> In re The Roman Catholic Bishop of Oakland, Case No. 23-40523 (WJL), Re: Status Report in Advance of September 9, 2025 Status Conference

Judge Lafferty:

We write on behalf of the Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors (the "Committee") in advance of the September 9, 2025 Status Conference requested by The Roman Catholic Bishop of Oakland (the "Debtor"). See August 13, 2025 Hr'g Tr. at 10;5-9 [Dkt. No. 2232], attached as Exhibit A.

At the August 13th hearing, counsel to the Debtor announced that it "anticipate[d] the debtor will be taking action, within the next two weeks, which we believe should more than break the current logiam." Id. at 10;3-5. Debtor's counsel also requested that the Court schedule a Status Conference for September 9th.

On August 25, 2025, Debtor's counsel made a revised settlement proposal to the Committee. The Committee has since responded to the Debtor's proposal with a counter-offer, which it submitted to the Court appointed mediators in the hopes that subsequent negotiations will be made within mediation. Indeed, on September 4th, the parties were invited back to mediation by Judge Sontchi. We trust that the Debtor, who stated on August 13th that "I think that my client is willing to do almost anything anyone thinks is a good idea to try to settle this case and bring a global resolution" will return to mediation. See August 13, 2025 Hr'g Tr. at 11;9-12.

The Debtor's August 25th proposal was not submitted through the mediators, nor does the Debtor indicate that the offer is subject to mediation privilege. The Committee does not know what the Debtor intends to present to the Court at the September 9th status conference. But the Committee expects that the Debtor will show restraint tomorrow when it provides an update to this Court. First, any further proposals or settlement discussions should be made through the mediators; not in open court. Second, the Committee expects the Debtor to abide by the mediation privilege and Rule 408. To that end, the Committee objects to the Debtor filing its settlement proposal on the docket, discussing its proposal or the Committee's response in open court. The sanctity of mediation and settlement discussions are granted protection for a reason: to promote frank conversations among the parties. If the Committee cannot be assured that its words and actions in mediation will not be used against it, there is little hope that a negotiated resolution can be reached.

As this court knows, the Committee has diametrically different views about its and the Debtor's conduct and what led to this impasse. See July 16, 2025 Hr'g Tr. at 19–35 [Dkt. No. 2158], attached as Exhibit B. But at the August 13th hearing, the Court commented:

So I'm not trying to take the rhetoric out of anybody's statements or the passion out of anybody's statements. But at this point, I think it would be helpful to just focus a little bit more on what we can do to try to come to a different reality here than go over what we think has happened in the past that's been unfortunate August 13, 2025 Hr'g Tr. at 26;15–20. The Committee will, of course, follow the Court's instructions. It expects the Debtor to do the same.

We thank Your Honor for the tremendous effort you have put into this case and look forward to seeing you at the September 9th hearing.

Sincerely,

/s/Jeffrey D. Prol Jeffrey D. Prol

17	THE CLERK: Your Honor, one of the parties is
18	rejoining, Mr. Plevin.
19	THE COURT: Oh, okay.
20	MR. PLEVIN: Sorry for being late, Your Honor. Mark
21	Plevin on behalf of Continental Casualty Company.
22	THE COURT: Okay. I was just saying I left the
23	hearing on Friday with a promise and, sort of, a homework
24	assignment, and I was just going to give you guys an update on 25	that, and then two other things that have popped up in the meantime. And then I'm delighted to hear from all of you.

And I did see the committee's letter of a day ago, or perhaps two days ago, on the docket, so I'm happy to hear further developments or reactions to that as well.

I told you that, although I was apprehensive of the prospect of acting as any sort of a mediator in this matter -- and I went over, probably at excruciating length on Friday, why I believe that was problematic -- I did promise to reach out to Judge Warren, and I did do that. And we talked, for an extended period of time, about his experience in the Rochester case. And he was very candid with me about the pluses and the minuses of all that and his sense of what role his participation played in the eventual outcomes in the case. And I was very happy to hear that.

I will say, though, without getting into any further details about what we talked about that, on balance, what he told me did not change my mind that it would not be a terribly good idea for me to act in some sort of mediator fashion in this case.

Now, before Friday, one of the requests that -- or suggestions that I think Mr. Jacobs had made, and perhaps others had joined it, was that I perhaps reach out to one or more of the mediators and get a sense from them of where things were. I didn't need to do that.

Mr. -- I'm sorry. Retired Judge Sontchi reached out to my chambers a couple of days ago and asked if he could chat with me yesterday. And he called and we did chat yesterday. I was very happy to hear from him. He did not tell me anything confidential about any of the mediation sessions, or positions people are taking, or who's been naughty or nice, or anything along those lines.

He gave me a more meta view of where things are, in his view. And rather than trying to tell you, less eloquently than he did on the phone yesterday, what he said, I invited him to join us today and to tell you himself what he said and what we talked about. So I would defer, for a few moments now, to retire Judge Sontchi and ask him to just give us a synopsis of our conversation yesterday.

MR. SONTCHI: Thank you, Your Honor. It's a pleasure to be in front of you virtually and very good to see many of the people I've worked with closely in this case and other cases.

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. SONTCHI: Well, the first thing I would say -- and I ended this actually at our conversation -- is that nobody's naughty and nobody's nice.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SONTCHI: So there are no good boys and there are no bad girls in these cases. Everyone is doing their best to pursue the economic interests of their clients.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SONTCHI: I truly believe that. The other thing is that I did express to you on how I had caused a pause in the mediation in December because I felt the parties needed to pursue litigation. And I haven't followed the case overly closely, but I have followed the case, and it seems to me that they have done quite a bit. They've worked very hard. It's been tough going. And I feel that it's an appropriate time to recommence mediation really as soon as possible. And I'm very much willing to do that to the best of my ability. And that's pretty much what we talked about.

THE COURT: Agreed. Okay. Thank you very much. And thank you again for reaching out to me. It was really nice chatting with you.

Why don't I -- I don't have anybody, necessarily, to pass the baton at this point. I would defer to any of the counsel who have thoughts about any further developments, if there have been any. I don't know if the committee's letter generated a response from the debtor about mediations, or other issues, or other thinking about -- I know scheduling would come up at a conference like this ordinarily.

So why don't I invite the debtor first, just because they're the debtor, to tell me anything that they think I should know or give me any updates? And if that's Ms. Uetz, great. If it's Mr. -- you guys tell me who ought to take the lead on that. Okay. Okay. Ms. Uetz?

 2
                         Thank you, Your Honor.
              MS. UETZ:
              THE COURT: Yeah.
 3
              MS. UETZ: It is I.
 5
              THE COURT: Okay.
 6
                         Thank you. And good to see everybody.
              MS. UETZ:
 7
              THE COURT: Yep.
              MS. UETZ: Your Honor, I do have a few comments.
     is, with respect to the committee's statement in its letter to you, that it met and conferred with counsel for the debtor over the weekend regarding returning to mediation and exchanging settlement offers -- and I'm quoting from the letter -- and 12 that it anticipates returning to mediation and the exchange of 13 settlement offers, and finally, that it anticipates that 14
     settlement discussions between the debtor and the committee will resume in earnest -- I will only say that a phone call 16 that occurred Saturday, between Mr. Weisenberg and Mr. Moore 17 18 and Mr. Lee, the only thing the debtor will say about that 19
     phone conversation, Your Honor, is that recollections may vary.
20
              But beyond this, and without regard to that phone 21 call, I want to update the Court and all of the stakeholders 22 here that my team has been working with our client and 23 reassessing its position in this Chapter 11 case, including 24 mostly with respect to settlement. We have been spending 25 almost all of our effort on that in recent weeks, dare I say, the last month, including as it relates to settlement with both the committee and with the insurers.

I want to let this Court know that I anticipate the debtor will be taking action, within the next two weeks, which we believe should more than break the current logjam. And it's my intention today, in fact, to request a status conference of this Court during the week of September 8th by which time I expect some conduct will have occurred between the parties with respect to settlement. And I can more fully advise the Court, about at least the debtor's position, at that time.

This is sort of without regard to what we're hearing now today from Your Honor having talked with Judge Sontchi. So this has been something that's been going on and underway. And indeed it was my intention, when we had the last status conference, to be able to give you an even more fulsome report today. But it's just taken a little bit more time.

I would hope that what I am saying right now comes as welcome news for all of the stakeholders in this case, not the least of which are the sexual abuse survivors who have filed claims in this case. I mean very seriously when I say that I believe that what the debtor will be, I'll say, proposing, if it doesn't break the logjam, Your Honor, I don't know -- we don't know what will.

Separately from that, on the subject of mediation, and even timing for this case that Your Honor has even mentioned in, I think, the last status conference, the potential for a drop dead date, the potential for a dismissal, again -- and I'm not trying to tease anybody here, Your Honor. I'm coming to you with the most information I can from our status currently with our client. I really think that, by that first week of September, things will be a little more clear in that regard.

I also think that, by that first week of September, things will be a little more clear, certainly for me and my client, with respect to the prospect of continued mediation. I will tell you that today, as I'm standing here, I think that my client is willing to do almost anything anyone thinks is a good idea to try to settle this case and bring a global resolution. We're absolutely committed and willing to consider it. And I think our actions to date hopefully support the credibility of that statement I'm making.

However, I'll be honest, as I always am, if we are to return to mediation, I think that it will require, first, some conversation among counsel, lead counsel, myself and Mr. Prol, as well as the potential mediators who would participate in that.

The fact is that, unfortunately -- and I agree with Judge Sontchi, there are no good guys and there are no bad guys. I think that's a song, and I'm failing to recall who it is, so someone will probably text me that song. It might be the Eagles. But for whatever reason, twelve months of mediation, from the debtor's perspective, it failed. And something would need to change, hopefully, for a mediation to be successful. And I'm just going to leave it at that --

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. UETZ: -- for today, Your Honor, on the record.

So the net of my statement is we are moving at pace anyway, and

I really will expect to have much more to report to this Court

if the Court would indulge us with a further status conference that week of September 8th. That's one thing.

The second thing is, my team, my client, everyone associated with the debtor in this case, is absolutely willing to consider anything to try to bring a global resolution. And I just think that further talk about that, and what a mediation might look like, and who might participate, and how, is something that we probably should take offline and maybe report back further to you. And beyond that, Your Honor, I'm happy to answer any questions, and I'll stand down.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you. Before I ask fairly obvious questions, I would probably rather hear from the committee and other constituents, their reaction and their thoughts about timing, given that they've suggested that we go back and do a little mediating.

So Mr. Prol, you want to come up and give me your thoughts?

MR. PROL: Thank you, Your Honor. For the record,

Jeff Prol, Lowenstein Sandler, for the committee.
              Your Honor, I want to start by apologizing by not being party to the conference on Friday. We had thought that 3 that status conference was related solely to the adversary
 5 proceeding to talk about scheduling. And that had, for the 6 most part, been worked out. And so -- 7
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MR. PROL: -- Mr. Kaplan led that effort while Mr.
 9 Weisenberg and I were on a conference call with the committee -- 10 11
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MR. PROL: -- in fact, addressing many of the same
13 issues that you -- 14
              THE COURT: Well, I hope I didn't sandbag you there.
15
     I mean --
              MR. PROL: No, no.
16
              THE COURT: -- I thought it was helpful to talk more 17 18 broadly.
19
              MR. PROL: Yeah.
              THE COURT: And I'm sure, I'm sure we missed your 20 wonderful input, but we have it now.
21
              MR. PROL: Okay. I appreciate that, Your Honor.
22
23
              THE COURT: Okay.
24
              MR. PROL: So turning to the issues at hand, we stand 25 here today in a position that I think we more or less predicted

when mediation broke down. The debtor came forward with a program or a path that it proposed to pursue. We proposed an alternative path which the debtor took great umbrage to. And we predicted that the plan that the debtor had filed was patently unconfirmable, and that it would be a colossal waste of resources and time, and that ultimately we would be in a position where we would need to do a hard reset. And that's where we are today, thankfully.

We're glad the debtors decided to pause that. We're glad to hear that the debtor is working on a proposal that may change the landscape here. And we look forward to receiving that.

We're also mindful of comments that Your Honor made earlier on that, at some point, it would be the committee's opportunity to be the protagonist. And so we, too, have been working with our client and working on another alternative path forward. And we're happy to discuss that with the debtor and Foley in the coming weeks.

But we do believe, Your Honor, that it is time to get back to the bargaining table. We've been working with our client on a proposal, and it may well be that we'll have the opportunity to exchange those, whether it's in front of mediators, or otherwise. We look forward to doing that as promptly as possible.

There was a lot of talk at the conference on Friday

about the complexity of the case and what led to it being
 2 bogged down. And I just wanted to address a couple of those points quickly.
 3
              THE COURT: Remembering that I was a little bit
 5 skeptical about the complexity of the case.
 6
              MR. PROL: Well -- 7
              THE COURT: That was my -- 8
              MR. PROL: -- I agree, Your Honor.
 9
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MR. PROL: -- which is why my opening comment on that is, I quess, in the abstract, bankruptcy does appear to be 11
     relatively simple, yeah.
              THE COURT: Well, again, and I'm not trying to suggest 13 that these cases aren't complex. I quess the question was 14 15 whether this was uniquely complex in some way. And there was some opinions about that, that perhaps it wasn't, or if it was, 16
     I wasn't sure why that would be the case. That was the only 17
     context, okay? So -- 19
              MR. PROL: I understand.
20 THE COURT: Yeah. Okay.
21

MR. PROL: And I often quote the Purdue decision, to Mr. Weisenberg's regret. And the Purdue court seemed to say that bankruptcy is relatively simple: an honest debtor gets a discharge with all its assets on the table. But the devil's in the details there.

22

And I think the first detail that makes this case different is the nature of the creditor constituency. We do not represent voluntary creditors. These are not credit managers, business owners, or salespeople, or folks that are trying to collect a debt that arose out of the supplying of materials or services, where it's just a bookkeeping entry in terms of what we're going to recover in order to keep our business going.

Our clients are involuntary creditors who suffered the most humiliating damages, physical damages, emotional damages that could possibly be known to man. And the special relationship between our clients and the debtor, at the time that that abuse occurred, just further exacerbates the situation. Individuals who came to came to the church, who was supposed to protect them, provide for their spiritual nurture and welfare, okay, failed to do so.

And then we spent decades with the church denying that the abuse occurred and looking to avoid responsibility and liability for that. Now it finds itself in bankruptcy court attempting to protect assets in order to fulfill its mission.

And we understand that, okay?

But recently we met with a bishop in another diocese who I think has it right, Your Honor. He said to the survivors in this case, we have always gotten it wrong. We do need to protect our mission. But you, survivors, you are the church's primary mission. We have failed you. And it's our responsibility to reconcile the church to you. He didn't say reconcile you to the church; he said the church to you, because the church has failed you. And it's the church's obligation to change, to prevent abuse from happening in the future, and to utilize our assets to compensate you and reconcile with you.

And that's really where we need to refocus the efforts on this mediation or the settlement that we're attempting to negotiate here. This diocese is asset rich. The complicating factor -- another complicating factor in this case is that a lot of the wealth here is tied up in real estate and the question of whether or not the bankruptcy court can force the sale or the monetization of real estate and the conflict between the Bankruptcy Code and the First Amendment. And, frankly, some of the critical issues that have kept us from moving forward and making progress in the bankruptcy are the size of the bankruptcy estate, whether it includes real estate, whether it includes the restricted assets.

And I just wanted to make one comment because Your Honor made a comment in the transcript. And I think Your Honor said it before. A concern that the restricted assets concerns a wealthy individual creating a trust for the benefit of the church and the committee looking to somehow break that trust. And that's not exactly --

THE COURT: Can I give you my sense of what I was 18 trying to say? 1 2 MR. PROL: Sure. THE COURT: It was only that I was aware that, putting 3 aside what real estate might or might not be sold, that there 4 was some forty million dollars' worth of assets that were 5 alleged -- in the debtor's mind, subject to restrictions 6 7 that -- what I didn't say then was the nature of those restrictions wasn't necessarily articulated with respect to 8 9 each particular asset. So in my mind, I envisioned it as it could be a 10 11 spectrum. On one end of the spectrum could be somebody who created a trust and told the church, I'm creating this trust, 12 13 and the purpose of it is to make sure the money goes here. At 14 the other end of the spectrum is somebody who thinks, in the 15 back of their mind, as they're putting five dollars into the basket, I hope they spend it on this. And in between those 16 two, there's a million possibilities that we haven't identified 17 18 That was my only point, is that it's --19 MR. PROL: Okay. Correct. 20 THE COURT: -- of course it's a spectrum, right? 21 MR. PROL: Right. 22 THE COURT: That was all, yeah. 23 MR. PROL: I would say -- and this will become more 24 apparent as the restricted assets adversary moves forward --25 THE COURT: Yeah.

              MR. PROL: -- if need be.
 2
              THE COURT: Sure.
 3
              MR. PROL: The latter example that Your Honor gave, I think, is the lion's share of what we're talking about.
 4
              THE COURT: Well, we'll find out.
 6
              MR. PROL: It's --
              THE COURT: We'll find out.
 7
              MR. PROL: It's when the church passes the plate on
 9
     Sunday afternoon, and then the church takes the position that 10 these assets are restricted.
              THE COURT: Well, we'll find out.
11 12
              MR. PROL: Or -- 13
              THE COURT: Yeah. Okay.
              MR. PROL: Or the Bishop's appeal.
15
              THE COURT: Yeah.
                                I was only suggesting that it's -- 16 like everything else, when you start putting numbers on things, there are places on a spectrum where matters fall, and then
18 you're more or less likely to get an outcome -- 19
              MR. PROL: Yes.
              THE COURT: -- because of that. That's all. Okay?
20
              MR. PROL: I think another important aspect of the 21 case that makes it somewhat more difficult is the existence of 22
     the insurance and the ability to monetize the insurance.
     think, in other cases, including the cases in California, the
25
     debtors are now working with the committees to monetize insurance, consenting to stay relief, pursuing debt relief actions, and aggressively pursuing the monetization of what is one of the larger assets in the case.

Here, the debtor has taken a different tactic, notwithstanding pleas from our side to aggressively pursue the debt relief action; I think that's been more or less stayed other than for discovery. And the debtor has reached a settlement -- Your Honor commented on that at the status conference on Friday -- for the insurance assets to be assigned to a trust.

We believe that that assignment is highly prejudicial to survivors for at least two reasons, and we briefed them in connection with the disclosure statement hearing. And the assignment, as it stands today, according to the insurers, impairs the ability to bring bad-faith claims, in the event that the insurance carriers do not act in good faith in defending the litigation, okay?

And it also forces plaintiffs to make a choice. If a plan is confirmed, plaintiffs have a choice. They can either accept the dividend proposed from the assets contributed by the by the debtor, or it can choose to litigate against the insurance carriers and get the recovery from the insurance.

The problem with that structure, Your Honor, is years down the line, when this plays itself out, there's a concern that the plaintiffs are going to choose the easy route and choose the cash distribution rather than years of continued litigation. That's not a choice that they have to make in state court.

And while we're supportive of a plan that provides for an assignment, that assignment has to be insurance neutral. Whatever rights exist under the policies before the bankruptcy was filed must continue to exist after the plan is confirmed. So it's a completely --

THE COURT: Shall I tell the California Supreme Court the right answer to that one? What should I do?

MR. PROL: I don't think you need to tell the Supreme

THE COURT: You know what I mean. I mean, it's a state law issue that came up in the course of conversations. And I may have lots of interesting theories about it, but I'm not sure what I do about it. And I'm not trying to make fun. I just -- we had a lot of conversations about, is this a disclosure statement issue? And it was, to some extent. But is it an issue I'm going to I'm going to resolve a confirmation? Absolutely not.

MR. PROL: No. But there is a way, Your Honor, that the plan could be drafted to ensure that that result is not a --

THE COURT: Well, that certainly -- I mean, I anticipated you'd have an idea about that. I get that, okay?

MR. PROL: To get down to the issues that Your Honor 1 2 addressed as potential means for moving the case along the blunt cudgel, I think, that you said you had. 3 4 THE COURT: Yeah. MR. PROL: There are a couple of options, I think, 5 6 that you had indicated, setting a drop dead date. Your Honor, 7 given the debtor's comments today, and the fact that we're also working towards a plan, we think that would be premature. And 8 9 we suggest that Your Honor put that on hold until a future status conference and let's see. The debtors asked for a 10 status conference September 8th. We believe that that issue 11 could be pushed down the road. 12 13 THE COURT: Yeah. MR. PROL: And we'll see what happens in the next 14 15 couple of weeks. Dismissal of the bankruptcy case, Your Honor. 16 don't believe that that would be necessarily an appropriate or 17 18 effective remedy for either side. That would simply draw out the proceedings further. We go back into state court --19 20 THE COURT: No, I know; that's the point. I know. 21 MR. PROL: There's litigation there for a period of 22 time. 23 THE COURT: Yeah. 24 MR. PROL: And ultimately, the debtor's going to wind 25 up exactly where it is today, and we'll wind up back here before Your Honor in six months, a year, two years, whatever the time frame is.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. PROL: And that's just further delay --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PROL: -- and not an effective remedy. And finally, Your Honor suggested the idea of further amending the Knudsen order. That order, as you heard this morning, and are well aware of, has already been amended --

THE COURT: Right.

MR. PROL: -- in an effort to try to solve the issue that the debtor identified. Putting further pressure on counsel with regard to fees we don't think would be constructive. It's not counsel that are necessarily driving these issues. We are advisors and we're messengers. It's the clients that make decisions. And to introduce controversy and issues with regard to fees, I think, disrespects the client and the client's decision-making process.

And it also creates friction between counsel and their client. It makes it very, very difficult to go back to the client and say, well, the judge has said no more fees, or restrictions on the amount of payment of fees until you get to a deal. Doesn't the client then look at us and say, gee, you're really pressuring us to a settlement because you're more worried about yourself than you are about us? I think it just introduces a level of uncertainty and a look that I don't think is good for the judicial process.

I also wanted to address, Your Honor -- and I think you've kind of resolved this in terms of your views of serving as mediator. We did file a letter opposing that, and I just wanted to explain that for a minute.

THE COURT: You don't need to.

MR. PROL: Okay.

