2 THE COURT: -- hand function. We have a full
3 courtroom here of counsel, but I will do my best to make sure 4 you have access.

5 Let me turn to debtors' counsel. Good morning.

6 MR. PETRIE: Good morning, Your Honor.

7 For the record, Francis Petrie of Kirkland, proposed 8 counsel for the debtors.

9 We have several items up for hearing today as Your 10 Honor noted so I'd like to take a minute to just set the stage 11 on the major discussions that are going to be happening.

12 First, we're going to be seeking approval of the sale 13 order which memorializes the results of the months-long 14 marketing process that led to a competitive auction which 15 coming out of we received the successful bid from LabCorp 16 Genetics.

17 We'll provide more detail about the sale transaction
18 later but it is truly a significant achievement for the company 19 and a major step for progress in these Chapter 11 cases. The 20 sale order contemplates that Invitae will be sold as a going 21 concern with LabCorp acquiring substantially all of the 22 company's assets and employees in exchange for cash and other 23 consideration that provides sufficient amounts to the estate to 24 provide a path out of Chapter 11.

25 Next on the agenda, we have the Committee's motion to

1 extend the challenge period which was filed on Friday with an 2 accompanying motion to shorten. We understand from a text
3 order entered on the docket yesterday that Your Honor has set 4 this item to go forward as a status conference only with any 5 substantive argument to come at a later hearing.

6 The debtors in Deerfield, one of the secured lenders, 7 each filed objections to the motion to shorten, but based on 8 Your Honor's text order, I believe that scheduling this 9 argument will be the main order of business today.

10 And third, we have Kirkland's retention application 11 which will be going forward on a contested basis. As Your 12 Honor is aware, Kirkland's retention received objections from 13 the Committee and the U.S. Trustee. I'd like to inform Your 14 Honor that we've engaged with the U.S. Trustee very 15 constructively to solve the 10 or so ancillary issues that he 16 raised in the end of his objection and we've reached consensus 17 with Mr. Sponder on those items.

18 So those will be contained in a proposed form of 19 order in a supplemental declaration -- or a supplemental 20 declaration, as applicable, which means that their only 21 remaining objection are the Committee's issues which we can 22 address when the time comes.

23 So that's what's coming up at today's hearing. Would 24 Your Honor like to make any comments or do you have any 25 questions at the outset before we jump into the agenda?

1 THE COURT: No, I think we should just go all in.

2 MR. PETRIE: All right, then.

3 With that, Your Honor, today the debtors are here
4 seeking entry of the sale order originally filed at Docket 5 Number 364 that we have amended since then and submitted to 6 chambers.

7 First, in support of the sale order, we and LabCorp, 8 the purchaser, have submitted two declarations, one of Andrew 9 Swift, a managing director at Moelis & Company, which was filed 10 at Docket Number 437, which discusses how the assets were 11 marketed and the process that led to the selection of LabCorp 12 as the highest and best fit.

13 And Hogan Lovells, as counsel to the purchaser, filed
14 the declaration of Anil Asnani of LabCorp at Docket Number 435, 15 which discusses other aspects of the sale and auction process,
16 including that the parties engaged in good faith and at arm's 17 length and that LabCorp has the financial wherewithal to 18 provide adequate assurance to contract counterparties.

19 Both Mr. Swift and Mr. Asnani are in the courtroom 20 here today and are available for cross-examination if needed.
21 But at this point, in support of the sale order, I would like 22 to move both of those declarations into evidence.

23 THE COURT: All right. Any objection by counsel 24 present or remote?

25 (No audible response)

1 THE COURT: Hearing none, we'll mark them D-1 and D-2 2 respectively.

3 (Debtors' Exhibits D-1 and D-2 admitted into evidence)

4 MR. PETRIE: Great. Thank you, Your Honor.

5 So as Your Honor is aware, the company entered 6 Chapter 11 without any committed bids for all of the company's 7 assets, though we had engaged in a robust pre-petition 8 marketing process. Under the bidding procedures that were 9 approved in February, we had 54 days to get to the bid 10 deadline.

11 Accordingly, through that time frame, we continued
12 our extensive efforts with multiple potential purchasers, 13 including strategic investors in the healthcare space and 14 certain special situations investors. The process included 15 substantial efforts by the company's advisor team and 16 management, including many rounds of telephonic meetings and 17 diligence calls. We believe we engaged with over 70 potential 18 buyers in total.

19 These efforts yielded several actionable offers by 20 the bid deadline. Ultimately, this led to a competitive 21 auction that began on April 17th and closed on April 24th, 22 which included participation and arms-length negotiation with 23 several potential purchasers over many rounds of bidding.

24 At the auction, and based on the bid documentation
25 and underlying consideration, the debtors ultimately determined

1 in consultation with the Committee that the sale transaction
2 proposed by LabCorp Genetics was the otherwise best offer 3 available for substantially all of the debtors' assets. After 4 naming LabCorp the successful bidder, the debtors and LabCorp 5 worked to finalize the terms of the transaction.

6 And, ultimately, on May 1st, 2024, the debtors and 7 LabCorp entered into an asset purchase agreement that included 8 many features, including a purchase price of 239 million in 9 cash in exchange for substantially all of the debtors' assets.
10 We filed a version of this APA on the docket on April 25th at 11 Docket Number 634.

12 The APA in this instance represents greater cash 13 consideration than any other bid received by the debtors but, 14 beyond that, the sale transaction creates value far in excess
15 of the headline purchase price of 239 million. The applicable 16 standard here is the business judgment rule, and entry into 17 this APA is certainly a sound exercise of that judgment. The 18 auction yielded best return for these assets and will bring 19 millions into the estates, with some additional features, as 20 well.

21 The LabCorp APA contemplates a going-concern
22 transaction that preserves the vast majority of employees' 23 jobs, a commitment by LabCorp to collect and remit collections 24 of any accounts receivable existing at the time of closing for 25 the benefit of the debtors' estates, and the assumption and

1 assignment to LabCorp of a significant number of the debtors'
2 executory contracts and unexpired leases, with certain truer
3 costs to be borne by LabCorp pursuant to the terms of the APA.

4 Your Honor, there does remain a lot of work to do to 5 close this transaction, including finalizing regulatory 6 approvals with government agencies, which we hope to accomplish 7 this summer. But getting the sale approved today is the first 8 major step in that process. Finalizing approval today will 9 allow us to take the steps necessary to consummate the sale and 10 for the estate to begin to collect the sale proceeds.

11 These proceeds will give the debtors sufficient 12 consideration to wind down the remaining estate assets pursuant 13 to a Chapter 11 plan and in accordance with the priority 14 outlined in the transaction support agreement. We do plan to 15 file a plan and disclosure statement this week that describes 16 how those sale proceeds will be allocated and demonstrate a 17 path out of Chapter 11 for this company.

18 The debtors did receive three formal objections at 19 the UCC's reservation of rights to entry of the sale order, as 20 well as several informal inquiries, including from the U.S.
21 Trustee. We worked collaboratively and constructively with all 22 of the objecting parties, the UCC, and the U.S. Trustee, as 23 well as with the purchaser and pre-petition secured lenders to 24 incorporate certain language into the proposed sale order, 25 which the debtors shared with chambers yesterday.

1 Accordingly, we understand that no party currently 2 objects to entry of the sale order and that we can move forward 3 with approval of this order on a consensual basis. One of the 4 objections by MassMutual has been withdrawn as of this morning.

5 The remaining substantive objections were solved
6 through mutually agreeable language. We also received eleven 7 formal cure objections and eight informal cure objections from 8 contract counterparties, all of which have been resolved or 9 nearing resolution.

10 And to the extent that we need, Your Honor, to weigh 11 in a cure dispute, all parties' rights are reserved with 12 regards to these cure disputes. And we would plan to have 13 those heard at a later hearing if necessary.

14 But with that, Your Honor, we do request entry of the 15 sale order. I understand that -- first, does Your Honor have 16 any questions thus far?

17 THE COURT: I just want to confirm, apart from the 18 cure objections that were filed, the objections with respect to 19 the insurance policies.

20 MR. PETRIE: Yes.

21 THE COURT: And --

22 MR. PETRIE: Natera was the other --

23 THE COURT: The other --

24 MR. PETRIE: Yes.

25 THE COURT: -- sale agreement, supply agreements have

1 been satisfied --

2 MR. PETRIE: They have, yeah.

3 THE COURT: -- consensually?

4 MR. PETRIE: Yes, they have.

5 THE COURT: There's -- we'll hear, Counsel?

6 MR. PETRIE: Well --

7 MR. KARCHER: Your Honor, this is Timothy Karcher.

8 Timothy Karcher of Proskauer Rose, on behalf of 9 Integrated DNA Technologies.

10 You mentioned supply agreements. We are objecting to 11 the assumption of the supply agreement. That agreement is 12 being heard at another date.

13 THE COURT: Oh, right. Okay. So, again, I lumped 14 that in with the cure objection amounts and the related issues.

15 MR. KARCHER: Understood.

16 THE COURT: All right. Thank you, Counsel.

17 So the other objections have either been resolved
18 with language that will be submitted?

19 MR. PETRIE: Yes. So that's in the APA that was 20 submitted -- in the sale order that was submitted to chambers, 21 there was additional language with regards to Natera about the 22 scope of their injunction and to Chubb about the treatment of 23 their insurance policies. Both of those have been resolved.

24 THE COURT: All right. Will we be awaiting a new 25 form of order or do we have --

1 MR. PETRIE: No, barring any changes today, the one 2 that we submitted last night is the one that still stands.

3 THE COURT: I've got to keep current here.

4 MR. PETRIE: Yes.

5 THE COURT: It's ever-changing.

6 All right. The Court is very pleased to see that it
7 was an effective and rigorous bidding process. This is not a 8 situation where the stalking horse bidder prevailed. That is 9 evident. I'm not going to make specific findings orally at the 10 moment apart from just noting that there's been sufficient 11 notice and proper notice with respect to the sale process 12 starting with the bidding procedures orders through today's 13 confirmation of the sale.

14 Certainly, the Court is going to defer to the 15 debtors' and consulting parties' business judgment in selecting 16 LabCorp as the prevailing bidder. The process was at arm's 17 length. Certainly, the consideration seems ample and 18 reasonable unless we satisfy the Abbotts Dairies requirements, 19 which I'm sure most -- the language in the proposed order will 20 satisfy all parties with respect to specific findings that are 21 necessary and conclusions of law.

22 And so the Court has no issue with approving the sale 23 as presented.

24 MR. PETRIE: Great. Thank you, Your Honor.

25 THE COURT: Thank you, Counsel.

1 MR. PETRIE: We were wondering if Karcher's counsel
2 wanted to say something.

3 Thank you, Your Honor. With that, we'll resubmit the 4 order to chambers just for good measure so you have the latest, 5 but it will be substantially the same.

6 THE COURT: All right. And, of course, the Court
7 recognizes that all parties with respect to the cure issues 8 preserve their rights for yet another day.

9 MR. PETRIE: Right.

10 On a related note, Mr. Karcher, who was just up here, 11 filed a declaration in support of his cure objection. There 12 was a motion to seal at Docket Number 406. That is currently 13 unopposed. If Your Honor would indulge us and have that 14 entered or we can have that carried to whatever hearing in the 15 future.

