CLOSED-END FUNDS

Listed are the 300 largest closed-end funds as measured by assets. Closed-end funds sell a limited number of shares and invest the proceeds in securities. Unlike open-end funds, closed-ends generally do not buy their shares back from investors who wish to cash in their holdings. Instead, fund shares trade on a stock exchange. NA signifies that the information is not available or not applicable. NS signifies funds not in existence for the entire period. 12 month yield is computed by dividing income dividends paid (during the previous 12 months for periods ending at month-end or during the previous 52 weeks for periods ending at any time other than month-end) by the latest month-end market price adjusted for capital gains distributions. Depending on the fund category, either 12-month yield or total return is listed.

Palantir Posts Record Earnings, Revenue

U.S. military used company's software in Iran war and Venezuela raid

By Heather Somerville

Palantir Technologies soared to record quarterly revenue and profit in earnings reported on Monday, boosted by strong U.S. military demand and a rapidly growing business selling data-crunching software to U.S. corporations.

The Denver-based data-analytics company said it had $1.63 billion in sales for the first three months of this year, a year-over-year gain of 85%, beating analysts' expectations. The combination of Palantir's rising profile as a major competitor in artificial intelligence, the inroads it has paved in Washington and soaring demand from commercial customers have put the company on an earnings hot streak.

The company's first-quarter net income totaled $876 million, roughly tripling from the same period last year and beating analysts' expectations.

Palantir stock rose about 1% in after-hours trading, even as U.S. markets largely sank amid an escalation of fighting in the Middle East. Its stock is up 18% from a year ago, but sits well below its peak late last year.

Palantir's quarterly sales of $1.63 billion were up this much year over year

Palantir sells software to centralize, manage and analyze large amounts of data, helping government agencies and private companies derive insights from disparate databases. It has become an integral part of the Defense Department's war-planning, targeting and back-office functions. The military deployed Maven Smart System, a command-and-control system that uses Palantir's software, in the Venezuela raid in January and the war with Iran.

The Pentagon also announced on Friday agreements to use models from eight AI companies in classified settings, which could expand the scope and capabilities of Maven. These models provide alternatives to Anthropic's Claude, which has been used with Maven but was blacklisted by the Pentagon this year in a contracting dispute that is playing out in court.

Palantir also recently announced a $300 million deal with the Agriculture Department and a five-year, $1 billion agreement with the Department of Homeland Security, further embedding the company in the Trump administration's immigration-enforcement efforts.

Anthropic's New AI Tool Targets Financial Crime

By Ben Glickman

An AI bot may soon be policing millions of bank accounts for financial crimes.

Anthropic and Fidelity National Information Services, or FIS, a software provider that underpins a swath of the financial system, are preparing to announce a partnership to develop new artificial-intelligence tools for banks, executives told The Wall Street Journal.

The companies have agreed to build AI agents—programs that complete tasks without the supervision of a user—for use by financial institutions. The agents will draw on FIS's financial data and systems and Anthropic's AI, Claude.

The first tool being developed is an AI agent to investigate drug traffickers, terrorists and other criminals that use the financial system, said FIS CEO Stephanie Ferris. Bank of Montreal and Amalgamated Bank will be among the first institutions to use the financial crimes agent, Ferris said, and it is expected to be widely available to clients in the second half of the year.

Anthropic engineers have been embedded within teams at FIS already, Jonathan Jager-Hyman, Anthropic's head of industries, confirmed.

Ferris said the financial crimes bot would be able to independently amass evidence for potential cases—transactions, account information and other data that can be spread across several sources—leading to significantly less cost and time per case. Human investigators will still make the decisions about cases, she added.

Banks spend billions of dollars a year on anti-money-laundering efforts, often with sprawling teams and software meant to root out financial criminals. Those efforts are required by U.S. federal law and supervised by regulators.

Trump administration officials have pledged changes to money-laundering supervision, saying they will emphasize high-risk issues and shy away from technical compliance.

Advances in AI models have triggered fears on Wall Street that many kinds of software could become obsolete. Anthropic, with a product announcement earlier this year, sent markets reeling. Investors have worried that companies in the future will opt to make their own software using AI tools, rather than buy it from providers. FIS is one of those companies whose stocks were hit by those fears and is down more than 25% this year.

