors to the Debtor's (I) Motion for Final Order Authorizing Continuance of the Existing Cash Management System, (II) Motion to Employ and Retain Development Specialists, Inc. to Provide a Chief Restructuring Officer, and (III) Precautionary Motion for Approval of Protocols for "Ordinary Course" Transactions (Dkt. 130).

HCMLP and that an independent board would be more beneficial to Plaintiffs as equity holders of HCMLP and, in Dondero's case, as the president of affiliated entities relying on HCMLP for back- and front-office services.

54. Essentially, Defendant's advice was to propose a change in control over Strand (a non-debtor) and not HCMLP. While this contrary to their very goals that were part of the original engagement. Plaintiffs followed the recommendation, and they made a proposal to the UCC that included a change in control over HCMLP.

55. On December 6, 2019, a status conference was held before Judge Jernigan. Pachulski represented HCMLP at the status conference. However, neither Strand nor Dondero were represented by independent counsel even as their interests were being affected.

56. At the status conference, Pachulski as counsel for HCMLP apprised the Court of the status of negotiations with the UCC regarding HCMLP's governance, including that Plaintiffs had made a proposal to the UCC related to the same.

57. Specifically, counsel for HCMLP informed the Court that, per that proposal, Mr. Dondero would "resign from any and all positions of the debtor," would "use his authority over [Strand] to appoint an independent board that would be in charge with managing the debtor,"[6] and further informed the Court that Mr. Dondero had already signed documents "effectuating those management changes" which were being held Pachulski's possession and trust.[7]

H. Defendant advises Strand and Dondero to enter into the Governance Settlement.

58. In late December 2019, HCMLP and the UCC reached a compromise for the governance and operation of HCMLP during the bankruptcy (the "Governance Settlement"), as reflected in a motion for approval of settlement filed on December 27, 2019, and exhibits thereto (the "Settlement Motion").[8]

[6] See Dec. 6, 2019, Status Conference Tr. (Dkt. 207) at 13:4-11.

[7] Id. at 14:1-4.

59. As contemplated by the Governance Settlement, three independent directors were to be appointed over Strand (the "Independent Directors"). The Independent Directors would have the authority to act on HCMLP's behalf and to appoint an interim Chief Executive Officer ("CEO"), who would manage HCMLP's business. Id. at ¶1.

60. Predictably, the UCC rejected all three directors proposed by Plaintiffs. As a result, two of the Independent Directors, James Seery and John Dubel, were provided by the UCC prior to the filing of the Settlement Motion. The third had not yet been selected at that time but, under the terms of the Governance Settlement, was to be selected by or otherwise acceptable to the Committee.[9] Id.

61. As reflected in the Settlement Motion, at the time of filing thereof, the parties to the settlement anticipated the possibility, if not the likelihood, that conflict might arise between HCMLP (under the control of the Independent Directors) and Strand and Dondero.

62. Indeed, paragraph three of the motion reads:

> It bears emphasis that the Independent Directors will not be mere figureheads. The Debtor and the Committee envision that the Independent Directors will be actively involved and intimately familiar with all material aspects of the Debtor's business and restructuring efforts. Moreover, with guidance of the CRO and CEO (if appointed), the Independent Directors will endeavor to prevent any negative influence Mr. Dondero or any of his affiliates or agents may have on [HCMLP] or its affiliates. Further, as part of the Term Sheet, the Committee will be granted standing to pursue estate claims against Mr. Dondero and other former insiders of the Debtor who were not employed by the Debtor as of the execution of the Term Sheet. The Committee will also retain the right to move for a chapter 11 trustee.

Id. at ¶3 (emphasis added).

[8] See Motion of the Debtor for Approval of Settlement with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors Regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course (Dkt. 281).

[9] After the filing of the Settlement Motion, but before the Court approved the Governance Settlement, Honorable Russell E. Nelms was selected as the third independent trustee.

63. Pachulski knew at the time that the interests of HCMLP (under the control of the Independent Directors, as contemplated by the Governance Settlement) and Strand and Dondero might diverge,[10] but Pachulski took no actions to protect their clients Strand and Dondero.

64. Pachulski knew that Strand, as a non-debtor in the bankruptcy, was not subject to the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction. This fact is reflected on the face of the Settlement Motion, which states:

> With respect to the Independent Directors, they are being appointed to a new independent board of Strand, the Debtor's general partner, and Strand is not a debtor in this case or subject to this Court's jurisdiction.[11]

65. Nonetheless, Pachulski failed to advise Strand or Dondero to retain independent counsel in connection with the Governance Settlement. Even worse, Pachulski affirmatively advised Strand and Dondero to voluntarily enter into agreements that materially altered their rights in connection with the Governance Settlement.

66. Pachulski knew that the appointment of a trustee would likely ensure that their representation of HCMLP would end (as the trustee would hire new counsel). But if an independent board was appointed, Pachulski could likely stay on as counsel to HCMLP.

67. The Governance Settlement negotiated on behalf of HCMLP materially impacted Dondero and Strand's rights. For example, as part of the settlement, Strand agreed to modify its By-Laws to create a board of directors and to place restrictions on when Dondero, as the sole shareholder of Strand, could remove the directors,[12] and Dondero was required to resign as a director and officer of Strand.[13]

[10] Pachulski's signature block is on the Settlement Motion.

[11] See Id. at p.11, n.6.

[12] See Preliminary Term Sheet (Dkt. 281-1) at Exhibit D.

68. Indeed, Strand and Dondero's agreement to relinquish certain rights was a critical component of the Governance Settlement. This is reflected on the face of the Settlement Motion. For example, paragraph two of the motion states, in pertinent part:

> Pursuant to the Term Sheet, and effective upon entry of the Order, James Dondero will no longer be a director, officer, managing member, or employee of the Debtor or Strand and will have no authority, directly or indirectly, to act on the Debtor's behalf. Going forward, the Independent Directors, through Strand, will have sole and exclusive management and control of the Debtor.

69. Nonetheless, Pachulski advised Plaintiffs to agree to the Governance Agreement, claiming it was in their best interest. Pachulski never advised the Plaintiffs about any potential conflict of interest between HCMLP and the Plaintiffs as a result of the agreement.

I. Strand and Dondero follow Pachulski' Advice and Enter into the Governance Stipulation.

70. On January 9, 2020, as contemplated by the Governance Settlement, HCMLP, the UCC, Strand and Dondero entered into a stipulation in support of the Governance Motion.[14]

71. Therein, Strand and Dondero agreed to the following:

[14] See Stipulation in Support of Motion of the Debtor for Approval of Settlement with the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course (Dkt. 338).

Stipulation

10. In consideration for the Committee entering into the Term Sheet, Mr. Dondero, being the sole shareholder of Strand, agrees as follows:

a. not to transfer or assign his shares in Strand or exercise the voting power of such shares to remove any of the Independent Directors from Strand's Board or further change the authorized number of directors on the Board from three directors;

b. to exercise the voting power of his shares so as to cause each of the Independent Directors to be re-elected upon the expiration of each such person's term;

c. upon the death, disability, or resignation of any member of the Board, to exercise the voting power of his shares so as to cause the resulting vacancy to be filled by a successor that is both independent and (i) acceptable to Mr. Dondero and the Committee or (ii) selected by the remaining members of the Board; and

d. not take any action or exercise the voting power of his shares in Strand in any way that is inconsistent with the Term Sheet or any order of this Court approving the Term Sheet.

72. Notably, as shown above, the Stipulation materially altered Dondero's rights and obligations, not only with respect to HCMLP, but also as to Strand, a non-debtor who was not subject to the Court's jurisdiction. This is significant because, while the appointment of an independent trustee over HCMLP may have impacted Strand and Dondero's rights with respect to HCMLP, it would not have altered their rights unrelated to HCMLP.

73. Again, Pachulski did not advise Dondero or Strand to obtain independent counsel prior to executing the Stipulation on behalf of HCMLP. On information and belief, the Stipulation was drafted by Pachulski.

74. The fact that Dondero and Strand's agreement to enter into the Stipulation was voluntary on their part is expressly acknowledged in HCMLP's briefing in support of the Settlement Motion. For example, in a reply brief in support of the settlement, HCMLP noted the following:

> [T]he Debtor is not seeking authority from this Court to appoint the Independent Directors. Nor is the Debtor seeking this Court's authority, generally, to enter into the Governing Documents. Strand, as a non-debtor entity, is appointing the Independent Directors and executing the Governing Documents to effectuate such appointment of > its own volition consistent with Delaware corporate law and its governing documents.[15]

> Further, the Debtor recognizes that this Court would not have the requisite authority to limit Mr. Dondero's right as the sole stockholder of Strand to remove the Independent Directors or to take any other action that could neuter the settlement embodied in the Term Sheet. To address that issue, the written consent of the sole stockholder of Strand (including in the Governing Documents) contemplates the parties entering into a stipulation…[16]

75. The fact that Pachulski advised Strand and Dondero to voluntarily enter into the Stipulation in order to facilitate the Governance Settlement is particularly galling in light of the fact that, as part of the Governance Settlement, HCMLP granted the UCC "standing to pursue estate claims against Mr. Dondero and other former insiders of [HCMLP]."

76. In other words, Pachulski advised Strand and Dondero to voluntarily relinquish material rights so that HCMLP could push through a settlement with creditors who had a known antipathy towards Dondero, and, as part of that settlement, gave those creditors standing to sue Dondero. Dondero and Strand entered into this agreement with the understanding it was the best path offered to them by Pachulski as their counsel.

J. HCMLP, under Control of the Board, Quickly Becomes Hostile to Dondero and Strand.

77. On January 9, 2020, the bankruptcy court entered an order approving the Governance Settlement (the "Settlement Order").[17]

[16] Id. at ¶16.

[17] Order Approving Settlement with Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors regarding Governance of the Debtor and Procedures for Operations in the Ordinary Course (Dkt. 339).

78. As contemplated by the Governance Settlement, and reflected in the Settlement Order, Dondero was initially to remain an employee of HCMLP and retain his role as portfolio manager for HCMLP's funds.[18]

79. It was not long before the Independent Directors became hostile towards Strand and Dondero. On June 23, 2020, HCMLP filed a motion to retain James Seery (one of the Independent Directors) as Chief Executive Officer of HCMLP.[19] Since that time, HCMLP (under the control of Seery and the Independent Directors) has taken a host of actions adverse to Dondero and Strand.

80. For example, HCMLP took the following actions (among many others) that were directly adverse to Dondero and Strand:

- sought and obtained a temporary restraining order ("TRO") preventing Dondero from contacting HCMLP's employees and from interfering with the Independent Directors' management of HCMLP. HCMLP then successfully moved to have Dondero held in contempt for violating the TRO. Dondero was ordered to pay. $450,000 to compensate HCMLP for its legal fees incurred in pursuing the contempt order;

- filed multiple adversary proceedings against Dondero;

- advocated in favor of the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Plan"), which was confirmed by the Court on February 22, 2021. The Plan created a Litigation Sub-trust that charged the Litigation Trustee with pursuing Estate Claims. The Litigation Trustee, in turn, has asserted claims against both Strand and Dondero; and

- advocated in favor of the Plan in spite of the fact that the Plan called for the liquidation of HCMLP's assets, wiping out Strand's interest in HCMLP and Dondero's indirect equity interest in HCMLP.

[18] Id. at ¶8.

[19] See Debtor's Motion under Bankruptcy Code Sections 105(a) and 363(b) for Authorization to Retain James P. Seery, Jr., as Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer and Foreign Representative Nunc Pro Tunc to March 15, 2020 (Dkt. 774).

K. Pachulski Turns on their Former Clients.

81. Remarkably, Pachulski continued to represent HCMLP throughout the bankruptcy, and, indeed, represent HCMLP to this day. Thus, Pachulski helped HCMLP undertake many of the actions described above that were adverse to and detrimental to Plaintiffs.

82. This adverse representation occurred despite the fact that Pachulski advised Strand and Dondero to sign the agreements facilitating the very governance structure which has now resulted in HCMLP's direct adversity to Pachulski's former clients, Dondero and Strand.

83. Pachulski earned millions in fees from their engagement with HCMLP, which constitutes an improper benefit obtained in defiance of clear conflict of interest.

L. Tolling of Limitations and Discovery Rule.

84. Plaintiffs allege that the claim asserted herein (breach of fiduciary duty) is timely asserted because the wrongful conduct (Pachulski's adverse actions against its former clients) first occurred within four years of the date of filing.

85. In the alternative, Plaintiffs specifically plead that all limitations periods (i) have been tolled during the bankruptcy period due to the inability to assert certain claims; (ii) tolled during the applicable discovery period during which Plaintiffs could not, in the exercise of reasonable diligence, discover the true nature of Pachulski's wrongdoing and/or (iii) equitably tolled.

V. CLAIMS

COUNT ONE: BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY

86. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each and every allegation made in the previous paragraphs as if fully written herein.

87. A fiduciary relationship exists between Pachulski, on the one hand, and Strand and Dondero by virtue of the attorney-client relationship which arose from the parties' conduct, including, without limitation, through (a) Dondero and Strand seeking legal advice from Pachulski in relation to their objectives vis-à-vis the Bankruptcy; (b) Pachulski negotiating on behalf of Strand and Dondero with the Committee; and (c) Pachulski rendering legal advice to Dondero and Strand, including to enter into the Stipulation and Governance Settlement.

88. Pachulski owed its fiduciary duties to Plaintiffs, including, without limitation (i) its duty of loyalty to Plaintiffs by, without limitation, representing HCMLP in the Bankruptcy after it became directly adverse to Plaintiffs as detailed above; (ii) failing to provide advice so as to safeguard Plaintiffs' interests; and/or (iii) taking actions directly that promoted Pachulski' self-interest over Plaintiffs.

89. Defendant obtained an improper benefit by failing to disclose a conflict of interest as required by law. Defendant failed to disclose to Plaintiffs that there was a conflict of interest between Plaintiffs and HCMLP in entering into the settlement with the UCC that was memorialized in the Stipulation. Notwithstanding that Defendant knew or should have known about such conflict of interest, Defendant never advised Plaintiffs to retain their own counsel. Instead, Defendant recommended that the Plaintiffs enter into the Stipulation, which supposedly benefited HCMLP but indisputably harmed Plaintiffs.

90. These breaches of fiduciary duty allowed Pachulski to obtain an improper benefit. Defendant reaped millions in fees by taking positions adverse to its former clients.

91. At no time did Pachulski ever, as fiduciaries of Plaintiffs, ever advise Plaintiffs to get independent counsel to protect themselves.

92. Plaintiffs were harmed by Pachulski's breaches in an amount to be proven at trial.

PRAYER

WHEREFORE, PREMISES CONSIDERED, Plaintiff prays that the Court enter judgment on Plaintiffs' claims against Defendant:

1. Actual damages, including direct and consequential damages;

2. Disgorgement of fees by Defendant;

3. Pre- and post-judgment interest; and

4. All such other and further relief at law or in equity that the Court may deem just and proper.

John:

Before we file this motion for leave today, and for purpose of our certificate of conference, I just want to verify that you are opposed to the motion.

I also want to reiterate again that the timing of our filing is driven entirely by the potential statute of limitations issue. We can't risk waiving our clients' rights to pursue this claim, but I continue to believe it to be in everyone's best interest to avoid initiating the dispute, both for the preservation of the estate's resources and to reduce animosity. Even a short tolling would accomplish that purpose if you are willing to reconsider.

Subject: Anticipated Motion/Tolling Agreement

Hi John,

I hope you had a nice Thanksgiving. I'm writing because we are planning to file a motion for leave to file suit against Pachulski pursuant to the Bankruptcy Court's channeling injunction. Jeff Tillotson, copied, has been hired to represent Strand Advisors, Inc. and Jim Dondero in that potential lawsuit, which alleges a single claim for breach of fiduciary duty. For your convenience, I am attaching a draft of the complaint.

For many reasons, including our desire to minimize disputes and additional expense to the estate, I would prefer not to file the motion for leave at this time, but we have reason to believe that we are bumping up against a relevant statute of limitations period and need to act to preserve our clients' rights. As an alternative to pursuing the motion (and lawsuit) at this time, I would propose that the parties enter into a tolling agreement so that we can all avoid the burden and cost of these proceedings. To that end, also attached is a draft tolling agreement for your review and feedback.

Obviously, I am happy to discuss any of the above at your convenience. We intend to file the motion for leave on Friday if we cannot agree on tolling.

Regards,

Amy

ON PETITION FOR REHEARING

STUART KYLE DUNCAN, Circuit Judge:

The petition for panel rehearing is GRANTED. We withdraw our previous opinion, reported at 2022 WL 3571094, and substitute the following:

Highland Capital Management, L.P., a Dallas-based investment firm, managed billion-dollar, publicly traded investment portfolios for nearly three decades. By 2019, however, myriad unpaid judgments and liabilities forced Highland Capital to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. This provoked a nasty breakup between Highland Capital and its co-founder James Dondero. Under those trying circumstances, the bankruptcy court successfully mediated with the largest creditors and ultimately confirmed a reorganization plan amenable to most of the remaining creditors.

Dondero and other creditors unsuccessfully objected to the confirmation order and then sought review in this court. In turn, Highland Capital moved to dismiss their appeal as equitably moot. First, we hold that equitable mootness does not bar our review of any claim. Second, we affirm the confirmation order in large part. We reverse only insofar as the plan exculpates certain non-debtors in violation of 11 U.S.C. § 524(e), strike those few parties from the plan's exculpation, and affirm on all remaining grounds.

I. BACKGROUND

A. Parties

In 1993, Mark Okada and appellant James Dondero co-founded Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland Capital") in Dallas. Highland Capital managed portfolios and assets for other investment advisers and funds through a complex of entities under the Highland umbrella. Highland Capital's ownership-interest holders included Hunter Mountain Investment Trust (99.5%); appellant The Dugaboy Investment

Trust, Dondero's family trust (0.1866%);[1] Okada, personally and through trusts (0.0627%); and Strand Advisors, Inc. (0.25%), the only general partner, which Dondero wholly owned.

Dondero also manages two of Highland Capital's clients—appellants Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. (the "Advisors"). Both the Advisors and Highland Capital serviced and advised billion-dollar, publicly traded investment funds for appellants Highland Income Fund, NexPoint Strategic Opportunities Fund, Highland Global Allocation Fund, and NexPoint Capital, Inc. (collectively, the "Funds"), among others. For example, on behalf of the Funds, Highland Capital managed certain investment vehicles known as collateral loan obligations ("CLOs") under individualized servicing agreements.

B. Bankruptcy Proceedings

Strapped with a series of unpaid judgments, Highland Capital filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in the District of Delaware in October 2019. The creditors included Highland Capital's interest holders, business affiliates, contractors, former partners, employees, defrauded investors, and unpaid law firms. Among those creditors, the Office of the United States Trustee appointed a four-member Unsecured Creditors' Committee (the "Committee").[2] See 11 U.S.C. § 1102(a)(1), (b)(1). Throughout the

[1] The Dugaboy Investment Trust appeals alongside Dondero's other family trust Get Good Trust (collectively, the "Trusts").

[2] First, Redeemer Committee of the Highland Crusader Fund had obtained a $191 million arbitration award after a decade of litigation against Highland Capital. Second, Acis Capital Management, L.P. and Acis Capital Management GP, LLC had sued Highland Capital after facing an adverse $8 million arbitration award, arising in part from its now-extinguished affiliation. Third, UBS Securities LLC and UBS AG London Branch had received a $1 billion judgment against Highland Capital following a 2019 bench trial in New bankruptcy proceedings, the Committee investigated Highland Capital's past and current operations, oversaw its continuing operations, and negotiated the reorganization plan. See id. § 1103(c). Upon the Committee's request, the court transferred the case to the Northern District of Texas in December 2019.

Highland Capital's reorganization did not proceed under the governance of a traditional Chapter 11 trustee. Instead, the Committee reached a corporate governance settlement agreement to displace Dondero, which the bankruptcy court approved in January 2020. Under the agreed order, Dondero stepped down as director and officer of Highland Capital and Strand to be an unpaid portfolio manager and "agreed not to cause any Related Entity . . . to terminate any agreements" with Highland Capital. The Committee selected a board of three independent directors to act as a quasi-trustee and to govern Strand and Highland Capital: James Seery Jr., John Dubel, and retired Bankruptcy Judge Russell Nelms (collectively, the "Independent Directors"). The order also barred any claim against the Independent Directors in their official roles without the bankruptcy court's authorizing the claim as a "colorable claim[] of willful misconduct or gross negligence." Six months later, at the behest of the creditors, the bankruptcy court appointed Seery as Highland Capital's Chief Executive Officer, Chief Restructuring Officer, and Foreign Representative. The order contained an identical bar on claims against Seery acting in these roles. Neither order was appealed.

Throughout summer 2020, Dondero proposed several reorganization plans, each opposed by the Committee and the Independent Directors.

York. Fourth, discovery vendor Meta-E Discovery had $779,000 in unpaid invoices. The Committee members are not parties on appeal.

Unpersuaded by Dondero, the Committee and Independent Directors negotiated their own plan. When Dondero's plans failed, he and other creditors began to frustrate the proceedings by objecting to settlements, appealing orders, seeking writs of mandamus, interfering with Highland Capital's management, threatening employees, and canceling trades between Highland Capital and its clients. See Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Dondero (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), Ch. 11 Case No. 19-34054-SGJ11, Adv. No. 20-03190-SGJ11, 2021 WL 2326350, at *1, *26 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. June 7, 2021) (holding Dondero in civil contempt, sanctioning him $100,000, and comparing this case to a "nasty divorce"). In Seery's words, Dondero wanted to "burn the place down" because he did not get his way. The Independent Directors insisted Dondero resign from Highland Capital, which he did in October 2020.

Highland Capital, meanwhile, proceeded toward confirmation of its reorganization plan—the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (the "Plan"). In August 2020, the Independent Directors filed the Plan and an accompanying disclosure statement with the support of the Committee. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1121, 1125. The bankruptcy court approved the statement as well as proposed notice and voting procedures for creditors, teeing up confirmation. Leading up to the confirmation hearing, the Advisors and the Funds asked the court to bar Highland Capital from trading or disposing of CLO assets pending confirmation. The bankruptcy court denied the request, and Highland Capital declined to voluntarily abstain and continued to manage the CLO assets.

Before confirmation, Dondero and other creditors (including several non-appellants) filed over a dozen objections to the Plan. Like Dondero, the United States Trustee primarily objected to the Plan's exculpation of certain non-debtors as unlawful. Highland Capital voluntarily modified the Plan to resolve six such objections. The Plan proposed to create eleven classes of creditors and equity holders and three classes of administrative claimants. See 11 U.S.C. § 1122. Of the voting-eligible classes, classes 2, 7, and 9 voted to accept the Plan while classes 8, 10, and 11 voted to reject it.

C. Reorganization Plan

The Plan works like this: It dissolves the Committee, and creates four entities—the Claimant Trust, the Reorganized Debtor, HCMLP GP LLC,[3] and the Litigation Sub-Trust. Administered by its trustee Seery, the Claimant Trust "wind[s]-down" Highland Capital's estate over approximately three years by liquidating its assets and issuing distributions to class-8 and -9 claimants as trust beneficiaries. Highland Capital vests its ongoing servicing agreements with the Reorganized Debtor, which "among other things" continues to manage the CLOs and other investment portfolios. The Reorganized Debtor's only general partner is HCMLP GP LLC. And the Litigation Sub-Trust resolves pending claims against Highland Capital under the direction of its trustee Marc Kirschner.

The whole operation is overseen by a Claimant Trust Oversight Board (the "Oversight Board") comprised of four creditor representatives and one restructuring advisor. The Claimant Trust wholly owns the limited partnership interests in the Reorganized Debtor, HCMLP GP LLC, and the Litigation Sub-Trust. The Claimant Trust (and its interests) will dissolve either at the soonest of three years after the effective date (August 2024) or (1) when it is unlikely to obtain additional proceeds to justify further action, (2) all claims and objections are resolved, (3) all distributions are made, and (4) the Reorganized Debtor is dissolved.

[3] The Plan calls this entity "New GP LLC," but according to the motion to dismiss as equitably moot, the new general partner was later named HCMLP GP LLC. For the sake of clarity, we use HCMLP GP LLC.

Anticipating Dondero's continued litigiousness, the Plan shields Highland Capital and bankruptcy participants from lawsuits through an exculpation provision, which is enforced by an injunction and a gatekeeper provision (collectively, "protection provisions"). The protection provisions extend to nearly all bankruptcy participants: Highland Capital and its employees and CEO; Strand; the Independent Directors; the Committee; the successor entities and Oversight Board; professionals retained in this case; and all "Related Persons"[4] (collectively, "protected parties").[5]

The Plan exculpates the protected parties from claims based on any conduct "in connection with or arising out of" (1) the filing and administration of the case, (2) the negotiation and solicitation of votes preceding the Plan, (3) the consummation, implementation, and funding of the Plan, (4) the offer, issuance, and distribution of securities under the Plan before or after the filing of the bankruptcy, and (5) any related negotiations, transactions, and documentation. But it excludes "acts or omissions that constitute bad faith, fraud, gross negligence, criminal misconduct, or willful misconduct" and actions by Strand and its employees predating the appointment of the Independent Directors.

[4] The Plan generously defines "Related Persons" to include all former, present, and future officers, directors, employees, managers, members, financial advisors, attorneys, accountants, investment bankers, consultants, professionals, advisors, shareholders, principals, partners, heirs, agents, other representatives, subsidiaries, divisions, and managing companies.

[5] The Plan expressly excludes from the protections Dondero and Okada; NexPoint Advisors, L.P.; Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P; their subsidiaries, managed entities, managed entities, and members; and the Dugaboy Investment Trust and its trustees, among others.

Plan" or filing any claim related to the Plan or proceeding. Should a party seek to bring a claim against any of the protected parties, it must go to the bankruptcy court to "first determin[e], after notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of any kind." Only then may the bankruptcy court "specifically authoriz[e]" the party to bring the claim. The Plan reserves for the bankruptcy court the "sole and exclusive jurisdiction to determine whether a claim or cause of action is colorable" and then to adjudicate the claim if the court has jurisdiction over the merits.

D. Confirmation Order

At a February 2021 hearing, the bankruptcy court confirmed the Plan from the bench over several remaining objections. See FED R. BANKR. P. 3017–18; 11 U.S.C. §§ 1126, 1128, 1129. In its later-written decision, the bankruptcy court observed that Highland Capital's bankruptcy was "not a garden variety chapter 11 case." The type of debtor, the reason for the bankruptcy filing, the kinds of creditor claims, the corporate governance structure, the unusual success of the mediation efforts, and the small economic interests of the current objectors all make this case unique.

The confirmation order criticized Dondero's behavior before and during the bankruptcy proceedings. The court could not "help but wonder" if Highland Capital's deficit "was necessitated because of enormous litigation fees and expenses incurred" due to Highland Capital's "culture of litigation." Recounting Highland Capital's litigation history, it deduced that Dondero is a "serial litigator." It reasoned that, while "Dondero wants his company back," this "is not a good faith basis to lob objections to the Plan." It attributed Dondero's bad faith to the Advisors, the Trusts, and the Funds, given the "remoteness of their economic interests." For example, the bankruptcy court "was not convinced of the[] [Funds'] independence" from Dondero because the Funds' board members did not testify and had "engaged with the Highland complex for many years." And so the bankruptcy court "consider[ed] them all to be marching pursuant to the orders of Mr. Dondero." The court, meanwhile, applauded the members of the Committee for their "wills of steel" for fighting "hard before and during this Chapter 11 Case" and "represent[ing] their constituency . . . extremely well."

On the merits of the Plan, the bankruptcy court again approved the Plan's voting and confirmation procedures as well as the fairness of the Plan's classes. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 1122, 1125(a)–(c). The court held the Plan complied with the statutory requirements for confirmation. See id. §§ 1123(a)(1)–(7), 1129(a)(1)–(7), (9)–(13). Because classes 8, 10, and 11 had voted to reject the Plan, it was confirmable only by cramdown.[6] See id. § 1129(b). The bankruptcy court found that the Plan treated the dissenting classes fairly and equitably and satisfied the absolute-priority rule, so the Plan was confirmable. See id. § 1129(b)(2)(B)–(C). The court also concluded that the protection provisions were fair, equitable, and reasonable, as well as "integral elements" of the Plan under the circumstances, and were within both the court's jurisdiction and authority. The court confirmed the Plan as proposed and discharged Highland Capital's debts. Id. § 1141(d)(1). After confirmation and satisfaction of several conditions precedent, the Plan took effect August 11, 2021.

[6] The bankruptcy court must proceed by nonconsensual confirmation, or "cramdown," 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b), when a class of unsecured creditors rejects a Chapter 11 reorganization plan, id. § 1129(a)(8), but at least one impaired class accepts it, id. § 1129(a)(10). A cramdown requires that the plan be "fair and equitable" to dissenting classes and satisfy the absolute priority rule—that is, dissenting classes are paid in full before any junior class can retain any property. Id. § 1129(b)(2)(B); see Bank of Am. Nat'l Tr. & Sav. Ass'n v. 203 N. LaSalle St. P'ship, 526 U.S. 434, 441–42 (1999).

E. The Appeal

Dondero, the Advisors, the Funds, and the Trusts (collectively, "Appellants") timely appealed, objecting to the Plan's legality and some of the bankruptcy court's factual findings.[7] Together with Highland Capital, Appellants moved to directly appeal the confirmation order to this court, which the bankruptcy court granted. See 28 U.S.C. § 158(d). A motions panel certified and consolidated the direct appeals. See ibid. Both the bankruptcy court and the motions panel declined to stay the Plan's confirmation pending appeal. Given the Plan's substantial consummation since its confirmation, Highland Capital moved to dismiss the appeal as equitably moot, a motion the panel ordered carried with the case.

* * *

We first consider equitable mootness and decline to invoke it here. We then turn to the merits, conclude the Plan exculpates certain non-debtors beyond the bankruptcy court's authority, and affirm in all other respects.

II. Standard of Review

A confirmation order is an appealable final order, over which we have jurisdiction. Bullard v. Blue Hills Bank, 575 U.S. 496, 502 (2015); see 28 U.S.C. §§ 158(d), 1291. This court reviews a bankruptcy court's factual findings for clear error and legal conclusions de novo. Evolve Fed. Credit Union v. Barragan-Flores (In re Barragan-Flores), 984 F.3d 471, 473 (5th Cir. 2021) (citation omitted).

[7] The Trusts adopt the Funds' and the Advisors' briefs in full, and Dondero adopts the Funds' brief in full and the Advisors' brief in part. Fed. R. App. P. 28(i).

III. Equitable Mootness

Highland Capital moved to dismiss this appeal as equitably moot. It argues we should abstain from appellate review because clawing back the implemented Plan "would generate untold chaos." We disagree and deny the motion.