16 THE COURT: Well, is there any opposition?

17 Mr. Sponder?

18 MR. SPONDER: Thank you, Your Honor.

19 Jeff Sponder from the Office of the United States
20 Trustee.

21 Your Honor, we would appreciate if it gets adjourned 22 to the same date so we could have a further look at it.

23 THE COURT: Any issue, Mr. Karcher?

24 MR. KARCHER: There's no issue with adjourning it to 25 another date. However, if we could just share it with the

1 Office of the United States Trustee in advance of any adjourned
2 date, perhaps we could have it entered on consent.

3 THE COURT: At any point, if you resolve the issues
4 or concerns of the UST, the Court's more than happy to enter it 5 in advance of the next round of hearings.

6 MR. KARCHER: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: All right.

8 MR. SPONDER: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: Thank you. So, we'll mark that motion 10 carried. Do we have a date?

11 MR. PETRIE: We have, I think, May 20th. We have an 12 omnibus, don't we?

13 THE COURT: An omnibus date?

14 THE CLERK: Yes, 10 a.m.

15 THE COURT: All right. So, why don't we carry that 16 motion to that date, and we'll go from there.

17 MR. PETRIE: Great.

18 THE COURT: All right.

19 MR. KARCHER: Thank you, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: Thank you.

21 MR. PETRIE: Thank you, Your Honor.

22 So with that, that brings an end to the sale portion 23 of this agenda. Next is the Committee's motion, which I 24 understand is going forward on status. So I'll turn it over to 25 him.

1 THE COURT: Sure. Good morning, Counsel.

2 MR. SHORE: Good morning, Your Honor.

3 Chris Shore from White & Case on behalf of the 4 Official Committee. We submitted the motion. We're happy to 5 have a discussion regarding scheduling. The current deadline 6 is the 15th, so we can have a -- and I think we can probably 7 do it telephonically, if Your Honor -- or by video, if Your 8 Honor wants.

9 Any time between now and then, we just need a 10 decision before the 15th, because if Your Honor denies the 11 application, we'll push the button.

12 THE COURT: All right.

13 MR. SHORE: And if it's -- you know, if we're playing 14 preferences online, next Wednesday is bad for me, but 15 otherwise, I'm good.

16 THE COURT: Well, let me hear from debtors' counsel
17 or counsel for Deerfield.

18 MS. GREENBLATT: Good morning, Your Honor.

19 Nichole Greenblatt from Kirkland & Ellis on behalf of 20 the debtors. Nice to see you.

21 We have no objection to moving the hearing to next 22 week. We see no emergency requiring it to go forward today 23 with everything else that's on the agenda. So no opposition to 24 a Zoom scheduling hearing either. We do think it might make 25 sense to also schedule a status conference or a chambers

1 conference with Your Honor in connection with this which we 2 would propose doing off the record, but we're also happy to 3 just get back on a Zoom next week.

4 THE COURT: All right. And, Counsel, thank you --

5 MS. GREENBLATT: Thank you.

6 THE COURT: -- Ms. Greenblatt.

7 MR. BELLER: Good morning, Your Honor.

8 Ben Beller from Sullivan & Cromwell on behalf of 9 Deerfield.

10 We're also happy to accommodate the arrangement that 11 was just proposed as well as the chambers conference that 12 debtors' counsel has requested.

13 THE COURT: Great.

14 MR. BELLER: Thank you.

15 THE COURT: Let me, if I may, give you my thoughts
16 and try to work this out into a calendar and see if it can spur 17 any consensus.

18 At the outset, when we started this back in February 19 and we talked about time frames, we started with 60 and then 20 there was a request for 90 and there was a settlement for 90
21 days of opportunity for due diligence. In candor, the Court 22 was -- the Court found 90 days to be reasonable, but 23 appreciated the consensus of 75. The Court still views 90 as 24 reasonable and that 90 brings us to, I believe, May 30th.

25 Nothing -- I've read the papers and I'm still

1 inclined to think that the May 30th date is a reasonable date, 2 but I understand the debtor wishes to present argument and to 3 argue to keep it on the 15th and, of course, the Committee 4 preserved their right to try to argue for the 15th.

5 What I will do and trying to fit this into my 6 calendar is schedule the hearing for -- I still can't get my 7 computer up -- 5/13. And before anybody jumps, let me finish
8 off. Let me just make sure. I have to go to my phone.

9 So 5/13 is Monday. And I would permit opposition to 10 be filed by Saturday, 4 p.m., so that everybody can enjoy 11 Mother's Day the next day, on May 11th. There will be 12 opportunities to reply to any opposition at the hearing on May 13 13th.

14 In the event I deny the motion to extend, I will 15 extend the challenge date to 5/17 just as a courtesy because 16 we're cutting it close and then we'll go from there. But I've 17 given you my thoughts and if you can resolve it, great. If 18 not, 5 -- I'm sorry, 5/13 will be 10 a.m. It will be done 19 remotely. Anybody have any issues or concerns?

21 THE COURT: All right. Thank you. That was easy.

22 Now let's go to the last matter, which I don't think 23 is going to be as easy. I don't anticipate it.

24 MR. McKANE: Good morning, Your Honor.

25 Mark McKane, Kirkland & Ellis, proposed counsel for

1 the debtors. Just a very preliminary matter, I filed a pro hac
2 motion on Friday and I believe as of last night, it had not 3 been entered. If I could be heard today.

4 THE COURT: Welcome to Jersey.

5 MR. MCKANE: Thank you.

6 THE COURT: Don't worry about it.

7 MR. MCKANE: Thank you, Your Honor. I think we've 8 all agreed this is a non-evidentiary hearing. There's a -- in 9 in light of the fact that you might not be the only judge who 10 ultimately reviews this issue, I believe Mr. Goldfine had 11 worked with counsel for the Committee on a set of stipulated 12 facts that were filed yesterday, as well as a couple of 13 declarations. I'll leave the podium to him just for a few 14 minutes and make certain we have a, you know, a sufficient 15 evidentiary basis for the arguments that are about to proceed.

16 THE COURT: I appreciate that. Thank you.

17 MR. GOLDFINE: Good morning, Your Honor.

18 Jeff Goldfine from Kirkland & Ellis.

19 Hopefully some non-controversial housekeeping. As 20 Mr. McKane just said, we worked with the Committee to put in a 21 set of stipulated facts and a couple of exhibits thereto that 22 was filed at Docket Number 454. The parties also agreed that 23 the Winters declaration and exhibits and schedules thereto
24 filed at Docket Number 158, I believe it's starting on Page 36, 25 could come in, as well as the Chase declaration and exhibits

1 thereto that is at Docket Number 285, and then 285-9 is when 2 the exhibits end.

3 Your Honor can, of course, take judicial notice of 4 his own docket. There's just a few docket numbers that I want 5 to call out that might get touched on in the presentation.
6 That would be Docket Number 47, which is the interim cash
7 collateral order, the bidding procedures order at Docket Number 8 57, the final cash collateral order at Docket Number 188, and 9 the sale notice at Docket Number 364.

10 THE COURT: All right, thank you.

11 So, for purposes let me first start with either the 12 U.S. Trustee or the Committee. Any objections?

13 MR. SHORE: No objection.

14 Again, Chris Shore from White & Case. The only point 15 is that it is coming into this hearing only as evidence, and we 16 deserve with respect to other hearings.

17 THE COURT: Fair enough.

18 MR. SPONDER: Jeff Sponder from the Office of the, 19 U.S. Trustee. Same, Your Honor. Thank you.

20 THE COURT: All right. Then, let's mark these as J 21 for joint. J-1 will be the stipulated undisputed facts at 22 Docket Number 454. And we'll have the Winters declaration as 23 J-2, the Chase Declaration with the tenant Exhibits as J-3.

24 (Joint Exhibits J-1 through J-3 admitted into evidence)

25 THE COURT: All right. Mr. McKane?

1 MR. McKANE: Very good, Your Honor. Sometimes what 2 we want to do, Your Honor, we have a deck to help guide the 3 discussion. Some might argue that that's my talking points, 4 but I couldn't help myself.

5 May I approach?

6 THE COURT: Yes, please.

7 MR. McKANE: Your Honor, again, for the record, Mark
8 McKane, Kirkland & Ellis, proposed counsel for the debtors.

9 We're here on our motion, the debtors' motion to 10 retain Kirkland & Ellis. If I could start --

11 THE COURT: Okay, good.

12 (Pause)

13 MR. McKANE: Your Honor, I know you can see it. And 14 I just think -- you know, for folks who are participating 15 remotely -- oh, here we go.

16 Your Honor, I don't need the clicker. My finger 17 hopefully will work. Let's just start on, Your Honor should 18 approve Kirkland's retention. It unquestionably satisfies
19 Section 327. We'd start with just some framework issues.

20 A client's selection of counsel is given significant 21 deference around the country, which is why motions to 22 disqualify are disfavored and disqualification is a drastic
23 measure. Those aren't my quotes. That's from the In re Twong 24 (phonetic) decision here in New Jersey.

25 Invitae, a public company with an independent board,

1 selected Kirkland after interviewing with others, Kirkland 2 affirmed with whom it had no prior relationship as its 3 restructuring counsel. No one, none of the objectors disputes 4 Kirkland qualifications or the fact that we somehow hold an 5 adverse interest, that we're a creditor.

6 What we have is Kirkland's alleged de minimis,
7 unrelated fund work that we've done for Deerfield, a client
8 that we have a relatively small relationship with. That does 9 not pose a conflict of interest. Deerfield, a sophisticated 10 firm that focuses on healthcare gave Kirkland a broad and fully 11 enforceable advance waiver. We have consistently represented 12 debtors in the last few years adverse to Deerfield in 13 restructuring situations.

14 The second area, the real focus of where they're 15 going, Your Honor, is Kirkland's investigation of the 2023
16 Exchange. That also does not create a conflict of interest.
17 While they raise concerns about who we represented in their 18 objections, in the stipulated facts, the objectors now concede 19 that Kirkland only represented the company, not the board, not 20 the special Committee, not Ms. Frizzley separately, right?
21 Those issues really, I think, are tabled. So ultimately, where 22 are we? Are we disinterested? We don't have a conflict. Are 23 we disinterested?

24 Our interest and, you know, one of our core practices
25 is 100 percent aligned with the debtors. We zealously

1 represent clients because that's what we do. And our handling 2 of this case confirms that we've zealously represented these 3 debtors in these cases. So we think the Committee should see 4 -- sorry, you should see the Committee's objection really for 5 what it is. It's a preview of events to come potentially with 6 a standing motion, right?

7 Our retention should not be held hostage in this way.
8 If I was just arguing to you, Your Honor, as opposed to 9 potentially other courts as well down the road, I'd stop right 10 here. You know this law. You know this record. We'd be done.
11 But for the fuller record, let's just level set what the legal 12 framework is.

13 Section 327(a) says that with the Court's approval, a 14 debtor may employ one or more attorneys that does not hold an 15 interest or represent an interest adverse to the estate and 16 that are disinterested. Section 327 goes further and makes 17 clear that you are not disqualified from employment under this 18 section by the representation of a creditor.

19 Concurrent representations are recognized under 327
20 unless there's an objection by a creditor or the U.S. Trustee 21 in which case the Court shall disapprove if there is an actual 22 conflict of interest. That's where we are here, Your Honor.
23 Those are the issues.

24 We all know the Third Circuit's retention framework.
25 It's two-fold, right? You must be disinterested as that is

1 defined in 101-14, typically here in this context. I think no
2 one suggests that 101-14(a) or (b) is applicable. We fall down 3 to (c), that we don't have an interest materially adverse to 4 the interest of the estate or any of the classes of creditors
5 or equity holders. That's the focus of disinterestedness under 6 14(c) and that we don't have an interest adverse to the estate.