Coatue Starts Data-Center Land Push

By Peter Rudegeair And Kate Clark

Coatue Management doesn't just want to invest in the hottest artificial-intelligence companies. It wants to get in at the ground level—literally.

Philippe Laffont's $70 billion investment firm, known for big bets on tech stocks and startups, has launched a venture to buy land that will be developed for AI data centers, people familiar with the matter said. Tens of billions of dollars could be spent on the effort, the people said.

The new firm, Next Frontier, is already at work on one of its first big projects, which is buying land in Indiana for a data-center campus. Next Frontier's facilities are targeting AI customers including Anthropic.

The move is part of a push by Coatue to take part in the AI frenzy at every level. The firm has large stakes in Anthropic and OpenAI. And it has invested heavily in companies that supply infrastructure for data centers, including turbine maker GE Vernova and power producer Vistra.

Now, as computing capacity becomes a key constraint for AI's growth, Coatue is joining a global land grab. In the U.S. alone, there are roughly 1,500 data centers under construction, according to Pew Research Center. An estimated $7 trillion is expected to be spent on data centers globally by 2030, according to McKinsey.

Private-equity firms such as Blackstone own large developers and landlords, while "hyperscalers" like Meta Platforms and Google have borrowed billions to fund their own data-center ambitions. Last week, "Shark Tank" judge Kevin O'Leary said he and local partners in Utah were working on a 40,000-acre data-center venture in the state, highlighting the range of investors chasing the data-center boom. Former Energy Secretary Rick Perry and former BP CEO Bernard Looney have jumped on the data-center bandwagon, too.

A onetime McKinsey consultant and former analyst at Julian Robertson's Tiger Management, Laffont is one of the tech industry's most prominent AI bulls. His firm's structure—it manages hedge funds and venture-capital funds—allows it to put money to work in established public companies while placing futuristic AI bets on startups, like one on humanoid robot maker Sunday.

Laffont has been a guest on the All-In podcast, a fixture in Silicon Valley and a headline speaker at the most sought-after hedge-fund gathering in Palm Beach, Fla. The East Meets West conference that Laffont hosts annually in Montecito, Calif., brings together VIPs from both Wall Street and the tech world.

Coatue's Philippe Laffont

Coatue has made billions of dollars of investments in a number of data-center startups around the world, including Australia's Firmus, Singapore's DayOne and Brazil's Scala Data Centers. It has also owned big stakes in AI cloud company CoreWeave and Hut 8, a bitcoin miner turned data-center developer.

Robert Yin, a partner at Coatue focused on AI infrastructure, and Peter Wallace, a longtime Blackstone executive who recently joined Coatue as head of private investments, are leading Next Frontier, people familiar with the matter said. Laffont is also overseeing the business and personally funding it, alongside capital from the firm's management company and other outside investors, one of the people said.

Next Frontier was formed last year and started acquiring land with access to huge amounts of power this year, some of the people said. In recent months, the new company forged a joint venture with Fluidstack, a "neocloud" that offers AI computing services for companies including Anthropic. That venture raised $5.7 billion in a sale of junk bonds, with proceeds going toward buying land and developing a 430 megawatt data-center complex in New Lebanon, Ind.

Meanwhile, Coatue continues to be an aggressive investor in AI labs. In February, the firm co-led an investment in Anthropic that valued the developer of Claude at $380 billion. It has advised the company on its data-center strategy.

OpenAI and Anthropic are racing to secure the computing power needed to support the rapid growth of their AI models.

wheels, so they need a special exemption from federal vehicle standards.

Zoox is currently awaiting approval to offer paid rides.

Since selling its self-driving arm in 2020, Uber has pivoted from trying to develop its own robotic cars to joining up with outside companies, sometimes by buying stakes in those companies or agreeing to purchase vehicles outright.

The strategy marks a departure for a company that built itself on being an asset-light aggregator of private vehicles.

Uber recently signed deals to buy tens of thousands of vehicles from EV makers Rivian and Lucid.