THE COURT: Okay. Yeah. No problem. Okay.

MR. PROL: Thanks.

THE COURT: Appreciate it.

MR. PROL: Your Honor, Mr. Burns might also want to address some of the insurance.

THE COURT: Okay. Why don't I let Ms. Uetz go first?

Thank you. She's got her hand up.

Go ahead, Ms. Uetz.

MS. UETZ: Sorry. I was having trouble with my fingers, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. UETZ: Your Honor, just a couple of points that I have to respond to because of the attack on my Bishop client here, and quoting from other cases, and the like. Again, Your Honor, we spent a year in mediation, and nothing Mr. Prol just said explains why, for ten months, the committee hasn't made a proposal. It doesn't explain why we met -- I think it was six times -- and made proposals on child sexual protection

     protocols, consulting with experts, looking at other dioceses, and didn't get a turn of the document from the committee.
 4
              THE COURT: Okay.
 5
              MS. UETZ: None of what he said explains that. And I 6 just have to say that.
 7
              THE COURT: I appreciate it. Okay. Can I -- 8
              MS. UETZ: The one -- sorry.
 9
              THE COURT: No, you go ahead. You finish.
                                                           Then I 10 want to make sort of a general statement here about the way this hearing is devolving.
12
              MS. UETZ: And that was my two, Your Honor, so I'm 13 just going to stop.
14
              THE COURT: Okay.
15
              MS. UETZ: I didn't know that we were going to be 16 arguing about insurance assignments and -- 17
              THE COURT: Yeah, okay.
18
              MS. UETZ: -- and litigation --
              THE COURT: Yeah.
20
              MS. UETZ: -- and all of that.
21
              THE COURT: Okay.
22 MS. UETZ: I gave you an answer to your question to 23 me.
24
              THE COURT: Yep.
                                Yep.
                                      Yep.
25
              MS. UETZ: And so I will leave it at that.

THE COURT: Okay. Let me make a comment here. And I say this with enormous respect for, not only the lawyers in the room, but the importance to them of the things they say, which is that we're at a point now where we are -- to use a technical bankruptcy term -- stuck.

And what I had suggested before was maybe there's ways to get us unstuck. The way to make -- I'm worried that the way to make sure we stay stuck is either we continue to argue about things that right now are paused -- and they're paused for a reason. They're paused because they haven't been leading us to a place that is likely to get us to either a negotiated resolution here or a expeditious determination of the issues that you may ask me to determine whether I'm going to confirm a plan or not.

So I'm not trying to take the rhetoric out of anybody's statements or the passion out of anybody's statements. But at this point, I think it would be helpful to just focus a little bit more on what we can do to try to come to a different reality here than go over what we think has happened in the past that's been unfortunate. And I have no doubt that each of you has good reasons to believe what you believe about that. This is not about me second guessing any of you. It's about the utility of where we go.

And at some point, I mean, what I tried to say last week, at some point, you folks have all identified interesting issues, and you've given me the beginnings of good arguments that would be a lot of fun for me if we end up confirming this case through a contested trial for me to figure out and write about and all that. But many, if not all these issues I know come up in other cases. And when the cases get resolved, they get resolved around them, which is not to say that you should shirk hard issues, but that at some point we have to all make the decision we want to do this in a bankruptcy or we don't. And it's really just that simple. And that has risks and benefits for both sides.

So let me just say that and leave it at that. I'm just hopeful that, as we go forward here, if it was important for people to say things to remind me why they feel the way they do, and why there was purpose behind their statements, I respect that enormously. I think we want to move forward a little bit differently.

And my question, really to everybody now is, logistically, what's the best way to do that? I don't know if -- I mean, I'm not getting the sense from Ms. Uetz that, until she's prepared to make more public either -- well, to tell you folks or make more public what their new model is, I don't know that it's very likely to be helpful that you get into a mediation. But if somebody believes that's not the case, I'm all ears. Okay? The only question here is how do we get this -- if we can get to something everybody can't be thrilled with but can live with, okay, how do we do that? 1 2 So let me pause for a moment and see if anybody else wants to address an aspect of that. And I'm not trying to cut 3 off Mr. Burns, but I do want to pursue this question. Anybody else have a thought about the go-forward process? 5

MS. UETZ: Excuse me, Your Honor, only because you mentioned me and my position, I would just like to -- it's not even clarifying. You got it right. I think that, from the debtor's perspective, the three weeks we're seeking should be fruitful.

THE COURT: Okay.

THE COURT: Okay. I appreciate it.

Okay. Anybody else want to be heard about that subject before I talk to Mr. Burns?

MR. SCHIAVONI: Your Honor, Tan Schiavoni for Century and Pacific.

We would like to meet and I'd be inclined, if that would be -- if they'd like that. But we'd like to meet with Ms. Uetz and either the Bishop or his counsel. He has a very business-savvy counsel. And I think I would just suggest to Ann Marie that we'd like to meet -- that would even be better.

14
15
              THE COURT: Well, maybe it will. Okay.
16
              MR. SCHIAVONI: And we'd like to play a role.
              THE COURT: Okay.

24 come grab the lectern here?
25
              No? Okay. Mr. Burns, come grab the lectern.
```

MR. BURNS: Thank you, Your Honor. I actually didn't want to be heard on anything other than the question the Court just asked.

THE COURT: Okay. Go ahead.

MR. BURNS: And so I hopefully want to bring a positive note to this.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. BURNS: And the positive note is this. The ingredients are starting to be in place for mediation to be fruitful. This Court has granted stay relief, which is very important for my clients, in their view, in terms of driving this forward.

The debtor's plan has been rejected overwhelmingly by survivors. And we have three world-class mediators, which are Judge Newsome, Judge Sontchi, and Tim Gallagher, with these additional parts put in to allow the parties a chance to mediate more successfully.

There may be still more ingredients that are needed before we get to a successful mediation. But I think this process is actually playing out like it should play out. The Court has listened to the arguments of the parties. Each side has gotten to confront the arguments of each other. And we've started having things in place to make mediation more successful. I'm thrilled that Judge Sontchi and the other mediators are going to be involved. And so just, in my comments, I wanted to say, on that hopeful note, that maybe 1 2 we're starting to be at a place where mediation will be more fruitful. 3 THE COURT: Okay. Appreciate it. 4 5 Okay. Anybody else want to be heard? By the way, before we conclude, I've got a 6 7 housekeeping matter that is similar to the one that came up at the 10:30 calendar. But I want to raise it in the context of 8 9 this case as well, okay? Anybody else want to be heard before we consider what 10 we do, if anything, between now and the week of September 8th? 11 Anybody? Mr. Sontchi, anything -- sorry -- Judge 12 13 Sontchi, anything on your mind? MR. SONTCHI: Judge, well, first of all, it's always 14 15 Mr. Sontchi. You're the only judge in the courtroom. But listen, I've been listening to everybody, and I 16 would just say that all sides have reason to have some grudges 17 18 and resentments against the other side. 19 THE COURT: No doubt. MR. SONTCHI: And it's a hard task. Mediation is a 20 hard task. And I'm very aware of everyone's feelings on this. 21 I am certainly willing to help. It sounds like it might make 22 sense not to do anything before September 8th when you have a 23 24 next status conference. THE COURT: Okay. 25

     Sorry to --
              THE COURT: No, we'll figure it out. I'm looking for 17 18 input from you guys.
19
              I'm sorry. Is the reconsideration motion set for a 20 hearing now?
21
                     I don't have a problem with that. And I'm 22 going to have some questions about that, that maybe we'll just 23 get into now, okay, so I'm not confused. But advancing it a 24 day doesn't seem like a problem to me.
25
              Anybody on the debtor side, or otherwise, have a
```

35 problem with changing the date for the motion for reconsideration from the 10th to the 9th? Nobody?
 2
 3
              MS. UETZ: I don't expect we do, Your Honor.
              THE COURT: Okay.
 5
              MS. UETZ: Mr. Goodman handles that calendar.
     we're a big firm. We'll have somebody there.
 7
              THE COURT: Sounds good to me. Okay. Great.
 8
              MS. UETZ: It won't be me.
 9
              THE COURT: Well --
              MS. UETZ: I'll be there for another purpose.
10
              THE COURT: Okay. You'll be ceding the lectern 11 12 momentarily. Okay.
13
              MS. UETZ: Absolutely.
              THE COURT: All right. Well, do people prefer morning or afternoon? I'm indifferent.
14 15
16
              MS. UETZ: I have no preference, Your Honor.
              THE COURT: What's better?
18
              MS. UETZ: So I defer to others if they do.
              THE COURT: All right.
19
              MR. JACOBS: Your Honor?
20
              MR. PROL: We prefer the morning, Your Honor, if 21 22
     that's available.
23
              THE COURT: I'm sorry?
24
              MR. PROL: We prefer the morning, if that's okay.
25
              THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Jacobs, how about you? You're
```

36 in a different time zone, right?
 2
              MR. JACOBS: Yeah, I'm hoping to be there live, Your 3 Honor.
              THE COURT: Okay.
 5
              MR. JACOBS: I was going to say I'd prefer the afternoon, but I'll make whichever works.
 7
              THE COURT: All right.
 8
              MR. JACOBS: Whatever's most convenient.
 9
              THE COURT: Well, how about 10 o'clock that morning?
10
     Okay?
              MR. PROL: Fine, Your Honor.
12
              THE COURT: All right. Great.
13
              Ms. Albert, can you come on up for a sec? Am I correct -- well, correct me if I'm wrong. Is there
15 simultaneously a notice of appeal and a motion for reconsideration?
16
              MS. ALBERT: That is correct, Your Honor.
17
18
              THE COURT: Okay. So do you want to remind me where, in the jurisdictional piece, the motion for reconsideration falls? Is it indicative-ruling-like or something else?
              MS. ALBERT: Frankly, I don't know off the top of my
22 head, Your Honor.
23
              THE COURT: Okay.
24
              MS. ALBERT: I believe it was our intention to proceed 25 with the motion to reconsider first --
```

37
              THE COURT: Okay.
 2
              MS. ALBERT: -- prior to proceeding with the appeal.
              THE COURT: And where's the appeal? It's at the district court?
 5
              MS. ALBERT: It is at the district court.
 6
              THE COURT: In front of Judge Corley?
 7
              MS. ALBERT: It's in front of Judge Corley.
 8
              THE COURT: Okay. You want to give me -- 9
              MR. LEE: Your Honor?
              THE COURT: Yeah. Come on. Just make sure you're 10 11 talking into the microphone.
12
              MR. LEE: I apologize. I don't know the specific rule.
14
              THE COURT: Okay.
15
              MR. LEE: I can find it for you. But obviously, before filing the motion to reconsider, along with the 16 appeal -- 17 18
              THE COURT: Yeah.
              MR. LEE: -- we made certain that that was 19 procedurally proper. And so if you'd just give us a few 20
     minutes, we'll point out, in the Bankruptcy Rules, where that's 22 permitted.
23
              THE COURT: Is it 8003? I mean, that's an indicative 24 ruling. I mean, you're asking for an indicative ruling, which 25 would sort of -- I mean, that would at least pause what the district court's going to do, right? Or they can pause at that point, right? Okay. I mean, I go through this, wearing my other hat, three or four times a year. So that's what I thought this was. All right. I think I get it.
```

 5
              Is the debtor raising any jurisdictional issues here 6 along the lines of, gee, it's on appeal, we're not so sure of 7 what the function of this reconsideration is, or do you know 8 yet?
 9
              MS. UETZ: Your Honor, I'll be honest, I didn't know this was going to be a status on that issue. And I don't have 10 my appellate lawyer -- 11
              THE COURT: Okay. Well, I'm just asking so -- 12 13
              MS. UETZ: -- on that issue.
              THE COURT: -- so that we don't waste a bunch of time on the 9th or the 10th. If the debtor wants to raise a jurisdictional argument, where this can't go forward. I'd 16 rather know it sooner rather than later, but -- 17
18
              MS. UETZ: Noted, Your Honor. I --
              THE COURT: That's okay.
20
              MS. UETZ: -- literally have -- I can't say.
21
              THE COURT: All right. Okay. Well, I had in the back of my head this is something 8003-ish, and I get that.
     until somebody tells me differently, the briefing will 24 complete, and we'll talk to you guys about it on the 9th, okay?
25
     All right.

Anything else before I do my housekeeping matter?

No? Okay. Those of you who were here this morning, and it was many of you, heard me choke up a little bit as I say goodbye to my wonderful, wonderful law clerk, Bailey Bryant, who is turning a big page in her life and going on to a job at the City Attorney's office at the City and County of San Francisco, which is going to give her all kinds of new opportunities, and growth potential, and all the things that young lawyers love.

It has been my pleasure and my honor and my joy to work with her for a year. And I know all of you who have encountered her, in any aspect of this case, or otherwise, would join me in just offering superlatives to the job she has done, both advising me, in all the ways that you don't get to see me pacing around back there and wondering how come I can't find true north on everything, to the logistics of how we just make this system work. She has been a superb alter ego for me, and I will miss her more than I can say. But that's what happens with law clerks. They go on to bigger and better things, so I'm delighted for her. I'm sad for me.

But I just wanted to, first of all, recognize her, because her contributions, in connection with a case like this, are just particularly important. You can all imagine the level of care, and the concern, and the thought process that a judge brings to bear every time I'm lucky enough to see you folks.

I mean, you raise wonderful issues. I respect the job you are doing, under difficult circumstances, enormously, and I constantly hope I'm up to it. And if I ever have been up to it, I can turn the Ms. Bryant who has helped me with those tasks.

The second half of this, as many of you know who were here, is I have hired a wonderful law clerk, who is currently working at a local firm, the Binder Malter firm, which represents the debtor in Franciscan Friars. And I know the committee counsel -- this committee counsel is present in that case too. And I don't know if there's any other overlaps.

But I will just disclose now what I disclosed this morning. In connection with that offer, Ms. Meera Balasubramanian, who is going to be my new clerk, as of roughly September 15th or September 22, disclosed to me that, of course, she has worked on Franciscan Friars. Frankly, even if she hadn't, because of the size of the case and the relatively small size of the firm, she was going to be screened from that case, and she will be from that case.

She's in the process of developing for me a more complete list of matters, on which both she has worked and the firm has worked, so that the people whom I consult about ethics matters and I can come up with all the right protocols to make sure that we can manage chambers, effectively and ethically, and not give anybody the impression or any reason to think that we are doing anything other than calling balls and strikes, as you guys say, as they should be called, without fear or favor.

So that will be an ongoing task. It is not my conclusion that Ms. Balasubramanian's representation of a debtor in another diocese case is, in any sense, either disqualifying for her or for me. She's taken, I think, other positions in connection with the San Francisco case where I think her firm represents some interested parties, not the debtor.

And my sense -- and I'm giving everybody a heads up about this so that, if anybody feels differently, you can know what I know when I know it, and you can act effectively to preserve any issues or any questions you may want to present to me. But my instinct is that Ms. Balasubramanian will certainly be screened from anything on which she has worked, principally including Franciscan Friars.

And as of 9 o'clock Monday morning, she suspended any efforts she has been doing on anything involving any of my cases. So there will be further disclosures because the web is broader than what I'm talking about here. And I know you all know that. And I'm looking at people who I know were law clerks for judges, and you're well aware of the need to be careful about these things. And we're being very careful about it.

But the first step of care is telling everybody what they need to know. So now you know what I know. Okay? So unless anybody has a comment about that right now, I'm prepared to just leave it at this is a disclosure issue, and I leave it 3 to you to react as you believe your client's interests and

 5 ethical obligations suggest you should.
 6
              MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, Brant Weisenberg, on behalf of the committee.
              First, we wish the best of luck to Ms. Bailey --
 9
              THE COURT: That's wonderful.
              MR. WEISENBERG: -- and thank her for all of her hard 10 work on this case and all your others.
11 12
              THE COURT: You bet.
13
              MR. WEISENBERG: Second, we had promised you an answer to your question. It's Rule 8002(b).
15
              THE COURT: Okay. Then I got the number wrong. But it's indicative-ruling-ish? Okay. I got it.
16
              MR. WEISENBERG: And jurisdiction, Your Honor.
17
18
              THE COURT: I got it. Okay. Very good.
              Okay. Is anybody letting Judge Corley know that I will be playing this role? No, not yet?
19
20 21
              MS. UETZ: Your Honor, we have a -- excuse me. I'm 22 sorry.
             We --
23
              THE COURT: Yeah. Yeah. No, I'm looking forward to 24 an answer.
25
              MS. UETZ: We have a status before Judge Corley -- I'm
```

              And I will look forward to seeing all of you on the 1 9th. And unless there's anything else, we're adjourned. All good?

              MS. UETZ: Thank you.
 4
              THE COURT: Okay. Thank you. Thank you very much.
     Nice to see everybody. Okay. Thank you.
 7
              MR. PROL: Thank you.
 8
              THE COURT: Thank you.

              THE COURT: Sure.
 9
              MS. UETZ: I think it will be helpful for context -- 10
              THE COURT: Okay.
11
              MS. UETZ: -- for today. And I promise to take fewer than five minutes.
12
              THE COURT: Okay. And I'll let the committee -- if 13 you want to counter context, feel free, okay? Okay.
14
15
              MS. UETZ: Thanks, Your Honor.
              THE COURT: Um-hum.
16
              MS. UETZ: Your Honor, good afternoon. And if it

19
              THE COURT: You begin with a sigh. That's 20 unfortunate. Okay.
21
              MS. UETZ: Yeah. I have to say, my first sentence 22 that I wanted to say to the Court is that I come to the Court 23 with some regret -- 24
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MS. UETZ: -- to provide this status. But the debtor believes that this is essential for the Court to hear today -THE COURT: Okay.

MS. UETZ: -- as it considers the various motions which are on the docket for today --

THE COURT: Right.

MS. UETZ: -- and things that it will be hearing in the near term. And I will go through so that we have some order of what is pending.

Your Honor, this is as crucial a time as any, to date, in this case. You can tell because I have notes in front of me, and usually I don't. It's crunch time, as they say. And the debtor is mightily trying to avoid administrative insolvency and get to a positive resolution of this Chapter 11 case for all stakeholders.

If the debtor becomes administratively insolvent, there can be no conversion of this case, no trustee will be appointed to fill Bishop Barber's role, we don't think, and this Chapter 11 case will most surely be dismissed absent a settlement. That would be a terrible but necessary outcome for both the debtor and the abuse survivors, but it would be likely, given the lack of consensus.

It might even be a terrible outcome for the insurers who themselves bear great responsibility for where we are today. Although time and money always seem to be on their side, they know they will have to pay at some point -- we believe this -- and all but one has yet to put a firm offer of money on the table.

But worse than what I am describing would be this case pending for four or five years or more. It would burn up assets of the estate, in order to pay professionals, instead of using those assets to pay abuse survivors, still with no resolution.

Your Honor, the following matters are before the Court. The debtor's plan is set for a contested confirmation hearing, a trial beginning the last week of August, and expert depositions are scheduled for the next several weeks. The debtor has answered the committee's adversary proceeding concerning restricted assets, the pared down adversary proceeding. And that matter, I believe, is set for a status or a scheduling conference today. And we await this Court's decision on the motion to dismiss the other adversary proceeding.

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MS. UETZ: The committee has renewed its motion to lift the automatic stay previously denied by this Court. The debtor and the committee are now challenging each other's professional fees, usually the surest sign in a case that things are beginning to come to a head.

The committee has also objected to the debtor paying the same quarterly fee it has paid, which houses its short two-to-three-week extension of time to try to work some things out, the debtor will seek a hearing on that motion as soon as possible.

Your Honor, against this backdrop, where are we on a possible settlement? The committee has not made a single authorized demand or offer of settlement in more than ten months, and the committee refuses to engage in any negotiations with the insurers.

Most recently, I asked Mr. Prol to meet with me about settlement in person, and he agreed to do so. And we were scheduled to meet last Friday afternoon in Detroit, just the two of us. And Mr. Prol canceled that meeting, less than twelve hours after the debtor objected to his firm's fees, and refused to meet with me.

Notwithstanding this, a ray of hope, Your Honor, is that Mr. Prol and I continue to talk. But we seem to be going in circles. And candidly, it's not clear to the debtor where his client's heads are in those talks.

Meanwhile, the debtor, having reached an agreement with the insurers on the subject of an assignment, continues to negotiate and try to negotiate with the insurers, with the help of Mr. Gallagher, to try to get cash settlements. These discussions have gone --

THE COURT: Mr. Gallagher is the mediator, right?
MS. UETZ: Yes.

THE COURT: Got it. Okay.

MS. UETZ: These discussions have gone on for months with some of the insurers. Mr. Gallagher has had countless meetings with the debtor, individual insurers, the entire group. Your Honor, the insurers are not without blame here either. Only one has put a firm offer of any money on the table.

The debtor's conclusion is that the current status of prospects for a global settlement -- and I should have mentioned; I may have -- the committee won't talk to the insurers. The committee wants certain language for an assignment. They won't talk about numbers. So how are we to have that conversation?

This leads the debtor to conclude that right now the prospects for either a global settlement between all the parties, or even a settlement between the debtor and the committee on a dollar amount -- which would still be complicated because we'd still have the insurance issue -- is really near zero.

It is not overstating the facts here, Your Honor, to say it is impossible for my team, for my client to negotiate with this committee. And I say this committee in this case.

I'm not saying, Mr. Prol. I am saying this committee, because it only says no. It will not authorize a settlement demand.

It insists that the debtor repeatedly increase its contribution which we have done multiple times over the course of the last year.

The committee opposes a plan which would have paid more money, on average, from church entities to abuse survivors, than just about any case in the world. The committee who, it appears, is directing its professionals to take actions to drive this debtor to the brink of administrative insolvency, forcing the debtor now to liquidate assets to pay professionals which had been planned for contribution to the plan.

And Your Honor, I mean this. The debtor truly believes this committee wants to actually bankrupt the debtor for good. By this I mean the debtor believes the committee does not want a settlement at any number, at any number with the debtor or at any number with the insurers, and is instead using this bankruptcy case to attempt to close as many churches as possible and dismantle -- and I'm choosing that word purposely -- dismantle the Diocese so it can no longer serve its mission. It appears no amount of money will ever be enough.