7 I know sometimes the lines blur on this, and the 8 Third Circuit recognizes the lines that blur on this, but there 9 are two different standards that need to be addressed. I would 10 importantly note that the key here is that those standards are 11 evaluated presently.

12 Right here, are we disinterested and do we hold an 13 adverse interest at the time that the Court considers the 14 retention applications? The Boy Scouts case in the Third 15 Circuit reaffirmed that position as recently as two years ago.

16 What we have is the classic kind of flow of conflicts
17 that the Marvel court in the Third Circuit reaffirmed about 18 when and under what circumstances would a disqualification be 19 appropriate. And Marvel made absolutely clear that in this 20 circuit, appearance of conflict cannot justify 21 disqualification. That in a circumstance of a potential 22 conflict, the Court has discretion to approve retention if 23 their potential. And the question there is if there's 24 potential or whether we are remote or compelling interest to do 25 so.

1 And then finally, if there is, we all acknowledge an 2 actual conflict, it is per se disqualified. There are multiple 3 courts that have said that. None of what I'm telling you is 4 new or novel. And ultimately, because of the review of 5 conflicts waivers here, we also look at the Model Rules. We 6 look at the Rules of Professional Conduct. And the key ones
7 that Your Honor is going to have to consider are Model Rule 8 1.7(a) and 1.7(b). And then obviously, the definition of 9 informed consent in Model Rule 1. And let me just be clear.

10 In 1.7(a), a lawyer shall not represent a client if 11 the representation involves a concurrent conflict of interest.
12 We all know that rule. We all live by that rule every day.
13 The key is 1(b), Notwithstanding the existence of a concurrent 14 conflict of interest under (a), a lawyer may represent a client 15 if, among other things, the client gives informed consent.

16 And ultimately, this entire discussion today is going 17 to really fall down in large part to, you know, are we 18 disinterested and do we have a conflict of interest? And then 19 1.1(e) gives the definition of informed consent.

20 So, where are we with the objections? The Committee 21 filed an objection. The United States Trustee filed an 22 objection. The Committee focuses on two areas. One, they 23 allege Paragraph 3, Kirkland has insisted that it be able to 24 stand on all sides of the transaction and represent everyone
25 involved in connection with its investigation of the '23

1 Exchange. And as a result of that, they say Kirkland has an 2 actual disqualifying conflict of interest with respect to 3 Deerfield. Those are our two issues. That's what they're 4 drilling in on.

5 They say deny it, but what they really want to, is 6 they don't really want you to deny our retention. They just 7 want you to bar Kirkland from doing anything as it relates to 8 Deerfield in these cases, including with regards to an 9 evaluation of claims against Deerfield. That's their request 10 for relief in Paragraph 4.

11 The United States Trustee's Office takes a little 12 more targeted view. They say they view the concurrent 13 representation of Kirkland and Deerfield and which they admit, 14 albeit in unrelated matters, constitutes a conflict of 15 interest. They basically say, we failed the Project Orange 16 test and therefore we should be denied. We're going to address 17 those objections in detail today.

18 But let's level set in terms of what they don't 19 contest. The Committee and U.S. Trustee's Office do not 20 contest that we're qualified to be counsel for the debtors.
21 They don't contest that we are suggesting in any way we hold an 22 interest or that we didn't adequately disclose our interest in 23 our connections.

24 So what remains is ultimately two questions. Do we 25 have an actual or potential conflict of interest and are we

1 disinterested? The second one's a little easier. Let's take 2 it first. Is Kirkland disinterested?

3 Your Honor, let's step back. Disinterestedness in 4 this context, when evaluated relative to conflict of interest, 5 is largely focused on economics. Do we hold some type of 6 economic interest such that we would not take all of the steps 7 necessary to do everything appropriate to represent our 8 clients?

9 And I stop and say to you, that's nonsense.
10 Restructuring, representing debtors, this is what we do for a 11 living. This is one of our core practices. We're one of the 12 top restructuring firms in the country. Just ask us. And you 13 know our records, right? Representing 29 debtors of over a 14 billion dollars in liabilities over the past three years. It's 15 what we do.

16 I bring that up only because it's not just about our 17 qualifications. It's doing great work for debtors is how we 18 get additional work. We don't want Chapter 22s and 23s. If we 19 do great results for this debtor, that's the last time we're 20 ever going to see this client. Our business on the debtor side 21 is doing great work for debtors. So our interests are 100 22 percent aligned.

23 Then what is the alleged competing interest that they 24 focus on in Deerfield? We're going to talk about Art Van a 25 little bit more later in this case. Art Van is a decision from

1 Chief Judge Sontchi as it relates to potential conflicts in 2 Delaware. And the reason why I bring it up here is level 3 setting what is de minimis. And here, Judge Sontchi, in 4 overruling objection to retention, focused in on the amount of 5 revenue saying here it amounted to no more than one-tenth of 6 one percent of the annual firm revenues. That was Judge 7 Sontchi and Art Van.

8 Level setting interests, Kirkland's representation of 9 Deerfield in unrelated matters largely focused on fund 10 formation work cannot be disqualifying from an economic 11 interest standpoint, right? The work we've done for them is 12 2.4 million in total for the entire life that we've ever done 13 work for them.

14 In '23, it was $1.885 million, right? That's 0.03
15 percent of our annual revenue. In '24, the year to date, 16 Kirkland has invoiced Deerfield for $36,000 in total across all 17 matters. In evaluating our economic interests and whether we 18 are disinterested, if the focus is on Deerfield, the answer is 19 no.

20 Now, let's get into this alleged conflict. And to do 21 that, we have to step back a little bit. Talk about who is 22 Invitae? Who is our client? Invitae is a medical genetics 23 company that delivers genetic testing services and digital 24 health and health data services. They've been doing it since 25 2010. They went public through an IPO in 2015.

1 We've known that since the first day declaration.
2 But for these purposes, who is Invitae? Invitae is a 3 sophisticated party. It's a public company with its own 4 in-house counsel that routinely retains law firms and engages 5 in evaluation and engagement letters and waivers, right?
6 Invitae interviewed multiple law firms in addition to Kirkland
7 for this engagement. We had no prior relationship with them.
8 And as you've seen in the papers, and I'll just say it again
9 here, we had no involvement with the '23 Exchange.

10 When Kirkland pitched Invitae, we, Ms. Greenblatt, 11 specifically informed Invitae management that we had been and 12 that we could be adverse to Deerfield. Why did that matter?
13 Because they had already been a secured creditor. They would 14 be a player in these cases. And they are a player in 15 healthcare lending. So the fact that we could be adverse to 16 them was a factor that Invitae wanted to know about from the 17 get-go. That was explained on the front end.

18 And what did Invitae do at the front end? It waived 19 all conflicts, right? At the time of the engagement, we 20 informed Invitae that we represent numerous parties with whom 21 Invitae had a relationship in matters unrelated to Invitae. We 22 told them there's a possibility of a divergence of interest.
23 And importantly, Your Honor, we told Invitae that we provide 24 them with a disclosure schedule describing all of our 25 relationship with interested parties in connection with a

1 future retention application if this became an in-court 2 proceeding.

3 So upon signing that agreement, Invitae waived all 4 conflicts. That's Exhibit B to the stipulated facts. It's the 5 Invitae engagement letter. Let's go through it in detail.

6 First, in the section that is bold and underlying, 7 "Conflicts of Interest," we and Invitae agree that it is -- as 8 is customary for a law firm of the firm's size, there are 9 numerous business entities with which Kirkland currently has 10 relationships that the firm has represented or currently 11 represents in matters unrelated to Invitae. We went further, 12 right, because it's -- and we told them, it's our interests may 13 diverge so its interest, the client's interest, may diverge 14 from those of the firm's other clients.

15 And so the possibility exists that one of the firm's 16 current or future clients may take positions adverse to the 17 client and adverse to Invitae, including in litigation, right?
18 And we went further. And in a matter in such which -- sorry, 19 in a matter in which such other client may have retained the 20 firm or one of the firm's adversaries, we may be adverse to the 21 client. So we flagged it from the beginning. We have 22 concurrent representations. We have concurrent relationships, 23 right?

24 We then went further in the next paragraph.

25 "In the event, a present conflict of interest exists

1 between the client Invitae and the firm's other 2 clients, or in the event one arises in the future, 3 client Invitae agrees to waive any such conflict of 4 interest or other objection that would preclude the 5 firm's representation of another client in another 6 current or future matter unsubstantiated to the 7 engagement or other than during a restructuring case 8 in other matters related to the client that is 9 defined as the allowed adverse representation."

10 We were not subtle about this. We went further, Your 11 Honor, and said, to be clear, right? We gave examples.

12 By way of example, such allowed adverse 13 representation may take the form of litigation, transactional
14 work, counseling, and here, restructuring. And what do we mean 15 by restructuring? We're not shy. That includes bankruptcy, 16 insolvency, financial distress, recapitalization, equity and 17 debt workouts, and other transactions or adversarial 18 adjudicated proceedings related to any of the foregoing.

19 All of this is agreed between Invitae and Kirkland on 20 the front end. As it relates to an in-court proceeding, we 21 went further. This is what we said with regard to 22 restructuring cases.

23 "If it becomes necessary for Invitae to commence a 24 restructuring case under Chapter 11, the firm will 25 take steps necessary to prepare disclosure materials

1 required in connection to the firm's retention as 2 lead restructuring counsel. If necessary, the firm
3 will prepare a preliminary draft of the schedule 4 describing the firm's relationship with certain 5 interested parties, defined as the disclosure
6 schedule, and the firm will give the client a draft 7 of the disclosure schedule once it's available."

8 That's the engagement pre-petition. That's the 9 waiver pre-petition, and Kirkland 100 percent followed through 10 on that agreement.

11 What Slide 25 is, is extracts from the Winters 12 declaration specifically going through the schedule of all of 13 our connections and in Paragraphs 37 and 38 highlighting the 14 Deerfield relationship.

15 So in Winters 37, sorry, Winters paragraph -- Winters 16 declaration Paragraph 37, we highlighted that as disclosed in 17 Schedule 2, "Kirkland currently represents and in the past has 18 represented Deerfield Management Company and its various 19 subsidiaries and affiliates, as well as SoftBank."

20 We'll talk about SoftBank in a minute. We go 21 further. "Deerfield is the holder of approximately 78 percent 22 of the Debtor and Vitae's 2028 senior secured notes and is 23 represented by Sullivan & Cromwell."

24 We then go further, right? "Kirkland's current and 25 prior representations of Deerfield is in matters unrelated to

1 the debtors of these Chapter 11 cases. Kirkland has not 2 represented and will not represent Deerfield in connection with 3 any matters in these cases during the pendency of these Chapter 4 11 cases."

5 So we did exactly what we said we were going to do
6 with the bring down of all of our connections as we're required
7 to do under Rule 2014. And we specifically highlighted 8 Deerfield.

9 What this argument really boils down to is somehow 10 our connection with Deerfield, the Committee suggests, is 11 sufficiently strong or persuasive that we would somehow bias 12 our work in favor of Deerfield, right? That's their 13 suggestion. If you look at this disclosure, when we're talking 14 about current representations, they're all focused on Deerfield 15 because Deerfield is a senior secured creditor. But we flag 16 Deerfield and SoftBank.