The judge-made doctrine of equitable mootness allows appellate courts to abstain from reviewing bankruptcy orders confirming "complex plans whose implementation has substantial secondary effects." New Indus., Inc. v. Byman (In re Sneed Shipbuilding, Inc.), 916 F.3d 405, 409 (5th Cir. 2019) (citing In re Trib. Media Co., 799 F.3d 272, 274, 281 (3d Cir. 2015)). It seeks to balance "the equitable considerations of finality and good faith reliance on a judgment" and "the right of a party to seek review of a bankruptcy order adversely affecting him." In re Manges, 29 F.3d 1034, 1039 (5th Cir. 1994) (quoting First Union Real Estate Equity & Mortg. Inv. v. Club Assocs. (In re Club Assocs.), 956 F.3d 1065, 1069 (11th Cir. 1992)); see In re Hilal, 534 F.3d 498, 500 (5th Cir. 2008); see also 7 Collier on Bankruptcy ¶ 1129.09 (16th ed.), LexisNexis (database updated June 2022) (observing "the equitable mootness doctrine is embraced in every circuit").[8]

This court uses equitable mootness as a "scalpel rather than an axe," applying it claim-by-claim, instead of appeal-by-appeal. In re Pac. Lumber

[8] The doctrine's atextual balancing act has been criticized. See In re Pac. Lumber Co., 584 F.3d 229, 240 (5th Cir. 2009) ("Despite its apparent virtues, equitable mootness is a judicial anomaly."); In re One2One Commc'ns, LLC, 805 F.3d 428, 438–54 (3rd Cir. 2015) (Krause, J., concurring); In re UNR Indus., Inc., 20 F.3d 766, 769 (7th Cir. 1994) (banishing the term "equitable mootness" as a misnomer); In re Cont'l Airlines, 91 F.3d 553, 569 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (Alito, J., dissenting); see also Bruce A. Markell, The Needs of the Many: Equitable Mootness' Pernicious Effects, 93 Am. Bankr. L.J. 377, 393–96 (2019) (addressing the varying applications between circuits). But see In re Trib. Media, 799 F.3d at 287–88 (Ambro, J., concurring) (highlighting some benefits of the equitable mootness doctrine).

Co.(Pacific Lumber), 584 F.3d 229, 240–41 (5th Cir. 2009). For each claim, we analyze three factors: "(i) whether a stay has been obtained, (ii) whether the plan has been 'substantially consummated,' and (iii) whether the relief requested would affect either the rights of parties not before the court or the success of the plan." In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1039 (citing In re Block Shim Dev. Co., 939 F.2d 289, 291 (5th Cir. 1991); and Cleveland, Barrios, Kingsdorf & Casteix v. Thibaut, 166 B.R. 281, 286 (E.D. La. 1994)); see also, e.g., In re Blast Energy Servs., 593 F.3d 418, 424–25 (5th Cir. 2010); In re Ultra Petroleum Corp., No. 21-20049, 2022 WL 989389, at *5 (5th Cir. Apr. 1, 2022). No one factor is dispositive. See In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1039.

Here, the bankruptcy court and this court declined to stay the Plan pending appeal, and it took effect August 11, 2021. Given the months of progress, no party meaningfully argues the Plan has not been substantially consummated.[9] See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 242 (observing "consummation includes transferring all or substantially all of the property covered by the plan, the assumption of business by the debtors' successors, and the commencement of plan distributions" (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1141; and In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1041 n.10)). But that alone does not trigger equitable mootness. See In re SCOPAC, 624 F.3d 274, 281–82 (5th Cir. 2010). Instead, for each claim, the inquiry turns on whether the court can craft relief for that claim that would not have significant adverse consequences to the reorganization. Highland Capital highlights four possible disruptions: (1) the unraveling of the Claimant Trust and its entities, (2) the expense of disgorging disbursements, (3) the threat of defaulting on exit-financing loans, and (4) the exposure to vexatious litigation.

Each party first suggests its own all-or-nothing equitable mootness applications. To Highland Capital, Appellants' broad requested remedy with only a minor economic stake demands mooting the entire appeal. To Appellants, the type of reorganization plan categorially bars equitable mootness, or, alternatively, Highland Capital's joining the motion to certify the appeal estops it from asserting equitable mootness. These arguments are unpersuasive and foreclosed by Pacific Lumber.

First, Highland Capital contends the entire appeal is equitably moot because Appellants, with only a minor economic stake and questionable good faith, "seek[] nothing less than a complete unravelling of the confirmed Plan." It claims the court cannot "surgically excise[]" certain provisions, as the Funds request, because the Bankruptcy Code prohibits "modifications to confirmed plans after substantial consummation." See 11 U.S.C. § 1127(b). Not so.

"Although the Bankruptcy Code . . . restricts post-confirmation plan modifications, it does not expressly limit appellate review of plan confirmation orders." Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 240 (footnote omitted) (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1127). This court may fashion "fractional relief" to minimize an appellate disturbance's effect on the rights of third parties. In re Tex. Grand Prairie Hotel Realty, L.L.C., 710 F.3d 324, 328 (5th Cir. 2013) (denying dismissal on equitable mootness grounds because the court "could grant partial relief . . . without disturbing the reorganization"); cf. In re Cont'l Airlines, 91 F.3d 553, 571–72 (3d Cir. 1996) (en banc) (Alito, J., dissenting) (observing "a remedy could be fashioned in the present case to ensure that the [debtor's] reorganization is not undermined"). In short, Highland Capital's speculations are farfetched, as the court may fashion the remedy it sees fit without upsetting the reorganization.

Second, Appellants contend that equitable mootness cannot apply—full-stop—because this appeal concerns a liquidation plan, not a reorganization plan. We reject that premise. See infra Part IV.A. Even if it were correct, however, this court has conducted the equitable-mootness inquiry for a Chapter 11 liquidation plan in the past. See In re Superior Offshore Int'l, Inc., 591 F.3d 350, 353–54 (5th Cir. 2009). And other circuits have squarely rejected the categorical bar proposed by Appellants. See In re Abengoa Bioenergy Biomass of Kan., LLC, 958 F.3d 949, 956–57 (10th Cir. 2020); In re BGI, Inc., 772 F.3d 102, 107–09 (2d Cir. 2014). We do the same.

Finally, Appellants assert that because Highland Capital and NexPoint Advisors, L.P. jointly moved to certify the appeal, it should be estopped from arguing the appeal is equitably moot. They cite no legal support for that approach. We decline to adopt it.

Instead, we proceed with a claim-by-claim analysis, as our precedent requires. Highland Capital suggests only two claims are equitably moot: (1) the protection-provisions challenge and (2) the absolute-priority-rule challenge. Neither provides a basis for equitable mootness.

For the protection provisions, Highland Capital anticipates that, without the provisions, its officers, employees, trustees, and Oversight Board members would all resign rather than be exposed to Dondero-initiated litigation. Those resignations would disrupt the Reorganized Debtor's operation, "significant[ly] deteriorat[ing] asset values due to uncertainty." Appellants disagree, offering several instances when this court has reviewed release, exculpation, and injunction provisions over calls for equitable mootness. See, e.g., In re Hilal, 534 F.3d at 501; Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 252; In re Thru Inc., 782 F. App'x 339, 341 (5th Cir. 2019) (per curiam). In response, Highland Capital distinguishes this case because the provisions are "integral to the consummated plans." See In re Charter Commc'ns, Inc., 691 F.3d 476, 486 (2d Cir. 2012). We again reject that premise. See infra Part IV.E.1. In any event, Appellants have the better argument.

We have before explained that "equity strongly supports appellate review of issues consequential to the integrity and transparency of the Chapter 11 process." In re Hilal, 534 F.3d 498, 500 (5th Cir. 2008). That is so because "the goal of finality sought in equitable mootness analysis does not outweigh a court's duty to protect the integrity of the process." Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 252. As in Pacific Lumber, the legality of a reorganization plan's non-consensual non-debtor release is consequential to the Chapter 11 process and so should not escape appellate review in the name of equity. Ibid. The same is true here. Equitable mootness does not bar our review of the protection provisions.

For the absolute-priority-rule challenge,[10] Highland Capital contends our review requires us to "rejigger class recoveries." Pacific Lumber is again instructive. There, the court declined to apply equitable mootness to a secured creditor's absolute-priority-rule challenge, as no other panel had extended the doctrine so far. Id. at 243. Similarly, Highland Capital fails to identify a single case in which this court has declined review of the treatment of a class of creditor's claims resulting from a cramdown. See id. at 252. Regardless, Appellants challenge the distributions to classes 8, 10, and 11. According to Highland Capital's own declaration, "Class 8 General Unsecured Claims have received their Claimant Trust Interests." But there is no evidence that classes 10 or 11 have received any distributions. Contra Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 251 (holding certain claims equitably moot where "the smaller unsecured creditors" had already "received payment for their claims"). As a result, the relief requested would not affect third parties or the success of the Plan. See In re Manges, 29 F.3d at 1039. The doctrine of equitable mootness does not bar our review of the cramdown and treatment of class-8 creditors.

We DENY Highland Capital's motion to dismiss the appeal as equitably moot.

IV. Discussion

As to the merits, Appellants fire a bankruptcy-law blunderbuss. They contest the Plan's classification as a reorganization plan, the Plan's satisfaction of the absolute priority rule, the Plan's confirmation despite Highland Capital's noncompliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3, and the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the court's factual finding that the Funds are "owned/controlled" by Dondero. For each, we disagree and affirm. We do, however, agree with Appellants that the bankruptcy court exceeded its statutory authority under § 524(e) by exculpating certain non-debtors, and so we reverse and vacate the Plan only to that extent.

A. Discharge of Debt

We begin with the Plan's classification as a reorganization plan, allowing for automatic discharge of the debts. The confirmation of a Chapter 11 restructuring plan "discharges the debtor from any [pre-confirmation] debt" unless, under the plan, the debtor liquidates its assets, stops "engag[ing] in [its] business after consummation of the plan," and would be denied discharge in a Chapter 7 case. 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1), (3); see In re Sullivan, No. 99-11107, 2000 WL 1597984, at *2 (5th Cir. Sept. 26, 2000) (per curiam). The bankruptcy court concluded Highland Capital continued to engage in business after plan consummation, so its debts are automatically discharged. The Trusts call foul because, in their view, Highland Capital's "wind down" of its portfolio management is not a continuation of its business. We disagree.

Whether a corporate debtor "engages in business" is "relatively straightforward." Um v. Spokane Rock I, LLC, 904 F.3d 815, 819 (9th Cir. 2018) (contrasting the more complex question for individual debtors); see Grausz v. Sampson (In re Grausz), 63 F. App'x 647, 650 (4th Cir. 2003) (per curiam) (same). That is, "a business entity will not engage in business post-bankruptcy when its assets are liquidated and the entity is dissolved." Um, 904 F.3d at 819 (collecting cases).[11] But even a temporary continuation of business after a plan's confirmation is sufficient to discharge a Chapter 11 debtor's debt. See In re T-H New Orleans Ltd. P'ship, 116 F.3d 790, 804 n.15 (5th Cir. 1997) (recognizing a debtor's "conducting business for two years following Plan confirmation satisfies § 1141(d)(3)(B)" (citation omitted)). That is the case here.

[11] See, e.g., In re W. Asbestos Co., 313 B.R. 832, 853 (Bankr. N.D. Cal. 2003) (holding corporate debtor was not engaging in business by merely having directors and officers, rights under an insurance policy, and claims against it); In re Wood Fam. Ints., Ltd., 135 B.R. 407, 410 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1989) (holding corporate debtor was not engaging in business when the plan called for liquidation and discontinuation of its business upon confirmation).

By the plain terms of the Plan, Highland Capital has and will continue its business as the Reorganized Debtor for several years. Indeed, much of this appeal concerns objections to Highland Capital's "continu[ing] to manage the assets of others." Because the Plan contemplates Highland Capital "engag[ing] in business after consummation," 11 U.S.C. § 1141(d)(1), the bankruptcy court correctly held Highland Capital was eligible for automatic discharge of its debts.[12]

B. Absolute Priority Rule

Next, we consider the Plan's compliance with the absolute-priority rule. When assessing whether a plan is "fair and equitable" in a cramdown scenario, courts must invoke the absolute-priority rule. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(1); see 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1129.04. Under that rule, if a class of unsecured claimants rejects a plan, the plan must provide that those claimants be paid in full on the effective date or any junior interest "will not receive or retain under the plan . . . any property." 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B).[13]

Because class-8 claimants voted against the Plan, the bankruptcy court proceeded by nonconsensual confirmation. The court concluded the Plan was fair and equitable to class 8 and its distributions were in line with the absolute-priority rule. 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B). The Advisors claim the Plan violates the absolute priority rule by giving class-10 and -11 claimants a [12] For the same reasons, we reject the Trusts' follow-on argument extending the same logic to the protection provisions.

[13] See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 244 (noting the rule "enforces a strict hierarchy of [creditor classes'] rights defined by state and federal law" to protect dissenting creditor classes); see also In re Geneva Steel Co., 281 F.3d 1173, 1180 n.4 (10th Cir. 2002) ("[U]nsecured creditors stand ahead of investors in the receiving line and their claims must be satisfied before any investment loss is compensated." (citations omitted)).

"Contingent Claimant Trust Interest" without fully satisfying class-8 claimants. We agree the absolute-priority rule applies, and the Plan plainly satisfies it.

The Plan proposed to pay 71% of class-8 creditors' claims with pro rata distributions of interest generated by the Claimant Trust and then pro rata distributions from liquidated Claimant Trust assets. Classes 10 and 11 received a pro rata share of "Contingent Claimant Trust Interests," defined as a Claimant Trust Interest vesting only when the Claimant Trustee certifies that all class-8 claimants have been paid indefeasibly in full and all disputed claims in class 8 have been resolved. Voilà: no interest junior to class 8 will receive any property until class-8 claimants are paid.

But the Advisors point to Highland Capital's testimony and briefs to suggest the Contingent Claimant Trust Interests (received by classes 10 and 11) are property in some sense because they have value. That argument is specious. Of course, the Contingent Claimant Trust Interests have some small probability of vesting in the future and, thus, has some de minimis present value. See Norwest Bank Worthington v. Ahlers, 485 U.S. 197, 207-08 (1988) (holding a junior creditor's receipt of a presently valueless equity interest is receipt of property). But the absolute-priority rule has never required us to bar junior creditors from ever receiving property. By the Plan's terms, no trust property vests with class-10 or -11 claimants "unless and until" class-8 claims "have been paid indefeasibly in full." See 11 U.S.C. § 1129(b)(2)(B)(ii). That plainly comports with the absolute-priority rule.

C. Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3

We turn to whether the failure to comply with Bankruptcy Rule of Procedure 2015.3 bars the Plan's confirmation. The Independent Directors failed to file periodic financial reports per Federal Rule of Bankruptcy Procedure 2015.3(a) about entities "in which the [Highland Capital] estate holds a substantial or controlling interest." The Advisors claim the failure dooms the Plan's confirmation because the Plan proponent failed to comply "with the applicable provisions of this title." 11 U.S.C. § 1129(a)(2). We disagree.

Rule 2015.3 cannot be an applicable provision of Title 11 because the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure are not provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. See Bonner v. Adams (In re Adams), 734 F.2d 1094, 1101 (5th Cir. 1984) ("The Bankruptcy Rules Enabling Act, 28 U.S.C. § 2075, provides that the Supreme Court may prescribe 'by general rules, the forms of process, writs, pleadings, and motions, and the practice and procedure' in bankruptcy courts."); cf. In re Mandel, No. 20-40026, 2021 WL 3642331, at *6 n.7 (5th Cir. Aug. 17, 2021) (per curiam) (noting "Rule 2015.3 implements section 419 of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act of 2005," which amended 28 U.S.C. § 2073). The Advisors' attempt to tether the rule to the bankruptcy trustee's general duties lacks any legal basis. See 11 U.S.C. §§ 704(a)(8), 1106(a)(1), 1107(a). The bankruptcy court, therefore, correctly overruled the Advisors' objection.

D. Factual Findings

One factual finding is in dispute, but we see no clear error. The bankruptcy court found that, despite their purported independence, the Funds are entities "owned and/or controlled by [Dondero]." The Funds ask the court to vacate the factual finding because it threatens the Funds' compliance with federal law and damages their reputations and values. According to the Funds, the characterization is unfair, as they are not litigious like Dondero and are completely independent from him. Highland Capital maintains Dondero has sole discretion over the Funds as their portfolio manager and through his control of the Advisors, so the finding is supported by the record.

"Clear error is a formidable standard: this court disturbs factual findings only if left with a firm and definite conviction that the bankruptcy court made a mistake." In re Krueger, 812 F.3d 365, 374 (5th Cir. 2016) (cleaned up). We defer to the bankruptcy court's credibility determinations. See Randall & Blake, Inc. v. Evans (In re Canion), 196 F.3d 579, 587–88 (5th Cir. 1999).

Here, the bankruptcy court drew its factual finding from the testimony of Jason Post, the Advisors' chief compliance officer, and Dustin Norris, an executive vice president for the Funds and the Advisors. Post testified that the Funds have independent board members that run them. But the bankruptcy court found Post not credible because "he abruptly resigned" from Highland Capital at the same time as Dondero and is currently employed by Dondero. Norris testified that Dondero "owned and/or controlled" the Funds and Advisors. The bankruptcy court found Norris credible and relied on his testimony. The bankruptcy court also observed that none of the Funds' board members testified in the bankruptcy case and all "engaged with the Highland complex for many years." Because nothing in this record leaves us with a firm and definite conviction that the bankruptcy court made a mistake in finding that the Funds are "owned and/or controlled by [Dondero]," we leave the bankruptcy court's factual finding undisturbed.

E. The Protection Provisions

Finally, we address the legality of the Plan's protection provisions. As discussed, the Plan exculpates certain non-debtor third parties supporting the Plan from post-petition lawsuits not arising from gross negligence, bad faith, or willful or criminal misconduct. It also enjoins certain parties "from taking any actions to interfere with the implementation or consummation of the Plan." The injunction requires that, before any lawsuit is filed, the plaintiff must seek the bankruptcy court's approval of the claim as

"colorable"—i.e., the bankruptcy court acts as a gatekeeper. Together, the provisions screen and prevent bad-faith litigation against Highland Capital, its successors, and other bankruptcy participants that could disrupt the Plan's effectiveness.

The bankruptcy court deemed the provisions legal, necessary under the circumstances, and in the best interest of all parties. We agree, but only in part. Though the injunction and gatekeeping provisions are sound, the exculpation of certain non-debtors exceeds the bankruptcy court's authority. We reverse and vacate that limited portion of the Plan.

1. Non-Debtor Exculpation

We start with the scope of the non-debtor exculpation. In a Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceeding, "discharge of a debt of the debtor does not affect the liability of any other entity on, or the property of any other entity for, such debt." 11 U.S.C. § 524(e). Contrary to the bankruptcy court's holding, the exculpation here partly runs afoul of that statutory bar on non-debtor discharge by reaching beyond Highland Capital, the Committee, and the Independent Directors. See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d 251–53. We must reverse and strike the few unlawful parts of the Plan's exculpation provision.

The parties agree that Pacific Lumber controls and also that the bankruptcy court had the power to exculpate both Highland Capital and the Committee members. Appellants, however, submit the bankruptcy court improperly stretched Pacific Lumber to shield other non-debtors from breach-of-contract and negligence claims, in violation of § 524(e). Highland Capital counters that the exculpation provision is a commonplace Chapter 11 term, is appropriate given Dondero's litigious nature, does not implicate § 524(e), and merely provides a heightened standard of care.

Plain's limited exculpation of non-debtor post-petition liability. See, e.g., In re PWS Holding Corp., 228 F.3d 224, 246–47 (3d Cir. 2000) (describing releases as "eliminating" a covered party's liability "altogether" while exculpation provisions "set[] forth the applicable standard of liability" in future litigation). According to Highland Capital, the Third and Ninth Circuits have adopted that distinction when applying § 524(e). See Blixseth v. Credit Suisse, 961 F.3d 1074, 1084 (9th Cir. 2020), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct. 1394 (2021); In re PWS Holding, 228 F.3d at 246–47. Under those cases, narrow exculpations of post-petition liability for certain critical third-party non-debtors are lawful "appropriate" or "necessary" actions for the bankruptcy court to carry out the proceeding through its statutory authority under § 1123(b)(6) and § 105(a). See 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(6) ("[A] plan may . . . include any other appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of this title."); id § 105(a) ("The court may issue any order, process, or judgment that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this title.").

Highland Capital reads Pacific Lumber as "in step with the law in [those] other circuits" by allowing a limited exculpation of post-petition liability. Cf. Blixseth, 961 F.3d at 1084. We disagree. As the Ninth Circuit acknowledged, our court in Pacific Lumber arrived at "a conclusion opposite [the Ninth Circuit's]." 961 F.3d at 1085 n.7. Moreover, the Ninth Circuit expressly disavowed Pacific Lumber's rationale—that an exculpation provision provides a "fresh start" to a non-debtor in violation of § 524(e)—because, in the Ninth Circuit's view, the post-petition exculpation "affects only claims arising from the bankruptcy proceedings themselves." Ibid. We are not persuaded, as Highland Capital contends, that the Ninth Circuit was "sloppy" and simply "misread Pacific Lumber." See O.A. Rec. 19:45–21:38.

The simple fact of the matter is that there is a circuit split concerning the effect and reach of § 524(e).[14] Our court along with the Tenth Circuit hold § 524(e) categorically bars third-party exculpations absent express authority in another provision of the Bankruptcy Code. Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 252–53; Landsing Diversified Props. v. First Nat'l Bank & Tr. Co. of Tulsa (In re W. Real Estate Fund, Inc.), 922 F.2d 592, 600 (10th Cir. 1990) (per curiam). By contrast, the Ninth Circuit joins the Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eleventh Circuits in reading § 524(e) to allow varying degrees of limited third-party exculpations. Blixseth, 961 F.3d at 1084; accord In re PWS Holding, 228 F.3d at 246–47 (allowing third-party releases for "fairness, necessity to the reorganization, and specific factual findings to support these conclusions"); In re Metromedia Fiber Network, Inc., 416 F.3d 136, 143 (2d Cir. 2005); In re A.H. Robins Co., 880 F.2d 694, 702 (4th Cir. 1989); In re Dow Corning Corp., 280 F.3d 648, 658 (6th Cir. 2002); In re Airadigm Commc'ns., Inc., 519 F.3d 640, 657 (7th Cir. 2008); In re Seaside Eng'g & Surveying, Inc., 780 F.3d 1070, 1078 (11th Cir. 2015).

Our Pacific Lumber decision was not blind to the countervailing view, as it twice cites the Third Circuit's contrary holding in other contexts. See 584 F.3d at 241, 253 (citing In re PWS Holding, 228 F.3d at 236–37, 246). But we rejected the parsing between limited exculpations and full releases that Highland Capital now requests. We are obviously bound to apply our own precedent. See Hidalgo Cnty. Emergency Serv. Found. v. Carranza (In re Hidalgo Cnty. Emergency Serv. Found.), 962 F.3d 838, 841 (5th Cir. 2020)

[14] Amicus's contention that failing to adopt the Ninth Circuit's holding "would generate a clear circuit split" is wrong. There already is one. See Petition for Writ of Certiorari, Blixseth v. Credit Suisse, 141 S. Ct. 1394 (No. 20-1028) (highlighting the circuits' divergent approaches to the non-debtor discharge bar under § 524(e)).

("Under our well-recognized rule of orderliness, . . . a panel of this court is bound by circuit precedent." (citation omitted)).

Under Pacific Lumber, § 524(e) does not permit "absolv[ing] the [non-debtor] from any negligent conduct that occurred during the course of the bankruptcy" absent another source of authority. 584 F.3d at 252–53; see also In re Zale Corp., 62 F.3d 746, 760 (5th Cir. 1995). At oral argument, Highland Capital pointed only to § 1123(b)(6) and § 105(a) as footholds. See O.A. Rec. 16:45–17:28. But in this circuit, § 105(a) provides no statutory basis for a non-debtor exculpation. In re Zale, 62 F.3d at 760 (noting "[a] § 105 injunction cannot alter another provision of the code" (citing In re Oxford Mgmt., Inc., 4 F.3d 1329, 1334 (5th Cir. 1993))). And the same logic extends to § 1123(b)(6), which allows a plan to "include any other appropriate provision not inconsistent with the applicable provisions of this title." 11 U.S.C. § 1123(b)(6) (emphasis added).

Pacific Lumber identified two sources of authority to exculpate non-debtors. See 584 F.3d at 252–53. The first is to channel asbestos claims (not present here). Id. at 252 (citing 11 U.S.C. § 524(g)). The second is to provide a limited qualified immunity to creditors' committee members for actions within the scope of their statutory duties. Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 253 (citing 11 U.S.C. § 1103(c)); see In re Vitro S.A.B. de CV, 701 F.3d 1031, 1069 (5th Cir. 2012). And, though not before the court in Pacific Lumber, we have also recognized a limited qualified immunity to bankruptcy trustees unless they act with gross negligence. In re Hilal, 534 F.3d at 501 (citing In re Smyth, 207 F.3d 758, 762 (5th Cir. 2000)); accord Baron v. Sherman (In re Ondova Ltd.), 914 F.3d 990, 993 (5th Cir. 2019) (per curiam). If other sources exist, Highland Capital failed to identify them. So we see no statutory authority for the full extent of the exculpation here.

The bankruptcy court read Pacific Lumber differently. In its view, Pacific Lumber created an additional ground to exculpate non-debtors: when the record demonstrates that "costs [a party] might incur defending against suits alleging such negligence are likely to swamp either [it] or the consummated reorganization." 584 F.3d at 252. We do not read the decision that way. The bankruptcy court's underlying factual findings do not alter whether it has statutory authority to exculpate a non-debtor. That is the holding of Pacific Lumber.

That leaves one remaining question: whether the bankruptcy court can exculpate the Independent Directors under Pacific Lumber. We answer in the affirmative. As the bankruptcy court's governance order clarified, nontraditional as it may be, the Independent Directors were appointed to act together as the bankruptcy trustee for Highland Capital. Like a debtor-in-possession, the Independent Directors are entitled to all the rights and powers of a trustee. See 11 U.S.C. § 1107(a); 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1101.01. It follows that the Independent Directors are entitled to the limited qualified immunity for any actions short of gross negligence. See In re Hilal, 534 F.3d at 501. Under this unique governance structure, the bankruptcy court legally exculpated the Independent Directors.

In sum, our precedent and § 524(e) require any exculpation in a Chapter 11 reorganization plan be limited to the debtor, the creditors' committee and its members for conduct within the scope of their duties, 11 U.S.C. § 1103(c), and the trustees within the scope of their duties, see Baron, 914 F.3d at 993. And so, excepting the Independent Directors and the Committee members, the exculpation of non-debtors here was unlawful.

Accordingly, the other non-debtor exculpations must be struck from the Plan. See Pacific Lumber, 584 F.3d at 253.[15]

As it stands, the Plan's exculpation provision extends to Highland Capital and its employees and CEO; Strand; the Reorganized Debtor and HCMLP GP LLC; the Independent Directors; the Committee and its members; the Claimant Trust, its trustee, and the members of its Oversight Board; the Litigation Sub-Trust and its trustee; professionals retained by the Highland Capital and the Committee in this case; and all "Related Persons." Consistent with § 524(e), we strike all exculpated parties from the Plan except Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors.

[15] Highland Capital, like the bankruptcy court, claims the res judicata effect of the January and July 2020 orders appointing the independent directors and appointing Seery as CEO binds the court to include the protection provisions here. We lack jurisdiction to consider collateral attacks on final bankruptcy orders even when it concerns whether the court properly exercised jurisdiction or authority at the time. See Travelers Indem. Co. v. Bailey, 557 U.S. 137 (2009); In re Linn Energy, L.L.C., 927 F.3d 862, 866–67 (5th Cir. 2019) (quoting Bailey, 557 U.S. at 152). To the extent Appellants seek to roll back the protections in the bankruptcy court's January 2020 and July 2020 orders (which is not clear from their briefing), such a collateral attack is precluded.

As a result, the bankruptcy court was correct insofar as those orders have the effect of exculpating the Independent Directors and Seery in his executive capacities, but it was incorrect that res judicata mandates their inclusion in the Plan's new exculpation provision. Despite removal from the exculpation provision in the confirmation order, the Independent Directors' agents, advisors, and employees, as well as Seery in his official capacities are all exculpated to the extent provided in the January and July 2020 orders, given the orders' ongoing res judicata effects and our lack of jurisdiction to review those orders. But that says nothing of the effect of the Plan's exculpation provision.

2. Injunction & Gatekeeper Provisions

We now turn to the Plan's injunction and gatekeeper provisions. Appellants object to the bankruptcy court's injunction as vague and the gatekeeper provision as overbroad. We are unpersuaded.

First, Appellants' primary contention—that the Plan's injunction "is broad" by releasing non-debtors in violation of § 524(e)—is resolved by our striking the impermissibly exculpated parties. See supra Part IV.E.1.

Second, Appellants dispute the permanency of the injunction for the legally exculpated parties by enjoining conduct "on and after the Effective Date." Even assuming the issue was preserved,[16] permanency alone is no reason to alter a bankruptcy court's otherwise-lawful injunction on appeal. See In re Zale, 62 F.3d at 759–60 (recognizing the bankruptcy court's jurisdiction to issue an injunction in the first place allowed it to issue a permanent injunction).

Third, the Advisors argue that the injunction is "overbroad and vague" because it does not define what it means to "interfere" with the "implementation or consummation of the Plan." That is unsupported by the record. As the bankruptcy court recognized, the Plan defined what constitutes interference: (i) filing a lawsuit, (ii) enforcing judgments, (iii) enforcing security interests, (iv) asserting setoff rights, or (v) acting "in any manner" not conforming with the Plan. The injunction is not unlawfully overbroad or vague.

Finally, Appellants maintain that the gatekeeper provision impermissibly extends to unrelated claims over which the bankruptcy court lacks subject-matter jurisdiction. See In re Craig's Stores of Tex., Inc., 266 F.3d 388, 390 (5th Cir. 2001) (noting a bankruptcy court retains jurisdiction post-confirmation only over "matters pertaining to the implementation or execution of the plan" (citations omitted)). While that may be the case, our precedent requires we leave that determination to the bankruptcy court in the first instance.

Courts have long recognized bankruptcy courts can perform a gatekeeping function. Under the "Barton doctrine," the bankruptcy court may require a party to "obtain leave of the bankruptcy court before initiating an action in district court when the action is against the trustee or other bankruptcy-court-appointed officer, for acts done in the actor's official capacity." Villegas v. Schmidt, 788 F.3d 156, 159 (5th Cir. 2015) (emphasis added) (quoting Carter v. Rodgers, 220 F.3d 1249, 1252 (11th Cir. 2000)); accord Barton v. Barbour, 104 U.S. 126 (1881).[17] In Villegas, we held "that a party must continue to file with the relevant bankruptcy court for permission to proceed with a claim against the trustee." 788 F.3d at 158. Relevant here, we left to the bankruptcy court, faced with pre-approval of a claim, to determine whether it had subject matter jurisdiction over that claim in the first instance. Id. at 158–59; see, e.g., Carroll v. Abide, 788 F.3d 502, 506–07 (5th Cir. 2015) (noting Villegas "rejected an argument that the Barton doctrine does not apply when the bankruptcy court lacked jurisdiction"). In other words, we need not evaluate whether the bankruptcy court would have jurisdiction under every conceivable claim falling under the widest interpretation of the gatekeeper provision. We leave that to the bankruptcy court in the first instance.[18]

[17] The Advisors also maintain that Highland Capital is neither a receiver nor a trustee, so Barton has no application here. We disagree. Highland Capital, for all practical purposes, was a debtor in possession entitled to the rights of a trustee. See 7 COLLIER ON BANKRUPTCY ¶ 1101.01 ("The debtor in possession is generally vested with all of the rights and powers of a trustee as set forth in section 1106 . . . ."); see also Carter, 220 F.3d at 1252 n.4. (finding no distinction between bankruptcy court "approved" and bankruptcy court "appointed" officers).

* * *

In sum, the Plan violates § 524(e) but only insofar as it exculpates and enjoins certain non-debtors. The exculpatory order is therefore vacated as to all parties except Highland Capital, the Committee and its members, and the Independent Directors for conduct within the scope of their duties. We otherwise affirm the inclusion of the injunction and the gatekeeper provisions in the Plan.[19]

V. Conclusion

Highland Capital's motion to dismiss the appeal as equitably moot is DENIED. The bankruptcy court's judgment is AFFIRMED in part, REVERSED in part, and REMANDED for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

[18] For the same reasons, we also leave the applicability of Barton's limited statutory exception to the bankruptcy and district courts in the first instance. See 28 U.S.C. § 959(a) (allowing suit, without leave of the appointing court, if the challenged acts relate to the trustee or debtor in possession "carrying on business connected with [their] property").