So in light of all this, Your Honor, the debtor must seek additional time, if it seeks to confirm its plan, so it can sell real estate to pay admin expenses and get its plan confirmed. The debtor still believes its plan is fair and equitable. This committee is trying to drive the debtor into withdrawing its plan, all the while telling this Court it seeks a global settlement and filing motions previously denied by this Court.

Your Honor, the committee talks a lot about leverage. And sometimes when they bring motions before Your Honor, they talk about leverage. Rather than the substance of the motion and the legal merits of the motion, they talk about leverage. Your Honor, thus far, you have rejected everything the committee has thrown at the debtor.

The Court denied all of the committee's derivative standing motions. The committee didn't budge. The Court denied the first version of the lift stay motion. The committee didn't budge. The Court granted the debtor's motion to approve its disclosure statement. And yes, at the last minute, that was withdrawn by the committee's objection.

THE COURT: Is this a kind of a quiet recusal motion to me or --

MS. UETZ: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm sorry. I'm trying to make a joke.

MS. UETZ: And I'm almost done, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, it's okay.

MS. UETZ: But it's important for this context --

THE COURT: No, I appreciate it.

MS. UETZ: -- to be stated.

THE COURT: I appreciate it.

MS. UETZ: The committee didn't budge after the disclosure statement; it doubled double down. The Court dismissed both of the committee's adversary proceedings, albeit without prejudice, and so far has only allowed one of them to go forward, maybe the second one, I don't know. The committee hasn't budged.

And no matter how you rule on the lift stay motion today, the committee won't budge. If you grant it, they're going to wait for state court trials. If you deny it, that's just another denial of one of the tactics by the committee.

Your Honor, my point is that this committee has been afforded every possible opportunity to explore its theories in this case. And that may be the nature of adversaries in civil litigation. It may well be the nature of adversaries in bankruptcy. But in this case, it has been at great cost to the estate, burning up assets that could otherwise be used to pay claims.

And now, at this time, as you will hear when we address the committee's emergency motion to pay the fees of the Loewenstein firm, it has brought the estate to the cusp of administrative insolvency. And even with that, we can't get a modest extension to talk about some time for what the end game in this case is. And thus, we will be forced to seek emergency approval of the motion for the extension, because, of course, what else would this committee do than direct its professionals to oppose the debtor's efforts to keep this case alive long enough to get to a positive outcome for all of the stakeholders?

If the committee's refusal to agree to any kind of extension right now doesn't prove the committee is trying to drive this debtor out of this court, I don't know what does. Your Honor, at what point is the committee told enough is enough, engage in good-faith negotiations, and go make a deal.

You have said to me, I think twice, definitely once, that this debtor may just not be a good candidate for confirmation of a Chapter 11 plan. But the committee hasn't been told that it needs to engage in good-faith negotiations or risk a cramdown. Unless the committee receives that message, Your Honor, no amount of test cases, no amount of discovery, no amount of adversary proceedings is going to make any bit of difference in this case.

And Your Honor, it is in this context that these various matters, lift stay, motion for extension, the adversary proceedings scheduling order, the quarterly pay for bishops' residence and the administrative offices, professional fee objections, all of this, it is in this context that we want the Court to consider those things.

Your Honor, simply put, although the debtor is asking for a bit more time right now, the end is nigh. And there's no other way to say it. And the debtor deeply appreciates the Court's consideration of this big picture as it decides all of these issues.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you very much. And that states the debtor's position. And no one else on the debtor's side has anything to add, I'm guessing? Okay. Thank you.

All right. Let me let the committee decontextualize, or recontextualize, however you want to put it. Okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: Thank you, Your Honor. Brent Weisenberg of Lowenstein Sandler.

Your Honor, the committee is incredulous about what it just heard. The fact that our constituency, survivors of sexual abuse, who were abused because this entity failed to protect them, is somehow the bad guy, that is beyond the pale. The survivors have a right to enforce and protect their rights. They have done so in good faith throughout this case. The notion that we've stood still and haven't tried to negotiate or settle is just not true, period, hard stop. It is just not true, Your Honor. I'm going to talk a little bit about that.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. WEISENBERG: But --

THE COURT: I'm going to have a very big question for both of you when we get done with this contextual, not something you're going to be able to answer when I ask you, but I want to get it out there so it doesn't stun everyone at the end of the hearing, okay? So I'm sorry to interrupt you. You go ahead.

By the way, I think this is incredibly important for both of you, okay? I'm gratified we're starting in this way, as difficult as I know it is, okay? So have at it.

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, it should come as no surprise that these survivors, who have been lied to for years, who believe they're being lied to now, don't readily accept the debtor's representations about what their assets are. They just don't. And in fact, we were very much looking forward to a trial where we can establish for Your Honor what we've always believed. This is a billion-dollar enterprise, with a "b". And so the amount being proposed to survivors is insulting. It's our job to prove that to Your Honor, and we want the ability to prove it.

We came before Your Honor, and we begged the debtor to go a different path, because we told the debtor, if we go down this path, this is what we're afraid of. Survivors will overwhelmingly reject the plan. And if you continue, and ultimately your plan is not confirmed, we will be at a dead end. Please don't do that. There's a better way. Allow us to lift the automatic stay. And in that way, we can understand what are the value of these cases. Allow us to litigate what is and is not property of the estate. The plan writes itself after that. We wouldn't be left in a dead end. And you know what we were told? No; we're doing it our way.

Now, the debtor doesn't like where they are, and they're blaming it on us. We begged them, please, we know where this is headed. And yet now we're wearing the black hat. It really stupefies me, Your Honor.

Let's go back to November 2023, so that's about eight months ago. We had urged the debtor to take that --

THE COURT: 2024?

MR. WEISENBERG: No, 20 -- Yeah, sorry, Your Honor, 2024. Thank you.

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. WEISENBERG: We urged the debtor to take that approach. And you know what we received in response? Mockery. Even in the debtor's disclosure statement, it mocks us for having an alternative vision of how this case should work. On this road that we've spent with the debtor, running towards a dead end, yes, it's true, we've spent millions and millions of dollars. Money should have been paid directly to the survivors. We didn't ask for this.

But I can tell you this, Your Honor, we are not going to stand idly by and allow a plan to get confirmed over survivors' objection. It has never happened to date, and we are going to do everything in our power to make sure it doesn't happen here. We feel strongly about the facts. We feel strongly about the law. We feel very strongly about the equity.

And so when a debtor is moving forward, saying, I've decided what's fair and equitable for you, and you're going to like it, you better believe we will do everything in our power. There's is no document we won't look at. There's no one we won't depose. There is nothing we will stop at to make sure this doesn't happen. Yes, that costs a lot of money. We didn't want to spend it.

The debtor goes back to the tired trope of the committee is trying to run out the clock and the fees are too much. I don't think I've seen a pleading, in the last ten, that hasn't mentioned my firm's fees being stupefyingly high. That's a trope, Your Honor. You only see half the story.

Do you know what the total fees are, to date, between the two lead firms? Foley is at 13.6 million; Lowenstein is at 9.8. So all of these allegations that we're out-billing Foley and the debtor's counsel, and that's abnormal, it's just not true. But even if it is, we're not backing down on the fact that we will do everything in our power to protect survivors. The harm they incurred is horrific, and we are not going to allow them to have to accept an amount that we don't believe is fair and equitable. And that's based on the totality of the debtor's assets.

Let me just say this, Your Honor. I'm shocked that there would be some speculation on why the meeting between Mr. and Mr. Prol and Mr. -- or excuse me -- Ms. Uetz was canceled.

Ms. Uetz tells only half the story. But we're going to honor the sanctity of settlement discussions. But suffice it to say there's a lot more to that story.

But it's shocking to me that debtor's counsel would stand up here and just share with this Court settlement discussions and actions that are supposed to be privileged, that are intended to be privileged, to allow the parties to engage with one another without fear that whatever they do or don't do is going to be dragged before the Court.

Stated simply, Your Honor, this is revictimization. I understand and appreciate you may think that sounds like hyperbole. It's not. Ten survivors have died thus far during this case. Now the debtor wants at least four more months, at least, because it says, on November 15th, it's going to have a status conference to determine which way to go. That's not good for survivors. They will continue to pass away. Evidence will continue to disappear.

And so it might not surprise you, Your Honor, we are 100 percent against adjourning this plan confirmation trial that the debtor asked for, that the debtor insisted we do on lightning quick speed. And we got on board. We didn't think it was the right thing to do, but we've worked around the clock to make sure we are ready on August 25th to have this issue resolved.

The irony of asking for this adjournment is it's actually going to cost more money if we restart these plan confirmation proceedings. Plan feasibility is going to have to be redone. There's going to be new projections. We're going to have to have the opportunity to review them. We're going to need the opportunity to re-depose whoever the debtor's witness is regarding feasibility. Certain witnesses are going to need to be re-deposed, depending on where we are in three or four months.

That's time and money. All the while, the debtor complains it's administratively insolvent. Not the first time we've heard that, Your Honor. We stood here, in November of 2024, and the debtor said, we can't survive; this case is going to come to an end. And you know what happened? All of a sudden, one of the debtor affiliates paid four-and-a-half million dollars, on a forty-million-dollar note that it hadn't made a payment before. The money just appeared, and four-and-a-half million dollars came into the estate.

Yet now, at the same time, the debtor is complaining that they are administratively insolvent, they can't afford this case. They're paying 700,000 dollars to an affiliate, without a contract, without any evidence whatsoever that they owe that money.

We respect and appreciate that the Diocese has a mission. It does a lot of good for a lot of people. The assertion that we are trying to burn this down is just not true, period, hard stop. It does a tremendous amount of good. And also it has a fiduciary duty to its estate and its creditors not to allow 700,000 dollars to walk out the door without any proof whatsoever that it's actually due.

Seven-and-a-half million dollars during this case has been paid to that entity. That entity owes the estate 40.5 million dollars. Yet now the debtor cries we're administratively insolvent. Well, why did they give seven-and-a-half million dollars to an affiliate that owes us forty million dollars? Why wasn't that pursued? We've been begging for that.

Your Honor, the debtor has had its shot. I think Your Honor said it best. At some point, there's a time when this committee should be given the right to play the protagonist. We've tried it the debtor's way, and they drove us to a dead end.

And so while the debtor may poo-poo the lift stay motion, the debtor may poo-poo some of the other motions that we filed, we see it entirely differently. The lift stay is going to happen regardless of where this case ends. If the case is dismissed, we got a jump start on those cases beginning. If the case is not dismissed, and miraculously, the debtor crammed down a plan on us, the plan provides for the litigation option. The litigation option allows state court actions to proceed. So let's get the show on the road. Every time we say not now, it's just more time wasted. So it's not a matter of if; it's a matter of when those cases get started.

The other ironic piece of this, Your Honor, is we have said numerous times, to the debtor, you are in bankruptcy.

This is not just a balance sheet restructuring; it should be used as an operational restructuring. If you have concluded you have too many parishes, or your business needs streamlining, use the tools of the Bankruptcy Code to slim that down. Sell excess real property.

If you believe you need to close parishes -- we're not telling them to close parishes. That's one of their favorite tropes, that we're telling them they need to close things. No, we are not telling them to close a thing. But if they determine they need to, to recognize the fact that the world has changed, that they don't have as many people coming to mass anymore, this was the opportunity to try to operationally restructure the debtor. And you know what would have been achieved? Tens of millions of dollars.

But now, at the finish line, the debtor says, we need to pause this case because I need time to sell real estate to try to fund this. It should have been done months, if not a year ago, Your Honor. Yet now we're being blamed for that.

Your Honor, all of which is to say, you can tell that both sides are tremendously frustrated. Both sides see the world very differently. Unfortunately, I don't think, at this point, we believe or would agree upon what the sky is. But when I tell you, Your Honor, that we cannot disagree more with the debtor's assertions and characterizations, that's probably the understatement of the year.

Our clients have no desire to shut down the church.

Our clients have no desire to run out the clock. Our clients are owed for horrific harm they suffered as children, from an compression protect them, an entity, ironically, that tecting them, and they failed to.

And then you know what they did? They filed for bankruptcy, and they cried poverty. So it should have come as no surprise, Your Honor, when our client say, prove it; show me your assets. Show me what you have and what you don't have, because until you do, I don't believe you. And I don't think there's anything wrong with that.

And this plan confirmation trial was going to be the opportunity for us to prove to Your Honor that this billion-dollar enterprise is paying a few dollars to survivors. I know 115- sounds like a lot. And the debtor compares it to other cases. Your Honor, that's bogus. The analysis is what are survivors being paid in this case, based upon the law in this Court, the law in this circuit, with the assets of this debtor. What another debtor got in another state, with different statute of limitations, different claims, is of no moment.

So we want to go to trial, Your Honor, because only then will the debtor stop behaving the way it is. If it's given this four-month extension, it's going to be more of the same. We want to get to the point. We want to end this because we feel so confident we can. And then with the lift-stay cases going forward, we'll see where this case goes.

Your Honor, I apologize for all the bravado, but as you can tell, we take this very seriously. We take the allegations very seriously, and are working day and night, through the week, to protect our clients' rights. And the fact that this hearing got started with us wearing the black hat is absolutely astonishing to me. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Hang on one second. Let me get my head around the universe here a little bit, okay? Well, let me just ask some questions. If you're not able to answer them, it's okay. We'll figure out how we go forward without an answer. Is it accurate that there has not been a demand from the committee in the last ten months?

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor --

THE COURT: If you can't answer it -- if it's complicated and sort of yes, sort of no, I understand.

MR. WEISENBERG: It's complicated. And frankly, Your Honor, I don't think it's fair for the parties to be sharing what they've said to one another in settlement discussions. The sanctity of our settlement discussion should allow us to be truthful with one another and sometimes overshare, right?

              THE COURT: Um-hum.

              MR. WEISENBERG: Let's be honest. Cases get settled

              THE COURT: Well, can I make -- and I want you to disagree with me right away if you do, okay? I don't want to know any numbers. I do want to know where the process is. And if you think I'm being simplistic about it, and those two things are just joined at the hip and I shouldn't ask that question, you're free to tell me that.

              MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, I'm struggling. I really would like to answer your question, and to give you as much 11 information as you'd like, but I'm just afraid it's going to --

              THE COURT: The question that I'm asking is, is it 16
     wrong for me to ask whether you've even made a demand?
              MR. WEISENBERG: It depends on how you view your role,
18
     Your Honor.
19
              THE COURT: Okay.
20 MR. WEISENBERG: There are some courts that want to become part of the process --
22
              THE COURT: Um-hum.
23
              MR. WEISENBERG: -- and help facilitate a resolution.
24
              THE COURT: Well, the only question I would ask is, people are telling me we're stuck. There's various things that contribute to being stuck. And there are some things a bankruptcy judge can do about it. There's a lot of things a bankruptcy judge can't do about it. So that's what I'm struggling with now is, is there something I can do?

And I will tell you, quite frankly, we're going to hear a lot of great arguments about the motion for relief from stay. One of the things that I have to think about is, is that going to help us get unstuck? And I'm going to think about it on many planes, but that's one of them. Okay? So that's why I'm asking this question.

And let me just take the next question, okay? If the answer is no, we haven't, is one of the reasons why -- if you can answer this -- that until we have that better sense of what we think the universe is of what they can pay, it's meaningless for us to make the demand. If that's part of the answer, then the next question is, okay, what's in front of me now, or going to be in front of me, that's going to be presented to me, to have me answer that question.

Now, obviously, at confirmation we're going to get into that. I have disposed of some litigation vehicles the committee has had to pursue certain assets that I disposed of them. I don't think anybody appealed me, so they are where they are.

We've got the 053 matter that we're going to talk about today. We also have -- putting aside 053 for a moment, okay, we have what I suspect is a very live 051 matter, where 1 2 we're going to try to answer what the heck is restricted and what isn't. And that could be very complicated, but I assume 3 that was part of the confirmation process. Okay? What is 4 5 beyond those avenues, that I'm not thinking of, that is part of your question of what are the assets of the estate? 6 7 MR. WEISENBERG: So to answer your question 8 succinctly --9 THE COURT: I apologize for the question, because I know it's kind of big and unanswerable, but I look forward to 10 your help. 11 12 MR. WEISENBERG: To answer your question succinctly, what can drive this case to conclusion is keeping the plan 13 confirmation on track. We've said, many times in the past, 14 15 it's the courthouse steps that motivate settlement. THE COURT: Okay. 16 MR. WEISENBERG: We're ready to walk up those 17 18 courthouse steps. And if we lose, that's a risk we're taking.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: It's a monumental risk. At that trial, you will be asked to determine whether thirty-eight million dollars of assets is in fact restricted. 16
              THE COURT: -- let me ask you a really dumb question.
     If you and I can agree, admittedly, at a 30,000-foot level,
18
     what's in play, and you may say this thirty-eight million is in the pot and this real estate is in the pot, I mean, isn't there 19 a world in which you can make a demand and say, I think we've 20 got X chance of success on this, Y chance of success on the 21
     other thing, here's our number?
23
              And if the answer is you can't answer that question, 24 that's okay. I'm just trying to figure out, I mean, how are we 25 stuck, and why are we stuck, and what do we do about it?

 1
     That's all I'm asking, okay?
 2
              MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, Mr. Prol remind --
              THE COURT: I've been in Fort Worth where that's 3 enough to get that phone confiscated.
 5
              MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, Mr. -- 6
              MS. UETZ: I hope my daughter doesn't call, because 7
     she tends to do that in the afternoon.
              THE COURT: That's okay. Yeah, go ahead.
              MR. WEISENBERG: Mr. Prol reminded me that the conversation we're having assumes that it's a simplistic 10 negotiation -- 11 12
              THE COURT: No, I understand.
13
              MR. WEISENBERG: -- on a single issue.
14
              THE COURT: I thoroughly accept that.
15
              MR. WEISENBERG: And so there are a lot of moving pieces.
16
              THE COURT: I thoroughly accept that.
17
18
              MR. WEISENBERG: And so where we believe we left it --
              THE COURT: Yeah.
19
              MR. WEISENBERG: Again, I don't like sharing this, 20
     Your Honor, but -- 21
22
              THE COURT: No.
23
              MR. WEISENBERG: -- you're asking me the questions, 24 and I'm willing to share.
25
              THE COURT: Well, then, if you don't want to, stop.

It's okay. What I'm trying to figure out is can I articulate here a broad picture of what's at stake? And if I do that, does that lead to -- I mean, here's the punchline. If I'm going to start figuring out how to get this thing unstuck, okay, if one part of that is do we have a trial in a month-and-a-half, or do we not have a trial in a month-and-a-half, I know your position. I think I'm hearing Ms. Uetz. Okay.

Another part of that is what do we do to get ready for it? One thing is, well, we pay lawyers, or we don't. Okay? And that's sort of on today, but I'm not sure we're going to resolve it today. We'll see. Okay? Another thing we do is we figure out what's really at -- what are the big questions about what's in the pot and what's not in the pot. That's going to happen. Okay?

With all of that, is there a world in which I can say, if I'm going to help get this unstuck, I'm going to do A, B, C, and D. And one of those things is I'm going to tell the committee to make a demand. Okay? Now, maybe you would tell me I have no right to do that, I have no power to do, that's the worst idea I've ever heard. But that's one of the things I will think about today in getting this thing unstuck, okay?

Does that make sense? And if you tell me, Judge, you can't do it, I mean, I've always respected you, and I'll respect you still if you tell me that. I may not agree with it, but I can imagine why you would say that's not in the 1 cards, Judge.

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, we deeply appreciate you trying to help. So absolutely not, there is nothing on this side that we said --

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: -- no, you can't do that. We need some creative thinking. But standing here today, there are so many disputed issues within the plan, that we believe have a silver bullet to just knock it out, that when you ask us to make a demand, we're looking at this from very different perspectives.

THE COURT: That's my point. That's why I asked all the questions I did. Yeah, I get it, I get it. Okay.

All right. Well, let me tell you that I'm thinking -I'm thinking about this in this way. What can a bankruptcy judge do to help you guys get unstuck? And if that's one of the things I can think about doing, I have it in mind.

Ms. Uetz, do you want to tell me something?

MS. UETZ: I'd like to answer your questions, Your Honor, because I think you have every right to ask those questions. And I'm not going to talk about settlement negotiations, in terms of dollars, or material offers, or facts like that.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MS. UETZ: But what happens in this case, and it's happened twice, in a very big way, and it's happened again today, is Mr. Weisenberger gets up and says something in court that is just not true. And I know it's not true because, in a confidential mediation, I'm presented with the opposite by him and his experts. So to answer your questions, there has been no demand --

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. UETZ: -- in ten months, in any way, shape, or form.

THE COURT: Okay.

MS. UETZ: And the committee had previously tied its adversary proceeding about restricted assets to plan confirmation. When they wanted more time for the restricted assets deep dive, they wanted more time for the plan confirmation, they tied those two things together.

Now we're asking for more time for plan confirmation. I didn't ask to stay the Chapter 11 case. We filed a motion seeking more time for plan confirmation. I can't even talk to the committee, because they won't talk to me about any additional time that might answer some of those questions Your Honor asked about restricted assets.

Mr. Weisenberg gets up and says he has not told the debtor to close churches. Your Honor, that's just not true. I'm going to stop right there, but it's not true. There are documents that show that's not true. You don't get to say things in court, and say anything you want, and then I don't 2 get to challenge it because there's a mediation privilege.

1
     That's just wrong.
 3
              THE COURT: Okay. You know what? I appreciate your passion, but let's stay respectful, okay?
 5
 6
              MS. UETZ: It is wrong to stand up before Your Honor, and make statements of fact, and then say that I can't counter them -- 9
              THE COURT: Okay.
                         -- because of the mediation privilege.
10
              MS. UETZ:
11
              THE COURT: Okay.
12
              MS. UETZ:
                         That is wrong.
13
              THE COURT: Okay. I appreciate your position. Okay?
              MS. UETZ:
                         Thank you, Your Honor.
14
15
              THE COURT: Okay. So given this jolly beginning, there are some things on today that are, I think, slightly more 16 routine.
17
18
              MS. UETZ: Maybe the insurance, but I'm not sure.
              THE COURT: Okay. I mean, I would start with those.
19
     I will tell you, I'm prepared to give you a decision on 053, 20
     but it's going to take a little while because there's some -- I'm going to literally read it to you. So unless somebody has a different idea, I would just as soon put that kind of towards 24 the end, if that's okay, because it's just going to take a few 25 minutes. Okay? But if there's some glimmer of hope that we 3
23

              THE COURT: -- maybe that's something we do.
              Go ahead.
              MR. MOSES: Your Honor, perhaps we should have started 10 essentially identical to something we saw a few months ago, 12

              MR. MOSES: Almost exactly a year ago to the day -- 13

                          Yes.

     and I will not ask all the questions I did one or two times
22 ago, when I read this thing and thought this seems a little 23 overreaching. But it is what it is, right? The industry is 25 will do these things, and it's quite necessary, right?