17 SoftBank's an unsecured creditor. We have a 18 concurrent representation of SoftBank, as well. Are we 19 steering our investigations, steering our work skewed towards 20 the unsecured creditors because we represent SoftBank? How is 21 SoftBank differentiated from Deerfield if that's the analysis
22 that they're putting forward? Now, that's the Invitae story.

23 Let's just level set again about who Deerfield is,
24 right? Deerfield, as I mentioned before, healthcare investment 25 firm, unquestionably a sophisticated party with its own

1 counsel, routinely retains law firm, engages in negotiations of 2 engagement letters and waivers. It is not uncommon for 3 Deerfield to be a creditor in the healthcare sector. In fact, 4 I take out the double negative. It's common for Deerfield to 5 be a player in these cases.

6 Deerfield in healthcare is equivalent to Wells Fargo
7 in retail as ABL lending, right? Our relationship, however, 8 with Deerfield, Kirkland's relationship is de minimis. Let's 9 dig into that a little more.

10 The scope of the representation, as I mentioned 11 before, funds formation work. The amount in total that's been 12 billed out, I get a little more granular here, it's $2.37 13 million in total for all matters since the engagement began in 14 '21, right? And that includes the $1.88 million in '23 and the 15 $36,000 invoiced to date.

16 I want to be absolutely clear about this perception
17 of overlap. We do no restructuring work for Deerfield.
18 Kirkland has not performed any work for them. No restructuring 19 partners have worked on these cases, have ever billed time for 20 any Deerfield matters. And to the extent that there's some 21 question about overlap, about billers, no litigation or 22 restructuring attorneys have worked with Deerfield. There is 23 no overlap there.

24 There have been three Kirkland attorneys in support 25 practices. One is tax, another I believe is international

1 trade, that have done work, you know, in their specialty for 2 Invitae and Deerfield. The overlap is extremely minimal, 3.9
3 hours billed collectively across those three attorneys. That's 4 the Deerfield relationship that they think we're going to skew 5 our interest for.

6 And I want to be absolutely clear about this. We 7 have a binding, fully infallible, unequivocal advance waiver 8 from Deerfield. Some of this is going to look similar because 9 it's a similar letter, but here we go. In the "Conflicts of 10 Interest" section, we flag at the start, "Kirkland is a general 11 service law firm that you recognize will continue to represent 12 numerous clients, including without limitation, your 13 affiliates, debtors, creditors, and direct competitors."

14 From day one, that's what Deerfield recognized. And 15 we went further. "Given this, without a binding conflicts 16 waiver, conflicts of interest may arise that could deprive you 17 or other clients of the right to select Kirkland as their 18 counsel without a binding conflicts waiver."

19 But that's what we have. We go further.

20 "Deerfield agrees that Kirkland may now and in the 21 future represent other entities or persons adverse to you or 22 any of your affiliates on all matters, whether or not such 23 matters are substantially related to the legal services we 24 provide or other legal services that we've rendered over time 25 or may render you in the future an allowed adverse

1 representation."

2 Not a carve-out like we're going to see in some other 3 cases, a full blanket waiver. But we go further, just like you
4 saw within detail. By way of an example, what is an allowed 5 adverse representation? We say that might take the form of, 6 among other contexts, litigation and restructuring. And it's 7 that same language, broad restructuring, including bankruptcy,
8 insolvency, financial distress, recapitalization -- and I go 9 further -- "and other transactions or adversarial adjudicated 10 proceedings related to any of the foregoing and similar 11 matters."

12 But we go further in the Deerfield letter. And I 13 want to highlight this for you. In '21, as you know, as 14 Deerfield, as you know, Deerfield, we often are retained by 15 issuers to represent them in financial and/or organizational 16 restructurings. Our representation of you Deerfield in 17 connection with this matter and any future matter will be with 18 the understanding that such representation will not preclude 19 Kirkland from continuing any present or assuming any future 20 representation in other matters that another client may 21 request, including a matter in where, one, Deerfield management 22 company or its affiliates, its personnel and another client are 23 on the opposite sides of the same transaction or litigation.

24 That's in the Restructuring section where we're 25 saying we have a debtors' practice, where we will do this work

1 for you, but you acknowledge that doing that work, we're not 2 prohibited from doing restructuring work in the future. And 3 it's not just negotiating. It's in any transaction or 4 litigation.

5 And Your Honor, this isn't just a piece of paper.
6 This is the basis on which we had been retained in other 7 debtors cases in which Deerfield is a creditor. This is the 8 third time Kirkland has been retained by a debtor and has been 9 retained by a debtor in a potential bankruptcy proceeding where 10 Deerfield was a creditor.

11 The other two times in Delaware in last year and this 12 year. The first one was Lynette. The second one In re Cintra.
13 We're going to come back to Cintra in the past. But when you 14 wonder why Ms. Greenblatt was so confident she could be adverse 15 to Deerfield when she was making that pitch, it's because she 16 already was adverse to Deerfield. That's Ms. Greenblatt in 17 Lynette and Ms. Greenblatt in Cintra. In both of those cases, 18 Kirkland was approved as counsel for those debtors.

19 And Your Honor, we're adverse to Deerfield here.
20 We've zealously represented the debtors pre- and post-petition
21 on issues adverse to Deerfield. Negotiating against Deerfield 22 on multiple supplements of the company's indenture. In 23 actively investigating claims and causes of action arising out 24 and relating to the '23 Exchange. In negotiating the 25 transition support agreement which contemplated the sale. And

1 the transition support agreement is not just the sale.

2 Deerfield agreed to subordinate its claims to two classes of 3 unsecured creditors. No question there's adversity there.

4 We negotiated the debtors' use of cash collateral in 5 these cases. And we negotiated a competitive auction process
6 in which Deerfield put forward a credit bid and didn't win.
7 The auction process led to a third party being successful.

8 So why are we here? Why all this focus? It comes 9 back to this '23 Exchange, when Deerfield became that 10 78- percent holder of the new senior secured notes. They are, 11 we acknowledge, the largest secured creditor. We didn't do 12 that deal. Latham Watkins did that deal for Invitae. And 13 Sullivan & Cromwell represented Deerfield. We had no 14 involvement. So when we came to that issue, we could 15 investigate it.

16 Now, let's level set. We filed our 2014 -- we filed 17 a retention application. We did everything we were supposed to 18 do under 2014. We provided and disclosed all of our 19 connections, right? We've demonstrated the de minimis 20 relationship with Deerfield. And we've shown that Invitae and 21 Deerfield are sophisticated players, right? There's no 22 question.

23 At that point, the burden has shifted. The burden 24 shifts to the objectors, the Committee and the UST, to prove 25 that somehow we cannot be retained. And they've failed in that

1 burden. And as part of all of it -- I have to step back.
2 There's no question that we don't represent Deerfield here.
3 Sullivan & Cromwell has been Deerfield's counsel throughout 4 this engagement, pre-petition and even today. And we have been 5 at odds with S&C.

6 Turning to the objections, I framed them before. I
7 put it back up for this point only. When the Committee
8 started, Committees had two factual bases of their allegations.
9 They say, we're trying to stand on all sides of the transaction 10 and, quote, represent everyone involved in connection with this 11 investigation of the '23 Exchange. That's what they said in 12 their objection. And Your Honor, that's not true.

13 As they said in their objection, we represent the 14 debtors, Ms. Frizzley, the Special Committee, the full board
15 and Deerfield. Based on the stipulated facts that are in front 16 of Your Honor, what do we have? We represent the debtor, and 17 we represent Deerfield in unrelated matters. They have walked 18 back the suggestion that we represent Ms. Frizzley, the Special 19 Committee, or the full board. They've stipulated that we 20 don't.

21 Now, with regards to the investigation, we know this 22 is an issue to come, but Kirkland's handling of the 23 investigation is not a conflict of interest and cannot create a 24 conflict of interest for the disqualification here. What did 25 we do? In our capacity as counsel for the debtors, Kirkland

1 provided advice to the board of directors or the special 2 Committee or Ms. Frizzley as appropriate in their capacity as 3 the governing bodies of the debtors, right?

4 Ms. Frizzley was originally appointed as an advisor,
5 and then she was brought onto the board in December to increase 6 the knowledge of the board regarding corporate issues, 7 including restructurings. Ms. Frizzley wasn't on the board or 8 affiliated in any way with Invitae at the time of the '23
9 Exchange and had no involvement in those transactions. So 10 Kirkland worked with the Special Committee, particularly 11 Ms. Frizzley to conduct an independent review of the '23
12 Exchange. She wasn't involved, we weren't involved, right?

13 And we determined whether there were causes of 14 actions related to those transactions. That's what we're going 15 to talk about with the challenge period down the road. And 16 when we were done, we presented our findings on the viability 17 of potential claims and causes of actions to Ms. Frizzley in 18 the first instance, and then ultimately to the full board, 19 including those members who are on the Special Committee.
20 That's what we did.

21 Now, if we step back and we say, all right, that's an 22 attack maybe on the Committee, on our work, that's not for 23 today. When we get back to the issues of the day, Art Van, 24 we're still on, you know, on fours with Art Van. We're better 25 than that, but it is the case that that is -- most easily

1 aligns with us.

2 In Judge Sontchi's decision in Art Van from 2020,
3 there was a question about whether there was unquestionably a 4 concurrent representation. The Benesch firm wanted to 5 represent the debtors, did work for the debtors. At the same
6 time, they acknowledged they had a relationship with Wells 7 Fargo. And the question was, is that work for Wells Fargo that 8 is admittedly unrelated sufficient to somehow disqualify 9 Benesch?

10 The United States Trustee tried to take the position
11 that it did. Judge Sontchi said absolutely not. Benesch -- 12 from the decision, "Benesch did not represent Wells in these 13 cases or in any related transaction. Wells Fargo had a de 14 minimis component of the aggregate revenue of the firm. There 15 was one-tenth of one percent and there was no evidence to the 16 record that Benesch lacked zealousness in its representation of 17 the debtors."

18 So how do we match up? What are we looking at?
19 Unrelated matters, de minimis fees, waiver, and zealous
20 representation. On those four factors, unrelated matters, Art 21 Van has that. That's what we have here. There's no question 22 we're not doing any work for Deerfield here. On de minimis 23 fees in Art Van, approximately one-tenth. Here, 24 unquestionably, de minimis fees, three one-hundredths of a 25 percent.

1 On a waiver, Art Van had a waiver. And actually, 2 let's look at it because the Art Van waiver, not that great.
3 Most of that decision's about does the waiver cover the actions 4 that were done? That was the question, the scope of the 5 waiver. Because there's a carve-out in the Wells Fargo that 6 Wells Fargo and Benesch negotiated, right? So that was the 7 issue that took up the majority of the analysis in Art Van.

8 By comparison, ours, no carve-out. We could be 9 adverse to Deerfield in any transaction, in any litigation, 10 specifically as it relates to restructural litigation. But we 11 both have waivers that were sufficient for engagement. And as 12 to zealous representation, the court found that the Benesch 13 firm had that.

14 I don't think you can look at this record and find 15 anything that suggests other than a zealous representation of 16 our clients. That's what we do, and that's what we've done 17 here. And that's why we ask you to take judicial notice of the 18 orders and the actions we've taken to do today.