[19] Nothing in this opinion should be construed to hinder the bankruptcy court's power to enjoin and impose sanctions on Dondero and other entities by following the procedures to designate them vexatious litigants. See In re Carroll, 850 F.3d 811, 815 (5th Cir. 2017) (per curiam). But non-debtor exculpation within a reorganization plan is not a lawful means to impose vexatious litigant injunctions and sanctions.

Counsel for Appellee

Appellee Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland") respectfully moves this Court for an order dismissing as constitutionally moot Appellants' appeal from the Bankruptcy Court's Order Denying Motion to Compel Compliance with Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3 (the "Order"). Because neither Appellant possesses a claim against Highland's bankruptcy estate, neither Appellant is an adverse party with sufficient legal interest to maintain this appeal, which is now moot, presenting no Article III case or controversy and leaving this Court with no constitutional jurisdiction to hear this appeal. This Court should dismiss this appeal as moot.[1]

Background Regarding Appellants

Each Appellant is a family "trust" controlled by James Dondero (Highland's founder and ousted former CEO).[2] Dondero owns no equity in Highland directly, but owns Highland's general partner, Strand Advisors Inc., which owned 0.25% of the total pre-bankruptcy equity in Highland. Dugaboy owned a 0.1866% pre-bankruptcy limited partnership interest in Highland. The Bankruptcy Court previously found that it "is not clear what economic interest the Get Good Trust has, but it seems to be related to Mr. Dondero." [3]

(As Modified) and (II) Granting Related Relief*, entered on February 22, 2021, Bankruptcy Court Docket No. 1943, designated in Amended Designation of Record, ROA vol. 1 at 5(a) (the "Confirmation Order").
[3] Confirmation Order ¶¶ 18–19.

Disallowance of Dugaboy's Claims

Appellant Dugaboy filed three proofs of claim in the bankruptcy case below: (a) proof of claim no. 177, filed on April 23, 2020; (b) proof of claim no. 131, filed on April 8, 2020; and (c) proof of claim no. 113, filed on April 8, 2020, allegedly held by the Canis Major Trust, to which Dugaboy purported to be a "successor in interest." On October 27, 2021, with Dugaboy's consent, the Bankruptcy Court entered orders withdrawing Claim 177 and Claim 131 with prejudice.[4] On November 10, 2021, the Bankruptcy Court entered an order approving a stipulation between the Dugaboy and Highland withdrawing Claim 113 with prejudice.[5] Dugaboy did not appeal any of these orders. They are now final.

Consequently, Dugaboy has no claims against Highland or Highland's bankruptcy estate. Its only interest in the estate is a pre-bankruptcy 0.1866% equity interest, which was canceled under the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified) (the "Plan"), which became effective on August 11, 2021. Dugaboy has no pecuniary interest in Highland or the bankruptcy estate.

[5] Bankruptcy Docket No. 3007.

Disallowance of Get Good's Claims

On April 8, 2020, Appellant Get Good filed proof of claim no. 120. On November 10, 2021, the Bankruptcy Court entered an order approving a stipulation between Highland and Get Good withdrawing Claim 120 with prejudice.[6] Get Good was also a purported "successor in interest" to claims allegedly held by the Canis Major Trust for which it filed proofs of claim nos. 128 and 129 on April 8, 2020. With Get Good's consent, Claims 128 and 129 were each deemed withdrawn with prejudice under Bankruptcy Court orders entered on November 10, 2021.[7] Get Good did not appeal any of these orders. They are now final. Consequently, Get Good has no pecuniary interest in Highland or the bankruptcy estate.

Appellants Lack Standing; Appeal Is Now Constitutionally Moot

Standing to appeal a bankruptcy court decision is a question of law.[8] The standard for determining appellate standing in the bankruptcy context is governed by the "person aggrieved" test, which requires a showing that the appellant was aggrieved by the order being challenged.[9] "The 'person aggrieved' test is an even more exacting standard than traditional constitutional standing."[10] In other words, "Because bankruptcy cases typically affect numerous parties, the 'person aggrieved' test demands a higher causal nexus between act and injury ….”[11] Appellants “must show that [they] were ‘directly and adversely affected pecuniarily by the order of the bankruptcy court.’”[12] Appellants bear the burden of alleging facts sufficient to demonstrate that they have standing to appeal.[13]

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals has strictly limited appellant standing:

> Bankruptcy courts are not Article III creatures bound by traditional standing requirements. But that does not mean disgruntled litigants may appeal every bankruptcy court order willy-nilly. Quite the contrary. Bankruptcy cases often involve numerous parties with conflicting and overlapping interests. Allowing each and every party to appeal each and every order would clog up the system and bog down the courts. Given the specter of such sclerotic litigation, standing to appeal a bankruptcy court order is, of necessity, quite limited.[14]

In Technicool, the debtor’s equity holder, Robert Furlough, opposed the debtor’s employment of special counsel to pursue litigation. After the bankruptcy court overruled his objection, Furlough appealed, first to the district court and, when he did not prevail there, to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.[15] The circuit court also affirmed, explicitly rejecting Furlough’s argument that additional administrative expenses for special counsel would make a recovery on his equity less likely because it could reduce recoveries by creditors, whose claims had priority over equity. Significantly, the court further held that some theoretical possibility relating to out-of-the-money equity interest did not accord him standing to appeal: "This speculative prospect of harm is far from a direct, adverse, pecuniary hit. Furlough must clear a higher standing hurdle: The order must burden his pocket before he burdens a docket."[16] The Fifth Circuit reasoned that the bankruptcy court order that was the subject of Furlough's appeal—the appointment of a professional under Bankruptcy Code § 327(a)—did not directly affect Furlough's pecuniary interests despite his out-of-the-money equity interests. In other words, just because Furlough "feels grieved by [the professional's] appointment does not make him a 'person aggrieved' for purposes of bankruptcy standing."[17]

The Fifth Circuit's reason for adopting the "pecuniary interest" test for bankruptcy appeals speaks directly to the circumstances under which Appellants Dugaboy and Get Good have burdened this Court's docket:

> In bankruptcy litigation, the mishmash of multiple parties and multiple claims can render things labyrinthine, to say the least. To dissuade umpteen appeals raising umpteen issues, courts impose a stringent-yet-prudent standing requirement: Only those directly, adversely, and financially impacted by a bankruptcy order may appeal it.[18]

[16] Id. (emphasis added).
[18] Id. at 384 (emphasis added).

Here, as in Technicool and the other cases cited above, Appellants cannot show any direct adverse financial impact from the Bankruptcy Court's entry of the Order. Neither Appellant has a claim against Highland or the bankruptcy estate, since all claims were withdrawn with prejudice. Even Dugaboy's infinitesimal pre-bankruptcy equity interest in Highland has been canceled.[19]

With no pecuniary interest in the bankruptcy estate, these Appellants lack standing under Fifth Circuit law. Even under Appellants' best-case scenario (where this Court reversed the Order and the Bankruptcy Court granted the Motion to Compel) would not "put any money [Appellants'] pocket," as required by the Fifth Circuit.[20] Highland would merely be required to retroactively file reports on its ownership interests in non-debtor subsidiaries as of the bankruptcy petition date. Severely out-of-date reports of years-old facts cannot conceivably lead to additional creditor recoveries. Even if they could, Appellants aren't creditors.[21]

[19] Among more than a dozen appeals Dondero and his entities are currently prosecuting from this one bankruptcy case alone is an appeal of the Confirmation Order. It is, of course, theoretically possible that the Confirmation Order could be reversed on appeal, technically reinstating Dugaboy's pre-bankruptcy equity interest in Highland. But even in that circumstance, there is no nexus between the reports the Order excused and a miniscule 0.1866% limited partnership interest Dugaboy would arguably have. Even that interest would be insufficient to preserve Dugaboy's standing under the Fifth Circuit's formulation.

[20] Technicool, 896 F.3d at 386.

[21] Even were Appellants creditors, reversing the Order could not affect creditor recoveries. The Plan has already been solicited to and accepted by over 99% of the amount of Highland's unsecured creditors. The Plan was confirmed in February 2021 and became effective in August 2021. All Highland's former assets were revested in the Reorganized Debtor and the Claimant Trust under the Plan and Bankruptcy Code § 1141(c). Appellants were not "directly and adversely affected pecuniarily" by the Order because the Plan dictates and controls the disposition of all Highland's former assets. This is why Bankruptcy Rule 2015.3(b) only requires the filing of reports "until the effective date of a plan" because, at that point, the debtor is no longer a debtor-in-possession and the Plan dictates the provisions, reporting requirements, and duties of the reorganized debtor.

The Fifth Circuit requires a bankruptcy appellant to be a creditor with a direct pecuniary interest in the outcome of the appeal and in the relief sought in the District Court hearing the appeal. Neither Appellant is a creditor. Neither Appellant has any direct pecuniary interest in anything having to do with this appeal.

But, it must be noted, Appellants once did, at least arguably. Appellants took this appeal in September 2021, several weeks before the Bankruptcy Court entered orders withdrawing with prejudice all of Appellants' claims (the last of which was entered on November 10, 2021). At least arguably, Appellants possessed standing as holders of claims against the bankruptcy estate when they commenced this appeal. Appellants lost that standing, however, when all their claims were withdrawn—that is, when they irrevocably lost their position as creditors.

This appeal has been rendered moot—not justiciable under the "Cases and Controversies" Clause of Article III of the U.S. Constitution—because Appellants have lost their standing during the pendency of this appeal. The U.S. Supreme Court has described mootness as "the doctrine of standing set in a time frame: The requisite personal interest that must exist at the commencement of litigation (standing) must continue throughout its existence (mootness)."[22]

[22] Arizonans for Official English v. Arizona, 520 U.S. 43, 68 n.22 (1997), quoting United States Parole Comm'n v. Geraghty, 445 U.S. 388, 397 (1980).

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, in addressing a bankruptcy appeal in which the appellant lost standing after the appeal began, held thus: "A controversy is mooted when there are no longer adverse parties with sufficient legal interests to maintain the litigation."[23] A mooted appeal must be dismissed because a "moot case presents no Article III case or controversy, and a court has no constitutional jurisdiction to resolve the issues it presents."[24]

Here, when all of Appellants' claims were withdrawn with prejudice on November 10, 2021, Appellants lost whatever standing they may have had when they commenced this appeal. This appeal, in the words of Goldin, no longer has any appellant with a sufficient legal interest to maintain the appeal. As such, this appeal is moot. Respectfully, when the Appellants lost their status as creditors of the Highland bankruptcy estate, this Court lost its Article III jurisdiction over this appeal. All that remains is for this Court to dismiss this appeal for lack of jurisdiction.

[23] Goldin v. Bartholow, 166 F.3d 710, 717 (5th Cir. 1999), citing Chevron, U.S.A. v. Traillour Oil Co., 987 F.2d 1138, 1153 (5th Cir. 1993).

[24] Goldin, 166 F.3d at 717–18, citing Hogan v. Mississippi University for Women, 646 F.2d 1116, 1117 n.1 (5th Cir. 1981). Mootness in this sense is distinct from the concept of "equitable mootness," which this Court may have seen in bankruptcy contexts before, particularly with respect to appeals of orders confirming a fully-consummated plan of reorganization. Constitutional mootness is a matter of Article III jurisdiction, whereas "equitable mootness" addresses the concern that an appellate court with unquestioned jurisdiction can only render relief that could inequitably harm third parties not before the court. See, e.g., Manges v. Seattle-First Nat'l Bank (In re Manges), 29 F.3d 1034, 1039 (5th Cir. 1994) (comparing constitutional mootness with equitable mootness).

Conclusion

Because both Appellants have lost their standing to prosecute this appeal, and because a loss of both Appellants' standing renders this appeal constitutionally moot, this Court should dismiss this appeal.

Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP" or, as applicable, the "Debtor"), the reorganized debtor in the above-referenced bankruptcy case, the Highland Claimant Trust (the "Trust"; together with HCMLP, "Highland"), and James P. Seery, Jr., HCMLP's Chief Executive Officer and the Claimant Trustee of the Trust ("Seery"; together with Highland, the "Highland Parties"), by and through their undersigned counsel, hereby file this opposition (the "Opposition") to Hunter Mountain Investment Trust's ("HMIT") Emergency Motion for Leave to File Verified Adversary Petition ("Initial Motion" or "Mot."; Docket No. 3699) and Hunter Mountain Investment Trust's Supplement to Emergency Motion for Leave to File Verified Adversary Proceeding ("Supplemental Motion" or "Supp. Mot."; Docket No. 3760; collectively, the "Motion"). In support of their Opposition, the Highland Parties state as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT[1]

1. This Motion is the latest attempt by James Dondero ("Dondero") to make good on his threat to "burn down the place." This iteration involves baseless and personal attacks against the Proposed Defendants,[2] harassing those individuals charged with maximizing value for creditors while (perversely) wasting Highland's resources. Dondero's demonstrated hostility to Highland's legitimate goals is precisely why this Court entered the Gatekeeper Provision at issue here, and the current Motion vividly illustrates the wisdom of installing that prophylaxis. HMIT's Motion should be denied.

[1] Capitalized terms not defined in this Preliminary Statement shall have the meanings ascribed to them below.

[2] "Proposed Defendants" refers to, collectively, Seery, Muck Holdings, LLC ("Muck"), Jessup Holdings, LLC ("Jessup"), Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"), Stonehill Capital Management, LLC ("Stonehill"; collectively with Muck, Jessup, and Farallon, the "Claims Purchasers"), and John Doe Defendant Nos. 1–10.

2. HMIT's proposed Complaint ("Compl."; Docket No. 3760-1) is long on rhetoric, unsupported conspiracy theories, and conclusory statements, but short on actual factual allegations. For all its bluster, the Complaint rests entirely on the following assertions:

- On December 17, 2021, Dondero sent an unsolicited email to Seery regarding a potential acquisition of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, Inc. ("MGM"). At the time, the Debtor owned MGM stock directly and managed an entity that owned, among numerous other assets, subordinated debt in other entities that owned MGM stock (Compl. ¶¶ 44–45);

- Seery purportedly communicated with principals at Farallon and Stonehill, entities with which Seery allegedly did "substantial business" more than a decade before he assumed his roles at Highland. (Id. ¶ 48.) The Complaint contains no allegations regarding when these communications supposedly occurred, but speculates that Seery provided "material non-public information" about MGM and vague "assurances of great profits" on Highland claims (id. ¶¶ 3, 13–14, 47, 50);

- In April 2021 (four months after Dondero's unsolicited email), Farallon and Stonehill purchased "approved unsecured claims" of Highland at a 65% discount to face value. Based on the "publicly projected" estimates in Debtor's November 30, 2020, Disclosure Statement—which the Complaint touts as the only public source of information regarding the claims' potential value—Farallon and Stonehill stood to earn at least an 18% return on those purchases (id. ¶¶ 3, 37, 42); and

- In August 2021 (eight months after Dondero's unsolicited email), Farallon and Stonehill became members of the Claimant Oversight Board ("COB"). Under the Court-approved Chapter 11 Plan, Seery earned a set base salary and a performance-based bonus. The Complaint speculates that negotiations over the latter component "were not arm's-length," but contains no allegations about the negotiation process or the terms of Seery's final compensation package (id. ¶¶ 4, 13, 54.

The remainder of the Complaint consists of rhetorical rehash of these basic contentions, ad hominem attacks, or a self-serving (and utterly unsupported) claim by Dondero that a Farallon principal confessed this purported scheme to Dondero.

3. The Motion should be denied for three, independently sufficient reasons. First, as a threshold legal matter, HMIT, as a holder of unvested, contingent interests, lacks standing to bring derivative claims on behalf of the Trust or HCMLP under applicable state law and the Claimant Trust Agreement ("Trust Agreement" or "Trust Agmt."). HMIT cannot escape this reality by alternatively asserting its claims as nonexistent direct claims.

4. Second, HMIT's claims are not "colorable" as that term is used in the Court-approved Plan and the Gatekeeper Provision included in this Court's Confirmation Order. (Plan Art. IX.F; Confirmation Order ¶¶ 72, 76, 81.) As the Confirmation Order expressly stated, the Gatekeeper Provision requires Dondero to make a threshold showing consistent with the (i) "the Supreme Court's 'Barton Doctrine,' Barton v. Barbour, 104 U.S. 126 (1881))," and (ii) "the notion of a prefiling injunction to deter vexatious litigants, that has been approved by Fifth Circuit." (Id. ¶¶ 76–81.) The Fifth Circuit confirmed as much when it rejected (in relevant part) Dondero's confirmation appeal, holding that the Gatekeeper Provision "screen[s] and prevent[s] bad-faith litigation against Highland Capital, its successors, and other bankruptcy participants that could disrupt the Plan's effectiveness." NexPoint Advisors, L.P. v. Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P. (In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P.), 48 F.4th 419, 435 (5th Cir. 2022).

5. It is well-settled that "colorability" in this context requires HMIT to demonstrate more than the bare-bones Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) "plausibility" standard. HMIT must demonstrate the "foundation" for its "prima facie case." In re VistaCare Grp., LLC, 678 F.3d 218, 232 (3d Cir. 2012). Accordingly, and contrary to HMIT's contention, evidentiary hearings are routinely conducted in this setting—particularly where (as here) the movant has larded its complaint with unsupported, conclusory assertions that cannot withstand even passing scrutiny and has attached hundreds of pages of exhibits and two self-serving declarations in support of its motion. HMIT's proffered gatekeeping standard, by contrast, would impose no hurdle at all and would render the threshold entirely duplicative of the motion to dismiss standard that every litigant already faces. In addition to ignoring the stated purposes and intent of the Gatekeeper Provision (which are long since beyond collateral attack) and the factual bases upon which it was adopted, HMIT offers no reason why litigants whose serial abuses earned the imposition of the Gatekeeper Provision should be subject to the same standard as everyone else. To state that absurd contention is to refute it, and would essentially nullify this Court's authority to police its own docket.

6. Third, even if the Rule 12(b)(6) standard applied, HMIT's bare-bones Complaint would fail. Even accepting the sparse factual allegations as true for purposes of this Motion, its central conclusions collapse under their own weight. For example, assuming that Dondero's unsolicited December 17, 2020 email, which violated this Court's TRO, included confidential information regarding MGM, the Complaint does not allege that such information remained nonpublic at the unidentified time Seery supposedly communicated with Farallon and Stonehill—and the Complaint acknowledges that neither entity purchased claims before April 2021. Likewise, although the Complaint's central thesis is that Farallon and Stonehill would not have purchased the Highland claims without knowing the supposedly secret MGM information, the Complaint acknowledges that the November 30, 2020 Disclosure Statement predicted a recovery significantly above what Farallon and Stonehill allegedly paid for the claims in April 2021.

7. While such self-contradictory and sparse allegations ordinarily might counsel in favor of denying the Motion under the Rule 12(b)(6) standard (i.e., obviating the need to decide whether the Barton/vexatious-litigant standard applies), the Highland Parties respectfully request that this Court conduct the Rule 12(b)(6) analysis only in the alternative. Given the litigiousness of Dondero and his affiliated entities, who inevitably will appeal any adverse decision, the Fifth Circuit will benefit from a full record. Applying the correct heightened standard will also serve important interests going forward. This Motion is unlikely to be the last to require application of the Gatekeeper Provision, and significant interests of judicial economy will be served by definitively establishing the threshold standard and propriety of an evidentiary hearing.

RELEVANT FACTUAL BACKGROUND

A. The Gatekeeper Provision Was Adopted To Prevent Baseless Litigation.

8. HMIT was required to file the Motion in accordance with a provision in Highland's confirmed Plan known as the "gatekeeper" (the "Gatekeeper Provision"). (Morris Dec. Ex. 1 at 51–52.)[3] The Gatekeeper Provision states, in pertinent part, that:

> [N]o Enjoined Party may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Protected Party that arose or arises from or is related to the Chapter 11 Case . . . without the Bankruptcy Court (i) first determining, after notice and a hearing, that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of any kind, including, but not limited to, negligence, bad faith, criminal misconduct, willful misconduct, fraud, or gross negligence against a Protected Party and (ii) specifically authorizing such Enjoined Party to bring such claim or cause of action against such Protected Party.

(Id. (emphasis added).)[4]

9. The Gatekeeper Provision is not a garden-variety plan provision. Rather, as this Court stated in its order confirming the Plan,[5] the Gatekeeper Provision was adopted as a direct result of Dondero's history of harassing, costly litigation. In describing the factual support for the Gatekeeper Provision, this Court observed that "prior to the commencement of the Debtor's

[3] References to the "Plan" are to the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (as Modified). (Morris Dec. Ex. 1.) Citations to "Morris Dec. Ex. __" are to the exhibits attached to the Declaration of John A. Morris In Support of Highland Capital Management, L.P., Highland Claimant Trust, and James P. Seery, Jr.'s Joint Opposition to Hunter Mountain Investment Trust's Motion for Leave to File Verified Adversary Proceeding accompanying this Opposition.

[4] Under the Plan, HMIT is an "Enjoined Party," and HCMLP, the Trust, Seery (in various capacities), Farallon, and Stonehill (in their capacities as members of the COB approving Seery's compensation) are "Protected Parties." (Plan Arts. I.B.56, I.B.105.)

bankruptcy case, and while under the direction of Mr. Dondero, the Debtor had been involved in a myriad of litigation some of which had gone on for years and, in some cases, over a decade . . . . During the last several months, Mr. Dondero and the Dondero Related Entities have harassed the Debtor, which has resulted in further substantial, costly, and time-consuming litigation for the Debtor." (Confirmation Order ¶ 77.)

10. The Court further found that the "Dondero Post-Petition Litigation [as defined] was a result of Mr. Dondero failing to obtain creditor support for his plan proposal and consistent with his comments, as set forth in Mr. Seery's credible testimony, that if Mr. Dondero's plan proposal was not accepted, he would 'burn down the place.'" (Id. ¶ 78.)

11. These findings of fact—all of which the Fifth Circuit left undisturbed while affirming, in relevant part, the Confirmation Order—were the foundation upon which the Gatekeeper Provision was adopted:

> Approval of the Gatekeeper Provision will prevent baseless litigation designed merely to harass the post-confirmation entities charged with monetizing the Debtor's assets for the benefit of its economic constituents, will avoid abuse of the Court system and preempt the use of judicial time that properly could be used to consider the meritorious claims of other litigants.

(Id. ¶ 79 (emphasis added).)

B. Dondero, Patrick, And HMIT Unsuccessfully Search For Allegations To Manufacture A Complaint.

12. HMIT's proposed Complaint is premised on two primary allegations emanating from Dondero: (i) Seery supposedly shared with the Claims Purchasers "material, non-public inside information" that he had obtained from Dondero as part of a quid pro quo pursuant to which the Claims Purchasers would someday return the favor by joining the COB and "rubber-stamping" Seery's compensation package, and (ii) a representative of Farallon essentially confessed to the arrangement in one or more phone calls with Dondero in the late Spring of 2021. Despite knowing of these alleged "facts," Dondero, Mark Patrick ("Patrick"),[6] HMIT's purported manager, and HMIT did not bring any claims but instead sought discovery—which two different Texas state courts denied.

1. The First Rule 202 Petition

13. On July 22, 2021, Dondero filed a petition in Texas state court seeking pre-suit discovery against Farallon and Alvarez & Marsal pursuant to Tex. R. Civ. P. 202 (the "First Rule 202 Petition"). (Morris Dec. Ex. 3.) The First Rule 202 Petition was based, in part, on Dondero's allegations that (i) Seery possessed "non-public, material information" that "[u]pon information and belief . . . was the basis for instructing Farallon to purchase the Claims," and that (ii) he had a telephone call with Michael Linn ("Linn"), a representative of Farallon, in which Linn allegedly told Dondero that "Farallon had purchased the claims sight unseen—relying entirely on Mr. Seery's advice solely because of their prior dealings." (Id. ¶¶ 21, 23.)[7]

14. After the targets of the First Rule 202 Petition removed it to the Bankruptcy Court, this Court held a hearing, after which it entered an Order remanding the proceeding back to Texas state court despite having "grave misgivings." (Morris Dec. Ex. 6 at 20.) In doing so, the Court noted that it was "familiar with the concept of claims-trading in bankruptcy (including the fact that, for decades now, since a rule change in the last century, no court approval and order is necessary unless the transferor objects)" and that it appeared that Dondero's motives were "highly suspect." (Id. at 21.)

[6] Patrick has worked closely with Dondero for over a decade. Patrick was hired by Highland in 2008 and now serves as manager of the "Charitable DAF," which is controlled by Dondero. On August 3, 2021, this Court held Patrick "in civil contempt of court" after "basically abdicating responsibility" for "executing the litigation strategy" to Dondero. (Aug. 3, 2021 Order at 20–21, 30, Docket No. 2660.)

[7] As described in more detail below, Dondero later amended the First Rule 202 Petition (Morris Dec. Ex. 4) to, among other things, modify his description of his conversation with Linn and, several weeks after doing so, offered his third sworn version of his purported communication(s) with Farallon (id. Ex. 5).

15. After remand, the Texas state court slammed the gate closed, denying the First Rule 202 Petition (as amended) and dismissing Dondero's case. (Morris Dec. Ex. 7.)

2. The Second Rule 202 Petition

16. Seven months later, in January 2023, HMIT filed another petition in a different Texas state court again seeking pre-suit discovery regarding, among other things, alleged wrongdoing in connection with the Claims Purchasers' acquisition of claims in the Debtor's bankruptcy case. (Morris Dec. Ex. 8 (the "Second Rule 202 Petition").) While the Second Rule 202 Petition was embellished and contained a few more speculative and conclusory assertions, it was based on many of the same allegations contained in the First Rule 202 Petition. Indeed, Dondero submitted yet another sworn statement, this one in support of the Second Rule 202 Petition, which included the fourth version of his purported communication(s) with Farallon. (Morris Dec. Ex. 9.)

17. On March 8, 2023, the Texas state court again slammed the gate closed, denying the Second Rule 202 Petition and dismissing HMIT's case. (Morris Dec. Ex. 10.)

18. Having been refused entry by two different Texas state courts, HMIT finally knocked on this Court's door on March 28, 2023 by filing the Motion, on an emergency basis, and contending that its 18-month detour in the Texas state court system left it at risk of blowing the statute of limitations on certain claims. The Motion is largely based on the same threadbare facts and speculative and conclusory statements that were insufficient to obtain discovery in both the First Rule 202 Petition and the Second Rule 202 Petition.

C. The Premise Of HMIT's Proposed Complaint—An Alleged Quid Pro Quo Between Seery And The Claims Purchasers—Is Demonstrably False.

19. HMIT asserts various legal theories resting on the assertion that Seery passed on material, non-public information concerning MGM to his purportedly "past business partners and close allies" Farallon and Stonehill, so that they could buy claims on the cheap and later reward

Seery by "rubber-stamp[ing]" an oversized compensation package. (Mot. ¶¶ 22, 24; see also Compl. ¶¶ 3–4, 16, 47, 54, 71, 77.)

20. HMIT primarily relies on: (i) an email Dondero sent to Seery on December 17, 2020, in which Dondero purportedly disclosed material, non-public inside information; (ii) Dondero's prior sworn statements concerning, among other things, his supposed recollection of one or more telephone calls he had with one or more representatives of Farallon in the late Spring of 2021; and (iii) two letters summarizing "investigations" commissioned by Dondero, the results of which were apparently delivered to the Executive Office of the United States Trustee ("EOUST"). (Mot. ¶ 1 ("This Motion is separately supported by . . . the declarations of James Dondero, dated May 2022 (Ex. 2), James Dondero, dated February 2023 (Ex. 3), and Sawnie A. McEntire with attached evidence (Ex. 4).").)

21. Based on the facts set forth below, and as will further be demonstrated at the upcoming hearing, HMIT cannot meet its burden of establishing that there is a good faith basis for the allegations concerning the "quid pro quo."

D. The Allegations Concerning MGM and Insider Trading Have No Basis In Fact.

22. As a member of MGM's Board, Dondero was admittedly the source of the so-called material, non-public inside information. (Compl. ¶ 45.) On December 17, 2020, Dondero—in violation of an existing temporary restraining order—sent an email to Seery and others with the subject line "Trading Restriction re MGM – material non public information" stating:

> Just got off a pre board call, board call at 3:00. Update is as follows: Amazon and Apple actively diligencing in Data Room. Both continue to express material interest. Probably first quarter event, will update as facts change. Note also any sales are subject to a shareholder agreement.

(Morris Dec. Ex. 11 (the "MGM E-Mail").)[8]

1. Dondero Had An Axe To Grind When He Sent The MGM E-Mail.

23. By December 17, 2020, Dondero viewed Seery as his enemy. The MGM E-Mail was initially just another clumsy and improper attempt to impede the Debtor's asset sales (see infra ¶ 25), but when that failed, Dondero shifted gears and began peddling the "inside information" angle, in multiple forums, hoping to make life difficult for Seery and anyone Dondero perceived to be supporting him.[9] But viewed in context, the MGM E-Mail and related allegations provide no basis for the assertion of "colorable" claims.

24. After causing the Debtor to file for bankruptcy protection in October 2019, Dondero was forced to surrender his control positions at the Debtor—including his positions as President and Chief Executive Officer—in January 2020 as part of a broader corporate governance settlement entered into to avoid the appointment of a Chapter 11 trustee. (Morris Dec. Ex. 12.) He remained an unpaid employee of the Debtor, including maintaining his title as portfolio manager for all funds and investment vehicles for which he then held titles, subject to the authority of the newly-appointed independent board of directors (the "Independent Board").[10]

25. By the Fall of 2020, however, the Independent Board demanded (and obtained) Dondero's resignation, and the Debtor had (1) reached proposed settlements with certain of its larger creditors, (2) proposed an asset-monetization plan, (3) obtained court approval of its

[8] Notably, the MGM E-Mail is internally inconsistent because it simultaneously purports to impose a "[t]rading [r]estriction" while also stating that "sales are subject to a shareholder agreement," which permits sales in certain circumstances.

[9] Neither Dondero nor HMIT ever explain how Dondero could have disclosed "material non-public inside information" that he purportedly obtained as a member of the MGM Board without violating his own fiduciary duties to MGM. The absence of any explanation is further indication that Dondero did not believe that the MGM E-Mail contained "material non-public inside information."

[10] In July 2020, Seery was appointed Chief Executive Officer and Chief Structuring Officer of the Debtor. (Morris Dec. Ex. 36.)