              THE COURT: All right.
 3
              MR. MOSES: I would represent that this is, in my 4 experience, very much consistent with what these agreements 5 are.
 6
              THE COURT: Yeah.
                                 Okay. Well, I'm not trying to 7 short circuit this. If you had a wonderful twenty-minute presentation, I don't want to cheat you out of that, but --
 9
              MR. MOSES: I will confess that I do not, Your Honor.
              THE COURT: Okay.
11
              MR. MOSES: I'm happy to answer any questions.
              THE COURT: No, I mean, I did review it, admittedly quickly, not having read every word the way I clearly did the 14 last time, when I was so concerned about a few things. But it 15 looks to me, if not identical, all but identical to the mechanisms that have been used in the past and approved. And 16 unless the committee has an issue, or somebody else has an 17 18 issue, the U.S. Trustee, or anyone else among the luminaries 19 here, I'm prepared to approve it.
13
20
              Okay. Hearing nothing, it's approved. Okay?

                                                    Have you 25 discussed among yourselves an appropriate order?

there's, sort of, issues on both sides here in which different 1 2 people are protagonists. So where do you guys want to start? 3 MR. WEISENBERG: I'd like to start with the stay 4 relief motion, Your Honor. 5 THE COURT: Okay. 6 MS. UETZ: Any order is fine, Your Honor. Thank you. 7 THE COURT: Come on up. 8 MR. WEISENBERG: Brent Weisenberg, of Lowenstein 9 Sandler, on behalf of the committee. Your Honor, I've found that we've had or have made the 10 most progress when it feels like you and I are having a 11 conversation as opposed to me just presenting to you sometimes. 12 13 THE COURT: Um-hum. MR. WEISENBERG: I feel like I'm touching on issues 14 15 that may not be what you're thinking about. And so I'd welcome an opportunity to answer all of your questions or any of your 16 questions. Otherwise, I can go through what I had intended to. 17 18 But I really want to make sure we use our time wisely. 19 THE COURT: Well, I found the hearings a few months ago very interesting, and I appreciated much of the 20 21 presentation, including, to be honest, state court counsel's 22 willingness to come up to the lectern and talk to me very 23 directly about where we were on various matters. 24 And at the time -- I mean, there is a bit of a paradox

At the time, when we were not yet under the shadow of there.

an impending plan confirmation hearing, my concern was totally functional. It was not it would be a terrible thing if relief from stay were granted or that it's -- I did not then accept the arguments, that some made, that it was really contrary to the purpose of the Bankruptcy Code, or the automatic stay, in some meta sense, to consider allowing some of these things to go forward.

I didn't think then that it was necessarily "an unfair advantage", for a whole bunch of reasons, including that nobody knows who the lucky folks will be yet, with maybe one exception. I didn't find the fact that it was not yet determined who those folks would be to be, necessarily, a problem. That's up to somebody other than me. It's not my job. And that person, I think, is now considerably more seasoned in their role than they had been.

So none of those things, really, were all that determinative to me. I only asked the functional question, if we can't get these things -- if they're not scheduled to go to trial at any time in the immediate future, sort of, what good is it going to do? And what you might want to -- what I think I got from the pleadings is a different version of what good it's going to do, even as we're in the shadow of a confirmation hearing. So that's where I think you're going to probably most speak to my concerns on what I'm trying to figure out here.

1 MR. WEISENBERG: It does, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: And that helps me focus.

THE COURT: Yeah. Right.

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, ironically, the debtor's request for a four-month adjournment, or standstill, invites the relief the committee is seeking.

THE COURT: Um-hum. If I'm in my old mindset, yes, definitely, right?

MR. WEISENBERG: And whether the plan is confirmed or not, these cases will proceed.

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. WEISENBERG: If we don't allow them to go forward now, they will never move forward. It's somewhat circular. We have to get things started in order for them to get started. And to sit here in stasis for four months, and potentially ending up in a place where the case is dismissed, and failing to use the time wisely, we think would be a grave mistake.

THE COURT: Well, can I -- I apologize, because I did have a question in mind. It just went out of my head for a moment. The debtor and/or the insurers, or maybe both of them, make the point that, in a couple of instances, that may be similar to this and maybe not, bankruptcy judges have not authorized -- have not granted relief from the stay. One of them is some time ago now, I think, in the New Orleans case,

Judge Grabill. But one of them is relatively recent with Judge
 2 Poslusny.
 3
              MR. WEISENBERG: Judge --
              THE COURT: So if you want to tell me why those are not at all applicable here, that would be very helpful. Okay?
 5
 6
              MR. WEISENBERG: Of course, Your Honor. Ironically, 7 we are counsel to the committee in the Camden Diocese case.
 8
              THE COURT: Yeah.
 9
              MR. WEISENBERG: And fortunately for us, the facts are very different than they are here. In Camden, there's a 10 confirmed plan of reorganization. That plan is now currently 11 on appeal before the Third Circuit. The argument made by the 12 insurer -- 13
14
              THE COURT: I'm sorry. May I interrupt you? You went 15 directly there?
              MR. WEISENBERG: Yes.
16
17
              THE COURT: Okay.
18
              MR. WEISENBERG: The argument made by the insurers in Camden was that the bankruptcy court no longer had jurisdiction 19 20 to authorize a lifting of the stay, because that issue was 21 bound up in the plan, which itself was before the Third Circuit.
23
              And so the Court initially denied the application to 24 lift the automatic stay because it didn't have jurisdiction.
25
     It did go further. And it said, even if I had jurisdiction, I would deny the motion because the committee doesn't have standing.

Your Honor, I think, in this jurisdiction, that's not an issue. There has not been a single bankruptcy court in California that has raised the issue of whether the committee is the right party or not to be making this motion.

You'll hear otherwise. And our response is, of course the committee has standing. We are not advocating for any one survivor. We're advocating for a process. It's a process that we believe benefits the entirety of the estate. That is well within the kinds of issues that a committee could weigh in on.

And so Judge Poslusny is somewhat on an island there regarding whether the committee has standing or not, again, especially given where we are where. In the San Francisco case, in Sacramento, I believe, there was a stipulation agreed to by the debtor and the committee about lifting the stay.

That issue has never been confronted even -- Your Honor, I don't want to put words in your mouth, but even in the first round, that was not raised as an issue that would be a fatal flaw in the request that the committee made, that being that the committee didn't have standing to even raise the issue before you.

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. WEISENBERG: So we have to get started. Again, whether we get started and the plan is confirmed, or not, we are going to move forward.

In the Franciscan Friars case, which Your Honor is well aware of, we have trial dates for the cases that were released. Or excuse me, the better way to say is the cases that were allowed to proceed in state court. That will drive settlement, undoubtedly.

I like the way Your Honor said it in the Friars case, which is the automatic stay is a tool, and we should figure out how to use that tool best in order to facilitate what the Bankruptcy Code intends. Thus far, it's been used as a stop sign, and it hasn't led to success. And what we're asking for Your Honor to do is allow us to use that tool to put all of the parties at risk of winning or of losing.

And Your Honor, it's always advertised to you that it's a one-way street. That's not the case. There is the very real possibility that, for whatever reason, a survivor's claim may not be sustained. Or the damage may be something that we all believe is de minimis. That is a risk we're willing to take. But there's a risk on both sides. That's where people settle.

It's telling, Your Honor, that none of these cases have gone to trial yet. Since the opening of the window, not a single diocese case has gone to trial. They've all settled. Obviously, in a number of them, they also filed a bankruptcy. But they tend not to go to trial.

And in clergy 3, there were seven cases that went to trial. In turn, all fifty-four of the claimants against the Oakland Diocese settled. Bellwethers work, Your Honor. There is a reason why the state court entered an order setting forth what the procedures would be for setting bellwether cases. And it's been done both in the Northern District and the Southern District. It's used frequently in this state to drive settlement. It is a commonly recognized way in which mass tort cases are resolved. So this is not some novel idea, Your Honor, that we've cooked up. We're following a well-worn path to help resolve this case.

One second, Your Honor. Thank you.

So we talked about Friars and the fact that those cases have a trial date. I believe the trial date is sixty days apart, beginning in March, running through April.

Had we lifted the stay previously, we would have been well on our way to having those trials imminent. And we appreciate and respect Your Honor's ruling. But now things are different because, again, we can never get closer to the goal line unless we start running. And now's the time. It's absolutely vital for survivors, some of whom continue to pass away -- we lose evidence. We need to drive this case to conclusion, and we believe this is a meaningful way to do it.

And you know what, Your Honor? If ultimately it doesn't succeed, and this case is dismissed, which is not a result that we want, the cases will have been moving because they'll be moving anyway post-dismissal.

To be clear, and I want to say it again, we are not looking to drive this case into dismissal. But if it happened, this is merely a head start. But again, even if the plan is confirmed, it's a head start. So that's important.

I think Your Honor recognized that we come before you with very different facts as well. We now have a state court judge who has been there for, I believe, at least six months, with no indication whatsoever that he is going anywhere. He has indicated that he will move the trials expeditiously. There has been some squabbling back and forth about what he meant and whether we were citing that in isolation or not, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Um-hum. Um-hum.

MR. WEISENBERG: Our reading of the transcript -- and Mr. Simons (phonetic) was there -- it was in direct response to a question about what would happen if the Oakland Diocese cases were released for trial. And the response was, I would move them expeditiously. That's all we can do, Your Honor, is ask the question. And that was the response.

And if you like, Mr. Simons is here. We brought him with us today, in the event that you have any questions. But as we stand here, this is not where we were back in November. These cases will move. These cases, now more than ever, need to move.

While I look through my notes, if you have any other questions, Your Honor, please.

THE COURT: Not at the moment.

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, I've spoken thus far about marching up the courthouse steps, but that's not entirely true in the sense that there's actually an advantage even earlier in the process. It's not just that trial is the linchpin to settling. It's the long march. And so pre-trial motions, having the opportunity to depose experts, that's when people start changing opinions and start having to get real about their case.

And so even getting that process started, we don't have to have our eye on what we have to get to trial. No. We can see the case develop. The other side can see the case develop. People's opinions, and willingness to accept risk, change as they learn more. And that's what's vital to this process.

One more point, Your Honor. The insurers argue that the relief we seek is meaningless because we're just going to get it under the plan. We're barking up the wrong tree. Why don't you just accept the litigation option that's granted to survivors under the plan? Why do you need the relief now? And the answer is because the two are not comparable.

As we've argued before, Your Honor, the litigation option changes, dramatically, the state law rights of survivors. It strips survivors of bad-faith rights. In turn, an insurer could play with its insured's money and say, I'm not 3 going to settle, with no repercussions whatsoever. And as we 4 know, insurance companies have deep pockets. Survivors don't 5 6 have time on their side. And so, without that ability to hold 7

 2
     the insurers accountable, it's not a fair fight.
              THE COURT: I probably shouldn't ask you this, but I really can't resist. We had a fair amount of discussion, in the context that I am never going to decide the issue, what the effect of confirmation would be. And my recollection was there was a robust disagreement about that. Are you telling me
 9
13 there's no longer a robust disagreement, or are you just saying, in the worst of all, in the nightmare scenario -- 14
15
              MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor --
16
              THE COURT: -- we lose these rights?
              MR. WEISENBERG: -- there's still a vehement
18 disagreement about what the effect of confirmation of the plan 19 is.
20
              THE COURT: Okay.
21
              MR. WEISENBERG: If the insurers are right -- 22
              THE COURT: Yeah.
23
              MR. WEISENBERG: -- then a survivor will not have the 24 ability -- 25
              THE COURT: Okay.
                                 I got it.
```

MR. WEISENBERG: -- to hold an insurer accountable for failing to settle in their favor.

THE COURT: I got it, I got it, I got it.

Okay. Thanks.

MR. WEISENBERG: Compare that to allowing the lift stay cases to go forward. In that instance, everyone's rights stay the same. Good-faith rights, to the extent they exist, remain the same. All the insurers' rights, defenses, and claims stay the same. Same on the survivor side.

So you can see, Your Honor, it's not apples to apples. There is a very big difference between allowing these cases to go forward, under the litigation option under the plan, versus lift stay. They are not the same. And that's why the insurers are oh so comfortable saying, Your Honor, what's the problem? We already gave it to them. It's in the plan. No, a very different version of allowing the cases to proceed is in the plan, one that we vehemently object to.

Last point. We have been accused of having failed to lift -- or excuse me, having failed to name the cases that will move forward. Obviously, Your Honor, that was on purpose because, had we named the cases, the allegation would be that we cherry picked the cases to benefit state court counsel and certain survivors over others. And so, when we filed the first lift stay motion before you, I recall, in our preliminary statement, we said we are specifically not putting our hands on the scale, because we do not want to be accused of trying to cherry pick.

And so it's an impossibility that we can name the cases. It is not our decision. The state court will decide that under its order approving bellwether cases. So we were damned if we do, damned if we don't. We opted for the better sense of valor by saying we're not going to put our thumb on the scale, no one's going to know what the cases are. We all share in the risk that hopefully the state court gets it right.

THE COURT: Well, you can make arguments there, right?

I mean, whoever makes those arguments can make them, to Judge Chatterjee, about what the right universe is.

MR. WEISENBERG: Exactly.

THE COURT: And that happens there. That is not my affair; that's his and anybody who's arguing in front of him. Got it. Okay. Thank you.

MR. WEISENBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you very much. Okay.

The debtor and the insurers are both opposing, so who wants to go first?

MR. MOSES: That would be me, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MOSES: For the record, Your Honor, Shane Moses for the debtor.

Good afternoon. As the Court is well aware, and has already been addressed, we were here before, some six months ago, on the committee's first request for the exact same relief that it's again requesting today. The Court denied the committee's motion then. We believe you should deny it today. We understand, certainly, that the prior decision was without prejudice, and that the Court made it clear that the Court would entertain --

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. MOSES: -- a renewed motion if changed circumstances merited it.

When we were here before, both parties, I think, thoroughly briefed the specific legal issues, the Curtis factors. I'm happy to address any questions that the Court has about any of that. But I think a different focus makes sense today. And I think that's reflected, honestly, in the briefing on both sides on this.

Because of where we stand procedurally, I would suggest the question for today is where -- and because that was considered before, and because of the Court's prior ruling, I think the question today is whether something has changed, between six months ago and now, that would justify a different approach than the Court took then. Unsurprisingly, I suppose, we think the answer to that is no.

So to go through a little bit of where we are, where we've been, and what the circumstances are, relative to where they are, where they were then. When we were here before, we were in the heat of litigation regarding the disclosure statement. We heard similar arguments about how the debtor's plan was dead on arrival and the disclosure statement could never be approved.

But the disclosure statement was approved. It was sent out for voting. As has been pointed out, based on the committee's strong advocacy, perhaps, the survivor class voted heavily against the plan. On the other hand -- so we know that. But on the other hand, we also know that two other classes voted in favor.

We're not here to argue plan confirmation. I think that's one of the central points I want to make. But I do want to note, the committee has pointed out that they believe that there were flaws with the votes on those two classes. We'll address that when we get to plan confirmation. But we are confident that, in the end, the votes in the impaired Classes 3 and 6 satisfy the requirements of 1129(a)(10).

We've also been through extensive discovery on the plan. And at this point, we've been through depositions.

We're getting ready -- we've had expert reports. We're preparing rebuttal expert reports. We're preparing for rebuttal expert depositions. So the focus of this case, for the past several months, has been on the plan, on the debtor's case for the plan, on the committee's opposition to the plan.

And now, six months after the committee last asked for this relief, when we are headed directly toward plan confirmation -- and we are on both sides, I think. You've heard a lot of frustrations, but both sides, I think, still recognize that the best outcome for this case, by far, is a consensual resolution regarding the plan.

Now we're faced with, out of left field, an argument that we should reopen this or lift the stay to allow these six cases to move forward, and that that will somehow help the plan. But nothing has changed that would make that more so the case now than it was six months ago, when the Court heard this before, and we were in the midst of active litigation about the disclosure statement. We're still disputing the plan, but we are that much closer. We've moved that much further forward. We've had that much discovery. So changing the focus now, based on that, does not make sense.

The other -- to move on from the plan, there's also -we've heard about the state court litigation. The only thing that's really changed in the state court litigation is that Judge Chatterjee has been supervising it for several months now, whereas he was new. I fail to see how that moves the needle on this.

We argued six months ago that one of the principal reasons to deny the motion was the reality that the state court litigation -- that the cases that were selected would not move forward to a point, not reach a point that would inform anything in this case, within a time frame that was meaningful. That hasn't changed, Your Honor, certainly.

And on that point, we've heard -- there were presentations, from both Mr. Simons and Mr. Carlucci, before that the Court heard. Today, the only evidence on that is the uncontroverted declaration of Mr. Carlucci. I will get to that issue.

But what is clear -- and I don't think it's disputed, to be honest. The committee does not dispute, in its reply, what's set forward in Mr. Carlucci's declaration that, as to at least five of these cases, they have not -- they have barely gotten out of the gate. The case was filed. A fact sheet was exchanged. There's been no motion practice. There's been no discovery. They are starting from square one.

And in that circumstance, we're at least a year. And that's from the first trial, in one of those cases. And that's a bare minimum. I mean, it's not realistic to expect that those cases would be selected and that they would proceed to trial in any time that's meaningful here.

And in reply and in their motion, the committee points primarily at a single case, the case of Mr. Woodall. That case is certainly, undisputably, further along than any other case. But again, the reality is -- and again, as set forth in Mr. Carlucci's declaration -- the notion that that's going to trial in the next couple of months is just not right.

There's still expert discovery to be conducted there. There's still expert reports to be exchanged. There's still expert depositions. There's motion in limine issues. And it's also just starting a case that's been paused for two years now. It's going to be at least six months out to trial. And that's not a time frame that moves the needle.

We just heard that the Court -- or, sorry, that the committee -- we just heard a concern from the committee that time and delay is highly prejudicial to the survivors. So it's a little bit confusing to hear now, also, an argument that we should be lifting the stay so that cases can proceed when the first case is more than six months out and other cases are more than a year out.

This case -- what's relevant here is this case. This case does not have that kind of time. Yes, we've asked for -- since we filed our opposition, we've asked for an extension of a couple of months on the confirmation hearing, but that doesn't move the needle on this. It is necessary for all the reasons we'll get to.

But even with the confirmation hearing starting a few more months out, we're still not getting any information from these state court cases. And I'll get to, in a moment, why we don't think it would matter anyway. But if we took the committee's position that somehow these cases moving forward would inform the result in this case, or in settlement, we're not getting there before we're in confirmation.

And I think we've been very clear with the committee, and very clear with Your Honor, that we're either getting -there are only three outcomes here, right? There's a consensual resolution, which seems very far away right now, but we all hope. There is a contested confirmation, when this confirmation hearing does come up, assuming it does. Or there's dismissal. And when we get to that point, we're not going to have any information, if it would even help, from the state court cases.

But that brings me really to the real question, I think. The crux of this matter is whether lifting the stay, and whatever happened there, would make a difference, would actually inform what's happening here. And there's two ways that it could do that. It could inform settlement negotiations or it could inform the plan confirmation fight, right?

It's not going to help the moving toward settlement because, beyond timing, where we're not going to get to a result in a time that helps, a verdict -- in the Woodall case, for example, a verdict tomorrow wouldn't help. It wouldn't inform settlement.

RCBO is in bankruptcy because it can't afford to pay the amounts that would likely result from jury verdicts in these 300-plus cases. That's the reality. It doesn't matter if a verdict was a million dollars, ten million dollars.

That's not what's driving the settlement, and it's not what's driving the plan.

Bankruptcy allows an equitable resolution, it allows an equitable distribution between the survivors, and it allows, either through a plan confirmed over the committee's objection, or through a settlement, it allows an agreement about what, in the context of Chapter 11, is an appropriate amount to pay survivors.

What a jury in California might award in a single claim simply does not change that reality. It doesn't change the ability to get to a result here, Your Honor. If there's not a consensual result, it doesn't. That doesn't matter. We've heard the committee bang the drum about value of claims over and over again.

And I think we've been consistent in saying the value of jury verdicts is not what drives this case. It's not going to inform what's fair and equitable to pay in a bankruptcy case because, frankly, that's not an argument we're making, that we're paying as much as would be received by, or awarded by, juries in all of these cases.

So we're a little confused, frankly, by that single-minded focus. I mean, we heard Mr. Weisenberg say a minute ago -- and I think I might paraphrase this; I hope I get it fairly accurate -- that fairness in this case is based on the law in the circuit, the law in this court, and the assets of the debtor that are available.

The state court cases don't inform any of that, Your Honor. So the question is then what are we actually getting? We're told it will put pressure on the insurers, but the insurers have already consented to a plan where the state litigation, all the litigation, can move forward against them. So I'm not sure that's it. I don't see how a single case, and the potential of a single case, is then going to suddenly make money -- make the insurers start writing checks.

And I guess there's also a lot of risk the other way.

If cases did get to trial, if there were a negative - something happened that affected coverage in a case, what would that do to the potential for settlement in this case? It wouldn't be constructive.

So I think the reality here, Your Honor, is this case has to come to a conclusion, right? And like I said earlier, there's only three outcomes, really two, a confirmed plan or dismissal. And a confirmed plan might be either consensual or a cramdown over the objection of the committee.

We have to get to one of those two results soon. Yes, a little bit later now than we were thinking a couple of weeks ago, because we have to sell some real estate to fund this. But regardless, in a short period of time, we have to get there.

This isn't going to help us get there. This case simply does not have time to wait for state court litigation that's, at best, far out on the horizon and, at best, is not going to provide results that inform settlement here or inform what this Court would rule is fair and equitable or not fair and equitable in a plan.

And I guess I finally want to note one thing before I conclude. I'm going to also check in with my colleague. But the issue did come up of whether or not Mr. Simons might address the Court. And I want to make very clear, when these cases will go to trial is a fact issue. We've submitted a declaration on that. There were prior statements that the Court has considered and I'm sure we'll consider again. But that's a fact issue. If there's going to be testimony about that, we need to set an evidentiary hearing to hear it, not hear it today.

With that, I'm going to check in with my colleague if the Court --

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. MOSES: -- doesn't mind. That's all, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay. Thank you. So some of the insurers have filed pleadings. And why don't we begin with counsel who's here today?

So Ms. Daniels, did you -- it's totally up to you. If you want to defer, that's very elegant.

1
              MS. DANIELS: I don't want to go until --
              THE COURT: Okay. Well, then go ahead then. And then
 3 let me see who among the insurers wants to go ahead and give me their thoughts.
 5
              MR. JACOBS: Your Honor, if I might, for Westport.
 6
              THE COURT: Yeah. You actually filed an objection, 7 right?
 8
              MR. JACOBS: Yeah, we did.
 9
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MR. JACOBS: Let me start with, you asked earlier -- 10 and I think this is relevant to the lift stay motion -- what 11 the Court could do to help untangle this mess. And it's always 12 13 with some trepidation that I tell a judge what he or she can't 14 do.
15
              THE COURT: Well, can I maybe take some of the 16 pressure off? I asked it initially as a philosophy question, not what should I do, what can I do? Okay? So if you want to start answering it in that guise, feel free. And then you can tell me what I should do which is ordinarily what you're doing.
18
20
     Okay.
              MR. JACOBS: So what I can do -- thank you for that.
21
22
     What I can do is tell you what some of the other judges in 23 diocese cases have done -- 24
              THE COURT: Sure.
              MR. JACOBS: -- that I think has been effective.
25
                                                                 One

of the things you could do, and I think maybe you'd need to get the consent of the parties, is ask the parties whether you can speak directly with the mediators about what's going on. That way it respects mediation privilege, and you can get the mediator's direct take on what's going on.

Judge Littlefield is doing that right now in the Albany case. I think he talked to the mediators once, and he's going to do it again, if folks consent. And I don't have authority to do that today for the client, but I would certainly --

THE COURT: Okay.

Honor.

MR. JACOBS: I would certainly talk to them, Your

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. JACOBS: I think it's probably a pretty good idea.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. JACOBS: So that's one thing. A step beyond that, and I think I mentioned this when we did this six months ago, Judge Warren, in the Rochester case, actually mediated with the consent of the parties. I think he required folks to say that they were not going to try and conflict him out before he did it. But everyone agreed, and he came to the mediation. And I'm not going to tell you what happened at the mediation, but I thought it was really effective. And most of the insurers have settled. There's one insurer that hasn't at this point.

So again, I don't have authority to do it today for the client. But if Your Honor would consider mediating the case, along with the mediators, or however you wanted to do it, I think it's something to think about. I think folks would have to consent to it. But in a sticky situation, it can -- I thought it did work in Rochester. So I will throw that out to you as an idea.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. JACOBS: To the lift stay motion itself, so I want to talk a little bit about the legal issues, but I think that it's been pretty well briefed. And frankly, I don't think I would do much better than Judge Poslusny did in his recent ruling. We're counsel in the Camden case as well. Lowenstein has the committee; we have one of the insurers. So I'm pretty familiar with that.

Mr. Weisenberg is right that one of the reasons that Judge Poslusny didn't lift the stay was because the case was on appeal, and he thought that had divested him of jurisdiction. But he went on to give a number of other alternative reasons for the ruling. And I would encourage Your Honor to read that.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. JACOBS: I think he made at least three other points on discrimination. I think Century put in a separate brief here on discrimination. I won't do any better than what they have in their brief or Judge Poslusny.

THE COURT: It's not as if I haven't read it. I was inviting Mr. Weisenberg to tell me why this was different, okay? I get it. You can go ahead.

MR. JACOBS: And then the committee lacks standing; I think you already got that point.

And then we don't have any notice of which claims are actually going to be released, which I think, sort of, as a practical matter, makes a big difference, at least for the insurers because, if they release four to six claims that aren't in my clients' policy periods, like, we don't care. That's somebody else's problem.

So you really need to know which cases are going out and notice so that everyone has an opportunity to comment on it, I think. And with all respect, I think that's actually your role. And with all respect to Judge Chatterjee, that's your job, Your Honor. I think that's what Judge Poslusny said.

On the timing issue, I think, well, the committee is taking the position today that the confirmation trial ought to go forward next month. If that's what the end result ends up being, it seems to me that this is particularly badly timed when everyone would be devoting their resources and time to a confirmation trial. So I know Your Honor hasn't decided the Diocese motion, but if you did go with the committee's position here, I think that is a reason to deny their motion.

And the last thing I wanted to say, and really, the thing -- I come to this last, but maybe to me, at least, the most important thing that I think I could probably add to this discussion is that a lot of the folks on this Zoom are in many of these diocese cases, as are we. We're in virtually all of them. And we have, on behalf of another client, actually settled four of these cases, Your Honor.

I'm happy to report that the Diocese of Harrisburg, Diocese of Rochester, Diocese of Rockville Center, and most recently, Diocese of Syracuse, in front of Judge Kinsella, settled recently. And in none of those cases was the stay lifted so that test cases could go out against the Diocese. It wasn't necessary.

I'm not going to talk about what goes on in the mediation without getting authority. I think the mediation privilege is important. But the absence of the lift stay, I think, tells you a lot about whether it's a driver, or not, of settlements. In some of the cases where the lift stay has actually been granted, I'll tell you, they haven't settled.

And I'm not going to talk about them one by one, because I think I'm going to get too close to violating the mediation privilege. But I was working on one this morning, on the East Coast, where there's a main mediation in the main bankruptcy, and then there are test cases in the state court that have been sent out.

And I'll just tell you, from personal experience, the state court mediation -- we love the state court judge. He's doing a great job. But it has become a total sideshow to the main mediation. I think there is still some hope that the main case is going to settle, but the lift stay in the state court has, if anything, made it more difficult. And it has also taken away time from the professionals who I think should be working on a global resolution in the main case.

And I think, just as a practical matter, Your Honor, the there's a lack of evidentiary basis for this notion that sending out test cases is going to make any difference. I'll tell you, so our some of our clients, they're large insurance companies. We have a lot of data. We're in all of these cases. Honestly, we don't need any more data from individual cases to move these forward. That's not really what the issue is in the mediations.

And I guess I will circle back and conclude with, maybe this is why it might be a good a good opportunity or a good idea for Your Honor to think about either talking to the mediators, or mediating the case yourself, because I think that's really the only way that you may actually see what the problems are here and how to solve them. I think that's all I have.

THE COURT: I appreciate it. Thank you very much as always. Thanks a lot. Okay. Anybody -
MR. JACOBS: Thank you.

THE COURT: Other than counsel in the courtroom, 1 2 anybody else on the Zoom talking? 3 Okay. Come on up. No? 4 MS. DANIELS: Thank you. I want to focus --5 THE COURT: You better remind everybody who you are. 6 MS. DANIELS: Justine Daniels for the Pacific 7 insurers. We're also called Century. 8 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you. 9 MS. DANIELS: Thank you, Your Honor. Regardless of whether or not the confirmation hearing 10 goes forward at the end of August, or on the new date, the fact 11 remains that, even if the stay were lifted today, there is no 12 way the cases would be resolved by that time. 13 14 And let's say the bankruptcy continues after that. 15 What are we going to have? We're going to have six claimants that are well advanced from all the other claimants. 16 people are going to have an opportunity to complete their 17 18 discovery, do their expert reports, and potentially go to trial 19 and have judgments in hand, judgments that they're not going to 20 liquidate, but they will still have those in hand. 21 You are the judge. I don't need to tell you what the Bankruptcy Code says, but Section 1123(a)(4) provides that all 22 members of the same class should be treated in the same way. 23 24 Those six claimants, regardless of how they're chosen, are going to be well advanced in front of everybody, in front of all the others. That's not the equitable treatment that the bankruptcy process envisions.

What's more, what's worse, if they have judge -- to the extent that they secure judgments, how will that impact any form of plan negotiation? Their cases have been tried. They know what those cases are worth. That completely disincentivizes them from participating in the negotiation of the plan. And they're going to stick on insisting on getting much more than the other cases are worth.

Your Honor, I understand that you may have questions about the impact of the discrimination argument, and I'm happy to answer to those today. But it is an issue that was recognized in Camden, in New Orleans, and -- I'm going to mess up the pronunciation of this -- Agana. And it is a very real impact. And that happens regardless of how the cases are selected or when they proceed. So I'm happy to answer any questions you may have.

THE COURT: Help me out with 1123(a)(4), the argument you want to make there, okay? That seems to restrict what, theoretically, the proponent of a plan can do with respect to treatment of claims, right? Is that relevant here?

MS. DANIELS: Yes, it is, because it is emblematic of the ultimate purpose --

THE COURT: Well, let me stop you midway there, okay?

Is it, arguably, not emblematic? Because the point of this is what was found in --