19 Where we think White & Case wants to go here is to 20 argue somehow that there's a concurrent representation that's 21 so overwhelming and that it swamps the day. But concurrent 22 representations does not equal a conflict of interest. And if 23 they want to go there, let's be absolutely clear. Our waivers 24 are fully enforceable, right? The Invitae waiver, those 25 experts that think about ethics and evaluate these issues

1 basically say giving effect to a client's consent to a 2 conflicting representation can rest either on the grounds of 3 contract freedom or the related ground of personal autonomy of 4 a client to choose whatever champion the client wants.

5 Let's step back on those issues. Selection priority
6 by counsel and contract freedom, right? Invitae is a 7 sophisticated party with its own counsel that routinely 8 represents -- engages firms and negotiates those waivers. They 9 knowingly, eyes wide open, chose Kirkland after interviewing 10 other firms and they agreed to waive the conflicts. That is 11 informed consent.

12 On the bandwidth of clients for whom the Model Rules 13 apply from individuals without experience to public company 14 boards, right? Invitae is on the far end of the spectrum of 15 sophisticated clients. So too is Deerfield. No question 16 Deerfield is a sophisticated party that chooses counsel as 17 appropriate, Sullivan & Cromwell, Kirkland & Ellis. They 18 choose who they want to for their needs.

19 They eyes wide open agreed to waive conflicts and 20 matters adverse to Deerfield, including in bankruptcy. There's 21 no question Deerfield is aware of the Kirkland debtor practice 22 in 2021 when they sign on. That waiver was effective, has been 23 relied on in other bankruptcies, and should be relied on today.
24 That waiver is valid and enforceable.

25 So what do we have left? We have some case law that

1 the debtors, that the objectors rely on. First, their main 2 case, Project Orange. Your Honor, both of these cases are 3 inapposite. But Project Orange in particular, let's level set 4 what happened in Project Orange.

5 DLA was the proposed debtor's counsel in Project
6 Orange. It was a power plant. It had nothing to do -- you
7 know, up in Syracuse. GE, manufacturer of the turbines at the 8 power plant, was a one-percent client of DLA and an essential 9 supplier of the debtors. There was an issue with the 10 generators. Without the generators, you can't run the power 11 plant. It was also in active litigation against the debtors.

12 What's the issue? DLA had at best an incomplete 13 conflicts waiver, which barred DLA. GE did not allow DLA from 14 both bringing suits and threatening to bring suits against GE 15 or its affiliates for monetary damages or relief. That's from 16 the decision.

17 As a result, Judge Glenn concluded DLA could not 18 negotiate with full efficacy without at least being able to 19 hint at the possibility of litigation. So, their proposed 20 debtor concedes an active conflict exists. There was a limit, 21 a material limit on the ability of the debtors to do some of 22 its core work. That was not sufficient.

23 That is the exact opposite of what we have here, Your 24 Honor. We have a signed, full, advanced waiver from Deerfield 25 permitting adversity in litigation, including not just

1 threatening litigation, bringing litigation against us. We are 2 not Project Orange.

3 The second case, Leslie Fay. In Leslie Fay, Weil was 4 proposed debtor's counsel. If you step back -- let me just 5 stop for one second. Leslie Fay is a disclosure case. It is 6 very much about Weil's failure to make the proper disclosures
7 under Rule 2014. But what they didn't disclose was what was so 8 infuriating to Judge Brozman.

9 Weil represented the audit committee members in 10 pre-bankruptcy litigation arising out of the fraudulent 11 accounting practices of the company. It didn't just represent 12 the company. It filed appearances in multiple class actions on 13 behalf of those board members. Weil didn't disclose those 14 representations or the fact that two of the audit Committee
15 members had connections to material clients of Weil, Bear 16 Stearns and Odyssey Partners, who the court found were large 17 and valuable clients of Weil.

18 And Weil didn't disclose in what it later admitted in 19 a deposition that it would not have sued the auditor in those 20 cases, that was BDO Seidman, even if the facts warranted it, 21 right? And so ultimately, there was a sanction. Weil was 22 allowed to finish that case, but there was a sanction for 23 failing to disclose material adversities in the connections to 24 the board.

25 Here, no one's disputing our disclosures. We

1 properly disclosed all of our connections, including with 2 Deerfield. And unlike refusing to go against BDO Seidman, we 3 actively investigated those claims. What the Committee doesn't 4 like is the conclusion we reached. That's a fight for another 5 day. But there's no question that we have the ability and that 6 we did the investigation. So those are the cases.

7 In the back half of the argument, in the objection, 8 we get into a little bit of soft string. 327 can't be waived.
9 So therefore, even if you waive conflicts, you can't waive 327, 10 and therefore you're out. Not certain that holds. This is 11 actually fundamental to understanding both the law and,
12 frankly, modern better practice. Conflict waivers are a key 13 reason why concurrent representations are the norm, right?

14 We agree 327 can't be waived, but conflicts can be.
15 And so how do you reconcile those two? Courts regularly 16 analyze waivers in analyzing Section 327. The issue is simply, 17 did the waiver eliminate the asserted conflict of interest? If 18 you look at the two cases in Art Van, it did. In Project 19 Orange, it didn't. Here we have, as we've established, broad 20 enforceable waivers provided by sophisticated parties.

21 Next step in the analysis. Even if the waiver 22 eliminates the conflict of interest, we still have to prove 23 that we're disinterested. That goes back to the two-part 24 analysis that is established in this circuit. We have no 25 conflicts of interest and that we're disinterested. And the 1 case is all recognized.

2 A creditor can be sufficiently large that a proposed 3 debtor could be economically motivated to skew its thinking in 4 favor of the creditor, right? And there's some examples of 5 that. The American Printers Lithographers case out of Chicago, 6 where the proposed waiver was not sufficient because the 7 secured creditor amounted to 10 percent of the law firm's 8 annual revenue.

9 Or the Amdura case from Colorado, where the proposed 10 debtors counsel testified that other counsel would have to 11 investigate the creditor and potentially bring a suit because 12 that firm won't bite the hand that feeds it. Those are 13 situations where you have a question of disinterestedness. You 14 don't have it with Deerfield and three one-hundredths of 15 Kirkland's revenue.

16 And, finally, Your Honor, like, let's just 17 acknowledge this, right? The Committee has other recourse. If 18 you have issues with regards to our investigation, you don't 19 hold the debtors' retention application hostage. You bring a 20 standing motion, right?

21 Nothing about -- if Your Honor approves the retention
22 application, as Mr. Shore acknowledged, right, all the evidence 23 we put in for today, it's just for today. It doesn't preclude 24 -- it, doesn't put a thumb on the scale with regards to 25 standing or anything else. We'll have those fights another day

1 if we need to, right?

2 That's the recourse to the extent that the Committee
3 thinks that there's a viable claim that we disagree with them
4 on, right? Approval of our retention application has no impact
5 on that get-to-be-filed motion for standing. The Court 6 shouldn't sanction the effort to hold the retention hostage in 7 this way. And what we mean by that is ultimately, Your Honor, 8 this is tactical. I don't mean it lightly, I don't mean it
9 pejoratively, but it is tactical. And that's one of the things 10 the courts look at. Is this motion potentially for tactical 11 purposes?

12 Why do we bring that up? We bring it up because, 13 Your Honor, concurrent representations are the norm. Not just 14 in Kirkland debtor practice, in White & Case's debtor practice, 15 right? If you look at situations recently where White & Case 16 concurrently represented the debtors and secured creditors, 17 they exist. We're large law firms that have lots of clients, 18 right? In Alpha Latam Management, White & Case represented the 19 debtors, secured creditors, including Morgan Stanley and 20 (indiscernible).

21 In Boy Scouts, right, they represented the debtors.
22 Secured creditors, JPM Chase, CIT, Wells Fargo. In PWM, right, 23 they represented Wells Fargo, JPM, Apollo, and Naveen, all 24 secured creditors. And in Hertz, they represented the debtors, 25 and one of the secured creditors, Deutsche Bank, which was a

1 one-percent client of the firm, right?

2 Concurrent representations are the norm. Do you have 3 sufficient conflict waivers? Do you commit that you're not 4 going to represent them in a related matter? We have. That's 5 what White & Case did in those cases, and that's why we all 6 have to recognize that concurrent representations are 7 appropriate.

8 And ultimately, Your Honor, let's just put it out
9 there. Disqualifying Kirkland doesn't help these cases. It 10 hurts these cases. It hurts the estate. It hurts the 11 creditors. It's a draconian measure, which is why it rarely 12 happens. We've been engaged by the debtors for months. We've 13 diligently done the work to prepare these cases and bring them 14 through to a successful sale.

15 We now want to bring them to a successful plan and 16 conclusion, right? We have the knowledge institutionally on 17 these issues. We know this client is suggesting some way to 18 disqualifying us now, saying that we cannot be retained is only 19 going to hurt the recovery of creditors, especially unsecured 20 creditors, the fulcrum securities that don't have a very large 21 recovery right now.

22 And so, Your Honor, what we ask is that you approve 23 our retention. We all see this for what it is. We might have 24 a standing fight down the road. We can address the issues
25 then, and I'd just like to reserve a few minutes of your time

1 for rebuttal for what's about to come.

2 THE COURT: All right.

3 MR. McKANE: Thank you.

4 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. McKane.

5 Mr. Shore.

6 MR. SHORE: Thank you, Your Honor.

7 Again, Chris Shore from White & Case on behalf of the 8 Committee. I do not have a deck so I won't need the clicker.

9 Let me start with four preliminary points, and I'll 10 get to three substantive legal points. The first point, I just 11 want to be clear. The evidence does not include the deck that 12 was there. There's a lot of material in there that is not 13 sourced from any of the evidence.

14 THE COURT: It's a demonstrative. It's not brought 15 into evidence.

16 MR. SHORE: Correct. So I'm not going to respond, 17 for example, to what White & Case has done in other cases or 18 things like that. But it does come down, I'll come to it, this 19 distinction between potential conflicts and actual conflicts 20 and how we handle actual conflicts versus potential ones.

21 Second comment, there's been a lot about 22 controversial. I don't actually see this, at least insofar as 23 our objection is concerned, is that controversial. We're not 24 here to put up roadblocks. We're here to just put guardrails 25 on a representation. And when we start talking about

1 disqualification, there's no disqualification here. When 2 counsel appears as counsel for an estate, the Court must 3 approve the scope of that retention.

4 We're just asking that this retention not include the 5 scope of advising the debtors with respect to matters on which 6 Deerfield and they are adverse. In fact, the evidence contains 7 descriptions of our efforts to try to get the debtors to agree 8 to guardrails. And they have refused any guardrail. It's 9 contrary to my practice in cases.

10 People, and I'm going to come to it, the big case 11 issue, people deal with restrictions on representations in 12 front of debtors all the time. In fact, Mr. McKane went 13 through some examples where debtors have said, we won't do 14 this, we won't do that, and they get their retention done.

15 Now, the second thing, we're going to come to 16 revenues in a bit. Great for Kirkland. It's fantastic that 17 they put $7 billion of revenue up last year, but it's not an 18 excuse not to follow the rules. I agree. The issues here, 19 Your Honor is familiar with. If this were a Chapter 13 debtor
20 and the debtor had one asset, a home, and there was a mortgage 21 on that home, and there was a question that had to be 22 investigated as to whether that mortgage was properly 23 perfected.

24 And the Chapter 13 debtors' counsel came in, or 25 Trustee's counsel came in and said, I just want as part of my

1 retention the authority to look into the priority issue. I do 2 want to tell you that the bank is a current client of the firm.
3 I have people working on this debtor case and working for the 4 client of the firm. And don't worry, it's just a couple 5 million bucks a year.