Disclosure Statement, and (4) begun to solicit votes in support of its proposed Plan. In response to these developments and others, Dondero began disrupting preparations for the implementation of the proposed Plan. The events in the weeks leading up to the MGM E-Mail are as follows:

- October 9: In accordance with the Independent Board's demand, made after threats and disruptions to the Debtor's operations, Dondero is forced to resign from all positions with the Debtor and its affiliates (Morris Dec. Ex. 13);
- October 16: Dondero's affiliates attempt to impede the Debtor's trading activities by demanding—with no legal basis—that Seery cease selling certain assets (id. Ex. 14; id. Ex. 15 at 13–15);
- November 24: This Court enters an Order approving the Debtor's Disclosure Statement, scheduling the confirmation hearing on the Debtor's Plan for January 13, 2021, and granting related relief (id. Ex. 16);
- November 24–27: Dondero personally interferes with certain securities trades ordered by Seery (id. Ex. 15 at 30–36);
- November 30: The Debtor provides written notice of termination of shared services agreements with Dondero's affiliates, NexPoint Advisors, L.P. ("NexPoint") and Highland Capital Management Fund Advisors, L.P. ("HCMFA"; together with NexPoint, the "Advisors") (id. Ex. 17);
- December 3: The Debtor makes written demands to Dondero and certain affiliates for payment of all amounts due under certain promissory notes that had an aggregate face amount of more than $60 million (id. Exs. 18–21);
- December 3: Dondero responds by threatening Seery in a text message: "Be careful what you do -- last warning" (id. Ex. 22 (emphasis added));
- December 10: Dondero's interference and threat cause the Debtor to seek and obtain a temporary restraining order ("TRO") against Dondero (id. Ex. 23);
- December 16: The Court denies as "frivolous" a motion filed by certain Dondero affiliates in which they sought "temporary restrictions" on certain asset sales (id. Ex. 24); and
- December 17: After exhausting other avenues to curtail the asset sales Debtor conducted in furtherance of the proposed Plan, Dondero sends the MGM E-Mail to Seery (id. Ex. 11).

2. Dondero Had No Duty To Send The MGM E-Mail To Seery And He Violated An Existing TRO When He Did So.

26. With his efforts to disrupt the proposed Plan stymied, Dondero sent the MGM E-Mail to Seery. While HMIT alleges that Dondero disclosed "material non-public information regarding Amazon and Apple's interest in acquiring MGM" to Seery on December 17, 2020 (Compl. ¶ 45), HMIT does not state or suggest why Dondero did so.

27. That failure is unsurprising. As of December 17, 2020, Dondero owed no duty of any kind to the Debtor or any entity controlled by the Debtor because (i) in January 2020, he surrendered direct and indirect control of the Debtor to the Independent Board as part of the corporate governance settlement (see Docket Nos. 339, 354-1 (Term Sheet)), and (ii) in October 2020, he resigned from all roles at the Debtor and affiliates.

28. Notably, Dondero admitted elsewhere that his goal in sending the MGM E-Mail was to impede the Debtor and Seery from engaging in any transactions involving MGM:

> On December 17, 2020, I sent an email to employees at HCM, including the then Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer Jim Seery, containing non-public information regarding Amazon and Apple's interest in acquiring MGM. I became aware of this information due to my involvement as a member of the board of MGM. My purpose was to alert Mr. Seery and others that MGM stock, which was owned either directly or indirectly by HCM, should be on a restricted list and not be involved in any trades.

(Morris Dec. Ex. 9 ¶ 3 (emphasis added).)

29. Dondero had no relationship of any kind with the Debtor when he sent the MGM E-Mail, and he directly violated the TRO by sending it to Seery without copying Debtor's counsel.[11] Particularly against the backdrop of Dondero's attempted interference with the Debtor's trading activities just weeks before and just days after December 17, 2020,[12] the MGM E-Mail was another transparent attempt to impede asset sales and undermine Seery's efforts to bring the Debtor's bankruptcy to a close.

[11] The TRO enjoined Dondero from, among other things, "communicating… with any Board member" (including Seery) without including Debtor's counsel. (Morris Dec. Ex. 23 ¶ 2(a).)

3. The MGM E-Mail Did Not Disclose Material, Non-Public Inside Information.

30. HMIT's contention that the MGM E-Mail contained "material non-public inside information" is belied by press reports issued before December 17, 2020.

31. For example, as early as January 2020, Apple and Amazon were identified as being among a new group of "Big 6" global media companies and MGM was identified as being a leading media acquisition target. Indeed, according to at least one media report, "MGM, in particular, seems like a logical candidate to sell this year" having already held "preliminary talks with Apple, Netflix and other larger media companies." (Morris Dec. Ex. 25.)

32. In October 2020, the Wall Street Journal reported that MGM's largest shareholder, Anchorage Capital Group ("Anchorage"), was facing mounting pressure to sell the company. Anchorage was led by Kevin Ulrich, who also served as Chairman of MGM's Board. The article reported that "[i]n recent months, Mr. Ulrich has said he is working toward a deal," and he specifically named Amazon and Apple as being among four possible buyers. (Id. Ex. 26.)

33. The forgoing is a small sample of publicly available information showing that MGM and Anchorage faced substantial pressure in 2020 and were contemplating a sale, and that Amazon and Apple were expected to be among interested bidders. No one following the MGM story would have been surprised to learn in December 2020 that Apple and Amazon were conducting due diligence and had expressed "material interest" in acquiring MGM.

[12] (Morris Dec. Ex. 15 at 30–36.)

34. Even if the MGM E-Mail contained "material non-public information" when Dondero sent it on December 17, 2020 (which it did not), its substance was fully and publicly disclosed to the market in the days and weeks that followed.

35. For example, on December 21, 2020, a Wall Street Journal article titled MGM Holdings, Studio Behind 'James Bond,' Explores a Sale (the "Wall Street Journal Article"), reported that MGM had "tapped investment banks Morgan Stanley and LionTree LLC and begun a formal sale process," and had "a market value of around $5.5 billion, based on privately traded shares and including debt." The Wall Street Journal Article reiterated that (i) Anchorage "has come under pressure in recent years from weak performance and defecting clients, and its illiquid investment in MGM has become a larger percentage of its hedge fund as it shrinks," and (ii) "Mr. Ulrich has told clients in recent months he was working toward a deal for the studio and has spoken of big technology companies as logical buyers." (Id. Ex. 27.)

36. The Wall Street Journal article thus contained more information than the MGM E-Mail, insofar as the former (i) disclosed that investment bankers had been retained; (ii) disclosed the identity of the investment bankers; (iii) reported that MGM had commenced a "formal sales process"; (iv) provided an indication of market value; and (v) reiterated that Anchorage, MGM's largest shareholder, was under pressure to sell its illiquid position and was actively "working toward a deal for the studio."

37. The Wall Street Journal's reporting was picked up and expanded upon in other publications soon after. For example:

- On December 23, 2020, Business Matters published an article specifically identifying Amazon as a potential suitor for MGM. The article, titled The World is net enough! Amazon Joins other Streaming services in £4bn Bidding war for Bond films as MGM Considers Selling Back Catalogue, cited the Wall Street Journal Article and further reported that MGM "hopes to spark a battle that could interest streaming services such as Amazon Prime" (id. Ex. 28);

- On December 24, 2020, an article in iDropNews specifically identified Apple as entering the fray. In an article titled Could Apple be Ready to Gobble Up MGM Studios Entirely?, the author observed that "it's now become apparent that MGM is actually up on the auction block," noting that the Wall Street Journal was "reporting that the studio has begun a formal sale process" and that Apple—with a long history of exploratory interest in MGM—would be a likely bidder (id. Ex. 29); and

- On January 15, 2021, Bulwark published an article entitled MGM is For Sale (Again) that identified attributes of MGM likely to appeal to potential purchasers and handicapped the odds of seven likely buyers—with Apple and Amazon named as two of three potential buyers most likely to close on an acquisition (id. Ex. 30).

4. Dondero's Conduct Confirms That He Did Not Believe He Disclosed Material, Non-Public Inside Information To Seery; The MGM E-Mail Played No Role In The HarbourVest Settlement.

38. Dondero's conduct further demonstrates that he did not believe he disclosed material, non-public information to Seery in December 2020.

39. HMIT contends that, upon receipt of the MGM E-Mail, "Seery should have halted all transactions involving MGM stock, yet just six days later Seery filed a motion in the Bankruptcy Court seeking approval of the Debtor's settlement with HarbourVest – resulting in a transfer to the Debtor's Estate of HarbourVest's interest in a Debtor-advised fund, Highland CLO Funding, Ltd. ("HCLOF"), which held substantial MGM debt and equity." (Compl. ¶ 46.) These allegations do not withstand scrutiny for several reasons.

40. First, the Debtor and HarbourVest had already reached an agreement in principle—including the core question of consideration—to settle their disputes on December 10, 2020, a week before Dondero sent the MGM E-Mail to Seery. (See Morris Dec. Ex. 31.)[13] Thus, even assuming that the MGM E-Mail contained "material non-public inside information" (which it did not), the substance of that communication played no role in Seery's negotiations, which had concluded before he received the MGM E-Mail.

[13] In its motion for approval of the HarbourVest settlement, Highland valued the interest in HCLOF that it was receiving as part of the settlement of HarbourVest's claim at $22.5 million. Dondero and other affiliates ostensibly controlled by Patrick have previously alleged that the valuation was "stale." It was not; rather, it was based on the then most recent report made available to holders of interests in HCLOF, including Dondero. (Morris Dec. Ex. 31-a.) In any event, HCLOF did not directly own any "MGM debt and equity."

41. Second, neither Dondero nor any of his affiliates ever raised this issue with the Court when lodging objections to the HarbourVest settlement, which were filed just weeks after Dondero sent the MGM E-Mail to Seery. In fact, Dondero contended that the Debtor was overpaying HarbourVest via the settlement to buy votes and that the settlement was neither reasonable nor in the best interests of the Debtor's estate. (Morris Dec. Ex. 32.)

42. Dondero and HMIT cannot reconcile their current assertion that Seery misused allegedly "material, non-public inside information" with their failure to object to the HarbourVest settlement on that basis.

5. The Texas State Securities Board Has Determined That No Action Is Warranted.

43. In its Motion, HMIT claimed that the Texas State Securities Board (the "TSSB") "opened an investigation into the subject matter of the insider trades at issue," and argued that the "continuing nature of this investigation underscores HMIT's position that the claims described in the attached Adversary Proceeding are plausible and certainly far more than merely 'colorable.'" (Mot. ¶ 37.)

44. HMIT's characterization is misleading because the TSSB never "opened an investigation"; rather, the TSSB reviewed a "complaint" (undoubtedly filed at Dondero's direction). That review is now complete. On May 9, 2023, the TSSB issued the following statement:

> The staff of the Texas State Securities Board (the "Staff") has completed its review of the complaint received by the Staff against Highland Capital Management, L.P. The issues raised in the complaint and information provided to our Agency were given full consideration, and a decision was made that no further regulatory action is warranted at this time.

(Morris Dec. Ex. 33.)

45. The TSSB's decision that no further action is warranted underscores the Highland Parties' position that the claims described in the proposed Complaint are neither plausible nor "colorable."

E. HMIT's Allegations Concerning Seery's Alleged Relationships With The Claims Purchasers Are Unsupported And Provide No Foundation For The Purported Inferences.

46. HMIT asserts that Seery and the Claims Purchasers had substantial pre-existing relationships that provided the foundation for the alleged "quid pro quo." (See, e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 14, 47–48.) These allegations appear to be based solely on a review of Seery's resume and some internet searches conducted as part of the "investigation" commissioned by Dondero, the results of which were presented to the EOUST in an unsuccessful effort to convince that agency to investigate further. (See Mot. Ex. 2 ¶ 4 & Exs. A–B.) As HMIT's pleadings and the documents presented to the EOUST show, and as will be further established at the hearing, these conclusory allegations have no basis in fact.

1. HMIT's Allegations Concerning Stonehill

47. HMIT's conclusory allegation that Seery and Stonehill had a "close business relationship" is based on two alleged "facts."

48. First, HMIT contends that Seery "joined a hedge fund, River Birth Capital," that "served on the creditors committee in other bankruptcy proceedings" with Stonehill. (Compl. ¶ 48.) But HMIT fails to (i) identify those proceedings or when they occurred; (ii) allege that Seery was aware of, let alone participated in, any "bankruptcy proceedings" with Stonehill; or (iii) suggest how the unidentified "bankruptcy proceedings" resulted in a relationship close enough to support the wide-ranging conspiracy HMIT imagines.

49. HMIT tries to bolster this supposed connection by pointing to a decade-old court filing showing that the law firm for which Seery worked (Sidley Austin LLP) represented a "Steering Group of Senior Secured Noteholders" in the Blockbuster bankruptcy, and that, at some point, Stonehill was one of five members of that group. (Mot. Ex. 2 at A-66.)[14] There is no evidence or non-conclusory allegation that Seery (or his then-firm) ever represented Stonehill individually or that any individual involved in the Blockbuster bankruptcy on Stonehill's behalf had any involvement in Stonehill's decision to purchase claims in the Highland bankruptcy.

50. Second, HMIT alleges that (i) a global asset management firm called GCM Grovesnor held four seats on the Redeemer Committee; (ii) "upon information and belief" GCM Grovesnor "is a significant investor in Stonehill and Farallon"; (iii) Grovesnor "through Redeemer, played a large part in appointing Seery as a director of Strand Advisors"; and (iv) Seery was therefore "beholden to Grovesnor from the outset, and, by extension, Grovesnor's affiliates Stonehill and Farralon [sic]." (Id.)

51. These allegations, however, are based on unsupported speculation and tortured inferences, and certain of them make no sense.[15]

2. HMIT's Allegations Concerning Farallon

52. Likewise, the speculative and unsupported allegations concerning Seery's alleged relationship with Farallon cannot withstand scrutiny.

[14] The Complaint incorrectly claims that "Seery represented Farallon as its legal counsel" (Compl. ¶ 48), but its Motion appends a court filing referring to Stonehill (Mot. Ex. 2 at A-66).

[15] For example, HMIT alleges that Grovesnor is a "significant investor" in Stonehill and Farallon and that Grovesnor is an "affiliate" of Stonehill and Farallon, while also effectively alleging that Stonehill and Farallon fleeced the Redeemer Committee by buying its claim while in possession of "material, non-public inside information." Notably, the Redeemer Committee—the actual party that would have been harmed if HMIT's allegations had any merit (which they do not)—has never sought to intervene in this matter even though Dondero first floated these allegations in 2021 as part of the First Rule 202 Petition (nor, for that matter, has Acis, UBS, or HarbourVest ever voiced any concerns about supposedly being victimized by the Claims Purchasers).

53. HMIT alleges "upon information and belief" that Seery "conducted substantial business with Farallon" while he was the Global Head of Fixed Income Loans at Lehman Brothers. (Compl. ¶ 48.) But the only "fact" supposedly supporting this broad allegation is a single page taken from (what appears to be) a Lehman Brothers real estate group promotional document stating that Farallon participated in a secured real estate loan in 2007. (Mot. Ex. 2 at A-65.) HMIT does not allege that Seery knew of, let alone participated in, this transaction, nor does it identify any other business (let alone "substantial business") that Seery allegedly conducted with Farallon while at Lehman Brothers.

F. HMIT's "Insider Trading" Allegations Are Unsupported And Provide No Foundation For The Purported Inferences.

54. One of HMIT's principal allegations is that, as part of the purported quid pro quo, Seery disclosed to the Claims Purchasers "material non-public inside" information concerning MGM that he obtained from Dondero to entice them to buy claims in Highland's bankruptcy case. (See, e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 13, 47, 50, 83, 89.)

1. Dondero's Description Of His Communication(s) With Farallon Have Changed Over Time.

55. HMIT's Motion is based in substantial part on Dondero's description of communication(s) he purportedly had with one or two representatives of Farallon in the "late spring" of 2021 concerning Farallon's acquisition of certain claims in the Highland bankruptcy. (Mot. ¶ 1 & Ex. 3; Morris Dec. Ex. 9.)

56. Because (i) Dondero's description of his communication(s) with Farallon has substantially changed over time, (ii) neither HMIT nor Dondero offer any rational reason why Farallon would voluntarily confess to improprieties to a third party with a well-earned reputation for using overly aggressive litigation tactics, and (iii) certain aspects of his various descriptions are contradicted by documentary evidence, they cannot be the basis for any claim.[16]

57. In the First Rule 202 Petition filed in July 2021, Dondero swore, among other things, that:

> [Seery] has an age-old connection to Farallon and, upon information and belief, advised Farallon to purchase the claims.
>
> On a telephone call between [Dondero] and a representative of Farallon, Michael Lin [sic], Mr. Lin [sic] informed [Dondero] that Farallon had purchased the claims sight unseen—relying entirely on Mr. Seery's advice solely because of their prior dealings.
>
> As Highland's current CEO, Mr. Seery had non-public, material information concerning Highland. Upon information and belief, such non-public, material information was the basis for instructing Farallon to purchase the Claims.

(Morris Dec. Ex. 3 ¶¶ 20–21, 23 ("Version 1").)

58. Version 1 is notable because it (i) did not state what Dondero said, if anything, (ii) referred to a single phone call, (iii) made no mention of MGM, (iv) made no mention of Raj Patel (who features later); and (v) stated only "upon information and belief" that Farallon purchased the Claims based on "non-public, material information."[17]

59. On May 2, 2022, Dondero amended the First Rule 202 Petition. In his new verified pleading, Dondero swore, among other things, that:

[16] Notably, there is no allegation that anyone ever communicated with Stonehill about its claims purchases (let alone obtained a "confession"); thus, HMIT's "conspiracy" theory against Stonehill rests on nothing but rank speculation based on unsupportable inferences.

[17] Later in 2021, Dondero "commissioned an investigation by counsel" who produced written reports to the EOUST. The first such report was prepared by Douglas Draper, counsel to Dondero's family trusts, and delivered to the EOUST on October 5, 2021. Draper provided several reasons to support his speculation that "Farallon and Stonehill may have been provided material, non-public information to induce their purchase of claims" and to justify his request for further investigation—but conspicuously failed to mention Dondero's telephone call(s) with Farallon. (Mot. Ex. 2-A at 7.)

> On a telephone call between [Dondero] and Michael Lin [sic], a representative of Farallon, Mr. Lin [sic] informed [Dondero] that Farallon had purchased the claims sight unseen and with no due diligence—100% relying on Mr. Seery's say-so because they had made so much money in the past when Mr. Seery told them to purchase claims.
>
> In other words, Mr. Seery had inside information on the price and value of the claims that he shared with no one but Farallon for their benefit.

(Id. Ex. 4 ¶¶ 22–24 ("Version 2") (emphasis added).)

60. Like Version 1, Version 2 also (i) did not state what Dondero said, if anything; (ii) referred to a single phone call; (iii) made no mention of MGM; and (iv) made no mention of Raj Patel. But in contrast to Version 1, Version 2 embellished Linn's alleged comments and—more importantly—now expressly asserted that Seery "shared" inside information with "no one but Farallon" rather that adopting Version 1's statement that "upon information and belief," Farallon purchased the Claims based on "non-public, material information."[18]

61. About four weeks later, Dondero provided yet another version of his discussion with Linn. In a declaration sworn to on May 31, 2022, Dondero stated, among other things, that:

> Last year, I called Farallon's Michael Lin [sic] about purchasing their claims in the bankruptcy. I offered them 30% more than what they paid. I was told by Michael Lin [sic] of Farallon that they purchased the interests without doing any due diligence other than what Mr. James Seery—the CEO of Highland—told them, and that he told them that the interests would be worth far more than what Farallon paid.

(Id. Ex. 5 ¶ 2 ("Version 3") (emphasis added).)

62. Version 3 introduces several new topics. For example, Dondero asserts for the first time that he called Linn because he was interested in purchasing Farallon's claims. Dondero also [18]If, as Dondero contends, Seery "shared" inside information with "no one but Farallon," then he did not share the inside information with Stonehill.

asserts that he offered "30% more than what they paid."[19] Finally, and significantly, Dondero asserts for the first time that Linn reported Seery telling him that the "interests would be worth far more than what Farallon paid."

63. On February 15, 2023, Dondero filed yet another sworn statement concerning his 2021 discussion(s) with Farallon, this time in support of HMIT's Verified Rule 202 Petition. (Id. Ex. 9.) In this version, Dondero stated that:

> In late Spring of 2021, I had phone calls with two principals at Farallon Capital Management, LLC ("Farallon"), Raj Patel and Michael Linn. During these phone calls, Mr. Patel and Mr. Linn informed me that Farallon had a deal in place to purchase the Acis and HarbourVest claims, which I understood to refer to claims that were a part of settlements in the HCM Bankruptcy Proceedings. Mr. Patel and Mr. Linn stated that Farallon agreed to purchase these claims based solely on conversations with Mr. Seery because they had made significant profits when Mr. Seery told them to purchase other claims in the past. They also stated that they were particularly optimistic because of the expected sale of MGM.

(id. Ex. 9 ¶ 4 ("Version 4") (emphasis added).)

64. Version 4 introduces still more new topics. For example, Dondero asserted for the first time that (i) more than one telephone call occurred; (ii) Raj Patel also participated in these calls on Farallon's behalf; (iii) he was told that "Farallon had a deal in place to purchase the Acis and HarbourVest claims"; and (iv) he learned that Farallon was "particularly optimistic because of the expected sale of MGM."

65. Finally, in its Motion, HMIT attributes statements to Farallon that even Dondero never described. For example, HMIT contends that "Farallon bragged about the value of its investment referencing non-public information regarding Amazon, Inc.'s ('Amazon') interest in

[19] Ironically, Dondero appears to have offered to purchase Farallon's claims without conducting any due diligence because (i) he provides no indication that he knew at that time how much Farallon paid for its claims yet he blindly offered to pay "30% more than what" Farallon paid, and (ii) HMIT alleges that the Debtor was not transparent. (See Compl. ¶¶ 51–53.)

acquiring Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios Inc." (Mot. ¶ 32.)[20] While HMIT cites Version 4 as support, neither that version nor any prior version is consistent with HMIT's description of Dondero's purported communication(s) with Farallon.[21]

2. Dondero's Offer to Purchase Farallon's and Stonehill's Claims In 2022 Contradicts HMIT's Allegations.

66. According to HMIT, Dondero offered to buy Farallon's claims in the Highland bankruptcy for 30% more than what Farallon was paid, but that Farallon insisted it would not sell at any price. (Morris Dec. Ex. 5 ¶ 2.)

67. Yet, on October 14, 2022, before the Second Rule 202 Petition was filed, HCMFA (one of Dondero's advisory firms) made written offers to Stonehill and Farallon to purchase their claims at cost "plus a five percent (5%) return." (Morris Dec. Ex. 35.) Dondero's offer to purchase claims at 5% above cost is inconsistent with his purported knowledge that Farallon would not sell at any price.

G. A Rational Basis Exists For the Claims Purchases—Although Only the Claim Sellers Could Have Been Harmed in Any Event.

68. HMIT insists that it "made no sense" for the Claims Purchasers to buy claims because "the publicly available information [] did not offer a sufficient potential profit to justify the publicly disclosed risk," and "their investment was projected to yield a small return with [20] This purported statement that HMIT attributes to Farallon makes little sense because the MGM-Amazon deal was publicly announced on May 26, 2021 (Morris Dec. Ex. 34), before Dondero and Farallon ever spoke.

[21] Conspicuously absent from HMIT's pleadings is any evidence corroborating any of the five versions of Dondero's conversation(s) with Farallon. Given the importance of the Farallon's alleged confessional, one would have expected Dondero to contemporaneously (i) send a confirming e-mail to Farallon to make sure there was a written record of the discussion, (ii) send an e-mail to a colleague so that others were informed, (iii) make notes to himself; or (iv) tell someone what happened. Yet, no such corroborating evidence was presented or referred to in the First Rule 202 Petition, either of the EOUST Letters, the Second Rule 202 Petition, the Motion, the original proposed Complaint, the Supplement, or the amended proposed Complaint.

virtually no margin for error." (Compl. ¶ 3.) HMIT's arguments are belied by the publicly available facts and its own allegations.

69. In advance of Plan confirmation, the Debtor projected that Class 8 general unsecured creditors would recover 71.32% on their allowed claims. (Docket No. 1875 Ex. A.) In its proposed Complaint, HMIT sets forth the amounts the Claims Purchasers purportedly paid for their claims. (Compl. ¶ 42.) Taking into account the face amount of the allowed claims, the Claims Purchasers' projected profits (in millions of dollars) were as follows:

Creditor	Class 8	Class 9	Ascribed Value[22]	Purchaser	Purchase Price	Projected Profit
Redeemer	$137.0	$0.0	$97.71	Stonehill	$78.0	$19.71
Acis	$23.0	$0.0	$16.4	Farallon	$8.0	$8.40
HarbourVest	$45.0	$35.0	$32.09	Farallon	$27.0	$5.09
UBS	$65.0	$60.0	$46.39	Stonehill & Farallon	$50.0	($3.61)

70. As HMIT acknowledges, by the time Dondero spoke with Farallon in the "late spring" of 2021, the Claims Purchasers had acquired the allowed claims previously held by Acis, Redeemer, and HarbourVest. (Compl. ¶ 41 n.12.)[23] Based on an aggregate purchase price of $113 million, the Claims Purchasers would have expected to net over $33 million in profits, or nearly 30% on their investment, had Highland met its projections. The Claims Purchasers would make even more money if Highland beat its projections because they also purchased the Class 9 claims, and would therefore capture any upside. In this context, HMIT assertions in its proposed Complaint lack any rational basis.

[22] "Ascribed Value" is derived by multiplying the Class 8 amount by the projected recovery of 71.32% for that class.

[23] The UBS claims were not acquired until August 2021, long after the alleged "quid pro quo" was supposedly agreed upon and the MGM-Amazon deal was announced. (Morris Dec. Ex. 34.)

71. Notably, none of the selling claimholders—all of which are sophisticated parties that were represented by sophisticated counsel—have raised any objections or complaints. In fact, three of the four selling claimholders (Redeemer, Acis, and UBS) were members of the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors.

72. Finally, even if HMIT's allegations had any merit (they do not), only the selling claimholders would have cause to complain. The estate (and HMIT) would not have been harmed because it made (and may in the future make) the exact same distributions to claimholders regardless of what entity owns the claims.

H. Seery's Compensation Structure Is Consistent With The Plan And The Trust Agreement, And Was The Product Of Arms'-Length Negotiations.

73. According to HMIT, Seery provided "material non-public information" to the Claims Purchasers so that he could someday "plant friendly allies onto the [COB] to rubber stamp compensation demands." (Mot. ¶ 22; see also id. ¶¶ 3, 24, 48.) HMIT alleges in its revised Complaint:

> As part of the scheme, the Defendant Purchasers obtained a position to approve Seery's ongoing compensation – to Seery's benefit and also to the detriment of the Claimant Trust, the Reorganized Debtor, and HMIT. Initially, Seery's compensation package was composed of a flat monthly pay [sic]. Now, however, it is also performance based. This allows the Defendant Purchasers to satisfy the quid pro quo at the heart of the scheme. Seery would help the Defendant Purchasers make large profits and they would help enrich Seery with big pay days.

(Compl. ¶ 4.)

74. Notably, these allegations (i) describe a compensation structure that is entirely consistent with the incentive compensation plan structure in the Court-confirmed Plan and set forth in the Trust Agreement; and (ii) are devoid of any actual facts (e.g., the terms of Seery's compensation plan or how it was calculated or negotiated). In reality, Seery's compensation package was the product of arm's-length negotiations with the COB (including the active participation of the COB's independent member) over a four-month period, the result of which was an incentive compensation plan that aligned Seery's interests with those of the Claimant Trust Beneficiaries (i.e., to maximize value and creditor recoveries).

75. As a threshold matter, HMIT's allegation that "[i]nitially, Seery's compensation package was composed of a flat monthly pay [sic]" (Compl. ¶ 4]) is plainly wrong. Seery was appointed Highland's Chief Executive Officer (effective as of March 15, 2020) pursuant to a Bankruptcy Court order entered on July 16, 2020 without objection. (Morris Dec. Ex. 36 (the "July Order").) The July Order approved the terms of a separate employment agreement (a copy of which was included in the Debtor's motion (Docket No. 774 Ex. A-1) and attached to the July Order) (the "Original Employment Agreement").

76. Under the Original Employment Agreement, Seery was to receive (i) Base Compensation in the amount of $150,000 per month, plus (ii) a Restructuring Fee, the amount of which would be determined by whether a Case Resolution Plan (i.e., a plan with substantial creditor support) or a Monetization Vehicle Plan (i.e., a plan lacking substantial creditor support) was achieved (as those terms are defined in the Original Employment Agreement).

77. On November 24, 2020, after notice and a hearing, the Bankruptcy Court entered an Order (Docket No. 1476) approving the adequacy of The Disclosure Statement of the Fifth Amended Plan of Reorganization of Highland Capital Management, L.P. (Morris Dec. Ex. 37 (the "Disclosure Statement").) The Disclosure Statement provided in pertinent part that:

> The salient terms of each Trustee's employment, including such Trustee's duties and compensation shall be set forth in the Claimant Trust Agreement . . . . The Trustees shall each be entitled to reasonable compensation in an amount consistent with that of similar functionaries in similar types of bankruptcy cases.

(Id. Art. III.F.2(e); see Plan Art. IV.B.6 (incorporating identical language).)

78. The Trust Agreement was part of a Plan Supplement (as amended) filed in advance of the confirmation hearing (Morris Dec. Ex. 38), and provided in pertinent part:

> Compensation. As compensation for any services rendered by the Claimant Trustee in connection with this Agreement, the Claimant Trustee shall receive compensation of $150,000 per month (the "Base Salary"). Within the first forty-five days following the Confirmation Date, the Claimant Trustee on the one hand, and the Committee, if prior to the Effective Date, or the Oversight Board, if on or after the Effective Date, on the other, will negotiate go-forward compensation for the Claimant Trustee which will include (a) the Base Salary, (b) a success fee, and (c) severance.

(Trust Agmt. § 3.13(a)(i).)[24]

79. The Plan went effective on August 11, 2021, and, as a result, the COB was formed. The COB ultimately had three members: a representative of Farallon (Michael Linn), a representative of Stonehill (Christopher Provost), and an independent member (Richard Katz).

80. On August 26, 2021, the COB held a regularly scheduled meeting during which it discussed the incentive compensation program ("ICP"). The minutes of this meeting reflect that:

> Mr. Seery also presented the Board with an overview of his Incentive Compensation Program proposal which would include not only Mr. Seery but the current HCMLP team. (The terms and structure of the proposal had been previewed with the Board in prior operating models presented by Mr. Seery.) Mr. [Seery] reviewed the proposal and stated his view that the proposal was market based and was designed to align incentives between himself and the HCMLP team on the one hand and the Claimant Trust [B]eneficiaries on the other. The Board asked questions regarding proposal and determined that is [sic] would consider the proposal and revert to Mr. Seery with a counter proposal.

(Morris Dec. Ex. 39 (emphasis added).)

[24] Seery was designated as the "Claimant Trustee" under the Trust Agreement. (Trust Agmt. 38 §1.1(e).

81. Far from being a "rubber stamp," the minutes show that the COB did not simply accept Seery's initial proposed ICP but "asked questions" and indicated that it would provide a "counter proposal."

82. On August 30, 2021, the COB convened for "an off-cycle (non-regular) meeting." As reflected in the minutes of this meeting, the COB again discussed the ICP:

> Mr. Katz began the meeting by walking the Oversight Board and Mr. Seery through the Oversight Board's counter-proposal to the HCMLP incentive compensation proposal, including the review of a spreadsheet and summary of the counter-proposal. Discussion was joined by Mr. Linn and Mr. Stern. Mr. Seery asked numerous questions and received detailed responses from the Oversight Board. Mr. Seery and the Oversight Board agreed to continue the discussion and negotiations regarding the proposed incentive compensation plan for the Claimant Trustee and the HCMLP [employees].

(Id. Ex. 40 (emphasis added).)