Today, Uber has more than two dozen partnerships with carmakers and other robotaxi providers, including Waymo, Zoox and smaller players such as Moia and Motional.

Moia is the robotaxi subsidiary of German carmaker Volkswagen, which was established in 2016 to fend off threats from tech upstarts that predicted an end to personal car ownership.

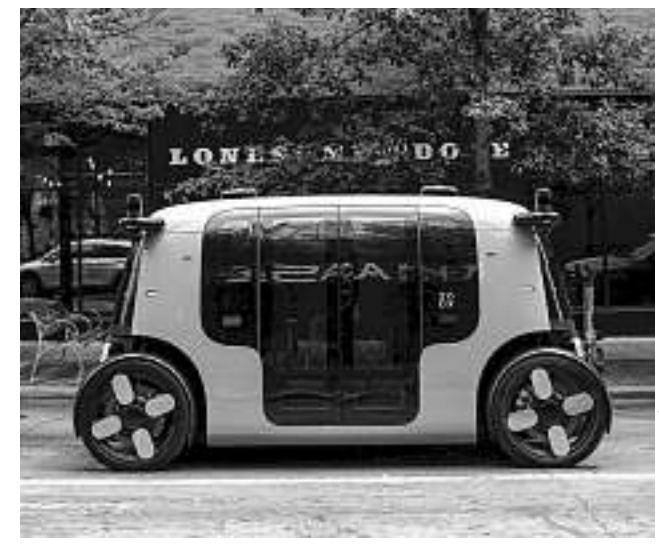

The company's vehicles are based on the ID. Buzz electric van, which itself is inspired by one of German company's most distinctive machines, the Volkswagen bus.

Moia has been testing vehicles and says it aims to launch services in Los Angeles through the Uber app and in Orlando, Fla., through Beep in 2026.

The company has said it is targeting a fleet of around 100 vehicles by early next year.

Motional is the robotaxi arm of South Korea's Hyundai Motor Group.

The company has been testing autonomous vehicles in Las Vegas since 2021.

RUSSIA WANTS TEMPORARY TRUCE FOR VICTORY DAY

Russia's Defense Ministry declared a unilateral ceasefire in Ukraine for Friday and Saturday to mark the 81st anniversary of the defeat of Nazi Germany in World War II, but it threatened to strike back at Kyiv if it tries to disrupt the Victory Day festivities.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy in response said his country would observe a truce beginning at 12 a.m. Wednesday and respond in kind to Russia's actions from that moment on. He did not put an end date on the truce.

The announcements Monday come as Russia prepares to celebrate its most important secular holiday with a traditional military parade on Moscow's Red Square pared down due to what officials say are concerns over possible Ukrainian attacks. Ukraine has been launching drone attacks deep inside Russia to counter its more than 4-year-old invasion.

They also follow a familiar pattern of previous attempts to secure ceasefires that had little to no impact.

The Defense Ministry said if Ukraine attempts to disrupt Saturday's celebrations, Russia will carry out a "massive missile strike on the center of Kyiv."

JUDGE QUESTIONS SUSPECT'S SUICIDE WATCH DESIGNATION

WASHINGTON — A federal magistrate judge on Monday pressed a jail official to explain why a man charged with trying to storm the White House Correspondents' Association dinner and attempting to kill President Donald Trump was placed on restrictive suicide watch after his arrest.

Officials at the city jail in Washington, D.C., removed Cole Tomas Allen from its designated "suicide status" over the weekend after his attorneys complained that he had been unnecessarily confined in a padded room with constant lighting, repeatedly strip-searched and placed in restraints outside his cell.

But the relaxed conditions didn't satisfy U.S. Magistrate Judge Zia Faruqui's concerns that Allen may have received disparate, punitive treatment in violation of his due process rights. Faruqui noted that the D.C. jail routinely houses convicted killers and others charged with violent crimes without placing them on 24-hour lockdown.

"It could drive a person crazy to be in that situation," he said.

Faruqui apologized to Allen over his confinement conditions.