6 That's a problem. It's a problem that could have 7 been solved a long time ago. And I'm going to come to it.
8 There's no explanation as to why this problem was not solved
9 earlier, but we don't get out of the rules just because it 10 makes it hard for big firm practice. Big firm practice does 11 not require that you waive the rules.

12 Rather, it requires that the parties work together 13 and see if you can't come to some sort of arrangement which 14 resolves that issue. We are not taking on the practice of big 15 law in big cases. We're just saying that because of having 16 thousands of clients and thousands of matters, issues arise
17 that need to be dealt with by responsible parties.

18 The last point, this is an appearances case, but to 19 some extent it is, and I'm not talking about the fact that the 20 press is watching this and we keep getting reports out and 21 people publish cartoons of what's going on. This is a case in 22 which Mr. McKane just said there may be nothing left for 23 unsecured creditors in light of this transaction.

24 That we just heard about the sale hearing.
25 Congratulations to the debtors for getting it done, but this is

1 a case where the definitive issue with respect to not just 2 unsecured coveries, whether the debtors have any equity in 3 their estate property comes down to this transaction.

4 It is in big cases and complicated cap structures
5 sometimes lead to zeros. Sometimes lead to big zeros. A 6 billion dollars of debt here would be extinguished for no
7 consideration. And we accept that, and we all understand 8 that's the case. And some of these are big players and some of 9 these are not big players. You're going to get a zero.

10 But it is from our perspective as a fiduciary for the 11 unsecured creditors, a very bad look to say that debtors, the 12 debtors could only hire Kirkland & Ellis who had Deerfield as a 13 client, weren't even told that Deerfield was an active client
14 of the firm until after the case started. And that Deerfield 15 is at least such an important client of the firm that they're 16 not willing to drop them.

17 That is, it is Kirkland here insisting that they be 18 able to continue to represent Deerfield and represent the 19 debtors in matters related to Deerfield. So I have three legal 20 points.

21 I want to discuss the nuance, if any, between actual 22 and potential conflicts here. Two, the effectiveness of the 23 Invitae waiver, the only waiver that is in the record in this 24 case for the debtors, and the Special Committee problem, which 25 we didn't hear a lot about in the presentation.

1 And when we go through this, I think we end up where 2 we've asked, which is that the Kirkland could be retained, 3 there just has to be a provision in the order which puts some 4 guardrails on what Kirkland can and cannot do. And if Your 5 Honor can't do that, we can sit and discuss it with them with 6 respect to what is and is not in play.

7 Cash collateral, plan terms, things like that all 8 have to be addressed. And they have to be addressed in a 9 transparent way so that if unsecured creditors are going to get 10 a zero, they don't feel like the process was rigged from the 11 start.

12 Actual versus potential. Marvel's the great place to 13 start, right? Potential conflicts, not a problem. Actual 14 conflicts, you're out -- or, sorry, potential conflicts, you 15 maybe out. Actual conflicts, you're out. And mere appearance 16 is not a problem. We have an actual conflict here.

17 And I want to be crystal clear about this. It sounds 18 like both from the reply that was filed in the presentation 19 today, the fact that we're not actively litigating against 20 Deerfield is not a conflict. We're just advising the debtors.
21 And it happens that Deerfield is part of that advice. That's 22 wrong. I want to read from an ABA -- what did I do with it -- 23 yes, an ABA opinion, which I can give Your Honor.

24 And let's be clear about this, right? We're 25 operating under Model Rule 1.7. You have concurrent

1 representation of clients who are directly adverse. Directly 2 adverse isn't really defined. There's some comment in the 3 official commentary to 1.7 which says it's not just litigation.
4 It could be transactional work, as well. Okay?

5 And so when we dig down on what directly adverse 6 means, this is from a formal opinion of the ABA 5-434.

7 "Direct adverseness requires a conflict as to the 8 legal rights and duties of the clients, not merely 9 conflicting economic interests. There may be direct 10 adverseness even though there is no overt 11 confrontation between the clients as, for example, 12 where one client seeks the lawyer's advice as to his 13 legal rights against another client whom the lawyer 14 represents on a wholly unrelated matter.

15 "Thus, for example, a lawyer would be precluded by 16 Rule 1.7A from advising a client as to his rights 17 under a contract with another client of the lawyer as 18 to whether the statute of limitations has run on 19 potential claims against or by another client of the 20 lawyer. Such conflict involves the legal rights and 21 duties of the two clients vis-a-vis one another."

22 So all the time that Kirkland was representing the 23 debtors, pre-petition and now, advising with respect to the 24 rights under these security documents for the use of cash 25 collateral and the required holder here, Deerfield, that's an

1 actual conflict. I'm going to come to waiver in a bit, but 2 that's an actual conflict. Whether or not claims and cause of 3 action arise under Chapter V is a conflict with Deerfield being 4 a current client of the firm.

5 Whether or not Deerfield engaged in a aiding and 6 abetting a breach of fiduciary duty of the directors and 7 officers who pushed this exchange through, that's an actual 8 conflict of interest. So their only hook here, only hook to 9 getting retained is the waiver. And I'm focusing, I'm going to 10 come to a bit in discussing Art Van, but I'm focusing on the 11 NVTI waiver, not the Deerfield waiver.

12 In fact, why don't I discuss Art Van? Art Van is, 13 there are two waivers at issue. One is -- or two waivers 14 disclosed. The debtors out about the petition date got an 15 advance, or got an actual waiver of the Wells Fargo
16 relationship, and Wells Fargo had its pre-existing waiver.

17 There is nothing in that opinion about what a -- what 18 the debtors' waiver was, what the debtor was told, what the 19 debtor was not told, what risks were given to the client. So 20 Art Van tells us nothing about the enforceability of the 21 Invitae waiver here. And that's why I'm going to focus on the 22 Invitae waiver.

23 Here is the evidentiary record with respect to that 24 waiver. They had an engagement letter with Deerfield in 2021, 25 and there were seven open matters by the time Kirkland pitched

1 to Invitae. There was the up-tier transaction, and then K&E 2 was brought in, we've never said otherwise, in September of 3 2023.

4 They said, we can be adverse to everybody. That's -- 5 I get that. What they did not say, and what they did not tell 6 the client, until the draft retention application was sent to 7 Invitae days before the final cash collateral hearing, right?
8 This is all after they've signed the transaction support 9 agreement, after they've stipulated the liens and claims, and 10 validity and priority of the secured notes, and the 11 non-existence of claims against Deerfield, then they told the 12 client, we represent Deerfield in active matters.

13 That is the problem here. And you can call it a foot 14 fault, or you can call it a problem, but this is a big case 15 that we got to operate pursuant to the rules. That is not 16 informed consent.

17 If you look at Celgene, which we cited, you must tell 18 your client, I've got seven open matters with Deerfield. And 19 then the client can decide, well, wait a minute, I'm headed 20 down a path towards a bankruptcy. I need advice with respect 21 to whether or not there's anything to see with respect to this 22 transaction. And the client is entitled to say, you know what, 23 you represent Deerfield. Weil Gotshal does not represent 24 Deerfield. I don't want to get into this fight over whether or 25 not you get disqualified, or your retention is restricted.

1 That's how a client makes informed consent.

2 Telling the client when all this is done, the 3 investigation is over, the board's made its decisions, the cash
4 collateral stipulation's been agreed, the interim use of cash 5 collateral has been approved. By the way, I just want to let 6 you know from a process perspective, all that time I was 7 representing Deerfield on these matters, and I have attorneys 8 who are billing you time and billing Deerfield time. That is 9 not an informed consent.

10 And I want to be clear about this, as well, with 11 respect to burdens. It is the burden of Kirkland & Ellis and 12 the debtors to show the waiver. That's directly from Celgene, 13 as well.

14 Kirkland & Ellis must convince Your Honor that their 15 waiver in that pre-petition letter is effective on the debtors'
16 estates. And that is the only waiver. There is no evidence 17 with respect to any attempt to obtain a subsequent waiver, any 18 attempt to clear up this issue at all. It is purely the 19 engagement letter and K&E's attempt to say that that's how you
20 go and get an advance waiver. And having this Court sign off 21 on saying that advance waiver is appropriate under the 22 circumstances given the facts and circumstances here.

23 While we're talking about what's not in the record,
24 there is no explanation that anybody's offered as to why K&E 25 did not disclose the existence of the ongoing relationships.

1 No explanation. So you're left to decide, was it just an 2 inadvertence, was it an attempt to win a case? I don't want to 3 give the client some reason not to hire me.

4 We have nothing on that. Nor do we have anything on 5 Paragraph 17 of the stipulation, how it came to be that lawyers
6 were representing both Deerfield, individual lawyers, right?
7 It's an imputation issue. But individual lawyers were 8 representing both Deerfield and Invitae at the same time.

9 So where we stand right now, I believe, is we have an 10 actual conflict of interest. We've had an actual conflict of 11 interest, let's start there, all the way from the time that 12 they got engaged in September of last year, all the way through 13 the pre-petition machinations, all the way through the 14 beginning of the case, all the way until now, is an unwaived 15 conflict of interest to the extent that they want to be 16 retained to address Deerfield matters. And Deerfield matters 17 are going to continue to happen.

18 We have a hearing on Monday in which Kirkland wants 19 to appear and object to the extension of the challenge period.
20 What are we going to do about that? Why are they doing it that 21 way? They have Cole Schotz who can handle that issue. They've 22 made it clear. They want to appear and be heard on those 23 issues.

24 We're going to have issues with respect to the plan.
25 And I do want to note this for the record. I heard actually

1 for the last time last night, the debtors are intending to file
2 a plan and disclosure statement in two days. For the record, 3 the Committee has never seen a draft of a plan, nor had any 4 discussions with the debtors regarding the appropriate terms of 5 a plan of reorganization.

6 THE COURT: Let me interrupt just for a question.
7 And sorry, I didn't interrupt their presentation.

8 MR. SHORE: No.

9 THE COURT: But before I lose my train of thought.

10 MR. SHORE: Okay.

11 THE COURT: The argument is the failure to apprise
12 Invitae of K&E's concurrent representation with Deerfield 13 creates the actual conflict that continues to this day. That's 14 the Committee's position or the UST's position.

15 If that is the case, then why is it appropriate to 16 allow the debtor to use K&E as part of this case at all?

17 MR. SHORE: Well, that is the --

18 THE COURT: Because you've said they can go forward.
19 Most of that action already occurred and there's already a new 20 counsel here.

21 MR. SHORE: I'll answer it this way, as frankly as I 22 can. That is the unintended but foreseeable consequence of 23 refusing to resolve the issue. This issue could have been 24 resolved if Kirkland had said we're not doing this or had done 25 things at the beginning.

1 The Committee has raised an objection, a specific 2 objection. We have waived our right to appeal, I suppose, with 3 respect to a determination that they can't come in at all. But 4 from the Committee's perspective after deliberation, taking 5 into consideration all of the things that the debtors have said
6 with respect to disruption of the case, we are willing to live 7 in a world in which Kirkland does work for the debtors but 8 doesn't do other things.

9 In other words, I'm going to let the U.S. Trustee 10 carry the water on their relief requested, which is the total 11 denial of the application. But the Committee, recognizing the 12 position the creditors have been put in through no fault of 13 their own, are willing to abide in a world in which the 14 retention application is constrained.