83. Seery and the COB continued to exchange and discuss additional proposals and counter-proposals over the coming months.[25] Finally, on December 6, 2021, Seery and the COB executed a Memorandum of Agreement stating that:

> In accordance with the provisions of the Highland Claimant Trust Agreement and the Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("HCMLP") Plan of Reorganization, the Oversight Board of the Highland Claimant Trust and the Claimant Trustee/Chief Executive Officer of HCMLP engaged in robust, arm's length and good faith negotiations regarding the incentive compensation program for the Claimant Trust/CEO and the HCMLP post-effective date operating team ("HCMLP Team"). After considering various structures and incentives to motivate performance on behalf of the Claimant Trust, the parties reached the binding

[25] In particular, (i) Seery delivered another proposal to the COB on October 9, 2021, which he further revised later in the month; (ii) Katz (the independent COB member) responded on behalf of the COB on October 26 and proposed that the parties agree upon the structure of the proposal before addressing the specific numbers; (iii) Seery responded on November 3; (iv) further discussions were held on November 9; (v) on November 17, Linn provided a "wholesome response" in which he "updated the term sheet" and raised certain issues that he did not believe would have "much a difference for this negotiation"; (vi) Seery wrote to the COB indicating that he wanted to "finalize the ICP" but had "a couple of asks and one question"; and (vii) still further negotiations took place thereafter.

> agreement reflected in the attached HCMLP and Claimant Trust Management Incentive Compensation Program.

(Morris Dec. Ex. 41 (emphasis added).)

84. Notably, in November 2021, one of the "investigative reports" commissioned by Dondero incorrectly speculated that "Mr. Seery's success fee presumably will be based on whether the Plan outperforms what was disclosed in the Plan Analysis." (Mot. Ex. 2-B at 14.) In fact, Seery's bonus is tied to creditor recoveries so that the interests of stakeholders are aligned.

85. Dondero's commissioned report also incorrectly "estimate[d] that, based on the estate's [alleged] $600 million value today, Mr. Seery's success fee could be approximate [sic] $50 million." (Id.) In reality, under the negotiated terms of the ICP (Morris Dec. Ex. 41), the maximum bonus Seery can receive is approximately $8.8 million—which would require all Class 8 and 9 claimholders to receive cash distributions for the full amount of their claims plus interest—82.4% less than the baseless success fee presented to the EOUST on Dondero's behalf.

RELEVANT PROCEDURAL HISTORY

86. To avoid the appointment of a Chapter 11 trustee, on January 9, 2020, this Court approved a settlement (the "January Order"; Docket No. 339) removing Dondero from control of Highland and appointing an Independent Board consisting of John Dubel, Russell Nelms, and Seery (the "Independent Directors"). The January Order prohibited litigation against the Independent Directors without this Court's prior authorization and limited claims to those arising from willful misconduct or gross negligence.[26]

[26] (January Order ¶ 10 ("No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against any Independent Director . . . relating in any way to the Independent Director's role as an independent director . . . without the Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Independent Director . . . .").)

87. Highland later moved to have Seery appointed its Chief Executive Officer and Chief Restructuring Officer. This Court approved his appointment in the July Order (Morris Dec. Ex. 36), which like the January Order, prohibited litigation against Seery without this Court's prior authorization and limited claims to those arising from willful misconduct or gross negligence.[27]

88. On February 22, 2021, this Court issued the Confirmation Order confirming the Plan. The confirmed Plan included the Gatekeeper Provision prohibiting Enjoined Parties, including HMIT, from bringing claims against Protected Parties, including Seery, unless, after notice and a hearing, this Court found the claims "colorable." (Plan Art. IX.F.) The Gatekeeper Provision was affirmed by the Fifth Circuit. NexPoint, 48 F.4th at 425–26, 435–39. The detail factual findings in the Confirmation Order supporting the Gatekeeper Provision were not challenged or disturbed on appeal.

89. On August 11, 2021, the Plan became effective (Docket No. 2700), and pursuant to the Plan:

- All prepetition partnership interests in the Debtor, including HMIT's, were cancelled;
- HCMLP was reorganized as a Delaware limited liability partnership;
- The Trust, a Delaware statutory trust, was established pursuant to the Trust Agreement;
- HCMLP's limited partnership interests were issued to the Trust;
- HCMLP's general partnership interests were issued to HCMLP GP LLC, a newly-established Delaware limited liability company;

[27] (July Order ¶ 5 ("No entity may commence or pursue a claim or cause of action of any kind against Mr. Seery relating in any way to his role as the chief executive officer and chief restructuring officer of the Debtor without the Bankruptcy Court (i) first determining after notice that such claim or cause of action represents a colorable claim of willful misconduct or gross negligence against Mr. Seery . . . .").)

- The majority of HCMLP's assets, including its "Causes of Action,"[28] were transferred to the Trust;

- Seery was appointed reorganized HCMLP's Chief Executive Officer and trustee of the Trust (the "Claimant Trustee");

- "Estate Claims" (i.e., Causes of Action against HCMLP's insiders)[29] were transferred to the newly-established Highland Litigation Sub-Trust (the "Litigation Trust"), a Delaware statutory trust and subsidiary of the Trust;

- An oversight board was appointed to oversee the management of the Trust, reorganized HCMLP, and the Litigation Trust;

- Holders of allowed general and subordinated unsecured claims (i.e., Class 8 and 9) received interests in the Trust (collectively, the "Trust Interests") and became "Claimant Trust Beneficiaries" (as defined in the Plan); and

- Holders of the Debtor's prepetition partnership interests (i.e., Class 10 and 11) were allocated unvested contingent interests (the "Contingent Interests") in the Trust that vest if, and only if, the Claimant Trustee certifies that all Claimant Trust Beneficiaries (i.e., Class 8 and 9) have been paid in full, Class 8 have received post-petition interest, and all disputed claims in Class 8 and 9 have been resolved.

(See Plan Art. IV.)

90. On October 8, 2021, the Trust irrevocably transferred and assigned to the Litigation Trust "any and all Causes of Action not previously transferred or assigned by operation of the Plan, the Litigation Sub-Trust Agreement, or otherwise" except for causes of action then being

[28] "Causes of Action" are defined in the Plan as: "any action, claim, cross-claim, third-party claim, cause of action, controversy, demand, right, Lien, indemnity, contribution, guaranty, suit, obligation, liability, debt, damage, judgment, account, defense, remedy, offset, power, privilege, license and franchise of any kind or character whatsoever, in each case whether known, unknown, contingent or non-contingent, matured or unmatured, suspected or unsuspected, liquidated or unliquidated, disputed or undisputed, foreseen or unforeseen, direct or indirect, choate or inchoate, secured or unsecured, assertable directly or derivatively (including, without limitation, under alter ego theories), whether arising before, on, or after the Petition Date, in contract or in tort, in law or in equity or pursuant to any other theory of law." (Plan Art. I.B.19.)

[29] "Estate Claims" are defined in the Plan as "estate claims and causes of action against Dondero, Okada, other insiders of the Debtor, and each of the Related Entities, including any promissory notes held by any of the foregoing" other than causes of action against any current employee of Highland other than Dondero. (Plan Art. I.B.61.)

pursued by the Trust or which the Trust intended to pursue on behalf of entities managed by reorganized HCMLP. (See Morris Dec. Ex. 42.)[30]

91. On March 28, 2023, HMIT filed its Initial Motion with a proposed Verified Adversary Complaint totaling 387 pages with exhibits. This Court scheduled a conference for Monday, April 24, 2023. (Docket No. 3751.) On Friday, April 21, 2023, HMIT filed objections to any evidentiary hearing or briefing on its Initial Motion. ("Objs."; Docket No. 3758.) On Sunday, April 23, 2023, HMIT filed a Supplemental Motion with an amended proposed Verified Adversary Complaint, which added HCMLP and the Trust as nominal defendants and dropped a claim for "fraud by misrepresentation and material nondisclosure." (Docket No. 3760.) On April 24, 2023, this Court held a conference, set a briefing schedule on the Motion, and scheduled a hearing for June 8, 2023. (Docket Nos. 3763–64.)

LEGAL STANDARD

92. HMIT concedes, as it must, that its proposed lawsuit is subject to this Court's "gatekeeping protocol," and "the injunction and exculpation provision in the Plan." (Mot. ¶¶ 1, 4, 14; Supp. Mot. ¶ 11.) But HMIT fundamentally misunderstands the threshold showing it must make to clear that hurdle.

A. HMIT Misconstrues The "Colorability" Standard Established In The Gatekeeper Provision.

93. This Court made extensive factual findings and approved the Gatekeeper Provision on two grounds: (i) "the Supreme Court's 'Barton Doctrine,' Barton v. Barbour, 104 U.S. 126 (1881))," and (ii) "the notion of a prefiling injunction to deter vexatious litigants[] that has been approved by Fifth Circuit." (Confirmation Order ¶¶ 76–81.) Those doctrines operate to "prevent baseless litigation designed merely to harass the post-confirmation entities," "avoid abuse of the court system," and "preempt the use of judicial time that properly could be used to consider the meritorious claims of other litigants." (Id. ¶ 79.) The Fifth Circuit confirmed that "the injunction and gatekeeping provisions are sound," explaining that "[c]ourts have long recognized bankruptcy courts can perform a gatekeeping function," including "[u]nder the 'Barton' doctrine." NexPoint, 48 F.4th at 435, 438–39 (collecting cases). The Fifth Circuit further recognized that the Gatekeeper Provision here was necessary to prevent "bad-faith litigation" from consuming the resources of the reorganized debtor and those working to maximize claims of legitimate stakeholders. Id.

94. Under the Barton doctrine, "[a] party seeking leave of court to sue a trustee must make a prima facie case against the trustee, showing that its claim is not without foundation." VistaCare, 678 F.3d at 232 (cleaned up) (citing Anderson v. United States, 520 F.2d 1027, 1029 (5th Cir. 1975); Kashani v. Fulton (In re Kashani), 190 B.R. 875, 885 (B.A.P. 9th Cir 1995)); see also, e.g., CFTC v. Hunter Wise Commodities, LLC, 2020 WL 13413703, at *1 (S.D. Fla. Mar. 5, 2020) ("Under the Barton doctrine, . . . before leave to sue a receiver or trustee is granted, the plaintiff must demonstrate that he has a prima facie case against the trustee or receiver.") (citing Anderson, 520 F.2d at 1029); Fin. Indus. Assoc. v. SEC, 2013 WL 11327680, at *4 (M.D. Fla. July 24, 2013) (same). Contrary to HMIT's contention, this standard "involves a greater degree of flexibility" than a "Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss," because "the bankruptcy court, which, given its familiarity with the underlying facts and the parties, is uniquely situated to determine whether a claim against the trustee has merit," and "[t]he bankruptcy court is also uniquely situated to determine the potential effect of a judgment against the trustee on the debtor's estate." VistaCare, 678 F.3d at 233 (emphasis added).

95. To satisfy the "prima facie case standard," "the movant must do more than meet the liberal notice-pleading requirements of Rule 8." In re World Mktg. Chi., LLC, 584 B.R. 737, 743 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2018) (cleaned up; collecting cases). "[I]f the [bankruptcy] court relied on mere notice-pleading standards rather than evaluating the merits of the allegations, the leave requirement would become meaningless." Leighton Holdings, Ltd. v. Belofsky (In re Kids Creek Partners, L.P.), 2000 WL 1761020, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Nov. 30, 2000). "To apply a less stringent standard would eviscerate the protections" of the Gatekeeper Provision. World, 584 B.R. at 743 (quoting Leighton, 2000 WL 1761020, at *2).

96. Similarly, courts in the vexatious litigant context require the movant to "show that the claims sought to be asserted have sufficient merit," including that "the proposed filing is both procedural and legally sound," and "that the claims are not brought for any improper purpose, such as harassment." Silver v. City of San Antonio, 2020 WL 3803922, at *1 (W.D. Tex. July 7, 2020) (denying leave to file lawsuit); see also Silver v. Perez, 2020 WL 3790489, at *1 (W.D. Tex. July 7, 2020) (same). "[T]o protect courts and innocent parties from abusive and vexatious litigation[,] . . . courts may apply whatever standard deemed warranted when reviewing the proposed complaint." Silver, 2020 WL 3803922, at *6. "For a prefiling injunction to have the intended impact, it must not merely require a reviewing official to apply an already existing level of review," such as the "plausibility" standard for a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Id. Rather, courts apply "an additional layer of review," and "may appropriately deny leave to file when even part of the pleading fails to satisfy the reviewer that it warrants a federal civil action" or that the "litigant's allegations are unlikely," especially "when prior cases have shown the litigant to be untrustworthy or not credible . . . ." Id.

97. HMIT argues that "a claim is colorable if it is 'plausible' and could survive a motion to dismiss" under Rule 12(b)(6). (Mot. ¶¶ 38–42.) But HMIT's motion does not even mention the specific bases this Court invoked in the Confirmation Order—the Barton doctrine and vexatious-litigant provisions—as supporting the Gatekeeper Provision, much less has HMIT identified a single case in the Barton doctrine or vexatious litigant context that supports its interpretation. (Id.; see also Morris Dec. Ex. 43 at 15:25–16:4 (THE COURT: "[D]id you find any legal authority in the Barton doctrine context that you think sheds light? Because that seems to me the most analogous context, right?" MR. MCENTIRE: "Specifically to answer -- to respond to your question directly, the answer is no.").) HMIT relies instead on cases from inapposite contexts, such as whether a bankruptcy court should grant a creditor's committee derivative standing after a trustee or debtor-in-possession declined to pursue a claim.[31] None of those cases, of course, involves gatekeeping orders entered in response to a pattern of abusive conduct that specifically rely on Barton and vexatious-litigant authorities. Moreover, and as discussed below, even those cases recognize that a claim must not only be likely to survive a motion to dismiss, but also that the debtor has "unjustifiably" refused to pursue it. La. World, 858 F.2d at 247–48. That requirement demands that the proposed claims be subjected to a realistic cost-benefit analysis, which here would be fatal to HMIT's speculative, Hail Mary conspiracy theory.

98. HMIT also relies on a series of cases that are even farther afield from the Gatekeeper Provision here. Those include benefits coverage disputes under ERISA, Medicare coverage disputes, and constitutional challenges.[32] None of those cases implicate the Barton doctrine and vexatious-litigant concerns. (See Mot. ¶¶ 39–41; Objs. ¶¶ 9–13.)

B. Evidentiary Hearing

99. Courts in the Barton doctrine context regularly conduct an evidentiary hearing to determine whether a proposed complaint meets the necessary threshold. "Whether to hold a hearing is within the sound discretion of the bankruptcy court." VistaCare, at 232 n.12 "[T]he decision whether to grant leave may involve a 'balancing of the interests of all parties involved," which will ordinarily require an evidentiary hearing. Id. at 233 (quoting Kashani, 190 B.R. at 886–87). In VistaCare, for example, the bankruptcy court "held a hearing on CGL's motion for leave" in which "the sole owner of CGL, and the Trustee, testified." Id. at 223, 232. The Fifth Circuit has affirmed a colorability analysis in the Barton context, which involved an evidentiary hearing, without any concern that the inquiry was somehow improper. See Foster v. Aurzada (In re Foster), 2023 WL 20872, at *1 (5th Cir. Jan. 3, 2023) (affirming dismissal of an action to sue a trustee under Barton "[a]fter a hearing [by] the bankruptcy court"); Howell v. United States, 468 U.S. 317, 326 n.6 (1984) (discussing whether criminal defendant's double jeopardy claim was "colorable" such that it could be appealed before final judgments); Trippodo v. SP Plus Corp., 2021 WL 2446204, at *3 (S.D. Tex. June 15, 2021) (assessing whether plaintiff stated a "colorable claim" against proposed additional defendants in determining whether plaintiff could amend complaint); Reyes v. Vanmatre, 2021 WL 5905557, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 13, 2021) (same); Family Rehab., Inc. v. Azar, 886 F.3d 496, 504 n.15 (5th Cir. 2018) (assessing whether plaintiff raised a "colorable claim" to warrant the district court's exercise of jurisdiction over a Medicare coverage dispute); Am. Med. Hospice Care, LLC v. Azar, 2020 WL 9814144, at *5 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 9, 2020) (same); Harry v. Colvin, 2013 WL 12174300, at *5 (W.D. Tex. Nov. 6, 2013) (considering whether plaintiff asserted a "colorable constitutional claim" such that the court could exercise jurisdiction); Sabhari v. Mukasey, 522 F.3d 842, 844 (8th Cir. 2008) (same); Stanley v. Gonzales, 476 F.3d 653, 657 (9th Cir. 2007) (same).

close examination" of the evidence revealed only that the trustee "acted within the scope of [his] duties"), aff'd 799 F. App'x 271 (5th Cir. 2020).

100. Recognizing that the Barton doctrine requires more than a mere Rule 12(b)(6) analysis, courts of appeals routinely review "a bankruptcy court's decision to grant a motion for leave to sue a trustee under the deferential abuse of discretion standard." VistaCare, 678 F.3d at 224 (citing In re Linton, 136 F.3d 544, 546 (7th Cir. 1998); In re Beck Indus., Inc., 725 F.2d 880, 889 (2d Cir. 1984)).[33] Application of the Rule 12(b)(6) standard, of course, is subject to de novo review. Indeed, as this Court noted at the April 24, 2023 status conference, HMIT's "original motion for leave attached something like 387 pages of not just Dondero affidavits, but other evidentiary support," which is inconsistent with HMIT's position that this Court "just need[ed] to look at the four corners and apply a 12(b)(6) standard." (Morris Dec. Ex. 43 at 43:16–18, 44:4–7.) Although HMIT's belatedly counsel suggested it might seek to "withdraw the Dondero affidavits" (id. at 22:17–18), HMIT has filed no such motion and "reserve[d] the opportunity to revisit the issue of withdrawing Mr. Dondero's declarations" (id. at 55:1–5). As this Court noted, "parties are always given the chance to cross-examine an affiant or a declarant." (Id. at 22:2–3.) This Court should exercise its discretion to hold an evidentiary hearing to permit the parties to present evidence, including through cross-examination of Dondero—even if HMIT now engages in gamesmanship by seeking to withdraw the Dondero declarations before the hearing.

[33] Although the Fifth Circuit has not squarely addressed this issue, all nine Circuits that have considered this issue have also adopted an abuse-of-discretion standard. See In re Bednar, 2021 WL 1625399, at *3 (B.A.P. 10th Cir. Apr. 27, 2021) ("[T]he Bankruptcy Court's decision to decline leave to sue the Trustee under the Barton doctrine is reviewed for abuse of discretion . . . .") (citing VistaCare); SEC v. N. Am. Clearing, Inc., 656 F. App'x 969, 973–74 (11th Cir. 2016) ("Although we have never determined the standard of review for a challenge to the denial of a Barton motion, other Circuits that have considered the issue review a lower court's ruling on a Barton motion for an abuse of discretion.") (citing VistaCare); In re Lupo, 2014 WL 4653064, at *3 (B.A.P. 1st Cir. Sept. 17, 2014) ("Appellate courts review a bankruptcy court's decision to deny a motion for leave to sue under the abuse of discretion standard.") (citing VistaCare); Grant, Konvalinka & Harrison, PC v. Banks (In re McKenzie), 716 F.3d 404, 422 (6th Cir. 2013) (holding that abuse-of-discretion standard applies to Barton doctrine); Alexander v. Hedback, 718 F.3d 762 (8th Cir. 2013) (applying abuse-of-discretion standard to Barton doctrine).

C. Exculpation and Release

101. This Court's January Order and July Order exculpated Seery from all claims except "those alleging willful misconduct and gross negligence." (January Order ¶ 10; July Order ¶ 5.) The Plan's exculpation provision also limited claims against Seery, in his role as an Independent Director, to those arising "from willful misconduct, criminal misconduct…or gross negligence." (Plan Art. IV.D; Confirmation Order ¶¶ 72–73.) The Trust Agreement similarly limits claims against Seery to "fraud, willful misconduct, or gross negligence." (Trust Agmt. § 8.1; see also id. §§ 8.3–8.4.) Thus, HMIT cannot assert claims other than those expressly permitted under these Orders and court-approved documents.

ARGUMENT

102. HMIT lacks standing to bring the derivative claims alleged in the Complaint (see infra Sections I–II), did not satisfy the procedural requirements to bring derivative claims (see infra Section III), and cannot bring derivative claims under the guise of direct claims (see infra Section IV). Even if HMIT could assert claims (which it cannot), they fail under any standard (see infra Section V).

I. HMIT Lacks Standing To Bring Derivative Claims Under Delaware Law.

103. HMIT acknowledges that any "fiduciary duties and claims involving breaches of those duties" with respect to HCMLP and the Claimant Trust are "governed by Delaware law" under the "Internal Affairs Doctrine." (Motion ¶ 21 & n.24; see also Plan Art. XII.M ("corporate governance matters . . . shall be governed by the laws of the state of organization" of the respective entity)); Sagarra Inversiones, S.L. v. Cementos Portland Valderrivas, S.A., 34 A.3d 1074, 1081–82 (Del. 2011) ("In American corporation law, the internal affairs doctrine is a dominant and overarching choice of law principle."). HMIT lacks standing to bring any such claims under Delaware law.

A. HMIT Lacks Standing To Bring Derivative Claims On Behalf Of The Trust.

104. The Trust is a Delaware statutory trust governed by the Delaware Statutory Trust Act, 12 Del. C. §§ 3801–29. (Compl. ¶ 26.) "[T]o proceed derivatively against a Delaware statutory trust, a plaintiff has the burden of satisfying the continuous ownership requirement" such that "the plaintiff must be a beneficial owner" continuously from "the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains" through "the time of bringing the action." Hartsel v. Vanguard Grp., Inc., 2011 WL 2421003, at *19 n.123 (Del. Ch. June 15, 2011), aff'd 38 A.3d 1254 (Del. 2012); 12 Del C. § 3816(b). This requirement is "mandatory and exclusive" and only "a beneficial owner" "has standing to bring a derivative claim on behalf of the Trust." In re Nat'l Coll. Student Loan Tr. Litig., 251 A.3d 116, 191 (Del. Ch. 2020) (citing CML V, LLC v. Bax, 28 A.3d 1037, 1042 (Del. 2011)).

105. HMIT is not a "beneficial owner" of the Trust and therefore lacks standing to bring derivative claims on its behalf. The "beneficial owners" of the Trust are the "Claimant Trust Beneficiaries." (See Trust Agmt. § 2.8 ("The Claimant Trust Beneficiaries shall be the sole beneficiaries of the Claimant Trust . . . .").) The Claimant Trust Beneficiaries are "the Holders of Allowed General Unsecured Claims" and "Holders of Allowed Subordinated Claims." (Plan Art. I.B.44; see also Trust Agmt. § 1.1(h).)[34] HMIT is neither. HMIT was an "equity holder in the

[34] (See Morris Dec. Ex. 1, Plan Art. I.B.44 ("'Claimant Trust Beneficiaries' means the Holders of Allowed General Unsecured Claims, Holders of Allowed Subordinated Claims, including, upon Allowance, Disputed General Unsecured Claims and Disputed Subordinated Claims that become Allowed following the Effective Date, and, only upon certification by the Claimant Trustee that the Holders of such Claims have been paid indefeasibly in full plus, to the extent all Allowed unsecured Claims, excluding Subordinated Claims, have been paid in full, post-petition interest from the Petition Date at the Federal Judgment Rate in accordance with the terms and conditions set forth in the Claimant Trust Agreement and all Disputed Claims in Class 8 and Class 9 have been resolved, Holders of Allowed Class B/C Limited Partnership Interests, and Holders of Allowed Class A Limited Partnership Interests."); Trust Agmt. at 1 n.2 ("For the avoidance of doubt, and as set forth in the Plan, Holders of Class A Limited Partnership Interests and Class B/C Limited Partnership Interests will be Claimant Trust Beneficiaries only upon certification by the Claimant Trustee that the Holders of such Claims have been paid indefeasibly in full plus, to the extent applicable, post-petition interest in accordance with the terms and conditions set forth herein and in the Plan.").)

Original Debtor" and now holds only an unvested "Contingent Trust Interest in the Claimant Trust." (Compl. ¶ 24.) HMIT argues, without justification, that it "should be treated as a vested Claimant Trust Beneficiary." (Id.) But, under the Trust Agreement, "Contingent Trust Interests" "shall not have any rights under this Agreement" and will not "be deemed 'Beneficiaries' under this Agreement," "unless and until" they vest in accordance with the Plan and Trust Agreement. (Trust Agmt. § 5.1(c).) Because it is undisputed that the Contingent Trust Interests have not vested, HMIT is not a "beneficial owner" and lacks standing to bring derivative claims under Delaware law. See Nat'l Coll., 251 A.3d at 190–92 (dismissing creditors' derivative claims because they were not "beneficial owners of the Trusts"); Hartsel, 2011 WL 2421003, at *19 n.123 (dismissing derivative claims by investors that "no longer own shares" because "those investors no longer have standing to pursue a derivative claim").[35]

B. HMIT Lacks Standing To Bring Derivative Claims On HCMLP's Behalf.

106. Reorganized HCMLP is a Delaware a limited liability partnership governed by the Delaware Limited Partnership Act, 6 Del. C. § 17-101, et seq. (Compl. ¶ 25.) To bring "a derivative action" on behalf of a limited partnership, "the plaintiff must be a partner or an assignee of a partnership interest" continuously from "the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains" through "the time of bringing the action." 6 Del. C. § 17-1002; see Tow v. Amegy Bank, N.A., 976 F. Supp. 2d 889, 904 (S.D. Tex. 2013) ("The [Delaware] partnership act facially bars any party other than a limited partner from suing derivatively. . . . Delaware courts historically have interpreted the provisions as giving the partners exclusive rights to sue for breach of another [35] If HMIT were a Claimant Trust Beneficiary (which it is not), its claims must be brought in this Court and it has "waived any right to a trial jury." (Trust Agmt. § 5.10(d).) HMIT would also be required to reimburse the Claimant Trustee and any member of the COB if its suit fails (id. § 5.10(b)), and this Court could require HMIT "to post a bond ensuring that the full costs of a legal defense can be reimbursed" (id. § 5.10(c)). The Highland Parties reserve the right to seek reimbursement and posting of a bond commensurate with the enormous burdens this litigation would impose.

party's fiduciary duties to them.") (quoting CML V, LLC v. Bax, 6 A.3d 238, 245 (Del. Ch. 2010), aff'd 28 A.3d 1037 (Del. 2011)); El Paso Pipeline GP Co. v. Brinckerhoff, 152 A.3d 1248, 1265 n.87 (Del. 2016) ("The statutory foundation for the continuous ownership requirement in the corporate realm is echoed in the limited partnership context.") (citing 6 Del. C. § 17-211(h)).

107. HMIT is not a partner of reorganized HCMLP and therefore lacks standing to bring derivative claims on its behalf. "HMIT held a 99.5% limited partnership in Highland Capital Management, L.P., the Original Debtor." (Compl. ¶ 6; see id. ¶¶ 12, 15, 24.) But that limited partnership interest was extinguished by the Plan on August 11, 2021 (the Effective Date of the Plan) and HMIT does not own any partnership interest in reorganized HCMLP. (Plan Art. IV.A.) Because HMIT would not hold a partnership interest at "the time of bringing the action," it "lacks derivative standing" to bring claims "on the partnership's behalf." Tow, 976 F. Supp. 2d at 904 (dismissing derivative claims by creditor on behalf of partnership for lack of standing).

108. HMIT also cannot satisfy "the continuous ownership requirement." When HMIT's partnership interest was extinguished on the Plan's Effective Date, HMIT "los[t] standing to continue a derivative suit" on behalf of the Debtor.[36] El Paso, 152 A.3d at 1265 (cleaned up) (dismissing derivative action for lack of standing where plaintiff's partnership interest was extinguished by a merger transaction); see also Schmermerhorn v. CenturyTel, Inc. (In re SkyPort Global Commcn's, Inc.), 2011 WL 111427, at *25–26 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Jan. 13, 2011) (holding that pre-petition shareholders "lack standing to bring a derivative claim" under Delaware law because they "had their equity interests in the company extinguished pursuant to the merger under the Plan"); In re WorldCom, Inc., 351 B.R. 130, 134 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2006) ("[T]he cancellation of WorldCom shares under the Plan … prevents the required continuation of shareholder status through the litigation.") (cleaned up).

[36] Even before its partnership interest was extinguished, HMIT would have been required to obtain the Debtor's consent or court approval before it could have brought a derivative suit on behalf of the estate.

C. HMIT Lacks Standing To Bring A "Double Derivative" Action.

109. "[A] double derivative suit is one brought by a shareholder of a parent corporation to enforce a claim belonging to a subsidiary that is either wholly owned or majority controlled." Lambrecht v. O'Neal, 3 A.3d 277, 282 (Del. 2010). Under "Delaware's 'double derivative' standing jurisprudence," "parent level standing is required to enforce a subsidiary's claim derivatively." Sagarra, 34 A.3d at 1079–81 (capitalization omitted) (citing Lambrecht, 3 A.3d at 282).

110. To the extent HMIT seeks to bring a double derivative action on behalf of the Trust based on claims purportedly held by its wholly owned subsidiary, HCMLP, HMIT lacks standing. Because HMIT lacks derivative standing to bring claims on behalf of the parent Trust, it also lacks standing to bring a double derivative action. (See supra Section I.A.)

111. The Trust also lacks standing to bring these claims on behalf of HCMLP. The Claimant Trust received limited partnership interests in Highland on August 11, 2021, the Effective Date of the Plan. (See supra ¶ 79.) HMIT challenges trades that occurred in April and August 2021 (Compl. ¶ 41 & n.12), which predate the Effective Date of the Plan. Because the Trust did not hold limited partnership interests "[a]t the time of the transaction of which the plaintiff complains," 6 Del. C. § 17-1002, it cannot bring a derivative action based on these trades, and HMIT lacks standing to bring a double derivative action.

II. HMIT Lacks Standing To Bring Derivative Claims Under Federal Bankruptcy Law.

112. HMIT ignores its inability to proceed derivatively under Delaware law and instead insists it has derivative standing as a matter of federal bankruptcy law. (Mot. ¶¶ 9–14.) HMIT also lacks derivative standing under federal bankruptcy law because (i) HMIT's lack of standing under Delaware law is dispositive regardless of forum, and (ii) HMIT, in any event, cannot meet the requirements for suing on behalf of a debtor under the federal bankruptcy case law it cites.

A. Federal Law Does Not Confer Standing Prohibited By Delaware Law.

113. HMIT's invocation of federal bankruptcy law cannot remedy HMIT's lack of derivative standing under Delaware law. HMIT cites Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1, which "applies to this proceeding pursuant to" Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7023.1. (Mot. ¶ 10.) But Rule 23.1 "speaks only to the adequacy of the . . . pleadings," and "cannot be understood to 'abridge, enlarge, or modify any substantive right.'" Kamen v. Kemper Fin. Servs., Inc., 500 U.S. 90, 96 (1991) (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 2072(b)). Thus, the question of whether HMIT has a right to proceed derivatively is governed not by Rule 23.1, but by the "source and content of the substantive law" governing the requirements for derivative actions, which is Delaware law. Id. at 96–97.

114. HMIT's own authority (see Mot. ¶¶ 12–13) further supports that Delaware law governs the standing analysis and precludes HMIT's suit. Louisiana World Exposition v. Federal Insurance Co., 858 F.2d 233 (5th Cir. 1988), on which HMIT relies, "is the leading case from the Fifth Circuit . . . articulating when a creditors committee may be permitted standing to pursue estate causes of action." Reed v. Cooper (In re Cooper), 405 B.R. 801, 809 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2009). To the extent Louisiana World applies post-Effective Date,[37] it does not supersede state law requirements for derivative standing. Before addressing the requirements a creditors' committee must meet to sue derivatively as a matter of federal bankruptcy law (discussed below), the Fifth Circuit conducted a lengthy analysis to determine "as a threshold issue" whether the creditors' committee in that case could assert its claims under Louisiana law. 858 F.2d at 236–45. The court specifically addressed whether the creditors' committee could pursue a derivative action under Louisiana law and concluded that "there is no bar in Louisiana law to actions brought by or in the name of a corporation against the directors and officers of the corporation which benefit only the creditors of the corporation; indeed, Louisiana law specifically recognizes such actions." Id. at 243. The opposite is equally true: where state law imposes such a bar, a creditor cannot flout that prohibition because it is in bankruptcy court. See In re Dura Automotive Sys., LLC, No. 19-123728 (Bankr. D. Del. June 10, 2020), Docket No. 1115 at 46 ("To determine that the third party may bring the claim under the derivative basis and, thus, step into the shoes of the debtor to pursue them, the Court must look to the law of the debtors' state of incorporation or formation.") (denying creditors' committee standing to sue derivatively on behalf of a Delaware LLC because the committee lacked standing under the Delaware LLC Act).