```
THE COURT: And I may not be agreeing with those 1
 2
             So help me out with that. What's the connection folks.
     between 1123(a)(4) that says the proponent of a plan may craft 3 it in this way, but they may not do X? This is not the debtor 4 choosing whether to let people go forward and have relief from 5 stay or not, right? This is somebody who is bitterly opposed to that plan. How can 1123(a)(4) govern that?
 6
              MS. DANIELS: Again, because it's emblematic of the purpose of the Code.
 9
              THE COURT: That may be true, but I mean, this is a 10 fairly limited instance of that, isn't it? I mean, this is 11 telling the debtor or the plan proponent what they can do, 12 isn't it?
13
14
              MS. DANIELS: You're specifically referring to the 15
     Code section?
              THE COURT: Yeah.
17
              MS. DANIELS: Correct, sir.
18
              THE COURT: Okay. So I'm right about that. So 1123(a)(4) is not a very good support for your argument, right?
20
              MS. DANIELS: No, I disagree, Your Honor.
21
              THE COURT: Okay. All right. We're going to disagree takes these six claimants and puts them well ahead. It puts 1 2 them well ahead of all the others. And again, that's going to have even -- that's going to have an impact both on plan 3 negotiations as well as putting them out in advance of all the 4 other claimants. 5 6 THE COURT: Okay. Okay. Thank you very much. 7 Anything else you want to tell me? MS. DANIELS: I think that's it for now. 8 9 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you very much. 10 MS. DANIELS: Thank you. THE COURT: Okay. What I would like to do -- we've 11 been at this for a while. I'd like to let Mr. Weisenberg give 12 13 me his last thoughts, as the proponent here, and then take a 14 break and let me think for a minute. I mean, like, five 15 minutes, okay? 16 So is that acceptable to folks? 17 Okay. Come on up. 18 MR. WEISENBERG: Thank you, Your Honor. Brent Weisenberg, of Lowenstein Sandler, on behalf of the committee. 19 20 The committee is not going to address the parade of 21 horribles marched out by the insurers. We've heard them on countless occasions. And Your Honor has most recently heard 22 23 them in the Franciscan Friars case. The sky is not falling. 24 Why do we need bellwether trials? We need bellwether trials, in addition to the reasons I've given you, to help value claims. Even under the plan itself, Your Honor, remember, we've had a lot of colloquy about what is a claim's value and how can you determine if the treatment being provided to survivors is fair and equitable unless we have a sense of what the claims are worth, in the aggregate, under state law.

How else can you possibly determine if 115 million is fair and equitable, if we don't know what the value of the claim is? If the claims were worth 10 billion dollars and the debtor was proposing to pay 115 million, that looks very different than if the claims are worth 200 million. And so these cases are important to that end, in and of itself, in addition to all the other reasons we've shared with you.

Ironically, Your Honor -- and we put this in our papers -- the Diocese participated in selecting and advancing the cases in the state court through the bellwether process. In fact, Mr. Woodall's case was selected by the debtor. So this sudden notion that all of a sudden bellwethers are a fool's errand and don't work is completely belied by the fact that the debtor itself agreed to that process in the state courts.

Your Honor, you've also addressed the notion that the insurers are entitled to notice of particular cases in the Friars case. Your Honor considered that, did not ultimately rule on that issue, and again, we've very particularly chosen not to pick the cases so as to avoid being tarred with favoritism.

Your Honor, at the last hearing on the original motion, you felt it helpful, or I believe you found it helpful to hear from Mr. Simons. He was truthful, he was transparent, and the Court found that everything he had to say was helpful, even in the sense that you used that information to rule against us. We would like, Mr. Simons just to come up to provide some additional information about where things stand in the state court. But obviously we leave it to you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MOSES: Your Honor, I need to reiterate the objection I made to that.

THE COURT: I appreciate that.

Let me ask a couple questions, okay, and then think about Simons. I know it's very hard to, sort of, quantify this, but one of your theses is we don't have to get to trial resolutions to have this do some good, right? Give me the sense of that again.

MR. WEISENBERG: Sure. Your Honor, our hypothesis has been that the threat of trial forces people to get real about the pros and cons of their lawsuit. It is not just being in the physical courthouse when parties have to get real. It's the process. It's the process of learning additional information about your case and about the other side's case. That process includes interviewing witnesses, having depositions, having information shared through discovery. It is through that process itself that parties have to look inward and say what are the risks and rewards of trial? Because until the parties are forced to think hard about that, we all have bravado about our cases.

Everyone thinks they have a bulletproof case that they're going to win. But once we're marching towards trial, both sides will have to recognize that, if there are flaws in a witness' testimony, or a particular priest cannot be placed in a particular location, that's problematic. But right now, no one has to worry about that because nothing has started.

And so it is not just the trial itself which is the springboard from which settlements arise; it's marching down that path where people start to get real. And until we focus the parties on getting real, neither the debtor nor the insurers have any reason to be realistic about claim value.

The insurers say they have plenty of information from across the country about claim value. I don't know if that necessarily includes California. I know that it doesn't include an Alameda County jury recently in an Oakland Diocese case. I think that's more indicative of what value is.

And so the parties can have all of the data in the world, but what matters is what's going to take place in the context of the Oakland Diocese state court actions. And like we said, Your Honor, last time, fortuitously, allowing just seven cases to go forward helped resolve fifty-four.

THE COURT: One last question, are you agreeing with me on 1123(a)(4), that that goes to what a plan can say, as opposed to what you can say to try to change the dynamic here?

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, that's exactly right.

And that's why we began with not trying to shoot at straw men.

We were very specific in the relief we requested.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. WEISENBERG: Nobody is seeking to classify these claims under a plan. That is a question for another day.

These claims --

THE COURT: Well, and to -- sorry to interrupt you, but if you think about the stay as something both larger, and the whole point of it is it's malleable, that's the point of this stay. I mean, it begins with sort of a ham fisted, thou shalt not do all these things.

But I mean, I said this in another context once,

Congress used four verbs in telling me what I can do with the stay, right? The whole point is it's malleable. And the whole point of that is that, were I to grant some version of relief here, we're just now in a different world. And maybe there will be a different plan. Who knows?

MR. WEISENBERG: Exactly right.

THE COURT: That's why 1123(a)(4), to me, just is -- it's a very important issue. It's just a different one, in my

THE COURT: Okay. I know there was there was a pending request re: Mr. Simons. I don't think I need to hear it, okay? So I'm ready to give you guys my thoughts. Is anybody not here who needed to return? I guess maybe not.

Okay. I'm goi5 line. And here's my thinking about the concerns and issues that were raised by the debtor and by the insurers. And by the way, thanks to all of you for your very good arguments here.

First of all, going back to something that's very fundamental here, the function of the automatic stay in a bankruptcy. It is obviously a fairly bedrock concept in a bankruptcy, and it's meant to facilitate, at the outset, in the broadest possible way, all the opportunities to reach either a fair liquidation or a feasible reorganization. And it does cut pretty broadly.

In cases recently, it has been stretched even more broadly. I'm not one of the judges who easily has granted those kinds of requests, but I'm certainly aware that, in many cases, the automatic stay has been stretched, or something like it has been stretched, to have a lot of other ripple effects in cases involving one debtor and possibly more than one liable party. But put that aside for a second.

The whole point of the stay, to me, is that it is a tool, and it is malleable, and it has different relevance at different times of the case. And that's particularly important because, when you think about why a bankruptcy is different from your everyday litigation, it's different in a lot of ways that really inform the flexibility that I think you have to bring to these questions.

When we're talking about litigation, we're talking about a vehicle through which, in the simplest terms, a plaintiff brings an action about a subject matter against a defendant and asks for relief. Now, there may be amendments, and there may be some complications, and things may shift a little bit, but you begin that exercise with a pretty good idea of what the parameters are. And they're defined by the plaintiff, as the protagonist, at the outset of the case. And one works one's way through, typically on a bunch of historical questions, what are the facts, what are the theories of liability, whether the theories satisfied or not? What's the outcome? What's the remedy?

Bankruptcy is entirely different in all kinds of glorious ways, the first of which is it begins with a request for relief that's a petition. And the things that define the problem, initially, are the pleadings that the debtor puts forth that indicate who's owed money, who has an interest in the case, what are the assets of the debtor? What can we do about this is sort of implicit in all that.

We define the issues as we go in a bankruptcy. That's the whole point of Chapter 11, is that we begin with a rough idea of what the landscape is and what the dynamic is, but we shape that as we go to get to the end of a fair liquidation or a feasible reorganization. The stay helps that by allowing that to happen as much as is feasible. There are times when annulling or modifying or terminating or restricting the stay helps that.

So we have to think about the stay, in my view, as something that is malleable. And the whole point is that it's malleable and flexible, and it's a tool to help us get to this end of a feasible reorganization, if we can have it. For that reason, I simply -- I don't believe that the standing argument really is much of a prohibition here, because I think the consideration of how the stay plays out is not just a particular question of whether this creditor can do a certain thing.

It's also necessarily a much broader question of what ought to happen in different places and how can the ability to go forward in other places, and have other courts do other things, how will that inform our process here? And I think that is a question that can certainly be brought by a committee whose purpose is to try, among other things, to regulate the process whereby we're going to get to a solution.

So I don't think, to the extent that standing would be an impediment here, because you would expect a particular party to ask for relief from stay -- they may. But the fact that it is a more general and generic request by somebody who is looking at a case, and has a different theory on how it ought to progress, I think is not a standing problem for me. So I'm not going to deny this on standing grounds.

I'm also not going to deny it on what I'll just say, generically, are 1123(a)(4) grounds. The whole point of the motion for relief from stay is that we need to have a slightly different dynamic here. We need information, and we need to have people realize what some risks are that they're not realizing right now. I think that's quite true.

1123(a)(4) absolutely is indicative of a bankruptcy purpose that, when we start classifying claims, and we start telling people how we're going to treat them, and as we put that on the old plan of reorganization express, we end up in a fair place.

The question of relief from stay is a different question, because implicit in that is maybe we have to do this a little bit differently. Maybe there's another plan, or maybe there's something else we have to think about. And the committee is not a plan proponent. So to the extent 1123(a)(4) is restrictive, it's really most obviously restrictive on plan proponents.

And we don't know where this is going to end up.

That's the whole point. We don't know where this is going to end up, and we don't know how much granting relief from stay is going to help here. I tend to think it will be significantly helpful, and I'll get to that in just a second. So for all of those reasons, those objections are not objections that I think are showstoppers here.

I also don't think, at the end of the day, that there is enough of a discriminatory factor, generally, here to be a showstopper. What we would be allowing to have happen is the people who will be making decisions about what goes forward, and when it goes forward, and how it goes forward, were there no bankruptcy, are going to be doing that. And they know how to do it.

And Judge Chatterjee now has been on the job for six months, and I think I have no reason not to trust his judgment, and even more profoundly, not to trust all of you who would be in front of him telling him how he should be weighing and balancing all these factors as he makes whatever wise judgment he's going to make. You're all going to have that opportunity. And I think that is very much his bailiwick and not mine.

I also think that whether you actually get to actual judgments, between now and the time when a plan otherwise would be confirmed, maybe that's unlikely. Maybe it's only likely if things were to settle. And things settle because people want them to settle. So for all of those reasons, the antidiscrimination issues, I think I -- it's not that I don't take them seriously. I don't think they're terribly implicated here, for all of those reasons.

And then lastly, is there cause? I think there is.

It may seem paradoxical that I'm more likely to find that now than I was six or seven months ago, but six or seven months ago we were in the somewhat less defined place of there's a plan out there, people are talking, there's objections, maybe we end up with something resolved, maybe we don't.

And my instinct, at the time, was to be much more mindful of how quickly relief from stay was going to turn into something like a trial and a verdict and a judgment or an actual determination. I'm not so stuck on those premises now. It's absolutely clear to me that other good things could come from the ability to advance some aspects of the litigation here, that if it does happen that something is tried relatively quickly, I think it can only help.

I think it is also not inconsistent with the plan, the ultimate purpose of which is to say, if you don't like the resolutions you can get consensually, you can go ahead and liquidate your claim. All this is doing really is doing that without some of the restrictions that the plan would put on that process. And in my mind, there's no reason not to begin that process, even if humbly and small and modestly now. I think it's a good idea.

And I also think -- and again, this is not something one can easily quantify -- that it's one thing to look at that process in the context of a plan, the confirmation of which is not certain and the outcome of which is considerably down the road. I don't think that that process necessarily focuses the attention of all of the parties the same way that allowing something to begin right now will have.

And I believe that allowing someone to begin right now will have a great effect and a great help in focusing people on the need to come together as much as they can, to express what their differences are, and to try to get a resolution here that might even be consensual. There's an old saying that nothing focuses attention like a firing squad. And to some extent, to the extent we're headed toward a plan confirmation hearing so far, still at the end of August, I realize this is going to create additional pressures on everybody. I realize that you're already probably straining to do your jobs well, as I know you always do. But I think that adding this factor, in my mind, can only help, whether it's information to be had, whether it's resolutions by settlement, or whether it's just that sense that we all need to be worried about the uncertain outcomes here.