15 THE COURT: Fair enough.

16 MR. SHORE: And the issue, and I want to end here 17 with respect to the Special Committee issue. No question, in 18 our papers, we took the position that debtors were representing 19 this slate of people, and we had -- and that was driven by the 20 fact that they've taken the position that all of the board 21 materials with respect to the up tier are privileged.

22 We thought, well, then you must be representing the 23 board and the members and things like that. It turns out they 24 haven't been. Issue for another day with respect to the 25 position they want to take, that they can represent the company

1 and disclose whether or not their claims and cause of action
2 against the directors on the board. That's an issue for 3 another day.

4 But let's clarify one thing from their papers. In 5 Paragraph 21 of their papers, they say, "To that end, the 6 debtors delegated the authority to investigate the 2023
7 Exchange transactions to Jill Frizzley, a newly appointed 8 disinterested director." And they end the paragraph, "She is 9 the duly authorized decision maker for the debtors with respect 10 to the investigation."

11 That is not borne out in the record. Attached as 12 Exhibit C to the joint stipulated facts is the only delegation 13 that we have seen of any matters from the full board. It is to 14 the Special Committee. The Special Committee controls all 15 conflict matters. This has to be a conflict matter or the 16 conflicted full board is dealing with it.

17 But the issue of whether or not the up-tier was bad 18 gives rise to cause of action against the Ds and Os and/or the 19 secured creditors creates a conflict because the board has on 20 it, the people who voted for that and has the officers 21 reporting to it who authorized the transaction.

22 The Special Committee is three of the directors who 23 authorized the transaction, who would be in the firing line of 24 a D&O action. And Ms. Frizzley, the Special Committee controls
25 conflict matters, including the investigation and prosecution

1 thereof. And the Special Committee controls the 2 attorney-client relationship and privilege. So it is not true 3 that Frizzley, an independent party is controlling the 4 investigation.

5 The reason why I raise that is there's no, the only 6 party who could control a waiver here, the way they've set this 7 up, is the Special Committee, who I think would be quite happy 8 that that counsel who concurrently represents Deerfield has 9 come to the conclusion that claims don't exist against them and 10 therefore would waive it. So we don't -- we can't fix this 11 problem given where we are in time and the problem that they've 12 created with their corporate governance.

13 In other words, it's up to the Court to put 14 guardrails here. And it's Your Honor's discretion, again, 15 leaving aside the, if it's an actual conflict, you have no
16 discretion. But from our perspective, it's Your Honor's 17 discretion to put some guardrails on what they can and they 18 cannot do. If they're not willing to walk away from their 19 $38,000-a-year client or whatever that latest figure was up 20 there, then they're going to have to pick their poison, going 21 to have to agree to some form of restriction on what they can 22 do.

23 And I'll end kind of where I started. This is an 24 issue-determinative case. I mean, the reason we're here is not 25 tactically because we're trying to get rid of Kirkland. It is

1 the unsecured creditor's recovery is tied up in this, and the 2 unsecured creditors are entitled to a record in which an 3 investigation was done by unconflicted counsel. And we're not 4 in this challenge period and this negative notice of having to 5 prove something in order to keep the claims alive.

6 So we'd ask that you restrict the retention as we 7 laid out in our papers.

8 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Shore.

9 MR. SHORE: You're welcome.

10 And I have, if you wanted, the, the bar -- the formal 11 opinion.

12 THE COURT: Yes, please.

13 MR. SHORE: It's just kind of hard to find online, 14 so.

15 THE COURT: Then even more so.

16 Mr. Sponder.

17 MR. SPONDER: Thank you, Your Honor.

18 And good morning again, Jeff Sponder from the office
19 of the United States Trustee.

20 As Your Honor's aware, the United States Trustee 21 filed his objection, which, which is the Docket Number 322. As 22 to this conflict issue, also, as Your Honor is aware, a joint 23 stipulation of facts has been filed, which the United States
24 Trustee signed as having no objection to its entry.

25 The United States Trustee objects to the retention of 1 Kirkland because Kirkland seeks to simultaneously represent the 2 debtors in these cases and Deerfield, the debtors' largest 3 secured creditor, albeit in matters unrelated to these cases.

4 Deerfield has taken a major role in these cases, 5 including negotiating the transaction support agreement, which 6 upon information and belief required the filing of these 7 bankruptcy cases with the milestones, and negotiated the cash 8 collateral order entered in these cases.

9 Further, Your Honor, Deerfield was included as a 10 consultation party under the bid procedures order and initially 11 submitted a joint bid to purchase substantially all of the 12 debtors assets. In other words, Deerfield as a debtors largest 13 secured creditor negotiated the TSA with the debtors, 14 negotiated the cash collateral order with the debtors, and 15 sought to purchase all of the debtors' assets. At the same 16 time this was occurring, Kirkland represented Deerfield, again, 17 albeit in unrelated matters.

18 The United States Trustee understands the potential 19 prejudice to the debtors, should his chosen counsel be denied, 20 and that case law suggests that debtors should be allowed to 21 choose their specific counsel. However, a debtors' choice of 22 counsel must comply with Section 327(a) of the Bankruptcy Code.
23 The requirements of Section 327 cannot be taken lightly, for 24 they, and I quote, "serve the important policy of ensuring that 25 all professionals appointed pursuant to Section 327(a) tender

1 undivided loyalty and provide untainted advice and assistance
2 in furtherance of their fiduciary responsibilities." And that 3 quote is from Rome v. Braunstein at 19 F.3d, Page 58 from the 4 First Circuit in 1994.

5 Your Honor, the Third Circuit has stated that a 6 professional person has an interest adverse to the estate when 7 the professional has, and I quote, "a competing economic 8 interest tending to diminish estate values or create a 9 potential or actual dispute in which the estate is a rival 10 claimant"

11 That quote, Your Honor, is from the United States
12 Trustee v. First Jersey Securities at 180 F.3d, Page 509.
13 That's the Third Circuit in 1999. Again, Your Honor, Kirkland 14 seeks to represent the debtors while it's simultaneously 15 representing their largest secured creditor, Deerfield, in 16 other matters.

17 The fact that the matters are unrelated is not 18 dispositive in light of Deerfield's status as the largest 19 secured creditor and a party to the TSA, which is driving this 20 bankruptcy case. And see Project Orange Associates at 431 B.R.
21 363, Page 379, and that's from the Southern District of New 22 York in 2010.

23 Your Honor, Kirkland argues in its reply brief that 24 it properly disclosed its ongoing representation of Deerfield
25 and has an advance waiver from Deerfield that enables Kirkland

1 to be adverse to Deerfield in any matter, including a
2 bankruptcy. The United States Trustee agrees that Kirkland 3 disclosed its concurrent representation of the debtors in 4 Deerfield.

5 In fact, in Kirkland's reply brief, Kirkland admits
6 that the debtors are adverse to Deerfield and that Kirkland 7 represented the debtors adverse to Deerfield, and I quote, 8 "Kirkland has already represented the debtors adverse to 9 Deerfield in these Chapter 11 cases and can and will continue 10 to do so." And that's Paragraph 30 of the reply brief.

11 Also, Your Honor, in the joint stipulation of facts, 12 Kirkland admits that three Kirkland attorneys, including two 13 partners, have worked on these cases as well as ongoing matters
14 where Kirkland represents Deerfield simultaneously. I'm sure 15 Kirkland will argue that the services provided by such 16 attorneys were minimal and they have done so.

17 However, no matter how minimal, Your Honor, nothing 18 will change the fact that these three attorneys are 19 representing the debtors in these cases at the same time 20 they're representing Deerfield, even in unrelated matters. In 21 fact, Your Honor, as set forth in the stipulation of facts, the 22 last time entry was only three weeks ago, which was April 16th 23 of 2024.

24 Even if the same attorneys were not working for both 25 clients, the concurrent representation of the debtors in

1 Deerfield still should not be allowed. Rather than engage 2 conflicts counsel, Your Honor, Kirkland relies on a conflicts 3 waiver. As to the conflicts waiver, it cannot trump the 4 requirements of Section 327(a).

5 Even if Deerfield agreed that Kirkland could act
6 against Deerfield on any matter, including a bankruptcy, 7 Kirkland must still satisfy the statutory requirements of 8 Section 327(a) to be retained as general bankruptcy counsel, 9 and that goes for Invitae, as well.

10 I advise the Court to look at Granite Partners at 219
11 B.R. Page 34 of the Southern District of New York in 1998, 12 where it was observed that while clients may in some instances 13 waive conflicts, the mandatory provisions of Section 327(a) do 14 not allow for such a waiver.

15 Here, Kirkland's concurrent representation of the 16 debtors in Deerfield, who played a major role in commencing 17 these bankruptcy cases, was involved in negotiating the 18 transaction support agreement and milestones, was involved in 19 the negotiation of the cash collateral order, and was a bidder 20 to purchase the debtors' assets, is a conflict of interest, 21 similar to the analysis set forth in the Project Orange case.

22 For the reasons set forth on the record today, as 23 well as the reasons set forth in the United States Trustee's 24 objection, and as well as the Committee objection, the United 25 States Trustee respectfully requests that the Court sustain his

1 objection and enter an order denying debtors' retention of 2 Kirkland.

3 MR. SPONDER: Thank you, Your Honor.

4 Thank you, Mr. Sponder.

5 MR. MCKANE: Your Honor, if I may, just for a few 6 minutes?

7 THE COURT: Yes.

8 MR. MCKANE: And for the record, once again, it's 9 Mark McKane, Kirkland & Ells, proposed counsel for the debtor.

10 Your Honor, this may not surprise you, but, you know,
11 Mr. Shore and I have sparred in the past, and this is a classic 12 Shoreism, right? You're going to create a false choice, right?
13 The classic pick your poison, right? Either give up your 14 client or limit, you know, or limit your representation so as 15 to not touch the client, right? That's his, like, false 16 dichotomy.

17 And the crazy thing about it is here, Rule 327(c) 18 specifically says you don't have to make that choice.
19 Concurrent representations between a debtor and a creditor in 20 unrelated situations are allowed so long as there's not an 21 actual conflict. And there is no actual conflict here. We 22 have valid enforceable waivers that eliminate, eliminate both 23 whether there's an actual conflict or a potential conflict.

24 And I went through both of them on purpose to show 25 that there's no carve-outs because it's neither actual nor

1 potential. Your Honor, they want to create this construct 2 where it's like, you know, limit your engagement so as not to 3 engage with the secured creditor that holds 78 percent of the 4 notes. I think you know from the course of these cases, that's 5 not practical or reasonable.

6 And Mr. Shore says he wants to make clear, I'm not 7 saying deny Kirkland's application. But in Paragraph 40 of his 8 objection, the lead request was deny Kirkland's application.
9 So it's nice to see that he's narrowing his scope so as to 10 allow the UST to carry that water.

11 As to informed consent, the fact that Mr. Shore
12 retreats to referring to a Chapter 7-13 debtor with a mortgage 13 shows how far afield we are from Invitae a public company with 14 an independent board and Deerfield on the issue of informed 15 consent.

16 As it relates to the Model Rules, very telling, Your 17 Honor, that he cites and quotes from 1.7(a) about actual 18 conflict with no reference to 1.7(b) about conflicts. There's 19 no question there's a conflict. And as to the issue of 20 informed consent and how you evaluate it, while -- excuse me, 21 Mr. Shore wants to talk about the record and what he wants to 22 highlight, you need to look no further than his objection in 23 Paragraph 40 as to where you should look to evaluate informed 24 consent.