[37] Louisiana World, in certain circumstances, allows creditors to "file suit on behalf of a debtor-in-possession or a [bankruptcy] trustee." La. World, 858 F.2d at 247. HCMLP is no longer a debtor-in-possession; it has been reorganized.

115. Because HMIT lacks standing to bring derivative claims under Delaware law (see supra Section I), it cannot satisfy the "threshold issue" to proceed derivatively, whether in state or federal court.

B. HMIT Cannot Meet The Louisiana World Standard Governing Derivative Actions By Creditors In Bankruptcy.

116. Even if Delaware law did not preclude HMIT from suing derivatively (it does), HMIT still would lack standing under federal bankruptcy law. Under Fifth Circuit precedent, a bankruptcy court may authorize a creditor to proceed derivatively only if: (i) the creditor's claims are "colorable"; (ii) the trustee or debtor-in-possession "refused unjustifiably to pursue the claim"; and (iii) the creditor "first receive[d] leave to sue from the bankruptcy court." La. World, 858 F.2d at 247; see also, e.g., PW Enters., 540 F.3d at 899 (same). "These requirements ensure that derivative standing does not risk interfering with the debtor or trustee and prevents creditors from pursuing weak claims." In re On-Site Fuel Serv., Inc., 2020 WL 3703004, at *9 (Bankr. S.D. Miss. May 8, 2020). HMIT does not and cannot satisfy these requirements.

117. HMIT focuses solely on the first of these three requirements—asserting that its claims are "colorable." (See Mot. ¶¶ 12–14, 38–42; Objs. ¶¶ 3–4, 7–15; Supp. Mot. ¶ 13.) Even if HMIT could satisfy the "colorable claim" requirement under Louisiana World, which it cannot (see infra Section V), it does not even try to satisfy the second requirement—that Highland "refused unjustifiably to pursue the claim"—because it cannot.

118. To assess whether a debtor's refusal was unjustified, courts "must look to whether the interests of creditors were left unprotected as a result" by conducting a "cost-benefit analysis" that takes into account whether the potential action is "valid and profitable." La. World, 858 F.2d at 253 n.20; see also Reed, 405 B.R. at 810 (same); Canadian Pac., 66 F.3d at 1442 ("[I]f a creditor pleads facts to support the conclusion that it has a colorable claim . . . and if the bankruptcy court finds that the claim will likely benefit the estate based on a cost-benefit analysis, then the creditor has raised a rebuttable presumption that the debtor-in-possession's failure to bring that claim is unjustified."). This requirement is not easily met. Under HMIT's own authority (see Mot. ¶ 40) "the real challenge for the creditor will be to persuade the bankruptcy court that the trustee unjustifiably refuses to bring its claim." PW Enters., 540 F.3d at 900. As the Eighth Circuit explained:

> To satisfy its burden, the creditor, at a minimum, must provide the bankruptcy court with specific reasons why it believes the trustee's refusal is unjustified. A creditor thus does not meet its burden with a naked assertion that 'the trustee's refusal is unjustified.' . . . The creditor, not the bankruptcy court, has the onus of establishing the trustee unjustifiably refuses to bring the creditor's claim.

Id. (emphasis in original).

119. In conducting the "cost/benefit" analysis required to determine if a debtor's refusal to sue is unjustified, courts consider (i) the probability of success on the claims and the financial recovery to the estate, (ii) the proposed cost of the litigation, and (iii) the delay and expense of bringing the litigation. PW Enters., 540 F.3d at 901; see also Official Comm., 225 B.R. at 282 ("The mandated cost/benefit analysis involves the weighing of the probability of success and financial recovery, whether it is preferable to appoint a trustee to bring suit instead of the creditors' committee, and 'the terms relative to attorneys' fees on which suit might be brought.'") (quoting In re STN Enterps., 779 F.2d 901, 905 (2d Cir. 1985)). A creditor seeking to proceed derivatively must establish "a sufficient likelihood of success" to "'justify the anticipated delay and expense to the bankruptcy estate that the initiation and continuation of litigation will likely produce.'" Official Comm., 225 B.R. at 282 (quoting STN, 779 F.2d at 906. If the creditor carries its burden, it shifts to the debtor to refute by a preponderance of the evidence. PW Enters., 540 F.3 at 900 n.9; Canadian Pac., 66 F.3d at 1442; see also La. World, 858 F.2d at 248 n.15 (noting that an "evidentiary hearing was unnecessary under the circumstances," where the debtor-in-possession's officers and directors "neither refuted any of the Committee's claims nor objected to them").

120. HMIT does not even attempt to meet its burden to establish that HCMLP or the Trust unjustifiably refused to pursue HMIT's claims, or to present facts to enable the Court to conduct a cost-benefit analysis and conclude that HMIT's proposed claims are "valid and profitable." La. World, 858 F.2d at 253 n.20. Under HMIT's own authority (see Mot. ¶¶ 39–41), courts permitted creditors to sue derivatively on behalf of debtors only after conducting such an evidentiary analysis. For example, in Louisiana World, the court found that "the Committee demonstrated"—and the debtor-in-possession did not "refute[]" or "rebut[]"—"the existence of a potential cause of action, a demand on the debtor-in-possession, a refusal or inability on the part of the debtor-in-possession to bring suit, the possibility of a sizeable monetary recovery and, given the contingent nature of the attorney's fee schedule, a limited cost factor." 858 F.2d at 248 n.15.

121. Here, as discussed at length above, the evidence shows that HMIT's "claims" are spurious, would be a waste of time, money, and effort, and have no purpose but to further Dondero's crusade to burn Highland down, and make good on his explicit thread against Seery. (See supra ¶¶ 8–85.)

122. HMIT's vague assertion that the COB has "conflicts of interest" does not excuse HMIT from having to ask HCMLP and/or the Trust to pursue HMIT's alleged claims or from proving that any refusal to do so was "unjustified." (Mot. ¶¶ 12–14.) In Louisiana World, the court conducted the cost-benefit analysis even though the directors and officers of the debtor-in-possession were conflicted. La. World, 858 F.2d at 234.[38]

C. HMIT Lacks Standing To Bring Derivative Claims Challenging Pre-Confirmation Conduct.

123. "When a Chapter 11 plan is confirmed," the debtor loses "its authority to pursue claims as through it were trustee," unless it makes a "specific and unequivocal" "reservation of claims." Wooley v. Haynes & Boone, L.L.P. (In re SI Restructuring, Inc.), 714 F.3d 860, 864 (5th Cir. 2013) (cleaned up; collecting cases). "Without an effective reservation, the debtor has no standing to pursue a claim that the estate owned before it was dissolved." Id. (cleaned up).

124. HCMLP did not reserve any claims against Seery or any other Proposed Defendant. (Docket No. 1875-3.) Therefore, neither HCMLP nor the Trust has standing to bring claims against Seery based on conduct occurring before August 11, 2021, the Effective Date of the Plan. Wooley, 714 F.3d at 864. Because HMIT seeks to bring derivative claims on behalf of both HCMLP and

[38] Moreover, HMIT did not ask the COB's independent member to pursue its proposed "claims," even though the independent member is empowered to make decisions on behalf of the COB if the other members are conflicted. (Trust Agmt. § 4.6(c).)

the Trust, HMIT's "standing is contingent upon" HCMLP's and the Trust's standing." Id. ("[A] creditor can derive standing to bring a debtor's claim only if the debtor itself could bring the claim."). HMIT therefore lacks standing to challenge any pre-confirmation conduct. Other than the "success fee" portion of Seery's compensation, every single allegation against Seery, including the alleged breaches of fiduciary duties, is based on pre-effective date conduct.[39]

III. HMIT Did Not Satisfy The Procedural Requirements To Bring A Derivative Action.

A. HMIT Failed To Include The Litigation Trust As A Party.

125. It is settled law that "[a]n action must be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest." Fed. R. Civ. P. 17(a); see BCC Merch. Sols., Inc. v. Jet Pay, LLC, 129 F. Supp. 3d 440, 450 (N.D. Tex. 2015) ("The Rule 17(a) requirement is in essence a codification of the prudential standing requirement that a litigant cannot sue in federal court to enforce the rights of third parties.") (cleaned up; collecting cases). "The real party in interest is the person with the right to sue under substantive law, and the determination whether one is the real party in interest with respect to a particular claim is based on the controlling state or federal substantive laws." BCC, 129 F. Supp. 3d at 453 (cleaned up; collecting cases).

126. HMIT seeks to bring a "derivative action benefitting and on behalf of the Reorganized Debtor [HCMLP] and the [] Claimant Trust." (Compl. ¶¶ 1, 11.) But the Claimant Trustee transferred to the Litigation Trust "any and all Causes of Action," with limited exceptions not relevant here. (See supra ¶ 89.) The Litigation Trust is therefore the "real party in interest,"

[39] The movant in Wooley also alleged that (i) the complained-of breaches of fiduciary duty were kept "secret," (ii) the movant did not discover the claims until after confirmation, and (iii) it would therefore be inequitable to preclude its lawsuits. 714 F.3d at 865–66. The Fifth Circuit denied standing, notwithstanding later discovered "facts," because "[a]llowing [movant] to assert these claims simply because some of the underlying facts were unknown at the time the Plan was confirmed would be inconsistent with the 'nature of a bankruptcy which is designed primarily to secure prompt, effective administration and settlement of all debtor's assets and liabilities within a limited time." Id. at 866. Here, HMIT had knowledge of at least some of the "facts," including Dondero's alleged disclosure of MGM's inside information to Seery, before confirmation and did not object.

and HMIT lacks prudential standing to bring derivative claims on behalf of Highland. See, e.g., BlackRock Allocation Target Shares: Series S Portfolio v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 247 F. Supp. 3d 377, 414–15 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (holding that plaintiff "lacks standing to bring a derivative claim against Defendant" because it "transferred all rights to such claim").

127. The Litigation Trust is likewise "an indispensable party to a [beneficiary's] derivative suit," so HMIT cannot bring a derivative action without including the Litigation Trust. Schwab v. Oscar (In re SII Liquidation Co.), 2012 WL 4327055, at *8 (Bankr. S.D. Ohio Sept. 20, 2012) (cleaned up) (dismissing derivative action); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1) (requiring joinder of indispensable party); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7019; Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(7) (permitting dismissal for "failure to join a party under Rule 19"); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7012(b).

128. HMIT's footnoted assertion that it "seeks standing to bring this action as a derivative action on behalf of the Litigation Sub-Trust" (Compl. ¶ 1 n.1) fails because, as discussed above, HMIT lacks standing to bring such "double derivative" claims (see supra Section I.C). The Litigation Trust is wholly owned by the Trust and, as matter of Delaware law, HMIT must demonstrate "parent level standing" to bring a "double derivative" claim that belongs to the Litigation Trust. Sagarra, 34 A.3d at 1079–81; Lambrecht, 3 A.3d at 282. Because HMIT lacks standing to bring a derivative claim on behalf of the Trust (see supra Section I.A), it also lacks standing to bring a double derivative claim.

B. HMIT Failed To Make Any Demand To The Litigation Trustee And Fails To Plead Demand Futility With Particularity.

129. HMIT's failure to include the Litigation Trust as a party was no accident. The Litigation Trust is a Delaware statutory trust and wholly-owned subsidiary of the Trust. (Litigation Sub-Trust Agmt. § 1.1(e).) Even if HMIT had standing under Delaware law to bring a derivative action on behalf of the Litigation Trust, which it does not (see supra ¶ 128), HMIT can proceed derivatively only "if (i) [HMIT] demanded that the [Trustee] pursue the corporate claim and [he] wrongfully refused to do so or (ii) demand is excused because the [Trustee is] incapable of making an impartial decision regarding the litigation." United Food & Comm. Workers Union v. Zuckerberg, 250 A.3d 862, 876 (Del. Ch. 2020) (collecting cases). Accordingly, to allege a derivative action under Rule 23.1, which HMIT claims governs (see Compl. ¶ 6), HMIT must "state with particularity: (A) any effort by the plaintiff to obtain the desired action from the directors or comparable authority and, if necessary, from the shareholders or members; and (B) the reasons for not obtaining the action or not making the effort." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(b)(3); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7023.1. HMIT failed to do so.

130. This Court approved Marc Kirschner ("Kirschner") as Litigation Trustee. (Confirmation Order ¶ 45; see also Morris Dec. Ex. 44 (the "Litigation Sub-Trust Agreement") § 1.1(r).) HMIT admits that it did not make any effort to make a pre-filling demand to Kirschner regarding this action. (Compl. ¶ 1 n.1.) Instead, HMIT asserts that "[a]ny demand on the Litigation Sub-Trust would be [] futile" because "the Litigation Trustee serves at the direction of the Oversight Board." (Id. ¶ 1 n.1; Mot. ¶ 11 n.13.) This conclusory assertion does not allege a single fact casting "reasonable doubt" on Kirschner's objectivity or showing that he was "dominate[d]" by interested parties, let alone with particularity. Zuckerberg, 250 A.3d at 877–91 (surveying Delaware demand futility law); (Mot. ¶ 11).[40] Because HMIT has not satisfied either the demand requirement or demand futility, it cannot bring a derivative action. See, e.g., Zuckerberg, 250 A.3d at 900–901 (granting "motion to dismiss under Rule 23.1"); In re Six Flags Ent. Corp. Deriv. Litig., 2021 WL 1662466, at *8 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 28, 2021) (dismissing derivative action with prejudice for failure to plead demand futility under Delaware law "under Rule 23.1's heightened standard").

[40] As discussed supra note 38, HMIT also does not explain its failure to make any pre-filing demand to the independent member of the COB, who it does not allege is conflicted. (Compl. ¶ 10.)

C. HMIT Cannot "Fairly And Adequately" Represent The Interests of Claimant Trust Beneficiaries.

131. Rule 23.1 provides that a "derivative action may not be maintained if it appears that the plaintiff does not fairly and adequately represent the interests of shareholders or members who are similarly situated in enforcing the right of the corporation or association." Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.1(a); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7023.1. To be an adequate representative, "a plaintiff in a [] derivative action must not have ulterior motives and must not be pursuing an external personal agenda." Energytec, Inc. v. Proctor, 2008 WL 4131257, at *6 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 29, 2008) (cleaned up) (quoting Smith v. Ayres, 977 F.2d 946, 949 (5th Cir. 1992)). To determine adequacy, courts evaluate, inter alia, "economic antagonisms between representative and class," "other litigation pending between the plaintiff and defendants," "plaintiff's vindictiveness towards the defendant," and "the degree of support plaintiff was receiving from the [beneficiaries] he purported to represent." Id. *6–7 (quoting Davis v. Comed, Inc., 619 F.2d 588, 593–94 (6th Cir. 1980)).

132. HMIT is an inadequate representative. HMIT is effectively controlled by Dondero, and the Plan recognizes HMIT as a Dondero Related Entity (Plan Art. I.B.110). This Court found that "Mr. Dondero and the Dondero Related Entities have harassed the Debtor," including with "substantial, costly, and time-consuming litigation." (Confirmation Order ¶ 77.) This Court also found that Dondero threatened to "burn down the place" if he did not get his way and that "Mr. Dondero and his related entities," including HMIT, "will likely commence litigation against the Protected Parties," including Seery. (Id. ¶ 78.) This Court has even referred to Dondero as an "antagonist" whose conduct has made this bankruptcy "contentious, protracted, and unpleasant," and akin to a "corporate divorce." In re Highland Cap. Mgmt., L.P., 2021 WL 2326350, at *1, *25

(Bankr. N.D. Tex. June 7, 2021) (holding Dondero in "civil contempt of court"). The Fifth Circuit similarly recognized that Dondero and his related entities sought to "frustrate the proceedings by objecting to settlements, appealing orders, seeking writs of mandamus, interfering with Highland Capital's management, threatening employees, and canceling trades between Highland Capital and its clients." NexPoint, 48 F.4th at 426; see also id. at 427–28. Dondero's own written threats confirm these findings: "Be careful what you do -- last warning." (See supra ¶ 25.) Dondero-controlled HMIT is pursuing this derivative action for "ulterior motives" of "antagonism" and "vindictiveness," cannot "fairly and adequately the interests" of the Claimant Trust Beneficiaries, and should be not be permitted to "bring a derivative suit on their behalf." Energytec, 2008 WL 4131257, at *6–7 (dismissing derivative action by former CEO on adequacy grounds because he sought to "revers[e] the events leading to his removal" and was in litigation with other shareholders).[41]

IV. HMIT Has No Direct Claims Against The Highland Parties.

133. Throughout its Motion and Complaint, HMIT makes vague references to unspecified direct claims against the Proposed Defendants. (See, e.g., Motion ¶ 10 ("HMIT has individual standing to bring this action because Seery owed fiduciary duties directly to HMIT at that time . . . ."); id. ¶ 67 (arguing that "HMIT has [d]irect [s]tanding"); Compl. ¶ 24 ("HMIT has constitutional standing and capacity to bring these claims both individually and derivatively.").) But "a claim is not 'direct' simply because it is pleaded that way." Schmermerhorn, 2011 WL 111427, at *26 (quoting Gatz v. Ponsoldt, 2004 WL 3029868 at *7 (Del. Ch. Nov. 5, 2004)). "Fifth [41] HMIT and Dondero also have a "personal economic interest" and other claimants "do not share this interest." Energytec, 2008 WL 4131257, at *7. Specifically, HMIT has asserted in another proceeding that Highland has sufficient assets "to pay class 8 and class 9 creditors 100 cents on the dollar." (Docket No. 3662 ¶ 5.) If true, HMIT's proposed claims will benefit only HMIT and, potentially, The Dugaboy Investment Trust (controlled by Dondero) and Mark Okada (HCMLP's co-founder) as the holders of Class 11 interests. Proposed Defendants reserve the right to contest HMIT's assertion.

Circuit precedent [] dictates that," to determine whether claims are direct or derivative, "this Court look at the substance of the Petition, and the nature of the wrongs alleged therein, rather than the Plaintiffs' characterization." Id. (citing Armstrong v. Capshaw, Goss & Bowers LLP, 404 F.3d 933, 936 (5th Cir. 2005)).

134. Under Delaware law, "whether a claim is solely derivative or may continue as a dual-natured claim 'must turn solely on the following questions: (1) who suffered the alleged harm (the corporation or the suing stockholders, individually); and (2) who would receive the benefit of any recovery or other remedy (the corporation or the stockholders, individually)?'" El Paso, 152 A.3d at 1260 (quoting Tooley v. Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, Inc., 845 A.2d 1031, 1033 (Del. 2004)) (emphasis in original). "In addition, to prove that a claim is direct, a plaintiff 'must demonstrate that the duty breached was owed to the stockholder and that he or she can prevail without showing an injury to the corporation.'" Id. (quoting Tooley, 845 A.2d at 1033); see also Schmermerhorn, 2011 WL 111427, at *24 (same).

135. Similarly, in the bankruptcy context, "[i]f the harm to the creditor comes about only because of harm to the debtor, then its injury is derivative, and the claim is property of the estate." Meridian Cap. CIS Fund v. Burton (In re Buccaneer Res., L.L.C.), 912 F.3d 291, 293 (5th Cir. 2019) (citing 11 U.S.C. § 541(a)(1)). "In that situation, only the bankruptcy trustee has standing to pursue the claim for the estate . . . ." Id. "To pursue a claim on its own behalf, a creditor must show this direct injury is not dependent on injury to the estate." Id.

136. Even if HMIT had viable claims (it does not), they would be derivative, not direct, under both Delaware law and federal bankruptcy law. HMIT argues that the Proposed Defendants' "alleged actions devalued HMIT's interest in the Debtor's Estate, including, without limitation, payment of excessive compensation to Seery." (Mot. ¶ 67.) Thus, by its own admission, any alleged harm to HMIT "comes about only because of harm to the debtor," so the alleged "injury is derivative." Meridian, 912 F.3d at 293–94 ("The creditors' injury (reduced bankruptcy recovery) derived from injury to the debtor (the loss of estate assets), so only the estate could sue the third parties."); see also El Paso, 152 A.3d at 1260–61 & n.60 (holding that claim "claims of corporate overpayment are normally treated as causing harm solely to the corporation and, thus, are regarded as derivative") (collecting cases); Gerber v EPE Holdings, LLC, 2013 WL 209658, at *12 (Del. Ch. Jan. 18, 2013) (holding that claims were derivative because plaintiff had "not identified any independent harm suffered by the limited partners"; "the partnership suffered all the harm at issue—it paid too much").

137. HMIT's reliance on Pike v. Texas EMC Management, LLC, 610 S.W.3d 763 (Tex. 2020), is misplaced. The fact that "a partner or other stakeholder in a business organization has constitutional standing to sue for an alleged loss in the value of its interest in the organization" (Mot. ¶ 67 (quoting Pike, 610 S.W.3d at 778) (emphasis added)) is irrelevant. As the Court explained, it is "the statutory provisions that define and limit a stakeholder's ability to recover certain measures of damages, which protect the organization's status as a separate and independent entity," and therefore considered the matter under Texas partnership law. Pike, 610 S.W.3d at 778–79. Here, HMIT admits that both the Trust and HCMLP are governed by Delaware law, which does not recognize any direct (or derivative) claims by HMIT.

138. Even assuming, arguendo, that HMIT could bring direct claims (it cannot), the Highland Parties cannot be held liable for them. "Under the Delaware Statutory Trust Act, 'a trustee, when acting in such capacity, shall not be personally liable to any person other than the statutory trust or a beneficial owner for any act, omission or obligation of the statutory trust or any trustee thereof' except 'to the extent otherwise provided' by the trust's governing document."

Athene Life & Annuity Co. v. Am. Gen. Life Ins. Co., 2020 WL 2521557, at *8 (Del. Super. May 18, 2020) (quoting 12 Del C. §§ 3803(b)–(c)). The Trust Agreement likewise limits "personal liability" "to the fullest extent provided under Section 8303 of the Delaware Statutory Trust Act." (Trust Agmt. § 8.3.) Because, as discussed above, HMIT is not a "beneficial owner" of the Claimant Trust (see supra Section I.A), it cannot bring direct claims against Proposed Defendants under Delaware law.

V. HMIT's Proposed Complaint Fails To Plausibly Allege Any Claims Against The Proposed Defendants.

139. Because HMIT lacks standing, this Court need not reach the merits of HMIT's proposed Adversary Complaint. As a matter of judicial economy, however, the Highland Parties respectfully request that this Court address the lack of merit as an alternative basis to deny the Motion. HMIT fails to adequately allege its claims under any standard. HMIT's claims are not colorable because they lack foundation, and HMIT's "[t]hreadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements," fail to "[]cross the line from conceivable to plausible." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679–80 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 570 (2007)).

A. HMIT Does Not Adequately Allege Any Breach Of Fiduciary Duties (Count I).

140. HMIT alleges that Seery breached his fiduciary duties (i) "[b]y disclosing material non-public information to Stonehill and Farallon" before their purchase of certain Highland claims, and (ii) by receiving "compensation paid to him under the terms of the [Trust Agreement] since the Effective Date of the Plan in August 2021." (Compl. ¶¶ 64–67.) Under Delaware law, which HMIT admits governs (see Mot. ¶ 21 n.24), "[t]o bring a claim for breach of fiduciary duty, a plaintiff must allege '(1) that a fiduciary duty existed and (2) that the defendant breached that duty.'" Brooks v. United Dev. Funding III, L.P., 2020 WL 6132230, at *30 (N.D. Tex. Apr. 15, 2020) (quoting Joseph C. Bamford & Young Min Ban v. Penfold, L.P., 2020 WL 967942, at *8 (Del. Ch. Feb. 28, 2020)). HMIT fails to plausibly allege either element.

141. First, HMIT's "legal conclusion[]" that Seery "owed fiduciary duties to HMIT, as equity, and to the Debtor's Estate" (Compl. ¶ 63) "do[es] not suffice" to plausibly allege the existence of any actionable fiduciary relationship. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). Officers and directors generally owe fiduciary duties only to the entity and its stakeholders as a whole, not to individual shareholders. See Gilbert v El Paso Co., 1988 WL 124325, at *9 (Del. Ch. Nov. 21, 1988) ("[D]irectors' fiduciary duty runs to the corporation and to the entire body of shareholders generally, as opposed to specific shareholders or shareholder subgroups.") aff'd, 575 A.2d 1131 (Del. 1990); Klaassen v Allegro Dev. Corp., 2013 WL 5967028, at *11 (Del. Ch. Nov. 7, 2013) (same). Because Seery did not owe any "duty" to HMIT directly and individually, the Complaint fails to state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty to HMIT.

142. Second, to the extent Seery owed any fiduciary duties to HMIT or the Debtor, he did not breach them by allegedly communicating with Farallon and Stonehill. (See Compl. ¶ 64.) As this Court recognized, "claims trading in bankruptcy is [] pretty unregulated—it's just kind of between the claims trader and the transferee." (Morris Dec. Ex. 43 at 53:6–7.) In fact, this Court recognized that "for decades now, since a rule change in the last century, no court approval and order is necessary unless the transferor objects." (Morris Dec. Ex. 6 at 20); see also Aaron L. Hammer & Michael A. Brandess, Claims Trading: The Wild West of Chapter 11s, 29 Am. Bankr. Inst. J. 61 (July/Aug. 2010) ("In 1991, Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3001(e) was amended to limit the court's oversight on claims trading" such that "only the transferor may object to a transfer.") (quoting Michael H. Whitaker, Regulating Claims Trading in Chapter 11 Bankruptcies: A Proposal for Mandatory Disclosure, 3 Cornell J.L. & Pub. Pol'y 303, 320 (1994)). Because none of the transferors objected to the claims trades at issue, Seery's alleged actions in connection with them cannot constitute a breach of any fiduciary duties.

143. Third, HMIT's "conclusory allegations" and "legal conclusions" are "purely speculative, devoid of factual support," and therefore "stop[] short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief." Reed v. Linehan (In re Soporex, Inc.), 463 B.R. 344, 367, 386 (Bankr. N.D. Tex. 2011) (cleaned up). As to Seery's discussions with Farallon and Stonehill, HMIT asserts that Seery "disclose[d] material non-public information to Stonehill and Farallon," and they "acted on inside information and Seery's secret assurances of great profits." (Compl. ¶¶ 3, 64; see also id. ¶¶ 13–14, 40, 47, 50.) HMIT never alleges when any of these purported communications occurred, what material non-public information Seery provided, or what "assurances" he made. The few facts HMIT provides contradict its own allegations. The only purportedly "material non-public information" identified is the Complaint is the MGM E-Mail Dondero sent to Seery containing "information regarding Amazon and Apple's interest in acquiring MGM." (Compl. ¶ 45.) This information was widely reported in the financial press at the time (see supra ¶¶ 30–37), so it cannot constitute material non-public information as a matter of law. See, e.g., SEC v. Cuban, 2013 WL 791405, at *10–11 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 5, 2013) (holding that information is not "material, nonpublic information" and "'becomes public when disclosed to achieve a broad dissemination to the investing public'") (quoting SEC v. Mayhew, 121 F.3d 44, 50 (2d Cir. 1997)). HMIT asserts that Farallon and Stonehill's purchases "made no sense" without access to "material non-public information." (Compl. ¶¶ 3, 50.) But HMIT admits that Farallon and Stonehill purchased Highland claims at discounts of 43% to 65% to their allowed amounts, so they would therefore receive at least an 18% return based on publicly available estimates in Highland's Court-approved Disclosure Statement. (Id. ¶¶ 3, 37, 42.)

144. As to Seery's compensation, HMIT asserts that it was "excessive," and speculates that compensation negotiations between Seery and the COB "were not arm's-length." (Compl. ¶¶ 4, 13, 54, 74.) But HMIT does not say one word about the process for negotiating and approving Seery's compensation. Nor does HMIT allege what Seery's compensation actually is, let alone compare it to others' compensation to show that it is "excessive." HMIT's assertion that Seery's compensation package was initially "composed of a flat monthly pay" but now "is also performance based" (id. ¶ 4) is wrong and contradicted by Court-approved documents. The structure of Seery's post-effective date compensation, which includes a "Base Salary," "success fee," and "severance," was fully disclosed in the Trust Agreement, which was publicly filed in advance of the Plan confirmation hearing and approved by this Court and the Fifth Circuit as part of the Plan (see supra ¶¶ 78–79).

145. Thus, HMIT fails to allege facts that, even if true (and they are not), support a reasonable inference that Mr. Seery breached his fiduciary duty to HMIT or the estate as a result of bad faith, self-interest, or other intentional misconduct rising to the level of a breach of the duty of loyalty. See Pfeffer v. Redstone, 965 A.2d 676, 690 (Del. 2009) (dismissing claim for breach of duty of loyalty against a director where "conclusory allegations" failed to give rise to inference that director failed to perform fiduciary duties); McMillan v. Intercargo Corp., 768 A.2d 492, 507 (Del. Ch. 2000) (dismissing claim for breach of fiduciary duty where "[a]though the complaint makes the conclusory allegation that the defendants breached their duty of disclosure in a 'bad faith and knowing manner,' no facts pled in the complaint buttress that accusation.")

B. HMIT's Theories Of Secondary Liability Fail (Counts II and III).

146. HMIT seeks to hold Proposed Defendants secondarily liable for Seery's alleged breach of fiduciaries duties on an aid/abet theory (Compl. ¶¶ 69–74) and conspiracy theory of liability (id. ¶¶ 75–81). As a threshold matter, HMIT has not plausibly alleged any primary breach of fiduciary duties, so it cannot pursue secondary liability for the same alleged wrongdoing. See English v. Narang, 2019 WL 1300855, at *14 (Del. Ch. Mar. 20, 2019) ("As a matter of law and logic, there cannot be secondary liability for aiding and abetting an alleged harm in the absence of primary liability.") (cleaned up; collecting cases); Hill v. Keliher, 2022 WL 213978, at *10 (Tex. App. Jan. 25, 2022) ("[A] defendant's liability for conspiracy depends on participation in some underlying tort for which the plaintiff seeks to hold at least one of the named defendants liable.") (quoting Tilton v. Marshall, 925 S.W.2d 672, 681 (Tex. 1996)).[42]

147. Even if HMIT could pursue secondary liability, it has not plausibly alleged any civil conspiracy. Under Texas law, "civil conspiracy is a theory of vicarious liability and not an independent tort." Agar Corp., Inc. v. Electro Circuits Int'l, LLC, 580 S.W.3d 136, 142 (Tex. 2019). "[T]he elements of civil conspiracy [are] "(1) two or more persons; (2) an object to be accomplished; (3) a meeting of minds on the object or course of action; (4) one or more unlawful, overt acts; and (5) damages as the proximate result." Id. at 141 (cleaned up).