All of those reasons suggest to me that those are good cause reasons to lift the stay. And that's what I'm going to do for the reasons stated on the record. Okay? Don't try to encapsulate everything I just said. But I firmly believe that's the right answer here. All right?

Okay. Thank you very much. And thank you all for 1 2 your good arguments. All right. And I don't know if there's anything in the order that needs to address when people go see 3 Judge Chatterjee. I mean, I leave that to you folks to work 4 5 through logistics. 6 Okay. What should we do next? What's next on the 7 agenda? MR. PROL: Judge, I think the two remaining things are 8 9 the motion with regard to the payment to the Cathedral Corp. and the fee issue. I think I prefer to address the Cathedral 10 motion first. I think they're kind of --11 THE COURT: I'm sorry. Which motion? 12 13 MR. PROL: The motion regarding the payment to the Cathedral. 14 15 THE COURT: Okay. Is that you? 16 MR. PROL: That's me, Your Honor. 17 THE COURT: Okay. Come on up. 18 MR. PROL: Before I address that, Your Honor -- Jeff Prol, Lowenstein Sandler, on behalf of the committee -- Your 19 20 Honor asked Mr. Weisenberg a question, at the inception of the 21 hearing, about whether or not the committee had made a demand. 22 And if I could just backtrack and address that very, very 23 briefly. 24 Without violating the mediation privilege, I can say 25 that there was some back and forth in mediation. We made a demand, there was a counter, I think we came back and countered, and the debtors clearly made the last offer. The committee has not moved from the demand that it put on the table, which probably was ten months ago or so when the mediation broke down.

And the reason for that, Your Honor, is, based upon the law and the facts as we understand them, we don't believe that we should move. And it kind of underscores the ruling that Your Honor just made with regard to stay relief and the reason we're opposing an adjournment of the confirmation trial. Litigation prompts parties to move.

The debtor apparently shares the same position because they haven't moved in almost the same amount of time. And all of a sudden now we're feeling -- we're both feeling the pressure of an upcoming trial. And Your Honor --

THE COURT: Are you standing up to object to something, Ms. Uetz, or --

MS. UETZ: I'm just confused if we're talking about mediation or not talking about what we said in mediation. I'm confused about the mediation privilege and what we're sharing with Your Honor. So if we're sharing mediation privileged information with Your Honor, I'm happy to address that as well. That's my point.

THE COURT: Well, in your mind -- look, I asked the question whether the committee had -- whether your statement that they hadn't made an offer in ten months were true. I got a quasi answer to that. I'm getting a contextualized answer to it now. I can cut this off for now.

Why don't we just jump to the fee issue for now, Mr. Prol, okay? We can come back to this if we need to.

MR. PROL: Sure. So Your Honor, as I said -- this is not the fee motion, Your Honor. It's the motion where we object to the payment by the debtor --

THE COURT: Yeah, go ahead.

MR. PROL: -- of approximately three quarters of a million dollars.

THE COURT: Go ahead. Yeah.

MR. PROL: And these two motions really go to the heart of our concerns with where we are with regard to the status of this case. The debtor is pleading poverty, claiming that they're initially insolvent. And they've taken two steps recently that address this.

One is they're proposing to pay approximately 725,000 dollars to CCCEB, which is the owner of the Cathedral property. And they claim that it's rent or use and occupancy charges for the next quarter. They have not produced a written lease. And they've acknowledged in their papers, again, that they simply can't find it.

Over the past two years, they've paid 7.56 million dollars to CCCEB for the use of these premises. But that occurred during a period where we were working together towards a consensual plan of reorganization. We did have concerns, and you can see, from the debtor's pleadings, that we asked questions, chose not to object in the spirit of working towards a consensual resolution of this case.

But the case has now changed dramatically. The debtor decided to attempt to cram down a plan over survivor objections. That plan is on the ropes. We believe we have strong arguments why that plan should not be approved. And as I said, we look forward to that trial where Your Honor will call balls and strikes. We may win some. We may lose some. They'll win some. They'll lose some.

Coming out of that trial, we'll have more clarity in terms of our positions. But under the circumstances now, it's fundamentally unfair for this debtor, who claims it doesn't have sufficient assets to pay administrative claims -- it recently filed, and Your Honor approved a motion, that we settled, to modify the administrative fee order, so that the professionals in the case are taking additional risk in financing this case. But yet the debtor wants to continue to pay an affiliate who owes forty-one million dollars under a defaulted loan. So with interest, I don't know what that real number is.

But CCCEB owes over forty-one million dollars to this estate. And yet here they stand saying let us pay them three-quarters of a million dollars to pay the rent for the next quarter, with no evidence before the Court in terms of what that rent is, where that money's going.

We argue in our papers that this is not an ordinarycourse transaction. There's no written agreement. It's a transaction involving an insider and an affiliate, and that transaction requires heightened scrutiny. But even if it is ordinary course and the business judgment standard applies, we think Your Honor should interject yourself here. Again, it's simply not fair that an affiliate with an administrative claim is getting paid when other administrative creditors are being told there's no more money, we need to slow down payments.

As Mr. Weisenberg said in his opening remarks, we predicted this. We did not want to go down this road of this contested confirmation. We were aware, we were concerned that the fees would escalate. They always do when you face trial, especially on an expedited schedule.

The debtor responds, basically, complaining that the committee has been aware of this for two years and hasn't objected previously. I explained why we didn't object previously. But we think this issue is ripe to be addressed now.

They also criticized the committee for filing this motion and not attempting to work it out with them. But as you can see from both their papers and our papers, we did write to them, before the motion was filed, asking them to commit to not paying this until it was addressed by the Court. And implicit in that, I think, was a willingness to talk. We've always been willing to talk. We got no response. That was the reason the motion was filed.

They also argue that the Cathedral, CCCEB, has no resources to pay the loan. But again, as Mr. Weisenberg pointed out, back in November of 2024, when the debtor was complaining that it didn't have sufficient resources to continue to fund this case, CCCEB came up with four million dollars, or so, to pay.

And this is part of the problem in the case. The debtor here claims that all the entities are separate and distinct, but when money needs to move, it seems to find a way to move. I'd also reference the transactions prior to the petition, where the debtor transferred -- and we had a debate about what that transfer looked like -- funds to the OPF and then the loan was made back. We essentially see this, Judge, as a crisis of their own making.

CCCEB also -- they also complained that, if this rent payment is not made, CCCEB won't be able to make payment of its various expenses. And again, that's an unfortunate circumstance of a Chapter 11 case. We've urged the debtor to use this Chapter 11 case not only to seek to discharge survivor claims but also to commit to a financial restructuring. If the debtor can't afford to drive a Cadillac, it's got to stop driving the Cadillac.

And finally, Your Honor, there's simply no reason why, if the debtor is under financial constraints, that it should be paying expenses a full quarter in advance. If Your Honor is inclined to allow these expenses to be paid, we would request that Your Honor carefully scour the expenses that are supposed to be paid, to make sure that they're absolutely necessary and required and perhaps dole them out on a monthly basis or even on an as-needed basis so that the payments are made, not a full quarter in advance, but as they absolutely have to be made.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. PROL: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

Who wants to address this? Okay.

MR. MOSES: Your Honor, Shane Moses, Foley & Lardner, for the debtor.

THE COURT: By the way, can I just say for the record, everybody is in agreement that we should talk about this now.

It was brought up somewhat precipitously, and nobody's

21 sandbagged. Everybody okay?

MR. MOSES: I assume, from Mr. Prol's statements, that he's okay.

MOSES: A great deal -- a substantial part of the 9 funding for construction came from the debtor. And that was structured in the form of a loan, which is where the forty-one 10 11 million --THE COURT: Well, so it's called that. And I'm not 12 trying to take issue, but just from my real-world perspective, 13 14 is there a reasonable explanation on any theory that's going to 15 get paid back someday, and if so how? I mean, is CCEB going to 16 generate revenue? It's going to pay that loan back? MR. MOSES: Well, not to get too far into the plan, 17 18 Your Honor, but the answer to that, and this is discussed at some length in the disclosure statement, is no. 19 THE COURT: Yeah. That's what I thought. 20 MR. MOSES: It doesn't have a source of revenue. 21 22 THE COURT: That's why I'm asking. Okay. Yeah. 23 MR. MOSES: That's the reason why -- we've heard a lot 24 about why isn't this loan monetized somehow. The reason is 25 because --

 1
              THE COURT: That's what I thought. Okay. Thank you for confirming what I thought.
 3
              MR. MOSES: The debtor's option to monetize it would be to foreclose.
 4
 5
              THE COURT: All right. Thank you. I'm sorry for the interruption. Go ahead.
 6
              MR. MOSES: Yeah. Oh, yeah. No, I want to continue 7 8 that thought because -- 9
              THE COURT: Yeah.
              MR. MOSES: -- the debtor's only option to recover on 10 that loan would be to foreclose on the cathedral.
11 12
              THE COURT: Right. Right.
13
              MR. MOSES: That's why we propose --
              THE COURT: Right.
14
15
              MR. MOSES: -- the clean version of that in the plan.
16
              THE COURT: Right.
17
              MR. MOSES: It's also why -- it ties to why we can't just -- the debtor can't just offset -- 18
              THE COURT: Yeah.
19
              MR. MOSES: -- this, this payment, this funding, 20 against the debt that's owed on the loan -- 21
22
              THE COURT: Right.
23
              MR. MOSES: -- because -- and this is tied directly to 24 the fundamental issue. I heard Mr. Prol say, well, it's an 25 unfortunate circumstance when another party can't pay its bills because the debtor's in bankruptcy. The issue, and we've made 1 2 this clear and the committee has known this since 2023. These payments are -- they're not just a sort of a rent payment that goes off somewhere to BCCCEB's profit. They are how the 5 security company, the engineering company, the utilities for the cathedral complex, which is not just the cathedral but also

```
 4
 7 the debtor's chancery offices, how the bills to keep all those 8 things operating are paid.
 9
              So the alternative, Your Honor, if -- there's only a couple of alternatives. If the debtor can't fund these 10 payments, the alternatives are -- to CCCEB, the alternatives 11 are that the debtor pays those expenses to the vendors directly 12 or that there's no security, no engineering, no utilities -- 13 14
              THE COURT: Oh, okay.
15
              MR. MOSES: -- at the debtor's offices in the 16 cathedral.
17
              THE COURT: So is it accurate that if there was an 18 agreement that's like an admin support agreement or whatever one would call it, that's not --
20
              MR. MOSES: Yeah.
21
              THE COURT: -- currently available or -- 22
              MR. MOSES: And ;I mean, two years ago, the debtor 23 searched high and low for a written copy of their written 24 agreement.
25
              THE COURT:
                          Okay.
```

97
 1
              THE COURT:
                          Yeah.
 2
              MR. MOSES: The reason for that is because CBRE, which operates the building, calculates each quarter how much money 3 it needs to pay the expenses. Then it allocates that amount 4 among the users of the cathedral, which include the debtor, and 5 6 each user pays their share.
 7
              THE COURT: Okay.
 8
              MR. MOSES: So the debtor's paying its share.
 9
              THE COURT: So there is a document that's been shared with the committee that shows that breakdown?
10 11
              MR. MOSES: There is a breakdown. I don't know the degree to which the committee's ever asked for it.
13
              THE COURT: Okay. But it's producible?
              MR. MOSES:
                         I imagine so.
14
15
              THE COURT: Is it confidential or not something -- MR. MOSES: I mean, I don't think there is a higher 16
             It's confidential in the general sense of a lot of 17 level.
18 documents that we -- 19
              THE COURT: Sure.
              MR. MOSES: -- produced to the committee.
20
              THE COURT: Okay. Ms. Uetz wants to help me out here.
21
              MR. MOSES: Yes.
22
23
              MS. UETZ: Or help Mr. Moses out, Your Honor, if it 24 please the Court.
25
              THE COURT: Yeah.

              MS. UETZ: -- walked through all of the details

 6
              THE COURT: Okay.
 7
              MS. UETZ: We're happy to do it again.
 8
              THE COURT: Okay.
 9
              MS. UETZ: And we're happy to provide documentation related to it.
10 11
              THE COURT: Okay. I appreciate it.
12 MS. UETZ: It was an extensive meet and confer at the 13 outset.
14
              THE COURT: That doesn't surprise me at all. Thank 15 you very much.
              Okay. Go ahead, Mr. Moses. I interrupted you.
16
              MR. MOSES: Thank you, and I appreciate -- 17 18
              THE COURT: Yeah. Okay.
              MR. MOSES: -- that reminder. So yes, I mean, if it's 19 20 necessary -- 21
              THE COURT: Okay.
22
              MR. MOSES: -- we can go through that. But I think 23 the essential issues here are set out in Mr. Bardos' 24 declaration, which that and --

              THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. MOSES: -- a couple of emails introducing in Mr.
 1 Lee's declaration are the only evidence that's in front of the 2
     Court on this right now.
 3
              THE COURT: Yeah.
 4
 5
              MR. MOSES: And it's quite clear on the basic facts I've told Your Court. I mean, I'm looking at paragraph 5 of 6
     Mr. Bardos' declaration.
 7 8
              THE COURT: Um-hum.
 9
              MR. MOSES: The CCC has no other material assets.
10
              THE COURT: Um-hum.
              MR. MOSES: Has no income, other than these user fees, 11 12 which are substantially all devoted to operation and 13 maintenance. It has no -- and Your Honor's question, it's in Mr. Bardos' declaration that CCCEB is therefore unable to service the CCCEB note and has no foreseeable means to repay.
15
16
              THE COURT: That's what I thought.
              MR. MOSES: So I could address perhaps the broader 17 18 issues about payments to nondebtor entities and so forth, but I think really this is fundamentally it's a very practical issue.
19 20
     This is a -- 21
              THE COURT: Okay.
22 MR. MOSES: -- matter of the debtor paying its essential operating expenses to keep the lights on in its 23 24 offices and its cathedral.
25
              THE COURT: Okay. And then I think you can address

```
what I heard as maybe the last element of the objection by Mr.
 2 Prol, that it's just fundamentally unfair to pay some expenses and not others. And the others here happen to be -- the ones 3 most on his mind are legal fees, so give me a context for that.
 4
              MR. MOSES: Certainly, Your Honor. I guess a couple of contexts there. Administrative expenses have to be paid in 7 a bankruptcy. Those include legal fees. We've expressed concerns in a number of ways and brought motions before Your
 5 6
 9
     Honor regarding hold backs and so forth to control cash flow.
     I don't think that's exactly connected to the issues of whether 10 or not legal fees that have been objected to under the 11 procedures of the interim compensation order are paid or not.
12
13
     That's governed by the interim compensation order.
14
              And I also think, as a practical matter, that while 15 administrative expenses all have the same standing in a bankruptcy case, it always is the reality that they are treated 16 a little bit -- professional fees are treated a little bit 17 18 differently during the pendency of the case.
19
              THE COURT: Well, they normally accrue.
                          They normally accrue. Exactly.
20
              MR. MOSES:
              THE COURT: Except for Knudsen, goodness.
21
22
              MR. MOSES:
                          And the Knudsen process is an 23 accommodation.
24
                          Yep, I understand.
              THE COURT:
                          Whereas Chapter 11 operating debtors
25
              MR. MOSES:
```

```
generally have to pay their light bills -- 1
 2
              THE COURT: Yeah.
 3
              MR. MOSES: -- on a month-to-month basis.
              THE COURT: Right.
 4
 5
              MR. MOSES: And I also wanted to mention, just to respond because it has come up a couple of times, the
 7 substantial lump sum payment that was made on the CCCEB loan in November of 2024.
 9
              THE COURT: Um-hum.
              MR. MOSES: Because it was brought up as an argument 10 of, oh, well, in the past, suddenly CCCEB came up with some 11
             I described a little bit the structure that this was 12 13 kind of a complicated structure, and it was created with a 14 title in CCCEB. And this has all been fully disclosed, 15 including in the disclosure statement. There was a related 16 entity, CCTL, Cathedral of Christ the Light, that held some of the money that was used in the development of the cathedral.
18
     It was continuing to hold this remaining sum of money.
19
              At last year, when you know money was running out and 20 the debtor was digging under rocks to find money, this came up.
21
     And so those remaining funds, which represent all the remaining 22 funds available, were paid as a payment on the debt to the 23 debtor. So there's no more there. That's all been fully 24 disclosed.
                 There's not another four-and-a-half-million dollars sitting out there waiting to be needed.
```

25

102
              THE COURT: Okay.
 1
              MR. MOSES: And to clarify, based on that, I don't 2 think it's relevant, but because of that, the balance is not 3 41.7 million. It's closer to thirty-seven million currently.
 4
              THE COURT:
                          Okay.
              MR. MOSES: I don't think that's probably relevant to 6 7 this motion.
 8
              THE COURT:
                          Okay. Anything else?
 9
              MR. MOSES:
                          No, Your Honor.
10
              THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.
              MR. MOSES:
11
                          Thank you.
12
              THE COURT:
                          The committee wants to have -- this is 13 your motion, right?
14
              MR. PROL: (Indiscernible).
15
              THE COURT: Yeah. Go ahead.
              MR. PROL: For the record, Jeff Prol on behalf of the 16 committee. Your Honor, as we've stated previously during the 17 18 course of this hearing, it's not the committee's desire to burn the church down and force them to shut down the cathedral.
19 point here that we're trying to make is that the way the debtor 20 21 has structured itself, when the cathedral was built, CCEB took 22 title to the property, and the debtor assumed all of the debt 23 for the property. Okay. It's not the way parties deal at 24 arm's length with each other.
25 Secondly, point again that I tried to make in the opening, I'll make it again briefly here, is that the debtor 1
```