25 Because at that point in time, the Committee said the

1 language in the relevant engagement letter is the primary
2 source for determining whether or not a particular client's 3 consent is informed. That's why I spent so much time on the 4 engagement letter.

5 In the engagement letter, we made absolutely clear 6 Kirkland represents many other clients, right? Clients that, 7 in fact, in unrelated matters, but that touched this debtor.
8 And we specifically disclosed how we were going to go about 9 addressing the issue where you had to come to the higher 10 standard of the bankruptcy court in 327 with a retention 11 application. But that doesn't diminish the fact that there was 12 informed consent given by Invitae while providing the waiver at 13 the time.

14 Why did we focus on the ability to go adverse to 15 Deerfield? Because they just became the largest secured 16 creditor. Clearly, they'd be someone we'd have to engage with 17 over the course of our engagement.

18 Your Honor, with regards to the corporate governance, 19 we laid out exactly what we did to whom we reported. All of 20 that's a nice preview of, I think, things to come. Mr. Shore's 21 privilege analysis is both wrong and also not for today.

22 But when you step back and look at what the Committee 23 is arguing, right, on waivers, the objectors are trying to 24 supplant their judgment for that of Invitae and Deerfield as to 25 what is informed consent.

1 As to the burden, the law is clear on this. Once we 2 file that 2014 application, once we've satisfied our 3 disclosures, the burden shifts to them. That's Caesars, a 4 published decision out of Chicago.

5 And then they want to create rules that would be 6 absolutely impractical. And the Committee's mind set, under 7 their privilege analysis, every company would need to somehow 8 retain separate counsel for its boards in an evaluation of 9 potential adversary proceedings. That's crazy.

10 You can't have a situation where every company has to 11 bring in separate counsel for the board just so we can evaluate 12 an avoidance action. And under their rules, if concurrent 13 representations of unrelated matters were not acceptable, you 14 can't have major law firms represent debtors.

15 And, finally, if we had to, you know, what they would 16 suggest is that in advance of us becoming debtors counsel in a 17 pre-petition situation, sometimes when it's a fully distressed 18 situation, we would somehow have to disclose every possible
19 connection, essentially do the 2014 process in a pre-petition 20 situation. That can't be the rule. That's not the rule.

21 Your Honor's responsibility is to evaluate the 22 retention application now based on what we have, which are the 23 engagement letters, the advance with the conflicts waivers, as 24 well as all of the disclosures that we have made in the 2014.
25 We absolutely have done that. And what does that show? We

1 don't represent a material adverse interest to the state, and 2 we're just interested. We ask that you approve the retention 3 so that we can be general restructuring counsel.

4 Thank you, Your Honor.

5 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

6 Counsel.

7 MR. BELLER: Thank you, Your Honor.

8 Benjamin Beller from Sullivan & Cromwell.

9 I didn't want to break anybody's flow, but since it
10 seems like argument has ended, just one point of clarification
11 for Mr. McKane's presentation to start. Sullivan & Cromwell
12 did not represent Deerfield in connection with the '23 Exchange 13 transaction. We were brought in after the fact and have 14 represented Deerfield in connection with the pre-petition 15 negotiations and in these cases.

16 THE COURT: Fair enough.

17 MR. BELLER: Thank you, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Thank you. No problem.

19 And I don't see any raised hands from those 20 participating or watching remotely. So let's see, it's 10 to 21 12. I'm going to go for a 10-minute recess and gather my 22 thoughts and see how to address this. I'll be back at noon.

23 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Thank you, Your Honor.

24 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

25 (Recess at 11:48 a.m./Reconvened at 12:06 p.m.)

1 THE COURT: All right. I thank you all counsel for 2 argument. It's argued exceedingly well on all sides, and there 3 are difficult issues.

4 Of course, my knee-jerk reaction is to reserve and 5 put something together in detailed opinion to cover all bases.
6 But that becomes problematic with a case that has significant 7 events upcoming, hearings that are going to be dispositive.
8 And it would be, frankly, just inequitable to the parties,
9 Committees, that are alike to defer a ruling.

10 So I'm going to give a very brief ruling today. I am 11 going to supplement it with a written ruling in the short term.
12 I think the parties are deserving of that as well.

13 Okay. Notwithstanding, and it was referenced, very 14 colorful Spider-Man memes and considerable editorializing by 15 certain online publications. The Court does not find the 16 application and the objections and the concerns raised here to 17 be remarkable. This is not the first concurrent representation 18 matter before the Court, nor before any bankruptcy court. In 19 other words, this Court is not going to be making new law, at 20 least I don't anticipate it, rather than just applying the law 21 as it stands.

22 Overall, the Court is going to overrule the 23 objections of the Committee and the U.S. Trustee. It does so 24 in finding that they have not met their burden with respect to 25 identifying the actual and potential conflicts that would knock

1 out the representation of the debtor by Kirkland & Ellis, K&E.

2 The Court finds and determines that K&E has satisfied
3 the requirements under Section 327, as well as the Model Rules
4 of Professional Conduct. Now, the Court acknowledges that 5 concurrent representation is not ideal, but to rule otherwise 6 would just simply write out a provision of the Code 327(c), 7 which allows it in certain situations. What the Code calls for 8 is for this Court to do a deeper dive, to determine whether or 9 not beyond the concurrent representation or the prior 10 representation that there's adversity in interests and 11 competing economic interests present in the continuation of the 12 concurrent representation.

13 While the Court is impressed with K&E's revenue 14 numbers, it's not the issue. It's a tool for the Court to 15 judge whether or not there are indeed competing economic 16 interests. So the Court takes into account the nature of the 17 representation, in this case of Deerfield, and the fact that, 18 overall, it amounts to roughly $2.3 million in three or four 19 years and less than that, certainly in 2023, and that that 20 represents, I believe, three-tenths of one percent of the 21 revenues.

22 Again, it's only a factor in determining whether 23 there are indeed the competing adverse economic interests in 24 the continued representation. The record supports a finding 25 that Kirkland is disinterested under 327(a) and 1014(c). I

1 think the parties acknowledge that 1014(a) and (b) are not an 2 issue.

3 The focus of Section 1014(c) is whether the 4 prospective counsel has a materially adverse interest at the 5 time of the retention. Again, we look at the work being 6 generated and the nature of the work. K&E does not represent 7 Deerfield in this Chapter 11. K&E is not doing the 8 restructuring work for Deerfield presently. K&E was not 9 involved in the 2023 March transaction. Invitae was 10 represented by Latham & Watkins throughout that transaction.

11 And K&E, as I said, is not representing Deerfield in 12 this proceeding. Deerfield has extremely competent counsel, 13 two law firms, Sullivan & Cromwell, and the Wollmuth firm.
14 Those are critical in determining whether there is adversity 15 and whether K&E can aggressively and zealously continue to 16 serve the interests of the bankruptcy estate and to be adverse 17 to Deerfield where appropriate.

18 The existence, pre-petition, of the expansive 19 waivers, the pre-petition advance waivers, as well as the 20 language in the retainer agreements are significant for this 21 Court. No, and I agree, you cannot waive yourself or your firm 22 out of meeting the requirements of Section 327 as a whole. But 23 the waivers can, if done appropriately and properly, address
24 some of the issues that the Court must decide if there is a 25 level of adversity warranting a finding of a potential or

1 actual conflicts as espoused by Marvel.

2 In other words, the waivers will address the fact 3 that, yes, there may be mere concurrent representation, but you 4 have to go beyond that. You have to look at the nature of the 5 work and the volume of the work being done. In this case, 6 there were expansive, detailed waivers, both, and I'll focus,
7 again, I agree with counsel, what's of record.

8 I'll focus on the Invitae retention engagement 9 letter. There were detailed provisions directed at providing 10 the client, Invitae, with informed consent that K&E can and 11 does represent adverse parties. No, the engagement letter did 12 not detail or identify the adverse parties. I doubt any 13 retention agreement ever does, but it should put in place a 14 mechanism for doing so at a later point in time when there is a 15 transaction or litigation that warrants the disclosures. And I 16 believe the informed consent language does that in this case.

17 Marvel, the Third Circuit's decision, advises this 18 Court that it should not disqualify a law firm or an attorney 19 simply on the appearance of conflict alone. And, certainly, 20 the courts in this circuit, when conducting its Section 327 21 analysis, have taken into account the standards that Marvel put 22 in place. In other words, to engage in a deeper scrutiny of 23 the type of work being undertaken as part of the concurrent 24 representation and the volume of that work.

25 This Court has done so in this matter and, certainly,

1 finds that Kirkland's relationship to Deerfield does not give 2 rise to that material adverse interest as noted or defined
3 under Section 111.14(c). Certainly, the volume of work
4 supports that conclusion. Let me rephrase that.

5 I gave considerable thought to the request for 6 guardrails in this matter, and in many cases, it is certainly 7 appropriate. You can use conflict counsel. We have 8 limitations. The Court certainly is loathed to place handcuffs 9 on debtors' counsel and debtors' choice of counsel and the work 10 that needs to be undertaken in a complex Chapter 11, such as 11 this matter, by restricting what work can be undertaken.

12 It's just so impractical, I believe, to suggest that 13 we can limit Kirkland & Ellis from undertaking representation 14 or tasks on behalf of the debtor as long as it doesn't impact 15 Deerfield one way or the other, when Deerfield is the major 16 secured party or potentially unsecured party, holding close to 17 80 percent of the debt, the most minimal task is probably going 18 to have some impact, and any meaningful work is certainly going 19 to impact Deerfield.

20 It becomes folly to think that we can start carving 21 out tasks that could be undertaken in the representation. It 22 becomes a requirement that there needs to be an "all or 23 nothing" approach. In certain cases, there should be a nothing 24 approach, meaning not allowing representation, but that's when 25 the Court has to take into account the other factors as far as

1 whether there are truly competing economic interests or 2 adversity.

3 Nothing this Court has seen in the record to date 4 post-filing suggests to the Court that Kirkland & Ellis cannot 5 zealously represent the debtor and the bankruptcy estate's 6 interest in this Chapter 11 proceeding. Nothing the Court has 7 seen in the record suggests that Kirkland & Ellis wasn't 8 zealously representing Invitae's interest prior to the filing 9 in conducting the investigation into the merits of the 2023 10 transaction.

11 Now, having said that, let me be clear. This Court 12 is not ruling in any way on the merits, the propriety of the 13 investigation, or the bona fides of the transaction. That's 14 all for another day, unfortunately. But in representing the 15 debtor, Kirkland & Ellis certainly had to address the needs of 16 the board and the special Committee and the independent 17 director in undertaking its responsibilities effectively and 18 had to report and confer with those entities and individuals.

19 I am, again, loathed to start the process of advising 20 companies to start lawyering up when undertaking an 21 investigation as to the merits for transaction unless there are 22 competing interests and adverse situations and then it's going 23 to be appropriate. I mean, we've seen this. So, again, I hope 24 to be far more eloquent and detailed in a written opinion. But 25 again, I think in all fairness you ought to know which way the 1 Court's coming down.

2 So, I'll ask Counsel to submit another form of order 3 referencing the record, the Court's oral ruling, the intent to 4 submit a more detailed written ruling. Because as you all 5 pointed out, I may not be the only judge looking at this, so, 6 at that point in time.

7 Is there any -- I can go on forever. Is there any 8 concerns or issues any counsel wish to raise for the Court?

9 (No audible response)

10 THE COURT: Then I appreciate your time and coming 11 down today. Thank you very much.

12 UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Thank you, Your Honor.