DRIVER IN GERMANY PLOWS INTO SHOPPING AREA, KILLS 2

BERLIN — A driver plowed into people in a busy shopping area in the center of the German city of Leipzig on Monday afternoon, leaving two people dead, authorities said.

An additional three people were seriously injured in what officials believe was a deliberate rampage, Mayor Burkhard Jung said.

He described it as "a terrible tragedy." An unspecified number of people sustained less serious injuries.

The driver, a 33-year-old German citizen, was detained in the car. Police said he was a German-born resident of the Leipzig area.

Prosecutors said he is under investigation on suspicion of murder and attempted murder. There was no immediate word on a possible motive.

The interior minister of Saxony state, Armin Schuster, said investigators believe the man acted alone. He said that rage and "psychological instability" are often factors in such cases, but added that he wouldn't speculate on whether that was the case here.

Police chief René Demmler stressed that there was no longer any danger.

AFGHANISTAN SAYS ATTACKS BY PAKISTAN LEAVE 3 DEAD

KABUL, Afghanistan — Afghanistan accused Pakistan of carrying out cross-border attacks into its territory on Monday that hit civilian areas, killing at least three people and wounding 14, as tension between the two neighbors remain high despite recent peace talks.

Afghan deputy government spokesman Hamdullah Fitrat said on X that the attacks also destroyed two schools, two mosques and a health center in the eastern Afghan province of Kunar.

Pakistan's Information Ministry rejected the allegation in a post on X, saying that Fitrat's accusations follow recent cross-border firing from Afghan territory into Pakistan. Those attacks, in Mrch and April, killed nine women and children in Bajaur, a district in northwestern Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province.

It said Bajaur attacks "exposed the Afghan regime's reckless and shameful actions." The ministry also argued that images circulated with the latest Afghan claim show damage "inconsistent with artillery impact," citing intact roofs and localized breakage as indicators of possible staged destruction.

RUBIO PLANS VATICAN VISIT DESPITE RISING TENSIONS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Marco Rubio will travel to Rome and Vatican City this week in a bid to ease rising tensions between President Donald Trump and Pope Leo XIV over U.S. policies, particularly the Iran war.

The State Department said Monday that Rubio, a Catholic who with this trip will have visited Italy or the Vatican at least three times as the Republican president's top diplomat, would be in Italy on Thursday and Friday. The Vatican announced that Rubio would meet with Leo, the first American pontiff, on Thursday.

"Secretary Rubio will meet with Holy See leadership to discuss the situation in the Middle East and mutual interests in the Western Hemisphere," the department said. "Meetings with Italian counterparts will be focused on shared security interests and strategic alignment."

The trip comes as Trump has criticized Leo for his stances on the Middle East and elsewhere and as the president has drawn pushback for posting a social media image likening himself to Jesus Christ.

OFFICIALS SEEK SHOOTER IN OKLAHOMA PARTY GUNFIRE

EDMOND, Okla. — A weekend shooting at a lakeside park in Oklahoma that left nearly two dozen people injured erupted when a group began arguing at an unsanctioned party packed with young adults, a witness said Monday.

Authorities were continuing to search for suspects Monday in the shooting that critically injured at least three of those hurt. No arrests have been made.

It wasn't clear how many of the injured had been shot, police said Monday in a statement. It provided few answers about what had happened.

The shooting broke out Sunday night at a public park near a campground at Arcadia Lake, a popular swimming and boating spot in Edmond, just north of Oklahoma City, said Edmond police spokesperson Emily Ward.

At least 18 people were treated at hospitals in the Oklahoma City area. One healthcare system said the victims it treated ranged in age from 16 to 30. It said three people were in critical condition and four were listed as serious.

Police in Edmond said Monday that the party had been promoted across social media.

Europe sees need for bigger security role within NATO

By Mark Carlson and Lorne Cook
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

YEREVAN, Armenia — European leaders on Monday said President Donald Trump's surprise decision to pull thousands of U.S. troops out of Germany is just the latest signal that Europe must take more responsibility for its security.

The Pentagon announced last week it would pull some 5,000 troops out of Germany, but Trump told reporters on Saturday the U.S. plans on "cutting a lot further."