```
     needs to consider restructuring its business operations. Yes, we understand you need to keep the lights on. You need to pay 3 for security. But where is the belt tightening? They can't 4 5 afford to pay survivors what survivors are due. They can't 6 afford to pay the professional fees. The administrative costs 7 of the case. But we haven't heard a single thing about any willingness to tighten the belt and to cut expenses like
 9
     Chapter 111 debtors do.
              THE COURT: Okay. Thank you very much.
10 11
              MR. PROL: Thank you.
              THE COURT: Is this submitted?
12
                     I'm going to deny the motion, but a couple of 13
              Okay. comments. And some of them are very short-term and some of 14
     them longer term. Okay.
              In the short-term, if the debtor has not already 16 supplied to the committee whatever itemized statement there is 17 18 for what is, I think, an estimate, right? Is it an estimate or is it -- or is it something more precise than an estimate?
20
              MR. MOSES: I believe it's funded based on an 21 estimate, and then -- 22
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MR. MOSES: -- whatever however that shakes out is 23
24 (indiscernible) than that so -- 25
              THE COURT: It trued up at the end of a quarter or if
```

104
     it's trued up, when is it trued up, at the end of the quarter?
 1
 2 MR. MOSES: I believe it would be at the end of the quarter. So it would be -- 3
              THE COURT: Okay.
 4
              MR. MOSES: -- for example, the estimate was too high, 5 there'd be a little money left over.
 6
 7
              THE COURT: Yeah.
                                 That's what I'm saying. Okay.
 8
              MR. MOSES: So the requirement to pay the next quarter 9 would (indiscernible) --
              THE COURT: What you have now is something that's an 10 estimate and there's an allocation and there's a portion of 11 12
     that allocation that has been sent to the debtor, right?
13
              MR. MOSES: That's correct, Your Honor.
              THE COURT: And how detailed is that?
15
              MR. MOSES: Your Honor, I don't know that I can 16 (indiscernible) --
              THE COURT: Well, to whatever extent it is detailed, I 17 18 think unless there's some confidentiality reason, I think that should be supplied to the committee. Is that in existence now?
20
     You have an actual document now, or were you just given a 21 number?
22
              MR. MOSES: There is an actual document, Your Honor.
23
              THE COURT: Any reason why that can't be shared with 24 the committee?
              MR. MOSES: Under the general confidentiality agreement, I believe, yes, Your Honor.
25

THE COURT: No, that's fine. I mean, unless somebody else has a problem with that, I think that's a good idea.

Okay. And this is not a critique. I am mindful of the fact that, one, this is a long standing practice that the debtor has paid a share of these expenses, and that's been going on for a very long time. It was not a creation of the bankruptcy. It has been going on in the bankruptcy. It has a regularity, and it has a centralized purpose that, to me, if it is an ordinary course, that's about as close as you're going to get for this entity. And I think this entity can be looked at a little bit differently on an ordinary course axes, let's say. Okay.

I think that whether you want to critique the structure from several years ago or otherwise complain that it looks weirdly advantageous to one party here who isn't a debtor, I can hear all that. But it has been going on for some time, and it doesn't seem to be -- nothing in the creation of this seems to have been nefarious, from what I can tell. And I think, also, it may be somewhat illusory to call this a loan. But it's not as if that -- none of those facts are being hidden from anybody. Everybody knows that there's no forty-million dollars in CCEB's bank account that it's going to use at any point in time to pay the -- to pay the diocese. Everybody knows that.

So to me, those factors, although they might be difficult for some constituencies here, they are not reason for me to cast any doubt on the general bona fides of this. So with all that, I'm going to deny the motion but require you promptly to transfer whatever document you have that reflects whatever detail there is about the estimate and the allocation.

Having said all that, I hear loud and clear the committee's other point, which is just not one that I can resolve today, which is, is there going to come a time here when we have to consider either your plan or some other vehicle what the reasonable expectations are for a debtor in a reorganization of this type, and even though it's a church. And I think that's an issue that certainly is front and center in confirmation. And if it comes up before then, we'll see how it plays out.

But I am not at all rejecting their argument that part of what ought to be going on here is maybe a rethinking of some of the business issues. Maybe not particularly this one, but certainly, I'm sympathetic to the committee's arguments that the reorganization here might ought to be broader than just how much of a check can we write to the abuse victims on what we think are our assets now. So take that as simply a caveat that it is not a -- I'm not resolving this issue against the committee. I'm just saying it's not for today. Understood?

Okay. So you can just -- again, get the prevailing party for the reasons stated on the record. Okay.

107 MR. MOSES: Yes, Your Honor (indiscernible). 1 THE COURT: All right. Thank you very -- and don't 2 try to catch all my meanderings. That'll be somebody else's 3 4 problem. 5 Okay. Fee motion? 6 MS. UETZ: Yes, Your Honor. 7 THE COURT: Okay. 8 MR. WEISENBERG: Brent Weisenberg of Lowenstein 9 Sandler on behalf of the committee. THE COURT: Yeah. Uh-huh. 10 MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor, if you would allow me to 11 go on a thirty-second detour. As we walk through this life, 12 all we have is our good name. And the notion that I would ever 13 stand here before this Court and lie, I can't accept. I would 14 15 never do that. I will chalk up today to misunderstandings. I don't 16 think the debtor's lying. And I don't believe the debtor 17 18 really thinks we're lying. They are misunderstandings. I have the utmost confidence in Foley and in the debtor that they 19 20 would never mislead this Court, and I hope and trust they feel 21 the same about us. 22 But I felt the need to say that, Your Honor, because the notion that I would ever seek to mislead or be untruthful 23 24 to this Court is not something I can countenance. 25 THE COURT: Okay. And when I take Jacob's suggestion with all of your agreement that I just mediate this whole thing, I'll find all that out, right?

MS. UETZ: Yes, Your Honor. You will.

MR. WEISENBERG: Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm saying that partly in jest. I'm tabling his suggestion for now. But if anyone wants to address it in any fashion, including it's the worst idea we ever heard, Judge, between now and the end of the hearing, for my purposes, it's on the table. Okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. WEISENBERG: And to that end, the committee has expressed what it believes is the best way to resolve this is Your Honor calling balls and strikes. Only by you setting the table is what's going to change people's positions. That's really hard to do in mediation. And so we've expressed to you our feelings about that.

I'd like to jump into the compensation motion.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. WEISENBERG: The debtor's objection, Your Honor, reads almost like an objection to our motion to shorten time, which was granted. As I just said, we have tremendous respect for Foley and the debtor. But the notion in their papers that they complied with the literal terms of the interim compensation order and the spirit is just not true, Your Honor, and here's why.

Unfortunately, we learned the hard way in the Camden diocese case about what a bare-bones interim compensation order might lead to. And it led to wholesale objections to our fees on essentially a monthly basis when the committee was adverse to the debtor. And the objection said, I object to the debtor's -- excuse me, to the committee's fees, all of them, meaning the committee's professionals provided no benefit whatsoever to the estate. The onus was then on the committee to resolve that.

And so when it came time to agree to this order, we were very specific about making sure we did not have to live through that again. We took great pains to negotiate the language that we agreed to. The language we agreed to was intended to avoid us ever having to stand here before you and say, we don't understand what their objection to, other than the fees are too high. We've explained to you why the fees are high, Your Honor. It's unfortunate. We wish they weren't that high. But we've said ad nauseam today, this is a crisis of the debtor's own making, and we will not back down in representing our clients, no matter what it takes.

And so when it came time to negotiate the order, we said, any objection to a monthly fee statement shall specifically state which fees and costs are the subject of the objection, the amount objected to, and the basis of the objection. Now, here's the even more important point. For the avoidance of doubt, any objection shall identify the specific time entry or entries which it objects to and the basis upon which it objects to the allowance of the fees associated with the time spent. Any specific time entry that is not objected to will be subject to payment in accordance with this order.

That is not -- that language is not happenstance, Your Honor. Again, we specifically negotiated for it because we did not ever want to have to confront an objection that says, the committee's fees in connection with the plan were too high. We want them reduced by fifty percent. No. That's not what the interim compensation order requires the objector to do.

The objector has to set forth in detail where our time entries problematic. Are they problematic because of the amount of time spent? Are they problematic because arguably the efforts were not benefited to the -- or for the benefit of the estate? We didn't want to be left with conjecture. And here we are. And so we come before you, Your Honor, asking you to enforce the interim compensation order.

THE COURT: Well, can I just -- I don't mean to split hairs procedurally. I mean, is this basically a request that I strike their objection, or is it something else?

MR. WEISENBERG: No. It is, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Is that what it is?

MR. WEISENBERG: Well, that would be -- that would be the -- if you enforce the interim compensation order and you find that objection does not comply, then yes, the objection falls by the wayside. But what -

THE COURT: The alternative is they amend it, right?

MR. WEISENBERG: If they're allowed to, and I don't believe the interim compensation order allows them to.

THE COURT: Well, that's why I'm asking, so okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: The interim compensation order doesn't provide that. But Your Honor, here's, to your end, and we appreciate this.

THE COURT: Yeah.

MR. WEISENBERG: This is not a last bite at the apple. This is a monthly fee statement.

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. WEISENBERG: All of our fees are subject to challenge at a final. And also, all of our fees are subject at an interim. We also have a fee examiner in this case. So by the time our fees are allowed, they've gone through a number of different hurdles. And so by paying us this month, we're not being unfairly advantaged. In fact, you know that now we're agreeable to a thirty-percent holdback. That is a material and meaningful amount of money, which puts the debtor at almost no risk that we will ever have to disgorge fees.

THE COURT: So can I ask you a math question?

MR. WEISENBERG: I'm not very good at math, but I'll do my best.

1
 2
              THE COURT: Oh, no, no. Well, luckily, it's your math, not mine. There was a reference in your papers, I think, 3 to the amount at stake here in some 712,000 dollars or
 5 something. Is that net of a thirty percent?
 6
              MR. WEISENBERG: That's gross, Your Honor.
              THE COURT: Oh, that's gross? So there would be a 7 8 thirty-percent holdback in any event, right?
 9
              MR. WEISENBERG: Correct.
              THE COURT: So we're talking about twenty percent is 10 the difference here?
11 12
              MR. WEISENBERG: I'm going to trust your math, Your 13 Honor.
14
              THE COURT: No, I mean that the idea? I mean, if 15 they're objecting, it's not that you're not going to get 712.
     You're expecting you're not going to get 280 or something.
16
              MR. WEISENBERG: Well, Your Honor, if the objection is 17
     permitted and we are unable to agree, that 712,000 will not be paid to us . Obviously we're all entitled to seventy percent of 19 20 that 700,000 dollars under the interim compensation order.
21
              THE COURT: Right.
22
              MR. WEISENBERG: But from our perspective, Your Honor, again, it is a wholesale objection based upon the notion 23 24 that -- 25
              THE COURT: That's actually a better way of putting it than I was putting it. Thank you. I appreciate that. Okay.

Thanks.

MR. WEISENBERG: So we think it's important, Your Honor, to make clear that no one is saying the debtor cannot object to our fees. They have that right. Period. But if they're going to exercise it, they need to do it in conformance with a court order, specifically a court order that we specifically negotiated to avoid this point. And they flat out blew it.

But their rights aren't waived. They can come back later on. But now, especially, Your Honor, I hope you respect and appreciate that it seems to us that the timing of this game -- of this objection is pure gamesmanship. It has been twenty-three monthly fee statements that we've filed. Not one has led to an objection. And now, on the precipice of plan confirmation, the debtor's objecting on the heels of having forced a holdback of thirty percent. This seems to us to be a game in which the debtor can seek to put the committee further in a corner by restraining its ability to fight back.

As we've said, it won't work because we will do our job regardless. But I hope you could understand that the timing of this is odd. I think nothing speaks to that more than the challenge to our rates. When we came before Your Honor two years ago, we set forth what our hourly rates were. The debtor didn't object. And for twenty-three monthly fee issue with our rates. That seems odd to me, Your Honor. I hope you can respect the fact that that we find the timing ironic.

And so what we ask is you enforce the order and require the parties to abide by it. No parties' rights are changed. Nobody's getting overpaid. And frankly, Your Honor, we stopped the gamesmanship. We have disagreements, fundamental disagreements about very important issues, but let's just have Your Honor call balls and strikes based upon the facts and law and not have all this satellite litigation nitpicking each other about fees.

Yes, fees are a lot of money. And it's unfortunate. And we've spoken all about that today. But Your Honor, we ask you to enforce the interim compensation order. In turn, it ends the gamesmanship and allows us all to focus on what's important, which is putting the facts and law before you without fear that our fees are going to be picked at.

THE COURT: Thank you.

MR. WEISENBERG: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. MOSES: Your Honor, once again, Shane Moses for the debtor. I want to start first by just noting, given the accelerated time, we did file a response, but it was filed this morning.

THE COURT: I read it.

MR. MOSES: You read it? Okay. I was fairly certain that would be the case, but I wanted to confirm before I read it to you or the equivalent.

So we've heard a number of times from Mr. Weisenberg that the committee just wants to enforce the interim compensation order. We also would like to enforce the interim compensation order, Your Honor. The interim compensation order provides a process. The point is to provide a process that governs how and when fee statements will be filed. How and when interim applications for compensation will be filed. How and when objections to those things will be filed. And if they are filed, how they'll be dealt with.

Now, as was noted a little earlier in a prior motion, the Knudsen process is an accommodation, but we have that accommodation in this court under an order from this Court that governs that process. And to read specifically from the section of the order that governs objections, which Mr.

Weisenberg read part of, starting after the part he read, it continues. "Thereafter, if the parties are unable to reach a resolution within fourteen days after service of the objection, the affected professional may either file a response to the objection and request for payment of the Court, which may be set for hearing on at least fourteen days' notice, or forego payment." That, obviously is not the choice the committee has taken. And in that context, forego payment is on the monthly fee statement. All of this process is, of course, without prejudice as to what happens on an interim fee application.

The committee is -- or I shouldn't say the committee.

Committee counsel is unhappy with the structure and the nature of the debtor's objection to their fees. That's fine. That's a discussion we can have. The point of the process that's laid out in the interim fee order, in part, is that there is a requirement for a fourteen-day meet-and-confer time period so that the parties can discuss the issues and try to reach a resolution before someone puts it before this Court.

And I think that's important for a lot of reasons. I mean, the objection that the debtor served -- in our response, we made the point. It does identify the time entries that we are objecting to. It's not a oh, well, this was block billing. So this .3 should be disallowed or whatever. It's not that because that's not the nature of the debtor's concern here. Although, I will note there are objections that are -- or time entries that are ten hours for draft outline for fact witness deposition without even identifying the witness. Where there's also one hundred hours spent on preparing an outline for the bishop's deposition.

I grant that's an important deposition, but still, we have a hard time seeing how a hundred hours isn't excessive for preparing a fact witness deposition outline. So and that's on top of, as I said, the entries were what witness it related to wasn't even identified. The point of the fourteen-day meet-and-confer process is to allow some granularity into digging into these things and trying to reach some kind of a resolution. But the committee simply short-circuited that by immediately ignoring those provisions of the process and coming into the court and demanding that this be immediately addressed by this Court.

Otherwise, I want to respond to the notion of that this is for leverage and it hasn't ever happened before and suddenly it's happening right before we're approaching plan confirmation. We made this point in our response, but I think it's worth reiterating. It's true, we haven't objected before. We, the debtor, has exercised restraint. Perhaps restraint that's similar to the committee not objecting to the CCEB payments before. But the debtor has exercised restraint in not previously objecting.

But also, the fees weren't 1.6-million dollars from a single firm for a single month before. The prior month was, I think, the only month that the fees approached 1 million dollars from any single firm, and then they escalated quickly to 1.6. And we certainly understand we're headed toward plan. We're in litigation. We're having depositions. It's going to be more expensive. But we think there's more expensive, and then there's this.

But it's not a matter of seeking leverage in some way. The committee counsel see this. They are going to zealously advocate for their client. They're going to zealously advocate for their client, regardless of what is currently happening, with objections under the process provided to compensation.

So I don't think it's -- and we have no illusions that somehow, we're depriving the committee of counsel, which is not something we would be seeking to do. We have concerns about the bills and the time entries for specific work that was done in this case in the month of May by the firm. We followed the process. We served an objection. And the process should still be followed. The order should be enforced. And we should be directed to spend the two weeks. And then if we don't get a resolution, it should be noticed for hearing on two weeks' notice, as the order provides.

THE COURT: They clearly take the position that your objection didn't have the required specificity, and your position is that further specificity wasn't possible right now or something else?

MR. MOSES: I mean, if we were to -- say, for example, we've objected to certain rates that were charged for discovery work. If we were to --

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. MOSES: -- we've said we object to every time entry by this associate for this work at that rate, we could have attached, I suppose, a chart that listed --

THE COURT: Um-hum.

MR. MOSES: -- every time entry and restated the objection. I don't think that's either necessary or productive to anyone.

THE COURT: Okay. Anything else?

MR. MOSES: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: What do you guys think my ability is to -now that I know there's a dispute about this. I mean, look, Knudsen orders are not found in nature. Right. We sort of make them up, and they're an accommodation to everybody. And we do our best to come up with something that is going to really sort of change the normal reality of 11s where professional fees accrue. And sometimes they accrue for a long time.

But with the debtor -- with a case as complicated as this, with high-level counsel, we want to make sure those counsel are able to do their jobs without hindrance or concern about things like getting paid. We come up with this Knudsen order, and we try to build into it something that makes it more or less self-executing. What's my ability to look at this and say, we just have to deal with this differently? In the case of the Knudsen order, what's my ability to do that, other than being fair to you guys?

MR. MOSES: The Code provides for interim fee

1	applications, as Your Honor
2	THE COURT: Yeah.
3	MR. MOSES: pointed out. The Knudsen decision
4	recognized, and I think every other circuit has recognized the
5	court's authority to set up
6	THE COURT: Right.
7	MR. MOSES: a process like this. I think inherent
8	in that authority is the authority to modify it.
9	THE COURT: Or to consider the exigencies of the 10	moment. Let's put it that way. Right. Make sense? Okay.
11	Appreciate it. Thanks.
12	MR. MOSES: Your Honor, I think it's important to hear
13	from Mr. Kaplan, who is on the line. It's Mr. Kaplan who leads
14	the litigation team.
15	THE COURT: Um-hum.
16	MR. MOSES: And this might surprise you. He has a 17	very different take on the work we've been doing and just how
18	vital it is. So if I might, could I allow Mr. Kaplan to speak?
19	THE COURT: It's fine with me. Anybody have an
20	objection?
21	MR. MOSES: Thank you, Your Honor.
22	THE COURT: No? Okay.
23	MR. KAPLAN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. And my
24	apologies for not making the trip this week. I don't want to 25	go through in great detail. And one thing I can be certain of is it's impossible for me to reveal anything from mediation because I wasn't there for any of them. So there's nothing I'm saying which is even possibly subject to mediation privilege but --

THE COURT: Or it would be a hearsay objection. One or the other. Right. Okay.

MR. KAPLAN: Or something like that, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. KAPLAN: But Mr. Moses makes reference to some of our preparation otherwise. And I just want to give the Court some context as to the work we've been doing and the work.

Also, this is -- nothing I'm saying is a subject the Foley team hasn't.

But in connection with plan confirmation, Your Honor, and these are the hard numbers, we received 40,171 documents. That is on top of the 62,000 documents we received prior to. That's 232,000 pages of documents. Some of those, we received five to seven days before the depositions in question. And so part of the issue with the rates, and I respect the Foley firm's objection thereto, is, is given the time frame we are under, Your Honor, we do not have the flexibility to necessarily be as rate-specific as we might otherwise want to be about who is doing certain tasks because the tasks have to get done, the deposition has to happen, the exhibits get printed, and we have to move forward.

We took nine fact depositions, Your Honor. It's nine, and I'm counting this just so everyone is transparent because Mr. Bardos, who's in the courtroom SAT as the corporate designee for OPF, for Aventis, for the debtor, and then individually as himself. And so that is, in essence, four separate depositions from one individual. The bishop's deposition, I took it, and I respect Mr. Moses' opinion on it. But we had a wide range of subjects that we could have asked him about, and his knowledge was what it was. And I'll leave that question for another day.

But beyond that, Your Honor, we've really done a painstaking review, to be careful. For instance, and I think the debtor will tell you, our review of the documents has identified to them where we found various instances where privileged documents were inadvertently produced, and we were the ones who identified it for a clawback. We have done subpoenas to third parties. We have been actively working on the voting tabulation now, Your Honor, and have uncovered, for instance, that the bishop cast a vote in favor of the plan for his 300-dollar claim.

So there's a lot of work we're doing on a very detailed and granular level, Your Honor. And yes, the fees are expensive. And I will tell you right now that I am the person who is ultimately responsible for every act of the litigation team. And every act we are doing, Your Honor, is necessary in furtherance of our wide ranging objection to various aspects of the plan. I recognize that it is costing a lot of money to do so.

But we're doing so on an extremely condensed timetable. We have worked operatively, and I thank the debtor for their cooperation as we continue to work through deadlines. But some deadlines are just very condensed. And that condensation, Your Honor, does not give us the flexibility. For instance, have the time to allow the lowest-level biller to complete a sense of work, whereas, for instance, Your Honor, I've had to review some documents myself because the documents just have to get reviewed before the deposition. And I certainly understand the fee examiner's algorithm is going to go crazy when they see a partner rate for looking at documents and otherwise. But it's just the time we're under.

And so we're not doing anything, Your Honor, to run up the fees or anything like that. We're simply doing our jobs to be ready. On the schedule, we have met every single court deadline. Where we are unable to meet deadlines or deadlines can't be met, we have worked cooperatively with the debtor. But what we are doing, Your Honor, is somewhat based on the timetable we're under and the fact that there's a lot of work. I mean, 232,000 pages of documents just in plain confirmation discovery, it's a lot of work, sir.

THE COURT: Well, I'm not saying any of that is implausible. Is that the question in front of me now? Is the question in front of me now the merits of the objection or whether the objection was properly raised or both?

MR. WEISENBERG: No, Your Honor, the only thing before you today is whether the objection was properly raised. And we raised the issue because we believe it was not. And so the notion that we should ignore ourselves of the fourteen-day period to meet-and-confer, in our mind, is inoperative because they didn't file the proper objection. The fourteen-day period was intended to help resolve discrete issues between the parties. But how can we resolve our issues when we don't understand what they're opposing? The objection --

THE COURT: Well, can I throw something else in there too? And you can both give me your thoughts about this. You guys who deal with Knudsen orders and the fallout of disagreements under Knudsen orders more regularly than I do. There are some things that just have got to be seasoned a bit. And the question of whether an hourly rate for an associate is a little too high is of a different order to me than it looks like twenty people attended this hearing.

And there are some things that I think are resolvable at fee app time or final fee app time that just are not as easily resolvable in this compressed, fairly shortened, and simplified process for objecting to a billing statement, which cuts two ways. It suggests that there's only so much detail the debtor can give you, and there's only so much they should really be able to keep you from being paid, as opposed to hearing at a fee app, when we have one, or at the end of the case, when that happens, that on a policy matter, this was just not done correctly.

So I guess that -- I mean, I guess that's a challenge to each of you to help me think about how to think about this Knudsen issue. Did I make myself clear or --

MR. WEISENBERG: I think so, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. WEISENBERG: The question that you asked before that I'd like to answer is what is your ability to contextualize a Knudsen order. Of course, Your Honor retains complete ability to modify an order of Your Court, an order issued by you.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. WEISENBERG: In this case --

THE COURT: So when am I being unfair to you guys if I do that? And that's the only question to me. That's the first question. When am I putting you guys in a position you shouldn't be in if I'm going to insert myself in this now?

MR. WEISENBERG: Certainly, Your Honor, any order that you enter, forward looking and not backward looking, such that up until the point that your order is entered, the interim compensation order as modified governs the payment of

We're going to turn to the 053 adversary proceeding, and I intend to give you an oral ruling, although it's a relatively lengthy one because it's -- although I'm calling it an oral ruling, it's scripted, let's say. So this is in the adversarial proceeding number 24-04053. And I intend to give you here my oral findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to FRCP 7052.

So before the Court are two motions to dismiss the first amended adversary complaint, which I'll refer to as the amended complaint, of the official committee of unsecured creditors, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Oakland. The committee seeks in the amended complaints, one, substantive consolidation of the debtor and the Roman Catholic Welfare Corporation of Oakland, substantive consolidation of the debtor and the Roman Catholic Cemeteries of the Diocese of Oakland, substantive consolidation of the debtor and Adventus, and a judicial determination that the school funds are property of the debtor's bankruptcy estate under Section 541 of Chapter 11 and Title 11 United States Code, which is the Bankruptcy Code.

On May 23, 2025, the debtor filed a motion to dismiss the amended complaint pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). The same day, RCWC, RCC, and Adventus, collectively the nondebtor entities, submitted a motion to dismiss the amended complaint pursuant to FRCP 12(6), as incorporated in the Bankruptcy Rules. For the reasons discussed below, I'm going to grant both motions to dismiss.

As background, the committee asserts that these matters are core under 28 U.S.C. 157(b)(2)(A) and (O), and I will note that those are generally the most -- those are the most generic invocations of core and therefore my judicial power. But nobody has raised an issue with that, so I don't think it's something we need to spend a whole lot of time on. An introduction and a little bit of context.

On December 11th, 2024, the committee filed an adversary complaint, the original complaint against the debtor and the affiliated nondebtor entities. The committee alleged that the diocese exercised such control over the nondebtor entities that any distinction among them served only to shield assets from the estate and its creditors. Count I of the original adversary complaint sought declaratory judgment that the debtor owned all legal and equitable interests in the nondebtor entities' assets, while Count II sought to substantively consolidate the debtor and the nondebtor entities based on their alleged entanglement. The debtor and the nondebtor entities each moved to dismiss the original complaint under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), arguing that the relief sought was either unauthorized under Section 105 of the Code or was insufficiently pled.

Upon review, the Court concluded at the time that while consolidation may be available where supported by applicable nonbankruptcy law, Count II as pled failed to articulate a clear legal theory, such as alter ego, that could justify consolidation without contravening Section 303(a) of the Bankruptcy Code, which prohibits involuntary relief against nonprofits. The Court recognized that the case of Law v. Siegel, 571 U.S. 415 (2014), doesn't foreclose equitable relief grounded in state law, provided that such relief does not override explicit statutory prohibitions in the Bankruptcy Code.

However, because the committee's complaint did not sufficiently frame its claim under cognizable nonbankruptcy doctrine, the Court declined to assess the adequacy of the underlying factual allegations at that time. Accordingly, the Court granted the motion to dismiss Count II the original complaint with leave to amend so that the committee could more precisely set forth the legal basis for the relief that it sought.

On May 6th, 2025, the committee submitted an amended adversary complaint, again, seeking substantive consolidation of the debtor in each of the three nondefendant, nondebtor entities. The committee asserts that it has adequately stated a claim for substantive consolidation under the case In re:

Bonham, which is 229 F.3d 750, 756, Ninth Circuit case from 2000, by pleading facts which satisfy, one, the entanglement test through a state law supported alter ego theory of liability, and two, the creditor expectation test, i.e. the creditors reasonably relied on the combined credit of the debtor and the nondebtor entities. In addition to the three counts for substantive consolidation, the committee seeks a declaration that certain school funds are property of the bankruptcy estate pursuant to Section 541 of the Bankruptcy Code.

In its motion to dismiss the amended complaint pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), the debtor argues that the committee's claims in Counts I through III fail as a matter of law. The motion to dismiss posits that articulation of an alter ego theory is insufficient -- I'm sorry, the committee's articulation of an alter ego theory is insufficient to support substantive consolidation, as the amended complaint does not plead facts that establish the degree of unity of interest and resulting injustice required to show entanglement and pierce the corporate veil, and the two, reliance on the creditor expectations test to support substantive consolidation is similarly inappropriate and runs afoul of Law v. Siegel, as previously cited in this Court's prior ruling, as the test is "a creature of Section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code", unlike the state law alter ego theory.

Now, here I'm going to pause for a second. And I'm not trying to be confusing because I think there are two things going on at the same time here. The debtor and the nondebtor entities both basically argued that the committee's approach in basically relying on some aspect of substantive consolidation and tests applicable thereto ran afoul of the Court's prior order. I think there are some respects in which that's true. I was concerned about the normal articulation of substantive consolidation, that it was not going to be feasible as usually presented in light of the Law v. Siegel issues that have to do with the inability to force a nonprofit into a bankruptcy.

Having said that, all of this is a little bit loosey goosey because the ultimate remedy, one way or the other, is recognized and is called substantive consolidation. So much was made from the podium by the debtor's counsel to the effect that the committee was really arguing issues that have already been decided. There's an element of that that I think is correct. But the parties, notwithstanding that, argued their way through the basic test, the creditor expectation test, and the entanglement test. And because the parties spent a lot of their time doing that, I intend to structure this description of my ruling with reference to those doctrines and the way the parties approached it, alongside the idea that some of this was simply foreclosed by the prior ruling.

So turning to Count IV, the debtor maintains that the committee's request for declaratory relief concerning the school funds likewise fails to state a claim and warrants dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6). The debtor characterizes the request as a thinly veiled attempt at substantive consolidation through declaratory judgment, relying solely on generalized assertions of control over the school funds without any supporting facts. The nondebtors' motion to dismiss similarly asserts that the committee has failed adequately to allege the requirements of alter ego, one, the requisite entanglement of the debtor and nondebtor entities, and two, the creditors treated the defendants as a single economic unit, or three, any resulting fraud or injustice, which are referred to, again, colloquially, as the Bonham factors, which again is part of our confusion here, I think. The motion also contends that allegations contained in Count IV arrest on conclusory assertions of control over school funds without actual support of a cognizable claim for relief.

So turning to the legal standard under 12(b)(6), failure to state a claim. Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), as incorporated in the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure at 7012(b)(6), a complaint must be dismissed if it fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The test is whether a complaint contains sufficient factual matter to state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face, and that's obviously Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 (2009).

The claim is plausible when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw a reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the unlawful acts alleged. Conclusory statements without factual support are insufficient to meet the plausibility standard. When a defendant has moved to dismiss, the court must take all of the plaintiff's allegations as true and draw a reasonable inferences in its favor. That's Miller Yacht Sales, Inc. v. Sandy Lane Hotel Company Limited, 496 F.3d 93 (9th Cir. 2004).

Substantive consolidation. Substantive consolidation is a remedy generally within a bankruptcy court's equitable powers under Section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code. Substantive consolidation is not provided for specifically in the Bankruptcy Code. Rather, it's a creation of state law. While there are accordingly no express statutory requirements for the imposition of substantive consolidation case law, as generally stated, the court should consider whether, one, there is a disregard for corporate formalities and commingling of assets between the subject entities and two, what are the benefits of substantive consolidation outweigh its costs. Courts ought to make this decision on a case-by-case basis, with the overarching goal of ensuring fairness to all creditors. And again, that's the Bonham case.

Substantive consolidation requires the creditors of one entity to share equally with the creditors of a potentially less solvent entity, therefore possibly unfairly disadvantaging some creditors' recovery. Therefore, there's also broad consensus that substantive consolidation is an extraordinary remedy to be invoked sparingly. That's In re: Archdiocese of Saint Paul and Minneapolis, 888 F.3d 944, and that's Eighth Circuit, 2018.

Circuits differ somewhat as to the precise test to determine the appropriateness of substantive consolidation, but there's an agreement that the determination must be made on a case-by-case basis, since the bar for granting the remedy is fairly high. In re: Giller, which is a case 962 F.2d 796 (8th Cir. 1992). The United States Court of Appeals affirmed the bankruptcy court's decision to substantively consolidate six Chapter 11 debtors, all of which shared a common sole or majority shareholder because it found the equitable remedy of substantive consolidation to be the only hope of recovery for unsecured creditors.

Further, In re: Bonham, the U.S. Court of Appeals allowed the substantive consolidation of debtor and nondebtor entities after finding the debtor commingled personal assets with those of nondebtor entities and failed to maintain corporate distinctions between the debtor and the nondebtor entities.

The primary purpose of substantive consolidation is to ensure the equitable treatment of all creditors, and that's In re: Central European Industrial Development Company, LLC, 288 B.R. 572. And that's a bankruptcy case from N.D. Cal. Substantive consolidation does not require a finding of alter ego per se on its own under 105, as it is a separate doctrine that focuses on the equitable treatment of creditors and the practical realities of the entity's operations. And that's In re: Parkway Calabasas Limited, 89 B.R. 832. And that's a bankruptcy case from C.D. Cal.

Having said that, it's absolutely clear that under Law v. Siegel and I think the prohibitions on using a bankruptcy doctrine to contravene a bankruptcy statute. And in fact, you really need to have more than simply the normal substantive consolidation showing, which is why we had a discussion last time we were here about putting this through the alter ego prism, and that's really going to be the way that I look at this.

Having said that, the entanglement test. Number one, the entanglement test examines whether the affairs of the debtor are so entangled that consolidation will benefit all creditors. And that's In re: Owner Management Service, LLC Trustee Corps, 530 B.R. 711. This test is satisfied at the time and expense necessary to unscramble the debtor's affairs are so substantial that they threaten the realization of any net assets for all creditors or if no accurate identification and allocation of assets is possible. Entanglement typically involves cases where there has been a commingling of assets between entities.

Alter ego. The alter ego doctrine is a state law remedy that is certainly viable under California law and that allows courts to pierce the corporate veil and hold the parent entity liable for the actions of its subsidiary. To demonstrate that the parent and subsidiary are not really separate entities and therefore satisfy the alter ego standard, a plaintiff must make out a prima facie case, one, that there is no such -- I'm sorry, that there is such unity of interest in ownership that the separate personalities of the two entities no longer exist, and two, that failure to disregard their separate identities would result in fraud or injustice. And that's Doe v. Unocal Corp., 248 F.3d 915, Ninth Circuit case 2001.

Unity of interests is suggested by the commingling of funds and other assets, the holding up by one entity that is liable for the debts of the other, identical equitable ownership of the entities, use of the same offices and employees, the use of one of these a mere shell or conduit for the affairs of the other, and that's Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court, 15 Cal.App.3d 405 (Cal. Ct. App. 1971).

This doctrine can be applied to nonprofit religious entities if there is evidence of control and domination by the parent organization and if the separate corporate existence is used to perpetuate fraud or injustice. And that's Prompt Staffing, Inc. v. United States, 321 F.Supp.3d 1157 (C.D. Cal. 2018).

The creditor expectations test considers whether creditors dealt with the entities as a single economic unit and did not rely on their separate identity in extending credit, and that's out of the Bonham case. The test is based on the notion that lenders structured their loans according to their expectations regarding the borrower and do not ordinarily anticipate having the assets of a more sound company available in case of insolvency or having the creditors of a less sound debtor compete for the borrower's assets.

So putting all this through the alter ego machine and substantive consolidation machine, if you will, the analysis, the committee argues that it's adequately stated a claim for substantive consolidation by asserting facts that support, one, an alter ego theory to satisfy the entanglement prong of the test, and two, a claim that creditors reasonably relied on the combined credit of the debtor and nondebtor entities to satisfy the creditor expectation test. And again, that's a reference to Bonham.

The debtor responds that the facts do not establish either the alter -- either the degree of overlap and control necessary to satisfy the alter ego entanglement prong, nor to satisfy the creditor expectation test. In addition to the alleged inadequacy of the facts provided, the debtor further argues that the committee cannot rely on the creditor expectation test to support its claims because the test is a creature of Section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code. So my prior comments stand. Unlike the state alter ego theory and reliance on it contravenes Law v. Siegel and this Court's prior ruling regarding substantive consolidation of a nonprofit, nondebtor entity under Section 105.

So diving a bit into the alter ego test and whether it's satisfied here, while the committee presents considerable evidence of operational and structural overlap between the debtor and nondebtor entities, even taken together in a light most favorable to the committee, in the Court's view, such facts simply fail to satisfy the high standard required to establish alter ego liability. To pierce the corporate veil under an alter ego theory, the claimant must, again, demonstrate a unity of interest and ownership, such that separate personalities of the entities no longer exist, and two, that the failure to disregard the corporate form would result in fraud or injustice. Again, Doe v. Unocal. The Court agrees with the debtor and the nondebtor entities that no such demonstration -- no such adequate demonstration has been made here.

The committee cites seven factors to support its claim that the defendants operated as a single enterprise. Factors are a failure to maintain arm's length relationships among the related entities, shared officers and directors, shared business offices and addresses, shared employees, comingling of funds or other assets, one entity holding out that it's liable for the debts of the other, and treatment by one entity of the other's assets as its own. While such factors may be relevant to the unity of interest prong, courts in the Ninth Circuit require more than organizational similarity or interrelated operations.

The facts must be, as taken together, cumulatively show that the parent controls a subsidiary with such consistency and severity that the latter is rendered a mere instrumentality of the former. And that's Ranza v. Nike, Inc. 793 F.3d 1059, Ninth Circuit case from 2015. Plaintiff must show "a total domination of finances, policy, and business practices", such that the subsidiary has "no separate mind, will, or existence of its own". And that's the Unocal case, again 248 F.3d.

Here, the facts provided do not allege that level of pervasive day-to-day control required to show that the nondebtor entities functioned as a mere instrumentality of the debtor. The committee fails to plead nonconclusory facts, showing that the debtor exercised such consistent and total control over the nondebtor entities that they lack separate corporate existence. Even accepting the committee's allegations as true, the assertion that the debtor and the nondebtor entities share a business address, office space, and certain officers, directors, and employees does not, as a matter of law, establish the level of domination or control required to support an alter ego theory. Again, under Unocal. While the committee alleges that the bishop had authority to approve certain expenditures and appoint staff, it does not plead that this authority was actually and regularly exercised in a way that would justify piercing the corporate veil.

The committee's allegations regarding financial overlap between the debtor and nondebtor entities similarly fail to plausibly establish the requisite unity of interest and ownership necessary to pierce the corporate veil under an alter ego theory. The fact that the entities served as guarantors for one another in loan and bond obligations without more reflects ordinary commercial conduct, not patent abuse or disregard of corporate formalities. Such arrangements do not, standing alone, demonstrate that the debtor and nondebtor entities lack separate personalities or that their operations were so entangled as to effectively merge them into a single enterprise. That's Bank of Montreal v. SK Foods LLC, 476 B.R. 588, Eastern District of California -- sorry, Bankruptcy Court Eastern District of California (2012).

Finding that the capitalization of a guarantor LLC for another corporate debtor's credit obligations was insufficient to support an alter ego claim. While the committee points to certain facts suggesting informal practices or share financial responsibilities, those allegations, again in the Court's mind, do not rise to the level of pervasive control, pervasive commingling, or disregard for corporate formalities sufficient to support alter ego liability.

Secondly, I think the amended complaint fails to show a resulting injustice from a failure to disregard the defendant's corporate form. The committee's assertion that survivors will receive lower compensation absent consolidation, while it may be true, does not satisfy the second prong of the alter ego test, which requires a showing that maintaining corporate separateness would sanction fraud or promote injustice. Again, Doe v. Unocal.

The committee contends that an unjust outcome will result if the nondebtor entities' assets are not consolidated into the estate, thereby limiting the funds available to survivors. However, courts have consistently held that the inability to collect a judgment or access additional funds, even if inequitable, does not by itself rise to the level of injustice required to pierce the corporate veil. Again, Roman Catholic Archbishop v. Superior Court.

California courts have historically held that in order to rely on alter ego theories, it must be alleged that the entities are the business conduits of one another and that to recognize their separateness would aid in the consummation of a wrong. Meadows v. Emett & Chandler, 99 Cal.App.2d 496. The amended complaint, in the Court's view, fails to allege that the debtor structured its financial relationship with the nondebtor entities to aid in perpetrating fraud, deceiving creditors, or otherwise abusing the corporate form.

At most, the committee alleges an unfortunate consequence of preexisting lawful business arrangements. Without more, the committee has not shown that respecting the defendant's corporate separateness and the nondebtor separate entities, would result in the type of fraud or injustice necessary to satisfy the second prong of the alter ego standard.

While alter ego liability is generally a highly factual inquiry, it is not necessarily a matter that must be fully tried. Motul S.A. v. USA Wholesale Lubricant, Inc., 686 F.Supp.3d 900. And that's an N.D. Cal. case from 2003. "The court concludes" -- quoting from that case, "The court concludes that Motul has not alleged sufficient facts to support its assertion that Mr. Fateh, USA Auto and the other corporate defendants are each other's alter egos and has failed to satisfy the first prong of the alter ego test." So therefore it's possible to dispose of these matters at the pleading stage, although it may be less commonly done.

The amended complaint fails to allege facts demonstrating the kind of sustained and systemic entanglement through a unity of interest in ownership or otherwise, between the debtor and the nondebtor entity, such that the alter ego doctrine is -- that the alter ego doctrine is designed to address. It likewise fails to show that maintaining their separate corporate forms would result in fraud or injustice.

The facts presented are essentially identical to the committee's prior attempt to invoke substantive consolidation through Section 105(a). If anything, the alter ego standard is frankly more demanding, requiring a more systemic and pervasive melding of interest the Court doesn't believe are found here. Accordingly, the committee has not alleged sufficient facts to meet the requirements for piercing the corporate veil under an alter ego theory and thus fails to satisfy the entanglement prong of the substantive consolidation standard under nonbankruptcy law.

Creditor expectation test. In the motion to dismiss, the debtor argues that the committee cannot rely on the creditor expectation test and notwithstanding, fails to plead sufficient facts to satisfy the test. Citing a couple of cases from the Southern District of New York. In re: Republic Airways Holdings Inc., which is at 565 B.R. 710 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y.), and Official Committee Of Unsecured Creditors of Verestar, Inc. v. American Tower Corp., 343 B.R. 444 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y 2016).

The debtor claims that the inquiry as to whether creditors treated the debtor and other entities as one requires reference to specific creditors that treated the entities as one, which the committee has not demonstrated here. The debtor cites the committee's own use of the 2000 A series bond documents in the 2017 credit agreement, not as evidence of supposed entanglement, but as evidence that creditors and lenders understood and recognized the separate nature of the entities and requiring separate guarantees and separate financial disclosures.

The debtor further argues that the committee may not rely on the creditor expectation test, as it is grounded in the bankruptcy court's equitable powers under Section 105 of the Bankruptcy Code, and such reliance would run afoul of Section 303(a) and the Court's previous ruling on this issue.

The bottom line is I don't think that, even were I to take the creditor expectation test as relevant here and available after my prior ruling, I don't think the committee has alleged facts that would implicate that test.

So lastly, the declaratory relief under Section 541, finally, the debtor argues that the requested declaratory relief does not adequately state a claim, as 541 does not create a separate cause of action, and this request is simply a backdoor attempt to solve some consolidation. agrees. A complaint must set forth sufficient facts accepted true to state a plausible legal basis for the relief sought. While the amended complaint does provide some factual allegations in support of its position, it fails to articulate any cognizable legal theory or doctrinal framework under which the property at issue could be deemed to be property of the debtor's estate under 541 where invocation of declaratory relief is insufficient absent supporting legal grounds that would bring the disputed assets within the scope of estate property. As such, the claim for declaratory relief as pled does not meet the pleading standard required to survive dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6).

So I know that's a lengthy ruling, but I wanted to give you guys the benefit of it. Obviously, there's a transcript available.

              THE COURT: Yeah.
              MS. UETZ: -- administrative expense of the estate -- 20
              THE COURT: Yeah.
              MS. UETZ: -- in the meantime.
22
23
              THE COURT: Okay. Obviously, well, if I read it and 24 have questions, we could theoretically -- could we convene next 25 Thursday or Friday?
```