148. HMIT has not plausibly alleged any "meeting of the minds." HMIT asserts that "Defendants conspired with each other to unlawfully breach fiduciary duties" (Compl. ¶ 76), which is precisely the sort of "legal conclusion" the Supreme Court held is "not entitled to the assumption of truth." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 680 (citing Twombly, 555 U.S. at 565–66). HMIT repeats four times that Seery provided information to Farallon and Stonehill as a "as a quid pro quo" for "additional compensation" (Compl. ¶ 77; see also id ¶¶ 4, 47, 74), but never provides [42] Because HMIT breach of fiduciary duty claim is governed by Delaware law, its aid/abet theory of liability is also governed by Delaware law. See Xtreme Power Plan Tr. v. Schindler (In re Xtreme Power), 563 B.R. 614, 632, 645 (Bankr. W.D. Tex. 2016) (applying Delaware law to claim for aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty involving Delaware corporation headquartered in Texas); By contrast, "conspiracy is not an internal affair" or a matter of corporate governance, so it is governed by Texas law under the Plan. Klinek v. LuxeYard, Inc., 596 S.W.3d 437, 450 n.9 (Tex. App. – Houston [14th Dist.] 2020) (applying Delaware law to fiduciary duty claim and Texas law to conspiracy theory); (Plan Art. XII.M).

"nonconclusory factual allegations" in support. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 680 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 565–66). HMIT vaguely alleges "upon information and belief" that Seery "did business with Farallon" and "served on [a] creditors committee" with Stonehill. (Compl. ¶ 48.) HMIT also asserts "[u]pon information and belief" that Farallon "conducted no due diligence but relied on Seery's profit guarantees." (Id. ¶ 40.) These allegations "upon information belief" are "wholly speculative and conclusory," and therefore do "not satisfy the pleading requirements under Rule 8(a)." Hargrove v. WMC Mortg. Corp., 2008 WL 4056292, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 29, 2008) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555).

C. HMIT Seeks Remedies That Are Not Available As A Matter Of Law (Counts IV, V, and VI).

149. HMIT seeks a grab bag of unavailable remedies, including (1) equitable disallowance (Compl. ¶¶ 82–87), (2) unjust enrichment (id. ¶¶ 88–94), (3) declaratory relief (id. ¶¶ 95–99), (4) punitive damages (id. ¶¶ 100–01), and (5) equitable tolling (id. ¶¶ 103–08), several of which are incorrectly pleaded as causes of action. None of these remedies are available under applicable law.

150. First, Seery does not have any bankruptcy claims that can be subordinated or disallowed. (Id. ¶¶ 82–87.) In any event, the Fifth Circuit has expressly rejected equitable disallowance as remedy available under the Bankruptcy Code. See SED Holdings, LLC v. 3 Star Props., LLC, 2019 WL 13192236, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 11, 2019) ("[T]he claim may only be subordinated, but not disallowed.") (citing Benjamin v. Diamond (In re Mobile Steel Co.), 563 F.2d 692, 699 (5th Cir. 1977)); see also In re Lightsquared Inc., 504 B.R. 321, 339–40 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2013) ("[T]he Bankruptcy Code, pursuant to section 510(c) or otherwise, does not permit equitable disallowance of claims that are otherwise allowable under section 502(b).") (citing Mobile Steel, 563 F.2d at 699 n.10).

151. Second, under Texas law, "[u]njust enrichment is not an independent cause of action but rather characterizes the result of a failure to make restitution of benefits either wrongfully or passively received under circumstances which give rise to an implied or quasi-contractual obligation to repay." Taylor v. Trevino, 569 F. Supp. 3d 414, 435 (N.D. Tex. 2021) (cleaned up); see also Yowell v. Granite Operating Co., 630 S.W.3d 566, 578 (Tex. App. 2021) (same).[43] Thus, "when a valid, express contract covers the subject matter of the parties' dispute, there can be no recovery under a quasi-contract theory." Taylor, 569 F. Supp. 3d at 435 (quoting Fortune Prod. Co. v. Conoco, Inc., 52 S.W.3d 671, 684 (Tex. 2000)). Here, Seery's compensation is governed by express agreements (see supra ¶¶ 78–79), so unjust enrichment is unavailable as a theory of recovery.

152. Third, HMIT brings "claims for declaratory relief, but a request for declaratory relief is not an independent cause of action, [and] in the absence of any underlying viable claims such relief is unavailable." Green v. Wells Fargo Home Mtg., 2016 WL 3746276, at *2 (S.D. Tex. June 7, 2016) (citing Collins Cnty., Texas v. Homeowners Ass'n for Values Essential to Neighborhoods, 915 F.2d 167, 170–71 (5th Cir. 1990)).

153. Fourth, HMIT has no basis to seek punitive damages. HMIT abandoned its fraud claim so its sole claim for primary liability is breach of fiduciary duty. As a matter of Delaware law, the "court cannot award punitive damages in [a] fiduciary duty action." Buchwald v. Renco Grp. (In re Magnesium Corp. of Am.), 539 B.R. 31, 52 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (citing Gesoff v. IIC Indus., Inc., 902 A.2d 1130, 1154 (Del. Ch. 2006)), aff'd 682 F. App'x 24 (2d Cir. 2017).

[43] Under the Plan, Texas law governs HMIT's "claim" for unjust enrichment because it is not a "corporate governance matter." (Plan Art. XII.M.) It also governs HMIT's "claim" for constructive trust, which "is merely a remedy used to grant relief on the underlying cause of action." Sherer v. Sherer, 393 S.W.3d 480, 491 (Tex. App. 2013).

154. Finally, HMIT cannot invoke "the discovery rule," "equitable tolling doctrine," "fraudulent concealment," or "any other applicable tolling doctrine" to toll the statute of limitations (Compl. ¶ 108), because this Court has held that that HMIT "has known about the conduct underlying the desired lawsuit for well over a year, based on activity that has occurred in the bankruptcy court" (Docket No. 3713 at 2–3); see also Order at 2–3, In re Hunter Mt. Inv. Tr., No. 23-10376 (5th Cir. Apr. 12, 2023) (declining to disturb this Court's "appropriate" Order, because HMIT "approached the brink of the limitations period before seeking leave to assert its claim").

CONCLUSION

155. For the foregoing reasons, the Highland Parties respectfully request that this Court deny the Motion in its entirety and grant such other relief this Court deems just and proper.[44]

[44] Denial should be with prejudice. HMIT "has known about the conduct underlying the desired lawsuit for well over a year" (Docket No. 3713 at 2–3) and has already filed two proposed Complaints. It should not be permitted to file a third (or more), which "would be futile." Marucci Sports, L.L.C. v. NCAA, 751 F.3d 368, 378 (5th Cir. 2014) (affirming denial of leave to amend as futile) (collecting cases).

to that, but it's a hearing that didn't even consider the merits of the claim. It specifically said that you get nothing. It doesn't even matter because I think that it's just better enough that you're getting, you know, more for the other claim.

And, as I said before, we don't think that that's the right analysis. If you had joint and several liability for co-tortfeasors, it certainly can't be the analysis when you have claims that don't even overlap as much as those claims do.

JUSTICE ALITO: Thank you.

CHIEF JUSTICE ROBERTS: Justice Sotomayor?

JUSTICE SOTOMAYOR: We have a separate petition in Highland Capital, and the amici briefs argue that or suggest that your argument here about nonconsensual third-party releases affects the question of exculpation clauses for professional services, firms that -- for firms that work on a bankruptcy. Does it?

IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY
FOR THE STATE OF DELAWARE

HIGHLAND CAPITAL MANAGEMENT, L.P. Plaintiff, -against- SE MULTIFAMILY HOLDINGS LLC and HCRE PARTNERS, LLC (n/k/a NEXPOINT REAL ESTATE PARTNERS, LCC), in its capacity as the Manager of SE MULTIFAMILY HOLDINGS LLC, Defendants.	C.A. No.

VERIFIED COMPLAINT FOR SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE TO INSPECT AND COPY BOOKS AND RECORDS

Plaintiff Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland"), by and through its undersigned attorneys, for its Verified Complaint for Specific Performance to Inspect and Copy Books and Records against defendants SE Multifamily Holdings LLC ("SE Multifamily") and HCRE Partners, LLC (n/k/a NexPoint Real Estate Partners, LLC), in its capacity as the Manager of SE Multifamily ("HCRE" or the "Manager" and with SE Multifamily, the "Defendants"), alleges as follows:

NATURE OF ACTION

1. Highland is a member of SE Multifamily and is forced to bring this action because the Defendants have unjustifiably refused to make available for inspection and copying SE Multifamily's books and records as is required by SE Multifamily's First Amended and Restated Limited Liability Company Agreement, dated March 15, 2019, effective as of August 23, 2018 (a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit 1 and is incorporated herein by reference) (the "Operating Agreement").

2. Highland seeks specific performance of Defendants' obligations under section 8.3 of the Operating Agreement because that is the only way Highland can obtain full, fair, and complete relief.

3. Highland also seeks recovery of its fees and expenses, including counsel fees and expenses, incurred in bringing this action.

THE PARTIES

4. Plaintiff Highland is a Delaware limited partnership. Highland is an investment manager with its principal offices in Dallas, Texas. Highland filed for bankruptcy protection in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of Delaware on October 16, 2019 (the "Petition Date"), but the case was transferred to the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas (the "Bankruptcy Court") in December 2019. Highland's then-management was subsequently replaced by order of the Bankruptcy Court, Highland's plan of reorganization (as amended) was later confirmed, and Highland emerged from bankruptcy as a reorganized entity on August 11, 2021.

5. Defendant SE Multifamily is a Delaware limited liability company with its principal offices in Dallas, Texas. Upon information and belief, SE Multifamily directly or indirectly owns real property in Florida and Texas.

6. Defendant HCRE is a limited liability company formed under the law of the State of Delaware with its principal offices in Dallas, Texas. Upon information and belief, HCRE is the Manager of SE Multifamily.

7. Non-party James Dondero ("Mr. Dondero") is an individual residing in Dallas, Texas. Mr. Dondero is (a) a co-founder of Highland, (b) controlled Highland until January 9, 2020, when he was forced to surrender control to an independent board as part of Highland's bankruptcy, and (c) has controlled (and continues to control) HCRE and SE Multifamily since each of those entities was formed.

JURISDICTION

8. This Court has subject-matter jurisdiction over this action because Highland seeks equitable relief (i.e., specific performance and recovery of fees and expenses incurred in connection with compelling performance) and has no adequate remedy at law; Defendants' breach of their obligations under section 8.3 of the Operating Agreement would continue indefinitely without the equitable remedy of specific performance.

9. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Defendants because they are both Delaware limited liability companies. 6 Del. C. § 18-105.

10. In addition, the parties irrevocably agreed to the exclusive jurisdiction of the courts of the State of Delaware, "expressly submitt[ed] to the personal jurisdiction and the venue of those courts," and "expressly waive[d] any claim of improper venue and any claim that those courts are an inconvenient forum." Exhibit 1 § 10.6.

FACTUAL ALLEGATIONS

A. Company Background

11. Highland and HCRE are parties to that certain SE Multifamily Holdings LLC, Limited Liability Company Agreement, dated as of August 23, 2018 (the "Original Agreement"). Mr. Dondero signed the Original Agreement on behalf of both Highland and HCRE. Highland and HCRE were the only members of SE Multifamily at the time the Original Agreement was executed.

12. SE Multifamily was formed to, among other things, acquire, improve, manage, lease or otherwise deal in real estate-related investment property.

13. On March 15, 2019, Highland, HCRE, and BH Equities LLC ("BH Equities") amended the Original Agreement by entering into the Operating Agreement, effective as of August 23, 2018. The Original Agreement was amended to, among other things, admit BH Equities as a new member of SE Multifamily.

14. Pursuant to the Operating Agreement, (a) Mr. Dondero, in his capacity as an officer of HCRE, was appointed the Manager of SE Multifamily, and (b) the "management, control and direction of [SE Mulitfamily] and its operations, business and affairs [was] vested exclusively in the Manager . . ." See Exhibit 1 §§ 3.1, 3.2.

15. Thus, based on the unambiguous terms of the Operating Agreement, the Manager has exclusive control of SE Multifamily. Upon information and belief, HCRE replaced Mr. Dondero as the Manager of SE Multifamily in 2019 (although Mr. Dondero has continued to control HCRE).

B. Books & Records Request Background

16. Section 8.3 of the Operating Agreement grants to the Members of SE Multifamily—including Highland—a broad, unambiguous, and unconditional right to inspect and copy SE Multifamily's books and records:

> 8.3. Place Kept; Inspection. The books and records of the company shall be maintained at the principal place of business of the Company and all such books and records shall be available for inspection and copying at the reasonable request, and at the expense, of any Member during the ordinary business hours of the Company.

Exhibit 1 § 8.3 (emphasis added).

17. Since its formation, SE Multifamily has participated in real estate transactions with an aggregate value of hundreds of millions of dollars and currently owns (directly and/or indirectly) substantial real property.

18. Since SE Multifamily was formed, the Manager has made all decisions concerning, among other things, (a) the management of SE Multifamily; (b) the allocation of profits and losses among the Members (as that term is defined in the Operating Agreement); (c) whether, when, and in what amounts to make distributions to the Members; and (d) the preparation of SE Multifamily's federal and state income tax returns (including the Members' Forms K-1).

19. On June 28, 2022, Highland sent a letter to HCRE requesting access to SE Multifamily's books and records (the "Records Request"). Exhibit 2 at 2.

20. On July 1, 2022, HCRE's counsel informed Highland that the Records Request should be directed to SE Multifamily. Thus, on July 6, 2022, Highland attempted to hand-deliver (as permitted under Section 10.7 of the Operating Agreement) its Records Request to SE Multifamily. SE Multifamily refused delivery asserting that "only Mr. Dondero [was] authorized to accept" the delivery. See email communications set forth in Exhibit 3.

21. On July 7, 2022, Highland wrote to counsel for HCRE and Mr. Dondero, recounted SE Multifamily's improper refusal to accept delivery of the Records Request, and asked counsel to either acknowledge receipt of its email and propose a date for Highland's inspection of SE Multifamily's books and records, or confirm that none of them were authorized to accept service. Id.

22. On July 13, 2022, Mr. Dondero's counsel disclaimed responsibility, vaguely contending "I understand others are addressing this." HCRE's counsel never responded. Id. On July 22, Highland's counsel reiterated the Records Request. Again, Highland received no response. Id.

23. On October 4, 2022, during a deposition, Mr. Dondero was unable to identify any reason why Highland would not have the right to access and copy SE Multifamily's records.

24. On October 31, 2022, the night before Highland and HCRE were to begin a contested evidentiary hearing in the Bankruptcy Court concerning HCRE's claim that "all or a portion" of Highland's interest in SE Multifamily did not belong to it (the "Trial"), a new law firm emerged as counsel to SE Multifamily who claimed to be "reaching out to find out what exactly you are seeking." Exhibit 4.[1]

25. On December 28, 2022, after the Trial and post-trial briefing were completed and in response to SE Multifamily's request for specificity, Highland provided a detailed list of requested information:

> 1. Consolidating financial statements: March 31, 2022, June 30, 2022, September 30, 2022, November 30, 2022 (if November is not yet available, then we request October 31, 2022).

[1] In hindsight, and based on the timing of the communication, SE Multifamily apparently had no intention of providing any information to Highland but "reach[ed] out" to avoid having the issue raised in the Bankruptcy Court during the Trial.

2. Historical distribution amounts to any members of SE Multifamily Holdings LLC listed by date, amount, and LLC unitholder.

3. Closing statement for the purchase of the Florida property in 2021.

4. Current rent roll for Florida property.

5. Monthly property-level reporting from the property manager for all properties that are still owned by SE Multifamily or its subsidiaries, starting with December 31, 2021 until most recent available.

6. For any debt outstanding (whether at the property or SE Multifamily level), list lender name, rate, current amount outstanding, and maturity. If there are other material features to the debt (conversion features, floating rate information, etc.) please note it.

7. For any notes receivable (affiliated or unaffiliated) or other receivables from affiliates at SE Multifamily or its subsidiaries, list borrower/affiliate name, rate (if applicable), current amount outstanding, and maturity. If there are other material features to the receivable (conversion features, floating rate information, etc.) please note it.

8. Copies of all valuations, marketing materials, PPA's, appraisals, or broker opinions of value obtained in 2021 or 2022 for all properties still owned by SE Multifamily or its subsidiaries.

9. Copies of all closing statements for all properties sold 2020-2022.

10. On an on-going basis, provide monthly financial statements for each month end, beginning December 31, 2022, along with property-level reporting from the property manager.

Exhibit 4 (collectively, the "Initial Specified Requests").

26. Over the course of the next six weeks, counsel for Highland and SE Multifamily exchanged a series of communications in which SE Multifamily erected unjustifiable hurdles and advanced new and disingenuous arguments intended to prevent Highland from copying and inspecting SE Multifamily's books and records. See generally Exhibits 4, 5, and 6.

27. In sum, despite Highland's repeated Records Requests made over an eight-month period, SE Multifamily and its Manager have failed to grant Highland access to SE Multifamily's books and records as unambiguously required under the Operating Agreement. Exhibit 1 § 8.3.

C. Additional Relevant Facts

28. The Trial conducted before the Bankruptcy Court concerned HCRE's contention that "all or a portion" of Highland's interest in SE Multifamily "may be" HCRE's property. On April 28, 2023, in an exhaustive 39-page decision (the "Decision"), the Bankruptcy Court rejected all of HCRE's contentions and confirmed that—as the parties always intended—Highland owns a 46.06% interest in SE Multifamily. Exhibit 7.

29. Finally, with the entry of the Decision, Highland seeks equitable relief here with a sense of urgency because (a) The Dugaboy Investment Trust—one of Mr. Dondero's "family trusts"—has reported to the Bankruptcy Court that the value of Highland's interest in SE Family inexplicably decreased from $20 million to approximately $12 million within the last year; and (b) under Highland's plan of reorganization, Highland is required to monetize its assets and distribute the proceeds to creditors (after the satisfaction of all other estate obligations). HCRE's unjustifiable interference with Highland's information rights is preventing Highland from completing the Bankruptcy Court-approved plan, which was affirmed by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

30. Highland therefore requires copies of SE Multifamily's books and records to determine the value of its interest and whether HCRE has fulfilled its duties as Manager with respect to, among other things, (a) the management of SE Multifamily; (b) the allocation of profits and losses among the Members (as that term is defined in the Operating Agreement); (c) whether, when, and in what amounts and for what reason distributions have been made to the Members; and (d) the preparation of SE Multifamily's federal and state income tax returns (including the Members' Forms K-1).

COUNT I SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE

31. Highland incorporates by reference all allegations (and the Exhibits upon which they are based) set forth in the preceding paragraphs.

32. Highland is a Member of SE Multifamily.

33. Section 8.3 of the Operating Agreement grants Members a broad and unconditional right to inspect and copy "all" of SE Multifamily's books and records.

34. In contrast to the rights granted under Delaware law (see 6 DEL. C. § 18-305), (a) Members seeking access to SE Multifamily's books and records under section 8.3 are not required to state the purpose of their request or take any other steps to enforce their rights, and (b) the Manager has no right to withhold information on the grounds of "confidentiality" or any other basis.

35. Highland's request to inspect and copy was reasonable because (a) the Initial Specified Requests were tendered in response to SE Multifamily's written inquiry; (b) the Records Request allowed sufficient time for SE Multifamily to produce the requested books and records, and (c) Highland indicated that it was flexible as to the timing and sequence of SE Multifamily's production of the books and records.

36. Defendants have engaged in a continuous pattern of conduct to evade their obligations under section 8.3 and placed unwarranted conditions and restrictions to Highland's Records Requests. See Exhibits 3-6.

37. Defendants have not provided any of SE Multifamily's books and records to Highland in response to the Records Requests or the Initial Specific Requests.

38. Highland has no adequate remedy at law because (a) no value can be placed on Highland's contractual right to copy and inspect SE Multifamily's books and records, and (b) Defendants' breach of their obligations under section 8.3 of the Operating Agreement will continue indefinitely in the absence of the equitable remedy of specific performance.

39. Highland therefore requests entry of an order requiring Defendants to permit Highland, its attorneys, and/or agents, to inspect and copy all of SE Multifamily's books and records, including but not limited to those responsive to the Initial Specified Requests.

40. Highland further requests that it be awarded recovery of its full fees, costs, and expenses, including attorneys fees, incurred in bringing this action for address HCRE's unjustifiable failure to comply with its unambiguous contractual obligations.

CONCLUSION

Wherefore, Highland requests that the Court:

A. Schedule a prompt final hearing to resolve the claim asserted herein;

B. Order Defendants to make available for inspection and copying to Highland (a) within fourteen (14) calendar days of the entry of a final order resolving the claim asserted herein, all documents responsive to the Initial Specified Requests, and (b) any other books and records of SE Multifamily that Highland may reasonably request in the future;

C. Award Highland its fees, costs, and expenses in connection with the prosecution of this action; and

D. Grant Highland such other and further relief as the Court may deem appropriate under the circumstances.

I. OVERVIEW

1. The core purpose of section 127 of the Securities Act is to allow staff of the Commission to seek orders in the public interest. While the Tribunal may consider an application by a private party, the cases have held that such recourse should be treated as exceptional. Section 127 is not to be used by private parties as a means to address private law complaints, or to pursue enforcement with respect to past breaches of securities law.

2. The cases in which the public interest jurisdiction has been exercised typically relate to a transaction or tactic that is of broad interest to market participants or to actions that would bring the integrity of the markets into disrepute, such as unfair tactics in going private transactions or the misuse of shareholder rights plans. This is not such a case.

3. The applicant, Highland Capital Management, holds 7.25% of the outstanding units of the respondent, NexPoint Hospitality Trust, having a value of approximately $536,000. Highland alleges that it requires additional disclosure in order to make a reasonably informed decision as to whether to vote in favour of amendments to conversion rights granted to creditors as part of COVID loan agreements. The amendments will confer a clear and undeniable benefit on the unitholders at no cost. More specifically, the amendments, which were required by the TSXV as a condition of continued listing, will either remove the creditors' conversion rights entirely or will shorten the time period in which the rights can be exercised. The amendments will also reduce the amount convertible. And they will make the rights significantly more expensive for the creditors to exercise, reducing the potential dilution of the REIT's unitholders.

4. The applicant provides no explanation as to how the additional disclosure will help it in deciding whether to vote in favour of these amendments which offer a clear benefit to the REIT and its unitholders. Instead, the applicant suggests that it requires the disclosure in order to investigate certain inconsistencies in the REIT's historical disclosure, or in the disclosure made by other related parties.

5. Such a backward-looking application, unrelated to NexPoint's future conduct, is at its core enforcement-related and, as such, is not properly brought under s. 127. Indeed, Highland does not even attempt to argue that its allegations engage the public interest or that the issues raised have any implication for the markets more broadly. Nor does Highland allege – nor could it – that the amendments to the loan agreements, which are manifestly to the benefit of the unitholders, are in any way unfair, improper, fraudulent, or otherwise abusive, nor does it allege that any unitholders will suffer prejudice if they are adopted.

6. In short, there is nothing "extraordinary" about Highland's application that justifies invoking the Tribunal's public interest jurisdiction. Its request for standing, and this application, should be dismissed.

7. In any event, Highland has not advanced a prima facie case and its complaints are without merit and do not stand up to even the most cursory examination. Some are clearly untenable in the face of the disclosure that is provided by the Management Information Circular, while others do not relate to the amendments that are in fact before the meeting. As for its request to exclude certain unitholders from voting, Highland cannot point to any legal basis for that request, and certainly no legal basis that finds any support in the evidence led.

II. FACTS

Background

8. From the time of its IPO, NexPoint's business comprised a number of hotel properties which catered in large part to business travelers. That business was severely affected by the onset of the pandemic, due to the precipitous (and persistent) decline in business travel.[1]

9. In order to alleviate the financial pressure that it was under, NexPoint received 32 loans in the aggregate amount of US$56,165,000 between June 2021 and September 2022. The loans were all extended by entities controlled or managed by James Dondero, who is NexPoint's largest unitholder, controlling in excess of 70% of the issued units.[2]

10. At the time that the loans were made, NexPoint filed the requisite notices with the TSXV as loan submissions pursuant to TSXV Policy 5.1 – Loans, Loan Bonuses, Finder's Fees and Commissions.[3]

11. Although the loans constituted related-party transactions, NexPoint was not required to obtain a formal valuation, as it relied upon the exemption from the Formal Valuation Requirement in s. 5.5(b) of MI 61-101 (which is the "Specified Markets Exemption").[4] And

NexPoint was not required to obtain minority approval, as it relied upon the exemption in s. 5.7(1)(a) of MI 61-101 (which applies where the fair market value of the transaction does not exceed 25% of the issuer's market capitalization). NexPoint also had available to it, and relied upon, the "Financial Hardship Exemption", set out in s. 5.7(1)(e) (which applies when the issuer is in serious financial difficulty).[5]

12. At no time prior to the summer of 2023 did the applicant raise any concern with the loans or with the propriety of NexPoint's reliance upon exemptions to the formal evaluation requirement and the minority approval requirement.

13. As will be discussed below, in December 2022, the TSXV advised for the first time that, in its view, the loans ought to have been the subject of filings under TSXV Policy 4.1 (which governs private placements) and not Policy 5.1 (which governs loans). As a result, the TSXV demanded that certain amendments be made to the conversion rights attached to the loans in order to bring the loans into compliance with Policy 4.1.

The Loan Amendments at Issue and the Disclosure Contained in the Management Information Circular

14. The Management Information Circular explains that there are 32 loans in question and that all were made by entities controlled or managed by James Dondero, who beneficially owns or controls more than 70% of the REIT's outstanding units:

[5] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 18, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 65.

> The REIT received 32 loans from entities controlled or managed by James Dondero between June 2021 and September 2022 in the aggregate amount of US$56,165,000.[6]

15. The Circular goes on to explain that:

(a) the loans are unsecured;

(b) each loan has a 20-year term;

(c) each loan bears interest, with the applicable interest rate ranging from 2.25% to 7.5% per year, which, in each case, was the market rate as at the date of issuance;

(d) the principal and interest owing under each loan is convertible to Class B Units[7] of the operating partnership of the REIT at the option of the holder of the loan at any time; and

(e) the conversion price is set at the value of the Class B Units at the time of conversion.

16. The Circular states:

> Each of the COVID Loans is unsecured, has a 20-year term and bears interest at interest rates ranging from 2.25% per year to 7.5% per year (which were market interest rates at the time of their issuance). The principal and interest owing under the COVID Loans is convertible into

---

[6] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 17, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 64.

[7] The Management Information Circular also explains that the Class B Units of the operating partnership do not carry voting rights, but are, in all material respects, economically equivalent to units of the REIT. See Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 7, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 54.

> Class B Units of the OP, at the option of the holder at any time, based on the value of a Class B Unit at the time of conversion.[8]

17. With respect to the amendments at issue, the Circular explains that the need for them arose because the TSXV advised the REIT in December 2022 (long after notice of the loans had been filed with the exchange) that the loans needed to be treated as "Convertible Securities", governed by TSXV Policy 4.1, rather than as loans, pursuant to TSXV Policy 5.1:

> The COVID Loans were filed with the TSXV at various points during 2021 and 2022, as loan submissions pursuant to TSXV Policy 5.1 – Loans, Loan Bonuses, Finder's Fees and Commissioner.
> Although the REIT believed that the COVID Loans were properly subject to Policy 5.1 and was not informed of any alternative treatment of the COVID Loans at the time of the filings, in December 2022, the TSXV advised the REIT that the COVID Loans were required to be treated as "Convertible Securities" under TSXV Policy 4.1 – Private Placements rather than loans under Policy 5.1[9]

18. Policy 4.1 limits the period within which conversion rights can be exercised to no more than five years from the date of issuance of the convertible security (in this case, the loan):

> The Conversion Period must expire no later than five years from the date of issuance of the Convertible Securities.[10]

19. Policy 4.1 also provides that the conversion price for a convertible security must not be less than the market price as at the "Price Reservation Date":

---

[8] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 17, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 64.

[9] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 18, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 65.

[10] TSXV Policy 4.1, s. 2.3(b).

> The minimum Conversion Price must never be less than the Market Price (as of the Price Reservation Date).[11]

20. Consistent with those provisions, and as disclosed by the Management Information Circular, the TSXV told the REIT that it would require certain amendments to the loans, namely:

(a) that the note holders' conversion rights either be removed or be shortened to five years from the date of each loan's issuance;

(b) that the conversion rights be limited to the principal amount of the loan; and

(c) that the conversion price be fixed at the market price of the REIT's units on the date that the loan was issued.

21. The Circular states:

> . . . [T]he TSXV required the following amendments to the COVID Loans: (i) either the conversion feature be removed or limited to five years from the date of issuance of the COVID Loan; (ii) the conversion feature be limited to the principal amount of the COVID Loan (rather than the principal amount including interest); and (iii) the conversion price be fixed at a price equal to the market price of the REIT's Units on the TSXV at the time of the issuance of the COVID Loan.[12]

22. The Circular goes on to explain that, if the amendments are implemented, only the principal amount of the loans would be convertible into units (rather than both principal and interest) and the note holders' conversion rights would expire between July 1, 2026 and

[11] TSXV Policy 4.1, s. 2.3(a). The "Price Reservation Date" is, roughly speaking, the date that the issuer makes the requisite filings related to the private placement with the TSXV under Policy 4.1.

[12] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 18-19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 65-66.

September 30, 2027 (depending on the date of issuance of the loan in question). However, the term of the loans themselves would remain 20 years:

> If the Amendments are implemented, only the principal amount of each of the COVID Loans will be convertible into Class B Units for five-year terms ending between July 1, 2026 and September 30, 2027; however, the term of the COVID Loans shall remain as 20 years from their date of issuance.[13]

23. And the Circular explains that the amended conversion rights, if approved, would apply to a total of US$47,665,000 in loans. An additional loan (in the amount of US$8.5 million) would have its conversion right removed altogether:

> For one COVID Loan for an amount of US$8.5 million, the conversion right will be removed altogether. In addition, if the Amendments are implemented, the COVID Loans with conversion rights will be for an aggregate amount of US$47,665,000. . . [14]

24. With respect to the conversion price – i.e., the price which the creditor would pay to convert its debt instrument into Class B units, if the amendments are approved, that price would increase at least six-fold and as much as ten-fold, based on current market prices of the REIT's units. To explain, the loans as they currently stand provide that the conversion price is to be based on the value of a Class B unit at the time of conversion. Based on current market price, the value of a Class B unit is US$0.25. However, if the amendments are approved, the conversion prices will be fixed at prices ranging from US$1.60 to US$2.50:

[14] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 19, Application Record, Tab 2(A) p. 66.

> . . . [T]he conversion price for the principal outstanding will be fixed at prices ranging from US$1.60 to US$2.50 . . .[15]

25. In sum, the amendments restrict rights that had been granted to the REIT's creditors, in that the amendments will either remove the rights entirely, or will shorten the time period within which the rights can be exercised and will reduce the amount convertible to the principal amount of the loans only. Based on the REIT's current unit price, the amendments will also make those rights significantly more expensive for the lenders to exercise and will significantly reduce the potential dilution of REIT unitholders. For the REIT and its unitholders, the amendments confer a clear and undeniable benefit, at no cost. The applicant does not assert otherwise.

26. As further disclosed by the Circular, the TSXV has demanded the amendments in order to satisfy its requirements for continued listing on the exchange. If the amendments are not approved, then the TSXV may halt or suspend trading in the units, and/or delist the REIT:

> If the Amendments are not approved at the Meeting, the REIT will engage with the TSXV to seek alternative solutions to satisfy the TSXV listing requirements; however, there can be no assurance that a satisfactory solution will be found, and if a solution is not found, the TSXV may halt trading in the Units, suspend trading in the Units and/or initiate a delisting review of the REIT's Units as, absent the Amendments, the REIT would not be in compliance with TSXV listing requirements.[16]

27. Not surprisingly, given all of the foregoing, the board of the REIT concluded that the amendments were in the best interests of the REIT:

[15] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 66.