Trump offered no reason for the move, which blindsided NATO. But his decision came amid an escalating dispute with German Chancellor Friedrich Merz, who said the U.S. has been humiliated by Iran in talks to end the war it launched with Israel on Feb. 28. Trump has also expressed anger over European allies' reluctance to get involved in the conflict.

European leaders meeting at a summit in Yerevan, Armenia, sought to both downplay the impact of 5,000 fewer troops in Germany while acknowledging that it provides a useful nudge for the continent to step up its role within NATO.

"I do not see those figures as dramatic, but I think they should be handled in a harmonious way inside the framework of NATO," said Norwegian Prime Minister Jonas Gahr Støre.

British Prime Minister Keir Starmer said "there needs to be a stronger European element in NATO, I have no doubt about that."

Tensions within NATO have mounted since the second Trump administration came into office last year warning that European allies would have to defend themselves and Ukraine in the future. Talks on ending the war there, now in its fourth year, have bogged down as the U.S. focuses on Iran.

The European Union's foreign policy chief, Kaja Kallas, said the timing of Trump's announcement came as a surprise, even though there has been "talk about withdrawal of U.S. troops for a long time from Europe."

Asked whether she believes Trump is trying to punish Merz, Kallas said: "I don't see into the head of President Trump, so he has to explain it himself."

NATO Secretary-General Mark Rutte also played down the significance of fewer U.S. troops in Germany, while acknowledging U.S. "disappointment" about the level of European support for the Iran war.

Cruise ship awaits aid after hantavirus outbreak kills 3

By Gerald Imray
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — A cruise ship with nearly 150 people aboard was waiting for help off the coast of Cape Verde in the Atlantic Ocean on Monday after three passengers died and at least three other people were left seriously ill in a suspected outbreak of the rare hantavirus, according to the World Health Organization and the ship's operator.

The MV Hondius, a Dutch ship on a weekslong polar cruise from Argentina to Antarctica and several isolated islands in the South Atlantic, had requested help from local health authorities after making its way to the island of Cape Verde, off the West Africa coast. But no one has been allowed to disembark, Netherlands-based operator Oceanwide Expeditions said.

Cape Verde's Health Ministry said Monday that for now, it will not allow the ship to dock because of public health concerns and that it would stay in open waters close to shore.

Hantavirus is a rodent-borne illness spread by contact with rodents or their urine, saliva or droppings. WHO says that while it is rare, hantavirus may spread between people.

It was unclear how an outbreak could have started, and WHO said it was investigating while working to coordinate the evacuation of two sick crew members. Another sick person — a British man evacuated to South Africa on April 27 — tested positive for the virus, authorities said. He is in critical condition and isolated in intensive care, health officials said.

The body of one of the passengers who died — a German — remains on the ship, according to an Oceanwide Expeditions statement. A 70-year-old Dutch man died onboard April 11, and his 69-year-old wife died later in South Africa after leaving the ship, officials said. Her blood later tested positive for the virus, making two confirmed cases, South Africa's health minister said.

Among the 87 remaining passengers, 17 are Americans, 19 are from the U.K. and 13 from Spain, according to Oceanwide Expeditions. Sixty-one crew members also are onboard.

Two sick crew members — one British, one Dutch — have respiratory symptoms and need urgent medical care, Oceanwide said in its statement.

Cape Verde has sent a medical team of two doctors, a nurse and a laboratory specialist to the ship over three trips, said Dr. Ann Lindstrand, a WHO official in Cape Verde.

She told The Associated Press in an interview that they were planning for medical evacuations, in which passengers would be taken from the ship via ambulance to an airport.

"It's been very tricky for Cape Verdean authorities," Lindstrand said. "What they have to deal with is a public health event. And of course, they have been thinking about the protection of the population here."

Oceanwide said it would consider moving to one of the Spanish islands — Tenerife or the port of Las Palmas — if it can't evacuate passengers in Cape Verde.

WHO said it was working with local authorities and Oceanwide on a "full public health risk assessment."

"Detailed investigations are ongoing, including further laboratory testing, and epidemiological investigations," WHO said. "Medical care and support are being provided to passengers and crew."