1
              MS. UETZ: Your Honor, I was going to suggest, and 2 you've done this before, but I don't know your schedule.
 3
              THE COURT: Yeah.
              MS. UETZ: So I'll just say this. You've done this 4 5 before, where we put, like, a placeholder -- 6
              THE COURT: Yeah.
 7 MS. UETZ: -- on the calendar so if you have questions. The thing is, if you don't decide it till the end of next week, the clock is going to run overtime between now and then, including this weekend because of expert rebuttal 10 reports and -- 11 12
 8 9
              THE COURT: Okay.
13
              MS. UETZ: -- expert depositions. And so the soonest the Court could do it is what we're requesting, and we'll just 14 15 defer to the Court.
              THE COURT: Well, I've got a hearing Friday morning 16 that's going to go all morning on might be the end of a case in 17 18 the guise of a cash collateral motion. But it's got a lot of DEFCON 1 to it. So Friday morning -- 19 20
              MS. UETZ: More than today?
              THE COURT: -- is not going to -- sorry?
21
22
              MS. UETZ: More than today?
23
              THE COURT: Fewer people. Maybe even louder voices.
24
     Who knows?
25
              MS. UETZ: It's good I'm getting my sense of humor

 1 back, I think.
 2
              THE COURT: Okay. I'm glad.
              All right. I could consider something after about 2 3 o'clock or 2:15 on Friday afternoon. I realize, for those of 4 you on more East Coast time frames, that's very inconvenient if 5 you have other recreational things in mind. But that would be 6 7
     my schedule. Okay.
 8
              MS. UETZ: We would appreciate that, Your Honor.
 9 And -- 10
              THE COURT: Okay.
              MS. UETZ: -- depending on the outcome, it could open 11
     up some weekends.
              THE COURT: Okay. Then why don't we do this?
13
                                                              Why
     don't we -- 2:30? We reserve that? That's okay?
14
15
              MS. UETZ: And then should we call your clerk to see, 16 like, if we should appear, or how would we proceed should we --
              THE COURT: It's unlikely I'm not going to have any 17 18 questions.
19
              MS. UETZ: Okay.
20
              THE COURT: So I think we probably -- it may be -- it 21 may be that it's five minutes. I have a question you can 22 answer, and I just, that's the end of it. Okay. But it's 23 highly unlikely that I won't have a question or two, 24 notwithstanding the wonderful presentations today.
25
              MS. UETZ:
                         Thank you.

THE COURT: So okay. Anything else for the good of the order?

I had a couple of thoughts about the objection. Do you guys have the patience to talk about that still?

The reason why I was asking earlier about what's my power in this context is one reaction to the objection would be that under Roman III, parts A and B are fairly generic. Now, it may be that you would tell me it would be challenging to be more specific than we think that this overpays by fifty percent.

Let me tell you. Let me suggest this to you. Okay. Were I to rule on this on the merits right now and short-circuit everything, my reaction would be these objections are brought, and something this broad-based is part of a fee application objection, where there's more time to get into this. And I don't think -- I'm not trying to be cynical. I don't think that fourteen days for you guys to talk about whether fifty percent overstated or not is going to be very helpful. It's just not going to get anywhere is my take.

So were I to -- were I to have a completely open playing field, I would tell you that I think this objection, and it may ultimately be well taken, really should appear in the context of an objection to a fee app or end of the case kind of determination. That would be my -- that's the way I would rule on it, if we could compress everything and have me rule on it now. And I would not -- I would not have this hold up the payment under the Knudsen order, I mean, such as -- I mean, such as it's been modified down to a thirty-percent holdback. Right. Correct?

Similarly, while I think that the objections under excessive associate rates may well be well taken to the extent that they're -- the primary basis for objection here is comparison with the Foley rates. I don't think that's necessarily the basis for me to make a decision like this. I would, again -- I'd be willing to allow you to reserve this to fee app time, certainly, and/or the end of the case.

But I think at this point, if I have the power to sort of compress things and just give you a ruling by ruling would be, these objections, they may be very well taken. I don't think they fit well, in my view, under the Knudsen order. So I would be inclined to say, for now, go ahead, and we'll treat this as if it's simply reserving something we're going to argue about at a later date. But it would not be a basis to withhold payment now.

Anybody want to -- if anybody thinks I'm jumping the gun here or sandbagging, you guys tell me, and we'll talk about something else.

MS. UETZ: Your Honor, with that, I expect we'll be able to talk with counsel for the committee, and --

THE COURT: Okay.

     to both of the objections that were filed with respect to professional fees.
 3
              THE COURT: I appreciate it. Okay. So I'm not
 5 horribly overstepping my bounds here.
 6
              MS. UETZ: I don't know whether you are or you're not, 7
     Your Honor.
 8
              THE COURT: Okay.
 9
              MS. UETZ: But we will talk with the committee.
10
              THE COURT: All right.
              MS. UETZ: And that, I expect, we'll be submitting

              THE COURT: Okay. Committee.
              MR. PROL: That's fine, Your Honor.
14
15
              THE COURT: Okay. All right. Thank you very much.
16
     That concludes the calendar?
              UNIDENTIFIED SPEAKER: Yes, Your Honor.
17
18
              THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.