[16] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 66.

> The Board, having undertaken a thorough review of, and having: (i) considered the terms of the Amendments to the COVID Loans; (ii) considered the need to comply with the requirements of the TSXV in order to maintain a listing for the Units, and (iii) consulted with its legal advisors, concluded that the Amendments are in the best interests of the REIT and agreed to pursue the approval of the Amendments.[17]

28. Consistent with that conclusion, the Circular sets out the board's recommendation that unitholders approve the amendments:

> The Board has unanimously approved the Amendments to the COVID Loans (with James Dondero declaring his interest in the Amendments and abstaining from voting) and recommends that the Unitholders vote FOR the Amended COVID Loans Resolution.[18]

29. In addition, the Circular notes that, because the amendments relate to loans with entities controlled by Mr. Dondero, and because Mr. Dondero owns or controls more than 10% of the REIT's units, the amendments constitute a "related party transaction", within the meaning of MI 61-101 and, therefore, require minority approval in order to take effect:

> The Amendments constitute a "related party transaction" within the meaning of MI 61-101, as the Amendments have the effect of amending the terms of the COVID Loans, which are securities of the REIT beneficially owned or over which control is exercised by Mr. Dondero (a "related party" of the REIT because of the fact that Mr. Dondero beneficially owns or controls Units of the REIT that carry more than 10% of the voting rights attached to all of the REIT's issued and outstanding Units).

[18] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 20, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 67.

> MI 61-101 requires that a related party transaction be subject to "minority approval" . . . of every class of "affected securities" of the issuer. . . [19]

30. Finally, the Circular contains a statement certifying that the facts set out in it are true and complete:

> The foregoing contains no untrue statement of a material fact and does not omit to state a material fact that is required to be stated or that is necessary to make a statement not misleading in light of the circumstances in which it was made.[20]

31. The applicant alleges that the foregoing disclosure – relating to amendments that are being demanded by the regulator, and that are patently to the benefit of the REIT and its unitholders – is somehow inadequate. However, the applicant does so without any explanation as to how additional information would assist it in deciding how to vote. And tellingly the applicant makes no suggestion – nor could such a suggestion credibly be made – that the amendments pose any risk of prejudice to the unitholders.

III. LAW AND ARGUMENT

The Tribunal's Public Interest Jurisdiction Is Not Engaged

32. Although s. 127 provides the Tribunal with broad jurisdiction to make orders intervening in the capital markets where it is in the public interest to do so, this discretion is not unlimited.[21]

[19] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 66.

The Tribunal's public interest jurisdiction must be exercised with caution, having regard to "all of the facts, all of the policy consideration at play, all of the underlying circumstances of the case, and all of the interests affected by the matter and the remedy sought."[22]

33. As this Tribunal has repeatedly affirmed, "The ability of a private party to bring an application under section 127 is intended to be an extraordinary circumstance."[23] Section 127 is not to be used by private parties as a means to address private law complaints, or to pursue enforcement with respect to past breaches of securities law:

> [Section] 127 cannot be used merely to remedy Securities Act misconduct alleged to have caused harm or damages to private parties or individuals.[24]

34. Rather, the purpose of such applications must be protective, and to prevent future harm to Ontario's capital markets.[25] As the Commission stated in MI Developments Inc.:

> In our view, persons other than Staff are not entitled as of right to bring an application under section 127 where the application is, at its core, for the purpose of imposing sanctions in respect of past breaches of the Act or past conduct alleged to be contrary to the public interest. In our view, those purposes are regulatory in nature and enforcement related and such applications should be able to be brought as of right only by Staff.[26]

35. In order for the Tribunal to make an order under its public interest jurisdiction, it must be satisfied that the application raises issues relevant not only to the applicant, but also to the public and the efficient functioning of the capital markets.[27]

36. In determining whether the Tribunal's public interest mandate is engaged by an application by a private party, the following factors are relevant: (i) whether the application raises a novel issue; (ii) whether the issues raised could have been addressed in previous applications; (iii) whether the application demonstrates that there is a prima facie case; and (iv) whether the timing of the application would interfere unduly with the justified expectations of market participants and affect fairness, efficiency and confidence in the capital markets.[28]

37. Thus, the applicant must establish that there is a threat of abusive future conduct which engages issues of importance to the capital markets. In Catalyst Capital Group Inc., the Commission explained:

> The Commission will intervene in situations where [a transaction] is abusive, contravenes Ontario securities law or an animating principle underlying that law, or brings the integrity of the capital markets into disrepute.[29]

38. In MI Developments Inc. (Re)., the Tribunal established that a private applicant seeking standing bears the burden of showing a prima facie case that the following factors are satisfied:

(a) the application involves or relates to both past and possible future conduct regulated by Ontario securities law;

---

[28] Pearson (Re), 2018 ONSEC 53 at para 72.

[29] Catalyst Capital Group Inc., 2016 ONSEC 14 at para. 29.

(b) the application is not, at its core, enforcement in nature;

(c) the relief sought is future-looking;

(d) the Commission has the authority to impose an appropriate remedy in the circumstances;

(e) the applicant, as a substantial shareholder of the respondent, is directly affected by the past and future conduct of the respondents; and

(f) it is in the public interest to hear the application.[30]

39. The Commission has repeatedly emphasized that the applicant bears the burden of proof to establish the basis for the exercise of the public interest jurisdiction under section 127. In Pearson (Re), the Commission stated:

> An applicant bears the onus of establishing that it is in the public interest to grant such an extraordinary remedy and must tender "sufficient prima facie evidence to satisfy that onus."[31]

40. Where an applicant cannot demonstrate a prima facie case, its request for standing will be denied and the application dismissed.[32]

41. The cases in which the Commission has invoked its public interest jurisdiction typically involve matters of broad interest to market participants or they relate to actions that would bring the integrity of the markets into disrepute. Thus, in Magna (a case upon which the applicant places great reliance), the Commission addressed issues relating to the required level of disclosure regarding a major restructuring transaction in respect of which the Board was not making a recommendation, leaving shareholders to their own devices. However, counsel are not aware of any cases (and certainly the applicant cites none) where a mere dispute about the sufficiency of disclosure in an otherwise unremarkable transaction was found to engage s. 127's public interest jurisdiction.

42. None of the factors that are indicative of a matter engaging the public interest is found in Highland's application. Highland's primary allegation is that the REIT's historical disclosure relating to the issuance of the loans has been insufficient. Of course, the desirability of those loans is not the matter to be put before the REIT's unitholders and is not the subject of the disclosure at issue in the within proceeding. Moreover, even if the allegation had any merit – which it does not – such a straight-forward disclosure complaint does not require consideration by the Commission pursuant to s. 127. In any event, any decision from the Commission on this issue would be of limited guidance to the public, as it is well-established that disclosure is "contextual and will vary with the circumstances".[33]

43. The fact that Highland's application does not engage the public interest is further emphasized by the fact that it does not even allege (nor could it) that the transaction at issue in this proceeding – a transaction that on its face is so obviously to the benefit of unitholders – is unfair, improper, fraudulent, abusive or otherwise contrary to the public interest. There is accordingly no allegation that raises even a prima facie case that the Commission would be justified in intervening in the proposed transaction for the protection of the capital markets.

44. Finally, the untimely and disruptive nature of Highland's application should not be ignored. The disclosure complained of by Highland occurred in 2021 and 2022. Thus, the primary basis for this application – an inquiry into the exemptions relied upon for the underlying loans – could have been raised long ago. Yet Highland has provided no explanation as to why it did not raise its complaints at earlier time. Rather, it waited until a scheduled meeting of unitholders was imminent to commence this application, requiring the meeting to be re-scheduled at the last minute. And, as discussed below, the applicant now also takes the position that the meeting cannot proceed on the adjourned date, even if its application is dismissed.

45. The Commission has noted that applications brought by private parties close in time to a definitive event such as a shareholder vote must be closely scrutinized:

> We agree with Staff's submissions that applications for relief under section 127 by private parties brought close in time to a definitive event such as a shareholder vote or Court approval should be closely scrutinized to determine whether there was a reasonable basis for the delay.[34]

46. The same concerns apply in the present circumstances. Highland's unnecessary delay in bringing this application has resulted in significant disruption to the previously scheduled meeting of unitholders, which needed to be rescheduled to accommodate the hearing of this application. This untimeliness should not be excused, particularly since, as described above,

[34] Pearson (Re), 2018 ONSEC 53 at para. 75.

Highland has failed entirely to establish a prima facie case of unfair, improper, fraudulent or otherwise abusive practice and has not explained how the orders it seeks would be in the public interest.

47. Furthermore and in any event, as is discussed below, Highland's complaints about the disclosure made in the Management Information Circular are wholly without merit.

There Is No Merit to the Applicant's Complaints – The Applicant Does Not Have a Prima Facie Case

48. As discussed above, the disclosure provided in the Management Information Circular clearly explains:

(a) how the amendments came about – i.e., they were demanded by the TSXV;[35]

(b) the substance of the amendments – i.e., they will fix conversion prices at prices significantly higher than the REIT's current market price (thereby reducing the potential dilution of the REIT's unitholders), will restrict the term of (and, in one instance, eliminate) the lenders' conversion rights, and will restrict the amount convertible to the principal amount of the loan only;[36] and

[36] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 18-19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 65-66.

(c) the consequences if the amendments are not approved – i.e., the REIT will not be in compliance with the TSXV listing requirements, which could lead the TSXV to halt or suspend trading and/or initiate a delisting review.[37]

49. Notwithstanding the fact that the amendments are, on their face, clearly beneficial to unitholders and notwithstanding the fact that the rejection of the amendments would be detrimental to the interests of all unitholders, the applicant advances a myriad of arguments as to why it says that further information is required. None of those arguments stands up to scrutiny.

50. Moreover, many of the applicant's arguments seem to be directed at concerns that it appears to have with NexPoint's past disclosure (or with the disclosure of other entities controlled by James Dondero), all of which suggests that the within proceeding is simply the latest chapter in a long-running and multi-faceted dispute between the applicant and Mr. Dondero – the type of private dispute that does not engage s. 127's public interest jurisdiction.

(i) The Management Information Circular Clearly States that the Trustees Believe the Amendments to Be Fair and Desirable and in the Best Interests of the REIT

51. The applicant argues at length that the disclosure in the Management Information Circular is inadequate because it does not state whether the trustees believe that the amendments to the notes are fair. For example, the applicant's factum states:

> The trustees have not disclosed their views on the fairness of the amendments to the notes.[38]

[37] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 66.

[38] Applicant's factum at para. 50.

52. Similarly:

> The trustees have also failed to disclose or explain their reasonable beliefs as to the desirability or fairness of the specific amendments to the notes. . .[39]

53. And:

> . . . [T]he Information Circular is silent on whether the amendments are fair to the unitholders.[40]

54. And:

> . . . [W]hile the Information Circular discloses that one Convertible Note in the amount of $8.5 million will have its conversion term removed completely, it does not disclose whether this is fair or desirable.[41]

55. The applicant's argument is difficult to credit.

56. As discussed above, the amendments were required by the TSXV as a condition of continued listing. Moreover, the amendments are all manifestly to the benefit of the REIT and its unitholders, as they restrict or eliminate conversion rights granted to the REIT's creditors, and make the exercise of those rights more expensive for the creditors, thereby reducing the extent of any possible dilution of existing unitholders. In those circumstances, it is difficult to imagine any trustee making a good faith determination that the amendments were anything other than fair and desirable. And that is precisely the determination made by the board, as set out in the Management Information Circular, which clearly states that the board "concluded that the

[39] Applicant's factum at para. 60.

[40] Applicant's factum at para. 61.

[41] Applicant's factum at para. 62.

Amendments are in the best interests of the REIT".[42] The concept of "fairness" can have no other meaning in this context.

(ii) The Management Information Circular Clearly Discloses the Factors on which the Trustees Based Their Decision

57. The applicant's next complaint is similarly spurious. The applicant argues that "the trustees have failed to disclose in reasonable detail the material factors on which their beliefs regarding the amendments are based and the background of their deliberations".[43]

58. The trustee's conclusion that the amendments are in the best interests of the REIT flows obviously from the description of the amendments themselves: a removal or restriction of the lenders' conversion rights; and an increase in the conversion price, resulting in a decrease of any possible dilution of existing unitholders. And the amendments were demanded by the TSXV as a condition for continued listing. No reasonable unitholder should require any further explanation as to why the trustees concluded that the amendments were in the best interests of the REIT and its unitholders.

(iii) The Applicant's Purported Concerns Regarding a Potential Breach of Duty of Loyalty or Duty of Care Are Speculative and Are Not Properly the Subject of a Section 127 Public Interest Hearing

59. Other arguments advanced by the applicant have a slightly different focus and are objectionable for different reasons.

---

[42] Management Information Circular, Exhibit "A" to Seery Affidavit, p. 19, Application Record, Tab 2(A), p. 66.

[43] Applicant's factum at para. 63.

60. These arguments seem to suggest – without any foundation – that the trustees of the REIT failed to fulfill their fiduciary duty or duty of care owed to the REIT and its unitholders, by failing to secure the best possible amendment terms with the REIT's lenders. For example, the applicant's factum states:

> While the factors listed in NHT's Information Circular may speak to the desirability of amending the Convertible Notes to meet the TSXV's policies, they fail to disclose why the specific amendments subject to minority approval, as opposed to other potential amendments, are the most desirable or fair for NHT and its unitholders. [emphasis added][44]

61. Similarly:

> [I]f the amendment of the $56 million in Convertible Notes is beneficial to NHT, the unitholders should understand why NHT has not sought to amend all the Convertible Notes.[45]

62. This complaint does not go to whether the unitholders have enough information to decide whether to approve the amendments in question. Rather, it goes to whether the REIT's officers or trustees should have negotiated harder in order to secure terms that were even more favourable to the REIT or should have negotiated similarly beneficial amendments to other agreements, which amendments were not demanded by the TSXV.

63. The applicant has led no evidence, nor has it suggested any reason to believe, that there was any possibility of the REIT extracting terms from its creditors that were any more favourable than those which have been put before the unitholders. On the contrary, commercial common sense tells us that the only terms which could be obtained from the REIT's lenders are those which the TSXV has demanded as a condition of continued listing.

[44] Applicant's factum at para. 66.

[45] Applicant's factum at para. 76.

64. Moreover, even if there were evidence that the trustees carried out the negotiations in a manner which breached their duty of loyalty or duty of care, that question would not be germane to the within application. The complaint that the trustees could perhaps have done better raises no issue that is germane to a s. 127 proceeding; if it had any merit, it would be a matter for another forum.

65. Similar issues arise in connection with the applicant's argument that it needs disclosure as to why NexPoint initially believed that the loans were governed by TSXV's policy regarding loans, as opposed to the policy regarding convertible securities. The applicant's factum states:

> The Information Circular is silent on why the trustees and their advisors believed that the Convertible Notes . . . were not initially filed as "Convertible Securities" under the TSXV's Private Placement policy but rather under the TSXV's Loans, Loan Bonuses, Finder's Fees and Commissions policy.
> NHT has not disclosed how it made the mischaracterization that caused the Convertible Notes to avoid TSXV scrutiny when they were filed.[46]

66. However, the details as to how/why NexPoint believed that the loans were governed by Policy 5.1 – how "the problem came to be", in the applicant's phrasing,[47] has no bearing on whether the amendments, which the TSXV has now required, and which are manifestly to the benefit of the REIT and its unitholders, should be approved at the upcoming meeting. The question posed has no relevance for unitholders regarding the amendments and certainly does not engage the public interest.

[46] Applicant's factum at para. 71 and 74.

[47] Applicant's factum at para. 74.

(iv) The Applicant's Purported Concerns with Past Disclosure Are Not Properly the Subject of a Section 127 Application

67. The applicant also makes allegations regarding the REIT's historical disclosure.

68. For example, the applicant suggests that there was some impropriety in the REIT's historical disclosure which stated that the loans, when originally issued, were exempt from the requirement to obtain minority approval, by virtue of section 5.7(1)(a) of MI 61-101, which applies where the fair market value of the transaction is less than 25% of the issuer's market capitalization. The applicant calls into question whether that particular exemption was actually available to the REIT, with the unspoken implication being that the REIT may have acted contrary to securities law in failing to obtain minority approval at the time the loans were issued. However, the applicant does so not by referencing the market capitalization at the relevant time (i.e., the time of issuance), but the current market capitalization. The applicant's factum states:

> Considering that the current value of the Convertible Notes far exceeds NHT's market capitalization, unitholders should have the opportunity to satisfy themselves that the notes were truly exempt from minority unitholder approval when they were entered into.[48]

69. Regardless, such a historically-oriented verification exercise – designed to determine whether or not a past transaction should have been subject to minority approval – is outside of the proper scope of a section 127 application brought by a private party. The applicant's frank admission that it is trying to detect what it perceives as past misconduct provides a strong indication that its goal in bringing the within proceeding is not forward-looking and preventive, but rather is backward-looking and punitive.

70. The applicant also takes issue with past public disclosure made by NexPoint regarding the conversion rights attached to the loans. Specifically, financial statements from 2021 and 2022 stated that the loans were convertible at the option of the REIT,[49] while financial statements from 2023 stated that the loans were convertible at the election of the noteholder. The Q1 2023 financial statements describe the conversion rights as follows:

> The Company's notes due to affiliates are, subject to TSXV approval, convertible at any time at the election of the holders into Class B Units. [emphasis added][50]

71. In a purported effort to investigate these past inconsistencies, the applicant seeks disclosure of copies of the actual loan agreements. Its factum states:

> NHT should be required to disclose copies of the actual executed agreements for the notes, including any past amendments or assignments. This is the only way unitholders can view and assess the specific terms of each note for themselves and clarify the inconsistencies in past disclosure.[51]

72. However, there is no question (and the applicant does not seem to raise any) that the conversion right is that of the holder. It is this right which has activated the TSXV's requirement for the amendment. The reason as to why a past disclosure said otherwise is not properly the subject-matter of a s. 127 application. Nor does the applicant explain why it did not raise its concern months ago, when the REIT's Q1 2023 financial statements, which clearly stated that the loans were convertible at the election of the creditors, were issued.

73. Even in cases where the standing threshold can be satisfied, there rests on the applicant the obligation to prove its allegations on the balance of probabilities. The Tribunal will not move to a full hearing on the merits on the basis of speculative assertions.[52]

74. Lastly, it is not any disclosure failure which must be proven, but rather the non-disclosure of a material fact.[53] None of the complaints raised by the applicant rise to that level.

(v) The Applicant's Purported Concerns with Public Disclosure Made by Third Parties Are Not Properly the Subject of the Within Application

75. Seeking to stretch section 127's jurisdiction even further, the applicant is also attempting to use the within proceeding to investigate what it believes to be misstatements contained in the disclosure of a third party, an entity named Highland Opportunities and Income Fund, which is one of the holders of the loans in question. More specifically, the applicant takes issue with past public disclosure of Highland Opportunities and Income Fund filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, which disclosure stated that the loan in question was secured (and not, as is set out in all of NexPoint's disclosure, unsecured).[54] In a purported attempt to investigate this past statement, which was made not by the REIT, but by its contracting counterparty, and which was made pursuant to a foreign securities regulation regime, the applicant seeks production of copies of the various loan agreements.[55]

76. Again, the applicant's focus is misdirected. It is not proper to use the within application, brought against NexPoint, to pursue suspected misstatements made by a third party in a foreign jurisdiction.

(vi) There Is No Basis to the Applicant's Request to Exclude Liberty CLO Holdco or Highland Dallas Foundation from Voting

77. In addition to its request for additional disclosure, the applicant also seeks to exclude two unitholders from voting. The applicant does so without having served notice of the within application on those unitholders. And it does so without engaging with the applicable legal test for excluding unitholders from the vote which is set down by MI 61-101. Indeed, the applicant does not even identify the particular provision of MI 61-101 which it alleges is applicable. Instead, the applicant contents itself with vague assertions that the two unitholders are "interested" and that they are "connected to" James Dondero.[56]

78. The governing provision of MI 61-101 is s. 8.1(2), which provides that, in determining minority approval, certain classes of security holders must be excluded:

> In determining minority approval for a . . . related party transaction, an issuer shall exclude the votes attached to affected securities that, to the knowledge of the issuer or any interested party or their respective directors or senior officers, after reasonable inquiry, are beneficially owned or over which control or direction is exercised by
> (a) the issuer,

[55] Applicant's factum at para. 55.

[56] See in this regard Applicant's factum at para. 83 and 85.

> (b) an interested party,
>
> (c) a related party of an interested party . . . or
> (d) a joint actor with a person referred to in paragraph (b) or (c) in respect of the transaction.[57]

79. While the applicant does not specify to which of these categories it alleges the two entities belong, it obviously is not relying upon category (a) (since neither of the two entities is "the issuer"), and it presumably is not relying upon category (b) (since neither of the two entities is alleged to be a party to the loan transaction, or to be entitled to receive any collateral benefit or payment of any kind from the transaction – as is required to fall within the definition of "interested party").[58]

80. With respect to category (c) – i.e., a "related party of an interested party", again the applicant does not provide any assistance as to whether it is alleging that these two unitholders are "related parties" to either Mr. Dondero or to the counterparties to the loans. Regardless, the applicant has not led any evidence to support any such allegation. It has not led any evidence, or made any suggestion that, the unitholders are "a control person" of the counterparties to the loan (as would satisfy paragraph (a) of the definition of "related party", which refers to a "control person of the entity").[59]

81. Nor has it led any evidence that the control person of the counterparties (i.e., Mr. Dondero) is a control person of the two unitholders (as would satisfy paragraph (b) of the definition of "related party"). In that regard, the applicable definition of "control person" is found in s. 1(1) of the Securities Act and states as follows:

> "control person" means,
>
> (a) a person or company who holds a sufficient number of the voting rights attached to all outstanding voting securities of an issuer to affect materially the control of the issuer, and, if a person or company holds more than 20 per cent of the voting rights attached to all outstanding voting securities of an issuer, the person or company is deemed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to hold a sufficient number of the voting rights to affect materially the control of the issuer, or
> (b) each person or company in a combination of persons or companies, acting in concert by virtue of an agreement, arrangement, commitment or understanding, which holds in total a sufficient number of the voting rights attached to all outstanding voting securities of an issuer to affect materially the control of the issuer, and, if a combination of persons or companies holds more than 20 per cent of the voting rights attached to all outstanding voting securities of an issuer, the combination of persons or companies is deemed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to hold a sufficient number of the voting rights to affect materially the control of the issuer.[60]

82. There is no evidence that Mr. Dondero is a "control person" of either of the two entities. Indeed, with respect to the Highland Dallas Foundation, there cannot possibly be a "control person" of that entity, since it does not appear to be an "issuer", as it does not appear to have any outstanding securities.[61]

83. Nor can there be any suggestion that either of the two unitholders fall within any of the other parts of the definition of "related party", such as would make either of them a "related

[61] With respect to the fact that Highland Dallas does not appear to have any outstanding securities, due to the fact that it is a non-profit corporation, see Exhibit "NN" to Seery Affidavit, Application Record, Tab 2(N), p. 1699-1701.

party" of Mr. Dondero or any of the lenders.

84. That leaves the possibility that the applicant is alleging that the two unitholders are "joint actors" with Mr. Dondero or the lenders. If so, the applicant has failed to lead any evidence of such a relationship.

85. "Joint actors" is defined in MI 61-101 to mean "acting jointly or in concert", as determined in accordance with s. 1.9 of MI 62-104. As set out in s. 1.9(1) and as explained by the Commission in Sterling Centrecorp Inc. (Re), whether two parties are "joint actors" is a question of fact (and neither of the situations whereby persons are presumed to be acting jointly or in concert has any application here).[62]

86. Thus, in Sterling Centrecorp Inc. (Re), the Commission found that a shareholder may be acting jointly and in concert with insiders to a particular transaction, if that shareholder played an integral role in planning, promoting or structuring the transaction in question:

> A determination of a joint actor relationship can be made if the facts establish that the parties in question played an integral role in planning, promoting and structuring the transaction to ensure its success beyond their customary role.[63]

87. Of course, there is no suggestion that either of the two unitholders played any role whatsoever with respect to the planning, promoting, or structuring of the loans in question. Rather, the applicant merely alleges that Mr. Mark Patrick, who is the "general manager" of a company related to Liberty CLO Holdco, used to be employed by a company controlled by Mr.

Dondero.[64] However, as the Commission explained in Sterling Centrecorp Inc. (Re), the mere fact that parties have personal or business relationships is not sufficient to make them joint actors:

> The mere fact that parties had personal or business relationships in the past does not render them joint actors within the meaning of Rule 61-501.[65]

88. And, with respect to Highland Dallas Foundation, the applicant relies upon the fact that Mr. Dondero is one of three directors of that entity and that the Foundation used to share (but no longer shares) an address with the REIT[66] – facts that are entirely irrelevant to whether the Foundation was acting jointly and in concert with Mr. Dondero or the lenders in respect of these loan transactions.

89. Finally, the filings and decisions from the U.S. bankruptcy court upon which the applicant relies are of no assistance. One of the decisions upon which Highland relies does not even reflect the outcome of an adjudication on the merits, but was merely a summary of allegations made by one of the parties.[67] The other decisions do not deal with either of Liberty CLO Holdco or Dallas Mountain Trust and they certainly do not purport to make any broad findings about who controls those two entities (or indeed to make any findings about those two entities at all).[68] What Highland's extensive reliance upon these Texas decisions best demonstrates is that Highland and Mr. Dondero have a litigation history which engages other agendas.

90. In sum, there is simply no evidentiary basis – certainly no "clear and cogent evidence"[69] – in support of the applicant's assertion that Liberty CLO Holdco or the Highland Dallas Foundation are "interested parties" within the meaning of MI 61-101 and thereby excluded from voting.

There Is No Basis for the Cease Trade Order Sought by the Applicant

91. In addition to seeking additional disclosure and an order excluding two unitholders from voting (discussed above), the applicant also seeks an order prohibiting the REIT from "trading its securities" or the Class B units of the operating partnership "with any entities controlled or managed by James Dondero" until such time as the REIT makes the additional disclosure sought by the applicant.[70]

92. The applicant says that the purpose of this order is, in part, "to prevent NHT from entering into further convertible notes with Dondero-affiliated parties".[71] And it explains that, without such an order, the REIT will be able "to continue entering into convertible notes without proper oversight".[72]

93. First, there is no evidence whatsoever – nor does the applicant even suggest – that the REIT has any intention of entering into any such additional loans. Second, cease trading the units will do nothing to prevent the issuance of such new notes, even if such a course of action were being contemplated.

94. In the circumstances, the only conceivable reason for the applicant to seek the cease-trade order is to clothe the within application in the guise of a forward-looking, public interest proceeding. However, the claim for forward-looking relief is a contrivance and cannot conceal that the proceeding is, at its core, enforcement-related.

If No Further Disclosure Is Ordered, There Is No Basis for a Further Postponement of the Meeting

95. Finally, the applicant makes a most puzzling request. It asks that the meeting, now scheduled with its concurrence for October 26, be further adjourned, even if its application is dismissed.

96. The meeting was adjourned to a fixed date to accommodate an orderly hearing of this matter. In turn, the schedule for delivery of materials was set to allow the matter to be dealt with before the adjourned date. And, as required by the applicable regulatory requirements, the REIT established a proxy deadline of two days prior to the meeting.

97. The applicant now says that that unitholders should not be required to submit proxies for how they will vote if the application is dismissed. The applicant cites no precedent or authority – and counsel is not aware of any – for the startling proposition that a meeting adjourned to accommodate the Tribunal's process must not proceed, even if the application is dismissed.

98. It is submitted that the applicant's request should be rejected.

IV. ORDER REQUESTED

99. The Respondent respectfully requests that this Tribunal dismiss this proceeding, with costs.

Securities Act*, R.S.O. 1990, c. S.5, s. 1(1).

Purposes of Act

1.1 The purposes of this Act are,

(a) to provide protection to investors from unfair, improper or fraudulent practices;

(b) to foster fair, efficient and competitive capital markets and confidence in capital markets;

(b.1) to foster capital formation; and

(c) to contribute to the stability of the financial system and the reduction of systemic risk. 1994, c. 33, s. 2; 2017, c. 34, Sched. 37, s. 2; 2021, c. 8, Sched. 9, s. 40 (7).

TSXV Policy 4.1 – Private Placements

2.3 Conversion Terms

(a) The minimum Conversion Price must never be less than the Market Price (as of the Price Reservation Date). Furthermore, if the Convertible Security has a term of greater than one year, the minimum allowable Conversion Price after the first year must be the greater of the Market Price and $0.10. For greater certainty, if, for example, the applicable Market Price on issuance of the Convertible Security is $0.07, the minimum allowable Conversion Price will be $0.07 in the first year of the term of the Convertible Security and $0.10 thereafter.

(b) The Conversion Period must expire no later than five years from the date of issuance of the Convertible Securities.

"interested party" means

(a) for a take-over bid including an insider bid, the offeror or a joint actor with the offeror,

(b) for an issuer bid

(i) the issuer, and

(ii) any control person of the issuer, or any person that would reasonably be expected to be a control person of the issuer upon successful completion of the issuer bid,

(c) for a business combination, a related party of the issuer at the time the transaction is agreed to, if the related party

(i) would, as a consequence of the transaction, directly or indirectly acquire the issuer or the business of the issuer, or combine with the issuer, through an amalgamation, arrangement or otherwise, whether alone or with joint actors,

(ii) is a party to any connected transaction to the business combination, or

(iii) is entitled to receive, directly or indirectly, as a consequence of the transaction

(A) consideration per affected security that is not identical in amount and form to the entitlement of the general body of holders in Canada of securities of the same class,

(B) a collateral benefit, or

(C) consideration for securities of a class of equity securities of the issuer if the issuer has more than one outstanding class of equity securities, unless that consideration is not greater than the entitlement of the general body of holders in Canada of every other class of equity securities of the issuer in relation to the voting and financial participating interests in the issuer represented by the respective securities, and

(d) for a related party transaction, a related party of the issuer at the time the transaction is agreed to, if the related party

(i) is a party to the transaction, unless it is a party only in its capacity as a holder of affected securities and is treated identically to the general body of holders in Canada of securities of the same class on a per security basis, or

(ii) is entitled to receive, directly or indirectly, as a consequence of the transaction

(A) a collateral benefit, or

(B) a payment or distribution made to one or more holders of a class of equity securities of the issuer if the issuer has more than one outstanding class of equity securities, unless the amount of that payment or distribution is not greater than the entitlement of the general body of holders in Canada of every other class of equity securities of the issuer in relation to the voting and financial participating interests in the issuer represented by the respective securities;

Re: SE Multifamily REIT Holdings LLC | Books and Records Request

Dear John:

We write in response to the request by Highland Capital Management, L.P. ("Highland") to review and copy the books and records of SE Multifamily REIT Holdings LLC ("SE Multifamily").

We note that Highland's written request does not state the purpose of Highland's demand, as required under Delaware law. See 6 Del. Code § 18-305(e). Further, we have not received the required power of attorney or other writing authorizing your office to act on behalf of Highland, as a member of SE Multifamily, for the purpose of this demand. Id.

Upon receipt of a written statement of purpose and accompanying written authorization, SE Multifamily is prepared to produce non-confidential records which are maintained in the usual course of the company's business pursuant to the First Amended and Restated Limited Liability Company Agreement. These records include the company's last twelve-month financials, historical distribution amounts, the closing statement for the purchase of the Florida property in 2021, the current rent roll for the Florida property, information regarding outstanding debt, and quarterly financial statements. SE Multifamily can produce these documents on a rolling basis beginning next week.

Please let me know if you would like to discuss any of the above.

Best regards,
